2 Congress finds as follows:

3 (1) The increase in fentanyl-related unintentional overdose fatalities presents another life-threatening scenario for its victims and threatens first-responders.

7 (2) The U.S. Sentencing Commission—

8 (A) ought to consider the presence of
9 fentanyl in connection to the illicit distribution

12 agent or in its pure form, may consider such
13 presence as an aggravating factor at sentencing.

14 (3) Better identification and reporting practices
15 by medical examiners and coroners to identify
16 fentanyl in an overdose mortality will help the States
17 and the Federal Government to allocate resources
18 more accurately. Those findings ought to be confidential but for any aggregate data released by the 19 appropriate government agency.

20 (4) Congress encourages States to expand
21 training opportunities to first responders to administer naloxone.

1           (5) Eliminating the civil liability of first re-
