STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. CLINTON (for herself, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. DURBIN, and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 1737. A bill to provide for homeland security block grants; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mrs. CLINTON. Madam President, I rise today to offer a helping hand to communities in New York and around the country experiencing fiscal distress as they struggle to respond to the heightened security needs of our country.

Although the terrorists responsible for the September 11 attacks targeted two of our cities, communities thousands of miles away from Ground Zero now find themselves on the front lines in the war against terrorism. Since the attacks, towns and cities, both large and small, all across America have been overwhelmed by calls about potential biological or chemical attacks or threats to infrastructure. Along with this new responsibility comes a heavy burden that these communities should not be forced to shoulder alone.

That is why today I am introducing legislation to provide relief to State and local governments in their efforts to improve emergency response and public safety locally. This Federal aid will ensure that local communities will not have to bear the burden of a strong homeland defense alone. Tomorrow, mayors from all around New York State will meet in New York City to address these very concerns. The legislation I'm introducing today, along with my colleagues Senators FEINSTEIN, MIKULSKI, DURBIN, and SCHUMER, will go a long way in helping them and communities across the country meet these needs.

Since the unimaginable acts of terrorism against American civilians on U.S. soil that took place a few months ago, we have been forced to reevaluate virtually every aspect of our homeland security. One immediate change to emerge in post-September 11 America has been that local communities are now charged with an enormous responsibility: plugging in the gaps in our public safety system and securing our homeland defense.

Our entire country witnessed it on September 11 when hundreds of brave men and women in uniform went rushing towards burning buildings to save peoples' lives. These courageous individuals were public safety officers and emergency response personnel, and, on that day, America and its towns and cities were forever changed.

Mayor Joseph Griffo of Rome, New York described this new phenomenon, saying,

The mayors have become the leaders, the first responders in this new war on terrorism. The police, the firefighters and the emergency personnel are the first responders. We have a role and a responsibility in being more keenly aware of what potentially could happen to our communities.

Already, towns and cities in New York, and municipalities across the country, have seen a glimpse of what homeland security's price tag looks like and they are deeply concerned about how they will pay for it. Rome Mayor Griffo has said,

The finances, of providing security, are going to be very difficult. I think it may be tough to recoup all the costs that we've incurred to date. . . . Beyond that, we have to see where we can work in partnership with the feds and the state.

Bills from skyrocketing police and fire fighter overtime costs are saddling many local governments with unanticipated costs. Local law enforcement agencies are struggling with expenses from a wide range of security needs, including: properly securing major transportation infrastructure, like tunnels and bridges; stepping up security at facilities that store hazardous materials or drinking water; and providing local health personnel with the resources
