

the flexibility to design work programs that do one thing—move parents into the work force. But the WAGE Act does not just let States take the money and run.

It is based on the principle that those who raise the money should have some say in how it is spent. But it discards the micromanagement of the past.

The WAGE Act has four themes:

First, work. From the day that a parent sets foot in a welfare office, we will expect that person to work or to demonstrate progress toward self-sufficiency.

Second, State flexibility. States will have a wide latitude to design effective work programs under a new work and gainful employment block grant. The WAGE block grant will also provide incentives for moving parents into the work force.

Third, profamily. Families that stay together and play by the rules will be supported in their efforts to be self-sufficient. For children in divorced and never-married families, both parents will be expected to provide financial support through extensive and tough new child support enforcement measures.

Fourth, protects children. A transitional aid program will replace AFDC and provide cash assistance to families with children. States will have broad flexibility to determine eligibility and to set benefit levels and time limits. Teen parents will be required to stay in school and to live with their parents or in adult-supervised living arrangements.

Under my proposal, the transitional aid program will be a cooperative Federal-State effort, with the Federal Government providing matching funds to States. However, unlike AFDC, it will emphasize the need for participants to work or prepare themselves for work. The WAGE block grant will provide States with the means to move welfare recipients into work. The WAGE Act will save money and reform the welfare system without resorting to the free-for-all of AFDC block grants that does little to hold States accountable and that puts America's children at great risk.

While there are savings to be realized in ending welfare inefficiencies, I hope the Senate's deliberations will emphasize first and foremost that welfare reform is not an experiment to be tested on America's poor children. The House bill allows States to count people as working who are kicked off the rolls. Mr. President, what could be more absurd than to say that people are working who have just been eliminated from the welfare rolls? You can be eliminated from the welfare rolls and not working, and we should not count people as working who are not. Real welfare reform is about solving the problem of transitioning parents into the work force, not the streets.

The person most affected by our deliberations are America's children. I hope that our efforts will focus on supporting and enabling their parents to be self-sufficient. That is the only approach that will ensure that we are responsible to the next generation.

Mr. President, let me end as I began. This new welfare reform proposal emphasizes four principles: work, State flexibility, families, and protecting children.

I think those ought to be the principles that underlie any reform of our welfare system.

COHEN (AND GRAHAM) AMENDMENT NO. 1116

Mr. COHEN (for himself and Mr. GRAHAM) proposed an amendment to the concurrent resolution, S. Con. Res. 13, supra; as follows:

On page 94, after line 21, add the following new section:

SEC. . SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING LOSSES OF TRUST FUNDS DUE TO FRAUD AND ABUSE IN THE MEDICARE PROGRAM.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) the General Accounting Office estimates that as much as $100,000,000,000 are wasted each year in the health care system due to fraud and abuse;

(2) outlays for the medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act during fiscal year 1994 were $161,100,000,000, and the General Accounting Office estimates that up to 10 percent of those outlays were wasted because of fraud and abuse;

(3) medicare beneficiaries incur higher out-of-pocket costs and copayments due to inflated billings resulting from fraudulent and abusive practices perpetrated against the medicare program; and

(4) funds lost because of fraud and abuse are contributing to the financial crises of the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund, as identified by the Boards of Trustees of such trust funds in their 1995 annual reports.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that as the Committee on Finance of the Senate and, if established, the Bipartisan Commission on the Solvency of Medicare recommended under section 307, address the long-term solvency of the medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395 et seq.), high priority should be given to proposals which identify, eliminate, and recover funds expended from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund due to, fraud and abuse in such program.
