

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

ELISEO VASQUEZ MEDINA: AN ORGANIZER'S ORGANIZER

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 24, 1996

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Eliseo Medina, executive director of Local 2028 of the Service Employees International Union and the newly-elected executive vice president of the Service Employees International Union, who will be honored with a Leadership Award by the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council on April 27, 1996.

Eliseo Vasquez Medina entered the labor movement through the table grape vineyards of Delano, in California's San Joaquin Valley, where he joined the grape strike led by Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers, AFL-CIO in 1965. Quickly recognized as a natural leader and organizer, he was sent by Cesar Chavez to Chicago with a phone number and a bag of buttons to head up what became a successful boycott organization in the Midwest. From there he was sent wherever the need existed for his energy, intelligence, and organizational skills.

Within a few years, Eliseo Medina was elected to the executive board of the United Farm Workers, where he became second vice-president to Cesar Chavez. When the Agricultural Labor Relations Act was passed in California, he returned to lead numerous successful election drives and negotiate numerous historic contracts.

Beginning in 1978, Eliseo Medina began the second part of his career as an organizer in diverse industries. He was tapped by the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees [AFSCME] to organize employees of the University of California. Thereafter, he moved on to organize the Teas State Employees Union.

Five years later, the Service Employees International Union brought him to San Diego, where he has led and honed its Local 2028, increasing its membership threefold and providing service and leadership to thousands of my constituents in the 50th District of California.

Just this week, Eliseo Medina returned to Chicago, where the Service Employees International Union elected him to one of its highest levels of leadership, executive vice-president.

Mr. Speaker, I join labor leaders in San Diego and across the country in congratulating Eliseo Medina for receiving the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council's Leadership Award. I know he will always be striving to improve the quality of life for the working people of San Diego.

TRIBUTE TO THE CONCERNED
CITIZENS OF BELLEVILLE

HON. WILLIAM J. MARTINI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 24, 1996

Mr. MARTINI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a very special group of Americans from the Eighth Congressional District of New Jersey. Sally Hood, Lyda Panko, John Piecuch, Carol Smith, Angelo Veneziano, and Louise Cordasco, all founding trustees of the Concerned Citizens of Belleville, have embodied the definition of public service.

The individuals who make up the Concerned Citizens of Belleville have maintained a successful civic organization truly dedicated to the service and the betterment of the greater Belleville community. And, as they celebrate their 10th anniversary, I am proud and honored to offer my heartfelt congratulations and best wishes.

These citizens have given generously of their time, energy, and resources in order to foster goodwill and benevolence throughout their community. The Concerned Citizens of Belleville reminds all of us that a community is most profoundly changed not by huge, impersonal institutions, but by people determined to make a positive difference.

The Concerned Citizens of Belleville's 10 years of enduring dedication to their neighbors and friends has brought a sense of great pride and accomplishment to the community. Congratulations for a job well done.

HONORING THE TROUSDALE
VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT

HON. BART GORDON

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 24, 1996

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I am taking this opportunity to applaud the invaluable services provided by the Trousdale County Volunteer Fire Department. These brave, civic minded people give freely of their time so that we may all feel safer at night.

Few realize the depth of training and hard work that goes into being a volunteer firefighter. To quote one of my local volunteers, "These firemen must have an overwhelming desire to do for others while expecting nothing in return."

Preparation includes twice-monthly training programs in which they have live drills, study the latest videos featuring the latest in firefighting tactics, as well as attend seminars where they can obtain the knowledge they need to save lives. Within a year of becoming a volunteer firefighter, most attend the Tennessee Fire Training School in Murfreesboro where they undergo further, intensified training.

When the residents of my district go to bed at night, they know that should disaster strike and their home catch fire, well-trained and qualified volunteer fire departments are ready and willing to give so graciously and generously of themselves. This peace of mind should not be taken for granted.

By selflessly giving of themselves, they ensure a safer future for us all. We owe these volunteer fire departments a debt of gratitude for their service and sacrifice.

DEFICIT REDUCTION

HON. RON PACKARD

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 24, 1996

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Appropriations Committee, I would like to take a moment to commend my Republican colleagues and Chairman LIVINGSTON for the tremendous progress made in returning fiscal responsibility to Washington.

The Congressional Budget Office recently projected the 1996 budget deficit will fall to $144 billion. This is due to the commitment of the Republican led Congress to rein in unwieldy Federal spending. We have cut spending to its lowest level in 14 years. This means a $23 billion savings for American taxpayers over last year. In fact, my colleagues and I have saved taxpayers $43 billion since gaining control of the Congress in 1995.

We have had to stand tough against the old, big spending culture of Washington. A great deal of credit must go to Chairman LIVINGSTON who has refused to raise spending caps or take spending off-budget. He insisted on finding offsets to pay for $1.3 billion in disaster aid, rather than adding to the deficit. In addition, my colleagues and I have reduced the Federal bureaucracy and eliminated wasteful programs.

The Republican led Congress has continued to fulfill its promise to the American people. We put the brakes on out of control spending and produced the largest down turn in Federal spending in history. We will continue to make tough decisions and keep on our glidepath to a balanced budget.

CLINTON'S BLIND EYE TOWARD IRAN

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 24, 1996

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the House Committee on International Relations held a timely hearing on U.S. policy toward Bosnia which delved into charges that the Clinton administration tacitly allowed Iran to ship arms to Bosnia via Croatia. Unfortunately, there were more serious questions raised during the course of that hearing than were answered by administration representatives.

• This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

As the House sponsor of a bipartisan effort to lift the arms embargo against Bosnia, I am extremely concerned about the implications and consequences of such a policy should these allegations indeed be substantiated. It is ironic that President Clinton apparently was willing to turn a blind eye toward Iran while blocking a majority in the Congress—a bipartisan majority—that called for the United States—not Iran—to take the lead in upholding Bosnia's legitimate and fundamental right to defend itself.

Should the Bosnians have been given the means to defend themselves in the face of aggression and genocide? Absolutely. Should those arms have come from Iran? Absolutely not.

In the past few years, Members from both sides of the aisle put aside their differences to respond to the senseless slaughter of innocent civilians by well-armed Serb militants in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Repeatedly we raised our voices calling upon the President to display determined U.S. leadership in the face of aggression and genocide. These calls were repeatedly rebuffed. When we voted in overwhelming support to lift the arms embargo, we were told by the White House that such an action was not in the interest of the United States as it would lead to an "Americanization" of the conflict, result in the deployment of thousands of U.S. troops, and undermine the U.S. Security Council.

Mr. Speaker, when all is said and done, the fundamental issue at stake here—as in so many other instances—is one of leadership.

For nearly 3 years the Clinton administration, like the one before it, largely passed the buck on Bosnia. The Europeans, for their part, raised the specter of Islamic fundamentalism as an excuse for inaction. Mr. Speaker, it is inexplicable how turning a blind eye toward Iran—a terrorist state—was in the interest of the United States.

Regrettably, the international community and the United States refused to undertake meaningful action themselves to end the genocide or to provide the Bosnians with the means to defend themselves. By default at best, and with U.S. acquiescence at worst, Teheran was allowed to fill in the gap resulting from the failure of the Clinton administration to act and to lead. By turning a blind eye in this instance, President Clinton has unwittingly strengthened a small nationalist minority in Bosnia at the expense of those truly committed to the preservation of a multiethnic state; damaged our position in the United Nations; and potentially expose the 20,000 American troops he ordered to Bosnia to even greater danger.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the House leadership for pursuing this matter given its implications for U.S. interests in the Balkans and beyond.

TRIBUTE TO THE VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS, ALLWOOD ME- MORIAL POST 6487

HON. WILLIAM J. MARTINI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 24, 1996

Mr. MARTINI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a very special group of Americans from the Eighth Congressional District of New Jersey.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, Allwood Memorial Post 6487 has for a half century offered a steadfast portrait of loyalty, sacrifice, and self-resolve.

Our loyalties mark the kinds of persons we have chosen to become. Real loyalty endures inconvenience, withstands hardship, and does not flinch under assault. The individuals who make up the Allwood Memorial Post consistently allow this genuine loyalty to pervade the whole of their lives.

The members of VFW, Post 6487 remind us that the loyal, patriotic citizen expects no great reward for coming to his country's aid. On the contrary, a devoted patriot seeks only that his country flourish.

When it comes to honoring their country, their faith, and their comrades, the veterans of Post 6487 have demonstrated both the wisdom to know the right thing to do, and the will to do it. Certainly, they have lived up to the obligations of loyalty, patriotism, and service.

To be a loyal citizen means to achieve a high standard of caring seriously about the well-being of one's nation. I am proud to honor and praise Memorial Post 6487 for exceeding this standard. Congratulations for your 50 year history of American pride and patriotism.

TRIBUTE TO MEREDITH TAYLOR

HON. MICHAEL D. CRAPO

OF IDAHO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 24, 1996

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit the following essay by 16-year-old Meredith Taylor, one of my constituents. Meredith's essay won the Veterans of Foreign Wars Voice of Democracy Broadcast Scriptwriting Contest.

ANSWERING AMERICA'S CALL

(By Meredith Taylor)

A needy America called—a compassionate America answered. Listen:

"Give me liberty or give me death!" "Let the open arms of your Statue of Liberty shelter me from me land's potato famine!" "Just one more breath, please. The polio . . . it hurts . . . my iron lung . . . will it last?" "Don't whip me, master. Let me be free from slavery!" "We have a voice, let us women speak out and vote!" "Reporting NASA, this is one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind!" "Don't ask what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country!"

Patrick Henry called for the separation from England, and the colonists rallied for freedom. Oppression, tyranny and famine led helpless Irish and other immigrants to our encompassing harbors. America fed and clothed them. Agonizing pleas for life screamed to America's medical researchers to discover a cure for Polio. Dr. Jonas Salk answered with a vaccine. The Civil War split not only the North from the South, but families and friends because of the call to end slavery. President Lincoln died and so did slavery. Following the end of slavery the suffragette demanded the right to vote in America's future and the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was passed. Neil Armstrong walked on the silverdusted moon to answer the call of curiosity, "to know the unknown." President Kennedy called out to the citizens of America to step up and participate in a positive way in the reformation of each citizen's relationship to the United States. The response was civil rights legislation and Medicare for the elderly.

These were the inflammatory, pleading, demanding, awe-inspiring calls to America in the past, and each time America answered with justice, equality, research and compassion. Now Americans call out with greater intensity and passion.

"I never thought it could happen to me. I mean, I'm only fifteen and I have AIDS. And the baby . . . this means she could have it too." "One more man. Please just give me one more hit!" "I'm outta here. I quit school." "Don't hit me, momma, not again . . . please . . .!" "What's a divorce, daddy? Why does mommy have to leave?"

These are the present day calls—the opportunities for us, you—me, to give something back to our nation and those who helped make such a strong foundation. How many AIDS-caused deaths and teenage pregnancies must occur before sex education is engraved into the minds of the ignorant? Not just sex education, but comprehensive education will assist in the rebirth of an "A" rather than an "X" generation—a generation free of substance abuse, hatred and discrimination. In the past the patriots, libertarians, adventurers and risk-takers strived to overcome political barriers, hatred, disease and economic hardships. It is incumbent upon all of us to unveil our loyalty and hope and to act with determination, desire and commitment. We must buttress the efforts of our civic organizations, city councils and religious groups. Each call can be answered if we listen.
