

a percentage of civilian nonfarm employment, the Federal workforce is the smallest it has been since 1933, before the New Deal. We have conducted a top-to-bottom overhaul of Federal regulations, and are eliminating 16,000 pages of outdated or burdensome rules altogether. We have reformed environmental, workplace safety, and pharmaceutical regulations to cut red tape without hurting public protection. And we will continue to find new, market-based ways to protect the public.

THE NEED TO CONTINUE WITH WHAT WORKS

As The Annual Report of the Council of Economic Advisers makes clear, this is a moment of great possibility for our country. Ours is the healthiest of any major economy. No nation on earth is better positioned to reap the rewards of the new era. Our strategy of deficit reduction and investment in our people has begun to work. It would be a grave error to turn back.

Our Nation must reject the temptation to shrink from its responsibilities or to turn to narrow, shortsighted solutions for long-term problems. If we continue to invest for the long term, we will pass on to the next generation a Nation in which opportunity is even more plentiful than it is today.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

THE TELECOMMUNICATIONS ACT

• Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, this telecommunications legislation is a deregulatory bill, and I am particularly pleased in this regard with the provisions covering commercial mobile services that lift the restrictions now disadvantaging the BOC affiliated CMRS carriers.

As soon as this bill is signed into law, the BOC affiliated commercial mobile service carriers can begin to offer the full range of end-to-end interLATA services to their mobile customers just as their competitors are able to do now. They need no Government action or approval.

I am pleased to have had the chairman confirm that my understanding is correct. Upon enactment, the MFJ interLATA restriction on commercial mobile service affiliates of the Bell operating companies is eliminated. •

COMMEMORATING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF PORTLAND STATE UNIVERSITY

• Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, this year marks the 50th anniversary of Portland State University [PSU], Oregon's urban university. In its short life, the university has evolved into a national model for how higher education can be integrated into urban communities through service learning directed at taking on thorny urban problems. What this means is that instead of just focusing on ethereal academic concepts, PSU staff and students roll up their sleeves and connect concepts with community, and knowledge of an academic subject with real world applications.

In 1946, Portland State University began as an extension school to serve returning World War II veterans. Today, the university serves more than 37,000 individuals every year, offering a wide range of undergraduate and graduate degree programs. What's more, since its extension school days, PSU's mission has shifted to showing how town and gown can work together to build the communities of the future.

When innovative community programs in the Portland metropolitan area are brought to my attention, often I find that PSU is in the thick of things. One program that I am involved with is PSU's partnership with the Police Activities League [PAL] in sponsoring the National Youth Sports Program on campus every year. The program provides at-risk youngsters with a structured summer program which emphasizes sports, positive decision-making skills, and education. PSU does more than just provide the facilities—in keeping with its mission, university faculty consult with PAL in developing curriculum for the program and students are active participants in running the program. The collaboration doesn't just stop at the end of the summer. Throughout the year, PSU and PAL work together to involve these youngsters in positive programs and encourage them to work toward a college degree.

PSU has also tapped into emerging technologies to both strengthen the university and the community. One of the most innovative uses of technology is its PORTALS program, or the Portland Area Library System. PORTALS is a cooperative endeavor linking public and private institutions throughout the Portland area to an electronically accessible research library, with PSU as its hub. The States of Oregon and Washington both stand to benefit from the new resources available through this innovative project.

These programs are just the tip of the iceberg of the university's involvement. PSU runs teacher academies to help local teachers get in-service education. PSU students, who are all required to be involved in community projects, work at local community-based organizations such as community health centers, schools, and after-school programs.

It is thus no surprise that PSU has received a number of national awards for its innovative curriculum and for its work serving the metropolitan community and the State. Last year, the school received over $3 million from foundations and Federal agencies to support its cutting-edge undergraduate curriculum. For the same reason it is also has been recognized by the American Association of Higher Education, the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, and the Interstate Commission on Higher Education as a national model for innovative undergraduate education.

The 50th anniversary is a time to celebrate the achievements of the past and look forward to the innovations and adventures of the future. The faculty, staff, and students at Portland State University, past and present, deserve our congratulations on a remarkable history and our best wishes for future success. ●
