

We, on the other hand, are averse to doing anything because we are afraid of the economic ramifications of businesses coming to us and saying, "I need cheap labor and I don't care if they are coming here legally or illegally." And there is that libertarian flow through the body that says we should just simply open the borders. So we have all of those converging pressures here that stops us from doing anything about this tragedy.

□ 2145

It is a tragedy in the Coronado. It is a tragedy also for the United States. Any country that cannot define its own borders and cannot actually protect and defend them is not a nation. Any country that says we recognize that there is massive violation of our laws, of our immigration laws, but we choose not to do anything about it, does not deserve to be called a country, and one wonders for how long it can be called a country.

Interestingly, this issue of elimination of borders and sort of a world economic system, or at least in this case a North and South American economic and political system that converges, this is not something that is a hidden agenda. There used to be people that I know, and the Speaker knows of many people, who would confront us at various meetings, town meetings and the like, with this world economic order, a new world order, and it is all very conspiratorial; and they feel that it is all in the hands of certain people who have economic interests. Well, this is not conspiratorial. This is out in the open. It is absolutely clear for anyone to see and hear.

For instance, not too long ago, less than a week ago, I think, the President of Mexico, Vincente Fox, was speaking in Spain, and he said that all of his efforts, all of the government's efforts to try and liberalize immigration policy, were really devoted to one goal. This was incredibly insightful, hearing what he had to say. This is the President of Mexico, and he has said something similar on many occasions, but he said just the other day that his goal is to end up with a system that allows for the free flow of goods, of services, and he stopped for a minute, and he said of people, not inhibited by borders. He has said in the past that he believes in a relatively short time there will be no borders between the United States and Mexico.

The gentleman who is the head of an agency of the Mexican Government that is called the Ministry for Mexicans Living Outside of Mexico said earlier, told me personally in Mexico, that there were, when I was questioning him about the use of his term of "migration," and I said it is really immigration, and when they cross the border illegally it is called illegal immigration, and this is Mr. Juan Hernandez, who is, by the way, both a Mexican and an American citizen, he said to me, "Congressman, it is not two countries; it is just a region."

This, I suggest, Mr. Speaker, is the end goal of this game we are playing. It is debatable as to whether it is good or bad. I think it is bad. At least it deserves a debate, a national debate. Should we eliminate our borders, or not? That is where we are going. I want it to happen in a de jure way as opposed to a de facto way. Actually, I do not want it to happen at all, but, if it does, it has to be through a legal process and not one where we just several years from now look around and say, how did this happen to us? We lost our sovereignty as a Nation. I do not want to say I was responsible or had no part to play in that process.
