STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. REED (for himself, Mr. JOHANNIS, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. MERKLEY, and Mr. FRANKEN):

S. 1658. A bill to establish the Council on Healthy Housing, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I introduce with my colleague Senator JOHANNIS, the Healthy Housing Council Act. I thank Senators BOXER, MERKLEY, and FRANKEN for joining us as original cosponsors of this bill.

This legislation would establish an independent interagency Council on Healthy Housing in the executive branch in order to improve the coordination of existing but fragmented programs, thereby enhancing the abilities of families to access Government programs and services in a more efficient and effective manner.

Many factors impact our health; however, our environment can be one of the most critical determinants to our overall health and well-being. That is why the issue of healthy housing is so important.

According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, there are more than 5.7 million households living in conditions with moderate or severe hazards such as incomplete cooking facilities, inadequate plumbing, the presence of mice and rats, and crumbling roofs and foundations. This count of moderate or severe physical problems does not even include significant lead-based paint hazards, which persist in 23 million, or approximately four times as many, households. Sadly, housing-related health hazards take a heavy toll on Americans, resulting in 11,000 unintentional injury deaths, 3,000 deaths in house fires, and 21,000 radon-associated lung cancer deaths each year.

Low-income and minority individuals and families are disproportionately affected by housing-related health hazards. We know that residents of poorly designed, constructed, or maintained housing are at greater risk for serious illnesses and injuries, including cancer, carbon monoxide poisoning, burns, falls, rodent bites, childhood lead poisoning, and asthma. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, non-Hispanic Blacks and Mexican-Americans are three times as likely to have elevated blood-lead levels, compared to non-Hispanic whites. About 1.2 million housing units with significant lead-based paint hazards house low-income families with children under 6 years of age.

If the disease and injury toll on our Nation's individuals and families, particularly our children, is not enough to demonstrate the need for coordinated Federal Government action on housing-related health hazards, consider some of the annual costs.

According to research at the Mount Sinai Children's Environmental Health Center, annual costs for environmentally attributable childhood diseases in the U.S. total an estimated $54.9 billion. That number is approximately 3 percent of total health care costs. Indeed, as our housing deteriorates, our health care system bears the brunt of the associated injuries and illnesses.

The good news is that low-cost preventative measures can have dramatic effects. For example, properly installing and maintaining a smoke alarm can cut the risk of deaths due to fire in half. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that providing healthy housing to American families will help prevent 20 million asthma cases, 240,000 incidents of elevated blood-lead levels in young children, 14,000 burn injuries, and 21,000 radon-associated lung cancer deaths.

While there are many programs in place to address housing-related health hazards, these programs are fragmented and spread across many agencies, making it difficult for at-risk families to access assistance or to receive the comprehensive information they need.

To address this situation, our bill authorizes $750,000 for each of fiscal years 2010 to 2014 for an independent Council on Healthy Housing, which would bring Federal, State, and local government representatives, as well as industry and nonprofit representatives, to the table at least once a year.

The council would review, monitor, and evaluate existing housing, health, energy, and environmental programs. The council would then make recommendations to reduce duplication, ensure collaboration, identify best practices, and develop a comprehensive healthy housing research agenda.

In order to ensure that members of the public are informed of and benefit from the council's activities, the council would hold biannual stakeholder meetings, maintain an updated website, and work to unify healthy housing data collection and maintenance.

While there is a growing consensus on ways to help communities make housing healthier, the lack of coordination has made it difficult for the public to access this information and related research and data. By creating this council, we can provide a useful forum for health and housing experts, whether in the Government, private, or nonprofit sector, to share their experiences, successes, and lessons for the future.

The Healthy Housing Council Act will help us embark on a path to assure that affordable and decent homes are also healthy. I hope my colleagues will join me and Senator JOHANNIS, BOXER, MERKLEY, and FRANKEN in supporting this bipartisan bill and other healthy housing efforts.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1658

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Healthy Housing Council Act of 2009".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

- (1) In the United States—
 - (A) 5,700,000 households live in homes with moderate or severe physical hazards;
 - (B) 23,000,000 homes have significant lead-based paint hazards;
 - (C) 8,700,000 homes have had leaks in the last 12 months;
 - (D) 6,000,000 homes have had signs of mice in the last 3 months; and
 - (E) 1 in 15 homes have dangerous levels of radon.

(2) Residents of housing that is poorly designed, constructed, or maintained are at risk for cancer, carbon monoxide poisoning, burns, falls, rodent bites, childhood lead poisoning, asthma, and other illnesses and injuries. Vulnerable subpopulations, such as children and the elderly, are at elevated risk for housing-related illnesses and injuries.

(3) Because substandard housing typically poses the greatest risks, the disparities in the distribution of housing-related health hazards are striking. 1,200,000 housing units with significant lead-based paint hazards house low-income families with children under 6 years of age.

(4) Housing-related illnesses, including asthma and lead poisoning, disproportionately affect children from lower-income families and from specific racial and ethnic groups. In 2005, 13 percent of black children were reported to have asthma, as compared with 9 percent of both Hispanic and white children. Black children are twice as likely to die from residential injuries as white children, and 3 percent of black children and 2 percent of Mexican American children have elevated blood lead levels, as compared to only 1.3 percent of white children.

(5) The annual costs for environmentally attributable childhood diseases in the United States, including lead poisoning, asthma, and cancer, total $54,900,000,000. This amount is approximately 3 percent of total health care costs.

(6) Appropriate housing design, construction, and maintenance, timely correction of deficiencies, planning efforts, and low-cost preventative measures can reduce the incidence of serious injury or death, improve the ability of residents to survive in the event of a major catastrophe, and contribute to overall well-being and mental health. Housing units that are kept lead-safe are approximately 25 percent less likely to have another child with elevated blood lead levels. Properly installed and maintained smoke alarms reduce the risk of fire deaths by 50 percent.

(7) Providing healthy housing to families and individuals in the United States will help prevent an estimated 240,000 elevated blood lead levels in young children, 11,000 unintentional injury deaths, 12,000,000 nonfatal injuries, 3,000 deaths in house fires, 14,000 burn injuries, and 21,000 radon-associated lung cancer deaths that occur in United States housing each year, as well as 20,000,000 asthma cases and 14,000,000 missed school days.

(8) While there are many programs in place to address housing-related health hazards, these programs are fragmented and spread across many agencies, making it difficult for at-risk families and individuals to access assistance or to receive comprehensive information.

(9) Better coordination among Federal agencies is needed, as is better coordination at State and local levels, to ensure that families and individuals can access government programs and services in an effective and efficient manner.

By Mr. CASEY (for himself, Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Mr. KOHL, and Mrs. SHAHEEN):

S. 1659. A bill to enhance penalties for violations of securities protections that involve targeting seniors; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I rise today to join with Senators KOHL, GILLIBRAND and SHAHEEN to introduce the Senior Investor Protections Enhancement Act of 2009.

This important legislation would increase the fines imposed on those who commit securities violations against seniors and thereby provide additional security to a group who relies on their savings for survival.

Seniors increasingly rely on private investments for their retirement. Over the last 30 years, traditional employer sponsored pension plans, known as defined benefit plans, have been on the decline. In 1975, 88 percent of private-sector workers were covered by defined benefit plans; by 2005, that number had shrunk to 33 percent of the private-sector workforce.

Today, seniors control nearly $15 billion in assets. These individuals face complicated decisions about how to best stretch their hard earned savings throughout their retirement.

Unfortunately, these assets are at risk from traditional fraud and Ponzi schemes. Seniors are often offered complicated investment tools such as reverse mortgages and various annuity products. While these products can be very valuable to Americans generally and seniors specifically, they can also be abused by unscrupulous actors.

In fact, research shows that senior citizens face serious risks from fraudulent salesmen. A MetLife study found that seniors incur an estimated $2.6 billion in losses due to financial abuse each year. In total, seniors account for more than half of all investor complaints received by state securities regulators.

During the last Congress, under the leadership of Senator KOHL, the Aging Committee held a hearing to examine some of the questionable practices that so-called senior financial investment specialists use to gain access to the retirement savings of older Americans. A report by the Committee revealed that many seniors have lost their life savings because they followed investment advice ill-suited to their retirement needs and life expectancy.

The Senior Investor Protections Enhancement Act will address these issues by increasing the penalties for existing securities violations by an additional $50,000 for financial crimes committed by those 62 and higher, the age at which many orient their investments to be in conjunction with social security eligibility. Violations could include selling them products that are unsuitable for their age, failing to disclose fees, charging large penalty fees, or switching the investment product actually sold from the one that was marketed.

We need to enhance the protections afforded to seniors. Please join us in support of the Senior Investor Protections Enhancement Act of 2009.
