

THE UNFINISHED WAR

HON. RUSH D. HOLT

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 31, 2012

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to share with my colleague a recent article by my good friend Richard Leone, the former President of the Century Foundation. In his article "The Unfinished War" Leon reminds us all that "by ignoring the poor we undermine the welfare of everyone in the 99 percent living from pay check to pay check." As Congress debates taxes, government investments, and countless other issues, I hope all of my colleagues will keep his sage words in mind.

THE UNFINISHED WAR

Nearly 50 years ago President Lyndon Johnson rallied the nation in support of a "War on Poverty." It was a goal widely accepted as necessary and realistic. While total "victory" might not have been unachievable, the effort was embraced and pursued by many leaders of both parties. The Nixon administration, for example, played a key role in advancement of the earned income tax credit and Ronald Reagan reached an agreement with the then Democratic Speaker of the House, Tip O'Neill, to strengthen Social Security's finances for another generation (today, about half of the nation's elderly would fall below the poverty line without Social Security).

While Johnson's initiatives and subsequent policies didn't end poverty, they sure made a dent in it. Americans began the 1960s with 22.4 percent of the population living in poverty, but by the early 1970s that percentage had been cut in half. Not unconditional victory, but a major policy triumph nonetheless. Since that time the poverty rate has fluctuated between about 11 percent and 15 percent, reaching the upward proportion during the Reagan years and the lower end of the range during the administration of Bill Clinton. This may seem like a fairly narrow band—unless you're one of the millions who fall into poverty as the nation moves from the bottom of the range to the top. Right now, as we struggle to recover from the financial crisis of 2008–2009, the share of Americans living in poverty is back to levels not seen since 1993.

So is a renewal of the war against poverty in the offing? The current balance of political forces suggests that, rather than muster all the weapons we have to fight for the poor, many are willing to settle for uneasy neutrality. This is one "war of choice" we choose not to wage. Austerity is the watchword of the day defined somewhat differently but accepted by the mainstream of both parties as the bedrock of policy for the foreseeable future.

With lower expectations of growth projected for the next several years and continuing competitive pressures from abroad it is hard for most observers to see an optimistic scenario in which recovery accelerates to the point of leading to a new 1990s style period of prosperity. While this clearly sets limits on what is possible, it also opens up opportunities for those who wish to use the current difficulties as a lever to win arguments that are geared to their core values. Deregulation, weakening of unions, and further cuts in taxes for the wealthy and corporate America are all part of an ideological agenda that seems practical only because of the shifts of political forces and the imperatives of the financial weakness. To be sure there will be resistance to cuts in education, reductions in infrastructure spending, the weakening of Medicaid, and other radical departures from previous policies. But the defenders of the social contract seem at a distinct disadvantage. And what is not present in the debate, indeed has become virtually invisible in the media, is the issue of poverty.

In fact, the United States has proven over several decades to be more tolerant of poverty and of homelessness and other associated ills than is the case in other industrialized countries. One can only conclude from the current reality that even discussing the issue of reducing poverty is a luxury. Like support for the arts, it is off the table during these difficult times. Workers have largely lost their past generous instincts about social programs after a generation of stagnant wages. Slightly further up the ladder, families who were until recently considered themselves solidly middle class now are scrambling to maintain their standard of living—and even their jobs.

Yet, the United States is still a wealthy country, by all measures among the wealthiest in the world. And it clearly has the resources to provide a decent standard of living for its workers and citizens, its children and elderly. Other countries do so without much fuss. We, on the other hand, have rationalized increasing concentrations of wealth and income as somehow producing results that will be better for everyone. At the same time, our expenditures on the things that might change the circumstances of average Americans are meager by international standards. Elementary and secondary education, an historical strength, is being squeezed by budgetary problems at the state and local level. College aid and support for public higher education is shrinking. And, retraining programs for those who have lost their jobs due to the globalization of manufacturing and markets are nowhere close to what is available, for example, within the European Union.

Overall, the United States has achieved levels of inequality not seen for generations and now ranks near the top among industrial nations in inequality. These are not trivial statistics for they reflect very different perceptions of what is important in the world of politics and government. Perhaps it's not a coincidence that those who can afford it pay for our campaigns and reap the rewards while average citizens, frustrated and angry, turn against their government because they don't see it helping them. Facts seem irrelevant; the U.S. has lower tax rates than almost all of the other industrialized countries and government employment has dropped sharply in the past few years, yet the explanation for hard times is that the government is taxing too much and spending too much. In this hostile environment it may be no wonder that new programs to help the poor get short shrift. In this Darwinian environment, we simply can't afford to help them.

It's past time to connect the dots and see that by ignoring the poor we undermine the welfare of everyone in the 99 percent living from pay check to pay check. We must revive our generous national nature. And more selfishly come to see that we might find ourselves in their shoes. It may be that the poor will always be with us, but that doesn't mean it's OK to ignore them.

HONORING THE NATIONAL CHAMPION UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA SOFTBALL TEAM

HON. JO BONNER

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 31, 2012

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor the University of Alabama's softball team which captured its first national championship during a down to the wire late night victory on June 6, 2012.

The Tide was able to triumph over the Oklahoma Sooners after a rain delay brought out a special determination on the part of the ladies from Alabama to take home the trophy. Down early, Alabama came back to score four runs, and at 12:31 a.m., Alabama pitcher Jackie Traina struck out a Sooners player to end the game.

With its 5 to 4 win in the Women's College World Series in Oklahoma City, the Crimson Tide softball team also garnered the University of Alabama its fourth national championship of the year—a school record. Alabama also made history as the first Southeastern Conference team to clinch the national softball title.

Since the creation of the Southeastern Conference (SEC) softball tournament in 1997, Alabama has claimed five SEC titles, including the 2012 season. The team ended their year with an impressive 60–8 record overall; 23–5 in the SEC.

This was the eighth time the University of Alabama has traveled to the Women's College World Series. This year's team is dominated by freshmen and sophomores who proved that heart and hard work can make the difference.

The victorious 2012 team members are Chaunsey Bell, Catcher; Jackey Branham, Infielder; Kayla Braud, Outfielder; Courtney Conley, Infielder; Keima Davis, Outfielder; Kendall Dawson, Catcher; Jennifer Fenton, Outfielder; Olivia Gibson, Catcher; Danae Hays, Infielder; Kaila Hunt, Infielder; Ryan Iamurri, Infielder; Leslie Jury, Pitcher; Amanda Locke, Utility; Jazlyn Lunceford, Outfielder; Jordan Patterson, Catcher/Infielder; Cassie Reilly-Boccia, Outfielder/First Base; Danielle Richard, Infielder; Lauren Sewell, Pitcher; Jacy Spencer, Utility; and Jackie Traina, Pitcher/Utility.

The coaching and support staff is led by Head Coach Patrick Murphy. Assisting him are Alyson Habetz, Associate Head Coach; Stephanie VanBrakle, Assistant Coach; Adam Arbour, Volunteer Assistant Coach; Kate Harris, Director of Operations; and Nick Seiler, Athletic Trainer.

On behalf of the people of Alabama and my colleagues in the Alabama delegation, I wish to extend personal congratulations to Coach Patrick Murphy, the coaching staff and the ladies of the University of Alabama Softball Team for their tremendous accomplishment. Along with a large fan base that traveled to Oklahoma City to cheer on the Crimson Tide was University of Alabama Athletic Director Mal Moore and Interim President Dr. Judith L. Bonner. Roll Tide!

IN HONOR OF DODGER STADIUM
IN RECOGNITION OF ITS 50TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. XAVIER BECERRA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 31, 2012

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor one of Los Angeles' greatest landmarks, Dodger Stadium, home of the Los Angeles Dodgers. The 2012 season marks the 50th anniversary of Dodger Stadium.

It ranks as the third oldest, continually-used park in Major League Baseball and still one of the most attended and highly regarded stadiums in America. Dodger Stadium has hosted more than 143 million fans since it opened its doors in 1962. The club topped the 3.85 million attendance mark in 2007, which stands as the all-time franchise record.

Ever since Brooklyn Dodger President Walter O'Malley decided to move his team to Los Angeles in 1958 and bring Major League Baseball to California for the first time, this stadium has been home to some of the most memorable events in Dodger history. Many Dodger fans still recall Sandy Koufax's perfect game in 1965, the rise of Fernandomania, and Kirk Gibson's walk-off home run in Game 1 of the 1988 World Series.

Since opening its gates, Dodger Stadium has hosted eight World Series and the Los Angeles Dodgers have won four World Championships, eight National League pennants, 11 National League Western Division crowns and two National League Wild Card berths. From 1992 to 1996, the Dodgers set a major league baseball record with five consecutive players being named Rookie of the year: Eric Karros, Mike Piazza, Raul Mondesi, Hideo Nomo and Todd Hollandsworth.

Dodger Stadium has awed spectators with a breathtaking view of downtown Los Angeles to the south; green, tree-lined Elysian hills to the north and east; and the San Gabriel Mountains beyond. Walter O'Malley and architect Emil Praeger designed the 56,000-seat stadium, the second privately financed ballpark in baseball history. Its wavy roof atop each outfield pavilion, cantilevered grandstands and unique terraced-earthworks parking lot behind the main stands make Dodger Stadium one of the most innovatively designed baseball stadiums.

Besides being home of the Los Angeles Dodgers, the stadium has played host to the Major League Baseball All-Star Game in 1980 and the Olympic Games' baseball competition in 1984. The eight-team competition during the 1984 Olympic Games marked baseball's greatest involvement in the Olympic Games to that point. The Olympic spirit returned to Los Angeles again in 1991, as Dodger Stadium hosted the Opening Ceremonies for the United States Olympic Festival. In 2004, the Olympic Torch relay in Los Angeles concluded at Dodger Stadium as Rafer Johnson lit the cauldron at Chavez Ravine.

Dodger Stadium has also been the site of numerous non-baseball major events. On September 16, 1987 Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass at Dodger Stadium to a crowd of 63,000 people. Entertainers from around the world have performed here as well, such as Madonna, The Beatles and Michael Jackson. Dodger Stadium also staged one of the world's greatest entertainment events in 1994, when internationally-renowned tenors Jose Carreras, Placido Domingo and Luciano Pavarotti reunited for a spectacular concert performance "Encore—The Three Tenors" with conductor Zubin Mehta.

Without a doubt, Dodger Stadium is one of America's treasured venues. It continues to be a major part of the history and tradition of the Dodgers. It has been the home of one of professional sports' most storied franchises, a destination for a worldwide fan base and an enduring monument for a bustling, multicultural city. For 50 years in the heart of Los Angeles, Dodger Stadium has truly been a home for both a team and a community. I am honored to have such an organization and landmark in the 31st Congressional District of California.

Mr. Speaker, it is with deep pride that I ask my colleagues to join me in celebrating the "Golden Anniversary" of one of America's great landmarks, Dodger Stadium.

TRIBUTE TO FLOMATON POLICE CHIEF DANIEL THOMPSON

HON. JO BONNER

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 31, 2012

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Police Chief Daniel Thompson of the Flomaton, Alabama Police Department for his heroic efforts to save the life of a 3-year-old boy on July 7, 2012.

While off-duty at the house of a friend, Chief Thompson was alerted by calls for help from a neighboring house. He acted quickly to reach a child who was unresponsive after falling into a swimming pool. Chief Thompson promptly performed CPR on the boy for several minutes until the boy regained consciousness. Other rescuers soon responded and took over care of the child. Due to Chief Thompson's well-trained and swift efforts, the young boy was able to be air lifted to Sacred Heart Hospital in Pensacola where he made a full recovery.

Chief Thompson began his career in law enforcement seven years ago, and he is quoted as saying, "I always wanted to do something to help people." His actions serve as a model for others, and also show that public servants are never truly off duty. While we often take their service for granted, it can truly be a blessing when they are nearby in our time of need. While Chief Thompson may not have been wearing his badge at the time of the incident, his actions reflect a man who wears the motto "to protect and serve" in his heart.

This incident also illustrates the importance of being trained in CPR. One may never use the skill; however, when faced with a crisis situation, it may mean the difference between life and death. Flomaton Fire Chief Steve Stanton called Chief Thompson "a real hero," and I think we all share his sentiments. I would like to echo his comments.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people of Alabama and my colleagues in the Alabama delegation, I wish to extend personal appreciation to Chief Thompson for his quick action to save a life, and to all those who serve us every day in our communities. We can never thank them enough.

IN RECOGNITION OF COL. TIMOTHY SULLIVAN'S CHANGE OF COM- MAND

HON. MIKE ROGERS

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 31, 2012

Mr. ROGERS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the House's attention today to recognize Colonel Timothy Sullivan who will have a change of command from Anniston Army Depot in August.

Sullivan received a commission as an Ordnance Officer in 1988 after graduating from Jacksonville State University. He later earned a Master of Science Degree in Information Systems Management from Florida Tech University in 2001 and a Master of Strategic Studies from the Air War College, Air University in 2010.

His previous assignments include Platoon Leader, 503rd Maintenance Company, 530th S&S Battalion, 1st COSCOM; Platoon Leader and Shop Officer, Charlie Company, 782nd Maintenance Battalion, 82nd DISCOM, 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C.; Company Commander, 520th Maintenance Company, 194th Maintenance Battalion, 23rd Area Support Group, Camp Humphrey's Korea; Operations Officer and Brigade Executive Officer, 59th Ordnance Brigade, Redstone Arsenal, Ala.; RTD Team Chief, 351st Infantry Battalion, 158th Infantry Brigade, Patrick Air Force Base, Fla.; Support Operations Officer and Battalion Executive Officer, 13th Corps Support Battalion, 3rd Sustainment Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Ga.; APMS, Auburn University Army ROTC; Commander, 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, 3rd Sustainment Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division; Chief, Logistics Division, Special Operations Command, Joint Forces Command (SOCJFCOM), SOCOM, Suffolk, Va.; and, most recently, graduate of the Air War College, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

While at Anniston Army Depot, he safely helped execute millions of direct labor hours while helping overhaul and maintain our nation's critical combat equipment. His hands-on leadership for the workforce helped ensure our nation's military was provided the best possible equipment available to keep them as safe as possible while allowing them to accomplish their vital mission.

Mr. Speaker, we will miss Colonel Sullivan in Anniston, but wish him the very best.
