

most products we know of today. Some have even said it could lead to the "Second Industrial Revolution." Its scope is nothing other than breathtaking.

In the area of national security, nanotechnology has been identified as one of the most important strategic research areas. Revolutionary applications could include: very lightweight but extremely strong armor, vastly smaller and more powerful computers, microscopic sensor systems, and tiny unmanned vehicles. These could provide vastly increased capabilities for our armed forces. Conversely, to fall behind in these new areas will present us with a critical security risk.

Unfortunately, the United States is no longer the only world leader in many areas of nanoscience, as many countries have recognized its importance and are greatly increasing their funding. With stakes this high, we must pay close attention to the choices we make.

I understand the stakes and stand four-square behind public-private efforts to keep America in the lead in nanotechnology. Just as we led the industrial revolution, America will lead this new scientific revolution for the benefit of generations to come.

RETIREMENT OF MG ARNOLD PUNARO

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I was privileged to attend the retirement ceremony of MG Arnold Punaro from the U.S. Marine Corps on September 19, 2003 at the Marine Barracks here in Washington, DC. General Punaro is known to many here in the Senate from his outstanding service of many years as staff director of the Senate Armed Services Committee and on the personal staff of Senator Sam Nunn. I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD, at this point, portions of the remarks made at the ceremony by Gen. James L. Jones, Supreme Allied Commander, Europe and Commander, U.S. European Command.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REMARKS OF GENERAL JAMES L. JONES, SUPREME ALLIED COMMANDER, EUROPE AND COMMANDER, U.S. EUROPEAN COMMAND

The real reason we are all here is to pay honor to a true patriot who has given so much of his time and talent to our Nation, and to each of us . . . Major General Arnold Punaro, United States Marine.

We also honor an exceptional family, which has supported him through his life in the "public sector" of Capitol Hill and in his career in the U.S. Marine Corps. Jan Punaro stands in no shadow among spouses who deserve our eternal gratitude. Her support to Arnold, through his "many" simultaneous careers, has been remarkable.

Arnold has been a marine since 1968, a personal staff member for Senator Sam Nunn for 24 years, a minority and majority staff director of the Senate Armed Services Committee for a total of 15 years, a member of Georgetown University's adjunct faculty for ten years, and a most valuable "utility infielder" of the Department of Defense on a wide range of issues all having to do with transformation, long before the term itself became popular.

As a marine, Arnold Punaro has literally "done it all" . . . Republic of Vietnam combat leader, wounded and decorated, the Marine Corps basic school "staff protocol officer." Upon leaving active duty, he went into the reserves where he saw active duty in Desert Shield/Desert Storm, and in the Balkans where he battled the largest snow storm ever to hit Zagreb. He has participated in the Marine Corps transformation starting back in 1995 until today. In 1997 he chaired the "Defense Reform Task Force" for Secretary Cohen and produced a document that remains very current. He also participated in the Hart-Rudman Commission, and currently serves on the Secretary of Defense's newly formed Defense Business Board.

In the public sector, Arnold Punaro started his post-active duty life working for Senator Sam Nunn, rapidly rising from press secretary to foreign policy/national security legislative assistant on the Senator's personal staff, before moving to the Senate Armed Services Committee and its leadership positions as Director for both the Minority and the Majority. The legislation produced during his time on the committee was both historic and transformational. Let's be clear . . . where we are today in our military has a lot to do with the fact that Arnold Punaro was where he was in a very important time for each of our services, starting with the all-volunteer force and Goldwater-Nickles legislation.

Arnold Punaro is currently serving as the Director of Reserve Affairs at Headquarters Marine Corps. He has been instrumental in bringing the "Marine for Life Program" to fruition in these past few years, for which I am sincerely grateful. Marines now can have a lifelong association with the Corps regardless of their career pursuits. Always a passionate advocate, Arnold Punaro's well known compassion for the lives of soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines and their families defines him in all that he is and cared about.

As an adjunct professor (with one bachelor of science and two masters of arts) at my alma mater, Georgetown University, for over ten years he helped mold and shape the minds of our future leaders on national security issues.

For all he has done in his short life, Arnold Punaro has always found time for his family . . . the son of Angelo and Anina Punaro, first generation Italian-Americans from southern Italy, who watched with great admiration as young Arnold grew into manhood and became a United States Marine, going off to war in 1967.

His company commander in Vietnam, COL Jim Van Riper, and his wife Connie, are here today to pay tribute to this great American, and we welcome them back to this post where they served with distinction in the early 70's. We're all proud of Arnold and Jan and their children, especially as we celebrate the safe return of 1LT Joe Punaro, USMC from Operation Iraqi Freedom where he served at the front of Marine lines in the capture of Baghdad. Joe . . . welcome home, we're all very proud of you and your Marines.

Arnold, it is a special honor for me to be able to be here today. We've known each other for 24 years, and for 24 years I've been privileged to have a front row seat which has allowed me to witness your very significant contributions to our Nation, both in and out of uniform. Very simply, you have been and remain today a special asset, and people who make the big decisions, who need the really good advice, the thoughtful consideration on difficult issues, turn to you knowing that you will always give straightforward, thoughtful, and forthright advice. In this respect, you are in a class by yourself.

You stand here today, in our eyes, as a great Marine. The Corps has benefitted from your wise advice for many years, through both good times and bad times, and we are all the better for all you have contributed. You represent the finest example of the concept of the citizen-soldier by your selflessness and your dedication to, simply, but relentlessly, trying to do the right thing . . . regardless of the difficulty or the popularity (or lack thereof) of a given position.

All of us know full well why we are here today, and it is simply for this reason, to honor you, Jan, and your family; to say thank you for all you have done for all of us; and to wish you well in all you will do from here on out. There is still much more to be done.

Ladies and gentlemen, as you know, "semper fidelis" means "always faithful." Those words seem awfully appropriate today as we honor Major General Arnold Punaro.

Well done, my friend, well done!

ARABIA MOUNTAIN

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, a mere 20 minutes from the steel and concrete economic dynamo that is modern Atlanta, you can find a quiet refuge where history and natural beauty still exist side by side.

I speak of the area around Arabia Mountain which contains ecosystems home to endangered species, historic structures and archaeological sites. Its proximity to Atlanta makes it accessible to millions of Americans, but also puts it in danger of urban sprawl.

No strip mall should obliterate the ancient soapstone quarry which attracted Native Americans over 5,000 years ago. Nor should overdevelopment mar Arabia Mountain, the granite outcropping at the center of the area. This region contains much pristine land, farmland, and the charming town of Lithonia. Lithonia, home to many fine buildings made of locally quarried granite, has a name which means "stone city." The Arabia Mountain area still has a few farms from the days when it was the heart of Georgia's dairy industry, and has remnants of the 1820s Georgia Gold Rush which predated the more famous California Gold Rush by two decades.

If we are serious about preserving this irreplaceable history and environment, we must act to designate Arabia Mountain in DeKalb County as a National Heritage Area. This designation will help preserve the endangered and rare species which live nearby and save historic buildings from the wrecking ball. It will also allow the kind of smart development which preserves our heritage while allowing the kind of development which will provide jobs and growth for this beautiful region.

Arabia Mountain and its surrounding area are the result of over 400 million slow years of geological changes. Men have made an impact for the last 7,000 years. All this could be changed forever in another decade or so of uncontrolled growth.

The need for this action has generated support from both sides of the aisle, in Georgia, and both houses of Congress. I thank Kelly Jordan, chair of the Arabia Mountain Heritage Area Alliance, Mayor Marcia Glenn, of Lithonia, Vernon Jones, CEO of DeKalb County, Mark Towe and Glen Culpepper who all have provided strong support to this effort. I also extend my thanks to Congresswomen DENISE MAJETTE, for working so hard for this designation, as well as my friend and senior Senator from Georgia, ZELL MILLER, for supporting this designation.

Vernon Jones, CEO of DeKalb County says:

Nowhere in this great nation is a project more deserving of a National Heritage Area designation than this one. This began as a concept between conservationists, neighborhood activists, landowners and concerned citizens, and over the years has grown in scope to encompass some of the richest landscape Georgia has to offer. DeKalb County citizens voted to tax themselves to support this project. This local funding mechanism was absolutely critical to move this project forward. One visit to Arabia Mountain is all the proof anyone needs to demonstrate the great impact that may be achieved by diverse groups working together to preserve a truly significant natural heritage for future generations.

He is right. Let us act now to preserve this spot for succeeded generations and designate Arabia Mountain as a National Heritage Area.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

A TRIBUTE TO LIL GREENWOOD

• Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, today I recognize the life and career of one of Alabama's musical legends, the great jazz singer Lil Greenwood.

Lil Greenwood is a living legend. She was born on November 18, 1923, as the youngest daughter of the late Maggie and Reverend Sylvester George, Sr. It was at her father's side, at the age of 3, that she began to sing in the church that he served.

A native of Prichard, AL she grew up in Mobile County and graduated from Alabama State College. Her talents were evident to all those who knew her. In fact, it was the encouragement and support she received from the Mobile County Schools Music Supervisor that fanned the flame of ambition within her, and it was a generous gift of bus fare from a former principal that allowed her to head to Oakland, CA to follow her dream.

It was in California that Lil Greenwood was to be "discovered." During a performance at the famed Purple Onion in San Francisco, she was heard by no less than the legendary Duke Ellington. Needless to say, the Duke was suitably impressed. After hearing her sing, he commented that "the girl has a voice that's a mixture of Marian Anderson, Ella Fitzgerald, Dinah Washington, and Mahalia Jackson." These women were the embodiments of jazz and blues singing, and it is inconceivable that a greater compliment could have been paid.

Recently, my home State of Alabama passed a proclamation honoring Ms. Greenwood for her personal and professional accomplishments. In honor of her upcoming 80th birthday, I would like to take this opportunity to read that proclamation into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The Proclamation reads as follows:

Whereas, born Lillian George on November 18, 1923, a native of Prichard, Alabama in Mobile county and affectionately and professionally known as Lil Greenwood; and

Whereas, Lil received her grade-school education in Mobile County and graduated from Alabama state college; and

Whereas, she made her master-level vocal recording as early as 1950 and on such recording labels as Modern, Federal, Tangerine, and Columbia Records and also backed Ray Charles on Paramount Records; and

Whereas, Lil Greenwood was the featured vocalist with The Duke Ellington Orchestra and co-authored with Duke Ellington and Billy Strayhorn. She has performed in many places around the world, including the Far East and Europe. She has also performed at many famous spots stateside including, The Blue Note in Chicago, the Apollo in New York and in the San Francisco Bay-Area and Oakland; and

Whereas, she has appeared on numerous television shows including "The Tonight Show", with Johnny Carson, "Good Times," "The Jeffersons," "The Flip Wilson Show," and "Grady" and on stage she has portrayed major characters in such musicals as "Hello Dolly," "My People," "Buffalo Chips," "Wedding Band," "Back Alley Tales" and "Dark Symphony"; and

Whereas, Lil Greenwood returned home and remains an active and revered jazz singer in Alabama and has been inducted into the Gulf Coast Ethnic and Heritage Jazz Festival Hall of Fame;

Now, therefore, I, Bob Riley, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby proclaim July 28, 2003, as Lil Greenwood Day in the State of Alabama and encourage the citizens of Alabama to show their support.

As is obvious by the proclamation issued by the Governor of Alabama, Lil Greenwood has lived a life where her gifts have brought and still continue to bring joy to a great many people. It is only appropriate that we take the occasion of her upcoming birthday to recognize her for her contributions.●

IN HONOR OF DENNIS MAXWELL'S 75TH BIRTHDAY

• Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, today, a constituent of mine, Dennis Maxwell, will turn 75, and I would like to take this occasion to wish him a happy birthday. Dennis was born in New York City, but moved to Connecticut when he was six and grew up in Fairfield County. Dennis's mother, Marguerite Maxwell, was an accomplished classical pianist who founded the Westport School of Music, which thrives to this day. Dennis attended Yale University and received a bachelor's degree in Business Administration in 1950.

Dennis married his childhood sweetheart, Robin Tucker, and the two of them headed to Texas, where he served in the Army as an intelligence officer during the Korean War. He and his wife contributed four children to the baby boom generation and lived for a time in Michigan. The Maxwells moved (back) to Connecticut in 1966.

Dennis has had a successful business career, working for companies like Scovill Manufacturing, which was founded in Waterbury in 1802, and N.L. Industries. For the past several years, he has run his own water conditioning business.

Andre Maurois wrote, "Growing old is no more than a bad habit which a busy man has no time to form." If that's true, Dennis may be turning 75, but he's not growing old. In addition to running a company, he is an avid golfer and more important active in his community. At Christ & Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Westport, Dennis has been a vestry member, chaired the church's capital campaign, and served on several committees. When his beloved wife Robin became wheelchair-bound from emphysema, he raised the funds to put an elevator in the church. Sadly, she succumbed to the disease in 1997, after 46 years of marriage. In addition to his church-related duties, Dennis has served as president of the local Alcohol and Drug Dependency Council, and he has been on the board of Interfaith Housing, a not-for-profit ecumenical group that provides clothing and shelter for area homeless people.

Thoreau admonishes us to "Aim above morality. Be not simply good; be good for something." Over the course of his life, Dennis has been devoted to his family, his community, and his country. I think that counts as being "good for something," and I would like to join his children—Anne, Linda, Lisa, and Gray (who has worked here in the Senate for 19 years and is currently Senator LAUTENBERG's legislative director)—and their families and Dennis' many friends in wishing him a very happy 75th birthday.●

TRIBUTE TO JEAN SUTTON

• Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a dear friend, Jean Elizabeth Rodgers Sutton, of Linden, AL. Jean Sutton died on Tuesday, September 16, at the age of 62.

Jean was born in Jackson, MS, and attended Hinds Junior College in Raymond, MS. She received a Junior College Press Association Scholarship to continue her education at the University of Southern Mississippi.

It was at the University of Southern Mississippi that she met her husband, Goodloe Sutton, and they were married in 1964 after Jean had graduated and worked for a year as editor of the Tylertown Times in Tylertown, MS.

After moving to Linden, Jean worked as a reporter for the award-winning Democrat Reporter, the weekly newspaper owned by her husband. She also taught girls physical education and journalism at Linden High School.
