

112TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

H. R. 6538

To establish trade negotiating objectives with respect to the application of sanitary and phytosanitary measures to agricultural products, and for other purposes.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SEPTEMBER 21, 2012

Mr. NUNES introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means

A BILL

To establish trade negotiating objectives with respect to the application of sanitary and phytosanitary measures to agricultural products, and for other purposes.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—AGRICULTURAL TRADE FACILITATION

5 SECTION 101. SHORT TITLE.

6 This title may be cited as the “Agricultural Trade 7 Facilitation Act”.

8 SEC. 102. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

9 Congress finds the following:

1 (1) Pursuant to article I, section 8, clause 3 of 2 the Constitution of the United States, Congress has 3 the authority to establish negotiating objectives for 4 the United States for agreements related to agricul-5 tural trade.

6 (2) From 2008 to 2010, the value of United 7 States agricultural exports averaged nearly $107 bil-8 lion annually. Compared to 1998 to 2000, when the 9 total value of agricultural exports averaged 10 $51,000,000,000 annually, United States agricul-11 tural exports have more than doubled in past ten 12 years.

13 (3) The Department of Agriculture's Economic 14 Research Service reports that each $1,000,000,000
15 in United States agricultural exports supports ap-16 proximately 8,400 jobs. The Economic Research
17 Service further reports that United States agricul-
18 tural exports supported nearly 830,000 full-time
19 American jobs both on and off-farm in 2009.

20 (4) Even as the importance of agricultural ex-21 ports to the United States economy grows, there are 22 continued reports that non science-based sanitary 23 and phytosanitary measures are restricting trade, 24 acting as non-tariff barriers to trade. The elimi-25 nation and reduction of unwarranted sanitary and

1 phytosanitary barriers to trade will increase United 2 States agricultural exports and jobs.

3 (5) Sanitary and phytosanitary measures are 4 those designed “to protect human, animal or plant 5 life or health from risks” arising from additives, 6 contaminants, pests, toxins, diseases, or disease-car-
7 rying and causing organisms in foods, beverages, 8 feedstuffs, animals, or plants. Sanitary and 9 phytosanitary measures can take such forms as spe-
10 cific product or processing standards, requirements
11 for products to be produced in disease-free areas, 12 quarantine regulations, certification or inspection
13 procedures, sampling and testing requirements,
14 health-related labeling measures, maximum permis-
15 sible pesticide residue levels, and prohibitions on cer-16 tain food additives.

17 (6) There are currently 37 active disputes in-18 volving sanitary and phytosanitary measures being 19 argued within the World Trade Organization (WTO) 20 between Member countries. These cases have been 21 invoked under the WTO Agreement on the Applica-
22 tion of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures.

23 (7) While the Agreement on the Application of 24 Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures, to which all 25 WTO Member countries are parties, explicitly recog-

1 nizes the rights of each country to take their own
2 measures, they must be science-based and applied
3 only to the extent necessary to protect human, ani-
4 mal or plant health, and cannot be arbitrary or used 5 to unjustifiably discriminate domestically or between 6 trading partners. Member countries are also encour-
7 aged to observe established and recognized inter-8 national standards. Improper use of measures can 9 create substantial, if not complete, barriers to 10 United States exports when they are disguised bar-11 riers to trade, are not supported by science, or are 12 otherwise unwarranted.

13 (8) In 2010, a United States interagency group
14 led by the Department of Agriculture's Foreign Ag-
15 ricultural Service, reviewed more than 1,000 notifi-16 cations from 50 countries as required under the 17 Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and 18 Phytosanitary Measures. The United States Govern-
19 ment commented on 173 proposed or in-force sani-20 tary and phytosanitary measures. Nearly one-half of 21 the comments were measures regarding processed
22 products, one-third addressed requirements for live 23 animals and fish (and their products, including dairy 24 products); and almost one-quarter were for measures 25 that introduced new standards or entry requirements

1 for plants, bulk commodities (including those made 2 with biotechnology), and horticultural products.

3 (9) Each year, the United States Trade Rep-
4 resentative reports that non science-based sanitary 5 and phytosanitary trade barriers continue to threat-
6 en, constrain, or block United States agricultural ex-7 ports.

8 (10) A Department of Agriculture study of the 9 impact of foreign technical trade barriers on United 10 States agricultural exports reported the presence of 11 “questionable technical barriers” in more than 60
12 countries affecting trade in more than 300 agricul-13 tural products, valued at an estimated $5 billion of 14 United States agricultural, forestry, and fishery ex-15 ports using 1996 data, accounting for about 7 per-16 cent of total agricultural exports during that year.
17 Although more recent formal estimates of United 18 States agricultural trade effects are not available, 19 the United States Trade Representative continues to 20 assert: “[Sanitary and phytosanitary] trade barriers 21 prevent U.S. producers from shipping hundreds of 22 millions of dollars worth of goods, hurting farms and 23 small businesses”.

24 (11) The improper use of sanitary and 25 phytosanitary trade barriers to trade can be reduced

1 through achieving and implementing agreements
2 that provide for enhanced harmonization, trans-
3 parency, equivalency, improved regulatory practices,
4 and more efficient and effective dispute settlement.
5 The elimination and reduction in use of such bar-
6 riers to trade will strengthen the international trad-7 ing system by providing certainty, predictability, and 8 fair treatment.

9 (12) The Agreement on the Application of Sani-
10 tary and Phytosanitary Measures has proven valua-11 ble to United States exporters, but experience has 12 exposed certain inadequacies in its rules.

13 (13) Accordingly, as the United States prepares
14 for future trade agreements, the Administration 15 must prioritize further strengthening of rules on 16 sanitary and phytosanitary measures.

17 SEC. 103. TRADE NEGOTIATING OBJECTIVES OF THE 18 UNITED STATES WITH RESPECT TO THE AP-
19 PLICATION OF SANITARY AND 20 PHYTOSANITARY MEASURES TO AGRICUL-
21 TURAL PRODUCTS.

22 (a) OVERALL TRADE NEGOTIATING OBJECTIVES.—
23 The overall trade negotiating objective of the United 24 States with respect to the application of sanitary and 25 phytosanitary measures to agricultural products for trade

1 agreements between the United States and foreign coun-
2 tries is to secure more open, equitable, and reciprocal mar-
3 ket access by strengthening the rules governing the appli-
4 cation of sanitary and phytosanitary measures to agricul-
5 tural products.

6 (b) PRINCIPAL TRADE NEGOTIATING OBJECTIVES.— 7 The principal trade negotiating objectives of the United 8 States with respect to the application of sanitary and 9 phytosanitary measures to agricultural products are the 10 following:

11 (1) To strengthen the requirement that the ap-
12 plication of measures is based on scientific evidence 13 by requiring parties to the agreement to make avail-
14 able their risk assessments and provide a science-15 based justification for regulations, in particular in 16 cases in which measures are more restrictive than 17 international standards.

18 (2) To encourage parties to the agreement to 19 participate actively in the development of inter-20 national standards relating to the application of 21 measures and to apply those standards whenever it 22 is appropriate to do so and to require parties to pro-23 vide a scientific justification whenever they apply a 24 standard that deviates from an established inter-25 national standard.

(4) To require greater transparency in the development and implementation of the measures, to require parties to the agreement to publish proposed measures, including a scientific justification, to provide an opportunity for interested parties to comment on the proposal, and to take into account reasonable concerns, and to require parties to provide significant advance notice before implementing new, non-emergency measures in order to provide ample time for any necessary adjustments by industry in order to come into compliance.

19 (5) To require parties to the agreement to carry 20 out risk analysis in a timely manner consistent with 21 the guidelines developed by relevant international or-22 ganizations, to ensure that risk assessments are 23 based on the most relevant scientific data, to require 24 parties to consider the full range of risk manage-25 ment options and to ensure that the measures are

1 no more trade-restrictive than necessary to meet the 2 intended purpose, and to require effective risk com-3 munication.

4 (6) To improve rules governing the testing of 5 imported products, to require importing parties to 6 use validated test methods and to provide importers 7 with the right to a confirmatory test, and to provide 8 the right of appeal.

9 (7) To promote the harmonization of export
10 certification requirements and to require that parties 11 to the agreement limit information requirements on 12 export documents to that which is necessary to de-13 termine whether a product meets sanitary and 14 phytosanitary standards.

15 (8) To ensure that new sanitary and 16 phytosanitary trade obligations are fully enforceable
17 through an a more efficient and effective dispute 18 settlement process.
