

Volpentest's track record for bringing home the bacon is legendary, and perhaps the main reason his birthday parties attract so many grateful well-wishers.

Just this week he received the 2004 Edward DeLuca lifetime achievement award from the International Economic Development Council in Washington, D.C., recognizing "his unfailing commitment and endless accomplishments," said Steven Budd, council chairman.

Volpentest accepted the accolade with well-rehearsed ado. Dozens of awards, plaques and commendations have come his way in the past four decades. Those not displayed on his office walls are in his home or stored in his garage, he said.

Reaching the century mark is remarkable, but for Volpentest, it is a good deal more.

"The doctor gave me a month to live in 1957," he says, recalling those frightening days when cancer of the jaw nearly took his life.

A lot has happened since then. Volpentest helped found what is now TRIDEC, got deep into state and national politics, and along the way helped bring millions of dollars of development and infrastructure to the Tri-Cities.

Buildings, freeways, research laboratories, bridges, a hotel and a training center for emergency response teams all have the touch of Volpentest on them to some degree.

And he says he's not done yet.

"We need more money for the HAMMER training facility. It's proven itself as a world class facility. We need more classrooms out there," he said.

Volpentest also is fully aware that Hanford's budget hasn't been approved by Congress, and that Battelle needs to have support for the new campus in north Richland. "They (Battelle) are the foundation for the growth of this area," Volpentest said.

The centenarian says he's seen so much growth in the Tri-Cities that he's concerned the region might grow too fast.

"We can have steady growth, but not too many people too fast," he said.

His birthday wish for the Tri-Cities is that the communities would start working together. "Teamwork is the most important word to me," he said, adding that politics today seems to be more unfriendly than it used to be.

Volpentest's birthday wish for himself is "to have a few more years."

He has no secrets to share about how to reach the century milestone.

"How would I know? Got good genes, I guess. Just work hard and stay active," Volpentest said.

Tonight's party isn't all there is for the birthday boy. The Seattle Seahawks have invited him to bring out the game ball for Sunday's home game with the San Francisco 49ers.

"I just hope they don't expect me to run with it," he said with a gleam in his eye.

Mr. GRAVES. Mr. Speaker, I proudly pause to recognize Tarik Yameen, a very special young man who has exemplified the finest qualities of citizenship and leadership by taking an active part in the Boy Scouts of America, Troop 376, and in earning the most prestigious award of Eagle Scout.

Tarik has been very active with his troop, participating in many Scout activities. Over the course of the years Tarik has been involved with Scouting, he has earned 33 merit badges and has held numerous leadership positions, serving as Patrol Leader, Den Chief, Quartermaster, Senior Patrol Leader, Troop Guide, and OA Troop Representative. This was done for his church, Liberty Christian Church.

Mr. Speaker, I proudly ask you to join me in commending Tarik Yameen for his accomplishments with the Boy Scouts of America and for his efforts put forth in achieving the highest distinction of Eagle Scout.

HONORING MILFORD PUBLIC LIBRARY

HON. THADDEUS G. McCOTTER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 29, 2004

Mr. McCOTTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge and honor the Milford Public Library, which is celebrating 75 years of service to the Milford, Michigan community.

On April 1, 1929, by a vote of 326 to 174, citizens approved the establishment of a free public library by levying a half-mill tax. However, the real beginnings of the Milford Library can be traced back to the 1890s. In March of 1895, the Milford Times reported about the beginnings of a new organization, the "Ladies' Library Association." The goal of this fledgling group was to "establish a library of high-class literature, sufficiently varied to suit the different tastes," and to which the members will have access. Later that month, the Times reported on the success of the organization, which had already attracted 52 members.

The members felt "the need of something in the way of a public library has long been felt, and many hail with delight this project whereby at a small cost they can have access to the best of current literature." The Association imposed a $1.00 fee on members, which allowed them to draw one book from the collection each week.

Between the dissolution of the Association and the beginnings of the Public Library, the Milford Monday Literary Club sponsored a reading room for 15 years. The Club's collection of material was transferred to the new public library.

Mr. Speaker, for over 75 years the citizens of Milford, Michigan have continued to support the vision of the Ladies' Library Association and the Milford Public Library. I hope my colleagues will join me in thanking the citizens of Milford, Library Board Members and employees of the Milford Public Library for their outstanding service to the people of Michigan, and wish them well in the next 75 years.

SUPPORT OF THE AMERICAN ISRAEL PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

HON. ROBERT E. ANDREWS

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 29, 2004

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee AIPAC. For over fifty years, AIPAC, acknowledging that the security interests of Israel and the United States are intertwined, has worked diligently to strengthen the relationship between Israel and the United States. They have educated members of Congress and the public alike on the issues that Israel faces in its quest to remain a stable, democratic ally to the United States in a part of the world where such nations are scarce. Even in the face of the ongoing unrest in Israel, AIPAC continues to work tirelessly towards an end to terrorism, and an achievement of peace and security in the region.

In recent weeks, our friends at AIPAC have been the subject of allegations that question their dedication to the preservation of national security within the United States. Accusations such as these, which lack substantial credible proof behind them, have no positive effect. These baseless claims make it impossible for AIPAC to defend themselves, and uphold the favorable reputation that they have earned through their efforts. In this case, such charges also threaten to intensify the plague of anti-Semitism that AIPAC has tried to fight throughout its history. It has been my experience that AIPAC and its members care deeply about the collective security interests of the United States and Israel, and I continue to stand by them in their noble efforts.

HEALTH PROTECTIONS FOR OUR SERVICE PERSONNEL

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 29, 2004

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. SHAYS and I have joined to introduce H.R. 5166, The Armed Forces Voluntary Immunization and Health Justice Act of 2004.

In the 104th Congress, Mr. SHAYS and I joined in holding several oversight hearings on the cases of Persian Gulf Syndrome that were affecting our military men and women returning from the first Persian Gulf War. Those hearings served as the impetus for causing the Department of Defense to seriously re-examine and re-vamp its system of diagnosis, treatment and compensation for Persian Gulf War veterans. I know that the work we did on that issue made a difference in the lives of those service members who agreed to risk their lives for us.

However, our concerns about the health of veterans and active duty military members did not end with those hearings. We have worked together to craft a bi-partisan solution to provide members of the military with the ability to make informed decisions about immunization for anthrax and smallpox. The right to informed consent is enjoyed by every citizen, except those in the military. If enacted, this bill would prohibit the Department of Defense from mandating immunization against anthrax and/or smallpox if a soldier believes that the risk to his or her health status outweighs the benefit of immunization.

Service members have experienced adverse health effects from these vaccines including heart, respiratory, and skin problems. In one well-known case, a soldier died from the adverse effects of a vaccine. Despite the known risks, many soldiers have been required to take these vaccines. As a result, many have decided to leave the service rather than run the risk of vaccination. Unfortunately, many honorable soldiers have been punished solely for refusing to accept these vaccines. Our legislation would assure that soldiers who want to serve are not faced with this agonizing choice.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to co-sponsor this bill and join us in assuring that members of our military have the ability to determine whether or not to take these vaccines.

RECOGNIZING TOM KISTLER

HON. DARLENE HOOLEY

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 29, 2004

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, today I want to recognize and remember the life of a local hero: Tom Kistler.

Although it has been over a year, it is still hard for those affected by this humble, quiet man to believe he's gone. The residents of Polk County, Oregon, know their neighbors—and they look up to the firefighters who serve them.

Killed on his way to drill on March 29, 2003, Tom Kistler died in the same way he lived—in the service of others.

Captain Kistler was a volunteer firefighter for twenty-five years. He was proud of his time with the Independence (Oregon) Fire Department and Polk County Fire District #1.

It was Tom that led the effort in fielding a water rescue/recovery team; it was Tom that brought his peers together to raise funds for the annual Firefighter's Christmas program for the local children; and it was Tom that was always "there" keeping his community safe.

As if his service in the fire department wasn't enough—and it would have been—Tom was also a thirty-year veteran of the Oregon National Guard.

For Tom Kistler, being a citizen meant action. It meant doing things. Citizenship was a verb.

This week, brothers and sisters in service will remember his life and his sacrifice during a special ceremony at the National Fire Academy.

Today, let us take a moment and reflect upon Tom Kistler and many like him that serve our communities and our Nation, the folks that make the personal sacrifices every day, not because they have to but because they choose to. They are the volunteers that make our Nation strong, the people that make our communities special.

America is still the land of the free and the home of the brave—Tom Kistler helped make it so.

EDITORIAL FROM THE BECKLEY REGISTER-HERALD

HON. NICK J. RAHALL, II

OF WEST VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 29, 2004

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, Congress was supposed to reauthorize the major surface transportation and jobs bill, the successor to TEA 21, a year ago.

Now, because of the indifference of the Bush Administration and the Republican Leadership in Congress, we are about to embark on the sixth extension of TEA 21, rather than completing work on a bill that would address our current and future infrastructure needs as well as providing sorely needed jobs and economic stimulus.

The House and Senate versions of transportation and jobs bill passed both houses by margins larger than is required in Congress for amendments to the Constitution. But the bill is on a road to nowhere because the Cheney-Bush reelection bunch wants to make up for their Medicare debacle by trying to appear tough on spending. Meanwhile, we have the votes in both the House and the Senate to override a threatened presidential veto and pass a meaningful bill, but the Republican House and Senate leadership are just caving into the Bush Administration's reelection efforts. In so doing, they're failing to uphold the Constitutional obligation of Congress.

Although Americans are crying out loud and clear for the need to reinvest in our country, the Bush Administration and the Republican leadership don't bother to listen. As an example of what I'm talking about, I have an editorial from a widely-read newspaper in my district, the Beckley Register-Herald, which I would like to submit for the record to accompany my remarks. Yesterday, in response to Congressional inaction on the transportation and jobs bill, the Register-Herald ran the editorial appearing below:

[From the Beckley Register-Herald]

HIGHWAY BILL

While politicians play election-year politics, W.Va. suffers.

Heard the latest? A multiyear highway spending bill, crucial to progress here in southern West Virginia, appears to be off until after the election.

The existing six-year highway and mass transit spending bill, funded at $218 billion, ran out a year ago and has had to be prolonged by several short-term extensions because of differences over spending levels between Congress and the White House.

The White House, citing the need for fiscal restraint, recommended $256 billion and threatened to veto any bill that would add to the deficit.

The Senate approved a $318 billion package. The House originally came in at $284 billion, and recently the two chambers united around a figure of $284 billion in guaranteed contracts plus another $15 billion in contracts that have yet to be carried out.

But politicians are playing election-year politics, and, of course, nothing of substance is getting done.

As we pointed out a few days ago, no one can accuse this Congress of overwork—it's only been in session roughly one day out of every three.

Sadly, lawmakers sent to the president only a fraction of the 13 spending bills necessary to fund the government for the fiscal year that starts Friday. That includes the transportation bill to fund highway and transit projects for the next six years—vitally important to southern West Virginia.

The Mountain State faces unique challenges when it comes to building highways. It can cost up to $20 million to build one mile of a highway here.

This state relies heavily on the federal program to build highways. A total of $2.2 billion was secured for West Virginia in the House version of the bill, $2 billion of which are projects in southern West Virginia.

Interstate links developed here in recent years have brought new jobs and the potential for attracting new businesses. These roads provide modern access and position West Virginia as a crossroads for business developers looking for locations in the East. They provide our families a safer means of getting to and from school and work.

Ordinary West Virginians can't afford to see these opportunities go by the wayside, or even delayed. We suffer while Congress engages in gridlock.

Enough is enough. Congress and the Bush administration need to get in gear and produce a highway spending package that's adequately financed.

SERGEANT RIAVAN A. TEJEDA POST OFFICE

SPEECH OF

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 28, 2004

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak in support of H.R. 4046, calling for the United States Postal Service located at 555 West 180th Street in New York, New York, to be hereby named the "Sergeant Riayan A. Tejeda Post Office."

Staff Sergeant Riayan A. Tejeda of the 3rd Battalion, 5th Marine Regiment was killed during combat operations in northeast Baghdad on April 11, 2003; he was 26 years of age. A New York City resident, he lived in my district of Washington Heights on 180th Street until graduation from Fashion Industries High School in the Garment District, thereafter joining the Marine Corps at the age of 18. I introduced this legislation because Sgt. Tejeda was a hero in every sense of the word, a man born in the Dominican Republic who made the ultimate sacrifice for the United States.

After spending formative teen years meeting the challenge of growing up in the tough streets of Washington Heights, Sergeant Tejeda joined the military with his hopes and dreams of the future on the horizon. He joined the military to better himself and to serve our country, later reenlisting after his initial term of duty had elapsed.
