

funds set up under the auspices of the Social Security Administration. The asset would be owned by that person. If they were to die at 45 or 59 or even 66, their estate would receive the asset held in that account and it would go to their wife, husband, children, or to whomever they wanted it to go.

Equally important, the rate of return on personal accounts would dramatically exceed what one gets under the Social Security system today. A person who is today beginning in the workplace, who is about 22 or 25 years old, is going to pay more, if they are an African American, into the trust funds than they will ever receive from the trust funds. In other words, they get zero rate of return.

If one happens to be a typical, average American, their rate of return in the Social Security trust funds, if they are in their twenties today, is about 1.4 percent. If they are in their thirties, it might get up to 2 percent. If they are in their forties, it might reach 2.5 percent—might. It is a terrible rate of return under the Social Security system. People are paying all these taxes and getting virtually nothing in return.

Under a personal account—remember, it is only a small percentage of one's Social Security tax which is going to be invested in this personal account—one will own the asset; plus, the average rate of return over any 20-year period, including the Depression, of investment in the stock market exceeds 5 percent. Since I am talking about a 20-year period, not a 4-month period or a 5-month period or a 1-year period or 3-year period, one can be pretty sure the rate of return on the personal account is going to be at least twice the rate of return on the taxes that person is paying into the Social Security fund generally.

That is called prefunding liability. In other words, we are going to give a person the opportunity as a citizen, especially a younger citizen—people over 55 are not going to be affected by this at all—to actually own an asset and have that asset grow at a rate that is at least twice the rate of their investment in Social Security. Then when they retire, that asset will be physically there to benefit them in their retirement. The liability that is owed to that person by the Federal Government will have actually been prefunded. There are many ways we can talk about that, but it gets into some complexities I do not have time for now.

Essentially, what it means is that the younger generation, instead of having to pay a huge tax increase to support retirement, is going to actually be creating assets which give them, when they retire, a rate of return which will be significantly or at least as good as what they would get under Social Security without having to pay all these new taxes. It is a way of keeping the system solvent and, at the same time, maintaining a benefit structure that is reasonable and, at the same time, not dramatically increasing taxes.

What we have is a pretty simple debate, in real terms, between the Vice President and Governor Bush. The Vice President does not want to tell people the younger generation is going to get hit with a huge burden of new taxes under his plan, and he does not want to tell us how he is going to address the Social Security system and reform it in the outyears. Governor Bush, on the other hand, is willing to step forward and put some interesting and innovative ideas on the table to address one of the most critical issues that will face our country over the next 30 or 40 years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I appreciate the courtesy of the Senator from Montana. I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2001

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now resume consideration of S. 2521, which the clerk will report by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2521) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2001, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I am reluctant to proceed on this bill, although I think we will hold it. My ranking member, Senator MURRAY from Washington, will not be back in town until 5 o'clock this afternoon. This was the weekend her son was married in Seattle. She is returning from her State. I have no comments to make. If Senators want to make comments on the bill, they are free to do so. In the meantime, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I appreciate the opportunity to address the Senate once again on the subject of military construction projects added to an appropriations bill that were not requested by the Department of Defense. This bill contains almost $900 million in unrequested military construction projects.

What makes this bill even more offensive than most pork-laden military construction bills is the fact that, while the Senate is willing to act swiftly to approve these pork-barrel projects, we have failed to act to end the disgraceful situation of more than 12,000 military families forced to use food stamps to make ends meet. For the second year in a row, Congress is on the verge of spending hundreds of millions of dollars for purely parochial reasons, while rejecting a proposal that would cost just $6 million per year to take care of those military families most in need.

I am appalled at the extraordinary and inexplicable resistance I have encountered to enacting legislation to get these brave young men and women and their families off food stamps. I am ashamed that the Senate would put hometown construction projects ahead of desperately needed relief for our most junior enlisted personnel.

I appreciate the Senate's unanimous expression of support during consideration of the budget resolution for additional funding for food stamp relief in the defense budget, and I hope my colleagues will reiterate that support when I offer an amendment to the defense authorization bill to end the food stamp Army once and for all.

Every year, I come to the Senate floor for the express purpose of highlighting programs and projects added to spending bills for primarily parochial reasons. While I recognize that many of the projects added to this bill may be worthwhile, the process by which they were selected violates at least one, if not several, of the criteria set out several years ago to limit just this sort of wasteful spending.

I will address the Kosovo language included in this bill at another time. Suffice to say for now that this language, grounded though it may be in an understandable frustration with the Administration and our allies' handling of that contingency, represents foreign policy making by Congress at its worst. This language, certain to prompt a veto of the bill, constitutes a highly questionable approach to solving the problem of burden-sharing and sets a precedent that will damage our credibility abroad for years to come.

Particularly objectionable, apart from the obvious funding issues already alluded to, is the addition to this bill of funding provisions and legislation having nothing to do with military construction and clearly not an emergency requiring immediate redress. In this regard, note must be made of Section 2109, which legislates a funding profile for a ship that has not been requested by the Navy and that cannot be built under the expedited process the ship's congressional sponsor seeks to impose. The $8 million added by the Appropriations Committee for the 2002 Olympics in Salt Lake City, with the proviso that the funds be designated as an "emergency requirement"—$8 million for the year 2002 Olympics designated as an "emergency"? It continues to stagger the imagination. It compels a reference to the old Yogi Berra malapropism about experiencing deja vu all over again.

I am also at a loss as to the rationale for including in this bill certain site-specific earmarks like the $300,000 to transfer excess housing to Indian tribes of North and South Dakota. And mention should be made of the usual Buy America restrictions included in the bill, with a notable exception when it is in the interest of important Members of Congress. Section 112, for example, prohibits the use of funds in the bill to award contracts worth more than $1 million to foreign contractors, except when a Marshallese contractor is seeking contracts at Kwajalein. The $7 million in the bill "to ensure the availability of biometrics technologies" will require more research.

It will be very interesting to discover the motivation behind that little phrase.

I would like to point out that the report on this bill was filed late, and thus the information available to Senators about specific projects included in this bill is somewhat limited.

We get into an interesting habit of taking up legislation around here without a report available for the Members to read. If history is any guide, however, skepticism regarding many items added to this bill is warranted. Enough is known about the process by which appropriations bills are put together to justify continued outrage at abuse of the system to satisfy parochial considerations.

Mr. President, the abuse of the Future Years Defense Plan as a criteria for adding projects to military spending bills is seriously out of control. Witness, for example, the number of projects in this bill that are in the fourth or fifth year of the FYDP and that have had no design work done. At least 17 such projects were added to the bill. While they are listed as executable, should we really be advancing unrequested projects by four and five years at the same time we continue to ignore the disgrace of 12,000 military families on food stamps?

It was interesting to see, Mr. President, that the authorization bill for military construction includes a provision equating the term "Readiness Center" to the term "Armory." We all enjoy semantic gamesmanship now and again, but if we are going to continue to funnel money back home to National Guard Armories, let's just say so. Let's not exploit the legitimate issue of military readiness that we are finally focused on in order to conduct the same old pork-barrel spending practices that are as much a part of this institution as the collegial colloquialisms that characterize our demeanor on the Senate floor.

There are 28 members of the Appropriations Committee. Only two do not have projects added to the appropriations bill. I wonder what happened to the other two. Perhaps the manager of the bill can tell us what occurred there.

Those numbers, needless to say, go well beyond the realm of mere coincidence. Of 145 projects added to this bill, 111 are in states represented by Senators on the Appropriations Committee, totaling over $700 million. The $12 million added to the bill for the first phase of an access road in Hawaii, the $25 million added for a Joint Mobility Complex in Alaska, the $4 million added for Army National Guard parking in Kentucky, the $14 million added for a fuel cell maintenance dock in Louisiana, the $4.5 million added for an Army National Guard administration building in Nevada, the $10 million added for an Army National Guard Readiness Center (read: Armory) in North Dakota, the $10 million added for the first phase of a base civil engineer complex in South Dakota, and the $1.4 million for channel dredging in Mississippi, are just a handful of the projects added by members that were not in the budget request. Forts Richardson and Wainwright, both in Alaska, fared particularly well, the latter receiving $300,000 for a trail and $900,000 for a biathlon live fire course—which could only be considered a close cousin to the previously mentioned money for the upcoming Winter Olympics.

Yet, many of the Senators whose projects are included in this bill continue to oppose spending just $6 million a year to remove military families from the rolls of those eligible for food stamps. If I sound repetitive, Mr. President, it is out of frustration—frustration at the ability of my colleagues to close their eyes to the disgraceful plight of thousands of our enlisted personnel who don't make enough money to feed themselves and their families.

I believe I have made my point. As usual, I labor under no illusions regarding the impact my comments will have on the way we do business here. I have in the past attempted legislative recourse to pork-barrel spending, and I will do so again. But the history of votes on such efforts causes me to exercise that right sparingly. My self-restraint is simply an acknowledgment that I represent a small minority of this body. Wasteful and unnecessary spending continues because most Members of Congress truly believe that it is one of their primary reasons for being here. I submit, Mr. President, that a wide line exists between serving one's constituents in the context of our nation's best interests and simply funneling money back home because that's how we remind our constituents to vote for us again.

About 2 weeks ago, there was a study completed concerning the deplorable state of the U.S. Army. More captains are leaving the U.S. Army than at anytime in history. We will shortly have a Senate authorization bill, as well as this and other appropriations bills. They don't address this problem. I can guarantee those captains aren't leaving the Army because they need $12 million for the first phase of an access road in Hawaii, or $25 million for a joint mobility complex in Alaska, or $4 million for Army National Guard parking in Kentucky.

If the Republican leadership and the chairmen of these committees continue to spend taxpayers' dollars in this profligate manner, sooner or later the American people will repudiate those actions. I hope it will be sooner rather than later.

The thing that is particularly appalling to me is that this appropriations profligate spending of unauthorized, unnecessary, wasteful pork barrel spending continues at a greater rate every year than the previous year. It will stop sooner or later. I believe it will stop sooner because this bill is a classic example of the abrogation of our responsibilities to average taxpayers, those who are not represented here in Washington, DC.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BURNS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. COLLINS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, on behalf of the leader, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Iowa.

TEN SMART THINGS TO DO WHILE YOU AGE

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, getting old is probably the most universal experience no one really likes to talk about. Sure, people talk about minor aches and pains, but the big topics are unmentionable. They include paying for a funeral, preparing for a nursing home stay, or getting checked for prostate problems. These things make people uncomfortable, but they really should not. Consider Katie Couric's comment about colon cancer. She said, "Some people find the procedures like . . . colonoscopies unappealing. I can tell you they are all much more appealing than dying of this disease."

In honor of Older Americans Month, I encourage aging adults—and that means all of us—to mention the unmentionable, and to think the unthinkable. Once you get these chores done, the rest of your years will be a day in the country. Here are 10 Smart Things to Do While You Age:

1. Secure your retirement income. One financial planner said saving for