NOMINATION OF KAREN GORDON MILLS

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, today the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship unanimously reported the President's nomination of Karen Gordon Mills to serve as Administrator for the Small Business Administration. I would like to thank my ranking member, Senator SNOWE, who recommended Ms. Mills for this post and her staff for their work on this nomination.

I am pleased that President Obama nominated Karen Mills. I believe she has the right mix of experience and education and a willingness to serve that will benefit her in this challenging position. As our new SBA Administrator, Ms. Mills will be an extraordinary role model for entrepreneurs across America—particularly for women entrepreneurs.

Ms. Mills graduated magna cum laude from Harvard with a degree in economics. She then stayed at Harvard to earn her MBA. She started out working as a product manager for General Mills and then segued into what was to become her true passion—growing new businesses. Ms. Mills is a founding partner and was managing director of Solera Capital, a NY-based venture capital firm run largely by women. She currently serves as President at MMP Group, Inc., a private equity investment and advising firm.

Ms. Mills has balanced her role in private, for-profit enterprises with active involvement in her community. This has been demonstrated in the work she has done in Maine, serving on the boards of many nonprofits that work to promote economic development. It also shows in the work that she has done for organizations like the Council on Foreign Relations.

From my meetings with Ms. Mills, it is clear that we share many of the same priorities—for example, assisting women and minority entrepreneurs and making sure small businesses can access credit in these trying economic times.

The SBA is an agency at a crossroads. Under the previous administration, the agency's funding was slashed by 28 percent—the biggest cut of any Federal agency. In my view, the agency was relegated to the back benches during important policy debates on health care, trade and technology innovation, to name a few.

We need strong, capable leadership to return this agency to its rightful place as a Federal advocate for small business interests. In Ms. Mills, I am confident that we have it.

NOMINATION OF JANE HOLL LUTE TO BE DEPUTY SECRETARY OF HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to Calendar No. 57, the nomination of Jane Holl Lute.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Jane Holl Lute, of New York, to be Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to express my unqualified endorsement of Jane Holl Lute to be Deputy Secretary for the Department of Homeland Security.

Mrs. Lute has impressive educational credentials—including a Ph.D. from Stanford, a J.D. from Georgetown, and 3 years as a professor at West Point—an outstanding professional history, and broad national security and management experience, all of which is more than ample preparation for the position to which she has been nominated.

She had a distinguished career in the military, served as the European specialist at the National Security Council during the first Bush and Clinton administrations, and for the past several years has worked in various positions with United Nations Peacekeeping Operations.

Mrs. Lute joined the Army right out of college and spent the next 16 years serving in a variety of capacities, including as an action officer in Operation Desert Storm, U.S. Army Central Command, Riyadh; as company commander, U.S. Signal Command, a brigade signal officer; and as director for European affairs on the National Security Council for President George H.W. Bush and President Bill Clinton. Her military experience with signals intelligence and on the National Security Council has helped prepare her for the intelligence and counterterrorism missions of DHS.

Since 2003, she has served in a variety of senior leadership positions with the U.N., including as the Assistant Secretary-General of Peacekeeping Operations, and most recently as the Assistant Secretary General for Peacekeeping Support in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General of the U.N.

As Assistant Secretary-General, Mrs. Lute has managed a very large and complex Peacekeeping workforce, with responsibility for hundreds of thousands of military and civilian personnel in over 30 countries, including hotspots such as Kosovo, the Congo, and Darfur, to name just a few. This was no small accomplishment. Her leadership helped to ensure the security and welfare of people around the globe living in unaccommodating and hostile circumstances.

She also managed multibillion-dollar budgets and welcomed oversight and constructive criticism of her department, in an organization that many have described as “openly hostile” to such transparency.

At the U.N., she managed support operations for the second largest deployed military force in the world, and oversaw a multibillion budget, which grew from $2 billion to nearly $8 billion annually. She undertook a variety of initiatives to improve the management and financial accountability of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, which included instituting a requirements review panel for acquisitions and a mission startup monitoring process.

When she noticed that the U.N. was short on the procurement personnel with the language skills and expertise needed for the complex transactions they would work on, she helped institute a program to identify, recruit, and train additional staff.

She also instituted advanced training programs for senior administrative and management personnel, in response to deficiencies she observed.

I am particularly impressed by Mrs. Lute's leadership and management experience in a career dedicated to public service. In her testimony before the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee last week, it was apparent that her experiences have helped her develop into the leader she is today: One who recognizes that, in her own words, “people are the most important resource any . . . organization has.”

It is a testimony to Mrs. Lute and her work that the committee has received numerous letters supporting her nomination. Letters have come from the International Association of Emergency Managers, the National Emergency Managers Association, the International Association of Fire Chiefs, the Major Cities Chiefs, the National Sheriffs' Association, Lee Baca, the Sheriff of L.A. County, Lee Hamilton, former congressman and current President and Director, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, HRH Prince Zeid Ra'ad Al-Husseini, Jordan's Ambassador to the U.S., and many others.

Managing the Department of Homeland Security is no small task, demanding a smart and steady hand. The Deputy Secretary post carries with it diverse responsibilities that range from overseeing preparations to respond to a nuclear terrorist attack to ensuring that DHS employees have adequate office space.

DHS has at times struggled to gain solid footing over the course of its six-year lifespan. Each year it becomes stronger, I am happy to note. And I don't think there is any question that the country is safer as a result of the Department's efforts.

But the Department has a difficult and varied mission and its work is central to the security of all Americans. So we must continue to press forward to improve upon its capabilities.

To that end, I am working to draft the Senate's first authorization bill for the Department as a means of laying out what I believe should be its priorities and to make the Department more efficient and effective in its missions. Needless to say, we will be seeking input from the administration.

One of the biggest problems the Department faces is its management of acquisitions. Some of the Department's largest and most troubled acquisition programs—Deepwater, SBINet, radiation detection portal monitors—need stronger oversight and more decisive leadership than they have gotten in the past.

Furthermore, the Department's heavy reliance on contractors to perform basic services raises serious questions about whether DHS is building sufficient internal capacity and institutional knowledge. Right now, DHS still has insufficient capacity to develop requirements and evaluate the technical feasibility of contractors' proposals.

In recent years the United States has seen serious threats to our cyber networks and we have not yet developed the tools to detect and defend against these threats. Due to the vulnerabilities that still exist, we have experienced massive identity theft, monetary loss, and leaks of sensitive information. Moreover, if these vulnerabilities are ever fully exploited, there is the potential to do significant damage to our Nation's critical infrastructure. The Department of Homeland Security has the important responsibility of leading Federal efforts to protect domestic cyber networks, both public and private. The Department has made some progress in developing its capabilities in this area, but much more work remains to be done. I look forward to working with Mrs. Lute to bolster the nation's cyber security.

Clearly, our southern border security has also become a central focus for the Department and the Obama administration. Senator COLLINS and I successfully amended the budget resolution this week to add $550 million for the Departments of Homeland Security and Justice to help stem the flow of drugs and people moving north into the U.S. and guns and money moving south into Mexico. I look forward to a close collaboration with the Department in this area.

The Department faces many other challenges that must be met and conquered if it is to succeed in its ultimate mission of protecting the nation from terrorism and natural disasters. This committee has always worked cooperatively with the Department and will continue to do so to ensure its success.

If confirmed, Mrs. Lute will play a large part in setting the Department on course to overcome these challenges. I want to thank her for her many years of service and say that I believe she is exceptionally qualified to take on DHS' challenges. I urge my fellow Senators to support her confirmation.
