Whereas Gandhi, while serving as a barrister in South Africa and after suffering the unjust treatment inflicted on all people of color in keeping with the accepted racial prejudices of the time, decided that he must resist such treatment to preserve his dignity as a person, and to protect the rights of all men and women, regardless of race, creed, or caste;

Whereas Gandhi, in accordance with his deep religious conviction of ahimsa (to do no harm, and to abhor violence to all living things), led a great movement in South Africa and then in India, embracing civil disobedience and nonviolent protest and resisting the unjust and oppressive treatment inflicted on Indians living abroad and in their home country;

Whereas Gandhi gained independence for a country of hundreds of millions of people, forever inspiring the world;

Whereas Gandhi devoted his life to protecting religious freedom, encouraging respect and understanding of the full panoply of religious beliefs, uplifting the poor and down-trodden, and finding peaceful resolution to conflict through nonviolent resistance and dialogue;

Whereas Gandhi inspired civil rights leaders around the world, including Martin Luther King, Jr., who wrote, “while the Montgomery boycott was going on, India’s
