

in what Armstrong did with the music that could apply to them. Like the Wright Brothers, he opened up the sky, and anybody who developed the skill to fly was welcome to take the risk of leaving the safety of the ground.

The propulsion Armstrong used to lift the music became known as swing. It was a particularly American lift in the rhythm. That lift had no precedent in all world music. It was a new way of phrasing the endless potential for individual interpretation. One could call it the sound of the pursuit of happiness. That is why it was so charismatic and why it influenced so many, in and out of jazz—from Duke Ellington to Bing Crosby to Charlie Parker to Elvis Presley to Wynton Marsalis.

Mr. President, Stanley Crouch says it better than I ever could: “One could call it the sound of the pursuit of happiness.”

In recent years, some have viewed Louis Armstrong from a fairly simplistic perspective. Some suggested he was too acquiescent to racism, a charge many of his fans find unwarranted. He was famous for criticizing President Eisenhower for his delays in desegregating the schools of Little Rock, Arkansas, in the 1950s. Hundreds of hours of audiotaped recordings of conversations of Louis Armstrong have recently been opened at the Louis Armstrong Archives at Queens College in Flushing, New York, and researchers who have heard them indicate that Louis Armstrong was indignant and enraged at the shame of racism in this country.

Others suggest that his music was also simplistic, referring to songs titled “Jeepers, Creepers,” “Gone Fishin’,” “When You’re Smiling,” “That Lucky Old Sun,” “Rockin’ Chair,” did not have the sophistication of serious music. Those critics, just aren’t listening, in my opinion. They don’t hear a trumpet sound that was honed over decades and has not been replicated. They don’t hear a voice tempered by years of performance and musically tuned and timed to perfection.

I am certainly not a serious music critic. I’ll just quote Louis Armstrong, when he was asked what kind of music he listened to: “There are two kinds of music,” he said. “Good music and bad music—I listen to the good music!” I agree with Louis Armstrong!

As most of my colleagues know, I also grew up in modest circumstances. But in addition to love, support and faith my parents gave me, which could not have a price put on them, they gave me something else intangible: A love of music. When we were young, my parents scraped together money for piano lessons for my siblings and me, and later even for violin lessons. As you can see, I became a Senator!

My parents also sacrificed to save what was then a phenomenal sum: $18.75 for a student season pass in the cheap seats for the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. I went to every concert I could, and it was there that I first learned of the uplifting experience of music, an appreciation I am grateful to have had all of my life.

Louis Armstrong’s music uplifted people. Is it no coincidence that his music was adored on the other side of the Iron Curtain? That millions around the world, on all continents, would flock to hear him on his tours? No, that is no coincidence. That is the power of music in general, and the genius of Louis Armstrong in particular.

Louis Armstrong’s music remains loved today by millions around the world, and I think virtually every jazz performer has credited Louis Armstrong for some level of inspiration. One of America’s greatest contemporary jazz trumpeters, Mr. Wynton Marsalis, was quoted in last Sunday’s Deseret News saying that Louis Armstrong “is the one who taught all of us how to play. He taught the whole world about jazz.”

My resolution today, which I am pleased to have co-sponsored by Senators SCHUMER, BREAUX and LIEBERMAN, recognizes the brilliance of this great American’s artistic contribution. This Saturday, on the occasion of the centennial of his birth, I hope we all have a moment to pause in joy and gratitude for the uplifting experience of Louis Armstrong’s music. I know that, for me, when I think of the life and work of Louis Armstrong, I say to myself: What a Wonderful World.
