If it was operating in the best interests of the American people, that is what it would be doing. It would be developing programs to create jobs and improve the standard of living, and making sure that when people work, they are compensated appropriately for that work and included in that compensation is basic health insurance and other kinds of fundamental benefits.

Mr. SANDERS. Maybe when we talk about the decline in the standard of living of working people and the shrinking of the middle class, I think it ties, and we might want to end our discussion on this note, it ties into the whole issue of trade which has gotten a lot of attention recently in terms of the passage of NAFTA and GATT.

NAFTA was passed some 14 or 15 months ago. We were told that with the passage of NAFTA, many new jobs would be created here in the United States. It would improve the Mexican economy. Fifteen months have come and gone.

What is your impression about the impact of NAFTA?

Mr. HINCHEY. I think we could spend, I tell the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. SANDERS], more than an hour on that discussion alone here this evening.

But to make it brief, the effects have been frankly what you and I and others who voted against NAFTA predicted they would be. We said at that time that the peso was overvalued, that the Mexican economy was riddled with corruption and that if we were to pass NAFTA, it was really not a trade agreement but an investment agreement, it would siphon off investment capital from the United States down to Mexico and there would be a net loss of jobs from this country, and that is precisely what we have seen.

We have seen a loss of 10,000 jobs, a net loss of 10,000 jobs from the United States to Mexico as a direct result of NAFTA. And we have seen the collapse of the Mexican economy.

Our trade policies since 1979 and perhaps as early as 1973 have been a disaster for this country. We have taken it on the chin. We have been a sap for other countries. We have a built-in trade deficit now which is of historic proportions. That trade deficit means that we are subsidizing good jobs in other countries while we lose those good jobs here in America.

We need to reverse our trade policies and focus on our own domestic economic needs. Trade is important only to the extent that it provides value to the United States, that it helps us improve the standard of living of the American people, that it provides more jobs for Americans.

Our trade policies have taken us precisely 180 degrees in the opposite direction. That has been going on now for nearly 20 years. No wonder we are suffering the economic circumstances we are. That is a major part of our problem.

Mr. SANDERS. I agree. And there is no question that with a $150 plus billion trade deficit, what that translates into is millions of decent manufacturing jobs that should exist in this country but that do not.

When we talk about the global economy, I think what we have got to deal with is the fact that major corporations would much prefer to go to China where they could pay workers 20 cents an hour in an undemocratic society where workers cannot form free unions, where the environmental conditions or the workers' conditions are very, very bad.

Obviously what has happened is companies have invested tens of billions of dollars in China. They have invested huge amounts of money in Mexico, in Malaysia, in countries where desperate people are forced to work for starvation wages, and at the same time they have thrown American workers out on the street.

We must demand and create a process by which large American corporations reinvest in America and put our people back to work at good wages. Clearly as you indicate, current trade policy is doing exactly the opposite.

Mr. HINCHEY. I want to thank you very much for giving me the opportunity to join you in this discussion this evening and for focusing the discussion exactly where it ought to be focused, on the economic issues, on ways that we can take in this Congress to improve the standard of living of American people.

There is nothing more important for me. I know that is true with you. We have got to make sure as best we can that it becomes equally important for a larger number of people who serve in this Congress.
