

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, the issue that we have got to address is this deficit. This Government is accumulating a debt of $30 billion an hour more than it brings in. In other words, it is spending $30 million an hour more than it brings in. How, you would ask, is that done? It is done by using a credit card. The most misused credit card in the history of this country is right here in my hands.

What is this misused credit card? It is the congressional voting card. For 40 years this card has been inserted in that slot and additional debt has been put onto the next generation. It is like any other credit card. You can go ahead and charge things without having the cash to pay for it. That is exactly what this country has done. The status quo in this country is not a pay as you go. The status quo is not to act like every other American family has to act; that is, they cannot spend any more than they bring in. The status quo in Washington, DC is to get more taxes and more taxes and spend more money and more money. If the money coming in does not match the money going out, that is okay, just spend more money, and periodically go back and get more taxes.

We cannot continue to allow this society to run on a deficit. It does not work. No country in the history of this world has been able to run their country with deficit spending like some in this body would like this country to run.

Mr. Speaker, we are up against the status quo. Anytime you take on the status quo—and frankly, there are a lot of us who have had enough guts, and there is the momentum this year to take it on—whenever you take on the status quo you are going to be criticized. They are going to blame everything they can on you. Tonight, earlier, I heard one of my colleagues even somehow associating the tragic plane crash last night in Colombia to the Republicans and the balanced budget idea. That is the kind of thing we are being blamed for. We are going to throw seniors out on the street. No more student loans. What a bunch of baloney. No more school lunches for the kids. What a bunch of garbage. That is not going to happen. A year from now the people of this country will be enjoying the fruits of a balanced budget. And you know what? None of these scare tactics being used by the protectors of the status quo will come true.

We can all remember in our own history when Christopher Columbus sailed for the new world. Where was that criticism? "What is the guy, crazy? The world is flat." He had to sail through some rough waters. He had to go through severe criticism, but he did it. Look what happened. He sailed into a new world. In this country, we can do the same thing.

Sure, we get a lot of naysayers around here that say to us, "You cannot balanced this budget," or "Let us pretend we are balanced it," and continue to spend more and more and more. We are being criticized for everything you can imagine, but we are determined to sail through those rough waters. We are determined to deliver to the next generation a balanced budget. We are determined to force the Government in Washington, DC to behave just like every other family in America has to behave. That is that they cannot spend any more money than they bring in.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MCINNIS. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's analogy of leaving the old world for the new world, I just want to make this point. We have left the old world for the new world, and we are not going back to the old world. We have burned our ships. We are in this new world, and we are determined to save this country from bankruptcy. I thank my colleague for yielding to me.

Mr. MCINNIS. That is what we are going to do. That is the beauty. I know that right now the storm is out. A lot of people like to bring their ships into the harbor when the storm is out there. We are right in the center of it. We are willing and ready to do that, and I think that is the optimistic news for this country.

Mr. Speaker, I will end on an optimistic note. No. 1, the spending and the spending of this government has to be brought under control. We are going to do it. For those young people in our country, let me tell you, there are so many more things that are going right with this country than are going wrong, and you have a great future. My colleague, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS], myself, and most of the people, a majority in this body, will deliver to this next generation economic sensibility in the Nation's Capitol. We will deliver to that generation a credit care like the one I have that is not loaded with debt. We are going to do something about it. We are in the new world. We are ready to take the pot shots that people are making at us. We do it for the next generation.

A CHRISTMAS RECITAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TIAHRT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, a Christmas recital. Man does not live by legislative tension alone, and my apologies to Mr. Moore.

The night before Christmas.

T'was the night before Christmas and all through this House, the liberals were playing the cat and the mouse. The budget was hung by threads of despair, while we hoped and we prayed Bill Clinton would care.

The night before nestled all sung in his bed, visions of veto pens danced in his head. He dreamed of Web Hubble all through the night and vowed he would hold out if only for spite.

While out in the land there arose such a clatter, taxpayers demanding, just what is the matter? Balance that budget, shut some Feds down. Our poor Army's in Bosnia, they said with a frown.

The moon on the breast of the new fallen ice gave delusions of grandeur to Hillary; how nice. When what to our wondering eyes should appear, but Willie as Santa, his gang as reindeer, passing out pork in Fed buckets and pales, while frightening the old folks with Medicare tails.

More swooping than vultures his coursers they came, they whistled and shouted and called them by name: Now Al Gore, Panetta, McCurry and Stephanie; on Flowers, on Troopers, McDougal and Betsy. From the top of the heap to the top of the Hill, now bash away, bash away, go for the kill.

While back in the House the hurricane rages. The freshmen are busy inspiring the pages. What sad words from ladies, and gentlemen too, who would rather be home with an egg nog or two. Where children and grandchildren snuggle in bed, waiting for Santa, the real one, in red.

But struggle we will until our promise is met, a budget that is balanced; down national debt. A tax break for families with children to raise, a gift to the Nation in conservative days.

And then in a twinkle we heard on this roof the stomping and pawing of each liberal hoof. As the Speaker called order, we all turned around. Bill came through the cloakroom looking smug and quite round. He was dressed all in glitter, because fur is not allowed. He threw Big Macs and french fries all over our crowd. You have won now; it is over, I fear. The budget is signed, my election draws near. But if I should lose, I will still be around. I am heading to Hollywood. It is my kind of town.

He plopped in his sleigh, to his libs gave a yell, and then they were gone like bats out of hell. But we heard him exclaim as they galloped toward heaven. BOB DORNAN impeaching me? Film at eleven.

Mr. Speaker, may I place in the RECORD the update of:

REAL SLEAZE IN THE NOT-SO GAY NINETIES

I. WITH WHOM DOES ANY THINKING PERSON ASSOCIATE THESE NAMES AND EVENTS?

A. First the good guys & gals

Jean Lewis and other law respecting workers at the Resolution Trust Corporation.

Paula Corbin Jones—victim of criminal flashing—the ultimate sexual harassment, right up there with criminal groping—worse if you are the employer, i.e. the Governor.

Heber Springs Hideaway, "liaisons dangereuse."

Vadis Bosnia? Whither goest our emperor's whims?

AMERICA DESERVES BALANCED BUDGET

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHRYSLER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CHRYSLER. Mr. Speaker, let's be serious about this debate. Despite the rhetoric we're hearing from the White House and my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, there is only one man standing between the American people and the benefits of a balanced Federal budget.

The President signed a contract with us that said he agreed that a balanced budget over the next 7 years, as determined by honest Congressional Budget Office numbers, would be enacted before the end of this year.

Yet the President has dodged and diverted attention for the last month since he signed that agreement and refused to negotiate in good faith toward a balanced budget.

By standing in the way of a balanced budget, the President is denying every American family the benefits of a balanced budget.

Mr. Speaker, a balanced budget will mean a tremendous bonus for every American. According to Americans for Tax Reform, if we balance our budget today:

Over 4.25 million more jobs will be created over the next 10 years.

Per capita incomes will increase by over 16 percent.

Families would save as much as $37,000 off the cost of an average 30-year mortgage of $75,000.

Students would save $2,160 on the cost of an $11,000 student loan.

An average family would save $900 on the cost of a $15,000 car loan.

The Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, in testimony before this Congress, stated that interest rates would come down at least 2 full percentage points.

Mr. Speaker, our balanced budget plan will also save Medicare from bankruptcy, preserving and strengthening this program for our Nation's seniors. In fact, our plan would increase per beneficiary spending on Medicare from $4,800 this year to $7,100 in the year 2002—that's an increase of $2,300. Only in Washington would anyone try to call that a cut.

A balanced budget is good for America. The country deserves a balanced budget. The President should stop standing in the way of a balanced budget and let Americans see the benefits that will result from putting our country back on sound financial footing.
