Let us commemorate, on the record, the Church of St. Thomas in its 45th year of operation for the invaluable service it provides to the Greek Orthodox faith and the South New Jersey community at large.

RECOGNIZING THE VETERANS EDUCATION PROGRAM AT CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, FRESNO

HON. JIM COSTA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, November 14, 2012

Mr. COSTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Veterans Education Program at California State University, Fresno. This outstanding program is for veterans who served overseas and are transitioning into the next phase of their lives.

An inexcusable number of veterans are coming home to a hard hit economy and find that they have few options when it comes to finding a job. The Veterans Education Program was created to fix that problem. In many cases, our veterans need time to transition once they are home, and the program helps with the shift from military to civilian life.

Fresno State will welcome its first class in January of 2013. Each six week class will have up to 25 veterans, and students will receive six units of transferable credit. In addition to taking a refresher course in English and mathematics, students will also develop skills to help with obtaining a career and managing their finances. The last couple weeks are individualized, so students can create a plan to fulfill their goals after leaving the program.

The Veterans Education Program is specifically designed so that veterans can be successful after the course is completed. Some might continue on with their education at Fresno State, and others may enter the workforce or do an internship that relates to their future career. The program has partnered with several veteran support organizations who are interested in providing opportunities for veterans in the workplace or in school.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me recognizing the Veterans Education Program at California State University, Fresno. As a nation we cannot ignore the needs of our veterans when they come home from being overseas. They deserve our unwavering support and gratitude. The program will provide opportunities for thousands of veterans living throughout the Central Valley.

HONORING MR. KEVIN BENNETT

HON. KEITH ELLISON

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, November 14, 2012

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of Kevin Bennett to recognize his dedicated service to the great state of Minnesota and his selection as Minnesota's middle school principal of the year.

Mr. Bennett began his teaching career in 2001 in his 20's, and a mere three years later was hired by the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Resource School, FAIR, as an assistant principal. One short year later, he became principal. Now in his mid-30's, Mr. Bennett is the principal of two FAIR schools, one in Minneapolis and one in Crystal.

Since his arrival, Mr. Bennett has made great strides toward the FAIR schools' goal of greater integration. Mr. Bennett, along with his superintendent, reworked the curriculum of both schools. This paid off and last academic year resulted in more than 1,600 enrollment applications for 150 openings at the two schools. Since Mr. Bennett became principal, the number of minority students at Crystal has risen from 32 to 44 percent. The reworked curriculum and diversified student population has resulted in significant test score increases.

With the downtown school's focus on literacy and the arts, 94 percent of the third graders met or exceeded Minnesota's reading proficiency standards last spring. The third grade class was the first to benefit from the curriculum change that calls for kindergarteners through third graders to spend two hours each day on literacy.

Mr. Bennett has demonstrated an unwavering belief in the youth of Minneapolis and Crystal as evidenced by his willingness to think outside the box in order to achieve the best possible results for his students. It is Mr. Bennett's commitment to his students and the program that he helped develop that has resulted in him being selected as the state's middle school principal of the year. Kevin Bennett should serve as an example to us all to find ways to serve and improve our own communities.

I truly appreciate all that Mr. Bennett has done and continues to do for the youth of Minneapolis and Crystal, and I thank him for his dedication and service.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE HEROIC EFFORTS MADE BY THE AMERICAN RED CROSS

HON. ROBERT E. ANDREWS

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, November 14, 2012

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the heroic response efforts made by the men and women of the American Red Cross. The destruction caused by Superstorm Sandy devastated those living along the Atlantic coast. During this state of emergency, many lost basic utilities like electricity and heat, access to food and water, and a safe shelter. The impact of the storm is still felt by many residents as they return home and attempt to regain some semblance of their normal life.

For over 130 years, the American Red Cross has served as an independent international humanitarian organization. Simply put, the members of the Red Cross are first responders, who in the wake of emergency, voluntarily enter dangerous environments so that the risk to others may be lessened. Before Sandy made landfall, the Red Cross opened shelters, stockpiled supplies, and organized workers. More than 3,800 Red Cross disaster workers are currently assisting in the relief effort. Since the storm hit, thousands of people have found shelter and over 200,000 meals and snacks have been served. West Deptford

High School, in my home district, transformed overnight from a school into a place of refuge, with beds, a children's playroom, and an adult recreational hall.

The true value of these gallant workers extends far beyond the tangible goods and services they provide. Above all, it is their palpable presence, their reassuring smile and words of kindness—being the crutch which props up those who are ready to collapse. As their mission so eloquently and accurately states, the American Red Cross "prevents and alleviates human suffering in the face of emergencies." Please join me in honoring these tireless workers and remember that while the Red Cross prides itself on being a nonpartisan and independent organization, it also relies on volunteers and the generosity of the American public to perform its mission.

CLS's mission is to assist those with the greatest need on legal cases ranging from health care to education to housing. During his tenure, Royal has been a leader at CLS helping the most vulnerable obtain justice and restore dignity across the state while working at its Rockville, Waterbury, and New London offices. Today, he works at the Willimantic office in the heart of my district and focuses on serving individuals with disabilities.
