

the "bills of exceptions," and in a memorandum subsequently filed by the District Judge, that the case was heard and taken under advisement in April, while the opinion was filed and the judgment entered in August, that is, after the commencement of a new term of court. There was no exception to the judgment on this ground, and no assignment of error in reference to this matter. And even if the statements thus made by the District Judge, after the writ of error had issued, could be looked to for the purpose of contradicting a specific recital in the judgment that it was entered on the same day on which the case was heard and argued, the contention is in conflict with the long established practice and immemorial usage of the federal courts in this respect, and entirely wanting in merit.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is

---

Affirmed.

SEABOARD RICE MILLING COMPANY v. CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

ERROR TO THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF MISSOURI.

No. 311. Motion to affirm submitted January 25, 1926.—Decided March 1, 1926.

1. Under § 51, Judicial Code, a suit brought by a non-resident in the District Court upon the basis of diverse citizenship, or because it arises under the laws of the United States, must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, if the defendant be not a resident of the district, and seasonably assert his privilege. P. 365.
2. A corporation (within the meaning of the jurisdictional statutes) is a resident of the State in which it is incorporated, and not a resident or inhabitant of any other State—even of one within which it is engaged in business. P. 366.

Opinion of the Court.

270 U. S.

3. Section 28, Judicial Code, allowing removal of suits of which the District Courts "are given original jurisdiction," relates to the general jurisdiction of those courts and not to their local jurisdiction over the defendant's person, dealt with in § 51; so that the fact that a suit between non-residents might have been brought in the state court and removed to the District Court does not show that, if brought originally in the District Court, it could have been retained there over the defendant's objection. P. 366.

Affirmed on motion.

ERROR to a judgment of the District Court dismissing an action for want of jurisdiction over the defendant.

Messrs. Thomas P. Littlepage, Lon O. Hocker, Frank H. Sullivan, W. F. Dickinson, Luther Burns, and M. L. Bell, for the defendant in error, in support of the motion.

Mr. Alfred A. Hagerty for the plaintiff in error, in opposition thereto.

MR. JUSTICE SANFORD delivered the opinion of the Court.

This is an action at law brought by the Milling Company against the Railway Company, in the District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri, to recover the sum of $3,035.73 for damages alleged to have been sustained through the negligence of the Railway Company, the initial carrier, and its connecting carriers, in the interstate transportation of rice shipped from Arkansas to New York. The Railway Company, appearing specially, filed a plea to the jurisdiction, on the ground that neither it nor the Milling Company was a resident or inhabitant of the district. This plea was sustained, without opinion, and the suit was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. This direct writ of error was allowed and the jurisdictional question certified, in February, 1925, under § 238 of the Judicial Code.

The Railway Company has interposed a motion to affirm the judgment, upon the ground that the question upon which the decision depends is so unsubstantial as not to need further argument. Hodges v. Snyder, 261 U. S. 600, 601. This motion must be granted.

The declaration and the testimony heard upon the plea show that the Milling Company is a corporation organized under the laws of Texas; and that the Railway Company is a corporation organized under the laws of Illinois and Iowa, having its principal office in Chicago, but maintaining a branch office and operating a branch line within the eastern district of Missouri.

Section 51 of the Judicial Code, which deals with the venue of suits originally begun in the District Courts—re-enacting in part a similar provision in the Judiciary Act of 1888<sup>1</sup> provides, subject to certain exceptions not material here, that “no civil suit shall be brought in any district court against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant; but where the jurisdiction is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different States, suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or the defendant.” That is to say, the suit must be brought within the district of which the defendant is an inhabitant, unless the general federal jurisdiction is founded upon diversity of citizenship alone, in which case it must be brought either in that district or in the district in which the plaintiff resides.

While this provision does not limit the general jurisdiction of the District Courts, it confers a personal privilege on the defendant, which he may assert, or may waive, at his election, if sued in some other district. Lee v. Chesapeake Railway, 260 U. S. 653, 655; and cases cited. If this privilege is seasonably asserted, the suit must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant. Macon Grocery Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line, 215 U. S. 501, 510; and cases cited.

---

<sup>1</sup> 25 Stat. 433, 434, c. 866.

Opinion of the Court.

270 U. S.

It is immaterial whether the general federal jurisdiction in the present suit is founded upon diversity of citizenship alone, or whether the suit is also one arising under the laws of the United States, since neither the Milling Company nor the Railway Company is a resident of the Eastern District of Missouri; a corporation being, within the meaning of the jurisdictional statutes, a resident of the State in which it is incorporated, and not a resident or inhabitant of any other State, although it may be engaged in business within such other State. Re Keasbey & Mattison Co., 160 U. S. 221, 229; Macon Grocery Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line, supra, 509; and cases cited.

The Milling Company contends, however, that since it might have brought the suit originally in a state court of concurrent jurisdiction within the Eastern District of Missouri, in which the Railway Company is transacting business, and the Railway Company, under the decisions in General Investment Co. v. Lake Shore Railway, 260 U. S. 261, and Lee v. Chesapeake Railway, supra, might then have removed it to the District Court, this necessarily involves the conclusion that the District Court also has "original jurisdiction" of the suit, since § 28 of the Judicial Code provides only for the removal of suits of which the District Courts "are given original jurisdiction." The fallacy of this argument lies in the failure to distinguish between the general jurisdiction of the District Courts, to which § 28 relates, and the local jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, to which § 51 relates. The same contention was made, in a converse form, in the General Investment Company Case, in which it was argued that a suit could not be removed from a state court to a district court in which, under § 51, it could not have been brought over the defendant's objection, since it was not a suit of which the District Court was given "original jurisdiction;" and it is completely answered by the holding in that case, at p. 275, that the term “original jurisdiction” as used in § 28 refers only to the general jurisdiction conferred on the District Courts, and does not relate to the venue provision in § 51; there being “no purpose in extending to removals the personal privilege accorded to defendants by § 51, since removals are had only at the instance of defendants.” This was approved and followed in Lee v. Chesapeake Railway, supra, 657.

Whether the suit be originally brought in the District Court or removed from a state court, the general federal jurisdiction is the same; and the venue or local jurisdiction of the District Court over the person of the defendant is dependent in the one case as in the other upon the voluntary action of the non-resident defendant, being acquired in an original suit by his waiver of objection to the venue, and in a removed suit by his application for the removal to the District Court.

Since the question does not require further argument, the motion of the Railway Company is granted, and the judgment of the District Court is

Affirmed.

---

GENERAL AMERICAN TANK CAR CORPORATION
ET AL. v. DAY, SHERIFF AND EX-OFFICIO TAX COLLECTOR.

APPEAL FROM THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA

No. 162. Argued January 21, 1926.—Decided March 1, 1926.

1. A decision by the highest state court holding a state tax conformable to the requirement of the constitution of the State as regards uniformity of taxation, is binding on this Court. P. 371.
2. A state tax imposed, in lieu of local taxes, on rolling stock which is owned by non-resident corporations having no domicile in the State and is operated over railroads within the State (Act 109, La. Ls. 1921), is not objectionable, under the Com-