STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself, and Mr. DOMENICI):

S. 1118. A bill to amend the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 to identify certain routes in New Mexico as part of the Ports-to-Plains Corridor, a high priority corridor on the National Highway System; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to promote the future economic vitality of the communities in Union and Colfax Counties, and throughout Northeast New Mexico. Our bill designates the route for New Mexico's section of the Ports-to-Plains High Priority Corridor, which runs 1000 miles from Laredo, Texas, to Denver, Colorado. I am pleased to have my colleague, Senator DOMENICI, as a cosponsor.

I am certain every senator recognizes the importance of basic transportation infrastructure to economic development in their State. Roads and airports link a region to the world economy.

In New Mexico, it is well known that regions with four-lane highways and economical commercial air service will most readily attract new jobs. I have long pressed at the Federal level to ensure our communities have the roads and airports they need for their long-term economic health. That is why this bill I am introducing today is so important. With the passage of NAFTA, the Ports-to-Plains corridor is centrally situated to serve international trade and promote economic development along its entire route.

In 1998 Congress identified the corridor from the border with Mexico to Denver, CO, as a High Priority Corridor on the National Highway System. Last year, a comprehensive study was undertaken to determine the feasibility of creating a continuous four-lane highway along the corridor. Alternative highway alignments for the trade corridor were also developed and evaluated. The study was conducted under the direction of a steering committee consisting of the State departments of transportation in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Colorado.

It is important to note that public input was an important facet at every stage of the study. The steering committee sponsored public meetings in May of last year in Clayton, NM, and five other locations along the corridor. A final series of seven public meetings was held this year. I note that the level of public interest and participation was highest in New Mexico. Over 600 citizens attended the public meeting in Raton, NM, on March 6, 2001, while a total of only 700 people attended all six of the other public meetings in Texas, Oklahoma, and Colorado clearly demonstrating the importance of this trade corridor designation to Northeast New Mexico. A final report has just been prepared and a summary can be found on the web at www.wilbursmith.com/portstoplains.

The study evaluated two routes for the trade corridor between Amarillo, TX, and Denver, CO. One route ran along U.S. Highway 64/87 between Clayton and Raton, NM. The other followed U.S. Highway 287, bypassing New Mexico. The feasibility study found that either route between Amarillo and Denver would result in favorable conditions. However, the alignment through New Mexico, from Clayton to Raton, along U.S. Highway 64/87, was dramatically more favorable than the alternative in terms of travel efficiency, benefits and feasibility, including travel time savings and accident cost reduction. In particular:

The benefit-to-cost ratio of the New Mexico route was 75 percent better than for the route bypassing New Mexico.

The traffic volume in 2025 would be 150 percent higher on the New Mexico corridor than on the alternative, including 25 percent more trucks.

Two thirds of the New Mexico alignment is already four lanes wide or is soon slated to be widened to four lanes, compared to only one-third of the alternative alignment.

The alternative would require acquisition of more than twice the right-of-way and would displace nearly three times more residential and commercial facilities.

The New Mexico alignment would serve a population of nearly 2 million persons, compared to 1.5 million for the alternative.

Finally, the construction costs of the New Mexico alignment are $175 million less than the route bypassing New Mexico.

The alternative route had a very slight advantage over the New Mexico alignment only in economic development benefits.

With the feasibility study results now complete, The New Mexico Highway Commission last week voted unanimously to support the designation New Mexico's portion of the Ports-to-Plains Trade High Priority Corridor along U.S. Highway 64/87 between Clayton and Raton. The designated route connects into Texas along Highway 87 to Dumas, and to Denver along Interstate 25.

Very simply, this bill advances the same goal, to designate the route between Clayton and Raton in New Mexico as part of the Ports-to-Plains Corridor. As the huge turnout for the public meeting in Raton in March clearly demonstrates, there is overwhelming public support for this route throughout Union and Colfax Counties in New Mexico. There is also very strong support in neighboring Las Animas and Pueblo Counties in Colorado, including the cities of Trinidad and Pueblo.

In Texas, the state already plans to widen to four lanes its portion of the route between Dumas and the New Mexico state line. In New Mexico, the Citizens' Highway Assessment Task Force identified the route between Clayton and Raton as a priority to upgrade to four lanes. The initial needs and purposes study for the project is currently listed in New Mexico's five-year Statewide Transportation Improvement Study, STIP.

In addition to possible routes north of Amarillo, TX, I should also note that the feasibility study considered a variety of alternative routes south of Amarillo, on down to Laredo. However, Congress already indicated its preferred southern leg in the Omnibus Appropriations Act of 2001, though the
