

see is one of a place where people are willing to give of themselves. It is a place where the people carry the spirit of Lexington and Concord, Vicksburg and the Marne, Pearl Harbor and Omaha. The spirit of the men who fought at these hallowed places, is the spirit we must carry. That spirit is not something easily defined. It is part sacrifice, part unwillingness to give up, but mostly, . . . the desire to move forward through cooperation.

It is because of this spirit that the vision I see will surely come to pass. When the odds seem to be too great, we unite, not as blacks, not as Christians, not as refugees, but, as our forefathers did on those cold and distant battlefields so long ago, we unite as Americans! We help each other, we serve each other, and if necessary, we die for each other.

It will not take years for my vision to take place. It is happening right now: a teacher in the inner city helping a struggling student; a parent playing with a child; two friends talking, regardless of their race or background. America's future is not dim; it is just beginning to shine! The future lies before us. It is up to us to undertake the journey.

JOE D'ADAMO, WINNER OF THOMAS D'ALESSANDRO, JR. GOOD CITIZEN AWARD

HON. NANCY PELOSI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 6, 1995

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Joe D'Adamo, the 1995 winner of the Thomas D'Alessandro, Jr. Good Citizenship Award. Named for the late, great Mayor Thomas D'Alessandro, this recognition is bestowed on Mr. D'Adamo for his contribution to the Italian-American community.

Joseph G. D'Adamo, Sr., was born in Baltimore 66 years ago. While growing up in Little Italy, he went to St. Leo's School. D'Adamo studied at both Baltimore Polytechnic Institute and the University of Baltimore.

D'Adamo worked at the Baltimore Evening Sun for 42 years before retiring in 1987. D'Adamo rose to the position of chief makeup editor where he was responsible for graphics and deadlines. As the Baltimore Sun's restaurant critic for many years leading to his retirement, D'Adamo enjoyed sharing his culinary finds with Baltimore. He still loves food and writing restaurant criticism for the East Baltimore Guide.

Sports has always played an important role in this sports writer's life. Currently, he is the Baltimore correspondent for Sports Illustrated, a position he has held for 25 years. Beyond writing, D'Adamo refereed basketball games for two decades in Baltimore city schools. As commissioner of the Maryland Wrestling Association from 1988 to 1993, D'Adamo was responsible for assigning referees to wrestling meets throughout Maryland. He also coached wrestling at Catonsville Community College and Catholic High.

D'Adamo's involvement with youth also has included 6 years in the Boy Scouts of America. He has served as Scoutmaster of Troop No. 177. These activities naturally led to D'Adamo's service as president and board member of parent-teacher associations at the Catholic High School and Archbishop Curley High School.

He has been active with the Holy Name Society and in 1967, he received the President's Award. D'Adamo is a member of the Little Italy Lodge, OSIA. In 9 years, he has served in a variety of executive positions at the lodge. A proud achievement for D'Adamo is the very successful lodge cookbook, "Let's Cook Italian" which he conceived, edited, and compiled.

Joe is married to the former Anna Giorgilli, also a native of Little Italy and a member of the lodge executive council. They have three children and nine grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to salute Joe D'Adamo for the honor he has brought to the Italian-American community by his personal, professional, and civic accomplishments. He truly deserves this award for his contributions in the tradition of Thomas D'Alessandro, Jr.

INTRODUCTION OF THE FAMILY FOOD PROTECTION ACT

HON. GEORGE E. BROWN, JR.

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 6, 1995

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce The Family Food Protection Act of 1995 along with my colleague from New Jersey, Mr. TORRICELLI. USDA's recently proposed rule to implement a mandatory Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Point [HACCP] plan was a good first step toward modernizing our meat and poultry inspection system. However, we need to do more.

The meat and poultry inspection of this system needs to be modernized. There is broad consensus that our current system does not adequately address the most prevalent public health problem associated with our meat and poultry supply—microbiological contamination. The Economic Research Service estimates that microbial food contaminants and the foodborne illnesses that result from them cause between 6.5 and 33 million human illnesses and 6,000 deaths annually in this country. While we can debate the actual figures, it is clear that we can and should be doing a better job of preventing these illnesses and deaths.

The problem has been attributed to consumer's failure to prepare meat and poultry products properly. Consumer education is clearly an important way to minimize this problem. However, the problems that have arisen with institutional and retail food preparation and more recently in salami, a ready-to-eat meat product, illustrate the need for a much more comprehensive approach to the prevention of foodborne illness.

The Family Food Protection Act would require USDA to develop microbial testing procedures to control the presence of pathogenic microorganisms in meat and poultry products. It would enable the Secretary of Agriculture to require slaughter and processing plants to adopt processing controls that will ensure the safe handling and processing of these products. The bill also establishes voluntary guidelines for retail establishments to ensure that the food handled and served by retail stores and restaurants is safe for consumers. Under this bill, USDA will have the authority to recall products that are found to be unsafe if the products are not subject to an adequate voluntary recall process. In short, it represents a comprehensive farm-to-table approach to upgrading our meat and poultry inspection system so that the quality and safety of these food products is assured.

Modernization of our meat and poultry inspection system is overdue. Consumer confidence in the quality and safety of our food supply is essential to maintaining a healthy meat and poultry industry, and public health should be protected by a modern science-based meat and poultry inspection system. I urge my colleagues to join Mr. TORRICELLI and I in co-sponsoring this legislation which will provide USDA with the statutory tools necessary to improve and modernize our meat and poultry inspection system.

SALUTE TO HERBERT F. (BERT) BOECKMANN II

HON. ELTON GALLEGLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 6, 1995

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a selfless philanthropist, a successful businessman, a good friend, and recipient of the 1995 Horatio Alger Award—Bert Boeckmann.

A native Californian, Bert established early in life a commitment to hard work and a spirit of entrepreneurship that have served him well and have endured to this day.

In his early teens, when many of his peers were focused on the simple pleasures of youth, Bert began mowing the lawns, cleaning the basements, and washing the windows of local estates. He later put himself through the University of Southern California by working a weekend maintenance job and the graveyard shift at Lockheed Aircraft.

He took a job as a car salesman at Galpin Ford in 1957 and—less than 4 years later—was promoted to general manager of the company. His leadership ushered in an unprecedented period of prosperity for the struggling dealership, which he acquired in 1968.

Galpin has ranked first in profits among all Ford dealerships for 21 of the past 25 years, which is not surprising given Bert's dedicated leadership and the fact that he has created an environment that encourages his best people to stay with the company. Top Galpin managers have tenures ranging from 17 to 36 years, a nearly unheard of record of commitment in the industry.

But life for Bert has hardly been just about business. A husband and proud father, he has demonstrated time and time again that he cares more about others than he does about himself—that no demand is too great when there are people out there in need of assistance.

In 1991, Bert and his wife Jane joined Secretary of State and Mrs. James Baker in honoring Mother Theresa with the Prince of Peace Prize. Bert also helped raise $1 million in medical supplies, food, and clothing for Mother Theresa's charities.

Two years ago, Bert responded to a desperate plea from Russian farmers for seeds needed to ensure an adequate harvest. Not only did he orchestrate the donation of 56,000 pounds of seeds from several American companies and arrange for their transport by the Department of Defense, Bert and Jane met the transport plane in Russia and personally directed the distribution.

Mr. Speaker, these are only a few examples culled from a lifetime spent serving people. As his friend, I know that Bert is the kind of person who, when faced with a challenge, never wonders whether something can be done. He is the kind of person who is always willing to do whatever it takes to make a difference.

LOBBYIST DISCLOSURE REFORM

HON. GEORGE MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 6, 1995

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, Kevin Phillips has called the Contract With America a "dubious mix of reforms, gimmicks and con jobs."

I call it a "friendly corporate take-over of the Congress" because the new Republican leadership has been encouraging lobbyists to serve as de facto official staff in drafting and amending legislation.

I am not being naïve about the existence, or the value, of lobbyists. But with the carte blanche provided them by the Republican leadership, lobbyists can contaminate the legislative process. And they have.

The headline in last Friday's New York Times said it all: Business Leaves the Lobby and Sits at Congress's Table.

Time magazine says that the Republican leadership "has attached its fortunes to private lobbyists, and is relying on their far-flung influence to pass its agenda." Newsweek says that lobbyists are actually writing the bills. And they have it exactly right.

Corporate representatives, individually and through coalitions like the Thursday Group, have been writing whole bills and amendments, with no public review and often without hearings, to serve their clients' narrow interests. Little wonder that the Contract With America has been described as "a triumph for business interests, who * * * find themselves a full partner of the Republican leadership in shaping congressional priorities." The arm-length relationship between lobbyist and legislator has been brazenly abandoned.

The examples are stunning: A committee of lobbyists rewrites the Clean Water Act "to satisfy industry groups like the Chemical Manufacturers Association." Lobbyists, working from a Capitol office, plot the strategy and drafting of bills on regulatory reform and risk assessment. A lobbyist for the Wholesale Distributors develops the strategy on the product liability bill from an office provided by Republicans. A former Republican congressman is allowed to sit on the committee dais during a hearing on matters affecting his current client.

With all due respect, what is going on here?

I frankly do not know what is more disturbing: that these abuses are occurring, or that the Republican leadership and membership appear unconcerned and unaware that these practices degrade the democratic process.

The American people did not vote last year to turn the legislative process over to lobbyists to rewrite our health and safety laws, our environmental laws, and our tax laws for the benefit of their corporate employers. And the Congress cannot allow this abuse to continue.

Today, I am introducing an amendment to the House rules to require full disclosure of the role of all nonpublic employees in the drafting of legislation, amendments, reports and other products of the legislative process.

I note that Speaker GINGRICH was questioned about the substantial role of lobbyists in drafting the Contract, and replied, "As long as it's out in the open, I have no problem."

My resolution assures that lobbyists' handiwork will be "out in the open," and I think the integrity of the Congress requires that it be adopted without delay.

REPORT ON HAITI

HON. BILL RICHARDSON

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 6, 1995

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I commend to my colleagues a report drafted by Congressman JACK REED. The report: "The Situation in Haiti—March 1995" is an excellent overview of what the United States has managed to accomplish since United States troops were introduced in Haiti in order to help restore democracy. The report also looks at Haiti's immediate future and provides insight into what can be expected in Haiti after the departure of many of the United States military personnel currently on duty there. Perhaps most important, the Reed report serves as an excellent primer on the security situation in Haiti, future United Nations involvement in Haiti, attempts to create a new Haitian police force, the re-creation of a justice system, the prospects for fair and open elections, and the outlook for economic development in Haiti.

Congressman REED wrote his remarks after a recent second visit in Haiti. Last year, JACK REED and I travelled to Haiti together. At that time, I found his perspective there to be very helpful. As a former company commander in the 82d Airborne Division, Army Ranger, and West Point graduate, JACK REED has the ability to look at a foreign policy problem from a soldier's point of view. JACK REED also is not afraid to do some heavy lifting when it comes to forming his own opinions. In the last few years, in addition to his trips to Haiti, Congressman REED traveled to Somalia twice and to Bosnia. After each trip, Representative REED sits down and drafts a report on what he learned from his travels. I ask that a summary of his most recent report, "The Situation in Haiti—March 1995" be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Members interested in reviewing the complete text of Congressman REED's report should contact the Congressman's Capitol Hill office.

THE SITUATION IN HAITI—MARCH 1995

(By Congressman Jack Reed)

INTRODUCTION

On March 10 and 11, I travelled to Haiti with a Congressional delegation led by Benjamin A. Gilman, Chairman of the House Committee on International Relations. The particular focus of my efforts was to assess the security posture of Haiti in light of the scheduled transition from the American-led Multi-National Force (MNF) to the American-led United Nations Mission in Haiti (UNMIH). Based on this assessment, a further evaluation of the prospects for developing a stable, democratic government in Haiti may be made.

AMERICAN MILITARY FORCES

As an initial point, the superb performance of American military personnel must be recognized. The skill, discipline and professionalism of the American forces are in keeping with the highest standards of our Armed Forces.

Outstanding leadership has been demonstrated by the principal commanders, including, but not limited to, MG George Fisher, Commanding General of the 25th LID, BG Paul Hill, The Assistant Division Commander of the 25th LID, and COL Charles Swannack, Commander of the 2d Brigade of the 25th LID.

The success of United States military forces is also attributable to the effective working relationship with the American embassy. Ambassador Swing is a consummate professional who continues to provide great leadership in a demanding situation.

SECURITY SITUATION

The assessment of the principal commanders and soldiers in the field is that there is no organized, military threat to the MNF or UNMIH. Sporadic violence exists, but it does not appear to be based on political motivation, rather it stems from criminal activity or domestic violence.

MG Fisher is confident that he has effectively accounted for all members of FAH'D (the former Haitian army/police). These individuals are part of the Interim Police (after proper vetting), employed by other ministries of the Haitian Government, or involved in public works programs.

In addition, there does not appear to be large scale stocks of military weapons which potentially could arm a dissident force. Shotguns and handguns are prevalent in private hands, but are increasingly rare on the streets.

Evidence of the improved security situations was obvious in my nighttime patrol of Port au Prince with COL Swannack. We observed several roadblocks being conducted by elements of the 2d Calvary. In the course of the evening, these control points stopped several hundred vehicles and no weapons were found.

The present, tranquil situation should not be allowed to mask continuing and fundamental tensions within Haitian society which could, in the absence of international forces or a capable local police, explode into destabilizing violence. Nevertheless, at this juncture, there does not seem to be any potential military threat to the transition to UNMIH. Although there is speculation that opponents of democracy may try to test UNMIH after the departure of MNF, the large and continuing presence of American personnel and the continued leadership of MG Kinzer significantly diminishes this potential.

From a security standpoint, the next critical crossroad is the scheduled departure of UNMIH in February of 1996. The ability of UNMIH to successfully depart and, conversely, the ability of the Government of Haiti to function without a large, international military present is dependent upon the accomplishment of several critical tasks. The major challenges that must be met are: (1) the creation of a professional and non-political police force, (2) the successful conclusion of scheduled elections, (3) the reform of the judicial and prison systems and (4) the initiation of sustainable economic development.

POLICE FORCES

Having visited Somalia twice during the recent deployment of United States personnel, I am particularly sensitive to the need to create a credible, stable and democratically oriented police force. In Somalia, the
