

Jewish and Hindu among them, on the other.

I ask for unanimous consent that the entirety of King Abdullah's statement on the Amman bombings of last week be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HIS MAJESTY KING ABDULLAH'S ADDRESS TO THE NATION FOLLOWING THE AMMAN BOMBINGS, NOVEMBER 10, 2005, AMMAN, JORDAN

I would like to begin by extending my profound condolences to the families of all the innocent victims who were killed, and we are praying for a swift recovery for all of those who were injured.

This is not the first time that Jordan has been a target of terrorism. It is also not the only country that has been a victim of terrorism; there have been many countries in the region and throughout the world which have been similarly terrorized by attacks of greater scope and intensity.

We know, however, that Jordan has been targeted more than any other country for several reasons, among them, its role and its message defending the essence of Islam—the religion of moderation and tolerance that abhors the terrorists who kill innocents in Islam's name, even as Islam is innocent of such crimes.

Let it be clear to everyone that we will pursue these terrorists and those who aide them; we will reach them wherever they are, pull them from their lairs and submit them to justice.

Jordan does not bow to coercion. We will not be intimidated into altering our position, nor will we abandon our convictions or forfeit our role in the fight against terrorism in all its forms. To the contrary, every act of terrorism strengthens our resolve to adhere to our convictions, and to confront, with all means at our disposal, those who seek to undermine the security and stability of this country.

Our confidence in the security services and their ability to protect the security of this country and its stability remains unwavering. We have succeeded in preventing many planned attacks on this country. For every infrequent success terrorists have had in carrying out one of their crimes, we have had many more successes in foiling their plots.

I appeal to every citizen—man and woman—of this country to consider himself or herself a soldier and a security officer. Each one of you has a responsibility to protect your country. Circumstances require each and every citizen to be cautious and vigilant, and to cooperate with the security services to prevent any attack on the security and stability of this country. We must be united in confronting these terrorists, who have neither a religion nor a conscience.

I am confident that the patriots of Jordan—men and women—will maintain, as they always have, a watchful eye over the country and its security, and will be the first line of defense in protecting Jordan and its achievements. Jordan will continue, with the help of God and the determination of its people, to overcome evil.

Finally, all my thanks and appreciation go to our security, military and civil institutions, as well as to the citizens of Jordan who have acted as one in confronting the attacks on our precious capital, Amman.

ASIAN TRADE

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, President Bush arrived in Japan today and will meet tomorrow with Prime Minister Koizumi. Later this week, he will travel to China to meet with their President as well. It is time that we insist that the President use this opportunity, this important opportunity, to demand changes, changes in our economic relationship with China and with Japan. The President needs to say, as he is there with those leaders, that we will no longer accept their illegal trade practices that are costing American jobs, and we demand that changes be made; we no longer accept the fact that China and Japan manipulate their currency, which means their products are artificially lower than ours when they sell them into this country; we no longer accept that they are stealing our patents and our intellectual property.

Last week, I was pleased to author a letter to the President with that very message on behalf of myself and 14 other Senators, urging him to make 2 major changes in our relationship with these important nations: No. 1, we need to end the rampant counterfeiting of American products that is occurring in China. It is estimated that 7 percent of world trade is in counterfeit goods, that the counterfeit market is worth $350 billion. It is estimated that in the auto industry alone, we lose over $12 billion annually to counterfeit auto parts, parts that are unsafe as well as costing us jobs. If you stop this illegal activity, the auto industry could hire an additional 200,000 workers—200,000 workers in Michigan. That would equal our ability to cut our unemployment rate by two-thirds—200,000 people who are now challenged with losing their way of life, trying to figure out what they are going to do if they are making half or a third less of what they used to make because of what is happening in manufacturing in our country. People are paying more for health care and may very well lose their pension.

We can do something about this if we simply change our relationship and send a strong message that we are going to put American businesses and American workers first. Our middle class clearly was built on manufacturing, and our manufacturers are having a hard time these days.

It is critical that we continue to manufacture in this country. Is it changing? Has it changed? Of course, it is now high-tech manufacturing. When you walk into an automobile factory, it looks very different—quiet, clean, computers, highly skilled workers—but we have to maintain a strong, vibrant manufacturing economy. We cannot just step back and say we are going to be a service economy now and let the rest of the world make things and grow things. That will lead to what is now becoming a race to the bottom for American families.

The Economist Magazine recently reported a disturbing fact. This year, manufacturing jobs in the United States dropped below 10 percent of the population for the first time in history. This is not acceptable if we are going to continue to have our way of life in this country, and it is not necessary. If anyone believes that the middle class in this country can survive without a vibrant manufacturing sector, they are mistaken. As I indicated, we must make things in this country and add value to it as we do so, as well as grow things. That is a foundation of our economy, and that is what has created the wonderful middle class and the wonderful way of life we have enjoyed for so long as Americans.

We can do better than this policy that is currently in place.

The President must demand that China and Japan stop manipulating their currency. When they undervalue their currency, it makes U.S. exports to China artificially more expensive and places U.S. manufacturers at an unfair disadvantage in the Chinese market. It also makes their imports to us artificially less expensive, hurting manufacturers and costing American jobs. When they undervalue their currency, it is essentially an illegal subsidy of imports from China and a large tax on U.S. exports to China, and we need to call it the way it is. The President needs to be in China and call it for what it is.

We are projected to finish this year with a record trade deficit of more than $700 billion. That is more than the budget deficit, up $100 billion over the record $618 billion last year. China accounts for $200 billion of this deficit, more than a quarter of the total trade deficit in our country. China is the largest contributor to the U.S. current account trade deficit, and therefore adjustment of its currency has to be a part of anything we do in revitalizing the manufacturing sector.

China is not the only offender here. In 2003, the Bank of Japan spent $190 billion in global currency markets in order to manipulate and artificially weaken the yen. Japan continues this practice today by talking down the value of their currency, promising intervention if the yen moves out of a predetermined trading range.

The President must insist that this stop if we are going to continue to have a relationship, an economic relationship with both of these countries. In fact, we can do something about currency manipulation right now. Every 6 months, the Secretary of the Treasury submits a report to us as to whether countries are manipulating. We expect to have a report in front of us this month, the month of November. Unfortunately, I expect it to say what it has always said, which is technically they are doing what we all know that they are doing, we all know. Any businessperson in my State can tell you that China is manipulating their currency. Talk to people in the auto industry, they will talk about Japan. And yet our own Treasury Secretary will not certify it is happening, giving us the tools to enforce against this illegal trade practice.

Let me be very clear. Currency manipulation kills American jobs, and it is illegal, it is illegal under the WTO and IMF obligations. China says they want to be a part of the world community, the world marketplace. They have been allowed to do that. We now need to say to them very strongly, with this opportunity comes the responsibility to follow the rules.

One of the things that is extremely concerning to me, when you look at currency manipulations, we have lost over 1.5 million manufacturing jobs because of this one policy that is illegal. The Treasury Secretary can do something about that by simply certifying that it is happening, and the President of the United States right now this week can look the President of China in the eye and say this is no longer going to be tolerated by the United States of America, we will not continue to lose manufacturing jobs and our quality of life in this country because they are not following the rules. Cheating is no longer allowed by China and by Japan.

The bottom line is we can no longer continue to sit on the sidelines while our trading partners continue to artificially control prices, look the other way when it comes time to enforce intellectual property rights, and fail to live up to their obligations under the WTO and the IMF. It is not acceptable to say that we are going to throw open our economy in the international marketplace and not care what the rules are.

Every other country cares what the rules are. The European Union took us to court because they felt we were unfairly subsidizing our businesses. They won. We changed our tax laws. We are the only country that does not seem to have policies that get it. This administration doesn't understand they are supposed to be on the same side of the table with American workers and American businesses. It is time for that to happen. I urge the President to act now before our manufacturing economy and our middle-class way of life is taken from us.

Current Federal policies are based on a philosophy that says to Americans, you are on your own in a global economy; you are on your own, good luck.

To American manufacturers, you are on your own; American workers, you are on your own.

Mr. President, I believe that we are in this thing together, and Americans understand that we have a stake in what the rules are and an economy that works for everybody, an economy that puts Americans and American businesses first so that we can continue the great way of life that we have had in this country. Americans know that we are in it together and that together America can do better. I call upon the President to join us in the fight for our way of life in America.

I thank the Chair.

The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

PRESCRIPTION DRUG PLANS

Mr. DURBIN. Today is the opening day for the new Medicare prescription drug plan D, and it is a day of great concern across America for millions of senior citizens who want to get it right. They believe, as I do, that Medicare should include a prescription drug benefit. It is almost hard to believe that a program that has been in existence for 40 years basically does not provide prescription drug coverage, but it started in a day when there were not that many prescription drugs and they were not as good. Today, we realize that often taking the right medication can make a person independent, strong, and living the life they want to live and avoiding doctors' care and hospital care.

So it is certainly the thing to do. We have known it for a long time. We have talked about it for a long time. We debated it over 2 years ago and decided to pass this approach to Medicare prescription drug benefits. I do not think we could have dreamed up a more complicated approach for a benefit that is basically pretty straightforward. Many of us thought the plan we passed here in Congress was just a sop or a favor for the pharmaceutical industry. They wanted to be able to offer plans all across America and say to seniors: Come and figure out which one is best for you. Well, the problem, of course, is that there are hundreds and hundreds of plans across America. And now senior citizens, some of whom are not in the best shape physically, are forced to make a call.

A fellow in Springfield, IL, told me about his 80-year-old mother who called him really concerned. She said: You know, I am supposed to pick a prescription drug plan, and they tell me to go to the Internet. What does that mean? You see, three-fourths of senior citizens have never logged on, they have never been on the Internet. They go to the traditional sources of information that you might expect—some one they trust. She went to her son and said: Can you help me through this? And her son came to me and said: Senator, what have you done to us? I just took a look at the Internet, and my mom has 40 choices. I now have to line up her prescription drugs and figure out which plan covers those drugs and how much they charge, and then I have to figure out which plan will work with the drugstore that she is comfortable with, the one she trusts. I have to put that all together and make a decision for her, and I better do it quickly. I have until May 16, and if I wait until after that, then I am going face a penalty.

She is lucky. She had her son to call. Some seniors don't have anybody to call. But there are people calling them. Do you know who is calling them? The insurance companies that want to sell these plans, some of the pharmaceutical companies, some of the drug companies, they are calling the senior citizens and telling them: We have a deal for you. And many of these people, bewildered by what they are facing, really don't know where to turn. You can't walk into a drugstore in my hometown of Springfield, IL, without having somebody go up to a senior citizen and say: Let me talk to you about this prescription drug benefit.

Think about that. Some people have knocks on the door and phone calls with folks saying: We have the best plan in the world for you. In fact, the Attorney General of Illinois, Lisa Madigan, had a press conference with us a few weeks ago. They are finding evidence of rampant fraud when it comes to companies that are sadly taking advantage of our seniors. They are calling them and saying: Incidentally, will you give us your Social Security number so we can log you into the system? These people unwittingly give their Social Security number that can open up so many elements of their personal life they should not be advertising and publicizing.

How did we ever reach this point? Is this the best we can do? I don't think so. When it comes to helping our seniors with a real prescription drug benefit, America can do better—a lot better—than what we are asking the seniors to go through right now. American seniors are confused about this plan, and Congress needs to give them at least more time to figure it out.

Let me show a chart that explains part of it. "Understanding How the Benefit Will Be Administered." They asked seniors:

To the best of your knowledge, do seniors in the traditional Medicare Program have to sign up with a private plan to get the new Medicare drug benefit or not?

Yes, 35 percent; no, 32 percent; don't know, 33 percent.

Do seniors have to enroll in a Medicare PPO or HMO to get the new Medicare drug benefit or not?

Yes, 17 percent; no, 40 percent; don't know, 42 percent.

According to a poll released by the Kaiser Family Foundation last week,
