U.S. BUDGET CUTS WORRY HOSPITALS

HON. BARNEY FRANK

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, February 14, 2006

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, in the February 8 issue of the Sun Chronicle, published in Attleboro, Massachusetts, there is a very good article about the reaction of hospitals to the President's proposal to change the Medicare law so that future spending would be less on Medicare than it otherwise would be.

In particular, the article quotes Linda Shyavitz, who is the president and CEO of Sturdy Memorial Hospital, an excellent medical facility that serves a very important and diverse population in the city of Attleboro.

Reading the article, including the comments of Ms. Shyavitz, reinforced my view that these proposed changes that the President has put forward are ill advised and would do social damage. I think it is important for Members to understand what people who are charged with important responsibilities think about these proposed reductions in future spending patterns that the President has called for, and because Ms. Shyavitz is an extremely well-qualified and thoughtful administrator of a very important medical facility, I was particularly pleased to have this chance to share her views with our colleagues.

U.S. BUDGET CUTS WORRY HOSPITALS

(By Gloria LaBounty)

ATTLEBORO.—Hospital administrators are keeping a wary eye on Congress as it plows through the Bush administration's proposed cuts in Medicare.

"I think hospitals all over the country will be fighting this," said Linda Shyavitz, president and chief executive officer of Sturdy Memorial Hospital in Attleboro.

According to initial reports, Bush's new $2.7 trillion budget plan would mean a loss in Massachusetts of $758 million in Medicaid funds.

It would also mean a reduction of $213 million in Medicare payments to health-care providers over five years.

The Medicaid impact is still vague, however, because the state is redesigning its program, the Massachusetts Hospital Association says.

The Medicare piece already has hospitals concerned.

Although information so far has been presented in broad terms and details are still days away, Shyavitz said indications are that the proposal could mean a reduction to Sturdy of $575,000 per in Medicare payments.

All elderly patients would still be cared for at Sturdy, but the hospital would get less reimbursement for the care it provides. Shyavitz said.

Asked how the hospital would compensate for the loss in revenue, Shyavitz said it would be premature to speculate because the information has just come out and the president's intentions are still being absorbed.

But she said what hospitals will do in the short term is urge members of Congress to reject the cuts and not support the budget.

Paul Wingle, senior director of communications for the state hospital association or MHA, said the Medicare cuts would put a financial strain on hospitals, and more of them would serve patients at a loss, or at a very thin margin.

"Hospitals would have to scramble to make up the loss," he said, and some might do that through cutbacks, or through attempts to make up the revenue elsewhere.

That in turn creates pressure for rate increases.

Shyavitz said hospitals cannot simply raise rates, and would have to negotiate increases with health insurance companies. But she said many hospitals will want to do that if the cuts materialize.

Shyavitz said she is confident that Massachusetts congressmen and senators, including Sen. John Kerry and Sen. Edward Kennedy, and U.S. Reps. James McGovern and Barney Frank, will oppose the cuts.

Kennedy has already spoken out by telling the Associated Press that Bush's budget proposal "shortchanges our competitiveness, shortchanges our opportunity, and shortchanges our future."

Ms. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Mr. James P. Hoffa for his strong leadership and commitment to working families.

As the only son of James R. Hoffa, former General President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Mr. Hoffa grew up on picket lines and in union meetings. James P. Hoffa became a Teamster member himself on his 18th birthday when his father swore him in. As a young Teamster, Hoffa worked as a laborer in Detroit and Alaska, loading and unloading freight from ships, driving trucks and buses and operating heavy equipment.

At Michigan State University, Hoffa played football for legendary Coach Duffy Daugherty and graduated with a degree in Economics. He went on to receive his Law degree from the University of Michigan, and worked as a Teamster attorney from 1968 through 1993. From 1993 to 1998, Hoffa worked at Michigan Joint Council 43.

In 1999 Hoffa was elected General President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. Under his leadership, Teamsters are winning industry-leading contracts, engaging in contract enforcement and organizing thousands of new members.

The Union's renewed commitment to political action includes DRIVING America's Future, a new initiative that encourages and supports Teamster members running for political office. This effort will ensure even more Teamster influence in state and national government.

James P. Hoffa has spent a lifetime preparing for the challenge of running the Teamsters Union. He knows, first-hand, what Teamsters can accomplish when they work together. He is determined to lead a Union that is a credit to its proud history.
