

phasing out between $125,000 and $145,000 for single filers ($250,000 and $290,000 for joint filers) for the taxable year. While individuals may waive the subsidy if they believe their earnings will exceed the limit, if an individual accepts the subsidy and earns over the limit the individual will be responsible for paying the subsidy back to Treasury. For married individuals filing separately, if any family member is over the single modified adjusted gross income limit of $125,000, the entire non-subsidized portion (this accounts for the phase out) must be repaid. This clause requires IRS to match the incomes of spouses filing separately and determine if the modified adjusted gross income of either spouse disqualifies both for the subsidy received. Children not claimed as dependents, however, who are still on family plans have their incomes excluded from this limitation.

Third, the IRS must create rules and regulations to prevent fraud and abuse of this provision. For example, taxpayers may be required to provide evidence of eligibility for the subsidy including evidence of involuntary separation from work, which can include attestation from the former employer or certification from state unemployment insurance agencies. If a premium assistance eligible individual becomes eligible for other group coverage while receiving premium assistance, that individual must forfeit the subsidy or face a penalty and the IRS must attempt to prevent individuals from claiming the subsidy while eligible for other group coverage either through a spouse or through a new employer.
