THE RIGHT WAY TO REDUCE THE CAPITAL GAINS TAX

• Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, as I speak today, the Republican leadership of this Congress is discussing an issue of great importance to the family farmers and small businessmen of America: the capital gains tax.

Current law in the area of capital gains leaves something to be desired. I grew up in a small business family. My father owned his own printing shop, and he poured his heart and soul and countless late hours into that business. My father's printing shop was more than his livelihood. It was his investment in his retirement and his family's future. I know many hardworking Vermonters are in the same position. They work hard all their lives to build up their farms and small businesses. The capital gains tax, when they decide to sell the farm or business to fund their retirements, can be close to punitive.

I am receptive to a capital gains reduction that favors Americans who save for retirement by investing in their personal business, primary residence, or family farm. When these taxpayers retire, they sell their business, home, or farm to live off their lifetime investment. We ought to be encouraging that kind of investment, not punishing it.

I am concerned, however, that the Republican plan to reduce taxes on capital gains targets the wrong type of investment and cost too much. The capital gains tax break that the Republican leadership is discussing will benefit primarily people other than family farmers and small businessmen.

Current law taxes capital gains at a lower rate than other forms of income. Under the 1993 Budget Reconciliation Act, the maximum tax rate on capital gains remains 28 percent, as compared to 39.6 percent for ordinary income. In addition to the lower rate, the tax on capital gains is deferred until the capital asset is sold and the tax is forgiven at death. Given those preferences, and given the fact that most proposals to reduce the capital gains tax benefit mostly very wealthy investors, I am very wary of making changes in the tax law right now.

I agree with the targeted capital gains approach adopted in the 1993 Budget Reconciliation Act. The act allows investors who purchase newly issued stock in small companies to exclude from their income 50 percent of the gain when they sell the stock if it is held for at least 5 years. For stock to qualify for the tax break, the company must have less than $50 million in gross assets. This approach encourages long-term investment in small businesses—the engine of job growth in the 1990's.

By contrast, the capital gains tax breaks in the House and Senate versions of the Republican budget reconciliation bill are part of gigantic tax giveaway packages that will increase the deficit and mostly benefit well-heeled Wall Street investors.

Under the Senate bill, the corporate capital gains rate is reduced from 35 percent to 28 percent. Individuals would be able to exclude 50 percent of capital gain income from taxation. I voted against the bill when it was debated in the Senate, but it passed by a vote of 52-47. The House included a larger capital gains reduction in its version of the budget bill. The corporate capital gains rate is reduced to 25 percent and the individual rate is capped at 19.8 percent. In addition, the House indexes capital gains for inflation. Let us remember that according to the Congressional Research Service, over half of all capital gains—excluding personal residences—are earned by corporate stock and real estate investors. Farmers and small business owners account for a relatively small portion of capital gains.

The Treasury Department estimates that the House capital gains proposal would cost $170.4 billion over the next 10 years, and would mostly benefit people earning over $200,000 a year. The Senate bill is not much better. At a time when the national debt is approaching $5 trillion, we just cannot afford that kind of a tax giveaway going mostly to people who do not need it.

As House and Senate conferees discuss changes in the capital gains tax, I hope they will consider ensuring that it does not mostly benefit very wealthy investors but rather is targeted toward small businessmen and family farmers who have poured sweat equity into their businesses.●
