IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER 19, 2017

Ms. KLOBUCHAR (for herself, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. McCAIN) introduced the following bill; which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration

A BILL

To enhance transparency and accountability for online political advertisements by requiring those who purchase and publish such ads to disclose information about the advertisements to the public, and for other purposes.

1       *Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,*

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4       This Act may be cited as the “Honest Ads Act”.

5 SEC. 2. PURPOSE.

6       The purpose of this Act is to enhance the integrity
7 of American democracy and national security by improving 8 disclosure requirements for online political advertisements

1 in order to uphold the United States Supreme Court’s 2 well-established standard that the electorate bears the 3 right to be fully informed.

4 SEC. 3. FINDINGS.

5 Congress makes the following findings:

6 (1) On January 6, 2017, the Office of the Di-
7 rector of National Intelligence published a report ti-8 tled “Assessing Russian Activities and Intentions in 9 Recent U.S. Elections”, noting that “Russian Presi-
10 dent Vladimir Putin ordered an influence campaign
11 in 2016 aimed at the U.S. Presidential election 12 . . .”. Moscow’s influence campaign followed a Rus-13 sian messaging strategy that blends covert intel-14 ligence operation—such as cyber activity—with overt 15 efforts by Russian Government agencies, State-fund-16 ed media, third-party intermediaries, and paid social 17 media users or “trolls.”

18 (2) On November 24, 2016, the Washington
19 Post reported findings from 2 teams of independent 20 researchers that concluded Russians “exploited
21 American-made technology platforms to attack U.S.
22 democracy at a particularly vulnerable moment . . .
23 as part of a broadly effective strategy of sowing dis-
24 trust in U.S. democracy and its leaders.”

1                             (3) Findings from a 2017 study on the manipulation
2                             of public opinion through social media conducted by the Computational Propaganda Research 3                             Project at the Oxford Internet Institute found that 4                             the Kremlin is using pro-Russian bots to manipulate 5                             public discourse to a highly targeted audience. With 6                             a sample of nearly 1,300,000 tweets, researchers 7                             found that in the 2016 election's 3 decisive States, 8                             propaganda constituted 40 percent of the sampled 9                             election-related tweets that went to Pennsylvanians, 10                             34 percent to Michigan voters, and 30 percent to 11                             those in Wisconsin. In other swing States, the figure 12                             reached 42 percent in Missouri, 41 percent in Florida, 13                             40 percent in North Carolina, 38 percent in 14                             Colorado, and 35 percent in Ohio.

16                             (4) On September 6, 2017, the Nation's largest 17                             social media platform disclosed that between June 18                             2015 and May 2017, Russian entities purchased 19                             $100,000 in political advertisements, publishing 20                             roughly 3,000 ads linked to fake accounts associated 21                             with the Internet Research Agency, a pro-Kremlin 22                             organization. According to the company, the ads 23                             purchased focused "on amplifying divisive social and 24                             political messages . . .".

1                         (5) In 2002, the Bipartisan Campaign Reform
2                         Act became law, establishing disclosure requirements 3                         for political advertisements distributed from a tele-4                         vision or radio broadcast station or provider of cable 5                         or satellite television. In 2003, the Supreme Court 6                         upheld regulations on electioneering communications 7                         established under the Act, noting that such require-8                         ments “provide the electorate with information and 9                         insure that the voters are fully informed about the 10                         person or group who is speaking.”.

11                         (6) According to a study from Borrell Associ-12                         ates, in 2016, $1,415,000,000 was spent on online 13                         advertising, more than quadruple the amount in 14                         2012.

15                         (7) The reach of a few large internet plat-
16                         forms—larger than any broadcast, satellite, or cable 17                         provider—has greatly facilitated the scope and effec-18                         tiveness of disinformation campaigns. For instance, 19                         the largest platform has over 210,000,000 American 20                         users—over 160,000,000 of them on a daily basis.
21                         By contrast, the largest cable television provider has 22                         22,430,000 subscribers, while the largest satellite 23                         television provider has 21,000,000 subscribers. And 24                         the most-watched television broadcast in U.S. his-25                         tory had 118,000,000 viewers.

1                         (8) The public nature of broadcast television, 2 radio, and satellite ensures a level of publicity for 3 any political advertisement. These communications 4 are accessible to the press, fact-checkers, and polit-5 ical opponents; this creates strong disincentives for 6 a candidate to disseminate materially false, inflam-
7 matory, or contradictory messages to the public. So-8 cial media platforms, in contrast, can target portions 9 of the electorate with direct, ephemeral advertise-10 ments often on the basis of private information the 11 platform has on individuals, enabling political adver-
12 tisements that are contradictory, racially or socially 13 inflammatory, or materially false.

14                         (9) According to comScore, 2 companies own 8 15 of the 10 most popular smartphone applications as 16 of June 2017, including the most popular social 17 media and email services—which deliver information 18 and news to users without requiring proactivity by 19 the user. Those same 2 companies accounted for 99 20 percent of revenue growth from digital advertising in 21 2016, including 77 percent of gross spending. 79 22 percent of online Americans—representing 68 per-23 cent of all Americans—use the single largest social 24 network, while 66 percent of these users are most 25 likely to get their news from that site.

1                         (10) In its 2006 rulemaking, the Federal Elec-
2                         tion Commission noted that only 18 percent of all 3                         Americans cited the internet as their leading source 4                         of news about the 2004 Presidential election; by con-5                         trast, the Pew Research Center found that 65 per-6                         cent of Americans identified an internet-based 7                         source as their leading source of information for the 8                         2016 election.

9                         (11) The Federal Election Commission, the 10                         independent Federal agency charged with protecting 11                         the integrity of the Federal campaign finance proc-12                         ess by providing transparency and administering 13                         campaign finance laws, has failed to take action to 14                         address online political advertisements.

15                         (12) In testimony before the Senate Select 16                         Committee on Intelligence titled, “Disinformation: A 17                         Primer in Russian Active Measures and Influence 18                         Campaigns,” multiple expert witnesses testified that 19                         while the disinformation tactics of foreign adver-20                         saries have not necessarily changed, social media 21                         services now provide “platform[s] practically pur-22                         pose-built for active measures[.]” Similarly, as Gen.
23                         (RET) Keith B. Alexander, the former Director of 24                         the National Security Agency, testified, during the 25                         Cold War “if the Soviet Union sought to manipulate

1 information flow, it would have to do so principally 2 through its own propaganda outlets or through ac-
3 tive measures that would generate specific news:
4 planting of leaflets, inciting of violence, creation of 5 other false materials and narratives. But the news 6 itself was hard to manipulate because it would have 7 required actual control of the organs of media, which 8 took long-term efforts to penetrate. Today, however, 9 because the clear majority of the information on so-10 cial media sites is uncurated and there is a rapid 11 proliferation of information sources and other sites 12 that can reinforce information, there is an increasing 13 likelihood that the information available to average 14 consumers may be inaccurate (whether intentionally 15 or otherwise) and may be more easily manipulable 16 than in prior eras.”.

17 (13) Current regulations on political advertise-
18 ments do not provide sufficient transparency to up-19 hold the public’s right to be fully informed about po-20 litical advertisements made online.

21 SEC. 4. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

22 It is the sense of Congress that—

23 (1) the dramatic increase in digital political ad-
24 vertisements, and the growing centrality of online 25 platforms in the lives of Americans, requires the

1        Congress and the Federal Election Commission to 2        take meaningful action to ensure that laws and reg-
3        ulations provide the accountability and transparency 4        that is fundamental to our democracy;

5                (2) free and fair elections require both trans-
6        parency and accountability which give the public a 7        right to know the true sources of funding for polit-
8        ical advertisements in order to make informed polit-9        ical choices and hold elected officials accountable; 10        and

11                (3) transparency of funding for political adver-
12        tisements is essential to enforce other campaign fi-
13        nance laws, including the prohibition on campaign 14        spending by foreign nationals.

15 SEC. 5. EXPANSION OF DEFINITION OF PUBLIC COMMU-
16 NICATION.

14                             public communication or political advertising” 15                             in clause (x) and inserting “but not including

21                                 editorial distributed through the facilities 22                                 of any broadcasting station or any print, 23                                 online, or digital newspaper, magazine,

23                public communication”.

19                 “(B) REQUIREMENTS FOR ADVER-
