DEPARTMENTS OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT, AND INDEPENDENT AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1998

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. LEWIS OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer two amendments, and I ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate being recognized. I will not take the entire 5 minutes. These two amendments are non-controversial and supported by the Members from the areas that are affected.

The first amendment adds $4 million to VA's construction major projects account for a columbarium at the National Memorial Cemetery in Arizona.

The bill already includes the requested $9.1 million for grave site development and improvements of this construction project at the cemetery.

The second amendment adds $1.5 million to VA's construction minor projects account for expansion of the existing National Cemetery at Mobile, AL. This will permit the development of 10 acres of city-owned land for burial of veterans in the Mobile area.

These two additions are offset by a reduction in the increase recommended by the committee for the grants for construction of State extended care facilities account. The committee recommended an increase $19 million above the 1998 budget request for this account. The amendment changes the increase in that appropriations to $13.5 million above the request.

Mr. Chairman, I urge the Members to support the amendments.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has discussed these amendments with me, and we have no objection to them.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS].

The amendments were agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

CONSTRUCTION, MINOR PROJECTS

For constructing, altering, extending, and improving any of the facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the Department of Veterans Affairs, including planning, architectural and engineering services, maintenance or guarantee period services costs associated with equipment guarantees provided under the project, services of claims analysts, offsite utility and storm drainage system construction costs, and site acquisition, or for any of the purposes set forth in sections 316, 2404, 2406, 8102, 8103, 8106, 8108, 8109, 8110, and 8122 of title 38, United States Code, where the estimated cost of a project is less than $4,000,000; $175,000,000, to remain available until expended, along with unobligated balances of previous "Construction, minor projects" appropriations which are hereby made available for any project where the estimated cost is less than $4,000,000: Provided, That funds in this account shall be available for (1) repairs to any of the non-medical facilities under the jurisdiction or for the use of the Department which are necessary because of loss or damage caused by any natural disaster or catastrophe, and (2) temporary measures necessary to prevent or to minimize further loss by such causes.

further, That the Secretary shall determine the cost of administration for fiscal year 1998, which is properly allocable to the provision of each insurance program and to the provision of any total disability income insurance included in such insurance program.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SOLOMON

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment made in order under the rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

SEC. 108. (a) This section is enacted contingent on the enactment of legislation establishing the Medical Collections Fund.

(b) If the Secretary of Veterans Affairs determines that the total amount to be recovered for fiscal year 1998 for deposit to the Medical Collections Fund under the provisions of the legislation establishing such Fund will be less than the amount contained in the latest Congressional Budget Office baseline estimate (computed under section 257 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985) for the amount of such recoveries for that fiscal year by at least $25,000,000, the Secretary shall promptly certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount of the shortfall (as estimated by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs) that is in excess of $25,000,000. Upon receipt of such a certification, the Secretary of the Treasury shall, not later than 30 days after receiving the certification, deposit in the Medical Collections Fund, from any unobligated amounts in the Treasury, an amount equal to the amount certified by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

(c) If a deposit is made under subsection (b) and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs subsequently determines that the actual amount recovered for fiscal year 1998 for deposit to the Medical Collections Fund—

(1) is greater than the amount estimated by the Secretary that was used for purposes of the certification by the Secretary under subsection (b), the Secretary shall pay into the General Fund of the Treasury, from amounts available for medical care, an amount equal to the difference between the amount actually recovered and the amount so estimated (but not in excess of the amount of the deposit under subsection (b) pursuant to such certification); or

(2) is less than the amount estimated by the Secretary that was used for purposes of the certification by the Secretary under subsection (b), the Secretary shall promptly certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount of the shortfall.

(d) Upon receipt of a certification from the Secretary of Veterans Affairs under subsection (c)(2), the Secretary of the Treasury shall, not later than 30 days after receiving the certification, deposit in the Medical Collections Fund, from any unobligated amounts in the Treasury, an amount equal to the amount certified by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, let me just say that I offer this amendment on behalf of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN] and myself. And let me, from the bottom of my heart, Mr. Chairman, commend the work of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], the chairman, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], the ranking member, and their entire Subcommittee on VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies and staff for carefully crafting a great bill and attracting bipartisan support to it. These two gentlemen, in particular, have long been strong supporters of the veterans of this Nation and particularly of our veterans' medical care delivery system, and I commend them for it. I hate to think where we would be without the leadership of both of these gentlemen.

I rise simply to build on what they have done and to offer a critically important amendment that protects the medical care dollars for our Nation's veterans.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to have the resounding support of every major veterans service organization in this country and the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs for this amendment that will guarantee a significant increase in VA health care funding, but more importantly, keep that funding from being decreased.

The American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans, Vietnam Veterans of America, the Paralyzed Veterans of America, and the Blinded Veterans Association all have made it very clear that they are very uneasy about the existing appropriations for VA medical care and support this amendment that I am offering today.

Mr. Chairman, I include for the RECORD the following:

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
Washington, D.C., July 14, 1997.

Hon. GERALD SOLOMON,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE SOLOMON: The American Legion fully supports your amendment to the FY 1998 VA, HUD and Independent Agencies appropriations bill which would ensure supplemental funding for VA health care in the event VA's efforts to collect and retain third-party receipts falls more than $25 million short of the $604 million projected by the Congressional Budget Office.

Under current VA rules, regulations and procedures, The American Legion questions VA's ability to recover the recommended $604 million in third-party reimbursements as outlined in the 1997 Budget Resolution. Each year, service connected veterans requiring medical care must fight to get its share of discretionary dollars. Your amendment will greatly assist VA in meeting its obligation to provide veterans the necessary medical services they need as a result of injury or illness. Without this amendment, VA may be forced to further scale back health care services and reduce staffing levels; ultimately forcing VA to ration health care to service-connected and other eligible veterans.

Once again, The American Legion fully supports your amendment to provide supplemental funding for VA health care in the event VA's efforts to collect and retain third-party receipts falls more than $25 million short of the $604 million projected by the Congressional Budget Office. As always, your continued leadership and commitment to veterans and their families is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

STEVE A. ROBERTSON,
Director,
National Legislative Commission.

Mr. Chairman, the necessary increase appropriated for VA hospitals is entirely dependent on the collection of outside insurance payments. In other words, VA health care is only directly funded at $16.9 billion, and that is an actual decrease from last year, and depends on an estimate by the CBO that the VA will collect and retain more than $600 million from veterans who pay for their care with private, third-party insurance.

Mr. Chairman, I have supported the collection of those dollars for the VA since my days as the ranking member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs. And I am very pleased now that we have this written into the law and excited that we are finally providing this sort of incentive to the VA to help fund these vital medical services.

And again, that is why I commend both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] because of their limitations that they have with their 602(b) allocations spread over all of these myriad of Departments like the Veterans Affairs Department, the Housing and all of the independent agencies, that is one of the most difficult jobs in this Congress. And that is why I offer the amendment today, because we cannot leave to chance our solemn commitment and vow to provide and maintain adequate health care for those who have served our Nation in uniform.

We owe it to them to guarantee that the budget for the VA medical care will be maintained even in the face of the inability of the VA to collect such outside payments. That is why the amendment that I am offering that was offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN], sitting over here next to me, in the Committee on Appropriations is so very, very important. It implements and it pays for fail-safe language that will ensure the VA receives at least, and this is the important part, at least $579 million on top of the $16.9 billion appropriated no matter what the VA collects. That means that this amendment would guarantee nearly $17.6 billion for VA medical care. And that is the level of funding that we needed to get.

If my colleagues do not think this guarantee is necessary, just consider this: The VA collected outside payments of about $573 million in fiscal year 1995, $573 million; $557 million in 1996, that was going down; and $533 million is estimated for 1997, and that is going down.

So we can see what is happening, that these funds from third-party collections are shrinking. That is right, their collections have decreased over the last 3 years. And just to put this in more perspective, the VA predicted that they would collect $736 million initially for 1997, yet they only brought in $533 million. That is the difference, and that is why the need for this amendment.

I ask my colleagues, how can we count on them to collect $604 million next year? The truth is we just cannot.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. SOLOMON was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, should we not insist on a guaranteed amount that will not jeopardize the VA's ability to deliver at least the same level of health care as last year?

This amendment I am proposing would quite simply direct the Treasury to cover any shortfall in the VA's collection of payments of more than $25 million. In other words, if the VA collects about what they have over the last few years about $550 million on average, the Treasury would transfer $29 million from unobligated funds to the VA medical care account.

However, if the VA does collect more than this $579 million threshold, let us say $590 million, then they quite simply keep it and we pay nothing additionally out of the Treasury. This safeguard builds on our willingness to try new reforms to enhance VA health care, but provides much needed reassurances to our veterans that we are not going to leave them high and dry should these reforms not live up to the expectations.

I urge my colleagues to vote yes on the Solomon-Neumann amendment and send our veterans, the administration, and the Senate a very strong message that the House is committed to guaranteeing these adequate funding levels, at least what we have been spending over the last year. That is terribly, terribly important.

And again, in closing, let me just again praise the work of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], the chairman, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], the ranking member, and their committee and their staff, because they do great work for the veterans of this Nation. And being a veteran myself, I commend them for it and I thank the gentlemen for their time.

Mr. NEUMANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

I rise to support this amendment. The amendment is really about the third-party payor system, which under a bill passed previously through the House, the veterans health care agencies would be allowed to collect this money.

What this amendment does is it protects the veterans that in the event the organization in Washington that estimated how much money is going to come in, in the event that organization, albeit a very fine organization, CBO, if they have made an error in the projections, this would simply guarantee the veterans that they would get at least all but $25 million of what was projected by CBO under this agreement.

That is really what this is all about. It is simply guaranteeing our veterans organizations that health care will be available for them as it has been in the past and guaranteeing the level of funding to make sure that that can really happen.

I have with me some letters and I would just like to read a few of the inserts out of these letters. The first one is from the American Legion.

The American Legion fully supports your amendment to fiscal year 1998 VA/HUD and Independent Agencies appropriations bill, which would ensure supplemental funding for VA health care.

It goes on to say,

The Legion fully supports your amendment to provide supplemental funding for VA health care in the event the VA efforts to collect and retain third party receipts falls more than $25 million short of the $604 million projected by the Congressional Budget Office.

And that really is what this is all about.

It is simply a guarantee that in the event CBO has misestimated the numbers, that they will still receive the funding necessary to provide health care to our veterans.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEUMANN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I just want to commend the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN] because, when he arrived here, joined forces with people like me that have been fighting for the balanced budget over all these years and he has been such a great help. One of the reasons that we are on that glide path and we are going to get this balanced budget is because of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN]. I wanted everyone to know, especially the veterans' families and population out there that the gentleman from Wisconsin at all times has stood up for the veterans of this Nation because when we have to balance the budget, it is not easy, we have to cut someplace. With his help, we have been able to maintain that funding. I just wanted to commend him for it. The gentleman truly is a friend of the veterans, and veterans like me appreciate that.

Mr. NEUMANN. I thank the gentleman. I very much appreciate the work of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Rules as well as the chairman of our committee and the ranking minority member for the effort that has gone into this. I would add that in view of the overall bill, this is a relatively minor adjustment, but it is very important to the veterans of our Nation. That is why this amendment is being proposed.

There are other groups of veterans that are supporting this, and it is one right after the next, Disabled American Veterans; again I quote:

On behalf of the more than 1 million members of the Disabled American Veterans, I wish to express our appreciation and support for your amendment.

Veterans of Foreign Wars; again I quote:

This is written to express the strong support and appreciation of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for the amendment.

All our veterans are asking is to be guaranteed that the CBO numbers are within reason, accurate so that they can plan accordingly to provide appropriate health care.

Paralyzed Veterans of America; again I quote:

On behalf of the Paralyzed Veterans of America, I am writing to express our strong support for your amendment.

Blinded Veterans Association:

On behalf of the Blinded Veterans Association, a federally chartered veterans service, I just want to express our strong support for your amendment.

Vietnam Veterans of America, I have got neighbors that are Vietnam veterans where I live; again I quote:

On behalf of the membership of the Vietnam Veterans of America, I am pleased to support your amendment to fiscal year 1998 VA/HUD.

The bottom line is the veterans groups want to be assured that the health care that they have been promised is available to them. All we are doing in this amendment is making sure that the funding level that has been estimated by CBO actually comes to fruition. If there are more funds available, that is fine; it does not cost the budget anything. But if it would for some reason be that CBO has misestimated these numbers, our veterans will still be cared for in an appropriate way.

To me, veterans should receive the highest priority in this Nation. When we look at all the spending that this Government does, I think we need to start with the veterans, who have served this country so well when we consider where the dollars go.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, many Members probably do not realize it, but the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] and I have a number of things in common. Among them, before becoming involved in government, we were insurance professionals. I can remember years ago spending a lot of time in the health and life insurance field dealing with this very question. A situation where veterans had private medical coverage, and were getting services at hospitals; and the money was not directly reimbursed for VA medical care purposes and they used it within that pool of funding. To me, that process seemed a bit ridiculous. In the time I have been in the Congress the question has been raised many fold, but indeed it has never been raised quite so effectively as it has been this year.

I must say that I do have some reservation about this amendment. While I intend to support it, I nonetheless have some reservation. I have a reservation only because we have language within the reconciliation process where a conference is going on with the other body right now that is likely to statutorily extend this reimbursement process for a number of years. With that reconciliation opportunity, it seems to me that it may be that the veterans service organizations are a bit anxious here. Sometimes they ask their supporters to move a little quicker than they really might like.

For example, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN], who has done such a fabulous job on this idea, got a commitment from the full committee chairman that, if some way reconciliation fell apart on this matter, that we would return to it in conference on our bill, essentially to try to keep the pressure on those who are dealing with reconciliation.

My concern that I would suggest to the VSO's is that they could be taking pressure off of that reconciliation process by this amendment. I hope that that is not the case but it could be. I think it would have been smarter in many ways to wait until later in our process, but frankly oftentimes we find that our friends out there who represent organizations get very anxious and really do not totally have a handle on this complicated process. In the meantime, the chairman of the Committee on Rules, taking up their concern on behalf of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN], has indeed brought the issue to us in this form.

I am not sure why the House would want to turn it down. It will cause us to discuss it in conference. I would certainly suggest that, from my point of view, no one who is involved in reconciliation presumed this is the way to get off of that hook. We expect them to act positively, and I am going to be strongly urging them to act positively.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise just to bring to the attention of the House a little further discussion relative to the reservations that were just expressed by the chairman of the subcommittee. By the same token, I have reservations because this matter was discussed fully at the full committee level. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN] presented the amendment at that time and I think did an excellent job of presenting the problem that veterans have faced as a result of the necessity for such a motion.

After a full discussion at the full committee level, assurance was given that in the event that the reconciliation package did not provide the type of fail-safe preservation that the veterans needed, that the Committee on Appropriations would revisit this matter and see that the veterans were made whole. Subsequently, and based upon the chairman's representation in that respect, the full committee then voted down that particular amendment at that time.

I think all of us have to realize that this problem would not have arisen had we taken care of this matter in the budget agreement that was passed here by the House. I voted against the budget agreement which was passed by the House. One of the reasons I voted against it was because all of those who voted for it knew that that bill cut the veterans account by $2.2 billion. I think it was recognized by anyone voting for it that at some time or other the chickens would come home to roost and this matter would have to be reconciled. Of course this amendment gives people the right to have it both ways. They voted for the budget that cut veterans by $2.2 billion and by this amendment they cover themselves to try and protect them in the event that there is a shortfall.

Mr. NEUMANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STOKES. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. NEUMANN. In the full committee, our biggest problem that we had after we left full committee and entered into further discussions on it, if reconciliation passes and contains these provisions, I do not think there is anyone that has a problem in conference with eliminating this if it is already done in reconciliation at that point. But the problem we had is that, if it was not in either the House bill or the Senate bill and reconciliation failed, then the question would come up as to whether or not it would be appropriate in the conference committee to add something that was in neither the House version nor the Senate version. That is the reason we brought it here to the floor.

Again I express my respect and support for the ranking minority member of this committee.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I recognize and do not quarrel with the fact that the gentleman was trying to arrive at a solution to a potential problem in the future. I am just saying that I think when this budget was passed by the House, with the cut being in it, we should have all recognized, at least I recognized, that this problem was going to come up at that time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of the amendment being offered by my colleague from New York, the chairman of the Rules Committee. This amendment would provide a much needed safety net for veterans health care should the need arise in the future.

Under the current balanced budget agreement, VA health care appropriations are frozen over the next several years rather than increasing, as they have traditionally done. In return, the VA will be allowed to collect and retain third party insurance and Medicare payments.

The funds collected from these payments in theory will make up for those funds that would have resulted from future budget increases. The CBO estimates that $604 million would be collected in this manner.

This amendment would guarantee the VA an additional $579 million in the event that the third party collection program is not as successful as envisioned. It would take effect if the third party collections fell more than $25 million short of the CBO projection.

In terms of cost, this amendment would require $14 million to implement. The funds for this would come from the EPA budget, while leaving the funding for that program well over the President's request.

Mr. Chairman, the health of our Nation's veterans is far too important to rely on unproven and untested national programs. Veterans benefits are true entitlements; they were earned by sacrifice and blood. This amendment is supported by our Nation's veterans organizations and is a welcome step toward correcting a dangerously low health care appropriation.

Accordingly, I urge all of my colleagues to join in supporting Representative SOLOMON's amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SENSENBRENNER

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Point of order is reserved. The Clerk will report the amendment.

Page 61, line 13, insert "(reduced by $100,000,000)" after "$5,426,500,000".

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment reduces the amount for human space flight by $100 million to eliminate the request that has been made by someone for Russian program assurance in the Space Station Program. The $100 million was not requested either by NASA or by the administration, but suddenly appeared in the appropriation bill as a result of some negotiations that I do not think we really have gotten the full explanation for.

Let me say that if this amendment is adopted, NASA will get every penny for the space station that it has requested. The amendment allows for the full funding of the space station, and I think that NASA ought to be held accountable for the request that it has made and to build the space station according to the budget line that it has announced for a number of years.

The real shame that has occurred during the debate on this appropriation bill, in my opinion, is that some people have alleged that reducing the line for Russian program assurance places the space station in jeopardy.

Let me say that I have consistently supported fully funding the space station since day one. That continues to be my position. I believe we need a space station led by the United States and that the space station design that NASA has been with for the last 3½ years is a good one. We ought to fund it, we ought to build it, and we ought to put it in orbit.

On the other hand, I am very concerned that money in the reserves for the space station are being used to finance patching up failures of the Russian Government to do what it agreed to do, and by having $100 million extra in the space station account we are just encouraging the Russians to continue to delay and default because they know that the American taxpayer will end up picking up the tab for it.

I am opposed to it. I think that the majority of the American people are opposed to it. This is a question of accountability of NASA. NASA should tell the Congress and tell the American public exactly how much the agreement that they made with the Russians is costing the American taxpayer. Giving them $100 million more in Russian program assurance will just delay that day of reckoning.

I would urge the adoption of this amendment that just is a straight reduction of the $100 million, will be used to reduce the deficit if there is a lockbox amendment that ends up being approved. I think that this is prudent policy, and it also will make NASA accountable for the money that it spends.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, first let me withdraw my point of order. This is a different amendment than I anticipated.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge Members as well as those in Members' offices who might be watching this discussion to focus on this amendment with great care. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] and I share in common a great interest in our work in space. We also have had many a discussion and share both interest and concern about international space station and that international partnership that has been formed with the United States and a number of our allies regarding our work in space. It is my concern that there are economic difficulties relative to some in that partnership and especially the Russian part of that partnership. Having expressed that concern in many a forum, I nonetheless suggest that this amendment which would affect $100 million relative to the Russian program for assurance could very well have a serious impact upon that partnership.

Indeed, we are attempting to make sure that we continue with a foundation of international partnership in a solid way that allows space station to progress on a schedule and calendar that will assure, indeed, its success. I am most concerned that this action could itself impact dramatically the partnership and, in turn, could affect the schedule for the station.

Mr. Chairman, I would love to hear from the Science Committee. If all those things should occur, I would love to hear from the committee what their game plan is at the other end in terms of assuring station success.

Now further, it is my view that if this partnership should unravel because of some untoward action, and indeed we could find ourselves in a circumstance where station is not just delayed, station could be undermined itself, and that in turn could have a horrendous impact upon NASA's work.

With all those things in mind, I know the membership is most sensitive about just how successful we are being these days in space. None of us would have asked for a Mir accident, the tragedy that we have experienced there. At the same time, all of us who focused on that accident know that as a result of that we have learned a great deal. We could not have asked for a more productive and valuable experiment in terms of that kind of difficulty and potential in space.

None of us could be more excited than I am about the mission to Mars and the tremendous message it sends to the world about America's future in space. But, indeed, it is very important that we not unilaterally take some untoward action that could indeed undermine the pathway we are on at this point in time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, just a couple of questions. If the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] can tell the membership of the House, did the administration request this $100 million for NASA program assurance?

Mr. LEWIS of California. President Clinton's administration did not.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Did NASA, which is part of the administration, request the $100 million for Russian program assurance?

Mr. LEWIS of California. NASA does tell me that the administration does support the $100 million in their statement of administration policy on this bill. Frankly, I get different messages from different locations. But NASA is supporting that policy position.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. So the President did not request it, but NASA is supporting the $100 million. I think the administration ought to get its act together and hope the amendment being adopted will help them do that.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I might suggest that the gentleman and I are in agreement on his last statement. But frankly, where we do the coordinating is maybe the disagreement here. I frankly have the highest level of confidence in the work that is being done by NASA at this moment, and, indeed, it seems to me if we find ourselves in a situation where we need to review this further, we certainly could readdress the question at conference.

In the meantime, at this point I would urge the Members to be most cautious about dealing with a small figure in the total circumstance of our entire budget but a very sizeable figure in terms of flexibility we need in dealing with space station, and the problems with this partnership. Indeed, this is an item that is ahead of its time. I urge the Members to vote "no" on the amendment.

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Chairman, I intended to speak on my opposition to the Rohrabacher-Roemer amendment. This amendment was promoted to the members of this body in a letter headlined "If You Won't Kill It, Chill It." What the sponsors of this amendment fail to remember is that earlier in this session, we had a referendum on the international space station. It was proposed by my good friend from Indiana. His amendment to kill the space station was soundly rejected. This body has made a commitment to the space station. We have done so, I believe, because we realize the space station is the next step for scientific and technological discoveries.

While we debate this issue on the floor of the House today, the Pathfinder is sending us new and valuable information about Mars. I am sure we all agree the Pathfinder has been a complete success so far. America's fascination with space has been rekindled. Internet sites that posted pictures from the mission have been overwhelmed by people who wanted to see them. That fascination encourages students to work harder and scientists to be daring in finding the solutions that have eluded mankind here on Earth.

And while we debate this issue on the floor of the House today, the Space Shuttle Columbia orbits the Earth on a 16-day scientific mission. Space is the future of research and development of new technologies.

We all know the problems of the Russian economy. We know why there are delays on the delivery of their flight hardware. None of us like having to make these contingency plans. But bear in mind, the delays caused by Russia's inability to make good on their commitments cost us money, as well. Our Russian Program Assurance funds are not a blank check. They are, in fact, a prudent attempt to keep the project moving forward at a point when over 200,000 pounds of flight hardware has already been constructed. NASA tells us that waiting until the Russians are able to deliver the Service Module will cost the U.S. $300 million. That would be the result of the passage of this amendment—more costs and longer delays.

We have an interim control module under development and other Step 1 contingency plans in the works. The passage of this amendment would end production on the ICM and many of the contingencies, placing the space station and our entire investment thus far on the fragile shoulders of Russia.

Mr. Speaker, I'm not willing to do that. It doesn't make sense.

Finally, this amendment takes money from one NASA account and places it into another—and does so against NASA's wishes. There is no budget savings involved. This is a strike at the very heart of our commitment to the international space station. That's what is on the line when you cast your vote.

We didn't kill the space station back in April. In fact, we demonstrated strong, bipartisan support. And now my colleagues ask us to chill the space station? I would encourage my colleagues to keep progress on the space station red hot.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that it is appropriate to cut the funding of NASA. It is true that the members of the Appropriations Committee saw the need to include additional funding for NASA's Human Space Flight, $100 million, for Russian Program Assurance [RPA], and Science, Aeronautics and Technology, $48 million programs. We must keep in mind that even though this may seem to be a significant addition, the budget of NASA over the last few years has been systematically cut. However, NASA has been able to continue forward with its involvement and leadership in the international space station.

As a Step 1 contingency activity do to the Russian Service Module delay, the U.S. Naval Research Laboratory is constructing the Interim Control Module [ICM] of the space station. Without these funds for fiscal year 1998, NASA would be forced to terminate the activity which could jeopardize the entire international space station international effort. It would place the entire international team in a position of having to solely depend on the Russian delivery of the service module. The valuable research that will result from the international space station would be in seriously jeopardy.

Just think of the Space Shuttle Columbia that lifted off on the first of this month and is currently flying over our heads even as we speak. This is a good first step to the many scientific experiments that will take place on the international space station. The experiments that are currently taking place, right now, on the manned space shuttle will benefit every single one of us here on Earth. The international space station will allow for even greater breakthroughs via scientific experiments in space. Human space flight if critical to performing necessary and beneficial research experiments in space and should be increasingly funded. When the Space Shuttle Columbia lands successfully today, the crew will have completed valuable scientific experiments and research that benefits everyone. The international space station promises to be ever more valuable to each and every one of us here on Earth.

By now, everyone is familiar with the successful landing of the Pathfinder Explorer on Mars. We have all seen the fantastic pictures of the geological feature and rocks on the red planet. Would this be possible if we did not adequately fund NASA—no. The national and international excitement that this mission has generated has been phenomenal. It is estimated that NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory web site, which displays pictures from Mars, will break the record for numbers of individuals to log into a specific web site. Funding of NASA is crucial to our continued leadership in space. Funding of the Russian Program Assurance is crucial to the continued international efforts of the international space station.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 184, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] will be postponed.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, on page 57, line 21, I have an amendment. Have we read to that point in the bill yet?

The CHAIRMAN. The reading has progressed beyond that point.

Mr. VENTO. This is in the same title.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was simply stating an answer to the gentleman's question.

Mr. VENTO. Are we on page 61, line 13?

The CHAIRMAN. The human space flight paragraph is pending.

Mr. VENTO. I have an amendment at the desk that amends that as well as a previous line in the bill. Is this amendment in order at this time, Mr. Chairman? It has been printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Only by unanimous consent.

Mr. VENTO. I ask unanimous consent to offer this amendment in this title, Mr. Chairman, in that it amends this particular provision.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has the time under his reservation to the unanimous-consent request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] controls the time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] yield?

The CHAIRMAN. There is a unanimous-consent request pending before the House. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] can withdraw his unanimous-consent request for the time being.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my unanimous-consent request.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to submit a statement in support of the Solomon amendment that was taken up in title I, and ask that my statement be made part of the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I renew my unanimous-consent request.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] reserves the right to object, and controls the time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I did submit this amendment for the RECORD yesterday. What it seeks to do is to reduce funding for the manned space program and transfer some money in the FEMA emergency food and shelter program.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman that we have received encouragement on both sides of the aisle from our leadership to proceed as rapidly as possible, and indeed, we have proceeded very rapidly this morning. We have two other bills that need to be completed by Thursday. Because of that, I would have to object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

The Clerk will read.

SCIENCE, AERONAUTICS AND TECHNOLOGY

For necessary expenses, not otherwise provided for, in the conduct and support of science, aeronautics and technology research and development activities, including research, development, operations, and services; maintenance; construction of facilities including repair, rehabilitation, and modification of real and personal property, and acquisition or condemnation of real property, as authorized by law; space flight, spacecraft control and communications activities including operations, production, and services; and purchase, lease, charter, maintenance and operation of mission and administrative aircraft, $5,690,000,000, to remain available until September 30, 1999.

MISSION SUPPORT

human space flight programs and science, aeronautical, and technology programs, including research operations and support; space communications activities including operations, production and services; maintenance; construction of facilities including repair, rehabilitation, and modification of facilities, minor construction of new facilities and additions to existing facilities, facility planning and design, environmental compliance and restoration, and acquisition or condemnation of real property, as authorized by law; program management; personnel and related costs, including uniforms or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901-5902; travel expenses; purchase, lease, charter, maintenance, and operation of mission and administrative aircraft; not to exceed $35,000 for official reception and representation expenses; and purchase (not to exceed 33 for replacement only) and hire of passenger motor vehicles; $2,513,200,000, to remain available until September 30, 1999.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

For necessary expenses of the Office of Inspector General in carrying out the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended, $18,300,000.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS (INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for "Human space flight", "Science, aeronautics and technology", or "Mission support" by this appropriations Act, when any activity has been initiated by the incurrence of obligations for construction of facilities as authorized by law, such amount available for such activity shall remain available until expended. This provision does not apply to the amounts appropriated in "Mission support" pursuant to the authorization for repair, rehabilitation and modification of facilities, minor construction of new facilities and additions to existing facilities, and facility planning and design.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to engage the gentleman in a colloquy.

Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations and I reached an agreement on the NASA transfer authority contained in H.R. 2158 for the International Space Station which allows the NASA administrator to transfer up to $150 million from the science, aeronautics, and technology account and the mission support account to the International Space Station Program. This authority is contained on page 64, lines 8 through 22 of the Union Calendar bill.

I agreed not to raise a point of order against the transfer authority in exchange for a commitment by the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] that any conference report to H.R. 2158 containing transfer authority language would require NASA to obtain approval from both the House Committee on Science, in addition to approval from the Committee on Appropriations.

This agreement is critical to protect the oversight responsibilities of the authorization committee, and I thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies for his assurances that will require the NASA administrator to formally request, justify, and obtain prior approval from the Committee on Science before utilizing the transfer authority contained in this legislation.

In this way, the committees will be able to hold NASA accountable for any decision to transfer funds into the space station account. Is it the distinguished subcommittee chairman's commitment, based upon our agreement, not to support any conference report for H.R. 2158 which contains NASA transfer authority unless it also includes report language requiring prior approval, on a case-by-case basis, by the Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on Science of any transfers by NASA?

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, let me respond to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER]. Based upon our agreement, it is my intention to encourage the conference to have report language that involves such oversight of any transfer responsibility. I expect I will be successful with that effort.

The gentleman has my assurances that the conference on H.R. 2158 will contain the language, insofar as I can convince the entire conference. I will be very surprised if they are not responsive.

In addition, I feel the gentleman should know that with this right does go our responsibility to deal in an expeditious manner on any agency request, and ask that the gentleman give me his assurance that he will deal with any such transfer request quickly.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman does have my assurance of that. I thank the gentleman from California. I appreciate the new requirement that both the House appropriators and authorizers for NASA must improve future transfers.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to indicate my own support for the position that the gentleman has taken with regard to the transfer authority. I also appreciate the fact that he has reached agreement with the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], and I certainly will do everything that I can to help implement the agreement that has been reached.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. I thank the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, there will be a vote on this floor on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] on the amendment that he was kind enough to offer on my behalf a few moments ago. I hope my colleagues would look at this very closely.

It is the hope where authorizers who have spent a lot of time trying to determine priorities for America's space program were ignored, and basically one appropriator was able to use his power to change the priorities; where I have the greatest respect for the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], we have a disagreement on what that priority should be in this particular case. I hope those people would stand up for a system that works and a system that is responsible; that is, with the authorizers as part of the process, and support the Rohrabacher amendment when it comes to a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for "Human space flight", "Science, aeronautics and technology", or "Mission support" by this appropriations Act, the amounts appropriated for construction of facilities shall remain available until September 30, 2000.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for "Mission support" and "Office of Inspector General", amounts made available by this Act for personnel and related costs and travel expenses of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall remain available until September 30, 1998 and may be used to enter into contracts for training, investigations, costs associated with personnel relocation, and for other services, to be provided during the next fiscal year.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I do this for the purpose of entering into a colloquy with the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations, if the gentleman is willing.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of California. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. I would be happy to, if the gentleman makes sure I know the subjects.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, this has to do with the funding which the bill provides for the United States-Mexico Foundation for Science.

Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of engaging in a colloquy with my good friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], and chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee. I want to commend the chairman for including in this legislation the small sum of $1 million each from the National Science Foundation, the Environmental Protection Agency, and NASA for the United States-Mexico Foundation for Science. The foundation funds Mexican and American researchers on projects of mutual interest and benefit, and has received support from the two governments since 1991.

I might interject that the Mexican government has been very supportive and has indicated the desire to contribute considerably more money than the United States. Government has at this point.

I would like to further clarify the chairman's intent regarding the interaction of these three agencies with the foundation. My experience over the past 6 years has been that certain Federal agencies have been more inclined to develop new programs for funding United States-Mexico cooperation, rather than utilizing this existing foundation. I would attribute these tendencies, I hope not unjustly, to typical bureaucratic self-protection.

Is it the chairman's intention to encourage these agencies to provide financial support to the foundation and to take advantage of the foundation's proven track record for developing and supporting joint research agendas between the United States and Mexico?

Mr. LEWIS of California. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Chairman, I appreciate my colleague having this colloquy regarding the United States-Mexico Foundation and our attempt to provide some funding flows for its work.

Mr. Chairman, $1 million is provided in the bill from each of the areas of the bill's responsibility that the gentleman has mentioned: EPA, NASA, and NSF. It is absolutely my intention to see that these funds flow to the foundation in order to coordinate these efforts.

The gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] has been most effective in encouraging this kind of work, helping us better to deal with problems that we have along the United States-Mexican border. There is no question that this sort of prioritization is long past due. It is my intention to work closely with the gentleman to make sure these agencies work in a cooperative manner.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman very much for his clarification and continued support. I hope the message will penetrate down to the lowest levels of the bureaucracy.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows.

Upon the determination by the Administrator that such action is necessary, the Administrator may, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, transfer not to exceed $150,000,000 of funds made available in this Act to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for "Science, aeronautics and technology" and "Mission support" to "Human space flight" for the International Space Station program, to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes, and for the same time period, as the appropriation to which transferred: Provided, That such authority may not be used unless for higher priority items than those for which originally appropriated: Provided further, That the Administrator shall notify the Congress promptly of all transfers made pursuant to this authority.

NATIONAL CREDIT UNION ADMINISTRATION
CENTRAL LIQUIDITY FACILITY

During fiscal year 1998, gross obligations of the Central Liquidity Facility for the principal amount of new direct loans to member credit unions, as authorized by the National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility Act (12 U.S.C. 1795), shall not exceed $600,000,000: Provided, That administrative expenses of the Central Liquidity Facility in fiscal year 1998 shall not exceed $203,000.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION
RESEARCH AND RELATED ACTIVITIES

For necessary expenses in carrying out the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1861-1875), and the Act to establish a National Medal of Science (42 U.S.C. 1880-1881); services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; maintenance and operation of aircraft and purchase of flight services for research support; acquisition of aircraft; $2,537,700,000, of which not to exceed $228,530,000 shall remain available until expended for Polar research and operations support, and for reimbursement to other Federal agencies for operational and science support and logistical and other related activities for the United States Antarctic program; the balance to remain available until September 30, 1999: Provided, That receipts for scientific support services and materials furnished by the National Research Centers and other National Science Foundation supported research facilities may be credited to this appropriation: Provided further, That to the extent that the amount appropriated is less than the total amount authorized to be appropriated for included program activities, all amounts, including floors and ceilings, specified in the authorizing Act for those program activities or their subactivities shall be reduced proportionally.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. LEWIS OF

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Amendment offered by Mr. LEWIS of California:

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I believe my colleagues on both sides of the aisle know that there are few Members who have more support and admiration for the work of the National Science Foundation. It is reflected not only in our work on the floor but in the work of our subcommittee as well.

But from time to time even the best of our agencies find themselves going astray. And it was not very long ago that just such a misstep or misdirection took place at NSF in the application process for grants that are part of their responsibility.

It was my colleague the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] from the other side of the aisle who brought this matter to our attention. And indeed this is not a partisan consideration but a concern by a number of Members on both sides of the aisle.

The purpose of this amendment is to address a problem that developed when a grant, as it went forward, caused a cross-section of academics to address themselves to some 200 districts across the country, essentially going into communities asking community leaders why they had not considered running against the person who was in office, regardless of party affiliation—Democrat or Republican—extending probes that, to say the least, have caused a great deal of consternation in districts around the Nation.

It is my view that use of dollars in this form, that cross lines, that appear to be essentially almost anti-incumbent, are more than disconcerting to the body. This amendment is designed to send a message rather than anything else. It is my intention to discuss this matter further as we go forward from here.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, let me say to the gentleman that this matter which he has raised here has been brought to my attention very forcibly by a number of my friends and colleagues across party lines here in the House. I have been torn by the need to make a decision as to what is happening here.

Let me explain why. Generally speaking, I support good peer reviewed social science research by the National Science Foundation.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I know the gentleman does.

Mr. BROWN of California. In this particular case, Mr. Chairman, I think there was the most inept foresight with regard to the impact of a research grant that I have ever seen. I think that we do need to send a message to the National Science Foundation that on issues of great delicacy, which they should have perceived this would be, there needs to be some action to prepare the proper attitude within the Members of Congress for this sort of thing. That was not done in this particular case.

I hope that the action that the gentleman contemplates will convey the message to the National Science Foundation that while we support good research, including good social science research, we think there should be some good judgment displayed over there in setting the groundwork for such items that may turn out to be controversial with the Members of Congress.

Mr. LEWIS of California. I believe the gentleman has capsulized my intent. A message is really my intent.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the gentleman's amendment. I want to make it clear from the beginning that I have been very supportive down through the years of the National Science Foundation. But this particular kind of incident has caused me to have some second thoughts about the wisdom of all of the grants that they have been permitting.

If there is one thing we do not need in this country, that is more Members, more people to run for Congress than presently run for Congress. I think that if people wanted to determine whether or not a person ought to run for Congress, then that is fine, but do not use the taxpayers' money for it. These universities that these two individuals work for certainly ought to sponsor a project such as this, if it is so great and so needed in terms of research and study.

I will support the gentleman's amendment and encourage others to do the same because to me it makes no sense to spend this kind of taxpayer money when we are cutting budgets, when we are cutting out Pell grants for worthy people who ought to be going to college, when we are cutting food stamps, when we are cutting all other kinds of worthy programs. I just think we are wasting the taxpayers' money in this instance, and I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I intend to not debate this any further except to say that I hope that the Members would support the amendment by way of a voice vote. It is our intention to send a message here and hope that we can be effective in doing that.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I apologize for being late to address the Sensenbrenner amendment. I would like to speak for a few minutes on the Sensenbrenner amendment. I think it is an extremely important amendment for the body to be informed of and to make a very, very calculated and careful decision.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROEMER. The parliamentary inquiry is, Is this the foreign aid bill that we are currently debating?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is not stating a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, the reason I ask that is, I think we are going to get to that bill in a few minutes. The reason I ask that is, in reading through the report language on the VA-HUD bill, on page 88 we have references to the Russian program assurance. We have had a Russian contingency fund. We have had a Russian program assurance fund. Here we are talking about $200 million because the Russians are delayed and behind schedule.

It is completely opposite of the stellar success that we have had on Mars Pathfinder. I met with the director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory this morning here in Washington and we discussed the wonderful success of NASA in putting the Rover on Mars. They stayed within a $267 million budget and they did phenomenal things for the country and for science and technology. But with this bill, this Russian assurance program, we are turning this bill more and more into a foreign aid, a back door foreign aid program for Russia.

I do not mind helping out Russia. I do not mind making sure, Mr. Chairman, that we keep Russian scientists from helping rogue countries develop nuclear weapons. But let us deal with that in the foreign relations and foreign affairs legislation that comes before this body. Let us not continue to send $1 billion, now, between Mir, rents for Mir, which is not working very well, between the Russian contingency funds, the Russian assurance fund and to reward the Russians for further delays that cost our taxpayers more and more money to put up the space station.

I am very, very concerned that we continue to, one, go above the $2.1 billion cap on the space station that we have had bipartisan support for; second, that we create more and more foreign aid in this particular budget for the Russians for delaying their program and not doing a good job in completing the space station on time and their components of the space station.

And third, Mr. Chairman, I think that we continue to find ways in the budget process to get around the authorizers; that the appropriators sit down and they say, well, I know Congress has agreed to a $2.1 billion cap but we are going to create these new funds that somehow finagle around that agreed-to, bipartisan, watchdog jurisdictional cap that we put on before. I think that that really flies in the face of what the authorizers are here to do and what Congress has been able to achieve by putting a cap on the space station in terms of expenditures.

I would encourage my colleagues to vote for the Sensenbrenner amendment to make sure that this $100 million does not get transferred overseas, does not reward the Russians for bad, poor performance in completing their segments of the international space station.

It is almost as if we have gone full cycle from the 1950's. In the 1950's, the United States and the Russians competed due to Sputnik. We both had horse races to see who could put a man on the Moon first. We have gone full cycle now to the United States taxpayers subsidizing the Russian program, not based upon performance, not based upon trying to keep the Russian scientists out of trouble but based upon poor performance, based upon delays and with the intent to get around the congressionally bipartisan, agreed-to $2.1 billion cap on the space station.

My parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman, was, I think, an appropriate though facetious one. We cannot continue to turn NASA into a back door foreign aid program. They are doing too many good things with Mars Pathfinder, with Galileo, with the repairs on the Hubble, with the demands that we must have on NASA to find ways to resurrect our manned space program because men and women in space are important. I would encourage my colleagues to vote for the Sensenbrenner amendment.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would remind Members that there is a pending amendment before the Committee of the gentleman from California, and would suggest to Members that that amendment be dealt with prior to other discussions.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I do want to address this amendment and I want to oppose it. A lot of my good friends are involved. I must say, I think the heat may be penetrating this building. Maybe we ought to check the air-conditioning.

Last night by a very large majority we involved ourselves in whether or not there should be a nude beach at a particular location. Prior to that I had always thought the expression a Member "voting to cover his rear" was metaphoric. Last night we apparently decided to make that literal.

We also passed an amendment yesterday in which I think we voted that the Earth was flat. We told the United Nations to get out of here with this biosphere stuff, and the black helicopter members scored a victory. Today it seems to me we will err again.

The proponents have said we should send a message. The message we are sending is that we have run out of things to legislate on that are of serious waste, or that we cannot decide tough issues and we are going to go off into a series of, I think, kind of silly byways.

Let me say first with regard to this National Science Foundation amendment, obviously this is involved with a particular project, one where someone presumed to study congressional elections. I must confess that I know one of the authors and think highly of him, and he reminded me that I taught him political science, so perhaps I have a real conflict of interest here. But it was a very long time ago.

I say that because, having read the proposal, I think it is a perfectly reasonable one. But that is not the point I want to make. The point I want to make is that judging whether or not particular academic research projects are good or bad is really not one of the things we are best at. The notion that this body should set itself up as a kind of appellate research council is, I think, one of the worst I have heard in a long time.

We do some things very well. I think this body serves democracy in a very, very impressive way. I think we meet a pretty strong standard as we deal with the value questions, as we deal with resource allocations. But I do not think that we make a very good set of academic censurers.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, I want to compliment the gentleman for his statement. I tried to be somewhat statesmanlike in addressing the problem, but I conceded that maybe a message needed to be sent merely because so many Members have become upset. I have been through this process many times in the past where Members would get upset with a research study involving the sex habits of Eskimos or the sex life of the screw worm or something like that, or just the title.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Has the subject of nude beaches for Eskimos ever come before the body?

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, I do not recall that it has. But this body can get very excited about something and when they do, using their awesome powers, they frequently make some major mistakes. That may be the case in this situation. But all we can do is try to help to educate the Members of the body that there may have been some validity in this research and hope that in the future they will scrutinize these more carefully.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

The point I want to make is that this is just not something we are good at or should try to do. Even if Members think that in a particular research project they made a mistake, we all understand that we are legitimately motivated by politics and electoral considerations. If we were not, we would not be serving democracy well. That is not a criterion that has any place in the selection of research subjects.

I would hope we could maintain a distinction that we would get the best people we can, give them their resources. I can understand an argument that says political science, although it once nurtured me, is not really a suitable subject for the National Science Foundation at all. But once we have put them in that business, for us to say we will pick and choose and if we are offended by a particular subject, even if Members may think it was a poor choice of subjects, I think it is an unwise power for us to get into exercising.

We then invite people who disagree with any choice of subject to come to us and set us up, as I said, as a kind of ultimate academic appeal council. I would hope that we would stop telling people what they have to wear when they swim and we would not try to repudiate the roundness of the Earth and that we would also refrain from intervening in the selection of individual research projects.

I do believe that on the whole the country will be worse off rather than better if we become the ultimate academic council.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Lewis amendment. I want to start by commending the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY] for having brought this matter to the attention of Members of the House. I also want to commend those members of the White House who have joined with him in the number of letters that have come to both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and myself relative to this particular issue.

I do not think that anyone in the House has given greater support to the National Science Foundation than I have as the ranking member on this subcommittee. Over a number of years I have had the pleasure and privilege of giving strong support to the National Science Foundation. I think they do an outstanding job. I think that those programs are necessary programs. But I think in this case they overstep their bounds.

They overreached and they funded something that would have been better funded by private sources. I think they could have gone to the Democratic Party and the Republican Party and asked for funding for this project. It is also strange to me that, if the science that is being promoted by these two professors is so good, why neither one of their universities wanted to fund it.

It does not seem to me that this ought to fall within the category of taxpayer funded research, and for that reason I think the gentleman has a good amendment, I support the amendment, and ask Members to pass the amendment.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, the argument just advanced, that this may not be a proper subject matter for us to make inquiry, to me just is not logical. Not only is it a poor choice of subject that has been decided on by the National Science Foundation in awarding this grant for almost $200,000, it is an affront to every Member of this Congress.

Because these two professors start with the premise that we are not getting the best qualified people to serve in Congress, and that is what this study is about. They are saying they are going to take $200,000 of taxpayers' money, go out and find the best qualified people to run for Congress and then encourage them to do just that. They even talk about going back after they select who these individuals should be, going back into the districts and taking them to lunch or to dinner to ask them why they are not running for Congress.

So I think we have a legitimate and a perfect right to question whether or not the taxpayers' money is being spent in this kind of an abuse.

If I might, I will engage the chairman of the committee and the ranking member of the committee in a brief colloquy.

In support of the gentleman's amendment from California, I would like to inquire, would it be correct to say that in the context of the balanced budget agreement that it has been more difficult to find funding for many worthwhile projects, agencies and programs, including the National Science Foundation?

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLAY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I believe my ranking member and I both would very much agree with that.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, would it also be accurate to say that the National Science Foundation, which has been very instrumental in advancing the frontiers of scientific knowledge that has enabled the United States to maintain its role as a preeminent world leader in scientific knowledge and knowhow has, over the years, received broad-based support from many Members of this body, including myself?

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLAY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, we both know, that is the gentleman from California and I, that the record will show that the gentleman from Missouri has indeed been a strong advocate on behalf of scientific research and the National Science Foundation.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, again reclaiming my time, would the gentlemen concur that as funding for programs becomes even more difficult, that it is important that agencies be more sensitive to that reality and that they exercise greater care in the types of activities they become involved in and the kinds of projects they support, even though those projects may technically be within their charters?

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I know the gentlemen from Missouri and the gentleman from Ohio are the best of friends, but separate from that, I am sure my ranking member and I absolutely agree with the gentleman's position.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, continuing with this dialog, are the gentlemen aware of a project funded by the National Science Foundation called the Candidate Emergence Study?

Mr. STOKES. Yes, that study has been brought to the attention of both the gentleman from California and myself.

Mr. CLAY. Do the gentlemen join with me in questioning the wisdom of the Federal Government spending money to determine why people do not run for Congress, at the same time we are being forced to make painful choices, such as reducing support for school lunches for hungry children and reducing the amount of money available to provide shelter for homeless people throughout this country?

Mr. STOKES. Yes, both the gentleman from California and I would concur in the gentleman's judgment that such a study does not reflect the critical needs and priorities currently confronting us. And even though the amount of money used to fund the Candidate Emergence Study may be relatively small, that $194,000 could have helped to address more significant needs.

Mr. LEWIS of California. If the gentleman will yield further, I would follow up on the gentleman from Ohio's comments by saying that I have had discussions with absolutely the highest level within the National Science Foundation, and there is no question that there is embarrassment at the highest level relative to the way this pattern developed. And, indeed, not just the results but the format of the study that came from this grant is considerably different than some thought it would be.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words and I rise in support of this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am disappointed that the National Science Foundation has not been more careful with regard to its grant process and the sensitivity and impact which a candidate recruitment topic would have in this House. I must say, generally I think it is a good agency in our Government supporting important programs.

Mr. Chairman, I wanted to point out specifically, in taking a few minutes here, I know that we are very concerned about moving forward with the bill, and I thought we had had good cooperation, but I am deeply disappointed that the previous request that I made for consideration, even though we are in the same title, that title III was not granted and that we had moved so quickly on the bill ahead that I did not have a chance to talk about the program, the manned space program, which is $100 million over the amount requested by the administration, and an opportunity to transfer some of the money to the emergency food and shelter program that FEMA operates.

Mr. Chairman, this is the 10th anniversary of the McKinney Homeless Program, the emergency food and shelter program, since it was first incorporated into a 1987 law. Actually, our former colleague, Congressman Ed Bolland, was the one that initiated the program in the early 1980's and I worked to authorize a similar initiative at that time.

Frankly, we should be celebrating the success of that program today and providing some additional dollars to at least bring it back to the 1995 level. But we are not going to be able to even have a vote or a debate, quite frankly, on that subject, other than the context in which I am speaking at this point, because of the lack of consideration for offering such amendment in the title.

It is a program, I think, that most of us recognize that has had good success. Often I think there is a discussion about whether there is compassion fatigue with regard to programs like the homeless. But I would hasten to point out to my colleagues that this program is really very successful in the sense that it has dealt with tens of thousands of Americans that have found themselves economic and social casualties in our society and, in fact, has brought them back into the mainstream and given them the wherewithal to not fall between the cracks and fail in our communities.

Furthermore, it is based on the private nonprofit efforts, which are operating on overload these days, if we have paid attention, in our cities and our rural byways, trying to respond to the desperate needs of people that are without shelter and sometimes without a meal. This program has been so effective, Mr. Chairman, in leveraging those dollars, in not taking on the program as a Federal program, as so often happens when the Federal Government gets involved, but in fact building upon a solid framework of these private groups.

And who are these groups in terms of the charitable council that manages these dollars? It is Catholic Charities, the Council of Jewish Federations the Salvation Army, and the Church of Christ in the U.S.A. These are the groups that are managing and using these dollars through the charitable council. And it has been remarkably successful with a very low administrative cost and bringing people along out of homelessness and into self sufficiency.

Now, surely we have not solved the problems of homelessness, but we have prevented and helped a lot of people move from beyond that particular circumstance in our society.

Unhappily, because of the technical procedures on the floor today, because I could not anticipate that we would not be considering the other amendments, I have been refused the opportunity, the consideration I think that is very reasonable, that I requested in the same title to offer this particular amendment. So we are really denying the opportunity to debate this, to consider the homeless out of order.

We have actually cut back these funds from 1995. The problems have not gone away. Ironically, in a good economy, very often we find with housing shortages that rents go up, so those that have these problems have more severe problems; and those that have disabilities. And as good as the programs work in terms of integrating people into our communities, in terms of mainstreaming them, we find that people sometimes make mistakes, sometimes oversights, and these programs are really the safety net that undergirds our opportunity to treat people in a responsible manner in terms of meeting their dignity food shelter or health care needs.

These are remarkably successful programs. I think they reflect the best of what we are about in terms of building on private sector, nonprofit, religious organizations that have dealt with this problem throughout its history. And it is too bad this House has not got the time today to debate amendments of this nature which are so fundamental.

We can authorize and make promises. These are promises that have been kept, I might say, with FEMA and the emergency food and shelter program. They were there when we needed them in floods or catastrophies, and they have been there for many, many other reasons but we need them for human catastrophies too. But it is too bad we cannot take the time today to debate, that I have to do it under these circumstances try under a different amendment. But I did not think that this bill should go by without at least my comments with regard to the homeless across this Nation. They need are help not a technical ruling that doesn't permit their consideration.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to engage the chairman in a colloquy for a few moments.

As the chairman may know, as part of H.R. 1275, the Civilian Space Authorization Act, which the House passed by voice vote, there was a provision which authorized appropriations of $8 million for the continued operation of the mid-course space experiment satellite within the Mission to Planet Earth at National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

MSX was constructed for the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization with a cryogenically cooled infrared sensor. As expected, the cryogen expired in February of this year, thereby rendering that part of the satellite inoperative. With the loss of the infrared sensor, BMDO's use of MSX is now limited. However, there is the availability of a lot of other sensor capability on the satellite, including the hyperspectral imaging system, which shows great promise as part of the Mission to Planet Earth.

While MSX would not replace any specific portion of the MTPE constellation, it would give NASA the opportunity to utilize MSX's unique hyperspectral imaging system at a relatively low cost. This system is fully functional and could help address numerous scientific and operational concerns NASA will have to resolve.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has discussed this matter with me personally, and there is little question that MSX represents an opportunity for NASA to incorporate an already constructed spacecraft into the Mission to Planet Earth. I believe NASA should pursue every opportunity available for cost savings in an area of great budget difficulty, and MSX represents just that type of opportunity.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman from California for his support.

Since the cryogenically cooled infrared sensor was operating until February of this year and BMDO was utilizing the satellite, there was not an opportunity for NASA to use this spacecraft. Given that NASA and BMDO have already signed a memorandum of agreement for the cooperative exploitation of environmental data from MSX, and that BMDO has identified that there will be over 50 percent availability of MSX for other users, the timing seems perfect for the utilization of MSX by NASA.

Mr. LEWIS of California. If the gentleman will yield further, it is clear that NASA needs to seize upon this opportunity to utilize this important spacecraft. I will work this conference to include language instructing NASA to incorporate the midcourse space experiment into the Mission Planet Earth Program.

I must say further to the gentleman that I do not pretend to have the expertise that the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. BARTLETT] has, let alone NASA has, in this subject area. But, indeed, the gentleman has piqued my attention, as well as my interest, and I look forward to working with the gentleman.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. I thank the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] very much.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words to engage the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] in a colloquy.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to seek a clarification on the appropriations for the EPA Clean Lakes Program which is made available under the State and Tribal Assistance Grants. It is my understanding that moneys made available under the Clean Lakes Program can be allocated to section 314 programs. Is that correct?

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARR of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. That is correct, that moneys under the Clean Lakes Program can be allocated to section 314 programs.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Reclaiming my time, it is my further understanding that it may be the case that certain EPA regions are not using the aforementioned moneys for section 314 programs. This raises very serious concerns as to why the EPA in certain regions of the country would refuse to fund 314 projects.

I would ask the gentleman, as chairman of the VA/HUD Subcommittee on Appropriations, to request of EPA a report on what, if any, 314 programs have been funded in the past year. Further, I would ask that the report be compiled by region. In other words, I would, with the assistance of the chairman, request EPA to compile a report which states region by region what section 314 projects have been funded since June 1996. This report should be delivered to the Congress by August 31, 1997.

Would the chairman lend his active support to our effort in this regard?

Mr. LEWIS of California. If the gentleman would continue to yield, first let me say that I appreciate the gentleman bringing this matter to my attention. I have a special appreciation for his concern about a report that involves each region. Indeed, I appreciate his bringing it to my attention, and I look forward to working with the gentleman.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Reclaiming my time, I would further request that if it is found that there are certain regions not performing section 314 projects, that the chairman would work with me in conference to author report language which would specify a specific dollar amount for section 314 projects.

Would the chairman assist in this regard, as well?

Mr. LEWIS of California. If the gentleman would continue to yield, I look forward to working with the gentleman further. And the answer is, yes.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. I thank the gentleman. I appreciate the chairman's assistance, and I yield back the balance my time.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

I thank the chairman very much, and I want to particularly thank the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and certainly the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], the ranking member, for what proves to be a very unique set of appropriations and with special challenges.

Mr. Chairman, this is addressed to the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], and I would certainly appreciate having an opportunity to enter into a colloquy with him. But let me just say that issues dealing with housing are very important, and there are many of us who have a great deal of concern because in our districts we are shortchanged on public housing, whether it is section 8 vouchers or public housing itself.

I appreciate the good work of this Committee on Appropriations, and particularly appreciate the work of the Committee on Housing and Urban Development, with the leadership of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] and the good work that he has done, disappointed that he is not able, as I was not able, to offer an amendment, and I hope that this will be cured.

But I wanted to offer an amendment dealing with increasing, in a compromised fashion, HUD section 8 rental assistance, recognizing the hard work of this committee to fund this for 19,580 new incremental section 8 vouchers for low-income families at a funding level of $119.5 million.

This amendment would offset this increase only by cutting funds from FEMA, Federal Emergency Management Agency, programs which would simply remove this account to the levels requested by the President. As I said, this is an effort to be fair.

These additional units, however, Mr. Chairman, will be made available for a highly targeted demonstration of using housing assistance to support State welfare-to-work activities. This has been part of the Republican agenda for welfare-to-work activities. This is a bipartisan compromise that every Member of this House could have supported if we had been allowed to bring this amendment forward.

The tenant-based housing assistance would support families in large cities who are either already working or making substantial progress in the transition from welfare to work. As I said, I applaud the work of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] and join him in the need for this type of housing.

In Houston, for example, Harris County, there are approximately 15,000 families on the waiting list for section 8 assistance. Also, the HUD housing office cites that there are 27,000 individuals on the waiting list for privately owned assisted housing.

If I could engage the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] in a colloquy, because we work together on these issues. In fact, 2 years ago, I guess, I came to him on the placement question when I told him that in Houston, even though I know HUD has looked at one-for-one replacement, and I moved from section 8 into that because it is important, in cities that are rural or southern we find that we have very low numbers of public housing from the beginning. Therefore, when we demolish or we take away from section 8 housing and we do not get one-for-one replacement, we are in trouble.

Might I inquire, first, the problem with us having the ability to come back with this amendment, but I know I will get a certain answer, but may I also inquire as to the gentleman continuing to work with me? We got sort of stalled the last time because a lot of people did not understand why does someone in Houston want to go back to one-for-one, which seems outdated and old. I have my facts.

Can I engage the gentleman's assistance? And the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] has been so very gracious, because I appreciate his position, and I would like to engage him as well on helping with the one-for-one synopsis, it may not be called that, but getting more housing in areas where the housing stock is low, like public housing under 4,500 units for a city that has a million citizens.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment seeks to increase the bill's funding for HUD section 8 rental assistance—with this increase to be used to fund 19,580 new incremental section 8 vouchers for low-income families at a funding level of $119.5 million. This amendment will offset this increase only by cutting funding from FEMA's—the Federal Emergency Management Agency—programs which will simply remove this account to the levels requested by the President. I applaud Mr. KENNEDY for his longstanding commitment for being an advocate for the poor and low-income families not only in his district of Massachusetts, but for the Nation.

Unfortunately, I am unable to support Mr. KENNEDY's amendment which attempts to fund the new incremental section 8 vouchers for low-income families, but he seeks to underfund the NASA space program. I do not believe that it is appropriate to cut the funding of NASA. It is true that the members of the Appropriations Committee saw the need to include additional funding for NASA's human space flight—$100 million—and Science, aeronautics, and technology—$48 million—programs. We must keep in mind that even though this may seem to be a significant addition, the budget of NASA over the last few years has been systematically cut.

Human space flight is critical to performing necessary and beneficial research experiments in space should be increasingly funded. When the Space Shuttle Columbia lands successfully tomorrow, the crew will have completed valuable scientific experiments and research that benefits everyone. Let's not take money away from NASA.

Mr. Chairman, these additional units of incremental section 8 assistance will be made available for a highly targeted demonstration of using housing assistance to support State welfare-to-work activities. This has been a part of the Republican agenda. Welfare-to-work activities. The tenant-based housing assistance would support families in large cities who are either already working or are making substantial progress in the transition from welfare to work. In Texas, this will allow for 1,200 additional section 8 vouchers for low-income families. This assistance will offer security to families making this difficult transition, and will allow them to choose housing in locations that offer access to jobs, education, training, and other services important to achieving long-term self-sufficiency. In the city of Houston/Harris County, there are approximately 15,000 families on the waiting list for section 8 assistance. Mr. Chairman, I revisit this issue because this bill has not earmarked any funds for one-for-one housing. This is the policy that establishes requirements that housing authorities replace, on a one-for-one basis, every unit of public housing the housing authority disposes of or demolishes. The public housing authorizing bill H.R. 2 eliminated one-for-one housing. This will thrust millions of American families into homelessness. The housing demand and the problem of homelessness is so great that we must provide as many options for affordable housing as possible. The Houston HUD office cites that there are 27,170 individuals on the waiting list for privately owned assisted housing.

Between 1978 and 1993, the number of families with worst-case needs grew by 1.5 to 5.3 million families with incomes below 50 percent of median who pay more than half of their incomes for rent and utilities or live in severely substandard housing.

Between 1985 and 1993, the supply of rental housing affordable to very low-low income families decreased. In 1993 there were only 6.9 million units affordable for the 8.6 million extremely low-income renter families. More than half of these units were occupied by families with higher incomes, thus making even fewer affordable units available for extremely low-income families.

Among working poor families with children—those with incomes below 30 percent of median, which is roughly the equivalent of the poverty level—67 percent of those not receiving housing assistance—675,000 households—have worst-case housing needs. Usually this means they are paying over half their income for rent; sometimes they are also living in severely substandard housing.

Families with this type of financial stress are in constant danger of falling behind in the rent and either moving to avoid eviction or actually being evicted. Tenant-based assistance can support welfare-to-work efforts by providing families with a stable and secure place to live while they get the training they need, seek employment, and make the transition to self-sufficiency. With a housing certificate, a family can either stay in a neighborhood where there are community supports and the mother has access to a job, or move when that move is in the family's interest and the family has been counseled about opportunities linked to housing locations that offer better access to jobs, schools, training, and other opportunities. This amendment is a bipartisan compromise that every Member of this House should support. I urge the adoption of this amendment to increase self-sufficiency of low-income families by providing them with affordable housing.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I am happy to enter into this colloquy with the gentlewoman from Texas [Ms. JACKSON-LEE] regarding a very important matter.

Her discussion and concern goes to the heart of how we got to one-for-one replacement in the first place, because there was a time in the country where we absolutely needed, to make certain when any public housing unit was taken out of the marketplace that it was replaced. A combination of things have occurred over time involving the fact that in some cases there was a shortage of capital, in other cases just plain bureaucratic problems. We found ourselves not tearing down old and dilapidated facilities and instead boarding up windows.

In the instance of my colleague, she has a special circumstance that reflects that original difficulty. I very much appreciate her concern, and indeed I am committed to trying to help her respond to the needs of her community. So I appreciate the point very much, and I look forward to working with my colleague.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Reclaiming my time, I appreciate the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES]. Let me thank him for always having a sensitive ear.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from Texas [Ms. JACKSON-LEE] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman listening to me on this. And I wanted to bring to the attention of this body again the great need for housing in the Houston area, but particularly rural and southern areas, where we have not had this large housing stock and where we have an enormous waiting list, both homeless and section 8.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. I just wanted to join with the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] in expressing to the gentlewoman that we appreciate the fact that she has brought this matter to our attention both in last year's bill and this year. And of course, we have stated to her, as we state again, that we are certainly going to continue working with her relative to the unique situation that she has in her city.

In my own case, representing a large urban center, I can understand exactly the type of problem that she is encountering, and we are going to try in every way to give her the kind of relief that she needs.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Reclaiming my time, I thank both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] for their kindness. I emphasize that we are in the midst now of rebuilding Allen Parkway Villa. I know that would be refreshing news to those of us, my colleagues, who are tenured in this Congress.

We still have the problem of having numbers under 4,000 and needing to replace some of those that have been torn down. I welcome the input and the creativity of my colleagues. Maybe this year, this session, I can bring this to rest and have a solution for those needing housing in the Houston area, but also impacting other southern and rural areas that have the same problem.

The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] did tell me that, even though I fought hard to get this amendment on the floor, that we will not be handling the amendment at this time, but we will be working on solving the problem.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. The Members will be having a voice vote later on the amendment that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and I support.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would once again remind Members that the pending business before the Committee is the Lewis amendment.

If there is no further debate on the Lewis amendment, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I had contemplated, among others, in a bipartisan fashion offering an amendment to this title of this bill, and have decided not to do so but wanted to take this time to talk about the recently issued regulations by EPA on clean air and particulate matter in particular.

Having been involved with this since the first proposed standards were issued, I have made it my concentrated goal to know everything I could know and to read the scientific studies that have been put forth in regard to these regulations.

The claim is that these regulations are put forward on the basis that is the charge for the EPA to use the best available science. Well, in fact, that is not the case. The EPA has done what I think is an unconscionable wrong to this country. And what has exactly happened, Mr. Chairman, is we have taken a planned change in the air regulations and have gone to try and find science to support it.

The EPA claims that there are 67 studies that support their new regulations, and that claim is absolutely false. There are five studies, and it is generous to say that these are studies, but there are five different collections of data that monitor fine particulate matter. Only two of those actually measure 2.5 micron size particles. The rest are extrapolated data.

It is like a physician telling a woman she is going to have a boy child, a male child, because she has had three children before, all of which were females. The fact is that one does not connect with the other. The odds are still 50-50. In fact, the odds for having a healthy baby are much greater than the odds for this, the data put forth by EPA, to be inaccurate.

I want to discuss for a moment the studies because I think it is very important that the American public know what went on with these studies. The first is a Harvard six-city study that the data is not available to the rest of the scientific community to look at and say yes, their conclusions from this data are accurate.

As a matter of fact, the study that was correlated along with that, that used humidity in consideration for lung disease and lung problems, actually showed that the data put forth in the Harvard study was not right when in fact the confounding variables were considered. The risk of cigarette smoking was not considered in any of these studies. The risk of preexisting lung disease was not considered.

Mr. Chairman, it concerns me greatly that the Government of the United States has issued regulations that are going to cost the American public, the taxpayers of this country, $60 to $80 billion dollars a year under the claim that it is going to improve the quality of life.

If that is the case and the science can be shown to show that, then I will happily support it. But the truth is that there is not any science to support what the EPA is doing at this time. The EPA admits that. By the way, they have asked for additional money to study 2.5 micron particulate matter.

So what concerns me is that we as a Government are moving toward new regulations that are going to cost thousands of jobs, that are going to eliminate new opportunities for advancement for individuals in their employment opportunities in over 400 counties in the United States, because we think we might be able to improve some health, when the science will not show that we can.

Is it not a fact that we should know what we are doing? The greatest example is asbestos. The medical community now agrees we should have left asbestos where it was. We actually harmed more people, we actually spent and wasted a ton of money because we did not have the science before we acted.

Let not make that mistake again. Let us ask the EPA, let us ask the President, not to do this until they know what they are doing and they have the science that backs it up.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the opportunity to bring forth this area of interest. I am sorry that I did not have an opportunity to offer an amendment. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Along with the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. COBURN], I had intended on offering an amendment to this bill which would have provided EPA with the necessary direction in pursuing a clean air strategy. Out of respect for the appropriations process and the need to move this bill forward without legislative provisions, we have decided not to offer this amendment today. Instead, we will work through the authorizing committees to ensure that we have a focused and rational clean air policy. Nevertheless, I feel compelled to take this opportunity to point out some of the flaws in EPA's approach to the decision to pursue the new national ambient air quality standards. Although an examination of the science behind the standards requires a great attention to detail, it is well worth the Members' time to do so. It may be easy to embrace a press release saying that we are protecting people but the facts do not show that this is necessarily going to be the result of these standards.

The Committee on Science held three hearings on the standards and has issued a bipartisan report of its findings and recommendations. The report is available on line at the committee's home page and I encourage anyone who is interested in this issue to read that report.

Among the most telling of the findings is EPA's inconsistency of the epidemiological studies, as it appears that EPA has placed greater emphasis on studies that support their conclusion while ignoring others that did not conform to their view of science. EPA has claimed that particulate matter studies have shown a wavering picture of adverse health effects. In testimony before the Subcommittee on Energy and Environment, members of EPA's own clean air scientific advisory committee have stated just the opposite.

In responses to follow-up questions submitted by the subcommittee, Dr. George Wolff, the former head of the CASAC and Dr. Joseph Mauderly, the current head of the CASAC asserted that EPA did not give the same weight to the studies that were inconsistent with the conclusion drawn by the agency.

Dr. Wolff's response stated, "There are many examples where EPA gives more weight to the studies that support their agenda, and they are very skillful, but not always convincing, in providing reasons to dismiss those studies that provide alternative explanations."

Dr. Mauderly pointed out that EPA used a weight of evidence approach in assessing PM epidemiological study but went on to say that "while this is not an inappropriate approach, it is true that EPA, and other investigators, have not expended an equivalent amount of energy on studies or data sets which show no relationship between PM and health."

This irresponsible approach to assessing the public good cannot be condoned. How we go about maintaining air quality is too important an issue to rely on findings reached only by looking at data that supports a predetermined conclusion.

In the Committee on Science and in hearings before other committees, we have heard that these standards are being moved in order to ensure that monitoring data is collected and that needed research is conducted. We endorse that goal but we cannot endorse EPA's method of making it a reality.

Plain and simple, new standards are not needed to see that monitoring and research are funded. Our amendment would have funded those activities without the need of a presumptive standard.

Although we are not offering our amendment today due to the need to move forward with the appropriations process, we will pursue this approach through the authorizing committees. Specifically, it is our intention to move H.R. 1984, bipartisan legislation introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KLINK] which would make sure that we have adequate information about health effects of various pollutants before we pursue a regulatory solution.

Mr. Chairman, the President and Administrator Browner have said that they want to work with us on implementing the new standards so as to minimize their economic impact. What they fail to recognize is that even though these regulations will not come into force for many years, these standards will influence the decisionmaking of businesses today.

Anyone in the private sector who is doing long-term planning will have nothing to gain by doing business in areas that EPA says will not be in attainment. We are already seeing this in western Pennsylvania and are sure to see it throughout the country as more and more people recognize the significance of the new standards.

Mr. Chairman, I am for clean air. I have four children of my own. If I thought for 1 minute that delaying these standards would jeopardize their health, I would not be up here making this speech. However, I have taken the time to examine the evidence and all I am convinced of is that we need to know more. I am committed to finding the funds to do the monitoring and the research needed to develop consensus on policy on air quality.

Mr. MCINTOSH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

(Mr. MCINTOSH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MCINTOSH. Mr. Chairman, my Subcommittee on National Economic Growth, Natural Resources, and Regulatory Affairs has also been looking at these clean air standards and the process which EPA and the White House have used to move forward on that. In developing its air quality standards for ozone and particulate matter, EPA has made an end run around good science, around common sense and around the real concerns of the American people.

With the blessing of Vice President GORE and the President, the agency is now finalizing these standards that may cost more than $60 billion but produce little or no health benefits and frankly put at jeopardy hundreds of thousands of jobs in this country.

In fact a friend of mine said, "If you think NAFTA created a sucking sound to Mexico, wait till these clean air standards go into effect," because then we are going to see a lot of jobs move south of the border and it is going to hurt our good working men and women in this country.

Moreover, Mr. Chairman, these standards may in fact undo the considerable progress that our communities have already been making in attaining high-quality air standards.

When my colleagues think about the young children who are affected by asthma and other problems having to wait an additional 10 years because these new standards put on hold the progress that is being made, that is wrong and these standards are not good for those children.

EPA has ignored the widespread economic and scientific criticism that these standards have provoked throughout the entire Clinton administration and has done everything in its power to cover up those concerns.

Mr. Chairman, those objecting to the rule include the President's Council of Economic Advisers, the White House Science Adviser, the Commerce Department, the Transportation Department, the Treasury Department, the Agriculture Department, and the Small Business Administration in this administration under President Bill Clinton. The Office of Management and Budget staff found that the EPA rules, quote, did not fully conform with the administration's own guidelines for regulatory review.

The President's own Office of Science and Technology Policy objected that the standards are not based on adequate scientific information. Alicia Munnell of the President's Council of Economic Advisers observed that "the incremental health risk reduction from more stringent standards is small, while costs are high."

In fact, CEA estimated that the cost of fully complying with EPA's approach could reach $60 billion a year, not $8 billion that EPA has reported.

According to the Small Business Administration, these are the most expensive regulations faced by small businesses in over 10 years. A Department of Transportation analysis on the impact of EPA's standards on States and localities showed that the areas in non-compliance will face economically strangling restrictions to daily operations. However, the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, known as OIRA, the office in OMB in charge of supervising this interagency review of regulations, has made sure that the consideration of these regulations never addressed the concerns or heard those from the agencies who disagreed with EPA.

First OIRA, at the request of EPA, helped whitewash a report to Congress drafted by the career staff that was very critical of this regulation. Later OIRA imposed an unprecedented gag order on agency written comments so that these agency concerns were never fully submitted to the public record. As a result, the courts could decide that those concerns may not be taken into account when they review the regulatory process.

Mr. Chairman, this is not how OIRA is supposed to function. OIRA does not handle other rules this way. They are a neutral body in which every concern in the administration can be raised. I want to know who and what directed OIRA to make these questionable decisions. We have been asking to interview the staff to find out what went on, but OIRA has been working to cover up these efforts. They have refused and stonewalled my subcommittee's repeated attempts at oversight to request the facts behind this unprecedented gag order. OIRA has refused to produce documents. Moreover, they have refused to allow their staff to be interviewed by our subcommittee. OIRA has apparently decided that there is too much at stake in their coverup efforts to allow a trusted career employee to tell us candidly what happened.

I am convinced that this rulemaking will eventually be overturned by the courts because it was done under an illegal process. Apparently OIRA agrees that this is likely or at least probable and is doing everything in its power to keep that process under wraps.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion I would have supported the amendment of my colleagues. We need to do something about these regulations.

In developing its air quality standard for ozone and particulate matter, EPA has certainly made an end run around science, common sense, and the real concerns of the American public. With Vice President GORE and the President's endorsement, the Agency is now finalizing these standards that may cost more than $60 billion, but may produce little or no health benefits. Moreover, these standards may, in fact, undo the considerable progress that our communities have made in attaining the current air quality standards and implementing Clean Air Act programs.

However, nothing in the law requires the Agency to proceed blindly with standards that will have a multibillion dollar impact and that may not improve and may even degrade human health and the environment. Nothing in the Clean Air Act requires EPA to abrogate its responsibility to take a reasonable approach to regulation when the scientific data is uncertain.

Yet, EPA has ignored the very legitimate concerns raised all around about the wisdom of proceeding to issue very onerous standards in the face of inconclusive science:

EPA has ignored the advice of its own scientific advisory committee. The Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee indicated that there is no proof that EPA's standards will measurably improve public health. In the case of ozone, they concluded that the proposed standard was not significantly more protective of public health than the current one. In the case of PM, they found significant uncertainty surrounding the health effects of fine particles. In their view, there is no compelling reason to set more restrictive standards at this time.

EPA has ignored the widespread economic and scientific criticism these standards have provoked throughout the Clinton administration, and has done in its power to coverup this dissent. Mr. Speaker, those objecting to the rules include the President's Council of Economic Advisers; the White House Science Adviser; the Commerce, Transportation, Treasury and Agriculture Departments; and the Small Business Administration.

For example, Assistant Secretary for Transportation Policy Frank Kruesi commented that it was "incomprehensible that the administration would commit to a new set of standards without much greater understanding of the problem and its solutions."

The Office of Management and Budget found that the EPA rules "did not fully conform" with the administration's own guidelines for regulatory review.

The President's Office of Science and Technology Policy objected that these standards are not based on adequate scientific information.

Alicia Munnell of the President's Council of Economic Advisers observed that, "the incremental health-risk reduction from more stringent standards is small, while costs are high." In fact, CEA estimated that the costs of fully complying with just EPA's new ozone standards could reach $60 billion a year.

According to the Small Business Administration, these are "the most expensive regulations faced by small business in 10 or more years."

A Department of Transportation analysis of the impact of EPA's standards on States and localities showed that areas in noncompliance will face "economically strangling restrictions to daily operations."

However, the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, known as OIRA, has made sure that consideration of these concerns are never heard or remains behind closed doors. First, OIRA, at the request of EPA, helped whitewash a report to Congress drafted by OIRA career staff that was critical of the rule. Later, OIRA imposed an unprecedented gag order on agency written comments so that these agency concerns were never formally submitted for the public record. As a result, the courts may not take these agency concerns into accounting in reviewing the rules. Instead, OIRA imposed a highly questionable and unusual "alternative interagency review process" to deal with the standards. This is now how OIRA handles other rules. What and who directed OIRA to make these questionable decision.

Finally, the President's decision to back EPA was reached before the Agency's final rules were sent to OIRA for review, despite the requirements of the President's own Executive Order. Therefore, one of the most complex and expensive regulations were subjected to meaningless internal review.

Despite the serious evidence of improper conduct, OIRA has refused or stonewalled my repeated oversight requests to uncover the facts behind OIRA's unprecedented behavior. OIRA has refused to produce documents to my subcommittee, including even a copy of the very rule they are supposed to be reviewing. More significantly, OIRA has refused to allow my subcommittee to interview key senior OIRA officials, including the Branch Chief of the Natural Resources Division who drafted internal reports critical of the rule. OIRA has apparently decided that there is too much at stake in its current coverup efforts to allow this trusted career officer to be interviewed by my staff. I am convinced that this rulemaking will eventually be overturned by the courts due to the illegal rulemaking procedures. Apparently, OIRA agrees this is likely and is doing everything in its power to hide the truth from Congress and the courts.

EPA also has ignored the protests of numerous Governors and thousands of mayors that these standards will have an enormous impact on small businesses and will become one of the largest unfunded mandates ever faced by State and local governments. The era of "big government" is by no means over. These new standards will force onerous new control measures and unnecessary lifestyle changes on hundreds of counties that will not be able to comply. The costs of doing business will rise considerably, causing massive layoffs. As Assistant Secretary Kruesi noted, these standards will "bring a significantly larger proportion of the population and more jurisdictions under Federal oversight and procedural burdens." Areas in non-attainment will have to adhere to stringent requirements regarding building permits and uses, transportation plans, industrial uses, and the like. In short, States and localities will face onerous constraints on their constitutional freedom to determine how to run their own communities.

Finally, EPA has ignored the thousands of comments by the general public that these standards may do more harm than good. EPA has completely failed to evaluate the potential negative health effects that might result from its standards. For example, setting a generic fine particle standard may result in controlling particles that don't significantly harm the public health, and not controlling ones that do. Reducing ground-level ozone may cause an increase in malignant and nonmelanoma skin cancers and cataracts, as well as other health risks from ultraviolet B rays. Moreover, the regulatory costs that will be transmitted throughout the economy will increase poverty levels. Workers and consumers will have less disposable income to spend on safety devices, on medical checkups and procedures, and on clean and safe housing.

In this rulemaking proceeding, EPA has openly and blatantly defied the laws passed by Congress that require the Agency to weigh all of these factors in determining how to put our scarce resources to the greatest social good. EPA has refused to comply with the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act, the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act [SBREFA], and the Regulatory Flexibility Act. These laws require agencies to determine the "real costs and benefits" to our society of regulations. They represent the only democratically acceptable approach to weigh uncertain scientific evidence and to properly evaluate potential adverse consequences to public health, environment, and the economy.

Once again, the President has bowed to the demands of special interests and the regulatory bureaucracy to increase EPA's authority and budget. EPA's standards represent an irresponsible and illegal rush to judgement that may undermine our Nation's efforts to clean the air. With these standards, we are getting a "Yugo" at Rolls Royce prices. No one in Congress should stand for this.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am a firm believer in good science and common sense, and I am also a firm believer in believing my eyes and what I see and what I breathe. People across this country today are fully aware of the consequences of the ozone problems. Just go outside across this country. Temperatures over 100, in the 90's, in the 80's. People are experiencing trouble breathing. This is not just my opinion. On the front page of USA Today, "Breathing No Fun In The Ozone," and it has a picture of, of all places Washington, our Nation's Capital, as seen through a haze of smog. The Capitol barely shows through the ozone haze in Washington, DC.

The American people understand. There is a serious problem with smog in this country, and the American people appreciate the work that the EPA has done in addressing the pollution issues. We are talking about a practical matter here. How many of us today will walk through the tunnels instead of going outside because of the oppressive quality of the air? We are experiencing this. We have to consider the reality of what we are faced with rather than abstract ideas about what the effect of this law may have in the future, when we know right now we need strong air quality standards in order to protect the health of the American people. Do not take my word for it. Just go outside and take a breath of air.

In trying to clear the air here today on behalf of those who are concerned about the EPA regulations, I also offer for submission into the RECORD the USA Today's article where they talk about ozone danger, "What You Can't See Can Hurt You." Listen to what they describe as some of the problems of dangerous ozone levels, particularly in connection with these very high temperatures, soaring smog levels and stagnant high-pressure systems. They talk about ground level ozone, and it is the main ingredient in urban smog. Naturally occurring ozone in the upper atmosphere protects life by filtering the ultraviolet radiation from the Sun and ground level ozone is produced by vehicle or industrial emissions combining with sunlight and high heat during times of little or no wind.

And they have some of the effects and the health hazards. For example, and people know this, anyone who has experienced the problem of air pollution knows that we can get headaches from it, can irritate our eyes, nasal discharge, shortness of breath, lung damage, sore throat. These are all factors which the EPA actually took into account when they drew up the standards. They did it to protect the American people. The health hazards, high concentrations of ozone can cause inflammation and irritation of the respiratory tract. Ozone can increase asthma and allergy problems and susceptibility to lung infections. Ozone damage to lungs can continue days after exposure has ended.

Mr. Chairman, people know this from their own experience. This is why the EPA has stepped forward.

USA Today goes on to talk about who are the most vulnerable people. Mr. Chairman, we know. We know people in our family are vulnerable to it. They say the most likely to suffer ozone pollution effects are people with lung diseases, the elderly, children, and healthy adults who exercise outside. Children are especially vulnerable because they often play outside and in muggy heat, breathe more rapidly and inhale more air pollution.

Mr. Chairman, is it any wonder then that according to a recent poll an overwhelming 84 percent of voters believe that the current levels of air pollution are dangerous and pose a threat to the health of senior citizens, children, and others? People just have to look outside, and that is why they agree.

Now when informed the EPA is putting in place stricter air quality standards that would strengthen regulations on particulate pollution and ground level ozone, 70 percent of Americans favor those standards. Fully two-thirds of the voters agree with scientists from EPA and the American Lung Association that the best available science indicates the current levels of air pollution can create serious health problems. That is current levels.

Now we need to have standards in place over the next decade so that we can protect many more Americans from experiencing the adverse effects of increase in ozone and particulate matter. Two-thirds of the people agree with statements that certain businesses have tried for decades to scare people by saying that environmental regulations will hurt the economy and will cost jobs. But the regulations always ended up costing less when businesses have made a profit.

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, my dear colleague from Ohio [Mr. KUCNICH] just made the point of those of us that are concerned about these new regulations that are being signed by Director Browner and being proposed by this administration. He is right. We are concerned when we go outside to Washington, DC, and other metropolitan areas around this Nation in hot weather like this and we can breathe the oppressive air. And we think that after sitting in many days of hearings, and understanding that there is not a scientific consensus surrounding these regulations, that money is better spent on making sure that areas like Washington, DC, comply by 1999, by a date certain.

And so if we are concerned about that 10-year-old child who is playing on a playground in Washington, DC, today, why would we want to implement questionable new standards before we have complied with the standards that we have currently? Why would we want to wait another 10 or 12 years until that 10-year-old child is in college before we take action?

What the administration has done today and what Carol Browner has proposed will put off the tough decisions for a later day, will allow the air and the immediate future to stay dirtier longer. The EPA has been saying that they are in favor of taking a wait-and-see attitude and the administration, with a wink and a nod, have said, "Look at our compliance schedule. We're not going to change these things overnight. We're going to wait."

Well, if they really wanted to wait until we had PM-2.5 monitors deployed around this Nation, if they wanted to wait until we actually analyze that data, then they would have sat and talked to those of us who have raised these concerns, the dozens of Members, of Democrats and Republicans in this House and in the other body, who have asked the President to sit down, to have a discussion with us. Not only did they refuse to sit and talk to us, they would not even acknowledge our letters.

In my previous life I was a journalist. We always know when someone is evading the question, when someone is filibustering when they are trying to give an answer that they are not happy about and that they are not really in their heart sure that their position is a strong one, and I think that is the reason that EPA has not wanted to sit and talk to us about this. It is why the administration has ignored even those of us from the President's same party who wanted to sit down and talk about a commonsense approach where we can achieve good commonsense clean air standards at the same time that we allow the State implementation plans to move forward, that we allow industry to continue to take the steps necessary that they need to make, the investments they need to make, to continue to clean the air.

I agree with Carol Browner and AL GORE and President Clinton that the Clean Air Act has been working. We have cleaned the air. We have made dramatic steps. I am afraid that what they are doing today will stop and will impede the progress that we are making and that we continue to make.

And that is why I would thank the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LAHOOD] and many of my colleagues on the Republican side as well as my friends here on the Democratic side who have joined us on H.R. 1984. It is a bill that brings a commonsense approach, that says let us build the monitors, let us collect the data, let us do the science, let us authorize $75 million a year to make sure that this country is headed in the correct direction. Let us not stand in the way of meeting these deadlines, of meeting the targets, that the current Clean Air Act and the current regulations would have us meet.

As Carol Browner testified before our subcommittee for 8 hours in the Committee on Commerce, she talked about the problem of having two sets of regulation at one time, and how are we to believe with a wink and a nod that we are going to promulgate these new regulations but it is not going to have an impact when we know that under the Clean Air Act one citizen's lawsuit could change all of that and that the captains of industry that are out there making decisions as to what areas they are going to locate in, where they are going to be expanding industries, where they are going to be investing millions of dollars; those decisions are being made today, not 10 years from now, and they will not be building in areas that are going to be thrown out of attainment by these new regulations.

Four hundred counties across this Nation will not have a chance to see new jobs, neither an investment of new businesses or of an expansion of the businesses that are there. I have talked to businesses in southwestern Pennsylvania that have said, "We're not going to make those expenditures in your region." They are going to go elsewhere, and I am talking about coming from an area where we have seen the loss of 155,000 manufacturing jobs over the last 2 decades.

I think that H.R. 1984 makes all the sense. I thank the gentleman for co-sponsoring the bill and would propose that my colleagues also join us on that legislation.

Mr. LAHOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

(Mr. LAHOOD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAHOOD. Mr. Chairman, in April of this year I, along with 10 other Members of the Illinois delegation, sent a letter to Carol Browner, the Administrator of the EPA, urging her to suspend promulgation of those proposed regulations so that further study and analysis could be completed.

In light of the Environmental Protection Agency's own recent acknowledgment that health benefits for those proposed regulations were overstated, I thought it was important that the Clean Air Scientific Advisory Committee attempt to reach a consensus on the health-related data that underlies the proposed regulations by doing further study and investigation.

Earlier on I had considered offering an amendment, but due to other considerations and other deliberations that will be taking place later on, I am not going to do that, but I do believe that asking an independent agency such as the National Science Foundation to conduct an impartial cost-benefit analysis is important, and I would like to ask the chairman of the subcommittee if there would be funds available for an independent agency to look at these standards that now today have been promulgated and will be printed in the Federal Register.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAHOOD. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. The gentleman from Illinois is correct. There is a need for this sort of continued and ongoing careful research, and further, I can say that there are additional funds available above and beyond the Presidential request. There are some $40 million, $35 million of those for PM standard evaluation and the balance for ozone. My concerns are very similar to the gentleman's and, if he would continue to yield, let me say that by way of background the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] and I share one of the most heavily impacted areas in the country in terms of problems with air quality. We have spent considerable time attempting to implement past regulations and, indeed, are having an effect upon air quality in the southland. I cannot tell my colleague whether we need additional, more difficult regulations or not, but I am very much convinced that there is a need for a better base of scientific work, and thereby I very much appreciate the gentleman's comments.

Mr. LAHOOD. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the chairman of the subcommittee on this important matter setting aside or making available or having available some funds for this study, and I look forward, hopefully, to the opportunity.

I would like to finish my prepared statement because I want to be on record with the statement that I had prepared earlier.

According to published reports, the Department of Agriculture and the Small Business Administration raised serious concerns when the new regulations were first proposed. Chief among those concerns was the tremendously high cost that farmers and small business would have to pay in order to be in compliance with the new regulations.

The regulatory consequences for non-attainment would include bans on economic development, mandatory car pooling, sanctions on existing agricultural practices, and a greatly expanded vehicle inspection and maintenance program, the cost of which would probably lead to a motor vehicle fuel tax increase and/or regulations or outright bans on items of existing consumer convenience and choice, such as snow blowers, lawn mowers, powerboats, and charcoal grills.

In addition, the new regulations would increase my State's nonattainment areas from 11 counties to 23 counties. The present nonattainment areas are the eight-county Chicago and suburban Chicago area, and the three-county Metro East St. Louis area. New areas would include my hometown of Peoria, Champaign-Urbana, LaSalle-Peru, Effingham, Decatur, the Quad Cities, and a much larger Metro East area, and Jo Daviess County.

Illinois and the Nation has already paid a high price for existing Clean Air Act requirements. Our Nation's energy and industrial strength could be imperiled needlessly by new regulations, and it has been estimated that the Chicago area alone could face compliance costs of $5 billion. Other parts of the State and country could also have to incur the loss of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in compliance costs.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAHOOD. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. The expression of concern by the gentleman is very important, and I know a concern is felt on both sides of the aisle. If there is a classic illustration of important public policy decisions having little to do with partisan politics, this is one of them.

While we have provided funding for additional scientific research, as I have suggested, monitoring and collection of data is very important as well, and the gentleman should know that there is an additional $25 million to help those States, especially the rural States, to participate in that work as well.

Mr. LAHOOD. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's commitment to the further study of this.

I think common sense dictates that all Americans want clean air, but common sense also dictates that Americans want reasonable and common-sense approaches to the way that we deal with these matters, and I hope that further study will enable us to reach an agreement and compromise in how we go about doing that.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, having worked on the Clean Air Act for over 22 years, I want to point out something that has happened in this body every 6 or 7 years. The industry gets people stirred up with predictions that we have to choose between a clean environment on the one hand and a thriving economy with jobs for our people on the other, and that is a choice that is a false one. Mr. Chairman, it is a false one that has been offered to us in the past, and the record has proved that it was a false choice.

The 1990 Clean Air Act was adopted overwhelmingly by a Democratic controlled Congress and heartily endorsed and signed by a Republican President. At that time we set in place a law that has worked successfully, not just as an environmental bill, but one of the most successful Government programs that we have ever had. Air pollution has been reduced dramatically in some places, and at a fraction of the costs that were predicted when we held all those hearings in preparation for that legislation.

I want to cite some examples. In August 1990 there was a group called the Clean Air Working Group. It was the principal business group fighting the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990. They came in and estimated that the 1990 amendments would cost industry between $51 billion and $91 billion a year. In fact, compliance costs are now estimated to have been just $22 billion annually upon full implementation of the law in the year 2005, 57 to 75 percent lower than the industry calculated, nearly 10 percent lower than the Bush administration even estimated in 1990.

We passed a law, it took a long time to do it, to control the pollutants that cause acid rain. When we were discussing that, the electric utilities came in and said this is a terrible idea, even though we were going to use market mechanisms to reduce the cost of the compliance to get these pollutants down. They said, it is going to cost between $1,000 and $1,500 for every 1 ton of sulfur dioxide emissions that we reduce.

We went ahead and adopted the law, especially at the urging of President Bush. We had in fact an allowance of now under $100 a ton of SO₂ emissions. There are other examples I can go through. But the essential point that I want to make to the Members is that the choice that we are being told by some people, that we are going to have to choose between protecting the environment or with extraordinary costs protecting the health of our kids, asthmatics, the elderly that live in our communities, on the one hand, or protecting jobs on the other, is an absolute false choice.

There was the issue before the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. She had recommendations from her scientific advisory board as to what is the standard to protect the public health. The Clean Air Act calls for her to set that standard. She set it based on good science. The President has said that those standards are to go into place. It is going to take maybe as much as a decade to reach those standards.

In the meantime, we can evaluate the science as more information might come up. We can develop implementation plans that are commonsense plans.

We were told in 1990, no more power lawnmowers, no more backyard barbecues. You cannot have a strong Clean Air Act. It will drive people out of business. People will lose their jobs. It is just not true. That has not been the reality. The dire consequences that industry has predicted have not and will not come to pass.

Mr. Chairman, I want to point out that the law was adopted in 1990, and we are now in the seventh year of an economic boom. We can show Members the statements made by some of these same people that are making these statements today, that our economy is going to be lost. So I want to put a little sense of perspective in this debate when Members come here with a great deal of anguish about the Clean Air Act.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAXMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I very much appreciate my colleague yielding. He and I have worked together regarding clean air matters for many a decade, and indeed, in the California Legislature we worked on the establishment of what is the toughest air quality management district in the country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WAXMAN was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAXMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, upon arriving in Congress, I was privileged to join my colleague in sponsoring legislation that would lead to the development of alternative fuel sources for automobiles. Indeed, we are both committed to this subject area.

However, I would say to the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] that I think he knows that I am among those who now are concerned that we make absolutely certain that we move along a pathway that is based upon sound science, particularly as it relates to people's health. That has to be our priority. But indeed, at this moment I am concerned about the kind of information flows that are coming between the Environmental Protection Agency, the administration, and the Congress.

The gentleman has taken some steps, I believe, to help improve that communication. Some of those channels opened just recently. I appreciate that. But it is most important to me that we not take steps without sound science if those steps would lead to undermining the credibility of our past clean air efforts have developed.

It is a very delicate moment. I certainly do not join those who are bringing the entire roof down as a result of every proposal, but in the meantime, that is why we have this funding in here for outside research by NIEHS to develop sound science and continued scientific work. So I appreciate continuing to work with the gentleman.

Mr. WAXMAN. Let me say to my good friend, the gentleman from California, that I know of his work in this area. We have collaborated together for a strong Clean Air Act. I know he has a strong commitment to cleaning up the environment and protecting the public health. I join the gentleman in wanting to be sure that we have good science upon which we make our determinations.

I think that the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency did get good science. Science is never definitive. We are always learning. That is why I do appreciate the fact that the gentleman is calling for more money to continue to review the scientific information.

If there is more information that comes about, an adjustment should be made and I think that is appropriate. We do not want anything frozen in any incorrect way. We have to respond to new information and new circumstances.

But the Clean Air Act, as the gentleman knows, has been a success because it is based on protecting the public health and based on a standard that is set, given the latest scientific information we have. Let us continue to review it, but I think that the standards that are being promulgated are worthy of going into effect because the science, I feel, is sufficient for the Administrator to making the determination.

Mr. LEWIS of California. I look forward to working with the gentleman.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAXMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

(Mr. VENTO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding and the points being made on this act. I appreciate especially the forbearance of Members who had planned to undo the work. I hope we can work with the EPA. This is an important issue. I happen to support the position of the gentleman from California on this, and I urge Members to continue to review this and monitor it.

Mr. Chairman, I opposed the amendment offered by Representative TIAHRT to reduce and or defund AmeriCorps but not because I do not care about our U.S. veterans as my colleagues on the other side of the aisle might have you think. On the contrary, I have nothing but great respect for the men and women that served our great Nation. It is because of this very respect for service that I must oppose the Tiaht amendment. It goes without saying that we need to research the causes of gulf war illness, but this is not the appropriate funding with which to conduct that research. Furthermore, approximately $100 million are provided to research this illness which too many in positions of authority have denied even exists.

Last year, more than 25,000 AmeriCorps members served across the United States. AmeriCorps members assisted more than 11.5 million people, collected almost 1 million pounds of food, and distributed 5,000 pounds of clothes. Participants in the AmeriCorps program ran violence-prevention after school programs for nearly 50,000 youth and developed and distributed almost 40,000 packets of information on drug abuse, health care, and street safety.

AmeriCorps volunteers immunized almost 65,000 children and adults, cleaned up over 3,000 neighborhoods, rehabilitated nearly 5,000 housing units, tutored over 500,000 children, and the list goes on. And let me not fail to mention the fact that the AmeriCorps Service Program leveraged almost 700,000 hours of service by unstipended volunteers last year.

My point is that AmeriCorps works. No matter what my colleagues on the other side of the aisle may tell you or what groups they may try to pit against each other—AmeriCorps works and is needed. The stipend paid AmeriCorps participants is needed by the degreed student graduate with tens of thousands of loan dollars owed. Graduates today don't have the financial ability not to respond to this in a modest way with a stipend.

This spring as all of you I am certain will recall, the Midwest was ravaged by the most horrible flooding in over 500 years. The floods were of truly Biblical proportions. People lost their homes, their belongings, and sometimes even the Main Street in their hometowns. Volunteers from the AmeriCorps Program did the State of Minnesota and the entire Midwest an invaluable service—they helped save the Heartland. AmeriCorps volunteers pitched sandbags, helped displaced families find emergency shelter, coordinated emergency food and medical deliveries in addition to leading other volunteers in one of the toughest battles against nature in five centuries. These teams of AmeriCorps workers were Red Cross trained and certified and they stayed with those Midwestern families until the end, and in fact some are still there working.

So you ask yourself if AmeriCorps is a necessary program and if you hesitate in your response, I can introduce you to tens of thousands of people from the flood ravaged plains of the Heartland who could make you certain that yes, indeed AmeriCorps is a necessary program.

I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the Tiaht amendment and to truly defend service. I have an editorial from the St. Paul Pioneer Press outlining the merits of the AmeriCorps Program which I would like to submit for the RECORD.

The material referred to is as follows:

[From the St. Paul Pioneer Press, June 29, 1997]

AMERICORPS WINNING CONGRESS TO ITS SIDE
(By Bill Salisbury)

Instead of holding traditional graduation ceremonies, about 350 Youth Works/AmeriCorps members from across Minnesota traveled to East Grand Forks and Crookston on Thursday and Friday to help in the ongoing cleanup after this spring's devastating floods.

To mark completion of their year of community service, the young volunteers helped child-care providers repair their homes, unloaded truckloads of donated supplies and removed sandbags.

While they were toiling in the Red River Valley, congressional budget-writers here were deliberating over the fate of AmeriCorps, President Clinton's 4-year-old pet program that gives students financial aid in exchange for a year of paid service.

The program is a favorite target of Republican critics, who see it as a political boondoggle and argue government has no business promoting volunteerism. They say the 24,000 AmeriCorps members are a drop in the ocean compared to the estimated 80 million Americans who do charity work of their own accord.

Critics question whether spending tax dollars on paid volunteers—each receives a $7,600 living allowance plus a $4,725 scholarship—should be a high priority in a time of tight budgets.

Last year, the House voted to zero out AmeriCorps' budget. It was restored later in negotiations with the Senate.

Former Sen. Harris Wofford, CEO of the Corporation for National Service, which runs AmeriCorps, answers the critics by measuring the results of the programs to show that they "get things done."

Last week, he trotted out a study of AmeriCorps accomplishments in 1995-96. In all, the study concluded, more than 9 million individuals benefited from AmeriCorps service.

Hardly anyone disputes that AmeriCorps volunteers do good work. The question is: Why do we need full-time, paid volunteers?

Answers Wofford: "You can't put part-time volunteers to use unless full-time people are there to set up the projects they're working on." He believes the AmeriCorps response to the Red River flood makes the case for full-time volunteers. At the request of the Red Cross, 15 members of the program were sent to Grand Forks on April 12.

Other teams followed. They pitched sandbags, rescued flood victims, helped displaced families, assisted at temporary shelters, coordinated emergency food delivery and conducted damage assessments. More than 70 AmeriCorps members were in the flood region, and teams are still working there.

Trained by the Red Cross in first aid, CPR and other skills needed in natural disasters, the teams "provided a cadre of leaders who organized other volunteers," Wofford said. "They came in fast, and they're staying to the end."

AmeriCorps volunteer Sheila Slem, 24, of Big Stone Gap, Va., just finished a four-week stint in Grand Forks. She didn't provide much leadership; she did back-breaking work on a "mud-out" crew. They cleaned sludge out of basements.

"Every time you went into a different house, you just prayed for the drains to work," Slem said. Most didn't, so the volunteers shoveled the muck into buckets and hauled it upstairs by hand, all day long. They slept on a college gym floor at night.

"No matter how tired you were, meeting the people we were helping made it all worthwhile," Slem said. The homeowners appreciated the help. Many cried in gratitude, she said. "Other people told us that we gave them hope not only for their own future, but hope for the next generation.

"Seeing the expressions on their faces and realizing we can make such a difference makes it more than worthwhile," she said. "You don't get that kind of satisfaction many places."

Slem is finishing her year of service and preparing to use her scholarship to attend Case Western Reserve University, where she plans to get a graduate degree in social program administration.

It's volunteers like Slem who seem to have persuaded Congress that AmeriCorps is worth keeping around after all. Last week, a House appropriations subcommittee voted to continue funding AmeriCorps at its current level. That was just the first hurdle in the budget process, but it probably was AmeriCorps' biggest obstacle.

It signaled that the biggest program that Clinton has added to the federal bureaucracy is likely to stick around for a while.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, whenever we have done clean air legislation we have done it on a bipartisan basis. It has never been a partisan issue. It should not be. We have always done it by trying to get all the very best information, but we should never give in to those who want to give us that false choice of an economy that is thriving and jobs on the one hand and protecting the environment on the other. We do not need to make that choice and history has borne out that we can have both.

Mr. CALVERT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this legislation. My fellow Californian and my close and good friend, the gentleman from California, Mr. JERRY LEWIS, should be commended for crafting a very responsible bill which will help us lead to cleaner air in the future. Among its other strengths, it protects veterans, improves housing programs, and ensures a cleaner environment.

I want to highlight a particularly important provision of the bill, as we have been discussing. As we know, the President has thrown his support behind EPA's proposed air quality standards for particulate matter and ozone. Whether Members support these standards or oppose them, one thing we should all agree on is that we need to do more research if we are to guarantee adequate protection for our children and the elderly.

As the chairman of the subcommittee that authorizes EPA's Office of Research and Development, I introduced a bill which passed through Congress and through our committee on a bipartisan basis unanimously to provide research money above the administration's request.

In three hearings we held on the matter, the scientific experts all concluded that the science was inadequate at this time. They said we needed additional funding to get at the very basic questions about the health effects of ozone, and particularly small particulates at the 2.5-micron-and-below size.

I am pleased that the gentleman from San Bernardino worked closely with me to provide the funds in this bill, and it is further evidence of his dedication to a cleaner environment. I congratulate the gentleman and thank him for his work.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have been listening to this discussion of these clean air standards promulgated by EPA with some interest. I am very glad that EPA has promulgated these standards. There has been increasing scientific evidence for a long time, and in particular with respect to the very small particulate matter which previously was thought not to have deleterious impacts on health and now we know has the most severe impact on health.

I think it noteworthy that it was the scientific people in EPA who said to promulgate these standards. Where did the questioning come from? Not from the scientific people, the health people, but from people in the Office of Management and Budget, from people concerned with budgets and economics.

Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN]. History shows us that it is a false choice to say the environment or jobs. We have had much more stringent environmental regulations than previously and we have had the greatest boom in recent history. What history shows us is that far from being an economic detriment, stronger compliance with clean air standards, stronger clean air standards, leads to the creation of jobs in attaining the clean air standards.

Yes, companies have to spend money. Local governments have to spend money in attaining clean air, higher clean air standards, in cleaning up emissions. But what do they spend money on? They spend money on more equipment, on scrubbers, which someone must manufacture. They spend money. They spend money on technology or on different means of waste disposal, all of which creates jobs. So I do not think that there is a conflict here.

But even if there were a conflict, how do you say to a mother of a child dying from asthma, or a middle-aged person in severe respiratory distress, "That is too bad, it would have cost an extra penny cigarette tax or an extra 2 cents gasoline tax to save your life and the lives of several thousand people like you"? I do not see how we make that equation. I would not want to be in the position of having to explain that to people in health difficulties.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NADLER. I yield to the gentleman from Rhode Island.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Chairman, it is a good point the gentleman is making. The fact is, we hear a lot about this questioning of scientific data on this issue. The fact is, we can talk to any pulmonary physician, any doctor that takes care of people with asthma, emphysema, any kind of pulmonary disorder, and they will tell us, when any region of the country is in noncompliance they see a correlation between that region of the country being in noncompliance and a higher rate of incidence of asthma and hospitalizations due to pulmonary disorders.

So there is not a lot of confusion. There should not be any confusion on this floor about the health effects of air pollution, and most particularly on a day like today, when we are seeing a red alert here in the District of Columbia and in my region in New England. We are seeing higher hospitalizations as a result of this poor air quality.

Woe be on us if we do not do something to improve the air quality by moving forward with these EPA recommended standards.

Mr. NADLER. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman. He is entirely right. Any doctor will tell us that, especially with the ozone and the small particulate matter these regulations will for the first time deal with.

The gentlemen say that these new regulations will put 400 counties into noncompliance. That may be so. But that does not tell us that that is a terrible thing. That is a good thing. It means that we will start bringing up the breathability of the air in those 400 counties so people do not die or suffer health effects from breathing bad air in those 400 counties.

My own county of New York County is in noncompliance with current regulations. I wish the enforcement of EPA were stronger so we could get our city and State governments to take stronger action that some of us have been fighting for for years. So the fact that lots of areas will not be in compliance says we have now discovered that they are not in compliance, it is a fact of physics, it is a fact of health, it is not a thing to be deplored, and that we will now start curing that problem.

Again, there is no economic problem. We are told always that there is an economic problem. History does not bear that out. The science is good science. Those who oppose this science, we hear every time when we come to this, the industry says it is bad science. It is like the tobacco companies saying that the Surgeon General and EPA had bad science. I trust the professionals and EPA to make those decisions more than I trust people in industry with a vested interest, or for that matter, people in this House who have political and other interests.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. NADLER] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. NADLER was allowed to proceed for 30 additional seconds.)

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, these decisions ought to be made on the basis of the health and scientific evidence. That is why the Clean Air Act asks the EPA to update this data every 5 years. They have done that. We should not interpose a political judgment. If we need help for governments, local governments, for industries to attain these clean air standards, let us legislate that. Let us appropriate money if necessary. But let the science be the science. Let the health of our citizens be paramount. Let us protect our people.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I realize we are on title III, but since title II passed so fast, I did not get the chance to offer my amendment. For 5 years I have struggled with the Department of Housing and Urban Development to help the citizens of my district in Houston.

Houston is a city with a growing population, and with this growth there is a definite need to address the issues of more affordable housing and access to HUD programs.

Over the past 5 years I have tried to work with HUD and have received various verbal commitments and assurances that Houston, the fourth largest city in the Nation, would receive the necessary HUD staff and programs to be an effective agency for the citizens of Houston.

I have written numerous letters to HUD about this request. In fact, in a 1994 HUD memo from the Secretary's office, it suggested that the Houston field office be upgraded and receive all the available programs. Again, Houston is the fourth largest city in the country, and out of the 10 largest metropolitan areas, Houston is the only one without a fully serviceable HUD office.

With this amendment, I was going to send a message, realizing that on an appropriations bill we cannot legislate, but I was going to send a message to HUD that the citizens of Houston need an office of community planning and development and also an Office of Inspector General, making all HUD programs available in our Nation's fourth largest city.

The office of community planning and development provides technical assistance and the monitoring of State and local entities receiving Federal funds to assist with elderly and disabled housing loans, CDBG and funds for Houston's enhanced enterprise community.

When I go back to my district and I talk to seniors and families and local elected officials from Houston and from Pasadena, they all have some concerns about housing for the elderly. An office of community planning and development would aid the citizens in my district and the district of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN] to gain access and administer funds to renovate, locate, and build elderly housing. This office also oversees the funding and provides technical assistance to Houston's enhanced enterprise community.

HUD came up with a great idea to provide funds to local governments to help their economically disadvantaged areas. These areas are called Empowerment Zone and Enterprise Communities. Through tax breaks to businesses and access to Federal funds, HUD hoped to revitalize disadvantaged areas. Houston has an enhanced enterprise community. We have access to almost $200 million to help revitalize parts of Houston. It would be a shame not to have a local HUD office that could work with us.

Another program office that we do not have and is very needed is the office of inspector general. An office of inspector general has the mission to locate fraud, waste, and abuse in HUD programs. The most recent and blatant misuse of taxpayers' dollars is the dealer portion of the title I program. The title I program is designed to give people an opportunity to fix and improve their homes.

Unfortunately, there are some people who took advantage of this program for their own gains. The dealer portion of title I allowed a contractor to solicit homeowners into applying for a loan. Then the contractor would receive the money directly, do partial improvements, and keep the rest of the money while the homeowner had to foot the bill.

KTKR-TV in Houston investigated this abuse and they reported a whopping $50 million was stolen by corrupt dealers in Texas alone. They confronted contractors and even went to the HUD office here in Washington looking for answers. HUD's response was to eliminate the dealer portion of title I, which helped us, but again we could have caught this long before. If we had had an inspector general in Houston instead of being in the nearest office which is Fort Worth. Fort Worth, which is 200 miles from us, and with their budget crunch we could not get people to travel from Fort Worth to Houston to do the investigation. Again, this happened in the fourth largest city in the Nation.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I just want to echo the gentleman's comments. This is very important. I am sorry that the gentleman was not able to offer his amendment. But we are talking about the fourth largest city in the Nation, the third largest county in the Nation.

The fact is that there are other offices in smaller areas, smaller cities such as Miami, Albuquerque, where HUD has put the resources. We are not asking necessarily for additional staff but we are asking for the powers to address these problems, to ensure that the HUD programs are carried out properly and that we do not have the abuses like we have had with the title I program.

I commend the gentleman for offering his amendment or speaking on it.

Mr. GREEN. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, again the amendment was not germane because we cannot legislate on this appropriations bill. Again, the purpose of this amendment was to give us an opportunity to talk about Houston's situation. I appreciate both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], the ranking member, for their assistance in working on this issue.

This did not just come up yesterday. We have a chronology of letters starting in 1995, but also personal visits for 5 years with HUD officials to talk about upgrading the office and needs of Houston. HUD, plain and simple, has been unresponsive to the needs of the citizens of Houston. Because of this, those of us who share Houston, Mr. Chairman, will be back and looking to see that the citizens of Houston get the service they deserve.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GREEN] has expired.

(On request of Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas, and by unanimous consent, Mr. GREEN was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I want to applaud the gentleman for his foresight on this amendment. I am sorry that his amendment was not offered. I wanted to join him in the great concern for an enhanced HUD office in the Houston area serving all of our districts.

Particularly I want to emphasize the need for an inspector general, and, as well, the gentleman is right with the enterprise zone money. We want the best utilization of those enterprise zone moneys, and a planning component would be vital. I hope HUD will listen to us. I hope that we can again have another meeting, this time with Secretary Cuomo, on this very important issue that would help enhance this area.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, again, I thank the chairman for the commitment to work with us over the next year, and we will be looking for other opportunities to address the needs of Houston.

Mr. BRADY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to engage the chairman in a brief colloquy regarding the Center for Space Power. The Center for Space Power is located at Texas A&M University in College Station, TX, in the Eighth District which I represent. The center provides many positive benefits to the space industry, such as developing technologies for space power, commercial ventures, and conducting research and development for space power with NASA.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to work with the gentleman to request inclusion of language from last year's appropriation legislation which recognizes the very positive contributions of the Center for Space Power and urges NASA to continue to support this activity, and hope that the chairman agrees with me.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRADY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I very much appreciate the gentleman bringing this to my attention one more time and in doing so representing his district so well. I thank the gentleman for his remarks and pledge to work with him on the issue as we move through the conference with the Senate.

I might add further, for the Members, the amendment pending is supported by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and me. It will be passed by a voice vote, and following that I believe we will get to the end of the title and have a series of votes at that point in time.

Mr. BRADY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WISE

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Amendment offered by Mr. WISE:

At the end of title III, insert the following:

CHEMICAL SAFETY AND HAZARD INVESTIGATION BOARD (INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For necessary expenses of the Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board, as authorized by section 112(r)(6) of the Clean Air Act, $3,000,000 which shall be derived by transfer from amounts made available in the account for "ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY—Environmental Programs and Management".

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, following the discussion I believe there are several Members that wish to discuss this. The agreement I had with our chairman and ranking member was that we would then move to or ask permission to withdraw the amendment.

It is important to have this amendment up for discussion. What this amendment does is to remove, to transfer, not to remove but to transfer $3 million from the EPA Environmental Programs and Management Fund to the Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board. What is the Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board? A very good question. It is a board that was created by this Congress in 1990. And it was directed that there be five appointees by the President in creating this board that is similar to the National Transportation Safety Board.

The Chemical Safety Board was established as an independent agency modeled after the Transportation Safety Board and charged with investigating and reporting findings concerning chemical-related accidents.

In 1994 the Senate actually confirmed three of the President's nominees as board members. Three of the five have been confirmed by the Senate. However, since then the administration, and particularly the Office of Management and Budget, have refused to submit the board's budget to the Congress of the United States.

What we are doing is asking in this amendment that the Congress take some of the money that is necessary for the operation of this board and actually give it to the board.

You might ask, why is it the administration has refused to act upon and mandate a directive of the Congress? The administration says that in the investigation of chemical accidents, that the EPA and OSHA can do the same job. But that is not what the Congress thought in 1990. In fact, the Congress directed that in creating the Chemical Safety Board in the same manner as the National Transportation Safety Board, that it would be able to have enhanced ability to investigate the root causes of chemical accidents and chemical incidents.

The purpose is to create a board similar to the National Transportation Safety Board, a board which would have authority to investigate and report on root causes of chemical accidents, a board that would not assign blame for specific accidents, and indeed a board in which the information presented to it could not be used for prosecution or litigation; in other words, a board that all parties could feel comfortable working with.

Does this take away the very important powers of the EPA and OSHA? No, it does not. They still have their regulatory powers. They still have their prosecutorial powers. They still have their investigative powers. But this board would be able to get at the root causes in ways that the EPA and OSHA never could.

The administration claims that there is a memorandum of understanding fully functional between EPA and OSHA that makes it unnecessary to have this board. Not the case. In the roughly two years that OSHA and EPA have operated under the board's function, they have produced no joint reports on accidents, sometimes in violation of their own deadlines. Perhaps they do not work as well together as they should.

At any rate, this board is directed to do exactly what EPA and OSHA are not doing so well together. This board is the only entity that has the solid statutory and legal authority to investigate accidents. The root causes of accidents are what we are trying to get at. Is there a pattern? How can you avert that pattern? That is what this board is about.

The board commands community support. It has industrial support. It has union support. Indeed, much as the National Transportation Safety Board has provided the necessary credibility and the necessary research into the cause of aviation and railroad and other accidents, so the Chemical Safety Board would do the same. It has a chairman, Paul Hill, who has a great deal of respect. He is presently chair and president of the National Institute of Chemical Studies created in my State of West Virginia following the Bhopal tragedy.

What he has done there in some ways, in many ways is what is trying to be done on a national level. It has two other board members. They are called upon to go out and investigate accidents. The only problem is they have no money to get there. They have nothing that they can do once they are there.

So what this amendment would seek to do is to send a clear statement to the administration that what Congress has directed that you create, namely, the Chemical Safety Board, that a board in which there are already three presidential appointees, not only appointees nominated but appointees confirmed by the Senate, indeed a board that has powers unique to itself and very important to the true investigation of chemical-related accidents, that this board be adequately funded.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WISE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. I thank him very much for offering this amendment and for the committee's indulgence in our consideration of this amendment.

I believe that this is a terribly important amendment. Like the gentleman from West Virginia, I represent a constituency that has many petrochemical industries within the boundaries of my congressional district. We have refineries and we have manufacturers of chemicals and users of those chemicals.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] has expired.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman makes an important point that this board holds out the prospect of allowing the communities and the industries to cohabitate, because the industry knows that it can invite this board in to look at the root causes of these serious accidents and explosions and other incidents and not suffer the concern about liability; that this evidence or this discussion or this investigation can be used in litigation. And then they can share that with others in the industry in similarly situated facilities and hopefully reduce and improve their efficiency, reduce the accidents and have some confidence of the community that, in fact, an effort is made to get to the root causes.

In my own community we have suffered a number of accidents in this recent year, but the problem is that the community has lost its faith in the regulatory agencies. They are in a confrontation with the regulator, with the industries. They have lost their faith in the industry. I believe this board can provide a circuit breaker so we can get back to a discussion of the problems that confront these industries.

I just wondered if the gentleman knows, my understanding is this memorandum of understanding has not been completed, and EPA itself has some serious questions about whether or not they have the authority to conduct their part that has been assigned to them by the administration.

Mr. WISE. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, the memorandum is truly nonfunctional at this point, is my understanding, and the two agencies simply are not working together, either under it or in any other context, as they should be.

And, indeed, as the gentleman points out, they will never be able to perform the purpose of this board because they do bring the prosecutorial side to it and the regulatory side.

Mr. MILLER of California. If the gentleman will continue to yield, the industry has got to be reluctant to allow EPA in because EPA has another function. OSHA has another function. That is, in fact, they have to fine them or deal with the industries in a regulatory sense if they see these flaws. And yet those are the same agencies we are asking to come in and do an impartial discussion, investigation of the root causes.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, this is like if someone knows they have a problem and they want to clean it up but the only person they can invite in is the policeman and the prosecuting attorney.

Mr. MILLER of California. Exactly. That is the importance. And I would hope that the committee, in further deliberations, would consider funding this board.

I think this board that was arrived at is an answer that was arrived at by industry, by concerned citizens, by professional organizations so that we could, in fact, get to the root causes of some tragic, tragic accidents, that I will go into in a moment here that have happened not only in my district but elsewhere in the country; and, again, I thank the gentleman for offering his amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WISE was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to say that, for those who would feel that it is hard to make progress sometimes when there is only an option of more prosecution or more regulation, then this board, I think, meets those concerns because the information derived from its findings cannot be used in prosecution or litigation. For those who believe from an environmental standpoint that we need more investigation of chemical accidents, this board also meets those concerns.

That is why I am grateful for the bipartisan support, such as the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOX], the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT], the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER], and others who have been so active in promoting this.

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment.

I first want to thank the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE], the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] for their leadership on this issue.

I rise with my colleagues to offer the amendment. In offering the amendment we wish to raise awareness on an environmental and safety issue which is nonregulatory in nature. We are asking the House to act and appropriate funds for the chemical safety and hazard investigation board. It is our belief this board has the potential to save lives through its findings and to enhance the public's trust of Government and industry.

Created under the 1990 Clean Air Act amendments, the Chemical Safety Board was and is a forward-thinking concept, a board that would investigate the root causes of accidents without threatening companies with litigation or enforcement actions which may come as a result of the involvement of a regulatory agency such as EPA or OSHA.

The board will allow more thorough investigations of accidents such as the explosion and fire in a tank farm and oil plant in Freedom, PA, which left three employees dead. The board's findings may prevent further accidents such as the hydrogen peroxide explosion at a chemical plant in Linwood, PA, which left one plant worker dead.

I too share the concerns of many who have followed the board's history concerning the creation of a new Federal agency. However, it is my belief and that of others that the benefits that may accrue to the public, industry, and Government far outweigh this particular concern. A nonregulatory body such as this, modeled after the respected National Transportation Safety Board, will lead to greater cooperation between industry, labor, communities, and governments in the interest of public safety. Only the board will have the statutory authority to do this kind of work in the most effective manner and many in industry are beginning to recognize this.

I would prefer to see this board conduct the necessary investigations rather than another agency. Our amendment would take $3 million already appropriated and direct it to the board.

We are interested in working with the chairman, who has done an outstanding job with the bill and with the committee and my colleagues to ensure that, should the board be funded, it would be closely watched and held to its primary mission of investigating accidents and providing safety recommendations for workers.

In that regard I ask that my colleagues support our call for a non-regulatory body which would enhance public safety.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOX] for his support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. Chairman, in January of this year a hydrocracker reactor exploded at an oil refinery in my district and killed a worker, Michael Glanzman, and injured 44 others in a blast that could be felt 20 miles away.

The year before that, again in my district, two workers were injured when a hydrogen unit blew up. The explosion sent a 24-inch elbow pipe which crashed into a trailer normally filled with workers but, thankfully, was empty during the accident.

In 1993 a toxic cloud of sulfuric acid spread throughout one area of my district, sending thousands of residents to the hospital and spurring a widespread effort to provide a better warning system to the local community in the event of future industrial accidents. These accidents have cost these industries tens of millions of dollars.

The amendment offered by my colleague from West Virginia on behalf of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOX], the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] and the gentleman from California [Mr. STARK] seeks to devote adequate resources to prevent the kinds of horrific industrial chemical accidents that have killed and injured workers by the score over the years, terrifying and polluting our communities across this Nation.

The Chemical Safety Board, if funded today, would help prevent fatal chemical accidents from occurring in the future. It will not do so by punishing companies for past accidents but by providing information on those accidents so that the industry can learn from their mistakes rather than simply pay for them.

While responsible parties must accept blame in the face of appropriate penalties for violations of the law, the board's job is not to assign blame. That is the job of the regulatory agencies. The reports prepared by the board cannot be used to sue chemical companies or to prosecute them. The board will determine whether the accident is just that or whether systematic errors are at the heart of the tragedy, systematic errors that can be addressed and hopefully be remedied.

The board is modeled after the National Transportation Safety Board, which has helped to make flight one of the safest means of travel in the world. The Chemical Safety Board is an investigatory board that examines the root causes of industrial accidents resulting in serious injuries, fatalities and major property damage.

Mr. Chairman, the Congress was correct when in 1990 it established a Chemical Safety Board. It has erred, however, in failing to fund that board since then.

The current system of root cause investigation is unacceptable. President Clinton, in an effort to reinvent government, divided the board's responsibilities and assigned them to the EPA and to OSHA.

EPA, part of the overall funding increase in this bill, has been given additional funding to carry out this mission. OSHA, on the other hand, has been asked to perform this with additional responsibility with no additional funding, further taxing the limited resources of this important agency.

Mr. Chairman, I support the work of EPA and OSHA, but it is improper and impractical to ask them to carry out the investigation of the root causes of chemical accidents. EPA and OSHA are regulatory, not investigatory agencies. For better or worse, they have often had adversarial relationships with the industries that they are now being asked to investigate. Moreover, Mr. Chairman, EPA and OSHA are facing difficulty working together under this vague memorandum of understanding referred to by the gentleman from West Virginia. In the 2 years since they have taken on the board's mission, they have yet to produce an accident report jointly, sometimes in violation of these deadlines.

More importantly, they have questionable statutory authority, a startling fact noticed by industry. In my own district, EPA officials approaching a plant to investigate a recent accident were stopped at the gate by the plant employees who requested written authority to enter the plant. EPA officials were not able to produce such authority and I understand were denied entry. The authority, Mr. Chairman, resides completely within the Chemical Safety Board.

This does not sound like prevention to me. I understand there is support for the efforts in the Senate, and I would urge the subcommittee chairman and the ranking member to consider supporting amendments today to transfer to the board and give funds to EPA to do the board's work. It is not a large amount of money, but the board is not a large institution. Let us fund the mission, let us send a message to the communities like mine and so many others across the country that Congress supports an effort to make them a safer place to live.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of California. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate my colleague from California yielding, and I appreciate very much the way the gentleman from California, as well as the gentleman from West Virginia, are dealing with this issue today.

There is little doubt that the House needs to clarify what is not occurring as a result of both the Congress and the administration's past directions. The problem is a very real problem that faces the entire country and, indeed, the Hazardous Chemical Safety Board should not be in the midst of this, and I look forward to working with the gentlemen who are effectively concerned about the issue and appreciate the manner in which they are handling it today.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I appreciate the gentleman's consideration in allowing us to discuss this amendment, and I hope we can work with him in the future to make sure the full authority is restored to this board as well as its funding.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask you to support the Wise amendment to the VA-HUD-independent agencies appropriations bill. The amendment would reallocate to the Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board the $3 million the Environmental Protection Agency has asked for to perform the functions of the Board.

Mr. Chairman, just last month:

One train worker was killed, two were injured, and hundreds of people shut themselves in their homes for hours after a train carrying hazardous chemicals rear-ended a coal train and burst into flames near Charleston, WV;

Five employees were sent to the hospital after a chemical spill at a silicon chip plant in San Jose;

Four workers were sent to the hospital after an unexplained escape of toxic chemical vapors from a tanker truck in Buffalo;

Two high school seniors and a science teacher were sent to the hospital after a bottle of hydrochloric acid toppled over during chemistry class in Orange County, CA;

Two workers were hospitalized for hydrogen cyanide exposure following a spill at a chemical plant near Memphis;

Two people were sent to the hospital after a chemical spill at a chemical waste management business near Dayton;

Hundreds of residents were evacuated after a chlorine spill at a chemical plant in Watervliet, NY;

Two hundred people were evacuated and nearly two dozen sent to the hospital after a hydrochloric acid spill from a tanker in Industry, CA;

One hundred people were evacuated in south-central Los Angeles after the discovery of a toxic acid leak from a pressurized gas cylinder left in a residential alley;

Residents were evacuated and train traffic disrupted after a hydrochloric acid spill in Albany, NY; and Rush hour traffic was snarled for hours after a tanker truck full of corrosive chemicals crashed south of Boston.

Every year thousands of chemical accidents are reported to the Federal Government, resulting in death, injury, evacuation, and disruption of the economy. That is why, in the reauthorization of the Clean Air Act in 1990, Congress established the Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board. The Board was intended to be an independent body investigating the root causes of chemical accidents and recommending approaches of preventing them, operating much like the respected National Transportation Safety Board.

We need the Board today, just as badly as we needed it in 1990. I urge you to support the Wise amendment and full funding of the Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, in the hopes that just as the House has listened, the Office of Management and Budget has also been listening.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is withdrawn.

SEQUENTIAL VOTES POSTPONED IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 184, proceedings will now resume on those amendments on which further proceedings were postponed, in the following order:

Gonzalez	Schiff	Young (AK)
Portman	Spratt

Mr. FORBES changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Mr. SKELTON and Mr. PALLONE changed their vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Chairman, because I was unavoidably detained, I was not in attendance for rollcall vote No. 278.

Had I been in attendance, I would have voted "aye".

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE IV—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. Where appropriations in titles I, II, and III of this Act are expendable for travel expenses and no specific limitation has been placed thereon, the expenditures for such travel expenses may not exceed the amounts set forth therefore in the budget estimates submitted for the appropriations: Provided, That this provision does not apply to accounts that do not contain an object classification for travel: Provided further, That this section shall not apply to travel performed by uncompensated officials of local boards and appeal boards of the Selective Service System; to travel performed directly in connection with care and treatment of medical beneficiaries of the Department of Veterans Affairs; to travel performed in connection with major disasters or emergencies declared or determined by the President under the provisions of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act; to travel performed by the Offices of Inspector General in connection with audits and investigations; or to payments to interagency motor pools where separately set forth in the budget schedules: Provided further, That if appropriations in titles I, II, and III exceed the amounts set forth in budget estimates initially submitted for such appropriations, the expenditures for travel may correspondingly exceed the amounts therefore set forth in the estimates in the same proportion.

SEC. 402. Appropriations and funds available for the administrative expenses of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Selective Service System shall be available in the current fiscal year for purchase of uniforms, or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901-5902; hire of passenger motor vehicles; and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

SEC. 403. Funds of the Department of Housing and Urban Development subject to the Government Corporation Control Act or section 402 of the Housing Act of 1950 shall be available, without regard to the limitations on administrative expenses, for legal services on a contract or fee basis, and for utilizing and making payment for services and facilities of Federal National Mortgage Association, Government National Mortgage Association, Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, Federal Financing Bank, Federal Reserve banks or any member thereof, Federal Home Loan banks, and any insured bank within the meaning of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1811-1831).

SEC. 404. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 405. No funds appropriated by this Act may be expended—

(1) pursuant to a certification of an officer or employee of the United States unless—

(A) such certification is accompanied by, or is part of, a voucher or abstract which describes the payee or payees and the items or services for which such expenditure is being made, or

(B) the expenditure of funds pursuant to such certification, and without such a voucher or abstract, is specifically authorized by law; and

(2) unless such expenditure is subject to audit by the General Accounting Office or is specifically exempt by law from such audit.

Ms. DEGETTE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, I would like to thank the chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the ranking member of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] for the work they have done on this bill. As the distinguished chairman from California knows, I was inclined to offer an amendment to title II of this bill to increase the community development block grant by $25 million for the redevelopment of polluted urban brownfield sites. I understand that the chairman supports brownfields redevelopment, but has some concerns about dealing with this particular initiative which has not been authorized in this bill. I can appreciate that. By agreement, we have decided not to offer the amendment today.

I would like to speak for a few minutes, however, about the need to undertake brownfields development.

I was disappointed to learn that this legislation today does not include the $25 million request from the administration to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for grants for redevelopment of brownfields. As Members know, title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes the Secretary of HUD to make grants to units of local government and States for local community development programs. The primary objective of the block grant program is to develop viable urban communities and to expand economic opportunities, principally for low and moderate income persons.

Mr. Chairman, that gets to the heart of what I, along with my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE], today am trying to do here. The money we are talking about in this amendment would go toward the block grant program to develop these viable urban communities and expand economic opportunities.

I can say that spending a lot of time in my own community, I know how vital redevelopment of brownfields can be in urban areas and how exciting it can be when these areas are redeveloped. As it is, brownfields are a blight on our urban and rural landscape. They are oftentimes abandoned industrial or commercial sites which remained undeveloped due to the uncertainty which surrounds them. There is an estimate that there are approximately 450,000 brownfield sites around the country, many of them in urban areas but also some in suburban and rural areas.

I have been encouraged by the administration's brownfields request for the EPA brownfields initiative and that it has been appropriated $85 million. However, this money is to be used only for assessment activities, not for cleanup actions and redevelopment.

I have personal experience with brownfields because I sponsored successful legislation in Colorado in 1993 which has now been used for over 60 brownfield sites in the State of Colorado, not simply assessment but to actually clean up those sites.

If we are truly to clean up our urban communities, if we are truly to develop urban areas, then we need to look at all possible areas in the Government, not just the EPA but also HUD, to really appropriate money.

So that is why I am pleased that the chairman and the ranking member have both agreed to work with us to find as much money as we can to put towards this brownfields redevelopment, and I do want to thank the Chair for recognizing me today.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to join with my colleague from Colorado in her effort. I understand, as she said, that this amendment on brownfields redevelopment will not be offered, but we did want to make a statement about why we think that the substance of that amendment is significant. Basically what the gentlewoman says is that this $25 million in additional funds would provide incentives to actually redevelop the brownfield sites.

I want to also mention that I am pleased with what the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] did to include $85 million in the bill for the brownfields assessment program. That is, of course, the assessment program. We, however, would like to see some additional money available, as was mentioned by the gentlewoman, for actual incentives to redevelop the sites.

I wanted to mention, Mr. Chairman, that in June there were 85 House Members on a bipartisan basis who sent a letter to the chairman and the ranking member in support of the President's request for a significant increase in the EPA's brownfields assessment program, and I wanted to thank the gentlewoman from Colorado [Ms. DEGETTE], the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. MALONEY] and the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS] for joining me in initiating that letter of support; also the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the ranking member, who has been a constant leader on the issue. We have a copy of this letter and a list of Members who signed it. I will include that letter for the RECORD.

Let me point out again, Mr. Chairman, that the reason this is important is because brownfields redevelopment has been and continues to be a priority for many Members regardless of party affiliation. We are very much united in this effort to guarantee that our children have access to open space and economic opportunity by providing incentives for the cleanup and redevelopment of brownfields rather than the development of pristine open space or the so-called greenfields.

The Clinton administration has been very helpful in assisting States and local governments in promoting the redevelopment of these brownfields initiatives. That is why I think it is very important to continue with this. I just want to say I really believe very strongly that this is something that could be addressed in conference.

I am obviously concerned that in the bill the subcommittee was not able to provide the money requested for this economic development grant program. I understand that there is language that was included that basically restricts the use of the money provided under the EPA's program. What I would hope is that when we get to conference, that my colleagues on the committee would reconsider this limitation so that money is either added, or at least the restrictive language is taken away so that some of this money can actually be used for cleanup and restoration.

Otherwise, I do want to thank the members of the subcommittee for their work, and again join with my colleague from Colorado in making this point.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order against section 420.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Chairman, this section violates clause 2 of rule XXI which prohibits legislation on an appropriations bill. The section would override section 320(g) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act by authorizing the use of funds for implementation of comprehensive conservation and management plans.

Current law does not authorize the use of funds for implementation of plans but only for the development of plans. Therefore, the section is legislative in nature, in violation of rule XXI, clause 2.

I would also point out, Mr. Chairman, that the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure will be considering the issue of authorizing and improving the national estuary program during this Congress. We are very much aware of the need to implement plans to protect America's estuaries.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there other Members wishing to be heard on the point of order?

The Chair is prepared to rule. Section 420 of the bill explicitly, albeit indirectly, amends the Water Pollution Control Act. As such it constitutes legislation in violation of clause 2(b) of rule XXI. The point of order is sustained. Section 420 is stricken from the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 421. Such funds as may be necessary to carry out the orderly termination of the Office of Consumer Affairs shall be made available from funds appropriated to the Department of Health and Human Services for fiscal year 1998.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. BENTSEN

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

SEC. 422. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used to implement clauses (ii) through (v) of section 761.93(a)(1) of title 40 of the Code of Federal Regulations (relating to the import of PCB's and PCB items at concentrations of 50 ppm or greater for disposal), or to authorize any person to import into the United States (Pursuant to an exemption under Section 2605(e)(3)(B) of title 15 of the United States Code or otherwise) any PCB's or PCB items at concentrations of 50 ppm or greater for purposes of disposal or treatment.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, given the fact that we passed over a number of amendments, I apologize for seeming anxious.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer an amendment on behalf of myself and the gentlewoman from Michigan [Ms. RIVERS] to prohibit the Environmental Protection Agency from using any funds under this act to allow the importation of polychlorinated biphenyls, PCB's, to be disposed of, including incinerated, in the United States.

Mr. Chairman, the EPA issued a final rule on March 18, 1996 to allow the importation of large quantities of PCB waste, reversing an EPA ban that had been in place since 1980. Later that same month, the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund initiated a legal challenge to the EPA decision allowing for the importation of PCB's based on the opinion that it violated the Toxic Substances Control Act of 1976.

Additionally, during consideration of H.R. 3666, the fiscal year 1997 VA-HUD appropriations bill, the House adopted a similar amendment I offered which was later dropped in conference with the other body. On July 8 of this year, the 9th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals ruled, in a unanimous decision, that EPA had violated the Toxic Substances Control Act of 1976. Chief Judge Proctor Hug wrote:

EPA lacked the statutory authority to promulgate the import rule, which violates the PCB manufacture ban contained in the Toxic Substances Control Act.

EPA, in the execution of the import for disposal rule, waived the yearly requirement to obtain an exemption from the administrator. This rule allowed the continual import of PCB waste in direct contradiction of the Toxic Substances Control Act of 1976. The court ruled that EPA's 1996 rule providing for the continuing importing indefinitely without interruption violates congressional intent with respect to the loan exemption under TSCA which would only allow such imports if the EPA administrator determines an unreasonable risk to injury or health or environment would not result because such exemption may not last longer than 1 year.

Mr. Chairman, EPA has failed to offer any scientific data or analysis to justify reversal of this ban. Their long-standing position has always been that PCB imports pose an unreasonable risk to health and safety.

On December 6, 1994, EPA emphasized that, and I quote:

the import of PCB's into the United States and the distribution of commerce of PCBs present an unreasonable risk of injury to human health and the environment.

Yet a year and a half later the EPA reversed itself with no new studies, no new research, no new reports that PCB's are anything less than a substance risk to human health and the environment. It is difficult to understand why EPA would change its position without any new scientific evidence.

We know from scientific research that PCB's accumulate in the environment and move toward the top of the food chain, contaminating fish, birds and ultimately humans. When incinerated, PCB's release dioxin, one of most toxic chemicals known to man. As a result, PCB's are the only chemical that Congress has identified for phaseout under TSCA.

Since 1979, PCB's have not been manufactured in the United States. With this ban in place, the amount of PCB's in the United States have steadily decreased but the range of health and environment effects has not. Incinerators in Kansas, Utah, Pennsylvania, and two sites in southeast Texas burn more than 800,000 tons of domestic PCB waste each year.

This rule might be necessary if Canada and Mexico, two countries expected to send us most of their PCB's, did not have facilities located within their borders to dispose of PCB waste. Both countries do have such facilities designated to handle PCB waste. Mexico even exports some PCB waste to Europe for disposal.

Furthermore, EPA makes contradictory statements with regard to the issue. In a 1991 internal memorandum regarding this issue of PCB's and NAFTA negotiations, Elizabeth F. Bryan, then deputy director for exposure, wrote:

It is likely that Mexico would be discouraged from development adequate disposal facilities for their own PCB waste, if the United States accepts their waste.

This memo further states:

Congress clearly intended to ban PCB's in the United States. That intent should not be diluted through considerations of free trade.

Yesterday the EPA put out an analysis of my amendment in which they state:

EPA closed its borders to PCB waste in 1980 to encourage the development of disposal industries in Canada and give the United States time to phase out much of our use of PCB's.

These goals have been accomplished.

I would also like to add that the Canadian disposal industry opposed EPA's rule and presented compelling evidence that Canada is fully capable of handling their own PCB waste. EPA agreed with that view as late as December 1994 when they said, "EPA does not want to encourage the expansion of PCB's where there are feasible alternatives already in place."

In closing, Mr. Chairman, I ask that my colleagues accept this amendment. The last thing we need to do is be accepting dangerous PCB's as a form of business in the United States.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word and to essentially express some slight reservation, because this item is in the courts. The ninth circuit is currently in the process of considering an appeal.

On the other hand, the House did adopt this matter on a voice vote last year. I frankly think the committee would not have any reservation about this going forward and we would be willing, after some more discussion takes place, to accept it if my ranking member would do the same.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I just rise to agree with the chairman of the subcommittee that this is a matter that was accepted last year, and if the chairman is inclined to accept the matter at this time, then there is no objection on this side.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STOKES. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, with the agreement of the gentleman from Ohio, we would accept the amendment. I would suggest to Members who are anxious about this, while I welcome their comments, others, if they want to, can revise and extend their remarks.

Ms. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the proposal currently on the floor. I joined with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN] last year to offer this, as well as having offered it in the free-standing bill.

Mr. Chairman, I am concerned about simply accepting it this year. As people may recall, last year we did that but it was stripped from the bill in conference and never made it into law. While there is a recent decision in the courts regarding this matter, it still is in appeal and prudence does recommend legislative action by this body.

Why should we be concerned about this? For several reasons. PCB's are substances that, as a group, are extremely toxic and long-lived, they are proven cancer causers, and they disrupt hormone systems and cause reproductive and endocrine damage in human beings. These are not your garden variety carcinogens.

In fact, PCB's are the only substance ever specifically banned by an act of Congress in this Toxic Substance Control Act of 1976. Yet in 1996, the EPA decided to allow the importation of these chemicals. At that time many of us argued that the decision had more to do with keeping waste disposal facilities in the United States profitable than in keeping the public safe.

Unfortunately, that view turned out to be prophetic. In an AP story published July 8, the EPA is quoted as arguing that the import ban was no longer needed because the U.S. waste disposal industry had enough incinerator capacity to handle foreign PCB waste. The industry, which was running out of domestically produced PCB's to destroy, and I want to repeat that, the industry, which was running out of domestically produced PCB's to destroy, could make up to $100 million a year from incinerating imported PCB's, the EPA said.

The EPA also said at that time that some surveys had estimated more than 173,000 tons of PCB-tainted material existed in Canada and another 60,000 tons in Mexico.

Mr. Chairman, this body cannot tolerate a calculus that values the fiscal health of the toxic waste industry over the physical health of our citizens. For these reasons I would urge my colleagues to vote for this provision, and I would urge the chairman to allow a vote, and I would urge conferees not to strip the provision from the final bill at the end of their conference. This is a serious issue that deserves our attention and our action.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] for accepting this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Bentsen amendment, and I commend my colleague from Houston for his leadership on this important issue.

On March 15, 1996, the EPA issued a final rule to amend the Federal PCB regulations and allow the import of PCB waste for disposal in permitted facilities in the United States.

This rule allows the importation of foreign PCB waste for disposal in the United States.

The EPA has estimated that the U.S. disposal industry would receive $50 to $100 million annually if PCB's are imported into the United States from Canada and Mexico.

And where would PCB's be disposed? In Kansas, Utah, Pennsylvania, Port Arthur, TX, and Channelview, TX.

Mr. BENTSEN's amendment would prohibit the EPA from using any funds to implement its final rule.

PCB's when incinerated release dioxin—one of the most toxic chemicals known.

Dioxin, as we all know, causes a wide range of adverse health effects and it accumulates in the environment.

The incineration of PCB's is recognized as a health hazard.

That's why the Congress designed a phase out of domestic PCB manufacture in the Toxic Substance Control Act of 1976.

Last week, the ninth circuit court overturned EPA's rule to allow the importation of PCB's. The Bentsen amendment will ensure the continual prohibition of imported PCB's even if EPA exercises its option to appeal this ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

I urge my colleagues to support this important amendment.

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's yielding.

In closing on this amendment, and I know there are other amendments Members want to get to and to finish this bill, this is not a question of international trade. I am a free trader, but this is not a good or a service that I believe we ought to be importing. This is a dangerous chemical. It is dangerous waste.

We are taking care of our own PCB's in this country. We do not need to take care of PCB waste from other countries which, ironically, will not take exports of PCB's from the United States.

The fact is that this is not a debate about the domestic incineration of PCB's. That is another matter. We take care of our own, but we should not take care of others.

The fact is that the EPA clearly intends to appeal this rule. They would not be opposed to this amendment otherwise. So I would encourage my colleagues to support this amendment and I would encourage the managers of the bill to defend this amendment with the Senate. I realize it is not the courts, but this is something that clearly is not in line with Congressional intent from the TOSCA Act.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN].

AMENDMENT NO. 22 OFFERED BY MR. SOLOMON

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

SEC. 422. None of the funds made available in this act may be provided by contract or by grant (including a grant of funds to be available for student aid) to any institution of higher education, or subelement thereof, that is currently ineligible for contracts and grants pursuant to section 514 of the Department of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1997 (as contained in section 101(e) of division A of Public Law 104-208; 110 Stat. 3009-270).

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, the amendment that I am offering with the gentleman from California [Mr. POMBO] should be familiar to most Members, as it has passed this House several times with bipartisan support, and is now permanent law for defense funds and funds covered by the Labor/HHS appropriations bill.

This amendment would simply prevent any funds appropriated in this act from going to institutions of higher learning which prevent military recruiting on their campus, or have an anti-ROTC policy.

The amendment would not affect direct student aid funds such as Federal Direct Loans and Pell grants, nor would it affect institutions with longstanding, religiously based pacifist traditions.

Mr. Chairman, institutions that are receiving Federal taxpayer money should not be able to then turn their back on the young people who defend this country.

This is especially important in today's environment, when, as we know, military recruiters are already having trouble filling their quotas with able applicants due to 13 straight years of defense budget cuts.

It is more important than ever that we not allow campus administrators with ideological agendas to prevent recruiters from explaining the benefits of an honorable career in our Armed Forces to our young people.

It is really a matter of simple fairness, and that is why this amendment has always received such strong bipartisan support.

I would also like to note that, since the gentleman from California [Mr. POMBO] and I started this process a few years back, we have seen a great deal of progress on college campuses. Many schools have publicly announced a shift in their antimilitary policies and many more have quietly followed suit.

The legislation is working, and we can all be proud of that.

However, it is necessary to round out the process by attaching the amendment to just a couple of more appropriations bills, including this one today, and writing it into permanent law.

Then I believe we will have a powerful deterrent in place which will give our fine military recruiters the tools and confidence they need to carry out their constitutional functions to the best of their abilities.

I urge a "yes" vote on the amendment.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Solomon amendment to H.R. 2158 to prohibit the use of funds in the VA-HUD appropriations bill, by any Department or Agency, for grants or contracts to universities and colleges that do not give ROTC and military recruiters access to the general student population.

This amendment levies a grossly unfair and extreme bias against religious institutions that do not allow secular military or ROTC recruiting to occur on their campuses. Individual students and institutions will be penalized simply because they choose to attend a religious institution.

Not only is this fundamentally unfair to the institutions and students but this is also an unfair mixing of church and State.

I strongly urge my colleagues to vote "no" on this unfair amendment.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. VENTO

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Amendment offered by Mr. VENTO:

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following new section:

SEC. 422. The amounts otherwise provided by this Act are revised by increasing the amount made available for "INDEPENDENT AGENCIES—FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY—EMERGENCY FOOD AND SHELTER PROGRAM", and reducing the amount made available for "INDEPENDENT AGENCIES—NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION—HUMAN SPACE FLIGHT", by $30,100,000 and $43,000,000, respectively.

Mr. VENTO (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California reserves a point of order.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment that I had printed in the RECORD yesterday, and which was in order in title III. I would suggest that, if there are unanimous consents that are going to occur and that are reasonable, that they should be recognized.

My concern is that this amendment previously has been ruled out of order because I came and we were on page 61, and now we, of course, are at the end of the bill and it should be in order now.

This deals with the Emergency Food and Shelter Program and the public/private partnership. It is a public/private partnership that works. Since the program began in 1983, $1.6 billion has been appropriated to the FEMA Emergency Food and Shelter Program. What I am proposing here is to raise the funding to $130 million from $100 million that is in the bill.

Why this reduction was instituted or persists is not at all clear and certainly was not justified with a program that works. Funds under this extremely well run program reach communities within 45 days from the date of release from FEMA. It is not an emergency management regular program. In fact, this program works and there is no scandals, there are no adverse GAO reports, no adverse Inspector General flack, no bad reports of this program.

It is a program unique because it helps not with disasters from Mother Nature but with personal emergencies of people who have become very often homeless. An increased number of social and economic casualties, of course, are occurring today.

The program combines rapid national distribution with the expertise of local nonprofit charitable organizations in delivering services where they are most needed and builds upon the solid foundation of assistance that historically has been provided by the State and local charities and nonprofits.

The Federal Government has not taken over the program and the challenge, rather the Emergency Food and Shelter, the FEMA program, has become a partnership building upon that which exists and works. The administrative costs of this program are very low, about 3.5 percent locally and nationally.

There is no doubt that such success is owed to the partnership form with the unique national board made up of the American Red Cross, the Catholic Charities, the Council of Jewish Federations, the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States, the Salvation Army, the United Way, and FEMA. We should be celebrating and rewarding the success of the collaboration, not shortchanging it.

Mr. Chairman, some have suggested compassion fatigue exists in America because problems are not alleviated. It is important to note that the Emergency Food and Shelter and HUD homeless programs, modest programs in size, have helped hundreds of thousands of families and individuals, but our economics and society throughout the 1980's and 1990's continues to sustain new homelessness.

It is a dynamic population and, as a Congress working with local and State, especially with the private nonprofits, we should stay involved with solid financial commitments, Mr. Chairman. The Federal dollars in the Emergency Food and Shelter Program, the FEMA Program, and the HUD homeless programs leverage private funding.

The nonprofits, who historically dealt with a demographically different population and social problems, today are operating on overload. They cannot respond to the problems and needs in the same way that they did yesterday because of the gravity and the severity of those problems. Specifically, reviewing the fiscal year 1996, the national board, the specific program that I am talking about here, accomplished a great deal with the dollars they have available.

Mr. Chairman, I would point out that we are cutting money in this amendment by reducing the NASA Human Space Flight Program by $43 million in order to provide the $30 million for this program. Because it does spend out quicker, there is a difference. This program serves to alleviate the plight of the homeless right down here on terra firma, that is on the ground of Mother Earth.

As Members should be aware, the NASA budget is in excess of the administration's request, this particular portion, by $100 million. There has not been a NASA, an OMB or administration request or justification for this funding. We do not have to be rocket scientists to understand the demand and the positive needs that we need in terms of the increase to provide emergency food and shelter.

As I said, the program is working. Unfortunately, many in our society continue to experience homelessness and I would urge Members to support this sound amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk, amendment No. 26 which has been ruled out of order because it starts at page 57 and amends page 61 and we were upon page 61. I'm very disappointed that the consideration was not provided even though we were in the same title III and had moved so quickly to this point in the bill, therefore I'm offering it at the end of the bill as a new section 422.

The Emergency Food and Shelter [EFS] Program is a public/private partnership that works. Since the program began in 1983, $1.6 billion has been appropriated to the FEMA EFS Program. In 1995, prior to the devastating rescissions bill, the funding for this program annually was $130 million. Since the rescissions bill, the funding has been level at a less than adequate $100 million. Why this reduction was instituted or persists isn't at all clear and certainly not justified.

Funds under this extremely well run program reach communities within 45 days from date of release of funds by FEMA. This is a program that works with no scandals—no adverse GAO reports, no IG flack. The program is unique because it helps not with the disasters of mother nature, but the personal emergencies of people who have become homeless—an increasing number of social and economic casualties today. The program combines rapid national distribution with the expertise of local nonprofit charitable organizations in delivering services where they are needed most and builds upon the solid foundation of assistance that historically has been provided by the State/local charities and nonprofits. The Federal Government hasn't taken over the problem and the challenge, rather EFS/FEMA has become a partner, building upon that which exists and works.

The administrative costs are a mere 3.5 percent, locally and nationally. There is no doubt that such success is owed to the partnership formed with the unique National Board, made up of major charity organizations: the American Red Cross, Catholic Charities, Council of Jewish Federations, National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA, the Salvation Army, the United Way, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. We should be celebrating and rewarding the success of this collaboration not short-changing it. Mr. Chairman, some have suggested compassion fatigue exists in America, because problems aren't alleviated—it is important to note that the EFS/HUD homeless programs, modest in size, have helped thousands of families and individuals. But our economy and society throughout the 1980's and 1990's continues to sustain new homelessness. It is a dynamic population and as a Congress working with State, local, and especially the private nonprofits, we should stay involved with solid financial commitments.

The Federal dollars in EFS/FEMA and HUD homelessness programs leverage private funding. The nonprofits who historically dealt with a demographically different population and social problems, today are operating on overload. They need and merit our good faith effort.

Specifically reviewing EFS/FEMA in fiscal year 1996, the National Board accomplished the following with an appropriation of $100 million: provided over 82.6 million meals at an average meal cost of 47 cents; provided more than 3.8 million nights of shelter at an average cost of $5.93 per night; paid over 177,000 utility bills allowing families to remain in their homes; directly funded more 10,300 charitable organizations and governmental agencies in over 2,400 jurisdictions in all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. territories.

My amendment would restore the funding level to $130 million. This could help serve tens of millions more meals, a million or so more nights of shelter, and help with hundreds of thousands more utility bills across this country. My amendment would accomplish these worthy goals by reducing NASA's Human Space Flight Program by $43 million—providing $30 million to this specific FEMA program that serve to alleviate the plight of homeless on terra firma, on the ground of mother Earth.

As Members should be aware, the NASA budget is in excess of the administration request by $100 million. There has been no NASA, OMB, or administration request or justification for this funding and you don't have to be a rocket scientist to understand the demand and positive use that this increase would do for the Emergency Food and Shelter Program of FEMA.

I urge Members to support this amendment that will be so beneficial for all Americans.

POINT OF ORDER

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] insist on his point of order?

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I do, and let me say that I agree with much that has been said about this program. We have provided $100 million in the budget request because of that.

I raised a point of order against the amendment because, first, the amendment takes away from an unauthorized program and gives money to an unauthorized program. Well, Mr. Chairman, let me give just a bit of detail:

The amendment proposes to increase an appropriation not authorized by law, and therefore is in violation of clause 2(a) of rule XXI. Although the original account, funding for the Emergency Food and Shelter Program, where the funding would go, is unauthorized, it was permitted to remain pursuant to the provisions of the rule that provided for the consideration of this bill. When an unauthorized appropriation is permitted to remain in a general appropriations bill, an amendment merely changing that amount is in order, but the rules of the House apply as a merely perfecting standard to the items permitted to remain and do not allow the insertion of a new paragraph, not part of the original text permitted to remain, to change indirectly a figure permitted to remain.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, the fact is both provisions are in the bill. They are protected by the rule. As the gentleman has pointed out, both of these are. I have not received authorization, but the rule does address that particular factor, and it seems to me that it would follow that the modification of funds between them at this particular point, a technical point at best, that the spirit of the rule would suggest that it is in order.

I might further add, Mr. Chairman, that in terms of the procedures of the House, the rolling of votes and the activities that have taken place today, the avoidance and leaving behind of amendments I think is highly inappropriate and improper. I was here and offered this amendment in the proper title, but simply being a few pages beyond. I was not afforded the comity and the consideration of being able to offer this amendment today. I think it is highly unusual and inappropriate.

I ask the Chair to rule on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule if no other Members wish to be heard on the point of order.

The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] makes a point of order that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] violates clause 2(a) of rule XXI by providing an unauthorized appropriation.

The amendment proposes to insert a new paragraph on page 76 that would indirectly increase an amount provided on page 57, which has been passed in the reading.

The increase proposed by the amendment is not authorized by law. The Chair notes that the amount already carried in the bill for that object is, likewise, unauthorized. However, that unauthorized amount in the bill was permitted to remain by House Resolution 184.

Where an unauthorized appropriation is permitted to remain in a general appropriation bill, an amendment directly changing that amount in that paragraph, and not adding legislative language or earmarking separate funds for another unauthorized purpose, is in order as merely perfecting. But an amendment adding a further unauthorized amount is not in order.

As indicated in the ruling on July 12, 1995, shown on page 142 of House Practices, even though it may be permissible by amendment to directly change an unauthorized item in a paragraph permitted to remain by a waiver of points of order, it is not in order to indirectly increase that amount by insertion of a new paragraph not textually protected by the waiver. The precedents that admit a germane perfecting amendment to an unauthorized item permitted to remain, for example, Deschler's volume 8, chapter 26, section 3.38, deal with actual changes in a figure permitted to remain. They apply a merely perfecting standard in the strictest sense of that phrase. None involve the insertion of a new paragraph, not part of the text permitted to remain, to increase indirectly a figure permitted to remain.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] cannot be construed as merely perfecting under the precedents. Accordingly, the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

After the last section of the bill (preceding the short title), insert the following new section:

SEC. 422. The aggregate amount otherwise provided in this Act for "INDEPENDENT AGENCIES—DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY—COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS—COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS FUND PROGRAM ACCOUNT" is hereby reduced by $75,000,000.

Ms. WATERS (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman reserves a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read, and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

There was no objection.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, one only need to pick up the morning newspapers to support the amendment to freeze funding for the Community Development Financial Institutions funded at current levels, not a cut, maintaining funding at 1997 levels.

Today's Wall Street Journal: "Treasury Aides Trumped Up Papers To Defend Awards As Probe Drew Near."

"A Treasury investigation as to whether agency officials created misleading documents to deal with a congressional probe found that they did, and just in the nick of time, too."

The assistance went to community development lenders with ties to South Shore Bank, also known as Shorebank, a Chicago-based institution with long ties to the Clintons. A recipient of $2 million in assistance was Southern Development, Inc., an Arkansas firm that Hillary Rodham Clinton set up with help from Shorebank founders."

In the Arkansas Democrat Gazette: "Among the banks Bachus named as being part of a suspected 'old boys' network' of community lending institutions with ties to President Clinton and his wife is Arkadelphia-based Southern Development Bancorporation, Inc. It received a $2 million award from the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund last year. Mrs. Clinton, then a partner in Little Rock's Rose Law Firm, and presidential counselor Thomas F. 'Mack' McLarty, a former executive of Arkla, Inc., were charter members of the holding company that founded Southern Development in August 1986."

In the Rocky Mountain News: The chairman suggests, Mr. Bachus, that nearly a third of the money designated in the Community Development Financial Institutions fund went to interlocked institutions that all have well-documented links to Hillary Clinton.

"Government Investigates CDFI Program," in the National Mortgage News Journal, details the same story. Reuters this morning: "Treasury Admits Misdoings At U.S. Small Business Fund."

May doubt the articles? Read this: "A top administrator at a small business program touted by President Clinton wrote spurious memos to justify loans that had already been made, Treasury Department officials confirmed Tuesday."

Now my colleagues, what we are asking you to do is freeze funding until we can investigate the facts of this case. The Treasury Department may be making improvements now as a result of the oversight inquiry, but the department has not shown it knows how to run a grant program.

In this era of government belt tightening, where even programs that are models of efficient administration face significant cuts in funding, it makes absolutely no sense, no sense, to increase by more than twofold the amount the taxpayers will allocate to this program.

Only in Washington would we be sitting here debating a 150 percent increase in funding for a program that is judged, by any objective standard, a monument to bureaucratic bungling and administrative inefficiency. In the real world, heads would be rolling, customers would be demanding refunds, and the budget ax would be swinging. In Washington we appropriate more taxpayers' money for this program.

This perverse incentive structure needs to be dismantled, and a message needs to go out to our Federal bureaucracy that we will no longer reward mismanagement abuse with ever-increasing levels of funding.

By the CDFI's own admission, at least $11 million in taxpayer funds were awarded in its last round of funding without anybody bothering to memorialize in a written document any of the factors upon which the agency based its recommendation. Not a word. Then when the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS], the chairman, approaches the committee and asks for reports, at midnight they work on the documents. My colleagues will hear more about that later.

Any claims that the Treasury Department may make regarding real world success for the CDFI program are purely speculative at this time. The fund originated July 1996. As of March of this year they had only distributed $4 million the $37 million that was awarded in the first round. Now at this point I understand we have up to one half that has been sent out.

The Treasury wants Congress to raise funding 150 percent on this untested program with serious administrative problems. The Foley-Bachus amendment will not zero out CDFI funds, I want to reemphasize. It simply maintains fiscal 1997 funding levels pending further review of the program.

Now it bears emphasizing that this amendment, again, does not zero it out. But I would call the attention of my colleagues, the Senate is never known for cutting many programs. The Senate VA-HUD approps zeroed out the CDFI fund yesterday. The Senate zeroed it out. Now we are asking for a freeze.

Now clearly, some people may doubt these articles in our major newspapers. But as the chairman will tell my colleagues in the next few minutes, this investigation has unearthed some rather disturbing things. There is no distancing from these companies the relationship that had existed in the late 1980's. So clearly, if we are going to ask the American taxpayers to foot the bill for this program or any other, we should make certain that there are certain standards.

POINT OF ORDER

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman insist on her point of order?

Ms. WATERS. Yes, Mr. Chairman, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman will state the point of order.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO], and perhaps even others had been here, their amendments would have been protected against a point of order. However, they were not here at the time, and therefore they have not been allowed to take up their amendments.

I think that that amendment falls in the same category. However, I am aware that there may have been some attempts to recraft the amendment to comply with being able to take it up in the general provisions. If so, if that is the case, how then was it recrafted to comply? And if it has not been, the point of order I think should prevail.

The CHAIRMAN. If there is no other argument on the point of order, the Chair is prepared to rule.

The amendment simply reduces an amount otherwise provided by the bill. That the amendment does so indirectly does not matter. An amendment inserting new language simply and only to reduce the amount of an appropriation provided earlier in the bill is permissible, as not adding a further unauthorized amount.

The point of order is overruled.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

I rise today in opposition to the Bachus amendment to the fiscal year 1998 VA-HUD appropriations bill and in support of the provision in this bill to provide $125 million for the Community Development Financial Institutions program.

The Community Development Financial Institutions program provides an important source of funding to low-income and low-wealth communities across the Nation. The CDFI program is the very type of program that this Congress, with its attitude about Federal spending, should support.

Rather than providing conventional government assistance to poor communities, the CDFI fund focuses on efforts to use government resources to leverage private sector funds, with the goal of achieving community self-sufficiency. The CDFI fund invests in a diverse array of institutions, including banks, credit unions, nonprofit loan funds, venture funds, and others, with varying asset size. The fund is designed to promote community development in the broad range of communities which make up our Nation.

The gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] spent a good deal of his time making some allegations about the politicization of this election process for grantees. These allegations have been carefully investigated and refuted by the Treasury Department. And in that light, I commend the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], the chairman, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], the distinguished ranking member, and the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] is indeed distinguished as well, and the subcommittee members for their report language endorsing the goals of the CDFI program and their belief that any process abuses can be corrected without destroying the program, which this amendment would do.

I also commend the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] for their emphasis on the activities that support microenterprise development to build the skills, assets, and earnings of low-income Americans.

Mr. Chairman, as this Congress systematically dismantles our traditional programs for poor people and poor communities, we must support programs designed to ensure that these communities have access to the financing they need to help themselves. The CDFI fund is one such program.

I urge my colleagues to oppose the Bachus amendment and support the committee, support the funding level of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] of $125 million for this important and successful program which is helping American communities help themselves.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COOKSEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOKSEY. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I think it is important for all of us in this body to define what this amendment does and why it is necessary and what it does not do. This amendment leaves funding at the present level of $50 million a year. We heard the gentleman from Florida that said the Senate, because of these same facts and what has happened in this program, zeroed out funding. But the amendment that the gentleman from Florida and I have offered leaves the funding level from last year.

Why are we offering this amendment? Why are we opposed to the administration's request that funding for this program increase by 150 percent to $125 million? We are doing that for several reasons. One is that of the original $50 million that was appropriated by this Congress, $37 million of it was directed to this fund, and of that $37 million, as of March of this year, only $4 million had been spent. As of this time, the whole $37 million that was appropriated in 1996 has not been granted. We have got $37 million in an appropriation and since 1996 they have not appropriated all the money. Should this Congress come along and at this time say we are going to put another $125 million in? I think not.

What has happened to the money that the people of the United States, the taxpayers, put in, this $37 million? Let us look at what has happened to it. First of all, not all of it had been spent and we are asking those same people for another $125 million. But of that that was granted, $11 million of it was granted without any written memorandum, no written review.

In fact, to review, to do our necessary oversight, on April 14 of this year, I told the director of this fund that I would be reviewing the grant process and that my investigators would be there on the morning of April 18. Subsequent to my letter to her, she was at a conference in Paris, France, she called the deputy director and told him to create a memorandum, to create paperwork outlining the grant process. In fact, he did this on $11 million dollars worth of grants. To get there, to put this paperwork, documentation of how these grants were made, to be able to do that, they had to stay up all night the night of April 17, and during the middle of the night and until the next morning, and they only typed those papers up and put them in the files 2 hours before congressional investigators visited to determine if they had gone and complied with the grant process.

The inspector general has reviewed this whole process. What has she found? She has said that this was wrong. She has said that this was done against the advice of legal counsel at the fund. She has said that legal counsel advised that these documents be dated. In fact, they were not only not dated but they were put in those four files and they were made to appear as if they were written sometime, I think, between May and July 1996.

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama which freezes the funding levels for the Community Development Financial Institution Fund at last year's level of $50 million despite the bipartisan budget agreement's increase in this valuable economic empowerment program to $125 million.

The administration and congressional leadership in fact agreed to this increase precisely because CDFI is a win-win for all parties involved. These investment funds are matched in the private sector and then used to create jobs, promote small businesses and build affordable housing in communities across the Nation.

While I thank the gentleman for his diligence in shedding light on poor management decisions in the first year at the fund and appreciate his help in ensuring that this worthy program will in the future be run efficiently according to new reforms, I must nonetheless take issue with his conclusion that the program should not in any way be hindered from meeting its critical goals of revitalizing distressed communities. The only arguments that I have heard from the other side thus far are that the beneficiaries of these programs, those distressed communities, should be penalized until the Federal Government resolves its bureaucratic problem of paperwork.

I am making an argument that today we should not cease the fundings or freeze the fundings for these communities that so desperately need the resources while our investigations, which I might add I raise questions about those investigations, because I just got off the phone a few minutes ago with South Shorebank and the bank corporation and they have indicated in the course of this investigation they have never so much as been contacted by the investigators in the majority party on this particular issue.

Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services, serving the people of the south side of Chicago and the south suburbs, I have had the special honor and privilege of becoming intimately familiar with the exemplary organization and national leadership in community development lending that Shorebank and its holding company, Shorebank Corp., has exemplified as 1 of the 31 recipients of this year's CDFI fund awards. Thus, based upon my personal knowledge, I feel compelled to take issue with the gentleman's allegations that the recipients were not awarded CDFI funds meritoriously, but rather were the beneficiaries of some sort of political favoritism based upon connections with the Clinton administration.

Shorebank and the Shorebank Corp. have been involved in community development long before the Clinton administration became an administration in Washington. They are a model, an exemplary model that the President has talked about in many speeches across this country.

Mr. Chairman, CDFI's statutory language defines an affiliate as it is defined in section 2(k) of the Bank Company Holding Act as—

Any company that controls, is controlled by or is under common control with another company. Shorebank has never owned, controlled or voted any voting securities of the 3 CDFIs in question, nor has it ever controlled the election of a majority of directors or trustees of any other CDFIs. Nor has the Federal Reserve ever determined that Shorebank exercises a controlling influence over any other CDFI.

There are business relationships between Shorebank and other CDFIs through its consulting subsidiary, but at no point in time have they ever exercised undue influence.

Mr. Chairman, there were no violations of statutory limits. The enacting statute prohibits the fund from providing over $5 million to one of these CDFIs and Shorebank Corp. has only received $4.5 million. The claims of political favoritism are also unfounded. In fact, to assert such claims is actually insulting to those communities which have been blessed by the innovative and immensely successful revitalization efforts spearheaded by Shorebank and other community development lenders.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the chairman of the Subcommittee on General Oversight and Investigations of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services to join me in a colloquy.

Mr. Chairman, is it the gentleman's understanding from the report based upon the investigations that he has received that they have never, or have they ever contacted Shorebank or its officers with respect to the particular allegations that are being made?

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. I would say to the gentleman that it is not our obligation to contact Shorebank or even to decide whether they are worthy of a grant or not. This law sets up a review process and requires certain documentation to be made. Shorebank may, in fact, be a totally worthy organization. I have no reason to believe they are not a good organization that does good work. That simply does not entitle this fund to simply make a check out for $4.5 million and hand it to them without a review, without any documentation. Certainly the gentleman from Illinois would agree that the end does not justify the means. As worthy a goal as there may have been, it does not allow one to manufacture documents.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. JACKSON] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. JACKSON of Illinois was allowed to proceed for 30 additional seconds.)

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, is it the gentleman's argument that the distressed communities who would be the beneficiaries of the additional appropriation, the $125 million, should be penalized because of bad paperwork by the administration?

Mr. BACHUS. It is not, and I would say this, not for bad paperwork, but for a process that was unethical, that was misleading, that misrepresented that there was in fact to these four applicants, they were awarded money. They did not go through the process that the other 257 applicants went through, even if they are worthy. Even if we say these guys are great, we just cannot ignore the law. We cannot ignore the rules.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, as a former prosecutor and as a member of both the Committee on the Judiciary and the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight, it never ceases to amaze me the new defenses that are raised whenever somebody with regard for the integrity of our laws and the integrity of the appropriations process raises a question about something that this administration is doing.

We have three new ones just here today. Defense attorneys, take note. It is a defense to any hint of an investigation that certain people have never been contacted, an airtight defense for abuse of public moneys.

Or they are doing a wonderful job with the money that is appropriated. It does not matter that it may be appropriated by people who are violating the law, but they are doing such wonderful things with the money. An airtight defense.

And yet another one. That to investigate or to hold up increased funding in the light of very serious allegations, violations of Federal law, would insult the eventual recipients of the money. Another airtight defense.

The fact of the matter is, Mr. Chairman, that the amendment and the discussion of it by its proponents today has nothing to do with condemning the wonderful job that the banks may or may not be doing through the CDFI funding. It is no indictment whatsoever on the wonderful things that the recipients of the money may be doing, and it really escapes me for people on the other side to become so indignant because this amendment and its proponents and their very sound arguments are saying, now, wait a minute, we here in this Congress are stewards of the public trust, we are stewards of the public moneys. And when very serious allegations are raised that individuals administering tens and hundreds of millions of dollars of programs are violating Federal laws in the way they administer those programs, that all of a sudden, we are made out to be the insensitive bad guys is really something that I am getting kind of sick of, Mr. Chairman.

Let me give three possible violations of Federal law just by a very quick reading of title 18 of the United States Code annotated that may be at play here, and see if this may cause folks on the other side that are so indignant that we would raise this problem to perhaps rethink their indignation.

18 U.S.C. 371, 18 U.S.C. 1001, 18 U.S.C. 1505, 18 U.S.C. 1517. Mr. Chairman, what the gentleman from Alabama and the gentleman from Florida are saying is, "At least let's hold the status quo until this can be looked into," these very serious allegations of obstruction of justice.

We are not saying, "Let's completely emasculate the program." We are not saying, "Let's cut it back." We are simply stating that in light of these very serious allegations that are substantiated to a large extent, I believe, in an investigation conducted by the Inspector General of this agency, let us at least hold off increasing the amount of money that we are letting these folks who seem, very clearly, to have violated Federal laws in manufacturing documents designed to mislead, misdirect, and obstruct an investigation can be looked into. And I think it would be an abrogation of our responsibility that supersedes anything about how nice a program is or what wonderful things it may be doing if we were to turn a blind eye to these very serious allegations.

Mr. Chairman, I think that the gentleman from Alabama, who is the chairman of this Subcommittee on General Oversight and Investigations, I think the gentleman from Florida, who is a coauthor of this amendment, have raised very serious concerns here that should not be dismissed simply because folks on the other side who like these programs, like the programs and feel that an indictment or an attack on people who appear to be violating the law is somehow an attack on the program or what might be very worthy recipients of the funds.

Mr. Chairman, let us just simply stand back for a moment, forget about being defensive about an investigation that may have done something wrong, maybe they did not. But let us stop being so defensive and recognize that we have an overriding, overarching responsibility here to ensure that our laws are faithfully executed and that those people who are entrusted with the authority to administer hundreds of millions of dollars for very worthy purposes, deemed so by law and by the President of this country, that they do so in a manner befitting the laws and the integrity of our system.

Mr. Chairman, I urge adoption of this amendment.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. Mr. Chairman, I oppose this amendment, and I want to make it clear at the onset that I think the oversight work that our subcommittee chairman on the Committee on Banking and Financial Services is doing is important work. I respect him for it, and I furthermore believe that the Treasury and the officials that, in fact, wrote out memos prior to his review of the files are in error, that they are wrong in terms of what they did. But those memos were undated, I might add, and there is no indication at this particular time that there is anything that was done illegal. I certainly think it was not proper.

But the focus of my attention today is not so much on what these officials did that regulate the program. I think we should get a thorough accounting of it, and perhaps somebody, as my colleagues know, ought to get a few demerits, if not some other factors that would enter into that in terms of this program; because I care about this program and I want it to work.

This Congress acted on this program in 1994 and authorized $400 million, but the only money that has been appropriated is that $50 million so far, and incidentally they have, this past year 1996, finally have provided some grants awarded. I think they are doing much better than some of the reports of my colleagues and friends here with regard to expediting the program. It is an enormously important program.

But as my colleagues know, I get the impression here that we are jumping from oversight to prosecution, to persecution of a particular program, and the end result of this is not going to fall on the bureaucrats or those that are administering the program at Treasury, but on the individual communities that are relying and looking at this program as being something to revitalize and to help their communities.

So I am very concerned about the rhetoric that I heard here today with regard to the allegations, and so forth, that are going on. I think we have a presumption to do our job, but also to assume that this program administration is corrected. Maybe one of the biggest problems with this program is the fact that it was part of President Clinton's initiative in his first Presidential campaign because it certainly seems that almost anything associated with the administration, whether it has been AmeriCorps or whether it has been this CDFI program, seems to be issues that have rankled a lot of sensitivity, especially this particular bill as they do with brownfields and some of the other initiatives.

Mr. Chairman, I regret that because I think these programs should be really bipartisan in nature. I think that most often they have been. I do not remember the same circumstance occurring in past years when I agreed with President Bush or agreed with President Reagan, although it may not have been as often as they would have wished.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VENTO. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, again I want to state I think these programs can do some good in the community. I have stood up for minority business development grants and other things in my community and fought for them.

What we are saying in this amendment: Currently there still exists $33 million in current accounts to spend. With this amendment we will continue and add another $50 million to the account to do their good work. All we are asking before we up the account to $125 million, is we get some answers.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I understand the gentleman's position. I appreciate the fact he did not eliminate the program. But I must say that this program has been in the starting gate and hardly has gotten started because it has been fighting sort of a rear guard action since its passage, and it has not all been on one side of the aisle, many have frustrated indirectly.

So the concern I have is that these programs are enormously important, they are in place, they should be funded. It is authorized at $400 million. This is a completely reasonable agreement to fund at $125 million unless we find out something substantive that is flawed in terms of the systemic nature of the program.

Some actors along the way have done something, but I do not think anyone has argued that the dollars that are going into the program are fundamentally being misused or abused, that nothing has been lost with CDIF.

As my colleagues know, there are some claims of favoritism, there are some claims of producing materials or records. I think there is an explanation, which I find inappropriate, that I do not necessarily accept, and I will, as my colleagues know, and do support the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS], the subcommittee chairman's active oversight role.

But I think that we need to look beyond that, and the embellishment of this does not justify sentencing the program to another year in purgatory as it would be. Why punish the low income, low wealth communities that need the help? In fact, the grant programs have awarded, maybe not spent out the money, but have awarded $35 million and $13.1 million in 1996, respectively, which means that the dollars are actually committed even though they may not have been expended this year.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. VENTO was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. VENTO. The demand for the program is very great if we looked at the 2 elements of it, the Bank Enterprise Program. The demand there has been very significant. On the CDFI, community development organizations have $300 million and requests were submitted. Thirty-five million was, in fact, committed after, in fact, the request, and of course on the other side some 31 community development organizations received that $35 million, and 38 banks under the Bank Enterprise Program received an allocation of $13.1.

The demand for the program is clear. We think it is a program that has worked, and will succeed in the future, but too many of our colleagues will not give it a chance to demonstrate that. Grantees were limited in numbers. The very best applicants won grant, Treasury did request, of course, an Inspector General investigation that did not criticize the grant awarded. The IG report did counter allegations that a CDFI official selected and awarded grants that he formally worked with had a conflict of interest. In fact, there is a small group, or nucleus of people with the CDFI expertise. It should be expected that some overlap in terms of individuals that are specifically familiar with this limited number of special financial institutions, and that is one of the principle issues that we have to sort through in terms of understanding that there is no documentation that I am aware of, that the CDFI staff exercised undue influence or favoritism of a particular applicant to the detriment of other applicants, no doubt by selecting certain more established grantees, some of whom were the models for the 1994 law. Other applicants were not selected.

But it is a case where there is a lot of applicants, there is competition. Whenever we see these circumstances, there can be and likely will be allegations that someone did not receive the grant they sought. I mean it happens to each of us. We have within our States or districts people that are competing for grants. It is unfortunately part of the competitive process that we have this criticism.

But I think we should be more restrained in jumping on this and claiming violations of the law. Of course anyone can make allegations, but proving them is another matter. But I stand with my friend to help and work with him, but let us not cut the program out, let us not sentence this program to another year in purgatory.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, once again let me repeat what this amendment does is it freezes spending at last year's level. It does not provide a 150-percent increase for a program with a lot of questions being raised about it at this time.

As a businessman from Florida, I understand the need for affordable low interest loans in economically depressed areas. These kinds of incentives are crucial for stimulating business and job growth. That is why I do agree with the general goals of the Community Development Financial Investment Fund, even though as a fiscal conservative I wonder whether or not this program represents a true Federal responsibility. The original catalyst for this program, after all, was a local initiative.

More concerning than the issue of federal law, however, are questions which have recently arisen on the program's effectiveness and impartiality. At this time the House Committee on Banking and Financial Services' Subcommittee on General Oversight and Investigations is investigating a series of allegations against the Fund. With these kinds of issues surfacing, I think it is important to not let noble goals supersede good sense when we are talking about the taxpayers' money.

There are several potential problems with the CDFI Program, all of which warrant a serious, thoughtful review by the banking subcommittee before we allocate a huge increase.

First of all, there are serious questions about the management of the program. A recent review by the accounting firm of Ernst & Young found irregularities within the award process, a failure to adopt uniform review procedures and a severe lack of documentation.

Second, since the CDFI distributes money through an awards process, it is imperative that funds utilize a fair, unbiased procedure for these allocations.

A recent review of the fund, however, showed that they failed to adopt objective scoring systems in selecting recipients. This revelation suggests the possibility of favoritism and cronyism within the agency in divvying up this money.

And finally, there is a question of criminal activity at the fund. During an initial investigation by the subcommittee, they were unable to find any material demonstrating that the fund conducted a meaningful review of potential grantees. However, a second subcommittee review unearthed undated memos which may have been written after the first review had been concluded.

As a steward for the Federal Government's taxpayers' money, there are times when one just says, hey, wait a minute, maybe this program does not need or deserve a large increase this year. Why should the American taxpayer be forced to fund a 150-percent increase for a program that is under serious investigation by this legislative body?

With this amendment we are in no way saying the Community Development Financial Institutions as a whole are not a good idea or do not provide a service to the community. What we are saying is that noble goals are not always followed by effective implementation. Let us not increase a questionable program by 150-percent. Let us slow down the funding and wait until the authorizers have a chance to ensure that the program is meeting its obligations and taxpayers' expectations.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I must rise today in opposition to the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS], the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services' Subcommittee on Government Oversight and Investigations, on which I am the ranking member.

While I support the efforts of the gentleman to ensure that the Community Development Institution Fund is efficiently and effectively administered, I vigorously oppose the proposed freeze of the Community Development Financial Institution Fund at the fiscal year 1997 levels.

I am a little bit surprised at the tone and spirit of this attack. Let us be clear. This is an attack on small business. The small businesses of this country that benefit from this fund are the ones that we all talk about we want to help. These are small institutions such as credit unions and others providing the funds for these businesses.

I am surprised at this attack in the way that it has been done because most people do not know that this Fund is kind of divided into two parts. We have the small nontraditional institutions that provide monies to small businesses in inner cities and rural communities. This is not a minority program, as it was referred to a moment ago; I want to set the record straight.

I want to set the record straight. This is a program that operates throughout this Nation in rural communities, in inner cities, in suburban areas. This is a program for everybody, and they do avail themselves of it.

Let me also make something else clear. When this program was initiated, even though the President had a vision for how we could put this money into small development organizations and institutions such as credit unions, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE] said no, we are not going to give it all to these nontraditional organizations and small banks and institutions. We are going to give some of it to them, but we are going to give some of it to the big boys, so they too can do some of this community development lending.

There has been no talk or investigations or planting of information about the Bank of America or Chase Manhattan or CitiBank or NationsBank. They all participate in this program. They are on the other side. They are the big institutions who have money that they use to do whatever they are supposed to do with this money. But this is just to look at the small kind of nontraditional institutions that are helping small businesses. So I am surprised.

Mr. Chairman, let me just say that it was said that this money has not been allocated in a timely fashion. Let me correct the record. Over two-thirds of this money has been issued as of March, over two-thirds of it has been given out.

Let me tell the Members why we do not want to freeze the funding. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS] would have us believe this does not really hurt anything; we are not trying to strip it, we are simply trying to freeze the money and keep it at certain levels. We are all basking in the glow of the growth and development and the success of our economy in this Nation. We like to get up and talk about how well the economy is doing.

These little businesses want to do well, too. They want to take advantage of this growth and all that is happening in the economy. We do not want to freeze them now. Just think what a little money would do for them. They have the ability to put this money out to little businesses who can sell their goods and their services. That is why we do not want to freeze it. We want these little businesses to take advantage of this growing economy.

While I applaud the work of the appropriations subcommittee, and I do, the chairman, the gentleman from California, [Mr. JERRY LEWIS] and the ranking member, the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. STOKES] have done a good job, as well as other members of the subcommittee in developing this bill, I am particularly pleased they have decided to increase the funding of the CDFI funds to $125 million in keeping with the budget agreement. Again, we want little businesses to participate in this growth and development. Now is not the time to put our foot on their necks.

The CDFI program does the critical work of revitalizing distressed communities by increasing the capacity of community-based financial institutions to meet the unmet financial needs of this community, at a time when we are talking about welfare reform, at a time when, again, we all wax eloquently about how we want to help small businesses.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Ms. WATERS was allowed to proceed for 30 additional seconds.)

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, this is not the time to clamp down, to deny funds. When we talk about we want to help small businesses and we believe in this program and the fact that we should have community development in distressed communities, it does not make good sense.

I would ask my colleague, my friend that I worked with very well, to reject the notion that somehow this is going to make this a better program. I would ask him to simply refrain from trying to deny access to funds for small businesses at this time.

Mr. RILEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, in the past year the CDFI fund has generated a considerable amount of controversy. A recent report by the Department of Treasury's inspector general highlighted a number of these problems. I cannot in good conscience even think of increasing the budget of the CDFI funds until these problems have been addressed.

I am also troubled that the CDFI fund has only distributed $4 million of the $37 million appropriated in the last Congress. Our amendment will freeze CDFI spending in an effort to allow Congress to work with the Department of the Treasury to continue to address the points raised in the inspector general's report.

Mr. Chairman, after a 2-month delay, the Treasury Department finally complied with an April 14 request by the oversight subcommittee for all the materials created by Ernst & Young, the accounting firm hired by the CDFI Fund to review fund procedures. In these documents were interviews with CDFI fund employees which indicate that CDFI employees raised a number of troubling issues concerning the administration of the awards.

These allegations include: CDFI officials instructed reviewers to emphasize positive information for applications being passed, and to emphasize negative information for those failing. Certain applicants received requests for clarifying information from CDFI reviewers that went beyond clarification and constituted assistance in preparing the applications. CDFI was helping certain applicants receive what was supposed to be competitive awards.

Extensions on applications were granted to some but not all applicants. CDFI regulations required a three-tiered review process. This was ignored. For instance, the Tier 1 reviews were not conducted until after the award decision was ultimately made.

The Fund reviewed certain applicants with different review criteria than other applicants. Applicants were interviewed but no accurate records of the interviews were ever prepared. The list goes on and on.

I must stress that these allegations were made by CDFI employees and are being investigated by the oversight subcommittee. Clearly there are too many additional questions that need to be addressed before we can even consider increasing funding for this program. Perhaps we will be able to increase the funding at a later date when the inspector general and Congress have finished their investigation, but in the meantime, I urge all of my colleagues to support this amendment until the oversight and investigations committee can resolve these very serious issues.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RILEY. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, let me first clarify two things that I think have been said here that are in error. One is that the inspector general has addressed the issue of whether the grants were proper or not. In a letter to me yesterday, she says that her investigation was restricted from that, and that that investigation continues to go on. So she has really not addressed that. We do not know whether or not the grant process, whether or not there was fraud or whether there was not.

What we do know is that the letter of the law was not followed, that documents were manufactured. I think it does put us on the horns of a dilemma. The Department of Treasury has not dismissed this. They say they have serious concerns about this.

What I am saying, and I am not speaking for my colleagues, I am not talking about the underlying intent of this program. I am not talking about the good it has done or that it could do. I am certainly not saying there is not a need in these communities for help and that there are some worthy goals.

I am simply saying that when we take 271 applications and give four applicants about one-third of the money without a review process, and then take the other 267 and make them go through a review process, and then when I am charged as chairman of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight to come in and review the process, and instead being told, hey, we do not have any paperwork on these four, these documents were put in there to mislead.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, for all the reasons that the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RILEY] just stated I would urge opposition to his amendment, which is well-intentioned, and support of the full funding for this program.

I do so on the following basis. The gentleman indicates that last year a problem occurred. It is my understanding, I say to my friend, who has much more knowledge on this issue than I, I want to say that out front, but it is my understanding that in fact the applications to which the gentleman refers were in fact reviewed, but there was not the proper paper documentation of that review.

Now that aside, because I do not have nearly as much information as the gentleman does, that issue occurred last year. That issue is properly under investigation by the committee, as it should do, as it has a responsibility to do, to ensure that in fact proper procedures, legal procedures, effective procedures, are pursued for the purposes of granting dollars appropriated by this Congress. I applaud the gentleman for that effort. It is an appropriate effort. I support it.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOYER. I yield to the gentleman from California, my very good friend who has written an extraordinarily good bill.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I very much appreciate my colleague's yielding and his comment.

I must say to the gentleman, the only reservation I have, for I am concerned about programs that affect the inner city and small businesses, et cetera, is that when we went to the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on the Budget and the Committee on Banking and Financial Services generally had expressed dollar levels but this information was not available to the Appropriations subcommittee. This does concern me.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank my chairman for his comments on that issue.

I believe for the reasons stated by the gentleman that we ought to reject his amendment, not reject his investigation, not reject going forward to find out whether there was wrongdoing here—that is appropriate and we ought to do it—but I say to my friends that this activity occurred prior to the budget agreement. The budget agreement entered into by both sides contemplated and agreed to the full funding of this program.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOYER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, let me say this. On April 14, I announced my intention to review the files. These documents were created on the night of April 17 and the morning of April 18. I have been attempting since that time to find out the truth, and it was only on the inspector general's report coming in this week that I knew about it.

Mr. HOYER. I understand that.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I do agree that we are caught on the horns of a dilemma, and that you can advocate for this program and condemn the act that happened. So I do not fault the gentleman for that. We have been hurt in our oversight. I do not question the gentleman's motives. I do not question that. That is not for me to do, or to question the effectiveness of the program.

Mr. HOYER. I thank my friend for his comments.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOYER. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I think we concede that nobody is going to defend the fact that somebody began to put it on paper after the Oversight Committee chairman properly asked for some materials. But the fact is that the contention that there has been no evaluation done, even if it was done orally and it was not put on paper, does not mean that it was improper. That is a legitimate question. The gentleman would like to put things on paper, and I do, too. But the fact is that there is no demonstration that anything that has been done is improper. In fact, most of the information that has been alleged to be improper has, I think, had satisfactory answers brought to the conclusion with regard to this.

Mr. BACHUS. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Chairman, there are two allegations that things may have been improper. One is that these documents should have been dated. Even the legal counsel at Treasury cautioned against doing what was done.

I will say this, and I say this with some hesitance of being misinterpreted, but I am going to say it, President Clinton was a supporter of this program before it was created. He advocated it before it was created. He was a proponent of it. So his involvement in pushing it or advocating it should in no way indicate any ill intent on his part.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. HOYER was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. HOYER. I thank the gentleman for his comments. That is why I suggest to my friends, as I said at the outset, that I think the gentleman's comments really lead us to remove ourselves from either horn of this dilemma.

The reason I say that, it seems to me self-evident that we have a program here which almost everybody who has risen to talk has said has a worthy, important critical objective, to give economic development in those areas where all of us want to see economic development, job creation, and better lives for people.

If that is our objective, then the budget agreement which contemplated the full funding of CDFI ought to be pursued at the same time that other horn ought not to be abandoned, that is to say, this investigation; this investigation into whether or not the administration of this program is being pursued properly, which I do not know, but if it is not, it ought to be. I agree with the gentleman from Alabama.

I also appreciate the gentleman's remark, the President has been a very strong proponent of this program, long before there was any question of impropriety. The President does not want impropriety any more than the gentleman from Alabama. But what the President does want and what he asked for in the course of the budget agreement was that this program be pursued vigorously because the objective was critical. If we are going to energize and grow communities, we need to have healthy economic engines for not only central cities but also other areas.

So that is why it is so important that we fully fund this program today, and I might say to my friend, there will be time obviously between now and the adoption of the conference report. And as the gentleman well knows, this money is October 1 forward money, so that if we do not give the lead time now, once you resolve the problem and we do not have the resources, we will not be able to pursue the program as vigorously as I think most wanted.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOYER. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, the bigger question is, we are talking about four loans in question totaling $11 million that went to Shorebank Corp. of Chicago and three related companies. A college roommate of President Clinton worked there in the 1980's. They came down and set up a corporation in Arkansas which Mrs. Clinton became a director of and formed through the Rose Law Firm.

The one firm, the group of companies that got $11 million from this fund are the only ones we cannot find documentation towards. So we are urgently concerned with the way this particular grant was authorized. There may be nothing inappropriate about it.

Mr. HOYER. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I will say with all due respect to my friend from Florida, your side of the aisle is unbelievably concerned with anything that Hillary Clinton may have had any relationship to over the last 29 years of her life.

Mr. Chairman, in closing, I believe we can extricate ourselves from these horns of dilemma on which I do not believe we are hoist. I say to my friend that I think we can reject your amendment or perhaps you would withdraw it. We could reject your amendment and pursue the proper investigation, so that we have a fully funded program that we all think is important, and at the same time make sure it is being run properly.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, let me say that I wanted us to focus for a minute on a problem we have. That problem is that the people who directed that these documents be placed in the files are the director and the assistant director of this fund. We are not talking about clerks here. We are not talking about low level officials.

We do need to move in two directions. One is that we clean up our program as opposed to close it down, or some for philosophical reasons say close it down. This amendment freezes funding this year. I will say again, I think Shorebank has done good work. I do not think that that, and I have not pointed the finger at Shore Bank or these three other institutions. They received funding.

What I have said is that they did not go through the same process from what the files appeared. It is a different situation. I do not want this to be taken personally on my part, particularly this is a program that the President fervently believes in.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BACHUS. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's support for the program. The concern I have is that very often in a categorical grant situation there is a lot of communications had between the agency and the applicants. In fact, sometimes they get customized, sort of like a game of ping-pong, until you get the number right.

The fact is this is a relatively small community at this time. It is a startup program. Clearly there are some problems here. I fault them for providing papers after what apparently was the oral and the nonwritten type of approval of these grants. That is regrettable for those of us that have advocated for this program. Certainly for the administration, the President, this is deeply disturbing and we hope we can resolve it.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I would say that it ought to be deeply disturbing to him to have something like this happen, and him to be involved in it only because he is an advocate and supporter of the program.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BACHUS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, let me say that I share the gentleman's concern about the proper management of this or any program. I am the ranking member of the subcommittee that the gentleman chairs. We have not had a discussion about this. Not once did the gentleman ask me to join him in taking a look at this.

I would be the greatest supporter of trying to make sure that this program and any other program is run properly. We all care deeply about this program. This was a bipartisan effort. We debated this in a laudable fashion when it came before us. If the gentleman wants my cooperation in taking a look, he has it. But I would respectfully ask the gentleman not to cripple this program, not to cripple the institutions, not to cripple the small businesses who will be the beneficiaries, all of those applicants you have from Alabama.

You have about six of your areas in Alabama who would like to have money. We need to expand the opportunities. I would ask the gentleman not to cripple their opportunities with limiting this and keeping it at $50 million when, in fact, the President and the budget agreement that was worked out would allocate $125 million.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I am sensitive to that agreement.

Let me wrap up and then I will engage in a colloquy. I think what we are doing here today is healthy because we are not simply slamming each other's motivations. We are not trying to grab this for political purposes. I think that it does do a disservice to our debate when we characterize the President's advocacy of this program in a demeaning way. He is a supporter of this program and of what it is designed to do.

We have to have every applicant go through the same process, play by the same rules, and this agency has got to be forthright, honest, open and expedient when we go in to review it. They have to give us an honest review.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I am a member of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government of the Committee on Appropriations, and this did come before our subcommittee and we discussed it at length. I would like to say to my colleagues, and to my colleague who has this amendment here, we are aware of these allegations of improper activities surrounding the first round of CDFI awards and, coincidentally, one aspect of this allocation was highlighted in today's Washington Times and the Wall Street Journal.

While the appearance of these articles today as we debate this amendment gives the impression of breaking news, I say to my colleagues this is not breaking news and this investigation is not news to our subcommittee. The allegations against the CDFI program were discussed throughout our hearing process. An appropriate investigation has begun and is being undertaken by the IG and the Treasury Department.

So the committee's position is fully discussed in the House report, and we insisted that appropriate changes, safeguards and improvements are made to ensure that every penny that we are appropriating from this subcommittee reaches the budding entrepreneurs and underserved communities for which it is intended.

I beg my colleagues, particularly my colleague who offered this amendment, we must give the CDFI fund a chance to continue to build on its success and make course corrections and, of course, improvements as needed. You do not want to wipe out this program for one or two infractions which you have heard about but that are being investigated.

The CDFI program is well deserving of our support. Our colleagues have told us how good it is for budding entrepreneurs. It has my and many of my colleagues' support. Why do we not give this a chance? Hopefully this well-meaning colleague will withdraw his amendment which will be deleterious to this particular fund. It is already being investigated, and we ask your help in having the CDFI maintain its funds.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE].

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me.

Let me say I stand in a unique position here in that I am the predecessor of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS] as chairman of the Subcommittee on General Oversight and Investigations.

One of the things that one finds when he or she is in that position is that there are always agency issues that can bring one to a point of wanting to do what the gentleman has tried to do with this particular piece of legislation; or one can make the decision that they are going to try to work with the agency, work through those problems, solve them, based on a desire to want to assure that a worthy program has the ability to do what it was designed to do.

Let us be very clear. I chaired the committee during the time of a Republican administration in the White House. The gentleman was a member of that committee and he knows for a fact that I never did treat the committee in a way where, whatever problems we found in an agency, we treated them as if they were White House problems. We treated those problems based on the fact that that particular agency had some issues that needed to be resolved, either because they were being investigated or we found some problems that we had some difficulty with.

Therefore, it seems to me when we really look at Community Development Financial Institutions and the dual track on which that runs, because it does not stand by itself; it in fact runs also with the Bank Enterprise Act which Tom Ridge and I did as a bipartisan piece of legislation in 1991, long before there was a Bill Clinton in the White House. The reality is, if we look at the first year of CDFI funding, what we ought to be dealing with is, yes, there are some problems.

We all know those issues need to be addressed. There is an investigation. We definitely want to see that resolved. But it seems to me that the intent of the program, which did not really start with Bill Clinton but started way back, which is why Tom Ridge and I did it, and then subsequent to Tom Ridge being elected governor of Pennsylvania, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] and I came back and issued the same legislation again, the reality is, Mr. Chairman, that we as a body, it seems to me, if we are going to respond every time an entity in our communities do not get funded or if we are going to respond to every complaint that is brought before us, we will find ourselves going through almost every agency of government making a decision that that agency ought not be funded.

I would suggest that this is an appropriate agency for us to look at based on its 1 year experience and in looking at that 1 year experience, make a determination in accordance with some recommendations that they have already made, put our recommendations on the table as well, try to work through those recommendations.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I am a little puzzled. I was in the Chamber to deal with another matter and I have been listening to this debate. I am a little puzzled about what is going on.

It seems to me that we have got a documented wrongdoing here that has been discussed now in the media, and inspector generals have gotten involved with it, once again showing the worth of having a good inspector general in any of the line agencies, as we have voted in this House recently to approve.

And then I take a look at the bill and suddenly discover that a program that has some mischief in it we are being asked to increase by 150 percent, and that it is a program, it turns out, where some of the mischief is involved with the person who is asking for the increase. I am having a little trouble with that.

We have a responsibility here not only for legislation but for oversight. How do we look our colleagues, our taxpayers, the people we represent back in the district in the eye and say, oh yeah, we sort of saw that but we winked and nodded at it because it was OK. We went and took a look at the fact and, yeah, they said, oh, they did something wrong.

What are these folks doing? Well, these folks are out there instead of ripping stuff up before the cops come through the door, they are making up the justification to cover up, to put stuff in the file. That is intentionally misleading a congressional committee. That is against the law. There are penalties for that.

I cannot understand why we are all just standing here saying, oh, this is OK. It is not OK to mislead a congressional committee, and we all know it.

They want us to believe that this is just an innocent mistake. Let me read here from the memo that was put into the file, after the fact, to aid and abet this coverup. "The applicant is potentially competitive." Now, remember, this is put in 2 months after the money has been given to the applicant. "The interview team will need to review the application in depth to determine whether or not the application is in actuality competitive, and if it isn't competitive, how much funding to provide, in what form, and for which initiative."

That statement is put into the file several months after the money has been given. That is a blatant bald-face attempt to mislead investigators by a line agency over which this institution has oversight under the balance of powers. We are accountable to the people of the United States of America to say this is wrong, we will not tolerate this, and we expect cooperation from the other branch of Government.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Florida has illuminated the problem. He talks about people who he believes violated the law. He talks about people who mislead the Congress, and he supports an amendment which does not penalize them in the slightest. This does not cut their salary. This does not let the air out of their tires. This does not wake them up with a crank call at 4 o'clock in the morning. It cuts the program so that the intended beneficiaries are denied the funds. That is the illogic in this.

In fact, by this reading, the beneficiaries have already been hurt because people running the program ran it badly and we will show those people who ran the program badly, if they cheated the beneficiaries, we will cheat them even more.

This is like the parent who tells the teacher, "You know, my kid is very sensitive. And if he misbehaves, smack the kid next to him. He will get the message."

This is not hitting the person who misbehaved, this is smacking the person next to them. And we are telling the poor people, who are supposed to be the beneficiaries of this program, that because they have suffered maladministration, we will go after the program.

Now, I thought Republicans believed that what we should do was encourage self-help. We have cut housing, we have cut benefit programs, we have cut welfare. Have we no other way to deal with maladministration than to deny to the intended beneficiaries of a program the benefits they are supposed to get?

The people who misbehaved will be left whole by this. They will in no way be inconvenienced. Indeed, they will be paid the same amount of money to do less work.

Now, I appreciate the gentleman from Alabama, and I mean this seriously, that he said he was not impugning their motives, and I do appreciate that. I did begin to hear some dark plots about Hillary Clinton, and I thought we were going to be told that the documents had been found in Vince Foster's briefcase. But the gentleman correctly said this is a question of how we deal with programs. But the question is how do we deal with inefficiency, corruption, or whatever in a program.

Do we punish the intended beneficiaries? Do we hit the innocent victims? Because that is what this amendment does. Or do we say let us prefer charges. I am not familiar with the specifics. But if someone violated the law, we should not take away the program they are administering from the people on whose behalf it was created. Go after them.

I am particularly concerned by the double standard. The gentleman from Florida, who spoke just before me, has been very active on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. My recollection is a few years ago we found about $4 billion they had not told us about. They hid $4 billion. And what did we do to them? We said spend that more carefully the next time. The intelligence agency has been plagued with problems, spies, et cetera. We have not cut intelligence because of that.

Indeed, I think we could have cut them for other reasons. When we have cost overruns in the Pentagon, when we have other problems, do we penalize the programs' intended beneficiaries' shares? That is the illogic.

Have we not done enough to the poor? I mean this. Let us look at the budget. We have said, no, we cannot have welfare, we cannot have food stamps. People can make an individual justification for each of those, although I would disagree. We cut housing. We cut welfare. We cut for the least among us.

We did say, OK, here is what we will do. We will fund the program $150 million, not even the margin of error in the average Pentagon program, and we will take that and we will give that to these people for them to engage in self-help. There has been no allegation that the beneficiaries misspent. There has been no allegation, and the gentleman from Alabama quite generously noted some of the beneficiaries had done a good job.

Well, who do we think we are punishing? What is the logic of saying to one group of administrators, because you did badly we will, therefore, hurt the people for whom the program was intended?

I hope we will reject this amendment because I have not heard any arguments against the nature of the program, against the way the program works out in the street. I have not heard arguments that the program in its execution is flawed. I have heard some people at the top did bad things. Go after them.

Do not take the poor people of these cities, who are the intended beneficiaries of this, hostage in our frustration that some high level people did something wrong.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, for 11 years here I have argued consistently that the only way we really get to the bottom of trying to resolve many of the issues that are endemic to those communities where many of us would agree we need to make adjustments in our approaches to social programming is to create investment vehicles, investment opportunities, create the means by which government becomes the tool that leverages the possibility for development.

I am more than a Congressman, I am a minister who happens to be involved in development and has done more than 50 million dollars' worth in the community where I live. The bottom line is the one thing we do not have in those communities is access to capital. One reason we started out with the Bank Enterprise Act was to create vehicles by which we could get capital into the communities and not just focus on housing but also focus on redevelopment of commercial strips, getting people involved as entrepreneurs, getting them in business for the first time in their life.

If we are talking now about trying to reduce a program that has only been funded for 1 year, we are going to take away funding in the second year, the reality is it will take us almost forever to get that program back up to a point where we get businesses started in those communities.

Now, I find a problem in terms of the rhetoric that I hear here. On the one hand I hear my colleagues on the other side talk about how we need to move people from welfare to work. And then here we talk about, in spite of the fact we want to do that, we are going to take away one of the few leveraging tools we have to make investments to try to create jobs in those communities where the people live who would come off of welfare and go to work.

I do not need anybody telling me what the politics may be. I want them to deal with some realities. I have been fortunate where I am to create 800 jobs, I have about 800 employees, largely because initially we did investments from church funds. Most entities cannot do that. They need this leveraging tool. They need the synergy of government being involved with these community development corporations so that they can do what they are unable to do by virtue of the fact the resources are not available to them.

I would urge my colleague again to take a very close look at what his legislation does. I think it is a piece of legislation that, if he really would give consideration to, he might want to think about withdrawing because this piece of legislation does damage to any possibility of being able to restore those communities, to create jobs in them, to put those commercial strips back on the marketplace.

If those commercial strips go back into the marketplace, they become taxable entities. If they create jobs, they create opportunities for folks to actually make contributions to the Federal Government through taxes that they currently are not doing. They create working communities where people do not have access to jobs.

I think we are doing a dangerous thing, and it is my hope that my good friend from Alabama will take a very serious look at the damage that will be done if we go in the direction of this amendment. And I would say to him again, having served as chairman of this oversight committee during the previous administrations, which did not involve Bill and Hillary Clinton, there were many times I could have actually done what the gentleman is doing. I did not do that. I did not do it with HUD or even with the RTC, in spite of all the tragic problems they had, but rather we tried to work with the administration.

I would urge the gentleman to work with this administration. Let us do what is right to try to move forward as a nation.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLAKE. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's work on the oversight and his work on the RTC oversight. I similarly, before that subcommittee, I headed a task force on the RTC, and I think we made it a better entity of the Resolution Trust Corp.

I would point out in the report of investigation by the Department of the Treasury, the office of Inspector General, and I am reading, "On June 25, 1997, THOMAS Byrnes and Charles Mitchell, Auditors, Capital Audit Region" of the office of inspector general from Treasury, "conducted a comparison of the information contained in the four undated memorandums with the information provided by Rohde," who is the individual involved, in the oral memorandum based on the contemporaneous notes taken by Rohde, Cooper and Piper during the oral memorandum presentations. There was nothing in the notes which contradicted information presented in the written memorandums.

I would point out that the information is consistent. That does not, in my judgment, excuse or justify the fact that these memos were written and not dated and placed there prior, but it does to me suggest that there was an evaluation process that was in place based on what was a substantial memory of the individuals making the awards.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

The question before us really is one of propriety, and I regret to say that I am very disturbed by the developments that I have read concerning the handling of the funds in this matter.

But let me speak first to the issue of whether the Congress is or is not being responsive to the needs of those in low-income communities, particularly in light of the debate as to whether this is an effective program or not.

The CDFI Program was a joint effort of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE] and Mr. Ridge several years ago, and at the time of its outset I was a supporter and felt confident it was a direction in which we should move. I pointed out then, however, and I point out to Members tonight, that the community investment program of the Federal Home Loan Bank, a program that exists today, as of the close of business in 1995, in 1 year, extended loans to low-income communities totaling $9 billion. Nine billion dollars.

So to say that programs of this Congress intended to help low-income individuals are not available is simply not accurate. Matter of fact, I would strongly support an expansion of the applicability of the CIP Program because I know how those funds are awarded and that deserving people get real opportunities.

The problem for us here with this debate is that with the CDFI Program, upon further examination, we cannot defend how the awards were made. There was no objective scoring criteria. There was no way to go back and say tonight that the $50 million that has been authorized and allocated, we know how it was given out.

Apparently the documents that have been the subject of controversy were inserted into the public record after the determinations were made. That is troubling.

All I am suggesting to my colleagues is that we should move very carefully. And the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS] is suggesting with the adoption of his amendment that we say, wait a minute, let us keep it at last year's level 1 more year. And what are we talking about? The difference between $50 million, last year's appropriation, and the 125 previously agreed to. And I would point out to the gentleman that perhaps $25 million of the previously authorized 50 was actually spent.

So what is the rush? Why do we not take the proper steps? Because of one simple point. When I get off the plane and go back to Baton Rouge over the weekend, I will find it hard to say that $150 million is insignificant money to people in my district. Not that we are abjectly opposed nor in any way resistant to helping those in communities who have financial need, that we do in fact want to help, that we would like to see programs like the CIP Program properly managed and properly operated, and be fully funded. I can be supportive of that. But we should not at this point take this step without making careful review of the circumstance surrounding this program.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BAKER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, as the gentleman from Louisiana knows, over the years I have argued that in order for us to really build a concept of holistic communities, we cannot merely talk about housing. And what happens, and the gentleman is absolutely right, there are funding mechanisms available, Fannie Mae, Ginnie Mae, Freddie Mac, all of those are available, but what they do is basically concentrate on housing.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time briefly on that point only, and then I will be happy to yield further, the community investment program of the Federal Home Loan Bank funds firehouses, multifamily apartment houses, restaurants, anything a community needs, and $9 billion of it was done in 1995. So this is not a limited purpose program that I am referencing.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman continue to yield?

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, if we look at that very closely, what we find is that the resources that could be made available for the redevelopment of those commercial strips, the rebuilding of the small business sector in those communities, that is not where those funds are going.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, let me give one further example, if I might. Under the Federal Home Loan Bank Community Investment Program, if the employees working in a business make less than 80 percent of the median income in that community, meaning lower income salaried employees, that business owner can go to the Federal Home Loan Bank member bank institution and refinance their entire business debt at a federally subsidized, low interest rate.

Now I can tell my colleagues that is a pretty distinctive advantage for low-income families. The fact is it may not be utilized everywhere. I do not understand, but it is currently being done.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would continue to yield, it is an advantage. It is not enough. The bottom line is, if you are only dealing with the existing businesses, you still do not create the kind of opportunities that CDFI was intended to create.

We are talking about bringing new businesses into the mainstream. We are talking about potential entrepreneurs who right now have the basic plans but do not have access to the same—

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I agree with the gentleman that we ought to have more innovative ways. The only thing I am suggesting here this evening is that we need to make sure they work before we put more money in them and there is question as to how this one works.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I will be brief and just make a couple of points. First, allegations have been made about improper behavior. Those allegations should be followed up. If people acted improperly, we should deal with them in accordance with the law. And I do not think that there is anybody who disagrees with that. And when somebody on the other side says, we do not care, that is wrong.

On the contrary, because we believe in these programs, we demand that they be administered properly. We do care, and we wanted to know about any illegalities, and we will work with anybody to address those problems. It is of concern that, as far as I understand it, the ranking member of that committee was not officially informed about these problems, and that does not suggest to me a nonpartisan way to address them. That is point No. 1.

Point No. 2 is, there is an enormous need for capital in low-income communities. And the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] made a point a moment ago that needs repeating. I brought forth an amendment to cut funding for the intelligence communities after I learned that the National Reconnaissance Office had "lost $4 billion." We were not successful in lowering funding for the intelligence agencies.

Time after time, cost overruns occur in the military; and through defense contractors, they continue to get increases in their programs. What we are saying is, we have a program here where the need is desperate. Low-income communities in Vermont and throughout this country need the capital to help small businesses and other institutions.

If people have acted improperly who are in the administration of that program, deal with that. But do not kill or paralyze the program because of the misdeeds of those people.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SANDERS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that the gentleman pointed out again that there was no attempt to work with me, no attempt to talk with me about problems that have been identified or problems that have been found. Anybody that knows anything about me knows that I will investigate, I will find out who is doing what, I will help get to the bottom of it.

Let me just say this: Questions still remain. I am not opposed to working with the Chair and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] to continue investigation, to expand investigation, to look at this from every angle that we can possibly look at it. I would think that the thing to do is to not penalize the businesses that would be the beneficiaries.

Remember what we are doing now in the budget. Remember how we targeted small businesses with capital gains tax cuts in order to grow them.

Mr. SANDERS. Reclaiming my time, if I might, may I ask the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY], I think what he is hearing on this side is no tolerance for misbehavior in the administration of that program.

Are we in agreement with that?

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SANDERS. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. I understand that.

Mr. SANDERS. Reclaiming my time, and what the gentleman is hearing, sir, is that we wanted to move forward in a nonpartisan way.

Is the gentleman hearing that?

Mr. FOLEY. If the gentleman would continue to yield, I am hearing that, sir.

Mr. SANDERS. Reclaiming my time, OK, so let us do that. But can we have some assurance from my colleague that we should not be punishing people and small businesses in needs, that we should pass the appropriation that came out of the committee, and then let us proceed tomorrow to do the proper investigation and let us deal with that?

I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FOLEY. Let me just reiterate. Fifty percent of the money still remains in the account to be given out. This amendment would allow an additional $50 million to continue to loan out to communities.

Mr. SANDERS. Reclaiming my time, I am really aware of that.

Mr. FOLEY. If the gentleman would continue to yield, and may I also stress the Senate VA-HUD passed out a zero funding for this category out of their committee yesterday. They zeroed out the account.

So we clearly do not want to do that. We do not want to go backward in time.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a correction about how much money has been spent on the program?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Vermont [Mr. SANDERS] controls the time.

Mr. SANDERS. Reclaiming my time, I would just ask the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY], if the Senate has done that, then it is more important that we come forward with the full appropriation.

I would just urge the gentleman to understand that people on this side are not tolerant of any improper behavior in terms of the administration of those funds, and we will work with them to get at the root of the problem. We would hope, however, that he would support the full appropriation and allow this important program to go forward.

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I want to join my colleagues on both sides of the aisle in expressing concern if there has been impropriety in the administration of this program. I do not think any of us has the luxury or the American people have the luxury of tolerating improper conduct in the administration of any government program.

Having said that, let me also be realistic and say that there is not a government program anywhere where there are not some kinds of problems in them, and it is always our responsibility to try to identify those problems and to address those problems, and that is why we have oversight committees. That is why we have, hopefully, people of goodwill who are elected to office, both on the legislative side and on the executive side, who have as a responsibility running Government as cleanly and honestly and as efficiently as we know how to do it.

But there are communities throughout America who need the benefit of this program, at full funding, not at some reduced level, at full funding. There are problems obviously in the military. We heard about exorbitant cost of toilet seats and hammers. We did not go in and try to zero out or freeze the funding of the military. We identified those problems and we continue to identify those problems and try to address those problems.

There are problems of sexual harassment in the military, but we have not tried freeze the funding of the military because of those problems. We have tried to address those problems straight on, straight up, go directly at them, and the reason is that we know that there is an important public defense purpose that the military serves in our country.

What I have heard on both sides of the aisle is that there is an important public purpose that this CDFI program serves for our country. It was a bipartisan initiative. It was funded through bipartisan efforts. The makeup of it was influenced by my colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE].

This is not welfare. This is something that advances what all of us support and stand for, which is the ability of every single community in our country to participate in the economic vitality of our country.

I am not critical of my colleagues for investigating any improprieties in this program. We have committed to join in the investigation because if somebody is wasting money that should be going to revitalize programs in inner cities, in rural America, in decaying communities, every single one of us should be outraged about it, and we are outraged about it if their conduct is improper. But that is not, that is not, my colleagues, an excuse to freeze the funding for this program, because then we are saying that the program has no value.

Mr. Chairman, I ask my colleagues to withdraw this amendment and allow regular order to proceed.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I have listened rather intently to this debate and certainly much has been said. As a matter of fact, I agree with much of what I have heard. But it is very difficult to agree with the bottom line, and that is if the bottom line is to deny people all over America.

This program is the result of the creativity of Shore Bank, before the program started, developing some creative initiatives on how you could get money into low income communities, how you could make sure that people who had never gotten a loan could get a loan for their business, people who had never been able to purchase a home could purchase one through the creativity of the banking process.

Then Governor Clinton saw it, liked it and, as he became President, became a real proponent of it, talked about it all over America. And now I hear us saying that because the bath water might have gotten a little tainted that we are going to throw out the baby, too. Well, the baby really had nothing to do with tainting the water. I was at a Shore Bank just this past Saturday, a Shore Bank that is less than two blocks from my home, who reaches out into communities and asks people do you really need a loan? Come and let us help you go through the process, let us help you determine what you need to do, let us help you find out whether or not you are eligible. And so I join with those who would suggest that it is in actuality one of the best economic development programs that America has seen, and to be against it, to reduce the money, is like saying we like it but we are not really willing to demonstrate that we like it.

If we like it, let us fund it.

Mr. RUSH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to plead with the Members of this body, to plead with the sponsor of this amendment, to plead with him on behalf of poor citizens who reside in the First Congressional District.

Mr. Chairman, this bill that we are discussing, the Community Development Financial Institutions Act, the CDFI, did not happen accidentally. This bill came into existence primarily because folks who live in districts like mine, the First Congressional District of Illinois, could not get adequate loans, could not get adequate credit for their homes and their businesses. We were indeed what one calls a classical credit-starved community.

Shore Bank, without the support of any governmental institution, decided that they were going to stand up and turn what most had viewed as being a lemon, turn it into lemonade. They began to develop an approach to providing credit to communities and to people that could not get it heretofore.

They began to reach out and say to the people in South Shore, Jackson Park Highlands, Woodlawn, Grand Boulevard, other communities in my district that, notwithstanding the heartlessness and the callousness of the major banks in this city, we will indeed take your plight and your cause up and we will develop the kind of approach where you can get loans for your businesses and loans for your homes. They started this approach. They created this vehicle.

Mr. Chairman, when I was elected in the 103d Congress, when I came here in 1993 and served on the Committee on Banking and Financial Services, when this bill was discussed I was most proud. Most proud. As a matter of fact, this was the high point of my brief career, to have been able to work with other Members on both sides of the aisle on the Committee on Banking and Financial Services to make this bill a law.

Mr. Chairman, I have one pen, one pen where a President signed a piece of legislation, one letter engulfed with that pen, and that is the pen that the President gave to me when he signed this legislation. I think it is symbolic, Mr. Chairman, for a person who fought all their lives on behalf of poor people to be able to vote and to work on a piece of legislation that this body passed into law to create this particular bill, to create this particular measure.

Mr. Chairman, we can talk about a few Federal employees who might have done the wrong thing and, yes, we should look at them. If they did wrong, then they should be fired. But let me tell my colleagues the other side of this.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RUSH] has expired.

Mr. RUSH. Mr. Chairman, what my colleagues are attempting to do right now is to stop a young businessman in my community right now who is struggling. He is a successful entrepreneur, has a clothing store, Jacob's Store for Men, he has been located on 79th Street in my district for about 5 years, and he has been a success. He has got five employees, all working people with families, and his business has been so successful that he wants to expand. He has gone around to all the major banks in the city asking them, pleading with them, look, I have been in business 5 years, I have got employees, I have got five employees with a family, my business is good, will you give me a loan so I can expand?

Each time, the door has been closed on Jacob and his store for men. Shore Bank is the only one that right now is considering giving this small businessman an opportunity, a leg up, to help expand his business and keep that success going and also in order to make sure that he continues to have families fed because they are in his employ.

This particular example can be multiplied time and time again. I would invite the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS] and anybody from the other side, anybody on this floor and in this body, if they doubt the success and the impact of Shore Bank, let me take them into my community. Let me have them walk down the streets of South Shore and look at the apartment buildings where they have invested their moneys and turned apartment buildings around. Let me take them to the factories where they have helped factory workers.

Do not throw the baby out with the bath water. If my colleagues have a problem with how this program is being run, let us correct the problem. Let us not target South Shore Bank because that is what it is all about, is South Shore Bank. Do not target South Shore Bank. Let us solve the problems and keep this money and keep this budget and keep this agreement alive.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, as I indicated earlier, much of this information and these expressions of concern were not available to the committee when we discussed it at the appropriations level and this increased appropriations was recommended. Nonetheless, I am very interested in this program and its potential positive effect on the communities out there. I want to make sure that the committee is doing all that it can to make certain that funds made available by way of an appropriate and objective application process get to the very people we are all concerned about here.

With that, that the committee does want to continue to look very, very carefully, Mr. Chairman, I do not pretend to have the expertise of the people on the Committee on Banking and Financial Services that suggested that perhaps there should be an increase and the budget process did that as well, but I am not sure they had all this information, either.

In the meantime, while I would discontinue my own personal remarks regarding this matter, I would like to yield to my two colleagues here who have been leading the way in connection with this and pursue this to the point that satisfies them as we close down the discussion on this amendment.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. I thank the gentleman for yielding. We are engaged in what I hope is fruitful conversations with the other side of the aisle on this issue.

I think clearly the discussion has centered on some concerns that we have regarding the program. I think statements made by Members of the minority have indicated they too are concerned with some of the aspects of the program. I would be agreeable to creating a mechanism by which we freeze, or at least accept, the $50 million offer on our amendment if we would have within the next 90 or whatever days, until October 1, an investigation, to indicate the problems, a set of guidelines that would be adhered to in future grants. If we can adopt those types of standards as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. JACKSON] and I have been discussing, if we can discuss those standards, then we would allow the amendment to enact $125 million on completion of those issues.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, the ranking member of that committee rejects that offer. Let me just say that I would certainly advise the members of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services to reject that offer.

I would be supportive of doing everything that the gentleman has talked about, even though I was never contacted about concerns, even though I was never told about an investigation, even though I was never in any way brought into this. I am perfectly willing to expand the investigation, to go beyond even where the chair of this subcommittee has gone in an effort to find out what happened. But I would want the $125 million that was appropriated by the Committee on Appropriations to remain intact and only if the investigations reap the kind of information that shows that there has been fraud, there has been absolutely wrongdoing, then I would join the gentleman in reducing the amount. But not the offer that has been made, no.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time for just a moment, I might suggest that what is really being discussed here in good faith on the part of all the parties is the prospect of developing language that could fit into a manager's amendment as we go to the conference on this matter. I would not want to reject that out of hand.

I would hope no one would who is concerned about making sure these moneys get to the people that we would intend them in the first place. I did not know about these questions in depth when the Committee on Appropriations worked on the bill as well.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, let me stress that this is not about mischief, this is not about giving demerits. This is about willful intent. This is about misconduct. This is about trying to mislead Congress and, therefore, the American people in our oversight. This deals with the highest officials at CDFI.

What I am saying is, enough is enough. How can we increase funding for a program that has fought oversight and has significant problems? We can clear this up, and I do not know if it is 30, 60, or 90 days, but the Treasury Department has to get out of denial.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. LEWIS of California was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. BACHUS. If the gentleman will continue to yield, as the chairman of the Committee on General Oversight and Investigations, we cannot have oversight as some cat and mouse game where we have to ask the right question in the right way. If we do not, we get a misleading answer, we get no answer, or we get a promise of an answer. This is serious. We owe the American people oversight, and also we owe them an honest process of awarding these grants.

Good recipients, good intentions, but we also have to have an honest, open, good process of making these awards. I will simply say that we have got to address this problem. It is a problem that we have and the administration has, and it has to be addressed and it cannot be glossed over.

And, as my colleagues know, my patience is being tried on this, that we do not really have a problem or this is all politics when we have the creation of these documents against legal advice.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate it, and let me just say that I from the onset I think helped set a tone here with regard to not attempting to defend actions where individuals manufactured papers to present to the subcommittee, and I think we are of one mind with regard to resolving that, wherever it leads. At the same time, I do not think that we would for a problem in an arms program disarm the soldiers, and I think that is the concern we have when we see the pleading with people like the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RUSH] and others, and I would just say that we are of one mind with regard to this, and this is an issue included in the budget negotiations which most of us were not part of. I trust that maybe our colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and he says no.

So I think, as we go forward, I think the understanding is that we have gained some, I think a major concession here today in terms of this, if that was the concern. I do not know that my support was ever lacking with regard it, but if we could go forward with this, with this understanding that if these questions or criteria that our good friend from Florida has articulated are not satisfied in the sense of before the closure on this particular bill with regard to conference, then I would think that there would not be

So I think that is; I mean if we in fact now choose to in fact adopt an amendment that would substantially limit this and truncate the program, there would be no opposition to negotiate based on what is a subcommittee action.

Senate, I might say at this time, and I appreciate the gentleman yielding, but that is the dilemma. So if we could get with this understanding that I think we have from the gentlewoman from California, the gentleman from New York, and myself and others, I think we would be fully in support of resolving the questions with regard to the criteria outlined from the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I believe we are getting close to the point of coming to an agreement that will cause the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and myself as we go to conference on behalf of Members of the House on both sides of the aisle who are concerned about a very important program being dealt with in a straightforward way with objective standards and so forth; when those expressions come to us, I think we will be ready to commit that we will carry that voice to the conference. But indeed we have had a very extensive discussion, a very healthy discussion, I think.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from New York, and then we will go from there.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, the question I ask is that we have a full understanding of what it is we will be taking to the conference. So on the one level we are hearing that we would agree to $50 million, and then we would have this interim period between now and October 1, at which we would do an analysis of those issues which are outstanding, while in the committee print we are talking about $125 million where we would do that analysis, and if that analysis proves that all things are all right to move forward, then the whole 125 would kick in as of October 1, the new budget cycle.

Am I correct in that understanding, or am I incorrect?

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. As I understand, I think part of the budget agreement was funding at $125 million. I do not think any of us anticipated on this side of the aisle or on that side of the aisle that we had the problem that we now know we have. The Secretary of the Treasury can address this problem and take immediate action, and he needs to set a standard over there, and he needs to, quite frankly, punish those who have done wrong. And as my colleagues know, I think we can commend to him, he can take action, and we can get this program back on track.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has expired.

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS].

Mr. BACHUS. I do think he has a role to play, and he needs to play that role. And the agreement that my colleagues have outlined I think is our agreement, but I just hope they are as serious as we profess to be about this.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, my understanding that what we are agreeing to is that it would be full funding as of October 1 if those issues are resolved?

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] will continue to yield, those problems need to be addressed, and they need to be taken seriously, and there needs to be serious action taken.

Mr. FLAKE. We agree with the gentleman. I do not think anyone over here has disagreed.

Mr. BACHUS. Then we have an agreement.

Mr. FLAKE. So then the gentleman would actually go with report of the committee based, and then have the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] agree to the language that would, in fact, allow that to kick in, the issues that the gentleman considers to be outstanding are resolved between now and that time.

Mr. BACHUS. That is correct.

Mr. FLAKE. Is that correct?

Mr. BACHUS. That is correct.

Mr. FLAKE. And with the 125, which is in the committee report.

I think we can agree to that.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, the agreement that was just discussed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE] that will take us into conference in the way that the Committee on Appropriations had designed with 125, with language that would define the way in which it kicks in, is fine with me. If we can work on that deal and get the specific language, as long as we go in with the amount that the gentleman has put in, then I am satisfied.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I think that I have listened throughout this very lengthy debate regarding this issue this evening, and of course, like the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], I have deferred to members of the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit because they are the ones who authorize this program, and they have the expertise with reference to it.

The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and I, without knowledge of some of the things that have been discussed on the floor this evening, fully funded this program in the amount of $125 million, feeling that the program had the kind of merit that deserved that kind of funding, and we, of course, were not privy to many of the details that have been brought to the floor tonight.

What we would urge all the parties here to do is to accept the recommendation of the ranking member of the Subcommittee on General Oversight and Investigations, the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS]. I say that for this reason. The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and I are the ones who are going to be in conference. He and I have to try to protect the program and also at the same time be able to accomplish what the chairman of the Subcommittee on General Oversight and Investigations wants to see done, and I have no disagreement with what he wants to see done in terms of the kind of an investigation and whatever action it warrants being taken. But we will seriously jeopardize the program if we do not leave the full $125 million in there.

I do not think that we want to in conference jeopardize the program, so I think what we would want to do is to leave the $125 million in and make it contingent upon the proviso that my colleague has made reference to here this evening.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from California would yield, or conditioned upon.

Mr. STOKES. Or conditioned upon is fine.

Mr. BACHUS. But let me say this, and I want to reiterate this, what we know and what the IG has described happened over there—

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I believe we are right at the edge of a general agreement here, and if I can, I think this side has been discussing this.

Mr. Chairman, I will yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS] for an exchange with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I think that a lot of things have already been investigated and decided, and there is some action that could be taken this week. That is my fervent hope, and I hope the Secretary of the Treasury will show some good faith in setting standards.

But I think we have an agreement.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, let us proceed in this fashion:

I will yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] to have him outline what they believe may be an agreement between the parties here, and if it seems to make sense, then the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and I will talk about it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. LEWIS of California was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I would be agreeable to discussing an amendment that would include the language: "$125 million would be appropriated for this program pending a full investigation, an objective evaluation of the program now and in the future, the adoption of uniform standards for awarding grants and using an objective numeric scoring system for allocating those grants, that the conditions and the investigation and all that is described be agreed to and met by October 1 or the funds would hereby be reduced to the $50 million as underlined by my amendment pending."

So we would have $125 million made available for the program pending those conditions, full investigation, objective evaluation of the program now and in the future, uniform standards for awarding grants and using an objective numeric scoring system.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I do not think the gentleman specified by whom the investigation would be conducted.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from California will continue to yield, I would assume the oversight committee of the House, the Treasury and the Inspector General's office.

Mr. STOKES. I see.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Let me say this.

I would say to the Treasury Department that they can facilitate this by some prompt action on their part.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. WATERS. The general points that my colleagues have made are the outline of some kind of agreement that appears acceptable to all of us. My colleague's suggestion about the prompt involvement of Treasury is something I do not know how to frame in this agreement. I hear them, and I do believe that if we adopt or if we accept the general outline, there is a need; Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ranking Member, there is a need for both sides to get together and basically finalize this agreement. The general agreement seems fine. We need to get together, finalize it. If we move forward in that way, I think we have something.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Chairman, I think the only thing I would argue, and I am in total agreement, but it would seem to me that in order for this to work, Mr. Chairman, it is imperative that the chair of the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation and the ranking woman on that committee get together and come to an agreement on what the specifics are that they are investigating, and when we come to that agreement, that is what they both will be looking for, which of course implies that they will have to work together to make it happen.

I think we can all agree to this, I think it makes good sense, I think it moves it forward, and I certainly want to thank my colleagues for having the kind of spirit for wanting to work through this because I think it is an important piece for the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] who I think will do their very best to assure that it is funded, and I only argue that it can only be done in a bipartisan fashion as it was from the very beginning.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, could I get the attention of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] for just a moment?

I am thinking that have it might make sense for the gentleman from Ohio and I to agree to ask unanimous consent to set this aside, this matter aside, until 7 o'clock, in which these parties will come back with language and will revisit this item and agree upon the language or not. If we agree upon it by unanimous consent, we can include it in this amendment and eliminate the money problem and move forward. If we cannot by then, then we will just have an up or down vote on the amendment. What does the gentleman think about that?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would suggest that it might be in order for the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] to request unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment without setting a time certain for its being re-offered. The Committee could continue with the deliberation on the bill, at which time, when ready, the gentleman from Florida could resubmit an amendment, properly worded in writing.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, this gentleman only knows of one other amendment. I would love to have the Members get their work done no later than 7 o'clock. In the meantime, I think the Chair's recommendation is a very good one.

Mr. FOLEY. May I inquire of the Chair, will my amendment as currently being considered be allowed to be made in order and a part of the bill if I withdraw my pending amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee is at the end of the bill now. The gentleman may still offer an amendment at this portion of the bill, if properly modified, or the same amendment again.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. LEWIS of California was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I believe we have an agreement here. I believe if we spend an additional amount of time to take advantage with each other in a written document, we have a good faith agreement to investigate this. I think we have all acknowledged that it is serious, and we have a framework that this appropriation is going to be conditioned upon our investigating, and Treasury making us a full report and making some standards and setting up a good procedure.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, based upon the chairman's statement, is the chairman saying that he would withdraw his amendment at this point? Exactly what is he willing to do?

Mr. BACHUS. I think from a technical standpoint, that is what I will do. I am relying on the good faith of Treasury, and we are going to go forward with this investigation. I would hope that they will simply acknowledge this misconduct, which I think the IG has, and that this program gets cleaned up.

Mr. STOKES. If the gentleman will continue to yield, I would just like to say that I appreciate very much the approach taken by the chairman, and I think both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and I, in deference to the fact that the gentleman is willing to withdraw the amendment, will certainly be willing to work with the gentleman from California [Ms. WATERS] and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS] and others relative to the type of an agreement that has been discussed openly and, I think in essence, agreed to on the floor.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, the amendment is the amendment of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY], and he would have to withdraw his amendment. I believe the gentleman wants to have a clear understanding between both sides that there is a strong expression of concern about procedures that have been involved here. They want to make sure that future applications are carried forward with some objective standards, et cetera, that which we have discussed on the record.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. I want to make certain. I will withdraw the amendment. I want to make certain this language is attached to the bill as I read and outlined, that the $125 million appropriation will be conditional upon a full investigation by an appropriate body, objective evaluation of program now and in the future, that the uniform standards for awarding grants using an objective numeric scoring system is included; and the final thing that I did not add before, that anybody found guilty of a violation of law as a result, a violation, would be dealt with appropriate to law.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin, the ranking member of the committee.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, let me start by stipulating I know virtually nothing about this program and I have no stake in it. I would like to see the agreement worked out that we have just heard.

I think our concern, I want to make sure that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] has an opportunity to put the concept before the House that has just been agreed to in principle. The concern, as I understand, is that we need time to work out the language between these two gentlemen, because they know the ins and outs of this better than anyone else. I think the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] needs the assurance that we are willing to allow that concept to come to the floor, but we need to understand that that is subject to agreement on the exact language. I do not think there will be a program. The reason we need the time is because we are not certain that the language works. That is the point.

Mr. BACHUS. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Chairman, I would be more comfortable with these two gentlemen working out that agreement, as opposed to oversight.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I yield again to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I want to know I have some assurance. Otherwise I will press my amendment that is pending at the desk, and allow the gentleman to perfect an amendment that will come back to me, in my direction. I preserve my right to have a vote on my amendment.

Mr. STOKES. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Chairman, I have absolutely no reservations about being willing to work with the gentleman and the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] toward working this agreement out in a satisfactory manner based upon what I think in essence is being agreed upon here between the respective parties on the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has again expired.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Prior to granting the gentleman's unanimous-consent request for an additional 5 minutes, the Chair needs to make certain that it is clear that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY], upon obtaining unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment, could offer another proper amendment and the right to offer that amendment would be in order.

However, the Chair must also indicate to the gentleman, without any anticipation that it would occur, that it could be legislating on an appropriation and be subject to a point of order if in fact the point of order was raised and which would not be waived in advance.

The gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] has requested an additional 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I would say to my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], I believe we have in essence an agreement between the two sides regarding an outline of that which they would like to have discussed with the administration and reviews that should go forward, et cetera, between now and the time we go to conference. I would suggest that the gentleman and I are willing to make a commitment that we will carry this message forward to the conference, and proceed as expeditiously and effectively as possible.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I would just say, I have just consulted with both the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE], and they have no objection to the gentleman and I working this matter out on their behalf.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY], just so it is clear, what we are talking about is that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and I will be the people in the conference who have listened to this debate thoroughly. We understand the parameters of the agreement between both sides. I think everybody wants to see this program operate effectively. The gentleman has outlined the basics of this. I hear no objection.

With that, with those parameters that are on the record, we intend to carry the gentleman's voice to conference, which is the appropriate place for us next to deal with this, and that, of course, is part and parcel of the gentleman's consideration of withdrawing the amendment. I am not interested in prejudicing the gentleman's amendment per se, but I think the questions raised here are important and we are happy to pursue it.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, clearly it is my intent to obviously make certain that the language I have asked for is agreed to. I would trust the chairman would give me the assurances that what we have discussed would become part of the bill as we move forward on the floor.

Mr. STOKES. If the gentleman will yield further, Mr. Chairman, I have no problem with the basic concepts. There are a couple of questions in my mind that if the gentleman wants to have us reduce this to writing would clarify it. For instance, I posed the question a few moments ago relative to who would conduct the investigation. I think that ought to be clear, so we ought to know who is going to conduct the investigation.

We ought to also have a team framework in there so that under the conditions the gentleman has proposed we do not run into October, and the gentleman expects at that time because the investigation has not been completed there is an automatic reduction down to the $50 million point. I think things of that sort ought to be clarified, and I think as honorable men, we can work those things out.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BACHUS], the gentleman who is chairing this subcommittee of oversight, has suggested that Treasury is very satisfactory to him. But I might suggest further, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] has made by way of background here a very excellent suggestion for our purposes; that is, that we could, in the interim, on perhaps a separate track, have our S&I people evaluate this and in a very short time give us the information we need as we go forward to conference.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, one thing I want to make clear is there has been some reference here to criminal acts, or anyone prosecuted criminally. The oversight committee does not do that. This Congress does not investigate people criminally. So I certainly do not want anything in this agreement which says that this body in any way investigates people, that we have any criminal goal, because that is not it. I do not want to mislead anybody into believing that I am undertaking any criminal investigation, or that we are going to wait for that, or that we are going to encourage that. That is something else.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, all I was going to suggest is that it was my understanding right now that the only amendment that is in order offered by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] at this point is an amendment without what would be language on an appropriation bill.

If he withdraws that amendment with the assurance that that same amendment could be offered again, he would, as I understand it, lose nothing. And yet if in the time between now and then, the gentleman and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] can work out the language that I think everybody is in general agreement upon, then that additional language at that point could be added because there would be no controversy about it.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I think this bill is going to go out of the House presently, tonight or tomorrow. I think what needs to be done is it needs to be added in conference.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, the bill will be going out of the House tonight, I am quite sure. Frankly, I think we are receiving instructions here that can take us to conference. In the meantime, I think we ought to make some formal requests regarding investigations. Mr. Chairman, let us move forward.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] is still pending before the committee.

Does the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] seek time to make a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily withdraw the amendment pending negotiations. If we do not conclude successfully in the next few moments, Mr. Chairman, the language that I believe we have agreed to, then I would resubmit the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HEFLEY:

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following new section:

SEC. 422. The amounts otherwise provided by this Act are revised by reducing the aggregate amount made available for "DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT—MANAGEMENT AND ADMINISTRATION—SALARIES AND EXPENSES", and increasing the aggregate amount made available for "INDEPENDENT AGENCIES—ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY—LEAKING UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANK PROGRAM", by $31,000,000 and $11,210,700, respectively.

Mr. HEFLEY (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today because I have LUST on my mind. I think the American people are concerned about LUST as well. Of course, when I say LUST, I am talking about the Leaking Underground Storage Tank trust fund, or LUST, as the program is called.

As the gentleman from California knows, the LUST program provides cleanup resources for environmentally hazardous leaking underground storage tanks that have been abandoned, or where the owner cannot afford to clean it up. The money in the trust fund was incurred through a sales tax on motor fuel, and most of it goes directly to the States for cleanup.

Recent estimates calculate there are over 165,000 of these sites across the country.

That does not include the ones that have yet to be discovered. These contaminated sites are located in both urban and rural areas, areas where our groundwater comes from or mainly where our children play.

By increasing the funding level up to the President's request, and I would make a point of that, Mr. Chairman, that I am talking about increasing the funding level in this environmental program to clean up the underground storage tanks to the President's request of $71.2 million, we can continue the progress we have made in cleaning up these sites. And I think every Member of this body would want increased funding for contaminated environmental cleanup back home in their districts.

The money would come from a decrease in the committee request for HUD's management and expenses account. When the House voted overwhelmingly to pass H.R. 2, the Housing Opportunity Act, it was under the guise of a smaller HUD bureaucracy, yet we have increased HUD's M&A account by $31 million in this bill. I realize sometimes there are costs involved with downsizing and devolution, but I think most of us would agree that only in Washington does it cost more to get less.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, this amendment gives us the opportunity to do two things we have promised the American people. First it takes money and power out of Washington by giving it to the States and, second, it provides more money for direct environmental clean up rather than further burdensome regulation.

I urge my colleagues who voted for housing reform and consider themselves to be environmentally conscious to support this Hefley amendment.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

I make a point of order against the amendment because it increases an appropriation for an unauthorized program, thereby violating clause 2 of rule XXI. Clause 2 of rule XXI states in pertinent part: "No appropriation shall be reported in any general appropriation bill, or be in order as an amendment thereto, for any expenditure not previously authorized by law."

Mr. Chairman, the authorization for this program has not been signed into law. The amendment, therefore, violates clause 2 of rule XXI.

This particular rule, Mr. Chairman, protected the paragraph in question during the reading of the bill, but that point is past. This situation is identical to that raised on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO]. Had he been permitted to consider his amendment, I would not now be making a point of order. Since he was not allowed to, I must insist on my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. HEFLEY. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I would agree that I think it is a shame that we got through that section this morning, and it surprised a lot of us on how quickly we went through that. There were some good amendments that were not able to be considered. So we went to the legislative counsel and had our amendment restructured. We hoped it would be taken care of and would take care of your concern about the point of order.

Also in the bill on page 51, beginning with line 9, it says "for necessary expenses to carry out leaking underground storage tank cleanup activities authorized by section 205 of the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986." What this tells me is that this is authorized and, as such, the point of order should not be granted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to rule.

Under the precedent of July 12, 1995 cited on page 142 of House Practice, as followed and enunciated a few moments ago with respect to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO], the Chair sustains the point of order under clause 2(a) of rule XXI. The gentleman from Colorado has not cited a current authorization.

Mr. PICKERING. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

After this discussion and debate, it is good to rise to enter into a colloquy that concerns an issue of great importance to the veterans in my State but that also honors my predecessor, Sonny Montgomery and I hope this will lead to some work that will complete an effort that he began. That is the Sonny Montgomery VA Medical Center in Jackson, Mississippi.

I would like to ask for the support of the chairman in working with the administration in our efforts to collocate the Jackson, Mississippi Veterans' Affairs Regional Office and the G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery Medical Center. With this consolidation of facilities we can provide one-stop service to our veterans and also save taxpayer dollars.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PICKERING. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, first I very much appreciate the gentleman bringing this matter to our attention. We are all more than aware of the fantastic contribution his predecessor, Sonny Montgomery, made not just to the entire House but especially to the veterans of America.

I believe that he and I can work together on this matter he has brought to my attention and to ensure better service to our veterans throughout the Southeast, but especially to Mississippi.

Mr. PICKERING. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

I would like to add that if we finalize the collocation of these facilities, it will require that we finish the construction of the third floor of the VA Regional Office in Jackson. The VA estimates that it will require approximately $1.45 million to finish the construction of the third floor in this building.

Mr. Chairman, the VA is currently paying $590,221 annually to rent the equivalent office space in this area. It is because they have failed to complete the construction of the third floor. The VA projects the completion and collocation would pay for itself within five years and provide savings over $500,000 in the years following.

By ensuring the completion of this project, we not only fulfill our pledge to our veterans but we will better serve the taxpayers by being good stewards of their money. Mr. Chairman, I believe this project just makes good business sense.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, one more time, if the gentleman will continue to yield, we very much appreciate the gentleman's leadership in this area. I certainly will join with the gentleman from Mississippi in working with the administration on this important project.

Mr. PICKERING. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman. It is my understanding that since this project is under $4 million, the administration can move forward on its own. I ask the gentleman to encourage the VA to do so and for his continued oversight and support to complete this project.

Finally, part of this facility, as I mentioned earlier, is named in honor of my most distinguished predecessor, G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery. He has been known as "Mr. Veteran" throughout his career, and the completion of this work, the completion of this facility will provide for the welfare of the veterans that he so loved and will also allow us to honor his example and his legacy.

Once again, I thank the distinguished chairman and appreciate his time and support.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted the House to know that my striking the last word was not an indication that I had any additional amendments. To my knowledge there are no more amendments on this measure.

But I did want to take a few moments, while some of our other colleagues are working out some details, to review where we have been during most of today, a short part of yesterday. I must say that in my experience in the Congress, I have never quite experienced before a process like the one I have been through with my colleague the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] this year.

As we indicated in both of our opening remarks, we deal with a very complex and very difficult bill. It is an item that has more discretionary spending than any pool of money around the Congress, outside of that money that is available within the Subcommittee on National Security. We are talking about in the neighborhood of $70-plus billion.

We are dealing with major problems and programs that relate to veterans' medical care, as we have discussed extensively. We have all of the housing programs that affect the elderly and the disabled, the poorest of the poor in our country. And we are doing what we can to see that the monies available are handled in a way that they are most responsive to those individual citizens in the communities where they live and where they work.

Beyond that, of course there are some magnificent things that are a part of our committee's work, that are demonstrating the success of America at this moment. Those Americans who have been watching our mission to Mars are one more time not just excited but absolutely overwhelmed with the capability of our leadership and NASA and their work in developing that foundation that allows man's reach into space.

I am fascinated to look further at the science that is coming out of many of those programs. Few people take the time to really focus upon some of the results that take place, but time and time again in our missions to space, within space station, what we have learned by our space shuttle efforts, certainly what we are learning on Mars, we are making phenomenal breakthroughs that affect not just science and technology in an esoteric way, but in a dramatic way impact our ability to affect the health of our people, the improvement of our ability to deliver effective medicine and programs of medical health to our citizens. Truly, within this mix that is this complex bill, some great things are happening.

All of this I frankly believe is possible in no small part because the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and I have been able to move forward, not necessarily agreeing 100 percent on every issue or every dollar available, but recognizing that the final solutions are for the benefit of the American people and we both have that commitment in mind.

So I wanted to close my remarks and comments regarding this bill by expressing one more time my deep appreciation to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], to his entire committee, Members from his side of the aisle on the committee, but also their very fine staff who have been more than responsive to our efforts. It has been a non-partisan effort on behalf of all of us, and I want the House to know that we all owe a debt to my colleague the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, let me take just a moment, as my distinguished chairman has taken, to sort of summarize where we are after having begun this bill some time early afternoon yesterday. I think anyone who has watched these proceedings since we began this bill yesterday will recognize what both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and I have said, and that is that this is a tough bill. It is a very difficult bill. I think they also will be able to see why the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and I felt it so important to work together on a bipartisan basis to bring this bill to the floor and be able to try and get through all the debate on the floor and bring it to a final conclusion.

One of the things that has made our job a little easier is the fact that the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and I not only have a very personal relationship as colleagues in this body but we are personal friends. It is a relationship that we both enjoy, and the fact that we have utilized that friendship and that respect for one another as colleagues to work together to bring this very important bill to the floor is the culmination of several months of very difficult work to produce the bill. It could not have been done without the cooperation of the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the very fine staff that he has on the majority side, and through the cooperation we have received from both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and from his staff, we have been able to bring this bill to the floor.

The President has indicated, as we brought this bill to the floor, that he felt this was a good bill and that it was one that he would be able to sign. I think the President hopes that in conference we will be able to improve some of the areas of the bill, and we hope that as a result of the conference we will be able to bring back to the House an even better bill.

In those areas where we, the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and

I have had differences, I think Members can see that those differences have been one of degree and that where we disagree, we have done so without being disagreeable. But this is a good bill, when we talk about a bill that is aimed toward improving the conditions of life of veterans and for persons living in public housing, for persons who are dependent upon our great sciences through NASA and through the National Science Foundation, Consumer Safety Protection, some 22 agencies of the Federal Government that receive their funding through this particular bill.

This is an important bill and one that I hope the whole House will tonight vote upon and give us a good vote to go to conference in.

In conclusion, I would just once again say to my good friend from California [Mr. LEWIS] what a pleasure it is to work with him on these matters.

And I also want to express my own appreciation to the minority staff. They have done an excellent job in helping those of us on the minority side of the committee to be able to perform our functions.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to strike the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] to come up here, because we are ready to close this down, and the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS] may want to listen as well.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota if he is going to say some nice things about the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's yielding to me, and I was going to say some nice things about the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and about the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and their work on this.

We have had during the day here some disagreements on some of the housing issues and so forth, but it really is helpful, given the parameters in terms of the housing and the other programs on the environment that we have moved forward on this bill.

Obviously, one of the issues here that is outstanding is the CDFI issue. And I am wondering, because the language is difficult, what the effect would be on the chairman and the ranking member if, for instance, the principals involved here were to come with correspondence to the chairman, given the circumstances.

Because I think what the purpose here of this language is is to try to add guidance to the subcommittee chairman and to the ranking member as to the conditions for the Community Development Financial Institution issue that has been raised.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, we are lacking an agreement at this moment. The other side has felt, and I probably would tend to concur, that we cannot arrive at sufficient language at this time. So I would be prepared to recall my amendment at the desk, the original amendment, and have an up or down vote on it.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, we have spent so much time going through this that, in other words, to keep the option open on the dollars available. I agree generally with the gentleman that is the impetus of this, but I think there is concern about the crafting of it and putting it into language that would potentially be statute.

If I could keep the attention of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] for a moment. If we could come up with correspondence that would in fact take the sentiment and the impetus of what the gentleman from Florida has put forward and cosponsor or sign that as correspondence to the appropriation leadership in our body, that would, I think, serve the purpose.

I understand it is not the type of victory of getting something into legislation, but it has the impetus and, more importantly, I think is the accomplishment the gentleman from Florida has wanted in terms of gaining the type of understanding and concern from Members like myself and others tonight with regard to that.

Without the dollars we are not really in a position to, in fact, live up to what had been the budget deal that not many of us were involved, but it keeps that alive and would accomplish the goal the gentleman wants. Perhaps not in the same framework, but it would accomplish what he has brought forth tonight.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] if he wishes to respond.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, we started out with something very simple. We were willing to allocate another $50 million for the appropriation for this program. We have significant concerns. We laid out what I thought was very simple language: investigation, enumerating guidelines for the agency. I did not think anything was so complicated that we could not agree and insert it in the bill as language.

I have been told, no, we do not know who is going to investigate, who should investigate, what sanctions may be meted out. We cannot get people to agree. The White House is not in the room so we cannot negotiate for them.

So, quite simply, I am trying to protect what I believe is my right on an amendment to say $50 million is as much as I am willing to go at this time until we clear up these issues. Now, again, if I could get the assurances and we can add this amendment as I drafted and as is in the record.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, my concern is that the gentleman can press his amendment, however, it may or may not pass. Nonetheless, it does not do the job of getting this question to the conference in the way that I think the gentleman wants to get it there.

I believe there is agreement on both sides of the aisle that, if the gentleman will work out a letter together or separately, that between the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and myself we will in good faith take this matter forward to the conference. I think that is a very important step, but I would not lose it lightly.

So I am suggesting to the gentleman that maybe there is a better way in terms of really making the point I am trying to make here instead of pressing the gentleman's vote.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. I appreciate the gentleman's offer to withdraw. We are stuck on whether or not we are going to have specificity in language or whether or not we are all generally agreed and we trust our leaders to do the work.

We really do trust not only our ranking member but we trust the chairman. If it is one thing that I have heard here this evening, it is that two Members, one Republican, one Democrat, one ranking member, one chairman, talk about their relationship, how well they have been able to work together, how well they have been able to resolve differences. We place full trust and confidence in our ranking member and then, across the aisle, this chairman that has demonstrated on more than one occasion not only his willingness to work out problems but certainly his expertise and his leadership in doing it.

So I would ask both sides of the aisle to join with us and place our trust with these two Members to go to conference with general direction to resolve this in the best interests of the people that we all want to serve and the beneficiaries.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I confess I am eager to get this resolved so that the chairman of the committee and I and a few others may retire to another part of the Capitol complex, having not been able to get there today.

The point I want to make is this. I have been persuaded that disciplinary action might well be appropriate. What I worry about is, given constitutional doctrines that apply, if we get too explicit in legislation directing the administration to take either law enforcement or administrative disciplinary action, the potential discipline could claim legislative interference.

I think it is very clear many of us will urge that appropriate disciplinary action should be taken. But if we start mandating that in legislation, we start doing the potential victim a favor, because we will start seeing due process arguments about inappropriate intervention.

So that is another reason I think for going at this in the way that would be suggested, I hope, by the chairman.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has made a very important point, and we will take that into consideration as well.

I would be interested in the comments of the gentleman from Florida regarding my suggestion that direction to the conferees is very important by the chairman and myself, and I am not sure the gentleman wants to lose that.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FOLEY. I am compelled, Mr. Chairman, to take the chairman at his word. I believe the chairman is looking out for the best interests of what I am attempting to do.

I have heard from the gentleman from Ohio, who I respect as well, who has given assurances that we will deal with this issue in conference; that we will seek an appropriate investigation; that we will get answers to these questions; that we will devise a scoring system for this agency that will result in the appropriate granting of aid to these well deserved groups.

And given the assurances of both chairmen, and what I believe to be the agreement of the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS] and others who have been party to this long discussion regarding this agency, I would withdraw my amendment; I would agree to the terms specified by the chairman; and I would hope that this effort to move the bill will result in the things that I, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BACHUS] and others feel most appropriate.

We do not back down lightly, because I feel there have been significant violations; that we have failed to identify appropriately funds that have gone to agencies without documentation; and I would suggest that Treasury would be very interested in pursuing these charges. I believe they are. I do not believe anybody is trying to stonewall this investigation.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I just want to take a moment to commend the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] for the manner in which he has pursued the arguments related to his amendment here this afternoon and throughout the entire debate.

I think it has been evident to all of us that what he is attempting to do is to bring the kind of quality to the program and the kind of credibility to the program that would enable us to have full faith and confidence that the program is being run as it was deemed to be run when Congress enacted it. I think all of us join with him in wanting to see any type of wrongdoing eradicated and this program put once again back on the type of track it should be.

I want to give the gentleman my full assurance that I will work with the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] in every respect to carry out the gentleman's wishes and desires with reference to settlement of this matter in accordance with the gentleman's understanding with the gentlewoman from California, the gentleman from New York and the other members of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services, and I will do everything I can to see that we have settled this matter in a way that the gentleman will be comfortable with.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Florida. I appreciate the efforts that he has put forth here, and I want to say to the body in my closing comments that earlier in the day today we found ourselves moving very, very expeditiously through this bill. In fact, everybody was astonished, especially the chairman.

Having said that, we have taken a good deal of time on a matter that all of us now understand to be very, very important to the development and the success of a very important program. Because of that, the time used was extremely valuable, I believe, and I appreciate the cooperation on both sides of the aisle.

It is clear that this too is an issue that does not have a partisan concern but, rather, bipartisan interest on behalf of those people who would be recipients of this program.

The CHAIRMAN. If there are no further amendments, the Clerk will read the final three lines of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

This Act may be cited as the "Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 1998".

Mr. REYES. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the committee report accompanying the VA-HUD appropriation bill because it contains report language that would delay the continued implementation of VERA, the veterans equitable resource allocation system. VERA provides for veterans health care to be allocated according to locations and concentrations of veteran populations. The committee report language does not allow for the allocation system to go forward, and thereby prevents health care dollars from being distributed fairly and evenly.

Essentially, over the last two decades there has been a major shift in veteran populations with more and more veterans settling in the South and West. El Paso, in the 16th District of Texas which I represent, is part of the southwest network, Veteran Integrated Service Network 18 which includes Arizona, New Mexico, and west Texas. El Paso has over 70,000 military retirees alone, and is comprised of up to 56,000 veterans at any one time. Moreover, Texas as a whole, has the second largest veteran population in the country. The El Paso and Texas Veteran populations clearly reflect the substantial shift of veteran populations in this country to the Southwest.

VERA provides the mechanism for the Veterans Health Care Administration to look at these changes in the demographics of veteran populations and determine where resources should be allocated. As veterans move across our country, so should resources to support the health care needs of veterans. Without these additional resources to address greater needs, our facilities are strained, and accessibility and quality of care goes down.

Resources for health care must move as our veterans move. Unless this committee language is removed, vital veteran health care resources will not flow and track this movement in veteran populations. This will result in overcapacity and underuse in some areas, while desperately needed services for veterans like those living in my district will be strained.

This is not a matter of politics or partisanship, but rather a matter of equity and fairness. Veterans where ever they are found, are entitled to the healthcare that our country promised our men and women who sacrificed on behalf of our country. In addition, we must recognize the real and significant shifts in our Nation's populations. Unless resources are distributed to reflect this reality, insufficient resources will be dedicated where needed, and we will fail in our obligation to our Nation's veterans.

As a veteran, and a member of the Veterans' Committee, I urge your support for this change in committee language. Let us do what is right for all veterans, and allow the equitable allocation of these limited resources to take place.

Mr. ROTHMAN. Mr. Chairman, today I rise to express my concerns that the Appropriations Committee failed to grant the President's request for increased funding for Superfund cleanup in the VA/HUD independent agencies appropriations bill. The proposed increase of $650 million was agreed to as part of the balanced budget resolution. It would enable communities across our country to expedite the cleanup of hundreds of hazardous waste sites, which are threatening the health of our residents.

In my district alone, there are 9 Superfund sites and roughly 1,000 known contaminated sites. A suburban area as densely populated as northern New Jersey cannot handle any further delays in cleanup. While we are already doing all we can to live with, and clean up, the contamination in our region, we cannot afford to delay cleanup any longer.

mates that 120 cleanups around the country will be delayed indefinitely. The President had proposed initiating cleanup at 200 sites in fiscal year 1998, and to complete the cleanup of 500 sites by the year 2000. Unfortunately, the committee's failure to fully fund the President's budget request will mean that work will begin at only 80 sites next year, even though the other sites are ready to be remediated.

One of the sites on the President's priority list for cleanup is the Industrial Latex Corp. site in Wallington, NJ. This site, which is highly contaminated with PCB's and other hazardous materials, is located in a densely populated residential area in my district. Local children have used the site as an ill-advised playground, and numerous fires have occurred over the years at the site. The first phase of the project, demolishing the buildings and removing buried drums and vats, was completed in November 1995. And the design for the second phase of the cleanup, treatment of the contaminated soil, is also complete.

The contract for final cleanup of this site is ready to go out to bid. However, if we fail to fulfill the budget agreement's requirement to provide additional funds for Superfund cleanup, the residents in Wallington, and in hundreds of other communities across the country, will continue to be threatened.

I strongly urge all of my colleagues to work to include this increased funding when the bill goes to conference committee. It is critical that we help the millions of Americans living near these hazardous sites to improve their quality of life and improve their surrounding environment. These sites need to be cleaned up as quickly as possible to remove the serious health risks facing these residents.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, this Member rises today to express the reasons for opposition to the amendment that was to be offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. NETHERCUTT]—to disregard report language included in the fiscal year 1998 VA-HUD appropriations bill pertaining to the veterans equitable resource allocation [VERA] system.

Because this Member had filed an amendment to block implementation of the VERA system in fiscal year 1998, in this House chamber, negotiations this afternoon involving this Member resulted in an agreement regarding a revision to the subcommittee's VERA report language which I had supported. While the agreement will still require the timely completion of a General Accounting Office [GAO] report to study the impact of VERA on the individual veterans integrated service networks [VISN's], the political reality of a vote count permits the House conferees on this appropriations measure to remove that portion of the committee report language funding all VISN's at fiscal year 1996 levels while the GAO study is being done. It is vitally important that this GAO report be completed in a timely manner in order to give the executive branch and Congress time to react to the GAO report findings before the fiscal year 1999 budget preparation season in order to ensure that all veterans receive the best health care possible.

This Member has publicly expressed his concerns about the negative impact that the new VERA system will have on Nebraska and other sparsely populated areas of the country. In fact, this Member conveyed these concerns to the House VA-HUD Appropriations Subcommittee earlier this year during testimony on the VA-HUD and independent agencies appropriations bill.

Mr. Chairman, the VERA plan would provide medical care funding to regions across the country, by employing an allocation formula that ties funding for each of the 22 geographic regions to the number of veterans they actually serve. Such a new system, under the VERA formula, would eventually result in at least a 4-percent decrease in funds for the region that includes this Member's State of Nebraska, with other reductions perhaps forthcoming in the longer term.

Mr. Chairman, colleagues, here is the important point for my region: The VA must provide adequate facilities for all veterans throughout the country regardless of whether they live in sparsely populated areas with resultant low usage numbers for VA hospitals or in large urban areas. A national infrastructure of facilities and medical personnel is needed to serve our veterans wherever they live. This Member finds the prospect of a decrease in quality and accessibility of medical care for veterans in sparsely populated areas to be completely unacceptable. Veterans in Nebraska and Iowa also deserve to have adequate medical services; they must not be neglected or treated inequitably just because they live in a relatively sparsely settled region.

Mr. Chairman, again, this Member expresses his objections to the Nethercutt amendment as originally proposed and reluctant agreement to the change in the subcommittee report language on VERA, but only out of political realism.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I will vote for passage of this bill with reluctance.

Congress should not continue to add more funds to appropriations bills that exceed what the administration suggests is needed. This appropriations bill provides $666 million more than the administration requested in their budget.

The bill provides $25.1 billion for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, $8.8 billion more than fiscal year 1997 and $550 million more than the president requested.

The bill represents no solution to the "section 8" funding that will be a huge financial challenge in the next several years.

One other area that could well assist the conference committee to reduce appropriations to last year's levels are the substantial reserves now being held as "contract reserves" for section 8 tenant-based contracts. The accounting firm Price Waterhouse has audited the reserve numbers. Their preliminary estimate of the net excess section 8 budget authority minus HUD's proposed uses is $7.2 billion. GAO estimates the "reserves" could be much higher. We need better information from HUD. Congress should not continue to accept sloppy management in our Government departments.

Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to language in the committee report accompanying the VA-HUD appropriation bill that would effectively stop the Veterans Health Care Administration from implementing the Veterans Equitable Resource Allocation System or VERA.

VERA is a budgeting change that would allow VA health care dollars to follow the veteran, wherever the veteran moves within the country. Veterans, like the general population, move, and our limited health care dollars should move with them. Under the old system, VA hospitals in areas of the country to which veterans are migrating must treat more patients with the same level of funding.

Veterans in my congressional district are served by the South Texas Veterans Health Care Network. The network serves one of the highest percentages of service-connected veterans, the highest number of low-income non-service connected veterans, the largest women veterans population, and a very large group of winter Texans. The old formula of funding health care facilities at historical levels plus medical inflation does not account for all of these veterans.

The old system makes no provision for Winter Texans who seek care at local facilities. These facilities must do the work without appropriate funding, straining the resources available to all veterans.

VERA makes sure that the dollars are available to provide veterans in South Texas and other portions of the country the health care services they need and deserve. All veterans must be treated equally regardless where they live in the country.

It is imperative that the VA be allowed to implement the VERA. We must shift the health care dollars to the facilities that are serving these priority veterans. We must allow the health care dollars to follow the veteran.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, for many years prior to enactment 1987, I worked to create new Federal programs to provide assistance to homeless people in shelters and living on our Nation's streets. It is the 10-year anniversary of the enactment of the McKinney Act. I was and am proud of the achievement in 1987, but I am deeply troubled that we are still here in 1997 seeking to alleviate the problems of homelessness with still growing needs.

HUD's McKinney Homeless Assistance Program plays a vital role in enabling communities to develop long-term, effective solutions to homelessness.

During the last 3 years, HUD has initiated an array of new policies to address the critical problem of homelessness in the United States. The main points are a coordinated community-based process of identifying needs and building a system to address those needs, and increased funding to give communities the resources needed to build the comprehensive system. Through their notices of funding availability [NOFA's], HUD has begun the process we are legislatively working on as a block grant—to coordinate the community system. However, without solid funding, as the motion to recommit would help provide—the systems will not be as strong, nor will they be able to serve the actual need.

The problem of renewing funding for past grants, one that presented itself in the current round of funding, has proven to be difficult because of the tremendous need just to keep funding current commitments in our communities.

The motion to recommit would add an additional million— * * *

We continue to see increased demand. In its annual survey, the U.S. Conference of Mayors found that 20 percent of all requests for emergency shelter went unmet because of a lack of resources. Emergency shelter requests increased in the 29-city survey by an average of 5 percent, with the requests for assistance from homeless families increasing by 7 percent. On average, people remain homeless for 6 months in the survey cities. The No. 1 reason, among many reasons to be sure, is the lack of affordable housing. And now, with the impact of welfare reform starting to be felt, it is more than evident that we must marshal the necessary resources to keep American citizens off the streets.

I support this motion to recommit and urge its adoption.

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Chairman, I want to express my disappointment that the Subcommittee on VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies failed to include funding for the Low Income Housing Preservation and Resident Homeownership Act [LIHPRHA] in its fiscal year 1998 appropriations bill.

Although Chairman Lewis and others have raised concerns about the LIHPRHA program, many of these concerns are based on a draft GAO report which has yet to be released. I do not believe it is wise or fair to eliminate funding based upon a report that has not been reviewed by either advocates or critics of the program. I also believe that before voting to eliminate a program, this House should have the opportunity to adopt reforms that respond to the concerns raised. Certainly, before any significant changes or cutbacks are made to the program, we should consider the benefit LIHPRHA has provided to thousands of low-income Americans.

This program has proven very beneficial to many families in the congressional district I represent. In Chicago, transfers of privately owned HUD-assisted housing from tax driven limited partnerships to resident or community-based ownership provides significant benefits to residents and communities. Northwest Towers Apartments, in my district, is such an example. In 1996, the Northwest Towners Residents' Association purchased their building utilizing a capital grant under the fiscal year 1996 appropriations bill. This property is located adjacent to the Chicago loop in a rapidly appreciating area. The purchase of this property by the resident council has preserved affordable housing for low-income residents in a highly desirable neighborhood. In Illinois, six other properties have been transferred to resident council ownership under LIHPRHA with similar success.

In addition, the resident purchase has contributed to the well-being of the community. For example, the Residents' Association has established a Neighborhood Networks Computer Learning Center. The Learning Center is assisting residents who currently are receiving welfare benefits to make the transition to the workplace.

I believe it is important to point out the contributions made by resident and community-based owners to the social needs of residents and the community. The LIHPRHA program has been instrumental in promoting such opportunities. I will urge my Senate colleagues to support this program and would like to work to ensure the future success of LIHPRHA.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 2158, the VA-HUD-Independent Agencies Appropriations for fiscal year 1998. Although I am concerned about some provisions in this measure, the Appropriations Committee has generally been supportive of many of VA's programs.

My primary concern relates to the provision in H.R. 2158 which specifies a freeze on appropriated dollars for VA health care. As years pass, inflation will erode the value of this funding. Proponents of this appropriation claim that the new scheme allowing VA medical centers to keep veterans' copayments and third-party collections will replace appropriated funds. In its report, however, the Appropriations Committee notes that the accuracy of each year's estimated third-party collection is unknown. How, then, can we ensure that resources will be available to provide medical care to those veterans who need it?

Nonetheless, the committee notes that there are now tremendous incentives for VA medical centers to increase their collections and that additional funding for health care services is possible if medical centers reduce the administrative costs of collections. I strongly support this view as well as the Appropriations Committee's direction to VA to develop allocation policies that will increase collection incentives. Additionally, I appreciate the committee's commitment to review the subject of collections and incentives yearly.

The committee report points out that VA will be challenged by the necessity to treat more patients at the same time employment levels decrease. Although the Veterans Health Administration has made tremendous progress in its efforts to transition from an acute-care, hospital-based system to one focused on care in an outpatient setting, the committee appropriately notes that these efforts must continue if veterans are to receive the quality service they have earned.

Also of importance is the committee's expressed concern about the Veterans' Health Administration's Veterans Equitable Resource Allocation [VERA] system. The committee appropriately notes that this system could adversely affect the quality and accessibility of care being provided to veterans in Northeastern States and requests the General Accounting Office [GAO] to, within the next 4 months, study and report on the effects of the VERA implementation. I additionally strongly support the committee's direction to the VA to fund all Veterans Integrated Service Networks [VISN's] at least at the fiscal year 1996 level. Although the VERA system may have a great deal of merit, the potential negative effect of this system on certain veterans demands that the system be implemented only after very careful study.

Integration of VA medical centers is another issue that demands very careful consideration. I have urged VA to pursue consolidation of services at the Lakeside and West Side medical centers in Chicago with caution, and the Appropriations Committee expresses similar concern regarding plans for the integration of the VA medical centers at Tuskegee and Montgomery, AL. I support the committee's direction that VA not proceed with this integration until Congress and GAO have had an opportunity to review a detailed plan of the integration which the VA must submit.

In its report, the committee mentions an innovative proposal underway in Detroit, MI, to establish a VA partnership with a private, not-for-profit, highly integrated health care system which will assist VHA's development of a sophisticated, medical information infrastructure. The development of this system is critical to the reorganization of VHA's health care delivery system, and I commend the committee for its support of this effort.

VA's medical and prosthetic research program has long been one of the most highly respected in the country, and I am pleased that H.R. 2158 provides the funding necessary to continue this important research. VA's achievements in this area have benefited not only America's veterans but all of America's citizens, and VA researchers have more than earned the support included in this appropriation. I particularly want to note the committee's instruction that funding for research into Parkinson's disease be increased. Many excellent opportunities for joint research are available which would enable the VA to expand its research into this debilitating disease which affects so many of our aging citizens.

I want to express my support for the committee's comments urging the VA to continue developing a medical research service minority recruitment initiative in collaboration with minority health professional institutions. This important initiative should be a top priority in the Veterans Health Administration. Additionally, VA should certainly comply with the committee's recommendation that Ph.D. research scientists be exempt from potential reductions in the number of GS 14–15 positions in the research program. The loss of these talented middle managers is adversely affecting VA research and must be stopped.

In addition to health-care initiatives, there are several benefit-related provisions in H.R. 2158 which deserve support. For example, the appropriation includes funding for loans to nonprofit organizations to assist them in leasing housing units exclusively for use as transitional housing for veterans following treatment of substance abuse. The measure also includes additional funds for retention of VA staff to improve the timeliness of processing veterans claims and for higher than anticipated contracting costs of the year 2000 computer problem. Finally, I compliment the committee on its continuing efforts to ensure that VA defers further efforts on the Veterans Services Network [VETSNET] program until the year 2000 computer problem has been solved. Because the effects of a VA failure to make the required year 2000 corrections would have a catastrophic effort on our Nation's veterans, this challenge must be met even if other important modernization projects must be delayed.

I thank the chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations, BOB LIVINGSTON, and the ranking democrat on the committee, DAVID OBEY, for their support for America's veterans. The chairman and ranking democrat of the subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies have also earned the sincere thanks of the veteran community. I know you were dealing with a very difficult budget situation, and your hard work on behalf of veterans must be recognized.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask your support for the Pallone amendment to the VA-HUD-Independent Agencies appropriations bill. The amendment would send $650 million to EPA to expedite the cleanup of toxic waste sites.

Mr. Chairman, just last February, the Government Reform Committee held a hearing on the Superfund Program, the Federal program to clean up toxic waste sites. My Republican colleagues claimed the hearing would show it takes more time to clean up Superfund sites now than it did under previous administrations.

But that's not what we learned during the hearing. We discovered instead that the Superfund Program suffered from neglect and hostility in its early years under a Republican administration. We discovered that the Clinton administration has overcome this legacy of neglect, essentially reinventing the Superfund Program, and—most importantly—cleaning up more Superfund sites in 4 years that were cleaned up in the previous 12. Despite these facts, Republicans still criticize EPA's speed in cleaning up toxic waste sites.

Isn't it ironic that with all that criticism about the speed of Superfund cleanups, we now face an EPA appropriations bill that cuts $650 million from the Superfund budget request. That's $650 million agreed to in the bipartisan budget agreement, $650 million allocated to EPA's Appropriations Subcommittee to expedite Superfund cleanups, and $650 million that will be spent instead on special interest projects.

EPA would have started cleaning up 200 Superfund sites next year with that $650 million. Under this bill that number will be cut by more than half. Southern California alone would have seen EPA cleaning up toxic waste sites in Riverside, San Bernardino, Fullerton, Baldwin Park, Monterey Park, and Santa Fe Springs. Instead, this bill will force EPA to play Russian Roulette, picking some sites for clean up and letting the rest wait another year.

Mr. Chairman, 68 million Americans live within 4 miles of a toxic waste site. For the sake of those 68 million Americans, I ask your support for the Pallone amendment.

Mr. BISHOP. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the fiscal year 1998 VA-HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act. I want to commend the committee for working in a bipartisan fashion to craft a good bill with many beneficial attributes. As a member of the Veterans Affairs Committee and an ardent supporter of veterans, I want to speak to this section of the bill. I am pleased that the overall bill provides for an increase in funding for veterans programs. Specifically, the bill appropriates $40,359,576 billion for the Department of Veterans Affairs. This is $273 million more than the fiscal year 1997 level and over $143 million over the fiscal year 1998 budget request.

Over 26 million veterans and their families receive benefits from the Department of Veterans Affairs. This increase in appropriations will assist them in their efforts to improve their lives. When our veterans answered the call in faithful service, the Nation promised to write them a check for certain lifetime benefits. It is the solemn duty of Congress to make sure this check does not come back marked "insufficient funds."

In tough budgetary times, I want to commend the committee for its efforts to provide our veterans with necessary benefits to sustain a better quality of life. I share the fervor of Congress in balancing the budget, but not one that fails to adequately provide for our veterans. We cannot attack the services we owe to our veterans. They made the supreme sacrifice for our Nation, and we should repay them and their families in kind with adequate benefits, services, and a due continuum of care.

I am pleased the bill provides $19,932,997,000 for the veterans benefits. This represents a $333 million increase over fiscal year 1997 for the Veterans Benefits Administration. This will provide our veterans with much needed compensation and pension benefits, education and training benefits, and critical housing assistance.

While I applaud the efforts to provide increased funding levels for the Veteran's Benefits Administration, I have some concerns about the level of funding proposed for the Veterans Health Administration. I believe it represents a serious shortfall for veterans health care. This is one of the most important benefits our veterans receive. It is incumbent upon us to ensure that the veterans medical care delivery system is adequately funded to meet the health care needs of our veterans. I know that the budget includes a proposal to permit the VA to retain third party insurance payments and user fee collections. These funds, estimated to be $604 million by the budget agreement, would be used to account for the shortfall in the budget for veterans medical care. I am a strong proponent of this concept and it is my hope that the Congress will enact legislation enabling the VA to do this. However, if this does not occur, a mechanism must be in place to ensure that we do not experience a shortfall in the medical care delivery system for our veterans. I plan to support the Solomon amendment which would incorporate a "fail-safe" mechanism to protect much needed funding for veterans medical care.

We must remain aware of our responsibility to maintain a system that best meets the changing needs of today's veterans. We are dealing with payment for services rendered. Like any contract the government makes, we must do all within our power to live up to. Dollars may be scarce, but we must make this our priority. With this in mind, it is my hope that we can continue to cooperate in bipartisanship to serve those who have so diligently served us. Members of Congress have always been strong supporters of veteran—not only in word but in deed. Let us continue in that vein today.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. If there are no further amendments, under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. HASTINGS of Washington) having assumed the chair, Mr. COMBEST, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2158), making appropriations for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and for sundry independent agencies, commissions, corporations, and offices for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1998, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 184, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. KENNEDY OF MASSACHUSETTS

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. I am, Mr. Speaker, in its present form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts moves to recommit the bill H.R. 2158 to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith the following amendments:

On page 24, line 22, strike "$4,600,000,000" and insert "$4,700,000,000".

On page 25, line 19, strike "$50,000,000" and insert "$70,000,000".

On page 27, line 6, strike "$50,000,000" and insert "$75,000,000".

On page 27, line 8, strike "$30,000,000" and insert "$40,000,000".

On page 30, line 12, strike "$823,000,000" and insert "$883,000,000".

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to recommit be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

□ 1915

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, this bill I think deserves credit to both the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and members of the committee and committee staff for the efforts that they have made to come up with a kind of bipartisan spirit here.

On the other hand, I do believe that there is a significant issue that deals with the low level of funding in this bill across the board. The truth of the matter is, we heard a lot of speeches over the course of the last 24 hours as the VA-HUD bill came up. Those speeches pertained, in large measure, to the underfunding of a lot of veterans' programs.

The fact of the matter is, after all of these bills have been passed, after all of the amendments have been contained, there is still $450 million worth of underfunding in veterans' programs.

In terms of the motion to recommit and its specifics that we have called for, we have asked that $100 million be spent on the HUD Community Development Block Grant program as an indication of the kind of underfunding that exists in that agency.

I serve as the ranking Democrat on the Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity, and I can tell my colleagues that we are not funding the housing needs of the people of this country in any way, shape, or form in comparison to what the need is. Specifically with regard to homeless programs, over the course of the last 3 years we have seen homeless programs cut by over $260 million; $260 million.

I challenge any Member of the Congress, any Member of the House to go to his home district and go visit a homeless shelter. Homeless shelters in the middle of the summertime are generally empty. This is the first time in the last 20 years where, in almost every congressional district across the country, you go into homeless shelters today and you are going to find them chock-a-block full of homeless people, homeless families. We have simply not provided the kind of funding that is necessary to provide for those homeless families.

We say that we want a balanced budget. I want a balanced budget, But I do not want to balance the budget on the backs of the poorest and most vulnerable citizens of this country; and that is, essentially, what this bill does.

We have seen a recognition that we want to, as a Nation, and I see the Speaker talk about the fact that he wants to rebuild Washington, DC. If my colleagues talk to the mayors of cities and towns across our country, the No. 1 issue that they will claim that they face in terms of economic development and the creation of jobs is brownfields. We see the need for not only allowing brownfields to be cleaned up, but allowing for economic development of brownfield sites across America.

This motion to recommit contains within it a $25 million initiative funded through the EDI at HUD to allow for economic development of those brownfield sites. Talk to your mayors, talk to your city councils, talk to the people at the ground level that are responsible for building up those cities in the blighted urban areas of our country, areas that have been contaminated by corporations that have for years and years put so much poison on our city streets and on the fields of our cities.

The fact of the matter is that, for the first time, not only are we going to see those sites cleaned up but we have the opportunity to allow those cities and towns to come back. Those are the initiatives that are contained.

In addition, we are providing funding to allow for senior citizens to gain more independence within their housing programs. The largest single growing population of America is, in fact, our elders. And all too often, they are restricted in terms of their movements, in terms of their independence, because of their housing situations.

This amendment would allow for a small initiative to enable supportive services for senior citizens, to enable them to go out and live more independently. So if my colleagues want to stand up for the rights of senior citizens, if they want to stand up for the rights of our mayors and our city councils across this country to clean up brownfield sites, if they want to stand up and say that we do not believe that we ought to abandon our homeless, this bill currently, in its form, as a result of the amendment process, is coming in $200 million below the 602(b) allocation.

All we are trying to suggest is that my colleagues can still stand up and say to the people of their districts that they are fighting for a balanced budget.

The amendments that we have in the motion to recommit only take up $160 billion. The $200 billion that is left over in the bill will still come in under budget, but it will not come in by virtue of turning our back on the poorest of the poor in terms of our homeless. It will not come in by turning our back on the brownfield sites of this country that I think offer us an opportunity to really go out and rebuild America's urban areas.

That ought to be the policies of this country. It ought to be the policies of this House. I urge the Members to support the motion to recommit.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HASTINGS of Washington). The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to speak extensively on this matter. We have spent much of the day and yesterday talking about the very difficult bill we face, the reality that there is many a trade-off between complex programs. That does not suggest that in every instance a bill changes on the floor, that we ought to spend every single dime of somebody's perceived remainder 602(b).

I am not really surprised that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], my dear friend, would like to spend all of our 602(b). It may be that from time to time we come together on even balancing the budget. But in the meantime, without any further ado, I would ask my colleagues to oppose the motion to recommit.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The question of passage of the bill is an automatic vote and will be 5 minutes.
