THE SHIPPING ACT OF 2010

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 22, 2010

Mr. OBERSTAR. Madam Speaker, today I have introduced the "Shipping Act of 2010". This bill has its roots in the Shipping Act of 1916, which provided the foundation for the regulation of international shipping in the United States.

In the 94 years since that law was enacted, shipping has changed greatly. Most significant was the development of the intermodal shipping container in the late 1950's, which allows for cargo to be loaded into standardized containers for shipping rather than on pallets put on a ship using cargo nets. Use of these containers has transformed the manufacturing and distribution of goods throughout the world by increasing the productivity of our global intermodal transportation system by having a container that can be loaded on a truck chassis, easily transferred on to a ship, and then transferred again on a rail car. This bill will modernize the regulation of that transportation system by increasing competition and improving services for the movement of those goods.

First, it eliminates antitrust immunity for ocean carrier agreements, which currently allows ocean common carriers to get together to discuss, fix or regulate transportation rates. Although parties to the carrier agreements are not required to adhere to the rates set by the conference when they are contracting, oftentimes they use the collectively set rate as the basis for negotiations. The carrier's tendency to use the agreed upon rates as a floor for negotiations has made it difficult for shippers to negotiate more favorable terms for transportation.

Antitrust immunity for these agreements was initially granted to enable carriers to stabilize their economic position through controlling rates and capacity. In fact, Congress has long been concerned about the anticompetitive impact of these conference agreements and, in the Shipping Act of 1916, put a regulatory structure in place to monitor their activities.

Currently, the conferences must submit their agreements to the Federal Maritime Commission (FMC), who reviews them for compliance with the statutory requirements including whether or not the agreement is likely, by a reduction in competition, to produce an unreasonable reduction in transportation services or an unreasonable increase in transportation costs.

However, even under the current regulatory scheme, immunity for such agreements has long outlived its usefulness, and stifles competition. In 2007, the Antitrust Modernization Commission (Commission) report stated that "free-market competition is the foundation of our economy, and the antitrust laws stand as a bulwark to protect free-market competition." The Commission found that there is questionable justification for continuing conference exemptions from the antitrust laws in the Shipping Act and that there is nothing unique about ocean carriers that warrant an exemption from the antitrust laws. A survey cited by the Commission found that "the steepest declines in observed freight rates have coincided with a generalized decrease in conference power in the face of competition from strong independent operators and the implementation of competition-enhancing legislation in the United States trades."

On March 17, 2010, the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure held a hearing on the challenges faced by U.S. importers and exporters in moving cargo by the international container lines. The Committee received testimony from importers, exporters, agricultural shippers, manufacturers, retail stores, and raw products exporters. In that hearing, shippers complained that ocean carriers do not have enough capacity in the market to meet the demands of U.S. shippers and that rate increases imposed through new service contracts have skyrocketed. Many believe that these rate increases reflect the desire of carriers to recoup their losses of the past year. Moreover, these shippers expressed concern that there is no willingness on the part of conference agreement participants to negotiate independent rates. This has significantly increased the costs of U.S. exports and made it difficult for U.S. importers to price their products.

Eliminating the antitrust immunity for these conference agreements will increase competition by requiring ocean carriers to compete in the marketplace with the best price and service to get shippers' business. That will benefit the industry as a whole. Moreover, the bill will require carriers to continue to file service contracts with the FMC and to have tariffs be available for FMC review. This information will allow the FMC to determine whether or not carriers are colluding after their antitrust immunity has been eliminated.

However, this bill does preserve some antitrust immunity for ocean carriers so that they can enter into vessel sharing agreements. A vessel sharing agreement is an agreement among carriers to share space on each others' vessels. This will allow carriers to offer shippers service five days a week on their ship or one of their partners' ships. However, under this bill, this authority is limited so that it ensures that there is still adequate competition in a particular trade. The European Union limits a vessel sharing agreement to 30 percent of the capacity in a trade. That is a reasonable place to begin.

In addition, this bill deals with the carriers' practice of imposing surcharges, seemingly at will. Currently, shippers enter into negotiations with carriers for transportation service contracts at fixed prices. Once the transportation price is negotiated, the shipper then develops a pricing scheme for its customers. However, we have heard complaints that ocean carriers often decide at the last minute to levy surcharges, which are not necessarily based on their own increased costs (for example, the cost of buying fuel). This impacts the shippers business because the U.S. exporter or importer has already signed a contract with their customer for a fixed price. If the carrier increases the cost of a shipper's goods by imposing a surcharge and the shipper has already advertised the price for selling those goods, where is the increased cost going to come from? The shipper's profits? To ensure that a shipper can adequately price his product, this bill requires that any surcharge imposed by a carrier needs to accurately reflect increases in the carrier's cost.

Elimination of antitrust immunity for ocean carrier agreements may not be enough to spur the carriers to improve their customer service. One major area that needs to be addressed is dispute resolution. The Shipping Acts of 1916 and 1984 were not designed to facilitate dispute resolutions between shippers and carriers. In fact, the only remedy authorized under the Shipping Act to resolve a dispute in a service contract is to go to court. The delay oftentimes associated with pursuing a case in court results in a major disadvantage to shippers. This is because a large volume of the cargo that shippers carry is perishable and those goods may be destroyed by the time a District Court ever hears the case. Under this bill, the FMC will be empowered to help resolve service contract disputes quickly through mediation and arbitration, so that the freight can keep moving.

We have also heard from export shippers that carriers refuse to ship containers that are not owned by that ocean carrier. This results in many shippers being left without an alternative to ship their goods unless they agree to pay a steep price to the ocean carrier. I do not understand how a carrier can refuse to supply a shipper with a container at a reasonable price, and then refuse to move a shipper's goods if they are in a container provided by someone else. There needs to be transportation network neutrality so that shippers can have their cargo moved by an ocean carrier supplied container or one provided by a third party that meets internationally accepted container safety standards. This bill provides that neutrality by prohibiting carriers from discriminating against a shipper that provides their own container or other equipment.

It also addresses the practice of bumping or rolling containers, in which a carrier decides that there is not enough room on a ship for a container which they have already been contracted to transport. The bill prohibits ocean carriers from engaging in deceptive practices, including the unreasonable failure to provide transportation services as agreed to in a negotiated service contract. The FMC is then tasked with developing remedies and penalties for carriers that engage in such deceptive practices.

President Obama has announced that he wants to double U.S. exports in the next 5 years. I am committed to helping him accomplish that goal by reforming our shipping laws to help the ocean carriers be more responsive to their customers. This bill is a pro-competitive bill that will help facilitate U.S. imports and exports. In 2007, the European Union eliminated the antitrust immunity that ocean carriers had from their laws. I am not aware of any ocean carriers being put out of business because of the loss of that exemption. Under the "Shipping Act of 2010", carriers will have to compete based on price and services in the same way as all other major industries in the United States.

EXPULSION OF HUMANITARIAN WORKERS CALLS INTO QUESTION MOROCCO'S COMMITMENT TO THE MILLENNIUM DEVELOPMENT GOALS

HON. FRANK R. WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 22, 2010

Mr. WOLF. Madam Speaker, on Monday, the King of Morocco travelled to New York to address the UN General Assembly Summit on the Millennium Development Goals, which seek to improve the quality of life for people around the world. I urge Obama Administration officials to seize this opportunity to meet with the King and raise the plight of the dozens of U.S. citizens that have been expelled from or denied reentry into Morocco without access to due process.

As a result of the deportations a number of humanitarian organizations which were run by U.S. citizens and provided vital community services have been shuttered: Individuals such as Eddie and Lynn Padilla of Colorado who worked in an orphanage caring for young Moroccan children who were abandoned at birth; and Michael Cloud of Texas, who ran therapy centers for children with disabilities across the country; and scores of American teachers and educators who sought to improve access to education for Moroccan children.

Many of these individuals resided legally in Morocco for decades and had a deep love for their adopted country. Their work supported Millennium Development Goals such as child health and universal education. In his address to the General Assembly on Monday, the King of Morocco expressed his support for and commitment to these lofty goals. Meanwhile, his government turned out dozens of U.S. citizens and foreign nationals whose work supported the same goals for which the King professed his support.

If the King of Morocco is truly serious about his commitment to achieving the Millennium Development goals, his government should immediately and unconditionally allow those expelled or denied reentry to return. The U.S. government should press for nothing less.

IN CELEBRATION OF TAIWAN'S NATIONAL DAY

HON. DAN BURTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 22, 2010

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Madam Speaker, I rise as a senior member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and member of the House Taiwan caucus to express my congratulations to the leaders and people of the Republic of China on Taiwan on the occasion of National Day this October 10th.

It has been nearly a century since the October 10, 1911 start of the revolution that toppled the Qing dynasty and established the Republic of China, the first republic in Asia. Today the ROC on Taiwan has become a full-fledged democracy and a beacon of prosperity and freedom for all of Asia. Just twenty some years ago, Taiwan was a closed authoritarian society with no freedom of speech, no freedom of assembly, and no right to vote. It now has robust political parties, and virtually every office in Taiwan is contested through free and fair elections.

Two and a half years ago, Taiwan successfully concluded its fourth popular election for president since 1996 by electing Dr. Ma Ying-jeou. President Ma has worked tirelessly since his inauguration on May 20, 2008 to improve the relationship between Taiwan and the Chinese mainland and he has been a strong ally to the United States.

The Taiwanese and the Chinese mainland governments have worked together in productive talks on issues such as direct cross-strait flights and shipping, more tourist visits by mainlanders to Taiwan, and the recent signing for Economic Cooperation Framework Agreement (ECFA) that serves as a platform for economic interaction between the two sides. This cooperation has served to reduce tensions in the Strait considerably.

Taiwan has long been a strategic partner of the United States. We have worked closely with the government of President Ma and our mutual relationship continues to be strong. It is my hope that the relations will continue to grow through enhanced cooperation in trade, science and technology, educational and cultural exchanges, security cooperation and Taiwan's participation in international organizations.

As Taiwan has demonstrated cooperation in good faith both with the mainland and with the United States, I hope that it will soon enjoy greater inclusion in the international community. It is exciting to learn that Taiwan was once again invited last May to attend the World Health Assembly (WHA) in Geneva, Switzerland as an observer. This was a breakthrough for Taiwan's participation in a formal UN activity since in 1971, the world body switched recognition to mainland China.

However, this is not enough. I strongly urge my colleagues to recognize Taiwan's participation in the WHA and encourage them to put pressure on the international community to allow Taiwan's participation in the activities of other organizations such as the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) and the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC).

Madam Speaker, I would ask all of my colleagues to congratulate our Taiwanese friends on the 99th Anniversary of National Day and to join me now in thanking the people of Taiwan for their friendship.
