DEFICIT REDUCTION ACT OF 2005— CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the conference report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1932), to provide for reconciliation pursuant to section 202(a) of the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2006 (H. Con. Res. 95), having met, have agreed that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment, and the House agree to the same, signed by a majority of the conferees on the part of both Houses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the proceedings of the House in the RECORD of Sunday, December 18, 2005.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, we are now on the deficit reduction conference report. We have 10 hours of debate, 5 hours equally divided. I know my colleague from North Dakota wants to speak tonight.

Just for the edification of our membership, we will run some time off the clock tonight—I think about 2 hours—and then come back tomorrow and continue the debate and hopefully wrap this up tomorrow.

This bill is a culmination of a lot of work done in the Congress, by the President, and by the Members of the Republican Party, to try to put some discipline into the fiscal accounts of the Federal Government. This bill represents the first time in 8 years that the Federal Government has attempted to control the rate of growth in entitlement spending. People who watch this debate understand this issue, but just to frame it again, Federal Government spending is divided into basically three different areas.

There is interest on debt, which we have virtually no control over.

There is the discretionary spending, otherwise known as the appropriations process, which means every year we spend a certain amount of money. It is really up to us how much we spend, and it is for specific programs. The majority of it goes to the defense spending, but other money goes to education, it goes to environmental issues, it goes to highways—things for which every year we appropriate, saying we are going to spend this much. We can change that number arbitrarily from year to year, and we do.

The third element of Federal spending is called mandatory entitlement spending. This spending occurs as a matter of law because certain people have come to certain situations in their life which allows them to receive a benefit from the Federal Government. They may be veterans who have served us well; they, therefore, get benefits. They may be persons of low income who need assistance, especially a child in a low-income family who needs assistance. They may be a retired citizen who paid into Social Security, who gets health care under Medicare, or a low-income person who gets health care under Medicaid, especially nursing care. These are entitlements. They make up the vast majority of Federal spending. Discretionary spending only makes up 30 percent of the Federal accounts, and half of that is defense spending.

Entitlements are also the fastest growing part of the Federal Government. We know because the baby boom generation is going to retire, and spending on entitlements, specifically on Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, the health care accounts especially, is going to increase radically over the next generation's 30 years as the baby boom generation begins to retire. It is estimated today by the Comptroller General that there is a $44 trillion—that is trillion dollars with a "T"—$44 trillion unfunded liability, which means we don't know how we are going to pay for it. The obligation is in place already for the cost, primarily for health care programs for retired people who are going to be the baby boom generation.

The practical effect of having that high an obligation out there and unpaid for is our children are going to have to pay the price. The practical effect of that is our children and our children's children, these wonderful young people who work here as pages, when they become earners and have kids of their own are going to have to pay so much to pay for programs which are already on the books to support our generation, the baby boom generation, they are essentially not going to be able to have as high a quality of life as we have. They are not going to be as comfortable in sending their kids to college, buying a car, buying a home, or just doing the day-to-day activities of life because they are going to have to pay a huge tax burden for our generation, unless we do something about it.

That is what this bill is about. For the first time in 8 years, the Federal Government has stepped up and said: We are going try to do something—the Republican side of the aisle—about this huge burden we are going to put on our children through entitlement accounts by addressing those accounts. We have been aggressive on the discretionary side. We have essentially frozen nondiscretionary spending, but on the entitlement side it continues to grow at a dramatic rate. This bill is a step, really
