

We have seen a number of different initiatives designed to bring peace to troubled regions, such as Bosnia-Herzegovina, Northern Ireland, Cyprus, and the Middle East. However, the Administration needs to demonstrate our nation's strong interest in bringing the violence in Kurdistan and Nagorno-Karabagh to an end. The sale of 120 ATACMS moves our nation in the wrong direction and could further fuel the war and destruction in both regions.

Though the Administration has announced it intends to pursue the sale, I make one last plea to urge it to reconsider its decision. If the Administration intends to complete the sale, I would urge at the very least that it impose a few basic conditions. In short, if these missiles are for national self-defense, the sale should be conditioned solely for that purpose. More to the point, the missiles should not be placed so as to pose a threat to the people of Greece and Cyprus. Further, the Turkish government should promise that none of the missiles be transferred to Azerbaijan. And finally, the missiles should not be used to prolong the violence in Kurdistan. The Clinton Administration at the very least should insist on these conditions at the very least. The Clinton Administration also should make clear that failure to abide by these conditions could undermine future economic and military assistance.

Again I believe this sale to be bad policy. It is a mistake. However, if the Administration intends to pursue this sale, it should at the very least make clear that this nation insists on this equipment being strictly limited to self-defense. If we are going to be forced swallow this very bitter pill, the Administration should try to make it less bitter.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the letter to Secretary Christopher be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, December 18, 1995.

Hon. WARREN M. CHRISTOPHER,
Secretary of State,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: We are writing to express our strong opposition to the Clinton Administration's proposed sale of 120 army tactical surface-to-surface missiles (ATACMS) to Turkey.

As you well know, for more than a decade the Turkish government has waged a brutal war against the Kurdish people. According to recent data from Human Rights Watch (HRW), the conflict has resulted in 19,000 military and civilian dead, 2,000 villages destroyed and more than 2 million being forced from their homes.

What concerns us deeply is the use of American-made military equipment to commit these atrocities and to prolong the war against the Kurdish people. Specifically, it has been reported that in 29 incidents from 1992 and 1995, the Turkish Army has used U.S.-supplied fighter-bombers and helicopters to attack and fire against civilian villages and targets. Further, U.S. and NATO-supplied small arms and armored personnel carriers have been used in a counter-insurgency campaign against thousands of Kurdish villages.

The Kurds are not the only ones to have been subjected to attack with U.S. or NATO equipment from Turkey. Indeed, the record of the last twenty years is disturbing. Most notably, the Turkish military used NATO military hardware when it invaded and occupied the now-divided island of Cyprus. Further, Turkey has transferred US and NATO weapons to Azerbaijan, where they have been used against civilian Armenians residing in Nagorno-Karabagh.

In the face of this history, the President now wishes to supply the Turkish Army with 120 ATACMS, each of which is capable of carrying a warhead payload of 950 small cluster bombs. With these weapons, the Turkish Army has the capability to launch a horrendous ballistic missile attack on the Kurdish people. The results would be equally disturbing if any of these missiles ended up in the hands of the Azeris, or were deployed within range of either Cyprus or Greece.

Mr. Secretary, the Clinton Administration has taken a great interest in achieving peace in troubled regions, such as Bosnia-Herzegovina, Northern Ireland, Cyprus, and the Middle East. However, the Administration needs to demonstrate our nation's strong interest in bringing the violence in Kurdistan and Nagorno-Karabagh to an end. By arming Turkey with 120 ATACMS, we would send the opposite message and further fuel destruction in both regions.

The time has come for the United States to take a stand for peace throughout the entire Middle East. For that reason, we urge the Clinton Administration to reconsider its proposed sale of tactical surface-to-surface missiles to Turkey.

Thank you for your attention to this important issue.

Sincerely,

LARRY PRESSLER.
ALFONSE M. D'AMATO.

THE BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, almost 4 years ago I commenced these daily reports to the Senate to make a matter of record the exact Federal debt as of close of business the previous day.

In that report—February 27, 1992—the Federal debt stood at $3,825,891,293,066.80, as of close of business the previous day. The point is, the Federal debt has increased by $1,163,199,095,296.10 since February 26, 1992.

As of the close of business Tuesday, December 19, the Federal debt stood at exactly $4,989,090,388,362.90. On a per capita basis, every man, woman, and child in America owes $18,938.67 as his or her share of the Federal debt.

THE RETIREMENT OF COL. FRANK K. HURD, JR.

Mr. THURMOND, Madam President, I rise today to recognize the retirement of Col. Frank K. Hurd, Jr., from the U.S. Army. Colonel Hurd has served his country for over 26 years. He was an outstanding soldier and a dedicated Chief of the Army Liaison Office to the U.S. Senate, a position he has held for the past 3 years.

Colonel Hurd was commissioned as a second lieutenant of Armor through the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps upon graduation from Mercer University in his home State of Georgia. During his distinguished career, he served in a number of leadership assignments that took him to Korea; Bad Kissingen, Germany, where he commanded cavalry troops; Athens, Georgia, where he was an assistant professor of military science; and to Bamberg, Germany, where he commanded the 2d Squadron, 2d Armored Cavalry Regiment.

Colonel Hurd has succeeded admirably in his role of representing the Army's interests on Capitol Hill and acting as a liaison between the Department of the Army and the Senate. He has always been prompt, responsive, and sensitive to the needs of members and staff for up-to-date, complete, and accurate information.

As Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I am pleased to offer him my congratulations on a distinguished career, and I wish him and his family good health and happiness in the years ahead.

THE YORKTOWN AND MONROE COUNTY HIGH SCHOOLS CULTURAL EXCHANGE PROGRAM: UNDERSTANDING AND APPRECIATING CULTURAL DIVERSITY BY BRIDGING THE MILES

Mr. HEFLIN. Madam President, over 3 years ago, in September 1992, teacher Susan Ross of Yorktown High School in Yorktown Heights, NY, contacted my office to inform me of a wonderful new project which she had recently developed for her ninth grade students. She had just organized a cultural exchange program between her students and the students of Monroe County High School in Monroeville, AL. As part of the program, she wanted to get my recollections of what it was like growing up in Alabama and in the South.

Yorktown Heights is located about a half-hour's drive from New York City in a rural area surrounded by farming towns. Monroeville is the hometown of writer Harper Lee and was the model for the fictional town of Macomb in her Pulitzer Prize winning novel "To Kill a Mockingbird." The courthouse in Monroeville actually served as part of the set for the Academy Award-winning film version.

This classic novel, which Ms. Ross has taught her classes off and on for 26 years, proved to be the catalyst for her program. One year, while reviewing the books that she would use in her class for the upcoming school term, she realized, in her words: "I was teaching a book about a culture I knew nothing about, and I was possibly doing a disservice to it. To understand the issue from the character's point of view, you need to go to the source, so I did."

Going to the source meant first approaching her counterparts in Monroeville. First, she contacted Monroe County High School Principal Pat

Patterson, who put her in touch with Paralee Broughton, a 9th and 10th grade teacher at the high school. Ms. Broughton told Susan that since "To Kill a Mockingbird" would serve as the central link between the two schools, she should get in touch with Mrs. Sarah Dyess, whose eighth-grade students were reading the book.

With the help of Ms. Broughton, Mrs. Dyess, and other teachers, educators, and administrators in Monroeville, Ms. Ross established a truly unique and stimulating cultural exchange program which she hoped would teach respect for each other's cultural differences and individuality and give students an understanding of basic universal human rights that are vital to democratic society. The project came to be known as Understanding and Appreciating Cultural Diversity, and was to help create cultural awareness and understanding through letters, tapes, pictures, and interviews. As part of the program, Ms. Ross' students would create all these materials and exchange them with students from the other school. The program is special because it was the first time that a project of this nature and scope had been done between any schools from the North and South.

Ms. Ross had high hopes for her program, the key to which was overcoming stereotypes. It was not to be simply a pen-pal correspondence exercise. Instead, each class was to communicate with the other class as a group, each serving as a microcosm of its community. To get the exchange underway, the students at Yorktown compiled a written and visual profile of their community, including its history and information gathered through interviews with local officials. They provided an analysis of the town's transportation, entertainment, and shopping facilities.

The Alabama students, under the guidance of their teacher Mrs. Dyess, compiled a videotape of their community which they sent to their friends in New York. Monroeville sent Yorktown an autographed copy of "To Kill a Mockingbird," while Yorktown in turn sent Monroeville books set in the Hudson Valley, including Washington Irving's "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

Their teacher watched as the students' misconceptions began to crumble. She saw lackadaisical youngsters grow interested in reading when they began believing that the South was a real and multidimensional place. They learned that there are many different Souths, just as there are Norths, and both groups learned that it is dangerous to generalize about any region.

While learning of each others' differences, the exchange also made obvious the similarities between Yorktown Heights and Monroeville. Both are a mix of suburban and small town. Both have many working farms in the community. The two schools are about the same size, 900 or so students. In both places, the school is a vital link in the community and there are strong family values present.

The program has had its lighthearted movements along the way. Yorktown students were surprised to discover upon receiving a copy of Monroe County's yearbook that the students did not wear overalls. On the other side of the connection, one Yorktown student, Guy Gentile, was surprised to be asked by one of his Monroeville counterparts "If I walk out the street—in Yorktown—will I be shot?"

Soon, other schools learned of Ms. Ross' innovative program and expressed an interest in becoming involved. Her students eventually began an exchange with a school in Louisiana to gain a better understanding and awareness of the influence of French culture on the United States. On November 14 of this year, Ms. Ross called to let me know that two of her current students were visiting Monroeville as part of the Bridging the Miles program, as it is now called.

Overall, the program has served as a bridge for students who would otherwise depend on often inaccurate and shallow media stereotypes. Ms. Ross said that a typical Yorktown student's opinions of Southerners were formed by movies such as "My Cousin Vinny" and television shows like "The Beverly Hillbillies." The students were surprised to learn of the extent to which the racial climate in the South has changed since the 1930's, when "To Kill a Mockingbird" was set. They had not expected students who were so open about race and who participated in school activities together regardless of race.

In Monroeville, the students realized we have a tendency to cluster everyone in one stereotypical unit and mark them as being nondescript people. The sharing of poetry and letters has given the students a whole new perspective on the relationship between North and South.

The program begun by Ms. Ross has gained a great amount of attention all over the country, having been spotlighted by The New York Times, Atlanta Journal-Constitution, and the CBS television network. So far, most of its funding has come directly from Ms. Ross; this is how strongly she believes in what she is doing. Hopefully, the program will continue to expand and promote further understanding among the many diverse areas of the United States.

Just as programs such as the one between Yorktown and Monroeville demonstrate that it is wrong to generalize and stereotype about regions of the country, the energy, drive, and example of Susan Ross prove that it is also harmful to generalize about the health of our public schools and the commitment of public school teachers. I congratulate her for her broad-mindedness and innovativeness in educating young people.

It is my hope that others interested in ways of improving American education will see the great benefits that can be realized through projects such as this. One thing that makes us unique as Americans is our diverse cultural heritages that bind us together even as we maintain our regionally distinct traditions and customs. We tend to think of exchange programs only in terms of those between citizens of different nations, and these are indeed important and valuable tools for learning about our world. But as Ms. Ross and students of Yorktown High School and their counterparts at Monroe County High School have demonstrated, we have so much to draw from different regions within the United States itself that it is not necessary to go out of our own country to experience a cultural exchange. I commend her and wish her every continued success for her programs.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Kalbaugh, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting a withdrawal and sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

At 12:10 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Goetz, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bills:

H.R. 395. An act to designate the United States courthouse and Federal building to be constructed at the southeastern corner of Liberty and South Virginia Streets in Reno, Nevada, as the "Bruce R. Thompson United States Courthouse and Federal Building."

S. 369. An act to designate the Federal Courthouse in Decatur, Alabama, as the "Seybourn H. Lynne Federal Courthouse," and for other purposes.

S. 965. An act to designate the United States Courthouse for the Eastern District of Virginia in Alexandria, Virginia, as the "Albert V. Bryan United States Courthouse."

S. 1465. An act to extend au pair programs.

The enrolled bills were signed subsequently by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

The following measure was read the second time and placed on the calendar:

H.J. Res. 132. Joint resolution affirming that budget negotiations shall be based on the most recent technical and economic assumptions of the Congressional Budget Office and shall achieve a balanced budget by fiscal year 2002 based on those assumptions.
