

Here we are at this moment on the floor of the Senate trying to resolve the issue of a Federal gas tax that pulls billions of dollars out of the pocket-book of the American taxpayer. We have seen a frustration expressed by working men and women in this country for the last several years that they just do not get ahead. They keep getting a salary increase, but nothing comes home, which does not translate into money in the back pocket or money to buy the new car or money to help finance their children's education or money to improve their lifestyle in some form.

In fact, out of all that frustration, and while our President talks about a strong economy, it is an economy that is just millions of jobs less strong than it ought to be for the very reason that the Senator from Missouri has so articulately spoken: the dragdown, if you will, of the ability of the American producers, working men and women, to retain that which they work so hard for and, therefore, to collect it, to put it in savings, if they will, to spend it for their own purposes, to provide for their children.

In other words, the American dream does not quite seem to be as clear as it used to be. I suggest, Mr. President, that one of the reasons is this kind of Government intrusion, if you will, double taxation. The legislation, the Working Americans Wage Restoration Act, introduced today by my colleague, JOHN ASHCROFT, that I have cosponsored along with others, in my opinion, begins to, once again, brighten the American dream.

It is part of what we are here on the floor debating today. Some of our colleagues argue that the way you solve the human crisis in this country, no matter how that crisis is defined, is to bring about a Government program. I suggest that most Americans in our country today can solve their own crises if they simply have the tools of solution. One of the great tools of solution for problem solving is the ability to retain your own earnings so you can spend it for yourself and your family to improve your lot in society or to correct a problem that has somehow gone wrong.

This legislation offers that opportunity, and I hope that it gets heard, gets debated. I relish an opportunity for the Senate to debate it and vote upon it.

Mr. President, as we will in the next little while decide whether this Senate is going to vote on a gas tax repeal or whether we are going to find some loophole, as the other side now struggles to do to argue that this is no good, is going to be a unique challenge for all of us.

Like you, I did not vote for this gas tax increase. I am a Westerner, and I recognize the kind of burden you place on somebody who must commute the long miles in the West, or the farmer or rancher who uses fuel as a tremendous tool of their production, and we lessen their ability to profit when we increase the cost of their tools, their tools of incomemaking, if you will.

That is part of what this debate is all about. But the idea that we would use a gas tax, which we have traditionally directed toward roads and bridges and improving the transportation of our country and, therefore, improving the ability of this economy to expand that my colleague from Missouri talks about—the business of growth in the economy should be the business of Government not getting in the way but staying out of the way and promoting that growth. The gas tax has been one that always has. It has promoted growth in the economy by the building of roads and bridges and allowing the kind of flow of labor that has been the hallmark of our society.

But this President, President Clinton, said, "I need that money to pay for social programs," even when in 1992, Candidate Clinton said, "I won't increase the gas tax. It's the wrong kind of thing to do. It does not allow the economy to grow and expand."

But of course, promises made, promises broken, tax increase, billions of dollars now pouring out of the economy of our country and into the hands of Government to be spent in social programs.

Is it a big part of the gas increase, the fuel costs that consumers are about today? No, it is not, but it is an important issue to be debated and voted upon to return not only the gas tax to its traditional use but to reduce the overall ability of Government to spend and to expand programs.

You are going to hear more talk today, as you have had for the last several days, that somehow this does damage to Government. I suggest you just cut the spending of Government in direct relation to the amount of revenue that will remain not as a tax but as an income to the consumer in the consumer's pocket.

Right now, every time that consumer pulls up to a gas pump, sticks the nozzle in the tank of their car, they see a tremendous outpouring from the pocketbook.

So, if we were to pass legislation of the kind just introduced by my colleague from Missouri, if we were to repeal the gas tax and allow that to remain in the pocket of the consumer, we would see the kind of growth and job creation in our economy that we have not seen, that cannot be talked about by this administration because of the taxes that have been pushed through stifling the overall ability of that economy to grow.

Growth, progrowth, work incentives, 500,000 new jobs possibly created by the legislation of the Senator from Missouri, that two-income family being able to retain more of their income, $1,000-plus a year—that is the type of thing this Congress ought to be talking about and doing something about instead of talking about, "Oh, my goodness, this takes away from our ability to spend. We might have to reduce this program or that program."

Mr. President, we just left tax freedom day. We just said to the American taxpayer, "Today is the day when you've paid your taxes, and you can start earning for yourself." Last week I stood on the floor of the Senate and said that the first 3 hours of every working day the taxpayer, or the worker, spent their time working for Government, both at the State and Federal level.

Somehow that must change if we are to get the kind of productivity in our economy, job creation and self-well-being to once again brighten the American dream instead of progressively dimming it, as Government can so successfully do if it constantly takes away from the individuals their ability to earn, save, invest, retain, provide for themselves and their families.

So I thank my colleague from Missouri for his insightfulness and innovativeness in proposing this legislation. I hope that in the coming year this becomes a major part of what this Congress is about and what this Senate is about in providing for the American people.

S. 1742. A bill to amend the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 to exempt minor parties from liability under the act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

THE SUPERFUND MINOR PARTY LIABILITY RELIEF ACT OF 1996

Mr. SPENCER. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation to expedite the cleanup of our Nation's toxic waste sites. My bill, the Superfund Minor Party Liability Relief Act, would exempt minor parties that contribute insignificant levels of waste to such sites from liability under the Superfund law. This will reduce the litigation brought by the primary polluters of toxic waste sites and reduce the current delays in cleaning up the sites.

Since the 1980 enactment of the Superfund law, 1,321 sites have been placed on the National Priorities List. I find it disturbing, however, that 16 years later only 83 sites have been cleaned up and removed from the list. I am also troubled by a recent report issued by the RAND Corp. which found that transaction costs for industrial firms and insurance companies, representing primarily legal fees, account for up to 88 percent of their total Superfund-related expenses.

Pennsylvania has 110 Superfund sites, many of which have been on the National Priorities List for years. The Congressional Budget Office estimates the average cleanup time for Superfund sites to be approximately 12 years. One such site, the Keystone Sanitation landfill, located in Adams County, PA, was added to the National Priorities

List July 22, 1987. The Environmental Protection Agency selected the remedy for cleaning up the site in 1990. The site, however, remains contaminated as a multitude of minor party defendants with little or no responsibility for the environmental contamination of the site are forced to litigate to protect their rights and the courts are tied up with endless motions and appeals.

I am concerned with the impact of such a delay on the adults and children who live and play in close proximity to the Keystone site. The site continues to be a source of ground water contamination, which, if left untreated, will continue to threaten the health and safety of local residents.

This legislation would reduce such delays in remediating toxic waste sites by forcing the primary parties responsible for the pollution to focus on restoring sites to a safe condition instead of using their resources to shift blame to the multitude of minor contributors of negligible amount of waste. My bill will reduce the waste of money and time by exempting minor parties from liability at the outset, when a site is selected for the National Priorities List. This should expedite the legal proceedings and encourage major polluters to work constructively with federal, state, and local governments on actual cleanup.

Specifically, this bill would exempt from liability those minor parties who have only contributed up to 110 gallons of liquid material or up to 200 pounds of solid material to a contaminated site. This exemption, however, would not apply to parties considered to have contributed significantly to a site's contamination. Thus, on Superfund sites containing tens of thousands of gallons of liquid contamination, or tons of solid hazardous waste, we would narrow the litigation field to only the significant parties. I am willing to examine whether or not these are the appropriate levels, but I am advised by some of the litigants involved in Pennsylvania Superfund cleanups that such relief will go a long way toward alleviating the undue burden they currently face.

It is unclear whether Congress will finally enact comprehensive Superfund reform legislation this year. Therefore, I urge my colleagues, many of whom represent communities with similar situations, to consider passing this important commonsense reform. There is a broad consensus among the American people that we ought to alleviate the unfair cost burden placed on small businesses and cash strapped municipalities by ensuring that the parties most responsible for the existence of toxic waste sites are the ones responsible for remediating the sites. I believe this bill will go a long way toward simplifying and expediting the Superfund cleanup process and I encourage my colleagues to support this legislation.
