DESIGNATING THE WEEK OF APRIL 29–MAY 3, 2002, AS “NATIONAL CHARTER SCHOOLS WEEK”

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 254, submitted earlier today by Senators LIEBERMAN, GREGG, CARPER, and HUTCHINSON of Arkansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 254) designating April 29, 2002, through May 3, 2002, as “National Charter Schools Week,” and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I am proud to join my colleagues, Senators GREGG, CARPER, HUTCHINSON, and BAYH in introducing this resolution today to salute the success of public charter schools in our country and to designate April 29, 2002 through May 3, 2002, as National Charter Schools Week.

This week also marks the 10th anniversary of the opening of the Nation's first charter school. Since the City Academy in St. Paul, MN, was founded, the idea has been catching on.

From seeing several charter schools up close, I am convinced that they represent one of the most promising engines of education reform in the country today. Charter schools grant educators freedom from top-heavy bureaucracies and their red tape in exchange for a commitment to meet high academic standards. In 1994, I was proud to join my colleague Dave Durenberger of Minnesota as sponsor of the bill authorizing the Federal Charter School Grant Program, which Congress passed with strong bipartisan majorities and which has provided more than $750 million since then for planning, startup and implementation of charter schools.

I also think it's important to note in many cases charter schools are built from the ground up by educational entrepreneurs, teachers, parents and local leaders seeking to reinvent the public school and take it back to the future, reconnecting public education to some of our oldest, most basic values—responsibility, opportunity, community, and refocusing its mission on doing what's best for the child instead of what's best for the system.

The results speak for themselves. Today, over 500,000 students attend more than 2,400 charter schools in 34 States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. And, nationwide charters schools have combined waiting lists long enough to fill another 1,000 schools. Parents and educators in turn have given these programs overwhelmingly very high marks. Growing research shows that charter schools are effectively serving diverse populations, particularly many of the disadvantaged and at-risk children that traditional public schools have struggled to educate.

Despite our achievements to date, we cannot rest on our laurels. We must strive to increase options, and replicate successes. Recently, some skeptics have criticized what they see as a slow down in the growth of charter schools and an increase in the number of schools that have closed. Although the hundreds of families on waiting lists clearly refutes these skeptics, we must rightly maintain our vigilance to ensure that charter schools reach our high academic expectations and demand accountability from those that our failing their students.

Unfortunately in too many cases, charter schools are the victims of poorly drafted charter school laws and inadequate funding. I am pleased that many of the reforms enacted under the recently signed No Child Left Behind Act will further strengthen the academic performance of charter schools and help put them on firmer fiscal footing. Recognizing that greater choice and accountability enhances our public education system, I recently urged all American colleges and universities to create charter schools. Parents are crying out for more high-quality public school options that prepare their children for college, and colleges are perfectly positioned to help.

The most remarkable aspect of the charter movement may be that it has managed to bring together educators, parents, community activists, business leaders and politicians from across the political spectrum in support of a common goal to better educate our children by offering more choice, more grassroots control and more accountability within our public schools. I am proud to salute these growing community efforts throughout our nation, and commend these frontline educational innovations for their commitment to expanding educational options for American families to ensure that all children reach high levels of academic achievement.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution and preamble be agreed to, en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, with no intervening action or debate, and that any statements thereto be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 254) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 254

Whereas charter schools are public schools authorized by a designated public body and operating on the principles of accountability, parental involvement, choice, and autonomy;

Whereas in exchange for the flexibility and autonomy given to charter schools, they are held accountable by their sponsors for improving student achievement and for their financial and other operations;

Whereas 37 States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico have passed laws authorizing charter schools;

Whereas 37 States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico will have received substantial assistance from the Federal Government by the end of the current fiscal year for planning, startup, and implementation of charter schools since their authorization in 1994 under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6301 et seq.);

Whereas 34 States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico are serving more than 500,000 students in more than 2,431 charter schools during the 2001-2002 school year;

Whereas charter schools can be vehicles for improving student academic achievement for the students who attend them, for stimulating change and improvement in all public schools, and for benefiting all public school students;

Whereas charter schools must meet the same Federal student academic achievement accountability requirements as all public schools, and often set higher and additional goals, to ensure that they are of high quality and truly accountable to the public;

Whereas charter schools assess and evaluate students annually and often more frequently, and charter school student academic achievement is directly linked to charter school existence;

Whereas charter schools give parents new freedom to choose their public school, charter schools routinely measure parental approval, and charter schools must prove their ongoing and increasing success to parents, policymakers, and their communities;

Whereas two-thirds of charter schools report having a waiting list, the average size of such a waiting list is nearly one-half of the school's enrollment, and the total number of students on all such waiting lists is enough to fill another 1,000 average-sized charter schools;

Whereas students in charter schools nationwide have similar demographic characteristics as students in all public schools;

Whereas charter schools in many States serve significant numbers of students from families with lower income, minority students, and students with disabilities, and in a majority of charter schools almost half of the students are considered at risk or are former dropouts;

Whereas charter schools have enjoyed broad bipartisan support from the Administration, Congress, State Governors and legislatures, educators, and parents across the Nation; and

Whereas charter schools are laboratories of reform and serve as models of how to educate children as effectively as possible: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates April 29, 2002, through May 3, 2002, as “National Charter Schools Week”;

(3) supports the goals of National Charter Schools Week, an event sponsored by charter schools and charter school organizations across the Nation and established to recognize the significant impacts, achievements, and innovations of the Nation's charter schools; and

(4) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to conduct appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities to demonstrate support for charter schools in communities throughout the Nation.
