

provide for their families and to save for the future.

It is not fair that Washington continues to take such a large share of the family's earnings, and at the same time continues to increase the deficit at the same time. The people of the Third District of North Carolina sent me to Washington to look out for their interests. That is why I feel so strongly about the need to balance the budget.

The balanced budget plan assumes a gross tax relief of $135 billion over 5 years, which can provide families with a child tax credit and relief from burdensome taxes such as the death tax and capital gains tax.

The plan also helps parents who want to send their children to college. It has been 16 years, it has been 16 years since the American people have had tax relief.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for the Congress to pass a balanced budget for the people of America.

EMPLOYMENT, TRAINING, AND LITERACY ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 1997

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 150 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 150

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 1385) to consolidate, coordinate, and improve employment, training, literacy, and vocational rehabilitation programs in the United States, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Education and the Workforce now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered by division rather than by section. Each division shall be considered as read. Points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute for failure to comply with clause 5(a) of rule XXI are waived. Before consideration of any other amendment it shall be in order to consider the amendment numbered 1 pursuant to clause 6 of rule XXIII, if offered by Representative McKeon or his designee. That amendment shall be considered as read, may amend portions of the bill not yet read for amendment, shall be debatable for ten minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. If that amendment is adopted, the bill, as amended, shall be considered as the original bill for the purpose of further amendment. During consideration of the bill for further amendment, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may accord priority in recognition on the basis of whether the Member offering an amendment has caused it to be printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 6 of rule XXIII. Amendments so printed shall be considered as read. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY). The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MCINNIS] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL] pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple resolution. The proposed rule is an open rule providing for 1 hour of general debate equally divided, controlled by the chairman and the ranking member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce. After general debate, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule. Furthermore it shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Education and the Workforce now printed in the bill.

Additionally, Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 150 provides that the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered by division rather than section. Moreover, points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute for failure to comply with clause 5(a) of rule XXI are waived.

Mr. Speaker, the rule also provides for consideration of a manager's amendment, if offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] or his designee, which shall be debatable for a period of 10 minutes. If this amendment is adopted, the amendment will be considered as part of the base text for further amendment purposes. Furthermore, this rule provides that the Chair may accord priority in recognition to Members who have preprinted their amendments in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. Speaker, at the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Finally, Mr. Speaker, the rule provides one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, under the proposed rule each Member has an opportunity to have their concerns addressed, debated and ultimately voted up or down by this body. House Resolution 150 was passed out of the Committee on Rules by voice vote. I urge my colleagues to support the open rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. HALL of Ohio asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MCINNIS] for yielding me the time. House Resolution 150 is an open rule. It will allow for full and fair debate on H.R. 1385, which is the Employment Training and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997.

This bill consolidates more than 60 existing employment training and literacy programs and establishes three block grants to States and localities. It is needed to improve Federal education and job training programs to meet more effectively the needs of States and local communities. These programs have provided valuable assistance to dislocated workers and disadvantaged adults and young people. The goal is to improve a system which has already demonstrated its importance to our Nation's work force.

As my colleague from Colorado described, this rule provides for 1 hour of general debate, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce. Under this rule, amendments will be allowed under the 5-minute rule, the normal amending process in the House. All Members will have the opportunity to offer amendments.

It is my understanding that, before the Committee on Rules met last night, an agreement between the majority and minority had been reached on the manager's amendment to drop certain provisions dealing with special demonstrations. Subsequently the rule was approved unanimously by the Committee on Rules on a voice vote.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of this open rule and the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 150 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 1385.

The Chair designates the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. NEY] to preside over the Committee of the Whole, and requests the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MCINNIS] to assume the chair temporarily.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1385) to consolidate, coordinate, and improve employment, training, literacy, and vocational rehabilitation programs in the United States, and for other purposes, with Mr. MCINNIS (Chairman pro tempore) in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING].

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Today, we are going to deal with legislation that is the culmination of 6, 7, 8 years of work, I would suppose, of a very dedicated staff and members of this committee as well as the Governors, State legislators, educators, local elected officials, State elected officials. It is a bipartisan effort to take what the General Accounting Office said are 160 job training programs from the Federal level, consolidate them into three block grants and get them back to State and local government so they can be much more effective.

As most Members know, only 25 percent of our population ever graduate with a 4-year degree. Hundreds of thousands of those, of that 25 percent, are either unemployed or underemployed. At the same time, we have spent very little time dealing with the 75 percent who do not receive a 4-year college degree and yet we had hundreds of thousands of high-technology jobs waiting for those who can be trained in order to take those jobs.

Unfortunately, there are those who mistakenly believe that this legislation increases the Federal role in the area of employment, training and literacy programs. There are those who say that this legislation is an intrusion into the American family. This could not be further from the truth. H.R. 1385 vastly reduces Federal involvement in these programs, transfers the vast majority of resources and authority to the States and local communities, and most importantly, sends authority and responsibility into the hands of actual individuals, giving people choices in the selection of occupation services and service providers so that they are empowered to succeed in today's society. So what happens if we do nothing today or if this bill gets bogged down in political debate?

I will tell my colleagues what happens. Most of these programs are permanently authorized and will continue to receive funding without any reform at all. Government control and bureaucracy will not be curtailed but will continue, and these programs will continue to be funded.

In fact, I just heard that the budget negotiators are now talking about adding $3 billion for employment and training assistance for welfare recipients. I sure hope that they are talking about that money going to this consolidated program, not something new from the Federal level.

So we cannot afford to lose this opportunity to reform the system so that States and local communities, and, most importantly, American citizens have the flexibility to develop employment, training and literacy programs that work.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the ability of our Nation to provide education and training opportunities to our people is more important now than ever before. Our success in the increasingly competitive global economy will largely depend upon the skills and productivity of our workers. Education and job training programs provide workers with the opportunity to learn and to improve their skills.

It is our duty to make certain that those programs are effective and efficient. Many have criticized our current training system for being too duplicative and too sparse. The legislation we consider today will improve the coordination of services, provide quality assistance and foster efficiency.

I am especially grateful that this agreement addresses the unique needs of dislocated workers as well as providing for meaningful local decisionmaking. As Members may remember, these issues were among the highest priorities advocated by Democrats during last year's deliberations on the careers bill. With respect to the adult education provisions of this bill, I believe that we have made solid progress. We have made sure that the program remains a part of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, that it will be administered by the State agency now in charge of adult education, that the program has a reasonable maintenance of effort standard, and that it will continue to serve a critically important role in the education of those who need its services.

I want to particularly compliment the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] for their leadership and for their sincere efforts to make this a bipartisan effort on this bill. I appreciate their willingness to seek resolution of our differences on this issue. I also want to commend my Democratic colleague, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, Training and Life-Long Learning, for picking up where his predecessor, Pat Williams, left off by ensuring that any compromise adequately protects Democratic concerns.

□ 0930

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], the ranking Democrat on the subcommittee, be given the authority to control the minority's time during general debate.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. MCINNIS). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], the subcommittee chairman, who worked long and hard on this issue.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I rise in strong support of H.R. 1385, the Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997.

This bill is an important step in addressing the Nation's long-term work force preparation needs by helping States and local communities to make sense out of our current confusing array of employment, training and literacy programs.

The bill accomplishes long overdue reform, consolidating over 60 Federal programs through the establishment of three block grants to States and local communities for the provision of such services and through amendments to the Rehabilitation Act.

It accomplishes key reforms in this country's job training system by building on the three principles of individual choice, quality training for the 21st century, and the transfer of resources and authority for employment, training and literacy programs to States and local communities.

For youth, we amend the JTPA's current disadvantaged youth programs, increasing the focus of such programs on longer term academic and occupational training rather than short-term employment fixes, requiring that all employment experiences under these programs be tied to academic and occupational learning opportunities and prioritizing services for hard-to-serve disadvantaged youth, including school dropouts.

For adults we establish a single delivery system for adult employment and training that maximizes individual choice in the selection of occupations and training providers. The bill encourages an employment-first approach to job training that will greatly compliment our efforts in welfare reform, where individuals purchase training services through their use of vouchers when in need of skilled training.

Not only will this legislation result in improved services to dislocated workers, but it will also result in enhanced services provided to welfare recipients who must make the transition from welfare to work.

Title V of the bill amends the current Adult Education Act, consolidating existing adult education and family literacy programs into flexible block grants to States. This portion of the bill includes important linkages to employment and training programs to ensure that individuals seeking employment and training services have the literacy skills they need in order to succeed.

With regard to vocational rehabilitation, the bill extends the authorization through the year 2000, allowing the 106th Congress to comprehensively review the Rehabilitation Act. It also streamlines the paperwork requirements of the title I vocational rehabilitation program, saving resources and increasing client choice.

This legislation will not only provide the flexibility that States and local communities need to vastly improve their employment and training efforts, but it will provide individuals that are in need of these services with the information, choice and resources that they need to become skilled and gainfully employed.

Unfortunately, there is a great deal of misunderstanding about this bill. This legislation is written to empower individuals, not the Federal Government, to make decisions about their own lives and their individual employment and training needs. The bill significantly reduces the involvement of the Federal Government in the design and operation of these programs.

Because Federal job training programs are permanently authorized, if we do nothing today, we will keep the status quo and programs will continue to be funded with no reform or reduction in Federal bureaucracy. In fact, it is likely that the budget will contain increased funding for employment and training for welfare recipients, another new program on top of many others.

We cannot afford to continue to operate in this fashion. We need the Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act that will allow local communities to make sense out of these programs. And if the budget does contain increased funding for services to welfare recipients, we must ensure that this system is fully utilized so that we do not add yet another program to our growing list of employment, training and literacy programs.

The skills of this Nation's work force are more important today than ever before. This legislation will go far to help States and local communities to reform employment, training and literacy programs that address the individual skill needs of their citizens, and it will go far to empower individuals to break the cycle of dependency that has plagued our country for far too long.

I want to take this opportunity to thank the Members of our committee for their contributions in the development of this legislation; in particular, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Chairman GOODLING, for his insight and leadership over the years on this issue. He has been working on this for many years, and I am proud to see that it is coming to fruition.

I also want to thank the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], who has worked so hard and worked closely with us to develop this legislation in a truly bipartisan fashion.

I would also like to thank the administration for working with us to make this effort one that is likely to be enacted this year.

Finally, I am pleased to announce that the National Governors' Association, the National Conference of State Legislatures, and the National Association of Counties have reached an important agreement with regard to this legislation that will be reflected in an en bloc package of amendments that I plan to offer later this morning.

And I would like to thank these organizations for all their efforts to help us in the development of this bill. In fact, all three of these organizations, in addition to the American Association of Community Colleges, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the Society for Human Resource Management, the Computing Technology Industry Association, and others have written in support of H.R. 1385.

This is a good bill that will help the country's workers gain the skills they need to succeed in today's work force. I urge my colleagues' support of this important legislation.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. KILDEE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to rise to support H.R. 1385, the Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997. We have been talking for several years now about the need to create an integrated employment and training system that meets the challenge of preparing American workers for the jobs of the future.

Last year our efforts collapsed in conference, I believe largely due to problems in the Senate. This year, however, the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], the subcommittee chairman, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the committee chairman, have approached this issue in a bipartisan manner, and I believe the bill before us today reflects the consensus approach they have taken to job training reform.

In particular, I certainly appreciate the fact that they have ensured that the Federal investment in dislocated workers is maintained. While it is important to streamline and integrate job training programs, it would have been short-sighted to have done so in a way that reduced our ability to provide services to workers in transition. The guarantee of a separate funding stream within the adult block grant in H.R. 1385 is a major improvement over last year's legislation.

I am also pleased to see the extent to which this bill builds upon what is already working in local communities.

The bill also strengthens accountability in the job training system. First, all job training providers will be accountable to customers through a requirement that they provide annual information that will serve as a consumer's report card that will help guide customers' choices about which institutions have the best record of helping to acquire the skills necessary to get jobs.

In addition, States and local areas will have to reach negotiated performance benchmarks that will serve to ensure that they are accountable for results. The accountability provisions are considerably stronger than last year's conference report, and I am particularly supportive of new safeguards which will ensure adults are not defrauded by unscrupulous or fly-by-night training providers.

The bill consolidates programs for at-risk economically disadvantaged youth, integrating classroom and work-based learning, providing learning opportunities at work sites, linking secondary learning and postsecondary learning, and fully involving the private sector.

The reintroduction of a substate formula for a portion of the funds in both adult and youth block grants will also be an important safeguard to ensure that local areas continue to get the resources to meet the needs of their population. I applaud the State and Local Coalition for reaching agreement to reinsert substate formulas as reflected in the Chairman's en bloc amendment.

I think there are some areas in this bill which could still use improvement, and I hope that as we move in the Senate and then in the conference the spirit of bipartisan cooperation will continue to prevail.

With respect to the Adult Education and Family Literacy Act provisions in this legislation, I am very pleased with what we have been able to accomplish and am especially gratified that we did our work in a spirit of true bipartisanship. In that regard, I want to pay special thanks again to both the chairman of the Committee on Education and the Workforce, my good friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], who has long been a champion of adult education and family literacy, and to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], who has been very willing to work out differences in a very amicable fashion.

This legislation keeps adult education as a part of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. I believe this is critical in making it very clear that adult education is first and foremost an education program.

There are other adult education provisions of this legislation that are also important; provisions such as the separate such sums authorization, continued funding for professional development, a more reasonable maintenance of effort standard, and the possibility of ongoing support for State literacy resource centers.

There are several areas, however, where it might be helpful to have greater clarity regarding legislative intent. First, I view the provisions regarding the eligible agency in charge of adult education programs to be the State agency currently in charge of those programs, and that the reference to State law means State statutory law that cannot be overridden by a Governor's executive order.

Second, the accountability provisions in this legislation certainly do not preclude the Secretary of Education from judging State plans on both quality and technical specifications. Quite to the contrary, I believe the Secretary has the clear authority to make such a judgment.

Third, English literacy programs most definitely include English as a second language instruction.

Fourth, when we go to conference, I believe we should fashion an agreement that will end the confusion of having to consult two different acts to obtain a full knowledge and understanding of the Federal adult education legislation. It is important that those at the State and local level be able to look at one act and get a full and complete understanding of Federal law in this area.

While not every provision I wanted has found its way into this legislation, I am on the whole very pleased with the adult education provisions we have been able to work out. I believe they will move adult education forward and they will contribute immensely to both strengthening and expanding the very crucial work done by adult education programs in community after community across this land.

I am also pleased to support the amendments to the Vocational Rehabilitation Act contained in H.R. 1385. Those amendments go a long way in streamlining and clarifying certain provisions of that act. Specifically, the revised individualized plan for employment will provide a greater opportunity for disabled persons to develop their own employment plans. The role and participation of program consumers in the individualized plan for employment will be strengthened as a result.

Under current law, the individual's plan is jointly developed and approved by the eligible individual and the vocational rehabilitation counselor. Under this bill, an eligible individual would be allowed the option to assume primary responsibility in the development and direction of that employment plan.

The bill also simplifies and clarifies existing requirements and eliminates burdensome process requirements without compromising consumer protections in order to streamline the process.

Mr. Chairman, the bill under consideration also provides for a greater consumer involvement based upon informed choice options. State agencies would be required to develop written policies and procedures related to informed choice, including procedures for informing individuals about the availability and scope of informed choice, and for assisting individuals to acquire information necessary to exercise that choice.

□ 0945

Finally, Mr. Chairman, H.R. 1385 requires that Federal agencies provide certification of compliance with electronic and information technology accessibility guidelines under section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act. In other words, Mr. Chairman, this bill ensures that the Federal Government monitors its own requirements to assist disabled persons with respect to the accessibility of electronic and information technology.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to support H.R. 1385 and am very grateful to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] for their very, very hard work, their very, very close cooperation and their willingness to compromise. We both compromised on this. Neither side is totally pleased, but this is, I think, a piece of work that we can support.

Mr. Chairman, there has been some concern expressed that this bill will set up a parallel apprenticeship and training certification procedure in competition with the process administered by the Department of Labor's Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training and State apprenticeship agencies approved by the BAT. I am satisfied, however, that designation by Local Workforce Boards, in consultation with the State's Governor and legislature, of training programs eligible to receive funds under this bill is not intended to certify such programs for Federal purposes in the same manner as certification by the BAT and State apprenticeship agencies, and should not be regarded as such. Moreover, I am aware of concern that funds authorized by this bill will be used to provide financial assistance to apprenticeship training programs in industries, such as construction, that have been traditionally financed exclusively by private funds. I am confident that the outstanding training currently provided in these areas will continue to be financed by the private sector so that the limited financial resources authorized by this bill can be earmarked for training in these areas that have been neglected or, for some other reason, must rely on Federal financial assistance. I intended to work with Members of the Senate to clarify further this policy in the final bill.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], a member of the committee.

(Mrs. ROUKEMA asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I want to express my deep appreciation to the chairman of the full committee, the chairman of the subcommittee and certainly the ranking members who have worked so hard on this bipartisan effort so that both sides of the aisle have reached consensus, and I think we should be proud of that. This is a good bill, and I support it.

Certainly following on the heels of last year's efforts, we should look forward to great advancement. This is a great advancement and improvement over current law. It not only consolidates the programs of adult training, disadvantaged youth training and adult education, and literacy, but it also fortunately adopted the right course of action by removing the vocational education part from this legislation to ensure that voc ed would not be lost in the overall job training block grant. I think that was a success.

I would like to commend the committee for recognizing the importance of the supportive services, transportation and child care assistance. We incorporated that into this bill and that provision had its beginning in legislation that I, along with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH], the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER], and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WATT], had sponsored. We deeply appreciate the fact that that kind of training assistance has been incorporated in this bill. It will help hundreds of thousands of people take advantage of training possibilities.

Mr. Chairman, I think my colleagues know my strong support over time of the block grant approach and I must say that I continue to support block grants. But in this legislation I think we have struck the proper balance and given the appropriate safeguards to get the best advantage out of how States and the Federal Government work together in these training programs. The legislation I think has found the proper balancing point between State and local governments, and we will all have the advantage of this relationship.

I want to point out in specific terms that it is organizations like the ARC's in my district of Bergen and Passaic Counties and Warren and Sussex Counties that have the experience with servicing individuals with disabilities and have earned the respect of everyone. It is these kinds of community organizations that will work with the business community under this legislation to provide the job opportunities and the training that is necessary. I think it is very practical. It uses the strengths of all the private sector as well as the public sector, and we are in great debt to the organizations such as these that ensure that these individuals with disabilities will receive the best possible assistance and training.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of this legislation. As a member of the Subcommittee on Post-Secondary, Training and Lifelong Learning, I am proud of the bipartisan effort that has brought Members on both sides of the aisle to consensus. We have here before us clear evidence that bipartisanship works and that Congress works when we are bipartisan.

Following on the heels of last year's failed attempt at reform, this bill represents a significant improvement over current law. It consolidates programs of adult training, disadvantaged youth training and adult education, and literacy. I would add that the committee adopted the right course by removing vocational education from this legislation to ensure that it would not be lost in the overall job training block grant.

In addition, I would like to commend the committee for recognizing the importance of supportive services, such as transportation and child care assistance, which will enable individuals to participate in the adult training services. This began as legislation introduced by myself and Representatives LAMAR SMITH of Texas, TIM ROEMER of Indiana, and MEL WATT of North Carolina. Our legislation was introduced to make it possible for adults who want to learn to read and receive training to follow that path. About 300,000 individuals who enroll in adult education programs have to withdraw because of the lack of support services. Access to transportation and child care makes it possible for those who want to make their lives better to take advantage of the adult education programs. We are pleased that our legislation was able to become a part of this bill before us today.

Mr. Chairman, as many of my colleagues know, I have been a longtime supporter of the block grant approach. However, I continue to insist that all block grants to the States come with effective and appropriate safeguards. Therefore, I am pleased that this legislation continues to require the States to work with the appropriate Secretary in determining these goals and benchmarks, while allowing the State to specify standards and indicators to focus on employment outcomes. The legislation also highlights certain core indicators, including placement in unsubsidized employment, retention in employment, increase in earnings, attainment of industry-recognized skills, reduction in welfare dependency and attainment of high school diploma or general equivalency diploma.

In addition, States are responsible for developing a State plan which would be submitted, reviewed, and approved by the Secretary for review.

This legislation also has found the proper balancing point between State and local governments. The States will be responsible for working on performance indicators, while the local work force development board will be responsible for the day-to-day oversight of job training and placement.

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to commend the committee on including the concerns of the disabled community in the composition of the work force development boards. Community-rehabilitation providers which serve individuals with disabilities have earned the respect of their local communities and the public sector.

In New Jersey, the ARC's of Bergen and Passaic Counties, and Warren County and Sussex County have all had experience with serving individuals with disabilities and have earned the respect of northern New Jersey. Their involvement with the business sector has provided the community-rehabilitation providers with a comprehensive knowledge of the job opportunities available to and training services needed by individuals with disabilities.

Organization such as these will ensure that individuals with disabilities will receive proper career development information which will maximize the board's ability to assist individuals with disabilities in gaining successful employment. Such a goal is an important part of the goals of this legislation.

And, Mr. Chairman, let take this opportunity to thank Mr. James Seath, executive director of the ARC of Bergen and Passaic Counties and Mr. Bob Pruznick, the executive director of Warren County ARC for their advice and counsel.

Mr. Chairman, I support this bipartisan legislation. It represents solid progress toward increasing job training and placement as our Nation faces the education and work place challenges of the new millennium.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I would also like to thank the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] for all her work on the committee. She is indeed a great Member of Congress and has been very helpful on this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WOOLSEY].

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, first of all I want to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] for their leadership on this bill. It is a good bill and it is truly a bipartisan effort, and it reflects also the good working relationship of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the chairman, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY]. I thank them so much for letting us have something this positive to be talking about today. That is why it is such a good bill.

I am particularly pleased that my amendments concerning training for nontraditional occupations and studies on self-sufficiency standards were included in the bill. The requirements of the new welfare law make it more important than ever that women have a full range of job choices. This bill will make it easier for women to train for those high-wage jobs that actually pay a livable wage.

H.R. 1385 will also help to ensure that job training programs that receive taxpayers' funds do in fact train workers for jobs that pay a livable wage, a job they can afford to live on. The bill does this by allowing the Secretary of Education to conduct research to develop self-sufficiency standards.

A self-sufficiency standard measures local basic living costs, such as housing, transportation and child care. These costs determine whether a worker after training will earn enough in salary and benefits to make herself and her family truly self-sufficient, able to live independently off of public assistance. This is important, because it is a waste of taxpayers' funds to train workers for jobs that do not enable them to support themselves and their families and to keep them independent of assistance.

I am also pleased that this bill that we are considering today includes the amendments offered in committee by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BOB SCHAFFER] and myself to ensure that State legislators have a role in implementing job training funds as part of State-wide planning for their education and welfare programs.

Mr. Chairman, this is a good bill. It makes needed reforms to our system of job training programs, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] and I ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to control that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT], a member of the committee.

Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I congratulate him for his efforts in bringing the bill to this point, along with the assistance of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], his ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the committee chair, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], the ranking member of the full committee.

Mr. Chairman, I do rise in strong support of H.R. 1385. As has been suggested, the bill already eliminates nearly 70 programs, directs more money to States and local communities, and it does enable individuals to make an informed decision on what types of job training they need.

The bill also includes my amendment that would make a change in current law that will have a positive effect on our disabled youth who are preparing to leave school and move into the State vocational rehabilitation system.

The Nebraska Vocational Rehabilitation Services agency operates a transition program that can allow the agency to participate in a disabled child's individualized education plan once that child reaches the age of 14. This participation has been welcomed by schools and parents as it does help them to understand the types of vocational rehabilitation services that may be available once the child leaves high school. The transition program is helping 2,000 children to prepare to enter the State's vocational rehabilitation system.

Yet, current Federal requirements are burdensome because State vocational rehabilitation agencies must have an individualized written rehabilitation plan, should the State make contact with an individual who may need their services. In the context of transition services for children, this requirement is unnecessary as the child's special education planning, which is mandated by IDEA, already takes into account the child's educational needs. My amendment merely removes the written requirement for children who are being served through an individualized educational plan.

I do encourage my colleagues to support H.R. 1385.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I found very interesting the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], a true gentleman, and when it comes to education programs in Congress, we have probably seen more real spirit of working together than anywhere else.

I want to compliment the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY]. I think they have tried to help the American people and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] now joining forces with that, I want to compliment the gentlemen, and I thank them from an area that lost an awful lot of jobs.

With that, this bill combines three major programs. It is smart, it is intelligent what the gentlemen have done, but in order for me to effect my Buy American language, I have to offer three Buy American amendments to three different spots, and after all that I am not sure it is going to apply to every dollar in the bill so I want to make sure the legislative history in debate understands that after this is offered en bloc and hopefully accepted that all of the money in this act will be covered by the basic language that is exactly similar in all three amendments.

I would like to talk just for a minute about some developments that have occurred in our country in the loss of jobs. We are retraining workers and we are trying to do our best with dislocated workers. It is very important in my district. But I am actually trying to find out what jobs we are retraining them for. I think we are getting to the point where we have trained a lot of welders, a lot of burger flippers, but the occupational classifications of new jobs listed by the Department of Labor scares me I say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY]. As the chairman and ranking member, I want to just let the gentlemen hear a few: Belly builder; plate stacker; streetlight repairer helper; diaper machine tender; dog washer; dog food mixer; earmuff assembler; brassiere cup molder cutter; sweatband shaper; ball point pen cartridge tester; feather stitcher; ribbon winder; puzzle assembler; dope mixer. I really want to know what that is. Bosom presser; sanitary napkin folder; pantyhose crotch closer.

Let me say this. There is dignity in all work and I do not want to malign anybody's occupation, but when our Department of Labor has to try and make it look like there are jobs in this country by actually dotting every "I", crossing every "T" and trying to imagine every little simple task that might be covered under basic laboring types of provisions, then we have other things to do than to just retrain.

I am asking today from one of the best committees I have seen operate since I have been here, to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], to put their minds together and pull upon the resources of Congress and see what we can do to enhance reasonable job opportunities for those dislocated workers. My amendment will cover all the provisions and I want it to be understood it will cover all the money in the bill. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PETERSON], a new member of the committee who has been very active in working on this bill.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I too would like to rise to congratulate the chairmen of this committee and the subcommittee and the ranking members of the committee and the subcommittee because this is how it should be done. Those of my colleagues who think this bill will pass rather easily today without much trouble, that is true. But there has been a whole lot of hard work, a whole lot of compromise, a whole lot of commitment to getting to home plate and scoring the run. I congratulate those. I think a lot of other committees in this Congress could watch and observe and do better.

America will be challenged in my view in the years ahead to provide the workers with the opportunities to receive the technical education they need to meet tomorrow's jobs. As I view factories, and I try to tour at least one or two a week in my district, they are changing. If we are going to remain a strong manufacturing nation, and I think we must, I agree with the gentleman from Ohio, if we do not maintain manufacturing in this country, we will be a second-rate nation.

We have to have workers with a whole lot more skills than were needed just a few years ago. Today we are taking a step, not all the steps we need to take, but we are taking a major step. When we combine 60 programs into 3 block grants and allow the local folks, the States and the local community groups, to decide what is needed and how to do it, we will be much more successful.

Historically, as a State legislator and a State senator, I so often tried to help people fit into those Federal categories and get the training they needed, and so often we failed because even though there were 60-some programs, the Federal Government cannot design enough slots and enough types of programs to meet the needs that are out there, and we failed at it. Many people were trained for jobs that are not available, people were given skills that no longer are valuable, and that will have a chance to cease with this program.

Mr. Chairman, I want to also thank the gentleman for allowing my amendment which will allow incumbent workers to be trained, and I think that is important. So often we have skill centers sitting idle on weekends and nights, and they were not able to use them because of all the Federal hoops they had to jump through, and those should be on a fee-for-service basis, allowed to train local people, and the investments we made need to be utilized to train everybody we can train. And I just think this is a bill moving in the right direction, and I commend those who made it happen.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. ESHOO] who played a very crucial and essential role in perfecting section 508.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 1385 and the en bloc amendment.

In particular, I would like to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], and certainly the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] for accepting the language I offered to strengthen section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act. I would also like to thank the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TIERNEY] for his willingness to actively support this provision in full committee.

There are approximately 145,000 Federal employees with disabilities, and they comprise 7½ percent of the Federal work force. Most work in the Departments of Defense, Veterans' Affairs, and Agriculture.

Information technology has played a large role in opening up jobs in the Federal Government and elsewhere to people with disabilities. An estimated 43 percent of employed people who are blind or visually impaired use computers to write. However, information technology can also shut the door to people with disabilities if it is not accessible to them.

So it is imperative for Federal employees with disabilities to have Federal agencies purchase information technology that gives them a chance to do their jobs well. Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act was designed to achieve this goal, but it was not working as it should have because it did not have teeth in it and terms of enforcement. It now does.

The en bloc amendment establishes a way to enforce agency compliance. It will require the OMB to develop uniform procedures for Federal agencies to use each year to certify whether or not they are in compliance with section 508, and the OMB also is given authority to review agency compliance statements and assist the agencies in making their information technology systems accessible to their employees with disabilities.

I urge my colleagues to support certainly this bill. I congratulate the leadership and all the members of the committee for the outstanding work that they have done. I certainly support H.R. 1385, and I am very proud to have this language included. I really think it is going to make a difference for the people that we employ, and the message will go out to the country that we, too, the Federal Government, are an enlightened employer in this country.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. HILL].

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] and the staff for their hard work on the vocational rehabilitation programs that are part of this bill. I also want to thank the gentleman for accepting my suggestions as part of his en bloc amendment to promote self-employment and small business ownership for people with disabilities.

Since 1998 the Rural Institute on Disabilities at the University of Montana has conducted research and development self-employment models for promoting self-employment for people with disabilities. I have been working with the University of Montana on these amendments, and I am pleased that they have been accepted.

Self-employment is part of the American dream. People are drawn to the notion of working for themselves in a way that they are not attracted to working for someone else. Americans think of self-employment as a way to control their own futures and to make work more fulfilling.

Although self-employment is part of the American dream, it is often overlooked as part of the vocational rehabilitation system, which typically focuses on placing people as employees, and while it is not appropriate for all people with disabilities, self-employment is a vital option for many.

For example, from 1988 through 1992 vocational rehabilitation has placed 5,000 people with disabilities in self-employment, which represents only 2.7 percent of those placements, and while 5,000 is a large number, the 1990 census stated that over 12 percent of working age people with disabilities are self-employed.

My amendment legitimize the use of self-employment for vocational rehabilitation and provides one more way for people with disabilities to become self-sufficient, and I urge the adoption of Mr. MCKEON's en bloc amendment.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER], a former and much missed member of this committee.

(Mr. SAWYER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] for the opportunity to rejoin in this discussion today. I particularly want to thank him and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] for the quality of work. It is an example of the kind of thing that can be accomplished when we work together, and I would like to thank and commend all of my colleagues from the Committee on Education and the Workforce for their real teamwork on this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, for several years we have known that our job training delivery system is sometimes duplicative, often confusing, and far too often ineffective. Programs are training people for jobs that sometimes no longer exist, and potential workers have to navigate a maze of different service delivery systems in order to get training. For our industries to succeed, our workers must be highly productive. They need the education and training necessary to keep them in tune with technological advances and innovations in real time.

In the last Congress, the committee began with common goals to consolidate programs, to increase flexibility, and to improve the delivery of services. In the last Congress it was known as the Careers Act. I was a member of the conference committee for that legislation. It seemed to be moving in the direction that Members on both sides of the aisle could support, but it also had some fairly basic flaws that were never resolved, and over time changes moved the Careers Act even further away from its original concept.

This legislation, H.R. 1385, is different. In fact, it incorporates almost every one of the concerns that were raised by Democrats in the last Congress. It also gives States and localities the flexibility to provide adults and youth with the literacy services or training necessary for the jobs that exist in their communities.

I support this bill, but I have to admit that I am a little bit saddened that it would repeal legislation that I offered which created important pieces of literacy and adult education infrastructure. The National Literacy Act of 1991, which was supported by both the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. GOODLING] and myself, was signed into law by former President Bush. But laws evolve as the economy evolves, and we need to understand that if we are going to be effective in delivery, that those structures need to evolve with them and to improve.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that many of the important elements, including the National Institute for Literacy, will remain in existence under the auspices of the Adult Education Act. I am also pleased that this legislation allows States to maintain their commitment to professional development for adult education and to the State and regional literacy networks.

The Ohio Literacy Resource Center in my district and others like it throughout the country have facilitated an exchange of information on literacy programs that is unprecedented. Their work allows church literacy programs on one coast to use materials and teaching materials that were developed on the other and everywhere in between. This maximizes scarce resources in fighting the problems of illiteracy.

I commend the committee for its work and all of its leaders in helping to guide it in achieving consensus on a broad and complicated area of policy, and I urge my colleagues to support this bill and to help ensure that scarce resources are being used in the most effective way to educate and train America's work force.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH], who has been helpful in making the bill better.

(Mr. SMITH of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, Training and Life-Long Learning, the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], for yielding.

I rise today in support of H.R. 1385, the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997. I first would like to commend the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Education and the Workforce, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, Training and Life-Long Learning, the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], for their diligent work in bringing this important legislation to the floor and for their willingness to work with Members to address our concerns.

Special thanks also goes to subcommittee members, the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER], and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WATT], an original cosponsor of the legislation I introduced.

Increasing educational opportunities for millions of Americans is a shared goal. But many Americans' opportunities are limited by illiteracy. In fact, there are 46 million illiterate adults in our country. Only 9 percent of these adults are being served by programs provided by the current Adult Education Act.

This bill rightly addresses the problems of adult illiteracy. It allows States more flexibility to tackle the problem of adult illiteracy by funding support services such as transportation and child care. I thank the committee for including my legislative ideas that allow States for the first time ever to use a part of their funding to provide support services to participants in adult education classes.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TIERNEY].

(Mr. TIERNEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak in favor of this legislation, the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act.

I want to also give my appreciation to the chairmen of the full committee and the subcommittee as well as the ranking member. It was, in fact, a notable example of people in this Chamber working together toward a common goal, which was, in fact, a goal that we all spoke about over the last campaign and have carried through for the first 3 or 4 months of this particular session. We have done this on the IDEA legislation, and we have now done it on this particular piece of legislation, and I applaud both the Democrats and Republicans on the committee.

I recently have had the opportunity in my district to have a round table strictly on the issue of literacy, adult basic education. From that round table, I heard from all of the folks within the Sixth District of Massachusetts who are intricately involved in adult basic education on a daily basis. They were able to speak to many of the issues that we, in fact, dealt with in this particular piece of legislation; and, by and large, this bill manages to positively address almost all of the concerns which they made known to us.

As surprising as it seems to people when I talk throughout the district, even the relatively affluent State of Massachusetts has 20 percent of its population that are adults that are functionally illiterate, and a million people have yet to get a high school equivalency in that State.

There are 15,000 people in Massachusetts awaiting the opportunity to have adult basic education literacy and numeracy skills worked with them. This is something that we have to provide for. It is a disgrace, frankly, that our system has not been able to step up to the plate and acknowledge and deal with this situation.

I think with this act and some of the changes that have been made in it, we are going to be able to extend these programs and revise them so that they are, in fact, more effective. We are providing more resources so that those people will have the skill and ability to teach people and work with people and bring their levels up to what is needed to be able to get a job and to be able to, in fact, read to their children and grandchildren so that we will not have to repeat this cycle well on into the future.

I also want to make note of the fact that the job training program allows for a good deal of local participation.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the former Governor, the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. CASTLE].

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. McKEON] for yielding. But more than that, I thank the gentleman for his tremendous work on a very difficult piece of legislation. He and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] have done an outstanding job.

I do rise in support of H.R. 1385. I have heard some of the speeches here, and I will not try to reiterate what has already been said. But this really is a good-faith bipartisan effort, in my judgment, to simplify and improve Federal employment training by consolidating and eliminating over 60 existing programs. It was needed, sorely needed. I think it took a tremendous effort to do it, and I congratulate everybody.

I do want to mention a couple areas that are of particular interest and concern to me in this bill. First of all, I worked to ensure that eligible activities under section 402 include single-purpose grants for training and technical assistance for housing and related facilities for migrant, seasonal farmworkers.

In Delaware this fund uniquely enables the National Council on Agricultural Life and Labor Research and other locally based nonprofits to provide technical assistance that improves housing conditions and develops new housing in their agricultural community.

I also supported changing the bill in committee to ensure that groups like Goodwill and Kent Sussex Industries, two community rehabilitation providers in Delaware, are included in the redesign process and are included on the regional work force development boards.

Of particular concern to me is language that the committee adopted that would effectively preempt State law to give State legislatures unprecedented and sweeping authority over how Federal work force block grant funds are spent. The provision specifically requires that these Federal funds be subject to the State laws and procedures that apply to State funds. Delaware does not make specific authorizations for Federal funds now, and the JTPA and Private Industry Council continue to work very well, and have worked well in the past, including under my past administrations.

Now, under this legislation, the law would be changed to require that all moneys be passed through the legislature, and I am very concerned that funding decisions will become mired in politics. There will be no assurance that objective criteria will be used in selecting training providers, and the efficiency and effectiveness of the funding system could be seriously compromised.

The current system is more productive and provide Governors much-needed flexibility. There is no benefit to the Federal Government mandating that all States administer JTPA in exactly the same way, when we in Delaware have proven that a small State can make a big difference when given the power to choose our own way.

I understand this issue will try to be worked out to the satisfaction of all sides involved, and it is something I will be working on as well as we move to conference. Otherwise, this bill is a giant step forward to help train our workers in a comprehensive way so that we can continue to remain competitive in an increasingly globally competitive environment.

I congratulate the sponsors and ask everyone to support this legislation.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], who does such an excellent job and I thank the subcommittee chair for his leadership as well.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 1385. This bill is a good step in coordinating our Federal, State, and local employment and training programs. It provides incentive grants to States that demonstrate continuing progress in coordination and integration of these programs. This bipartisan bill builds an integrated work force development system. However, I do not think the bill goes far enough, and I would presume that some of its enthusiastic supporters perhaps feel the same. It does not go far enough in my opinion in terms of requiring the Federal Government to coordinate other service programs with these employment and training programs.

Mr. Chairman, I rise because I have introduced a bill, and I want to talk to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the gentleman from California [Mr. McKEON], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], and others, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], about it, called the Family Services Improvement Act, H.R. 1480. It takes this bill I think a necessary step further to encourage agencywide coordination at the Federal level.

I would like to voice my strong support for the full service centers that this bill seeks to implement.

The Department of Labor currently funds 287 one-stop career centers in 24 States. In my district there are five one-stop service centers. These centers allow Americans to have easy access to reliable, up-to-date information on job searches and provides workers with ready access to training-related and supported services. It requires the implementation of full service, one-stop employment and training delivery centers, an excellent step.

I am pleased to see the Committee on Education and the Workforce come to a compromise on this bill. I support it. Its implementation of one-stop employment and training delivery centers will be a giant step forward, as the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. CASTLE] said.

Coordination of these job training programs which this bill requires will lead to a more effective and efficient use of our Federal dollars.

But let me suggest to the leaders, particularly the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], of this critically important committee, that we can do more in terms of coordinating services. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACKSON] talks about a mom going to a centrally located school, with her small child, and they go together. The child goes for education, whether it is pre-K, kindergarten, first, second, or whatever grade, and mom goes to get the job training services and information, GED, whatever she needs; and together, the Federal programs are coordinated at a single site accessible by the user for the purposes of giving that family full service support.

So my colleagues can see, it is no criticism to say this bill does not go as far as I would like to see it. It clearly takes a critically important step forward in the coordination of services, but I think we can do more, and I look forward to working with the leaders that I have mentioned, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], and others on the committee, because I think we have a context in which we can make a dramatic step forward in the coordination of services at the Federal, State, and local levels.

Mr. Chairman, this is an important subject and I appreciate the ability to talk on it, and to support this very significant step.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER], along with his two sons, Matthew and Patrick.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished gentleman from Michigan, and I am not sure that I will yield time to my two sons.

I want to start off by saluting and commending and applauding the bipartisanship shown by the chairman and ranking members on both the Democratic and Republican side, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY]. This is the kind of cooperation and these are the kinds of bills that the people of Indiana, and I think in the Midwest and hopefully throughout the country, want us to work on.

I want to further say that this is the third bipartisan bill that our committee has reported out in a productive and civil fashion to do the people's work. We have worked on the IDEA legislation for the disabled community, we have worked on a higher education commission, and we are now working together on this important legislation for worker training and literacy. I think that this is some of the most important work that we have done in this Congress.

Mr. Chairman, I want to talk in terms of bipartisanship about some legislation that we have put in this bill in a bipartisan way. Several weeks ago the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH], a Republican, and the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WATT], a Democrat, and myself joined together to put a support services bill together that will enhance the way that these programs deliver services in a more effective way with a heart, but they deliver the service and get the literacy programs to the people that need it. Forty-six million people in America lack basic literacy skills. Only 9 percent of those 46 million Americans are currently getting job training skills and literacy program exposure.

One of the things that we attached to this bill in a bipartisan way was to allow these programs to have support services and spend money on child care and transportation to get to the adult services programs and literacy programs at night. When we put these components in, we have found that participation in these programs often-times goes from 10 members to 40 members in these nighttime programs, where the people are sometimes single and have children. They need child care, they need transportation at night to get the literacy skills, to enhance their skills at work in the daytime.

The gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] have worked on even making our legislation better, incorporating into this bill the kinds of caring components with transportation and child care that we have found that will help transform our welfare system. We found in welfare in the debate last year that welfare only works when we allow people to get care for their children. We do not want to have to have them pick between work and leaving children home alone.

This bill incorporates those things into making adult literacy programs more available for all people, and that saves us money in the long term, and productivity and enhancing our programs, delivery of efficient services, and helping people learn to read.

Again, I want to end on saying I am proud to be a member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce. It shows the American people that we work together in a bipartisan way to deliver good bills for the American people, and I hope this bill will become law.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PAUL], another new member of the committee.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

After 30 years of Federal Government involvement and two major legislative overhauls, there are now over 160 Federal programs dedicated to job training. The Federal Government has spent approximately $4.5 billion just on the Job Training and Partnership Act of 1997. However, the U.S. Congress cannot measure whether or not they are getting a good return on their investment since both Federal agencies do not even know if their programs are helping people find jobs.

The very idea that a government board can somehow determine what occupations will be in demand at any point in the future is an example of what Nobel Laureate Friedrich Hayek calls The Fatal Conceit. No central board, even one dominated by local officials and businessmen, can predict which jobs will be in demand in 5, 10, or 15 years. It is doubtful that a local work force board in Silicon Valley in 1978 would have tried to link job training services to personal computer markets. In fact, it is highly unlikely that Steve Jobs will be appointed to the work force development board. The very fact that the boards are compiled of already established leaders for business practically ensures that the entrepreneurs creating the jobs of the future will not be represented on the board.

In this high-technology information age where financial and, more importantly, intellectual capital can travel around the world in a matter of seconds, the jobs in demand in any area can change faster than any geographical local work force board could conceivably update the skills with which to link job training.

The private actions of individual citizens working together in a free market can best build a job training system that meets the needs of its citizens. Private individuals, local communities, and State governments are also more capable than the Federal Government of providing adequate help to those unable to provide training for themselves.

If the Federal Government returns to constitutional size and reduces the tax and regulatory burden on the American citizen, Federal job training programs of any sort furthers the destructive idea that the proper role of the Federal Government is to provide for all the needs of the citizens. The belief that Congress has a moral duty to administer to the health and welfare of the populace, both of America and the world, is directly responsible for the growth of the welfare state, which threatens to destroy America's economic prosperity and liberty itself.

I am strongly opposed to this legislation, and believe freedom and free choices and the marketplace and the Constitution is a much better approach.

I. INTRODUCTION

Congress is once again attempting to repair the broken system of Federal job training. The major Federal role in job training dates back to 1962, with President Kennedy's Manpower Development and Training Act [MDA] and continuing through the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, passed as part of President Johnson's Great Society Consistent with the Great Society philosophy that the Federal Government had the solution to all problems, these bills centralized job training authority in Washington.

Soon, however, concerns arose that Federal job training programs were rife with waste and abuse. Congress, therefore, began trying to repair some of the inefficiencies in the job-training program. First, in 1973, Congress, with the support of the Nixon administration, passed the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act [CETA]. CETA was designed to decentralize Federal job training programs. Congress next addressed job training in 1982, with the passage of the Job Training and Partnership Act [JTPA], which promised to turn Federal job-training into a public-private partnership that would operate more efficiently than the three major job-training bills that had previously passed the Congress and failed to accomplish their stated goals.

After 30 years of Federal involvement and two major legislative overhauls, there are now over 160 Federal programs dedicated to job training. The Federal Government spent approximately $4.5 billion to just JTPA in 1997. However, the U.S. Congress cannot measure whether or not they are getting a good return on their investment since most Federal agencies do not even know if their programs are helping people find jobs.

Congress is once again attempting to repair the Federal job training systems. However, despite the abundant evidence of the failure of the centralized welfare state model of job-training programs, this Congress is planning to continue dictating to all 50 states the composition, content, function, and even the goals and benchmarks of job training programs. The Employment Training and Literacy Act of 1997, [H.R. 1385], tampers with the constitutional principle of federalism. H.R. 1385 redefines the very notion of federalism to mean that States, localities, and individual citizens are given limited flexibility and control over how they fulfill the Federal Government's mandates.

II. H.R. 1385 INTERFERES WITH STATE'S AUTONOMY AND FORCES TAXPAYERS TO SUBSIDIZE BENEFITS FOR SELECT BUSINESSES AND EMPLOYEES IN VIOLATION OF THE U.S. CONSTITUTION

Unlike the mandate federalism embodied in H.R. 1385, the federalism embodied in the U.S. Constitution allows for no Federal role in job training, or education generally. In fact, the tenth amendment, which reserves the authority for carrying out functions not explicitly granted to the Federal Government, to the States and the people, forbids Federal education programs. Yet, as demonstrated below, H.R. 1385 continues the unconstitutional centralization of education power for the benefit of certain members of society at the expense of the mass of American taxpayers.

Under H.R. 1385 States must provide a 3-year plan for adult job training and literacy programs in order to receive Federal job-training funds. These plans must satisfy federally specified content and must be approved by the Secretaries of both the Department of Education and the Department of Labor.

Additionally, States are required to establish local work force development boards whose functions and composition are dictated by the Federal law. Furthermore, the boards must meet benchmarks identified by the Governor in negotiation with the schools, the local boards do not even have the authority to determine how their performance should be measured. Rather progress under this bill is measured by predetermined Federal core indicators.

Under H.R. 1385, the local work force development boards would be dominated by representatives of the business community. Certainly the input of the business community is important for job training. However, a Federal mandate that representatives of business dominate the job-training boards may provide a means for business to socialize or externalize their training costs. Those businesses which will achieve a direct benefit from a more highly skilled work force should be the ones to finance such programs. Individuals who will benefit from improving their skills could also choose to ultimately pay at least some of the costs of their training. In no instance should the individual taxpayer be forced to subsidize the job training of another person.

Not satisfied with wealth transfers to prepare those without employment for business, this bill provides training for skills upgrading for incumbent workers—those already employed. Despite a budget billions of dollars out of balance, this bill creates a new entitlement for already-employed workers and their employers to receive more training courtesy of the American taxpayer.

Businesses are not the only institution showered with largess in this bill. Under the provisions of this bill, the Secretary of Labor is empowered to provide taxpayer dollars to labor unions to carry out research and demonstration projects as well as grants to public interest groups. Credible accusations have been made that these groups have often used Federal funds to advance their political agenda. At the very least, Congress should conduct a thorough investigation and take steps to prevent Federal funds from being used to pay for political activity before handing out more grant money.

III. H.R. 1385 INFRINGES ON FAMILY AND INDIVIDUAL AUTONOMY

In addition to continuing the practice of running job training programs from Washington, DC, this bill expands the State's reach into Americas' families by authorizing Federal funding for family literacy services. These services are to include training for parents on how to teach their children and interactive literacy activities between parents and their children.

This history of Federal involvement in family literacy raises questions regarding the effectiveness of government programs to teach anything regarding child raising. From 1963 to 1993, Federal spending on education increased from approximately $900,000 to over $10 billion, while scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test [SAT's] dropped by an average of almost 60 points. Given the poor track record, it is doubtful whether increasing Federal involvement in family literacy is likely to do anything but ensure lower rates of family literacy.

Furthermore, Federal involvement in child rearing violates the very principles upon which this country was founded. In a free society, such as that bequeathed to America by the drafters of the Constitution, the family, not the Government, is responsible for the raising of children. State control of child raising is, in fact, one of the hallmarks of totalitarianism. Those of us concerned with expanding and preserving freedom must oppose all measures, including the legislation currently under consideration, which erode the autonomy of the family under the theory that government social workers are better able to address the needs of children than parents.

Along similar lines, the language for disadvantaged youth programs mandates the integration of academic, occupation, and work-based learning opportunities. This is also quite objectionable. This language seems to suggest those youth diagnosed as disadvantaged by the social workers and psychologists will be denied a traditional education, instead disadvantaged youth will be herded into State-run job training programs. Such a federally mandated plan is in no way consistent with the core American value of individualism.

IV. H.R. 1385 ESTABLISHES A SYSTEM INCAPABLE OF ACHIEVING ITS STATED PURPOSE

This bill reaches the height of hubris in its mandate that training services be linked to occupations for which there is a demand in the local work force development area. This provision is objectionable for two reasons.

First, because business-dominated work force development boards will determine which occupations are in demand, it is very likely that the business represented on the board will be the ones determined to be those for which there is a demand in the local work force.

Second, and more important, the very idea that a government board can somehow determine what occupations will be in demand at any point in the future is an example of what Nobel Laureate F.A. Hayek called the fatal conceit. No central board, even one dominated by local officials and businessmen, can predict which jobs will be in demand in 5, 10, or even 2 years. It is doubtful that a local work force board in Silicon Valley in 1978 would have to tried to link job training services to the personal computer market. In fact, it's highly unlikely that Steve Jobs—founder of Apple computers—would be appointed to the work force development board in Silicon Valley. The very fact that the boards are comprised of already established leaders for business practically assures that the entrepreneurs creating the jobs of the future will not be represented on this board. In this high-technology information age, where financial and, more important, intellectual capital, can travel around the world in a matter of seconds, the jobs in demand in any area can change faster than any geographical local work force board could conceivably update the skills with which the link job-training.

V. CONCLUSION

The argument is often made that State-financed job training is necessitated by the failure of the educational system to properly prepare students for the job market. Each of us can understand the frustration of employers unable to find employees capable of adapting to new technologies.

As a physician, I have employed many people in critical positions. I certainly understand the importance of having a readily available pool of skilled labor. I would question, however, whether the pool was better prior to the Federal Government's intrusion into education.

The private actions of individual citizens, working together in a free-market, can best build a job-training system that meets the needs of its citizens. Private individuals, local communities, and State governments are also more capable than the Federal Government of providing adequate help to those unable to provide for training out of their own resources, if the Federal Government returns to constitutional size and reduces the tax burden on American citizens.

Federal job training programs, of any sort, furthers the destructive idea that the proper role of the Federal Government is to provide for all the needs of its citizens. The belief that Congress has a moral duty to minister to the health and welfare of the populace, both of America and the world, is directly responsible for the growth of the welfare-warfare state which threatens to destroy America's economic prosperity, and liberty itself. Job training should be provided, like all other goods and services, by the free-market and voluntary transactions.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], ranking member of the subcommittee.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, bills like this could not be written without the staff. I want to thank certain members of the staff who played a major role directly in this bill. On the Democratic side, Brian Kennedy, Marshall Grigsby, David Evans, and Margo Huber.

On the Republican side, Mary Gardner-Clagett, D'Arcy Philps, Lynn Selmsler, Vic Klatt, and Lauren Coberly. We thank you very much for your very, very hard work, day and night, on this bill.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] for his graciousness, and for thanking the members of the staff, and would like to add my thanks, also.

Mary Clagett has worked, what, 6 or 8 years on this. All of those who have worked so hard, we want to thank them. Many people see us standing up here, and we are the ones that finally get the final praise for what has been done. They are the ones that have done all of the work to pull us together to help make it possible, and we want to thank them greatly for this effort.

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 1385, the Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997. This is a bill which will prepare adults for the 21st century work force. It consolidates and improves existing programs under the Job Training Partnership Act [JTPA], the Adult Education Act, the Wagner-Peyser Act, and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Overall, H.R. 1385 consolidates over 60 existing employment, training, and literacy programs into three block grants to States and localities. I would like to congratulate Chairmen GOODLING and McKEON for their leadership on this issue, and for crafting a measure that has bipartisan support.

This bill will make a positive impact on adults as they prepare for the jobs of the future. It will help workers get the retraining necessary to compete in the current job market. We find ourselves in a unique economic situation in America today—we have low unemployment rates, but also have high rates of underemployment. We in Congress must take the lead and ensure adequate training is available to all Americans, in their communities.

This bill provides service delivery methods that maximize consumer choice in selecting training providers. I am particularly pleased that training services will be provided through the use of skill grants vouchers. These vouchers will be distributed through the full-service employment and training delivery system. This will enable adults to receive the training they need in their own community. When, for example, individuals want computer training, they can shop around for institutions that best meet their needs.

Some naysayers say this will encourage fly-by-night companies to deceive the hard-working public. But the bill includes protections in the form of requirements that providers must meet in order to receive funds. A provider must either:

First, be an accredited title IV eligible post-secondary educational program, or Second, be recognized by a local work force development board, which will determine if the provider meets acceptable, locally established performance standards established at the State level. The provider must have a proven completion record for participants in their program, and demonstrate a success rate for job placement after program completion.

There are other provisions in this bill I want to highlight.

The disadvantaged youth employment and training opportunities grant will move the focus of current disadvantaged youth programs from short-term employment fixes to longer term academic and occupational training.

The adult employment and training grant takes a work first approach to training. Priority will be given in resource allocations to intensive training for welfare recipients and other individuals with multiple barriers to employment.

Finally, this bill will extend the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 which provides rehabilitation and employment training to adults with disabilities, for 3 years.

In summary, H.R. 1385 promotes individual responsibility through vouchers, promotes competition among training providers, and drives resources and authority out of Washington to States and localities. By decreasing the size and scope of the Federal Government's control, this is truly a work-first bill for adults. It will also help get economically disadvantaged youth back to school.

I urge support for H.R. 1385. By passing this bill, we will give many Americans new tools to prepare for the 21st century.

Mr. SNOWBARGER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my support for H.R. 1385 but I urge my colleagues to address several troubling provisions during conference.

The current job training programs are top heavy, duplicative, and micromanaged from Washington. H.R. 1385 consolidates over 60 programs, currently administered by 15 separate agencies, into 3 targeted block grants. This will reduce administrative costs significantly, which the bill would redirect to the grants. I would have preferred that the taxpayers benefit from at least some of the savings.

This bill gives States the authority to tailor job training programs to fit their individual needs. Furthermore, it ensures that business and education leaders, who have expertise in work force development, will play a crucial role in development of State implementation plans instead of Washington bureaucrats.

H.R. 1385 received bipartisan support and is widely supported by industry and education groups. In a letter dated May 16, 1997, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce stated, "H.R. 1385 directly addresses this critical need—work force development—and better targets job training efforts at the State and local level." Additionally, the American Association of Community Colleges and Association of Community College Trustees, one of the primary providers of workforce training, wrote, "We support the flexibility the bill gives states and localities to design their workforce delivery system to best suit the needs of their citizens."

While I believe that H.R. 1385 is a step in the right direction, I do have these serious concerns about it:

The Job Corps Program continues to be championed by those who either will not or can not acknowledge the program's serious flaws. Even the President's own Labor Department study of the program says that it is difficult to defend. Why continue to force Governors to spend limited resources on this program if they can develop better ones? I would have preferred that the legislation passed today would have contained language to allow Governors to experiment with new, perhaps private, job training programs better suited to the particular needs of their local work force.

Why create new federally funded and managed adult literacy programs. On one hand Congress claims to want to end a Federal jobs bureaucracy. On the other hand, they create a new only slightly smaller version, with new programs devoted to adult literacy. This program amounts to nearly two and one half billion dollars of new spending on top of the 33 billion in job training dollars already allocated. Curiously, this bill grants authority over such literacy programs directly to the State Education Department, by passing the Governor's office all together. They will administer the federally designed and funded grant program.

I do think some of the other complaints are mistaken. The bill does not institute government control of where ordinary Americans will go to work, or restrict individual students' career choices. We must remember that these job training programs are set up for those people who need extra help to find an entry-level job, or change careers because their former job has disappeared. They do not involuntarily assign high school graduates to a particular job or employer, any more than the high school guidance counselor does.

The work force development boards advise the State training agencies on what kinds of jobs are likely to need more workers in the future. Obviously, they won't be perfect. But they would do a better job of predicting the needs of the local labor market than the wild guesses of bureaucrats. Finally, the bill was amended to explicitly ensure that the work force boards do not have the authority to change school curriculums or affect home-schoolers.

On balance, I must say that this bill is better than our current job training mess. For this reason, I am voting for the bill.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my support for those portions of H.R. 1385, the Education, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act which promote change which is beneficial and supportive of the goals of full literacy and accessible responsive job training programs throughout our country.

However, I do have concerns regarding the implementation of this legislation as it pertains to the control that will be given to States. I know that most would agree that local control of these programs is a desired goal, but I would add that local control must extend to the locality or jurisdiction where these important programs are implemented.

In the city of Houston, a successful Job Training Program called Houston Works has been successfully serving the needs of youth and adults for a number of years.

The total population of Houston, TX, is over 1.8 million with 26.7 percent African-Americans, 4 percent American Indian, 3.9 percent Asian, 26.8 percent Hispanic, and 42.2 percent white. Those residents of Houston who live in poverty number over 370,000 families.

This year Houston Works, one of several Job Training Partnership Act providers for the city of Houston, will receive $3 million in funding directly from the Department of Labor and has received letters of obligation from the State of Texas for an additional $24 million for a total of $27 million to carry out their job training goals for this fiscal year.

My concern with this legislation is with its implementation and administration. As job training moves to greater local control we must insure that control is, indeed, local.

Fortunately, in the case of Houston Works there is a long and successful history of working with the State to meet the needs of the Houston labor force. I would hope that this relationship will continue, but should it not, the grievance procedures listed under section 144 of this legislation must be more than adequate in its ability to address problems as they arise between Local Workforce Development Board and the State government. I would hope that as much attention is placed on this portion as the implementation of States receiving more control of these Federal funds.

Another concern of mine, and of the residents of the district that I serve, is regarding the subject and content of job training programs as we move toward the close of this century.

Computer literacy training must be a grater component of this legislation. Not just implied but expressed in the language in as many varied and focused ways as possible.

The need for strong computer job training and literacy based programs will be tremendous, as many communities in the country remain unable to access advanced networks or information. According to a 1995 study, only 20 to 25 percent of the Nation's hospitals and public libraries, and only 9 percent of our classrooms have access to the Internet or advanced information services.

Computer literacy and job skills are needed by millions of Americans who would not otherwise have access to them. This has a direct tie-in to economic development that will payoff by the year 2000 when 60 percent of the new jobs will require skills currently held by only 20 percent of the population.

On February 6 of this year, I introduced on the House floor a resolution to commend the work done by a national project called NetDay, which is responsible for the effort here in the city of Houston that wired 161 elementary, middle, and high school libraries for Internet access.

Because of the Houston Independent School District's NetDay96 and NetDay 2000 efforts, 138,980 students now have Internet access in the libraries of their elementary, junior, and high schools. This was accomplished with the assistance of 1,203 volunteers, who contributed their time to neighborhood schools. The generosity of sponsors, volunteers, students, teachers, and Houston Independent School District personnel saved Houstonians $58,080.

With 27.2 percent of the Houston Independent School District's student population considered at-risk, it was an important decision to hold NetDay96 connection projects on each Saturday in the month of October of last year. The Houston Independent School District methods ensured that every targeted school within minority and majority communities received an equal opportunity to have their neighborhood school library receive the necessary wiring for Internet access.

Distance learning could be a major component of all education instruction in our Nation by the close of this century if we look at the resources which are available to us today.

There are software packages which are designed to identify how an individual student learns reading, mathematics, science, geography. These software packages adopt themselves to that child's ability and pace of learning then instructs the child in a particular learning area on that information.

This technology should be available in every school in our Nation.

If we want to see the United States continue as a global economic and technological leader, we must today prepare the next generation to accomplish these objectives.

My other concern is that job training does not equal a job. I would hope that we continue to consider the impact of other laws which will impact on those citizens who depend on public assistance of some type. There has never been in our Nation's history 100 percent job placement. There will always be an imbalance in the number of jobs available and the number of people seeking positions.

According to the Statistical Abstract of the United States for 1996, there were 605,000 unemployed residents in the State of Texas.

In the 18th Congressional District in March of this year there were 3,936 people receiving unemployment insurance benefits. During that same month the Texas Workforce Commission recorded 13,167 applicants for jobs and only 1,031 job openings with a total of 304 job placements.

In the city of Houston 986,939 people are listed as members of the labor force. The employment totals are 921,636 with an unemployment rate of 65,303. The highest concentration of unemployment are African-American at 29,974, followed by Hispanic unemployment at 17,958, and white unemployment at 15,216.

Statewide the Texas Workforce Commission identified 127,295 people receiving unemployment insurance benefits in the month of March. During this same month 442,251 job applicants were received and 38,112 job openings were registered, with only 17,037 placements took place.

If we consider these facts then we may seek ways to create job opportunities which seek to provide creative and varied employment options which might encompass job sharing, seasonal, training for multiple job placement and others that would broaden the chance of placement after training has ended.

I would hope that my colleagues who will participate in the conference on this legislation will consider these important facts.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 1385, the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act.

Most Americans are not college graduates. Most Americans will face job or career changes during their lifetime. Many of our newest Americans want the opportunity to learn to read and write in English, the language of American opportunity. Americans on welfare are now seeking the skills they need to get work. All Americans want an opportunity to succeed and enjoy the American Dream.

Furthermore, American employers want to hire people with the skills they need. These skills change over time. Today's automobiles, to cite one example, have more onboard computing power than the Apollo spacecraft did, and the skills needed to repair them have grown to include computer sciences and electrical engineering.

The current system of job training and basic adult education, created with good intentions, has simply failed to help citizens get training they need to get jobs. Workers have to navigate a hornet's nest of redtape. And Federal micro management has created training for jobs that do not exist. So this legislation replaces a failed Washington-run system, with local control, local authority, and the local motivation to do the job right.

The Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act replaces Federal micro management with local control and accountability. It replaces some 60 Federal job training programs with three flexible block grants that States and communities can use to provide education and job training that is responsive to local needs. In San Diego, our community colleges, regional occupational programs, private industry councils and others will have the opportunity to work together to meet local citizens' and employers' needs, without having to distort their services to meet the needless and conflicting paperwork guidelines of dozens of Federal programs. Most importantly, it gives individuals who need job training the flexibility, information and resources they need, so they can obtain the education and training they need, so they will have a fighting chance to achieve the American Dream.

In the 104th Congress, I was privileged to serve as chairman of the House Subcommittee on Early Childhood, Youth and Families. Along with Chairman GOODLING and KCKEON, and Ranking Member KILDEE, we worked very hard to consolidate and improved job training, adult education and literacy programs. Our measure was not enacted in the 104th Congress, owing to the late-session election year crush. And now I serve on the Appropriations Committee. But last year's and this year's bills both included some major improvements and focus on the area of literacy. And I would like to focus special attention on that area.

This measure consolidates several adult education and literacy programs into a single block grant to the States. This very basic education is made available for one reason: If a person cannot read and write, he or she cannot benefit from more advanced job skill training.

In 1995, my subcommittee held hearings in San Marcos, CA, on this subject. One of the witnesses, John Corcoran, was a teacher and a businessman, and author of the alarming book "The Teacher that Couldn't Read." Throughout his own education, and through a teaching and real estate sales career, he had developed a thousand coping mechanisms to get around his illiteracy. But when the real estate market failed, his inability to read kept him from being able to support his family. He got help. He learned to read. And now he's doing very well.

The fact is that there are more John Corcorans in America than we are willing to admit, and that most illiterate adults do not do as well as John did. The National Adult Literacy Survey showed that of Americans at the lowest of five literacy levels, 17 percent receive food stamps, 43 percent live in poverty, and a stunning 70 percent are unemployed and underemployed. Therefore, victory in our national battle against poverty and welfare dependency requires attention and devotion to improving literacy among adults.

This legislation encourages local community efforts to improve literacy, and provides resources for that type of basic adult education, such as English language courses. One of the most successful literacy initiatives is called "family literacy." This program is based on the premise that adults will learn to read if they learn together with their children. In San Diego, the Lynch Foundation leverages Even Start family literacy funds into dozens and dozens of groups and courses for literacy training, in libraries and other settings, to offer people a chance to succeed. Bill Lynch and his team do a terrific job, and H.R. 1385 helps them do their job better.

I understand that this measure extends vocational rehabilitation programs until fiscal year 2000, leaving the reform of Federal vocational rehabilitation services to the 106th Congress. I believe this is unfortunate, because the people with disabilities involved in this program deserve much better than they are getting.

Despite congressional authorization of vocational rehabilitation several years ago, the U.S. Rehabilitation Services Administration failed to promulgate regulations on the law until last month. Thus, States have lacked sufficient guidance on how to improve vocational rehabilitation, and to comply with the law, for an unacceptable period of time, and persons with disabilities have suffered. Furthermore, a Region IX RSA comprehensive study of vocational rehabilitation in the State of California, due in December 1996 in hopes of informing further congressional action to improve the program, still has not been released in May 1997. I have not been satisfied with the RSA's justification for the delay, and will continue to follow this issue closely and vigorously. Persons with disabilities deserve a fighting chance at the American dream. Redtape, bureaucratic buck-passing, management failures, poor service to citizens, lack of accountability, and delays are simply inexcusable to me, particularly when one considers the billions—yes, billions of Federal dollars appropriated for vocational rehabilitation every year. Persons with disabilities deserve better.

Mr. Chairman, many citizens and families deserve recognition for their excellent work on this bill. In particular, Dr. George Boggs of Palomar Community College in my district, Dan Pegg and his staff at the San Diego Economic Development Commission, Gil Partida and the men and women of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce, and Scott Himelstein of the Lynch Foundation have all provided me excellent information on the importance of replacing Federal redtape with local control in this field. Several members of this body have served this cause with distinction, namely Chairman GOODLING, MCKEON, and RIGGS, Ranking Member DALE KILDEE, Governor Castle, Mr. GRAHAM of South Carolina, and many others. They have yielded a bill that means less government and more opportunity for Americans to succeed.

I urge support for the bill.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to stand here before you today to voice my support for this legislation, the Employment, Training & Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997. The Committee on Education and the Workforce, on which I serve, has made considerable efforts to defuse partisan tensions and pass important legislation that will help our children and working families. It has done so on two occasions—most recently having passed the IDEA Bill for disability education and now by passing this legislation that is before us today for consideration.

I applaud all of my colleagues, Republican and Democrat, for the spirit of cooperation that has made this possible. This bill streamlines and integrates job training and employment programs, while increasing access to adult education and literacy services. It also strengthens the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

I speak first and foremost of the effect this bill will have on adult basic education—a most vital and sorely neglected field in education today. I am pleased that adult education remains part of the Elementary and Secondary Act. I recently held a "round table" discussion in my district, the Sixth District of Massachusetts, with educators, businesses, State government officials, and community groups to talk about the problems surrounding adult basic education and training services within those programs. By and large, this bill positively address as most of the issues raised by that group.

Even in my home State of Massachusetts, which is relatively affluent when compared to other areas, 20 percent of the adults are functionally illiterate and a million people have not yet completed high school. Under these circumstances, it is simply unacceptable that 15,000 people wait for adult education classes.

Nationally, the statistics are even more daunting. More than 46 million Americans do not have a high school diploma.

Studies have shown that the strongest factor in determining the academic success and job prospects of a child is the education level of his or her parents. How can we expect children to learn to read if their parents cannot do so themselves?

Although the States, local governments, schools, and community groups do their best to address these needs, my constituents who are involved in adult education tell me that they are barely able to make a dent in this problem with the current resources at their disposal.

I am pleased that this bill will offer the people of the Sixth District of Massachusetts and elsewhere some of the needed resources to enhance adult education and literacy services.

This bill encourages cooperation among service providers. It increases the Federal commitment of support, and asks local governments to step up their contributions to the effort; it provides for more and better training of instructors, and for the resources to develop the most effective way of actually improving and delivering literacy assistance.

With respect to employment and training, this legislation provides a greater choice in securing job training through skill grants. With skill grants, recipients will be able to choose programs that are available at various centers or universities accessible to them. Information will be made available that will identify available job opportunities, site the skills and education needed for particular jobs, and match applicants to the programs providing the right kind of help. So an individual can work toward and get an real, existing job.

In addition, I welcome the concept of workforce development boards. Under these boards, different parts of the State will be able to determine what is best for their community. This is important in a State as diverse as mine. As a former president of my local Chamber of Commerce, I recognize the need for business and industry to join with other community groups and local governments to work to insure that those in search of a job can identify the skills necessary to obtain a job within their region, and that the programs devised for education and training for positions reflect the true needs of the local businesses.

I am concerned, however, that specific language was left out of the legislation which would have included specifically the representatives of working people as members of these boards. If local business and industry have a place at the table, then the people that work for such companies should also be included. We can recall that under the Job Training Partnership Act, the Private Industry Councils (PICs) were required to have representatives from business and industry as well as organized workers. It strongly encourages that our local communities use their available discretion to make sure that working people are truly represented on workforce development boards. Without that, I think the intent and meaning of that aspect of the legislation will be ignored and the program will not be as successful as it could possibly be.

Great effort has been made to work out a formula for distribution within States of the resources provided for in this legislation. It is of great concern that every person who needs these services will have access to them, and I believe the committee should continually review the actual implementation of this legislation to insure that a broad range of people within the State have input into the decisions that are made on this bill.

I am also pleased that the majority worked with us to include an amendment strengthening section 508 of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act. Section 508 calls on Federal agencies to follow Federal guidelines to insure that their information technology is accessible to employees with disabilities. The amendment asks the Office of Management and Budget to enforce existing law and to bring Agencies into compliance with accessibility guidelines. This will aid the 7.5 percent of the Federal workforce who have a disability. I also wanted to thank Congresswoman ESHOO for her dedication and hard work on this issue, and Congressman GEORGE MILLER for his work and cooperation.

Again, I commend the spirit and the manner in which this and the IDEA legislation were brought to the floor and hope that it foretells further cooperation on the important matters that will come before the House.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the bill shall be considered by division as an original bill for the purpose of amendment and, pursuant to the rule, each division is considered read.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON].

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I am offering an en bloc package of amendments which focus on providing greater flexibility to States and localities as they work to carry out meaningful job training reform. These amendments reflect several months of effort by the National Governors' Association, the National Conference of State Legislatures, and the National Association of Counties in coming to a consensus with respect to several key parts of this legislation.

In working with the members of these organizations, we have not only been able to gain their support for this legislation but we have made substantial improvements to the bill. Specifically, the amendments included in this en bloc accomplish the following: Ensures that members of the State collaborative process used for design and implementation at the State level of programs under this act represent diverse regions of the State; increases flexibility with respect to membership of local work force development boards; increases the roll of chief local elected officials by authorizing them to develop local plans in partnership with local work force development boards; increases public accountability of local work force development boards; further clarifies the role of each State with respect to determining State expected levels of performance; and provides a process through which formal State and local comments on this process may be transmitted annually to Congress; expedites the process by which Governors may enforce performance accountability; provides States increased flexibility to initiate reforms by extending certain waivers of waiver provisions and providing a limited grandfather for States having passed comprehensive employment and training reform legislation; maintains existing State-passed formulas with respect to a majority of the funds under the block grants while providing increased discretion to States for the allocation of those funds not distributed under the formula; provides greater local discretion with respect to carrying out summer youth programs and clarifies that summer employment activities are an essential element of disadvantaged youth programs; requires that the Secretary must sign off on State plans unless they determine in writing within 90 days of receipt of the plan that it is inconsistent with the specific provisions of this act; and ensures the ability of any unit of local government with a population of 500,000 or more to be designated as a work force development area.

Finally, this package of amendments also makes several modifications to further streamline the adult education provisions of this act, and also includes several additional technical and conforming changes to the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I am not opposed to the amendment, but I ask unanimous consent that I may claim the time allowed under the rule.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I would just say that these are clarifying and perfecting amendments which we agreed to. I would certainly support them, and urge their adoption.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON].

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Chairman, to begin with, I, too, would like to thank Chairman GOODLING and Chairman MCKEON and the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. KILDEE, for putting together a bill that has been a very difficult task, but I think most of all for the good.

The committee has come together in a bipartisan fashion to address some problems long overdue to be addressed, and to rescind duplication and get local control for the 21st century, something I think most Americans agree with.

I have some amendments, I think, that are very appropriate, and I hope we can agree upon them. There are things about the bill that I would like to have changed that we cannot get an agreement upon.

Federal school-to-work, I would like that to cease now, because I believe that program, the school-to-work program, should be run at the local level. But under the program that we have today, Federal school-to-work will terminate in 2 years, and given our current situation, that is something that I will have to live with. On balance, the bill is very good.

The amendment that I offer today addresses concerns of family groups that I think are very legitimate, and to understand where people are coming from, a lot of folks are concerned that when we do things in Washington and when we do things at the State level, that does limit choices. Any time the government gets involved in an area, to me we need to do so as cautiously as possible, and allow people choices that are good for their community and their family.

One thing that we have done with this amendment is we have clearly stated that nothing in this bill should be construed to affect home schoolers, or compel a parent engaged in home schooling to participate in the literacy program, family literacy services, or adult education.

What we are trying to do here is to preserve the right to home school and make this program truly voluntary, and if a parent who is a home schooler does not want to participate, they certainly do not have to.

When we talk about teaching reading and how to bring about literacy, one of the things that is important to me is that we have a full menu, and that phonics, I think a tried and true method of teaching literacy, be included. This amendment ensures that phonics will have a systematic approach and a place in the literacy program, something I believe that is very necessary and very appropriate.

The last thing is that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PAUL] talked about local work force development boards. If you had to pick between Washington and home, I pick home. The local work force development boards are going to be made up of local official business leaders, who I think have the best chance of telling us what the job market is like a lot better than we do here in Washington. We are going to allow them unprecedented flexibility and ability to shape a work force so people, when they get out of school, are ready to go to work, and hopefully we can reduce the welfare rolls early on by giving the people the skills they need to be competitive in the 21st century.

One thing we do not want to do is we do not want to mix job training with setting curriculum. Curriculum should be set by local educators and parents. I have offered an amendment that clearly says that the local work force development boards do not have any authority to mandate school curriculum. I think that is an amendment that clarifies and clearly limits and defines the roll of the work force development board, to make sure that parents and teachers control curriculum and not some other group we set up in the area of job training.

On balance, the bill moves the ball forward. I am very proud to have been a part of it. Any time we make major changes, we do not make everybody happy. That is democracy. I think we have brought some common sense to bear on programs that lack common sense, and local people are more empowered today to affect the job training and education of their children than they were before this bill began.

In my district we have lost 40 percent work force at the Savannah River site, the largest Department of Energy facility in the Nation. The reforms in this bill will allow more flexibility, more assets to be used in the local community to make sure that those people in my district and other districts who are losing their jobs have a chance to get retrained and go back into the work force.

On balance, I believe this is a good bill, and the amendments I offer I think will strengthen the bill.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM] serves as the vice chairman of the subcommittee, and has been very diligent in working to make this bill better. We would have no objection to this amendment.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, we learned of this amendment late yesterday afternoon, and had only a brief opportunity to go over it. However, we were able to work to make some changes in it. I believe the amendment now is acceptable. I believe it is important, however, that we reserve the right to look at it again in conference with the Senate.

Mr. HILLEARY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by my good friend Mr. GRAHAM because it makes some necessary improvements to H.R. 1385 in the areas of adult education and literacy.

First, this amendment makes clear that all participation in adult education and family literacy programs is strictly voluntary. It also stipulates that this legislation has no impact on homeschools, nor can it compel homeschooling parents to participate in these programs.

Second, the amendment clarifies that the intent of the programs is to strengthen the literacy skills of parents and their children. This will help equip parents to work with their children effectively in the learning process.

Most importantly, this amendment clarifies that local work force development boards do not have any authority to mandate school curriculum. Workforce development boards are only authorized to manage training programs, not usurp the authority of local elected officials and school administrators. I encourage my colleagues to support this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I have three amendments spread over this bill. They are all the same. But to cover the bill with the Buy-American Act, I ask unanimous consent to consider en bloc these three amendments.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of such Act (29 U.S.C. 701 note) is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 21 the following:

"Sec. 172. Buy-American requirements.

Mr. TRAFICANT (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Chairman. Is there objection to the original request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, these are Buy American amendments. They simply say that all the money expended under this bill shall comply with the Buy American Act, and hopefully also a sense of the Congress that anyone expending these monies should, wherever possible, try and attempt to buy American-made goods and products; also, that there be a notice to recipients of grants or utilization money under this act that the Congress encourages them to, wherever possible, try and buy American-made goods.

Finally, it prohibits contracts to any person who in fact supplies supposedly made-in-America products that are not made in America.

The last provision is basically this. If someone who is doing business with one of our groups under this bill sells us supposedly made-in-America products, and we find it is a fraudulent, not made-in-America product, then they are prohibited from any more business covered under this act. That is the third provision.

□ 1045

That explains the three provisions.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON].

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, we have no objection to the gentleman's amendment. We agree with what he is trying to do, and we will make sure we will work that out in accordance with his wishes.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's good work and also the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] for working with me on the issue.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I certainly support the amendment and urge its adoption.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I urge an "aye" vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HINOJOSA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word. I do not wish to speak to the present amendment, Mr. Chairman.

I rise in support of H.R. 1385 and the manager's amendment. Had I been here earlier, I would have spoken to this, and this is what I wanted to get into the record. I am particularly gratified by the willingness of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] to work with Members from our side in producing a bipartisan bill that includes accountability. My thanks also go to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE], the ranking members, for their leadership.

The addition of the provision that work force boards should make available to the public upon request the minutes of their meetings encourages me in the belief that the work force board process will be fair and open.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to division A?

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. OWENS

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 4 offered by Mr. OWENS: Page 8, line 8, strike "Such sums" and insert "(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), such sums".

Page 8, after line 10, add the following: "(B)(i) Such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1999 through 2003 to provide amounts to local workforce development areas under title II to carry out summer youth employment programs under such title in accordance with this subparagraph.

"(ii) Such amounts—
"(I) shall be used in accordance with the requirements otherwise applicable to programs under title II, except that such amounts shall be allocated to local workforce development areas in accordance with the requirements described in section 262(b) of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1642(b)) (as such section was in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997); and
"(II) shall be used to provide summer youth employment opportunities suitably linked to academic, occupational, and work-based learning opportunities.

Page 124, strike line 4 and all that follows through line 10.

Page 124, line 18, strike "(V)" and insert "(IV)".

Page 125, line 1, strike "(VI)" and insert "(V)".

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment on the Summer Youth Employment Program. The committee's work has been repeatedly congratulated. I hope that it is as good as we think it is because, in this closing of this century, jobs and employment will become a No. 1 issue. With workfare and downsizing and various other activities under way, jobs are going to be critical for those who now have jobs. They will not have them, a lot of them in the future. And for those who are being driven from the welfare rolls, all of it is going to come together.

The way we handle our jobs will be critical. The fact that we are handing over this power primarily to the Governors of the States is applauded by many but I find it a bit alarming.

I wanted to talk about one aspect of the jobs program, that is the part that deals with disadvantaged youth. I have a chart in front of me which shows that programs for disadvantaged youth have been treated with great hostility over the last 4 or 5 years, certainly the last 3 years. Among the programs for youth, disadvantaged youth, the Summer Youth Employment Program has been zeroed out of the budget a couple of times, and we have had to fight like mad to get it back into the budget. We have to appeal to the voters out there, public opinion to come to our aid, because we seem to have no aid here on Capitol Hill anywhere. This is basically an appeal that I make to the common sense of the Members of Congress, and I am asking Members of Congress to listen to their constituencies, Summer Youth Employment Programs are very important. If we fold them into a category called disadvantaged youth programs and that is all there is, no mandate which drives the summer youth employment programming funding, then we are likely to have a fading away of the Summer Youth Employment Programs.

What is happening with overall disadvantaged youth programs is they have gone from $676 million in 1993 to $608 million in 1994, down to $126 million in 1995, and now we are proposing $126.7 million for programs for disadvantaged youth other than summer youth employment.

The essence of the amendment is to keep current language in the bill which first clearly delineates the Summer Youth Employment Program as a separate program and, second, applies the same formula that exists now which drives the allocation of the formula within the State. Within the State they must follow the criteria of the amount of unemployment, the amount of poverty. This drives it down to the areas where the greatest need exists. If we do not do that, we leave it to the discretion of the Governors. I think the proposal in the en bloc amendments is to give the Governors 30 percent off the top for their discretion, which means we are reducing the amount of money for summer youth employment by giving that discretion to the Governors. The Governors already have discretion in the handling of other funds in this particular bill.

I wanted to maintain the level of Summer Youth Employment Programs that we have now. I wanted to not only maintain the level of funding but maintain the application allocation of that funding to the poorest children in the urban areas which are not highly regarded usually by Governors in most States. That is what this amendment does.

It is important to understand the background is that hostilities toward youth programs is such that they have been drastically reduced. In this very bill, the one exception made in the consolidation process is dislocated workers. Programs for dislocated workers are given a separate line. If they can make that exception for dislocated workers because those are most favored programs, for whatever reason, that is the program that has been increased the most in the last 3 years, they went from $571.6 million to $1.2 billion, so we know that there is a set of political policies operating here. We do not wait a minute to have disadvantaged youths in the cities in the summer to be the victims of their own politics. I urge that this amendment be adopted and save the Summer Youth Program.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in tacit support of this legislative effort to streamline the nation's Federal adult and youth job training system. The debate concerning H.R. 1385, the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act, is not nearly as contentious and radical as the debacle that characterizes last year's "CA-REERS" legislation. In the spirit of bipartisanship, the Chair of both the Committee on Education and the Workforce and the Subcommittee on Post Secondary Education and Lifelong Learning have worked extremely hard with my colleague, Ranking Member DALE KILDEE, to move this bill in the right direction. In fact, as late as last night, efforts were being made to modify the bill to address some outstanding concerns of Members on both sides of the aisle, including myself. However, my colleagues in the Congressional Black Caucus, the progressive caucus, and the urban caucus have great reservations about the fate of the Summer Youth Employment Program—a highly successful program that has come to be relied upon by the nation's cities who welcome an opportunity to put disadvantaged young people to work. The Owens-Martinez amendment would address such concerns.

Job training funds must be distributed on the basis of economic need not political clout. As a result of the manager's en bloc amendment that was passed earlier, H.R. 1385 would grant the governors a good deal of discretion in determining the within-State formula which sets the amount that cities, that is, local work force development boards, receive. The Owens-Martinez amendment would maintain current law which ensures that those cities which are the poorest and have the highest unemployment rates receive the funds, rather than those cities that exert the most political clout. This amendment would not abdicate the Federal Government's prescribed within-state formula. Current law requires States to distribute funds to local areas based on a three-part formula: the number of unemployed, the number of excess unemployed, and the number of economically disadvantaged. This Federal formula ensures that funds get filtered down to those local areas that are the poorest, with the highest rates of unemployment. Thus, the Governor would not have the power to establish a formula that may have more to do with politics rather than economic need.

The manager's en bloc amendment would require that State distribute 70 percent of applicable funds to the localities according to the current formula. The other 30 percent would be distributed to localities according to a formula determined by the Governor. It is my understanding that this represents a compromise that was reached among the Nation's Governors, mayors, county executives and State legislatures. While this agreement is an accomplishment, it is not the best formula for those cities in dire economic straits. Congress should not be giving the Governor the authority to distribute 30 percent of the funds as he or she very well pleases.

The manager's en bloc amendment also included a clause that would make the Summer Youth Program a required activity, rather than an allowable activity as under the Committee-reported bill. This too, is a substantial improvement that could go further. The Owens-Martinez amendment would separate the Summer Youth Employment Program from its block grant and create a separate funding stream. Therefore, Congress would be required to pass an appropriation for the Summer Youth Employment Program, as in current law. Members would be able to ascertain exactly what money is being provided for the Summer Youth Employment Program. Under the bill, the Dislocated Workers Program is separated into a special category. Similar provisions must be made for the Summer Youth Employment Program.

Some of my colleagues may question the need for a separate appropriation and a federally driven within-State funding formula. History is the answer: repeatedly, the Summer Youth Employment Program has been a target of elimination by the majority.

In 1995, the House-passed Fiscal Year 1996 Labor-HHS-Appropriations Act (H.R. 2127) would have eliminated the program. $0 was appropriated for a program that is needed by 4 million young disadvantaged people, but only able to accommodate nearly 600,000. For this reason and various others, this bill was deadlocked in the Senate. Six months after the start of fiscal year 1996, after 2 Government shutdowns, and after more than 10 continuing resolutions, the Fiscal Year 1996 Omnibus Appropriations Act (H.R. 3019/PL104-) was enacted and provided $625 million to the summer program—thus supporting the same number of jobs as in 1995.

In 1996, the House-passed Fiscal Year 1997 Labor-HHS-Appropriations Act, would have frozen funding for the summer program at the 1995 level—thus supporting a record low of more than 440,000 youth, although nearly 800,000 youth were supported in the summer of 1992. Fortunately, the Fiscal Year 1997 Omnibus Appropriations Act (H.R. 3610/PL 104-208) was passed and enacted which granted an additional $246 million—for a total of $871 million—for the program—the same amount that the President requested.

The threat to the Summer Youth Employment Program continues—now to attack the program through the authorization process. The program must remain a Federal priority; this means from the intrastate funding formula to the interstate funding formula. Congress must reestablish its commitment to preserve the Summer Youth Employment Program and to target funds to those areas that are most in need. Fiscal constraints preclude 100 percent participation in the program; at the very least we ought to ensure that children in those areas that exhibit the greatest need are protected. The Owens-Martinez amendment accomplishes just this. I urge my colleagues to vote for this amendment.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS]. It would continue the Summer Youth Employment Program as a stand-alone program.

Our bill, H.R. 1385, consolidates the Summer Youth Employment Program and the year-round youth program under the Job Training Partnership Act. The bill continues to allow funds to be spent on summer employment activities. In fact, summer employment that is linked to academic and occupational learning opportunities is now an essential element of the disadvantaged youth block grant.

But this legislation does not continue it as a separate program. The main purpose of the bill pertaining to disadvantaged youth programs is that we should not require stand-alone summer employment programs anymore that do not target the hardest to serve youth at the expense of more comprehensive disadvantaged youth programs.

This bill assumes a consolidation of the summer and the year-round programs, and it assumes the consolidation of funding for these programs as well. It does not repeal the summer program. It just makes it part of a more comprehensive effort at serving our hardest-to-serve, disadvantaged youth.

The bill refocuses disadvantaged youth programs on providing academic and occupational learning opportunities, on getting kids back into school, in addition to providing employment experiences.

The bill leaves the decision to localities on how to provide services. This is the main purpose of the bill, is getting the authority down to the local governments where they are best suited to handle and make these decisions.

In the en bloc package of amendments we have added language clarifying that summer employment opportunities will be an essential element, that was part of our en bloc amendment earlier this morning, in disadvantaged youth programs. Local work force development areas have sole discretion on determining the proportion of funds that will go for summer employment and for year round disadvantaged youth services, from funds made available under the substate formula; and at a minimum, 70 percent of the funds going to local areas under the youth opportunity employment training grant be allocated within the State through the existing formula under JTPA.

As I said, this is part of the agreement that has been reached with the Governors, the counties, the local boards, the local people that will be making this decision.

Acceptance of the Owens amendment would totally undo consolidation in our bill for disadvantaged youth programs and would result in hurting the hardest-to-serve youth, particularly school dropouts who are in need of a comprehensive mix of services.

In addition, this amendment goes against this agreement that we made earlier with the Governors, the State legislatures and the counties who supported this approach in the bill.

In summary, this amendment is the exact opposite of what we are all attempting to do here today. That is, consolidate the job training and employment programs, provide increased flexibility to States and localities in determining what programs work best for them.

I urge a "no" vote on this amendment.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MCKEON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, do the Governors get 30 percent off the top for administrative expenses?

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, the Governors get 30 percent to use where they find the need is greatest throughout the State.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, which means that summer youth will be reduced from the amount that it was last year?

Mr. MCKEON. No, Mr. Chairman, they just have more flexibility at the State level to determine the use rather than we making the decision here in Washington.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, when the gentleman uses State and local synonymously, the Governors have the discretion but the local levels will have—

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, the States arrive at that formula through the collaborative process working with the State legislatures.

Mr. OWENS. In some states?

Mr. MCKEON. In all States, Mr. Chairman. It is required in the bill.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

It is interesting in the colloquy that just took place between the chairman and my friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS], in that the point that the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS] was trying to make is that 30 percent right off the top, unlike today with the way the law is, goes to the Governor for his use whatever he deems to use it for.

The problem with block grants is that often many of the very important programs that were developed for specific reasons, the reason gets lost and the program gets lost, because at any particular time a Governor may have a different priority. Even local boards may have a different priority.

Let us go back to the beginning and remember why we created the summer youth program. Because in the summer, when it is hot, there is apt to be a lot more problems than there is in other times of the year. And when young people are out of school and they have a lot of free time on their hands, they are more apt to be involved in problems whether they want to or not.

The idea was that this was going to be a program that not necessarily created employment for a long period of time for young people but just for that short summer period, in which they would learn some marketable skills and learn the value of a job and develop some work ethic. That is the reason.

Now, the way the funding is now, it is driven to the areas of the greatest unemployment and the pockets of poverty. This is something that we have to realize in a program like this, designed the way this program really was, that the only way it would be able to fulfill its mission is to continue the way it is.

I am for the consolidation. In fact, whether this amendment passes or not, I will support the bill because I think it has been a good compromise.

Let me take a minute to commend the chairman and the ranking member, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] and the ranking member the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE] for the good work that they have done with all the Members that had input. This is truly a bipartisan bill. But I really feel very firmly, like many of my friends do on that side of the aisle, that if we talk about local control, it means local control.

Local control may be to the Governor to the Federal Government local control. But when these programs come on, the local control is right in that community. And that is where the decision should be made.

I have heard Members on that side of the aisle continually say, the citizen knows best what to do with his dollars. Why do we reverse it in this particular situation?

This program here provides jobs to young people between the ages of 14 and 21, and often these young people may have never worked before. Many have parents who are unemployed. These low-income youth can bring home to that needy family anywhere from between $1,100 and $1,400 through that summer.

□ 1100

The other thing I mentioned earlier is that it does provide them with job skills and job experience, which is very important. They do perform challenging work in offices and parks and recreation facilities, hospitals, nursing homes, and day care centers.

During the 104th Congress, Members on the other side of the aisle finally came around to recognizing these values and the values of the summer youth employment program after initial efforts to eliminate it. They funded the program at the President's request of $871 million for the fiscal year.

Understand this, that that amount of money still only reaches about 15 percent of the 4 million eligible to be served. That means that this is very valuable money and it should be targeted because it does not fulfill the entire need, and we should make absolutely sure that it goes to the areas of greatest need, like I said before, in unemployment areas and in areas of poverty.

The reason that we ought to ensure this and support the Owens amendment is because these are limited funds and they need to be targeted where they can do the most good.

Like I said before, I applaud the bipartisan effort on this piece of legislation. As one of the speakers said earlier, this is the third piece of legislation that comes out of our committee in a bipartisan fashion, which proves that we can work together for the benefit of the people. And while I applaud that, I still would like to see the Owens amendment accepted because I believe that it is the way we should be conducting this program.

There are no guarantees in the bill that this program will continue at a local level, as presently written into law at its current level, or even continue at all if a higher priority is determined by the people making those decisions. The amendment that the gentleman from New York and I offer today provides for a separate stream of funding similar to that provided, and there is precedent for it, for dislocated workers in the adult employment, training, and opportunities block grant. We should not let these summer funds be subject to the whims of State politics, which often they are.

Therefore, I ask and urge the Members to support the Owens amendment.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

First, I want to make sure that everybody understands what we are doing here is a very delicately put together program with State legislators, local legislators, and Governors, and we have to be very, very careful that we do not mess up that agreement.

More importantly, the bill is written to make sure that the most disadvantaged are served. That is what the bill is about. We are not taking away summer youth programs at all. The 25 percent that the State has discretion over, 10 percent of that has to be used in incentive grants for dropouts. Again, most in need; those are the people we are trying to serve. And 75 percent goes local, 70 percent on a Federal formula with total local discretion.

We believe that if we can combine the youth programs we will better serve those most in need. But, again, it is put together in a very delicate fashion trying to deal with Governors, State legislators, and local government elected officials, and that is not easy to do.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLING. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the delicate balance and the negotiations that may have taken place in order to put forth a very creative piece of legislation that the gentleman refers to.

Let me just simply inquire. That is a delicate balance between leaders of government. In actuality, however, the need is on the local city government level where youngsters are, and it is extremely difficult to translate that delicate balance between the leaders of government, county and State legislators and the Governor's office, to prioritize summer youth jobs, which are constantly under attack, to be able to translate to where those needs are with our youth. That should have been the first priority.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I believe we have considered that in the collaborative process on the State level which gets all of those people together. They have to agree. The collaborative process then on the local level, again, all of those must agree.

And the whole idea is to make sure that the local level has most to say about this whole program, because we believe that we have failed prior to that, and that is why we have written it in this fashion.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, just this last week, we, in this Congress, decided to prioritize our concerns about youth by passing the juvenile crime bill. Our solution to the youth of America was to incarcerate them at the age of 13 with adults. We were so prominent and so progressive in this decision that it was discussed on the very renowned show "Politically Incorrect."

This amendment by the gentleman from New York, MAJOR OWENS, is correct and it responds to the true sense of our respect for the future workers of America, the youth of this country, emphasizing the importance of dealing with youth.

Let me applaud the leadership of the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities for a creative piece of legislation. Let me thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] for understanding what education and training is all about.

I am a new Member, but for 2 years of my time here, every single year we had to fight for the saving and implementation of summer youth jobs moneys. Every year it was cut, every single year. What comfort do I get in this very delicate balance between the Governor, the State legislature, and the county government, all well intended, to be able to prioritize for very needed summer youth jobs?

As a member of the city council in the city of Houston, I know firsthand what summer youth jobs do for our community. I have gone to the intake centers when we have had thousands of youth standing around corners, blocks, with parents begging for employment. I know what it is when a youngster comes and says, "I have gotten an opportunity to work in your office, but I am not coming because I have no clothes to wear." I know what it is in rural communities with unemployment where decisions are made where we will not have a summer youth program.

Governors would have 100 percent authority to distribute job training funds. This would be an allowable activity; it would not be a required activity. Who gets the last attention that we can give our youth?

As I look to convene the Congressional Children's Caucus, one of the things we wanted to say to America is that we believe in our children and we will do more than mild words and pass legislation that incarcerates young people with adults; we will prioritize funding activities for our youth.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, maybe I misunderstood the gentleman, but I thought she said the Governors have 100 percent jurisdiction. They do not.

In this area, 70 percent passes through on existing formula. They have 30 percent that they are able to use through the collaborative process to reach severely disadvantaged youth.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I appreciate the gentleman's clarification. However, I will stand with my comment, because what I am suggesting to the gentleman is that out of that combined authority, out of that combined authority, it is my position that the overall control over those dollars will not disseminate down to a summer youth job program. It will be a discretionary decision; it will not be mandatory.

Yes, they have the authority over percentages, but it is a total of 100 percent. And I disagree that it will come down to the summer youth program, because let me just humbly say to the gentleman, we have had a battle to preserve summer youth jobs in this Congress over the last two Congresses.

Let me now just say that the gentleman from New York is correct, that the formula is a vital formula that will no longer be used. Current law has been useful. It means that we go right into a community and we assess the relative unemployment, we assess the poverty level, and, therefore, we make the determination.

I would like it to be maintained as current law. And if the gentleman is going to say that current law is going to prevail, that is fine, but I want it to be a separate line item so that we can prioritize for our youth in a positive sense.

I hope we have seen what it does to a young person to get a summer job and be exposed to a business, a government office, for the first time in their life. I can tell my colleagues that when the choices are being made, somebody will say we better appeal to those dislocated workers because they vote.

Children do not vote. We will have a clamoring in the Statehouses across this Nation taking moneys from our youth.

This is a good amendment if we believe that the Summer Youth Job Program creates the workers of the 21st century. The workers of the 21st century are our youth. Why should we not have the opportunity to provide summer youth employment rather than put it at a discretionary level?

So I would simply say that I would rather be known not as the Congress who passed a juvenile crime bill that locked up 13-year-olds with adults, I would rather be known as the Congress who focused on giving young people who will work in the future jobs and that we did not leave it to the discretion of a delicate balance between Governors and legislatures and counties.

And might I add, I did not hear "cities." So I think it is appropriate that this amendment be passed, and I would certainly ask my colleagues to give it their consideration.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of my colleague from New York who is a tireless champion of our Nation's present and future labor force.

I am strongly committed to the Summer Youth Employment Program and would like to insure that it serves the needs of communities throughout our Nation.

Prior to my election to the U.S. House of Representatives, I worked to create the Summer Youth Employment Program in the city of Houston which is managed by Houston Works.

I know from personal experience that a summer job for those young people enrolled by the Job Training Partnership Act's Summer Youth Employment Program-sponsored projects around this country are more than just an opportunity to have money for the next school year, it is an opportunity to learn, live, and experience the work environment and culture which in many cases is outside of their limited life experiences.

In 1997, Houston Works Summer Youth Program served 6,500 young people ages 14-21.

This year Houston Works plans to serve 5,396 jobs to youth ages 14-21 years. The target population of disadvantaged youth is 43,000 potential applicants.

Those 39,604 youth who were turned away last summer are only a tiny fraction of the 4 million youth who would qualify for this summer jobs program if the funds were available.

Today, only about 600,000 youth can be served nationally.

This program has made a significant difference in the lives and fortunes of the young people who were fortunate enough to have their application accepted.

I would like to stress the need to look at summer youth employment as an extension of the learning experience.

This amendment would protect funding for summer youth employment by creating a separate funding stream for this significant program. The block grant approach is detrimental to summer youth employment.

The Owens' amendment for summer youth employment would restore the current formula allocations which direct Summer Youth Employment Program funds to those areas are most in need according to a 100 percent federally driven interstate and intrastate formula.

I would like to thank my colleagues for their support of this program and I would ask that the program be further strengthened by supporting Mr. OWENS' amendment.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words and rise in opposition to the amendment of my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

First, I want to say, as I said in my opening statement in the debate, that that is a good bipartisan effort and one we should all be proud of. And I commend the gentleman from New York because I know his is a sincerely felt and sincerely discrete evaluation of the way these block grants have been put together.

I want to point out also to my colleagues that in my opening statement in the debate I said that these block grants give appropriate safeguards between the relationships between the States and the Federal Government, and I sincerely believe that block grants should not be open to anybody's discretion to use as they will.

But I think in this bill we have put those appropriate safeguards into place and it will bring us an efficient working relationship, a cooperative relationship between the Federal, State, and local governments. I believe that sincerely. I think we have done it better in this bill than we have done it in many cases.

Let me just relate that to some of the specifics in this bill, and then I will yield to the gentleman from New York.

As has already been stated by both the chairman and the chairman of the subcommittee, the language that was put in this morning in the amendment said that summer employment is an essential component of the block grant. I think that was quite carefully added.

Now, in my judgment, and again I suppose this is judgment, but I have to say I have looked at this quite carefully. In my judgment, the gentleman's amendment, I am afraid, would totally undo the important consolidation in the bill for the disadvantaged youth programs because it would result, in my opinion, in hurting the hardest-to-serve youths, particularly the school dropouts.

This is an issue that we have to look at, and I come down on the side of what the committee has done. And I am afraid that, inadvertently, the gentleman would be undermining that particular part of the program. I know the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], addressed this with respect to a 10-percent component of that part of the bill, if I am correct. And I think that is very good. Again, it is a matter of judgment, but I think we have protected the hardest-to-serve youth, and those are the dropouts.

Finally, I would like to say that it is totally incorrect, in my opinion, to say that we are killing the summer youth employment program. I think that what we are doing here is providing discretion to local communities to provide summer youth employment opportunities that are directly linked, and this is important, to academic and occupational learning. I think that is important.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROUKEMA. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and then I will yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding, and I would like to assure the gentlewoman from Texas that our committee also deals with juvenile justice and we deal with juvenile justice differently. The gentleman from California [Mr. RIGGS], is at the present time working with the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SCOTT], to make sure that we deal with it properly.

But, again, I have to indicate that what we are doing here is giving that local community so much more discretion on how they use their youth money so that that gets to those most disadvantaged, and that is the attempt of the bill.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, let me ask the gentleman, am I not correct that it gives 100 percent discretion to that proportion of the funds that are devoted to the summer employment?

Mr. GOODLING. At the local community.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Discretion for 100 percent at the local level.

□ 1115

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mrs. ROUKEMA. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. OWENS. The gentlewoman is a member of the committee so she is aware of the fact that this precious consolidation mode of operation has been dropped for the dislocated workers. We have a line which mandates funding for dislocated workers. What we ask is a mandate for summer youth employment.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. That is not my understanding.

Mr. OWENS. I hear language, and a central program is not the same as a mandate. We have tricks here of the trade which all of us who have been legislators understand very well. It leaves it wide open for the strangling. The summer youth program will not die in one summer. It will be strangled slowly because it is in there with other disadvantaged youth programs which have not been treated in any favorable manner. They will be transferring funds from the summer youth program into the other programs until there will be little left.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. That is not my interpretation of the funding streams.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mrs. ROUKEMA was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the committee.

Mr. GOODLING. First of all we should not get dislocated workers into this discussion because they are protected in the legislation. We made very, very sure of that. Again I say the total discretion is left to that local community for the use of that fund better than they have ever had it before, because we usually tie the hands of local people because we have always had the idea that we know what works best from Washington, that one size fits all. We are saying that is a mistake. Let us let the local communities make those decisions and deal with those most in need. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS]. But before I debate that, let me thank those people who were on the floor earlier giving praise to an amendment that had been incorporated or provisions in a bill that had been incorporated into this legislation that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH] and I supported, and others. It is so infrequent that I get any praise on this floor, I always stop to take the time to acknowledge that and to thank people on both sides of the aisle for issuing words of praise.

With regard to the bill in general, let me say to the chairman and the ranking member on both sides that I have followed this discussion and it is my intention to vote for this bill, although I have some serious reservations about the entire block granting process; reservations which are a product of historical realities in the South about how block grants have historically been used when they were in vogue at earlier times in our history; reservations about consolidation of programs, although I think it is a good idea; reservations about giving more and more control to State entities when a lot of these problems are in fact problems that are dealt with at the local level and should be dealt with at the local level; reservations which have to do with the fact that some of our State legislatures are still controlled by more rural interests, and those interests tend to get taken into account even in a collaborative process which the chairman of the subcommittee and the chairman of the committee have talked about, to the disadvantage of major urban communities and cities.

All of those leave me a little concerned about the block grant approach and lead me to say that this is an experiment of sorts, as I understand it. We are trying to move to a balance that restores control to more local and State bases and moves it back away from the Federal Government. I am prepared as a general proposition to take that experiment and hope, like everybody else does, that it is going to work out.

With respect to the summer youth employment program, however, I do believe that we have got to protect it, even though this discussion really is a discussion about separating summer youth from the other disadvantaged youth block grant programs. In a sense we are kind of debating the possibility of pitting those two things against each other when both of them are needed. But understand that the disadvantaged youth block grant programs tend to address youth who have already dropped out of the system, who have already had adverse impacts, and in my estimation the summer youth employment programs, at least in the communities that I am familiar with, have often been used to address the front end of the process, to provide employment to some kids who may end up dropping out if we do not intervene with them earlier in the process.

The importance of having a summer youth program that is separate and distinct in funding from the general disadvantaged youth block grant program, it seems to me, still is important. It is for that reason, although I do not want to sound like I am trying to say anything negative about the disadvantaged youth block grant program, it is for that reason that I am rising in support of the Owens amendment and would encourage its adoption.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WATT] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WATT of North Carolina was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I just want to assure the gentleman that this is not revenue sharing, as those block grants he was talking about were. There is very specific language how these block grants must be used, including, for instance, the State collaborative process has to represent diverse regions of the State, including urban, rural and suburban areas. We spell out that we do not revenue share, and I made that clear to the governors from day one, that we are not interested in revenue sharing.

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Reclaiming my time, I appreciate the gentleman's clarification on that. I was aware of the collaborative process. I still think even in that collaborative process in a number of States, rural interests tend to be overrepresented, and it is not something that I can scientifically prove to the gentleman. I can just tell the gentleman that in a number of Southern States, rural interests typically dominate over urban interests. I understand that the gentleman has worked hard to try to work out this balance, and I am going to vote for the bill regardless of whether this amendment passes or not, but I would feel more comfortable if we had this amendment passed.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, if ever in the history of this Congress a program of this Federal Government that needs reform cried out for more reform, it is this whole area of job training and education, employment training and literacy enhancement.

First I want to salute the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON] for their work in crafting this proposal. Our purpose is really to help those without job and without opportunity, particularly those youth. I want to first speak about the bill itself and then oppose the Owens amendment that has been presented here today.

First of all, let me just give my colleagues an example from my State of Florida. This is an article that appeared a year ago in February and it talks about job training programs. It said, with all the job training programs in Florida, my State, that we spent $1 billion, Federal and local money. "Job Training Programs Not Making the Grade" is the headline of this article. We spent $1 billion and less than 20 percent of those who entered a program completed the program. Of that, 19 percent got a job and most of those, the majority of those, who got a job got a job at minimum or just above minimum wage. A total failure if we are trying to employ people in this country.

Then just a month ago in the Washington Post, the city spent $11 million it has received through Federal job training programs. They also raised $7.3 million in local tax dollars designated for job training programs without a single person being trained.

This is a program that cries out for reform. What would the Owens amendment do in the area of summer job employment? It would maintain the status quo, the record of failure.

The main purpose of this bill in the area of summer job employment is to refocus the programs on providing comprehensive academic and occupational learning opportunities for our disadvantaged youth. I am for getting kids back into school and in addition into providing employment opportunities. That is what this bill is all about. What are those who have had experience saying about this?

The National Governors Association, the Conference of State Legislatures, and the National Association of Counties support the agreement reached on this issue that is contained in this bill and oppose a separate stand-alone summer program. They have tried it. It does not work. This is the record of failure. When this Congress asks people on welfare or disadvantaged people to go to work, we want them to have the opportunity to find a job, to learn a skill, and the Federal Government should be helping with a program that works, not with a program that is a failure. This is a record of failure, and this record cannot continue.

I urge my colleagues to defeat the Owens amendment. It destroys the intent, the purpose and the experience that we have seen that is a record of failure, and then pass this bill and give our disadvantaged, give our youth, and give the people without a job in this country the opportunity to learn a skill and to earn a living wage and to have the Government be a helping hand rather than a partner that has failed.

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, let me first address the comparison that some have made with the dedicated funding stream for dislocated adult workers to what the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS] is trying to do in his amendment. It is important, I think, to understand that yes, we do have a dedicated funding stream in the adult block grant for dislocated workers. That is certainly in keeping with the whole concept behind the Job Training Partnership Act that State and local communities be able to respond rapidly to a plant closure or to massive, large-scale type of layoffs. However, that is still part of one system, the overall adult block grant, the overall adult job training and reemployment system.

What the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS] is talking about doing here is creating a separate stand-alone program that is really contrary to the overall philosophy of the bill with respect to creating a single block grant for youth. What we are trying to do in the area of youth is to encourage young people, particularly those who are at risk of dropping out of school, so let us call them the dropout prone, we are trying to encourage them to stay in school or if they drop out from school to return to school. Therefore, with respect to emphasis on schooling, with the emphasis on academics, it is very important, in my view, to link summer youth employment to the school-based program for at-risk youth. That is why it is again all part of the same system.

□ 1130

The overall philosophy with respect to adults, and I will be happy to yield to my friend in just a moment, but the overall philosophy with adults of course is to take a work force or employment first approach, try to get those adults who can be readily reemployed in the work force back into that work force at the earliest possible date and then target intensified services to the hard to employ. Those are the folks who perhaps are welfare recipients, chronically unemployed or underemployed folks, and they are the ones who need intensive services.

So that is kind of the over arching philosophy behind our bill.

Second, let me address the concern that many of my colleagues and friends on the Democratic side of the aisle have expressed, and that is that this Congress is not going to take aggressive action in the area of juvenile crime prevention and delinquency prevention. Let me assure my colleagues that we are hard at work in our Subcommittee on Early Childhood, Youth and Families and trying to craft a bipartisan bill dealing with juvenile crime prevention, and in that regard I am working very closely with my good friend and colleague, the ranking member of the subcommittee, the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SCOTT] and others who have expressed a keen interest in this area, and we hope we can bring a bill that the House can favorably consider here to the floor in the next few weeks. That is going to be in tandem with our bill reauthorizing the Perkins Vocational Educational Act, and that, the Perkins Vocational Education Act, is going to be targeted at again those young people who are educationally disadvantaged or who are at risk of dropping out from school, and that bill is going to take an emphasis, take an approach, that combines an emphasis on strong academics with expanded vocation and technical educational opportunity for those young people.

The other point I want to make to my good friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS] before yielding is that by putting all these funds in a block grant, driving them down locally, the local communities will have 100 percent discretion on the proportion of funds that are devoted to summer employment and to year-round services respectively, and that could result in those local communities spending even more, again at their sole discretion, on the Summer Youth Employment Program than they are currently spending.

So I wanted to make that point, and I am going to yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS], my colleague and friend, and perhaps he could respond to the point I just made, which is again, if possible, under our bill for local communities to spend even more on summer youth employment than they are currently spending.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman if he was aware of the fact that the CRS figures which show the funding pattern for the youth training programs other than summer youth, which we were talking about before, which was badly needed, and the gentleman said they were badly needed, and I agree. But they have been reduced by almost three-quarters, from 676.7 million in 1993 to the present proposed funding of 126.7 million. They have been reduced steadily.

At the same time, because we came on this floor and we fought for the Summer Youth Employment Program, even though people in government, State governments, did not consider it important, they have raised the amount of funding for some youth employment. So what we are going to have is the unpopularity of the summer youth training programs year-round, resulting in not having adequate funding. So they will take the funding away from summer youth. That is the simple problem we worried about, that they are going to drain the funds from the summer youth because the discretion is going to be in the hands of people. We do not care about summer youth in our cities; they will find somewhere else to spend them in the States.

Mr. RIGGS. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I certainly care.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. RIGGS] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. RIGGS was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Chairman, let me just point out to my colleagues, and I really in this regard extend a hand across the aisle; I personally believe we cannot afford to lose, as a country, another generation of urban school-aged children. So all of our efforts, I think, should be focused on those young people again who live in the most economically disadvantaged circumstances, who are surrounded many times by a sea of poverty and joblessness, and, as my colleagues know, the other symptoms of social decay.

So I want to work with the gentleman, but I would be happy to tell the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS] that we should go together to the appropriators and make the argument that they need to look at this particular block grant, the youth opportunity employment and training grant, that is created under our bill and make that a priority for funding as they deliberate the appropriations.

Mr. OWENS. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. RIGGS. I do not believe that we should be creating a separate program. We have to provide discretion to local communities to provide summer employment opportunities that are directly linked to academic and occupational learning, as other speakers have mentioned, and local communities should be making these decisions, not the Federal Government.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to add my voice and the voice of thousands of young people from my district in support of the Owens amendment to safeguard the Summer Youth Employment Program.

For several weeks each summer, SYEP provides jobs to over 600,000 disadvantaged youth across the country, many of them in my district. Yet, H.R. 1385 jeopardizes this program and the future of our young people. Passage of the Owens amendment will provide hope to so many of our at-risk children.

I recently received a letter from Vashia Rhone, a young constituent of mine. Vashia's letter shows us the kind of impact programs like this have. She writes:

Growing up, I often felt trapped and like I had no place to go. However, something that helped me was, as I became older, I discovered places to go and things to do such as after-school programs and STEP. Believe it or not, it's true. If young people are working, they will be off the streets. If young people are working, their esteem level goes up. They begin to feel good about themselves, and they learn independence. Please consider this and represent the youth of New York City and protect their future.

My colleagues, this program does work. I urge all of you to support the Owens amendment and support SYEP. We owe it to our kids. We owe it to their future.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Owens-Martinez amendment to H.R. 1385 to separate the summer youth employment program from the disadvantaged youth block grant contained in this legislation.

Summer youth employment is a critical program in my district in San Francisco and in communities across the Nation. This program is often the first opportunity at-risk youth have to gain exposure to the ethic, the structure and the value of work. Currently, only 50 percent of the youth eligible for this program participate. If this program is included in the consolidated block grant, it is most likely less than that number would be reached by this successful program.

This is a program that works and that teaches. The welfare law makes it imperative for us to help people find and maintain work with a living wage. It is critical for young people to learn the skills necessary to be successfully employed. The Summer Youth Program reaches out to at-risk young people to teach them this and more.

For these reasons, it is essential that the Summer Youth Employment Program be maintained as a separate program, maintained as a required rather than allowable activity and receive a separate appropriation consistent with current funding.

I urge my colleagues to support the Owens-Martinez amendment and show your commitment to a successful job training opportunity for at-risk youth.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

PROCEDURE FOR CONSIDERATION OF AMENDMENTS TO CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I have asked to address the House for the purposes of making an announcement about next week's budget debate which concerns every Member of the House.

Mr. Chairman, the Committee on the Budget expects to order the budget resolution reported later today, and copies of that resolution approved by that committee will be available for review in the office of the Committee on the Budget.

The Committee on Rules is planning to meet on Monday, May 19, to grant a rule which will limit the kind of amendments offered to the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1998. Members are advised, strongly advised to submit only amendments in the nature of a substitute which provide for a balanced budget no later than 2002. If they are not balanced, they will not be made in order on this floor.

Any Member who is contemplating an amendment to the budget resolution should file 55 copies and an explanation by noon on Monday, May 19, to the office of the Committee on Rules in room

312, up above. In addition, Members should also print their amendments in the amendment section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday, May 19.

I am informed that we will have pro forma sessions on both Saturday and Sunday so that the budget will be available to those of my colleagues that want to work on it over the week-end.

□ 1200

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman of the Committee on Rules for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I am very happy that the gentleman made the announcement. Am I clear that only amendments in the nature of a substitute will be honored by the Committee on Rules?

Mr. SOLOMON. That is correct. All of the amendments must be in the nature of a substitute, and they must be balanced by the year 2002.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Right. And I hope the chairman is going to give adequate time for these amendments in the nature of a substitute to be debated on the floor of the House.

Mr. SOLOMON. The gentleman is one of my closest advisers, and I will consult with him and we will work this out, I am sure.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Chairman, also, I would ask the gentleman, would the CBO be able to score all these amendments in the nature of a substitute in time?

Mr. SOLOMON. Yes, they would. The CBO is available, and they will be working overtime to assist the Members in making sure that their substitutes are scored by CBO.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman of the Committee on Rules.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will rise informally.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATHAM) assumed the Chair.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its Clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 1469. An act making emergency supplemental appropriations for recovery from natural disasters, and for overseas peacekeeping efforts, including those in Bosnia, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1997, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 1469) "An act making emergency supplemental appropriations for recovery from natural disasters, and for overseas peacekeeping efforts, including those in Bosnia, for the
