Syllabus.

The plaintiff in error relies upon Choate v. Trapp, 224 U. S. 665, in which this court sustained a contractual exemption as to taxation of certain Indian lands. In that case the right of exemption was based upon a valid and binding contract, and that decision in no wise militates against the right of Congress to continue to pass legislation placing restrictions upon the right of Indians to convey lands allotted as were those in question here. In United States v. First National Bank, 234 U. S. 245, and United States v. Waller, 243 U. S. 452, this court dealt with lands as to which certain mixed-blood Indians by act of Congress had been given full ownership with all the rights which inhere in ownership in persons of full legal capacity. Those decisions do not place limitations upon the right of Congress to deal with a Tribal Indian whose relation of ward to the Government still continues, and concerning whom Congress has not evidenced its intention to release its authority.

We find no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma, and the same is affirmed.

EIGER ET AL. v. GARRITY.

ERROR TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

No. 143. Argued January 22, 23, 1918.—Decided March 4, 1918.

A state statute giving a wife a right of action against any person who injures her means of support by selling intoxicating liquor to her husband, does not violate the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment by providing further that the judgment for damages so recovered shall be a lien upon the premises where the liquor was sold, as against an owner who leased, or knowingly permitted the use of, such premises for the sale of intoxicating liquor.

Dram Shop Act, Illinois Rev. Stats., c. 43, § 10, upheld as involved in this case.

Such a statute has the effect of making the tenant the agent of the landlord for its purposes; and the landlord is not denied due process by taking the judgment against the tenant, (in the absence of collusion or fraud,) as conclusive upon the amount of the damages suffered and the right to recover them, if, in the proceeding to enforce the lien, the landlord be allowed due opportunity to controvert the rendition of such judgment and the making of the lease authorizing sale of intoxicating liquor, or, if such be the issue, his knowledge of such use of the premises.

272 Illinois, 127, affirmed.

THE case is stated in the opinion.

Mr. Abraham J. Pflaum, with whom Mr. Edward N. D'Ancona was on the brief, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Ode L. Rankin for defendant in error.

MR. JUSTICE DAY delivered the opinion of the court.

This suit was brought by Delia Garrity to subject premises in Chicago owned by plaintiffs in error to the payment of a judgment obtained by her against Clarence Green by reason of injury sustained to her means of support through sales of intoxicating liquors to her husband by Green, who was a tenant of the plaintiffs in error occupying and using their premises for the sale of such liquors.

In her complaint she sets forth that she was the wife of one William J. Garrity; that Clarence Green on June 18, 1912, and for one year prior thereto was the owner of and did conduct what is commonly known as a saloon or dram shop, and during such period of time sold intoxicating liquors in such shop in a certain building at 134 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, standing upon certain premises described in the bill; that on June 18, 1912, she began a suit in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, against said Green, under the provisions of statutes of the State of Illinois known as the Dram Shop Act, to recover damages for injury to her means of support, and alleged in the declaration in said suit that she was the wife of William J. Garrity on and prior to June 18, 1912; that said Green sold and gave intoxicating liquors to her husband, which liquor in whole or in part caused the said Garrity to become habitually intoxicated, and alleged injury to her means of support resulting therefrom in the sum of $10,000; that summons was duly served on said Green, that he failed to appear, and on September 26, 1912, an order of default was entered against him, and thereupon the case came for trial before the judge and jury for the assessment of damages; that on October 2, 1914, the court and jury having heard the testimony, the jury returned a verdict finding said Green guilty, assessed the plaintiff's damages in the sum of $1,500, and judgment was rendered accordingly. The bill then alleges leasehold ownership of the land and ownership of the building in the plaintiffs in error, and that for a year or more prior to the filing of the suit in the Circuit Court of Cook County said Green occupied the building on the premises for the purpose of the sale of intoxicating liquors as tenant of the plaintiffs in error, who leased said building and premises to, and knowingly permitted said building and premises to be occupied by, said Green for the sale of intoxicating liquors for the period of a year or more prior to the filing of the suit in the Circuit Court of Cook County; that the liquors sold or given to Garrity on said premises were the sales or gifts which resulted in the verdict and judgment aforesaid; and such sales or gifts were made or given while the said Green occupied the said building as tenant of the plaintiffs in error, and with their knowledge and consent, for the purpose of keeping a dram shop, and the complainant seeks to have the building and premises charged with a lien for the payment of the judgment and costs, and prays that in default of the payment of the judgment, interest and costs, that said building and the premises described in the bill be sold to satisfy the judgment.

A demurrer to the bill was overruled and the court made a decree in substance finding the allegations in the bill to be true, and adjudged that in default of the payment of the judgment, with interest, the said building, leasehold and premises of the plaintiffs in error should be subjected to sale for the payment thereof. Upon appeal the Supreme Court of Illinois affirmed the decree, holding, among other things, that the statute did not deprive the plaintiffs in error of their property without due process of law contrary to the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, 272 Illinois, 127. The decree was rendered under § 10, c. 43, of the Revised Statutes of that State, which provides:

“For the payment of any judgment for damages and costs that may be recovered against any person in consequence of the sale of intoxicating liquors under the preceding section, the real estate and personal property of such person, of every kind, except such as may be exempt from levy and sale upon judgment and execution, shall be liable; and such judgment shall be a lien upon such real estate until paid; and in case any person shall rent or lease to another any building or premises to be used or occupied, in whole or in part, for the sale of intoxicating liquors, or shall knowingly permit the same to be so used or occupied, such building or premises so used or occupied shall be held liable for and may be sold to pay any such judgment against any person occupying such building or premises. Proceedings may be had to subject the same to the payment of any such judgment recovered, which remains unpaid, or any part thereof, either before or after execution shall issue against the property of the person against whom such judgment shall have been recovered; and when execution shall issue against the property so leased or rented, the officer shall proceed to satisfy said execution out of the building or premises so leased or occupied, as aforesaid: Provided, that if such building or premises belong to a minor or other person under guardianship, the guardian or conservator of such person, and his real and personal property, shall be held liable instead of such ward, and his property shall be subject to all the provisions of this section relating to the collection of said judgment."

Construing this section with the preceding section (9) (printed in the margin ¹), the Supreme Court of Illinois held that the purpose of § 10 was to make the building or premises used for the sale of intoxicating liquors liable for the payment of a judgment rendered against the occupant of the premises wherein the liquor was sold, provided the owner had rented the same to be used or occupied for the sale of intoxicating liquors, or knowingly permitted the same to be so used and occupied. The court held that the judgment against the tenant, in the absence of fraud or collusion, was conclusive in the action under § 10 to subject the building and premises to its payment, except that the owner of the building is entitled to controvert the allegations that he had knowingly rented or knowingly permitted his building to be used for the sale of intoxicating liquor, and that a judgment had been recovered against the occupant for damages arising from the sale of liquor therein. The question in this court is whether the act, as thus construed, deprives the plaintiffs in error of their property without due process of law.

The right of the States to pass laws for the regulation of the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and to legislate with a view to repress the evil consequences which may result therefrom, has been frequently affirmed in this court. Crane v. Campbell, 245 U. S. 304. In the opinion in that case the former cases in this court sustaining the authority of the State to deal with the evils resulting from the sale and use of intoxicating liquor are cited, and we need not review them now.

Under this broad power over the liquor traffic, and the right to pass legislation to prevent its evils, the State of Illinois has made the premises of an owner in that State subject to a lien for damages recovered by a wife for injury to her means of support against one who has furnished the husband intoxicating liquor which was sold upon the premises sought to be charged, when the owner had rented the same for the purpose of the sale of intoxicating liquor, or had knowingly permitted such sales upon his premises.

The owner of such building has no absolute right to rent his property for any and all purposes. The use of property may be regulated under the police power of the State in the public interest in such manner as to safeguard the health and welfare of the community. Certainly there is no right, beyond the reach of legislative control, to rent premises for the sale of intoxicating liquor. The State may consistently with due process of law prohibit the rental of premises for such purposes. In this instance it has undertaken to regulate the right to rent property for the sale of intoxicating liquors by making the premises so used subject to a lien for a judgment for damages because of the deprivation of the means of support of the wife resulting from the intoxication of the husband upon whom she depends for support. Obviously, the State may pass laws to meet this as well as other evil consequences likely to follow from the traffic. See Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 224, 225.

The stress of the argument for plaintiffs in error is laid upon the want of notice to the landlord and the lack of opportunity to be heard as to the right of recovery and the amount thereof, before his property can be subjected to the lien of such judgment. But the effect of this statute is to make the landlord responsible only when he rents his property for the use and sale of intoxicants, or knowingly permits its use for that purpose. The statute has the effect of making the tenant the agent of the landlord for its purposes, and through this agency, voluntarily assumed, the landlord becomes a participant in the sales of intoxicants and is responsible for the consequences resulting from them.

It was the owner's privilege to rent the property to a lessee of his own choosing, and to safeguard himself by the amount of the rent reserved, or otherwise, for the possible damages resulting from the traffic in intoxicants which the landlord has agreed may be carried on in his premises. The property is not summarily taken, the owner may be heard to deny the rendition of the judgment against the tenant, the making of the lease authorizing the sale of intoxicating liquor, or, if his knowledge of such use be the issue, he may be heard upon that question. Mullen v. Peck, 49 Ohio St. 447; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509.

In view of the broad authority of the States over the liquor traffic, and the established right to prohibit or regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors, we are unable to discover that there has been a deprivation of property rights in the legislation in question in violation of due process of law secured by the Fourteenth Amendment.

TALLEY v. BURGESS ET AL.

ERROR TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF OKLAHOMA.

No. 157. Argued January 25, 1918.—Decided March 4, 1918.

The Cherokee Agreement of July 1, 1902, c. 1375, 32 Stat. 716, imposed no restriction, other than that of minority, upon the alienation by the heir of his interest in land allotted under § 20 in the name of an ancestor who died before receiving an allotment.

The Act of April 26, 1906, c. 1876, 34 Stat. 137, § 22, applied to allotments made before its date under § 20 of the Cherokee Agreement (Brader v. James, ante, 88,) and required that a guardian's contract, made on May 11, 1906, to convey the minor's interest in such an allotment, be approved by the United States court for the Indian Territory, as a condition to the validity of the contract.

THE case is stated in the opinion.

Mr. Haskell B. Talley, pro se, submitted.
