

Despite Robert's numerous professional accomplishments during his lifetime, he never lost touch with his constituents. His down-to-earth style was a large part of his political success. Robert was a member of several charitable organizations as well as a sponsor of Little League baseball teams. His passing is a dramatic loss to many different segments of the community. Robert is survived by his wife Deanie and their daughter Maeann.

On February 8, 1997, a Robert DeMars Memorial Charity Ball will be held to honor Robert's legacy and to raise money for the Make-A-Wish Foundation. This is a fitting tribute to Robert DeMars's life of public service and one I believe he would wholeheartedly approve of. I know my Senate colleagues join me in honoring the life of Robert A. DeMars.●

PARTIAL BIRTH ABORTION BAN

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to cosponsor Senate bill 6. In doing so I add my voice to the chorus calling for an end to partial birth abortion. The bill we are considering is designed to outlaw medical procedures "in which the person performing the abortion partially delivers a living fetus before killing the fetus and completing the delivery." It is a narrowly drafted bill which specifically and effectively targets a rare but grisly and unnecessary practice.

I understand, Mr. President, that the American people are divided on many issues within the abortion debate. I am firmly pro-life. But in my view one need not resort to broad, ideological arguments in this case. Partial birth abortions occur in the second or third trimester of pregnancy. They are never required to save the life, health or child-bearing ability of the mother. They are unnecessary and regrettable.

We in this Chamber failed to override the President's veto of this legislation during the last Congress. But I remain convinced that all of us can agree that this nation can do without this particular grisly procedure. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.●

TRIBUTE TO PROCTOR JONES

● Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to Proctor Jones for his outstanding service and dedication to the U.S. Senate since 1960. While his Senate employment was interrupted for 2 years for service in the U.S. Marine Corps, I don't believe any staffer has served in the Senate longer than Proctor. Certainly, no one has served this institution more honorably or with greater dedication.

During my tenure in the Senate, I have had the pleasure of working with Proctor on numerous occasions in his capacity as the staff director for the Democrats on the Energy and Water Subcommittee of Appropriations. Unfortunately, my State of North Dakota seems to be plagued with too little water or too much. Proctor was fully conversant with and sensitive to the unique needs of North Dakota and was always ready to assist us with our water problems. He was especially helpful to me over the past 3 years in finding additional funding to help the citizens of Devils Lake, N.D., who have been devastated by flooding for 4 consecutive years.

Proctor represents the finest there is in public service. He was dedicated to the institution he so honorably served under a succession of outstanding chairmen of the Appropriations Committee. He was ever the student of the budget and appropriation processes. He was the master of the art of politics—forging compromises. He was the protector of the purse—evaluating Federal programs under a microscope to ensure that they were necessary, effective, responsible, and responsive. He was the ultimate professional. And he was a true gentleman.

During his more than 35 years in the Senate, Proctor earned the respect of Members and colleagues alike. His expertise, sound judgment, political skills and professional talents will be sorely missed in the Senate. But I want to join my colleagues in wishing Proctor good health and every success as he joins his former boss, Senator Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, in pursuing new challenges and opportunities in the private sector.●

BURT BARR

● Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, when a good man dies, heaven profits at humanity's expense. My friend, Burt Barr, was a good man whose loss we can scarce afford lest our society further succumbs to the cynicism and distrust that cheapens our times. He was a man whose virtues were so exemplary and so apparent that he won the admiration and affection of all he encountered. He was the kind of man whom fathers hope their sons will become.

He grew to manhood in a time when Americans believed to sacrifice for your country was an ennobling experience. He took up arms in his country's defense, risked death and grave harm, endured enormous deprivation for a cause he knew was greater than his own life. He marched across Europe to liberate the peoples of that continent from tyranny; to protect America's freedoms, and to keep alive in this world the prospect that our freedoms and prosperity might someday flourish in all societies.

Burt's service in the Second World War, as it was for most of his generation, was the defining event of his life. The experience of shared hardship, of complete faith in and devotion to the men who fought beside you engendered in him an enduring love and respect for the men and women who have worn the uniform of the United States. But his experiences in war affected more than his regard for the military. They inspired in him an abiding love for and desire to remain of service to his country, and to distinguish his public service with an unflagging belief that we are all part of a cause more noble than self-interest, and that, as such, we deserve each other's respect and admiration.

No one who worked with Burt Barr ever suspected his purposes or doubted his decency. Republican and Democrat alike knew that in Burt the State of Arizona had found a model public servant whose sole public ambition was to work with any willing partner to help Arizona grow and prosper.

As is obvious by the presence here of so many Arizonans of different political affiliations, Burt was a man who kept his priorities straight. He never set the price of partisan advantage so high that it cheapened his regard for personal friendships. He knew by instinct, by instruction and by experience that political success is such an inconsequential thing when weighed against the love and trust of your neighbors and friends. When our days begin to run out there will be little solace found in the prideful recollection that we advanced our professional ambitions at the expense of others. That solace abides only in our family's love, God's grace, and the satisfaction of a life well-lived in the service of others, and not to the detriment of anyone.

As Bruce Babbitt and Art Hamilton can attest, as anyone who worked with Burt in the service of our beautiful State can attest, Burt won his share of political contests, but never at the cost of a friend. He presided as majority leader in the Arizona House for many years, and worked with many Governors. He did not exult in the perquisites of power, but only in the opportunity to be of use to his community. Under his patient, inclusive leadership, the legislature never functioned more smoothly or productively. He considered Bruce and Art and everyone who labored with him on behalf of Arizona to be comrades-in-arms, not enemies. War had taught him that such relationships were to be cherished as indispensable to a good life.

Burt's good life, his decency to others was of inestimable value to Arizona. Together with former Governor Babbitt, with Art, with all his Republican and Democratic colleagues, Burt helped to make this State the wonderful place to live it remains today. Arizona's extraordinary growth was not just coincident with, but was, in large part, a consequence of his public service, and the comity and trust that distinguished his relationships with his colleagues.

Burt was the first person whose advice I sought when I first considered a political career. I placed a high value on his counsel then and in all the following years of our friendship. That I continue my public career in a time of growing incivility and cynicism, in a time when partisan opponents seek to criminalize our political differences is a source of deep disappointment to me, as I'm sure it was to Burt, although he was always too kind to say so.

I am part of a system that has grown too coarse and venal, and I bear my share of responsibility for that decline. The memory of Burt Barr shames me, as it should shame all of us when we reduce public service to anything other than a noble calling to make our times a moment of hope and opportunity, of decency and unity. All the blessings of his friendship, all the wisdom of his counsel—though I cherish them greatly—will not make of me as good a man as Burt Barr. Only the shame that his memory will visit on me when I stray from his example gives me hope that when my days are near an end, I might know—as Burt knew—the great solace of a life well-lived in the service of something greater than self-interest.

Life will be less pleasant absent the company of this good man. His cheerful nature, his enormous generosity to me, his patience and kindness as he tried to help me become the kind of public servant that not just he, but that I could be proud of, make his loss indescribably profound. But he goes to a reward he so surely deserves, and we cannot begrudge him that.

He will rest now in the field where America buries her heroes. He well-earned his place there, and the place in God's presence we are all promised should we love our fellow man as well as Burt Barr loved us.

Louise, Stephanie, Michael, and Suzanne, there are no words to dull the pain of a loss felt so keenly as you feel that loss of Burt. But I know he wanted for you all the happiness that life affords. He would want you now to live happy and fulfilling lives until the time when by the grace of a loving God you will see him again.●

THE RETIREMENT OF PROCTOR JONES

● Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise today to salute Proctor Jones on his retirement from the Senate Appropriations Committee and to thank him for his many years of service to the Senate and the Nation. When Proctor retires at the end of this month after an amazing 35 years of public service, the Senate will lose one of its most distinguished staff members. Proctor will be remembered for his professionalism, dedication, and good judgment while working for the Appropriations Committee, and for his work as staff director for the Energy and Water Development Subcommittee for the past 23 years.

Mr. President, I have greatly appreciated all the help Proctor has given my office since I came to the Senate in 1987. North Dakota has many water development needs, and the work Proctor has done on the Energy and Water Development Subcommittee has been critical to helping meet those needs. The Garrison Diversion Project was first authorized in 1965 and was reformulated in 1986 to ensure my State an adequate supply of quality water for municipal, rural, and industrial uses.

Water development in North Dakota is also essential for economic development, agriculture, recreation, and tourism. The Federal Government promised the Garrison project to North Dakota to compensate my State for the permanent flood of over 550,000 acres due to the construction of the Garrison and Oahe Dams. Proctor has played an instrumental role in funding this essential project to meet North Dakota's unmet water development needs and fulfill the Federal Government's promise to my State.

Mr. President, Proctor will be greatly missed by all who worked with him. I know we in the Senate will get our work done without Proctor's talent and ability, but filling his shoes will be a tremendous challenge for those who follow him. I am pleased to know that Proctor will remain in Washington, working with my good friend Senator Bennett Johnston.

Mr. President, I am delighted to wish Proctor all the best upon his departure from the Senate. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.●

HONORING DR. GORDON GUYER

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to a great man and a great teacher: Dr. Gordon Guyer. Those who have followed Dr. Guyer's career see a man who has accepted challenge after challenge and built a reputation for success.

Dr. Guyer began attending college as a fisheries and wildlife major at Michigan State University in 1947. Dr. Guyer established the foundation for his lifelong work when he shifted his studies to entomology and earned three degrees. In 1954, he became an instructor of entomology at M.S.U., and only 10 years later was named professor and chairman of the Department of Entomology and director of M.S.U.'s Pesticide Research Center.

Dr. Guyer's achievements at Michigan State University have been remarkable. He has served as administrator and director of M.S.U.'s Cooperative Extension Service for 11 years, associate dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, associate dean of the College of Natural Science, director of the W.K. Kellogg Biological Station, and special assistant to the senior consultant to the president of M.S.U.

After retiring from Michigan State in 1986, Dr. Guyer was quickly named director of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. However, he was destined to return to the University he loved after only two years as professor emeritus and vice president for governmental affairs.

In September of 1992 he became president of Michigan State University and served in that capacity for over a year. Shortly after leaving the university, he was appointed director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture, from which position he retired in October 1996.

Dr. Guyer's success, while well known in Michigan, has spanned the globe. He is an internationally known entomologist and author of more than 70 scientific papers on aquatic ecology, insect control technology, integrated pest management, public policy and international agriculture.

Finally, throughout his extraordinary career, Dr. Guyer has been blessed by the companionship of his wife Norma Guyer. She is well known for her many activities in support of M.S.U. and its boosters as well as the cooperative extension service.

To honor Dr. Guyer and thank him for his decades of service, Michigan State University is working to establish the Gordon and Norma Guyer Endowed Internship Program. This endowment will provide M.S.U. students a variety of public policy internship opportunities and impart first-hand experience in potential career areas. The Gordon and Norma Guyer Endowed Internship Program will serve young individuals who seek to continue Dr. Guyer's work in agriculture and natural resources. I cannot think of a more fitting tribute to two wonderful people.

Dr. Guyer's dedication to Michigan, his contributions in the field of entomology, his focus and determination, and his integrity are an inspiration, and I am proud to call him a friend.●

THE FORUM MAGAZINE'S SEVENTH ANNUAL AFRICAN-AMERICAN PIONEER AWARDS

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the recipients of the Seventh Annual African-American Pioneer Awards, hosted by the Forum magazine. In 1991, the Forum magazine began the African-American Pioneer Awards to "document, honor, and celebrate the little-known accomplishments of African-Americans from the Flint community and other parts of Michigan."

I am pleased to congratulate the following recipients of the 1997 African-American Pioneer Award:

Mr. Darwin Davis, a successful businessman and senior vice president of the Equitable. In a 1988 issue of Black Enterprise, Mr. Davis was listed as one of America's 25 most important black executives.

The Velvettes, one of three Motown bands still performing with its original members. The group is comprised of Flint natives Norma Barbee-Fairhurst, Bertha Barbee-Fairhurst and Kalamazoo natives Mildred Gill-Arbor and Carolyn Gill-Street.

Creative Expressions Dance Studio, founded in 1990, which operates under the city of Flint's Parks and Recreation Department. The studio specializes in tap and ballet and has had great success in national and local competitions.

Mr. Mario J. Daniels, founding member of Mario J. Daniels & Associates, P.C., the first African-American certified public accounting firm in Flint-Genesee County.
