

The expectation, of course, is that you would have a job. Well, the reason it's so important now to have them covered up to age 26 on their parents' health insurance policy is because they have no jobs. And that's the thing that this administration and this—now, at least in the House of Representatives—Democratic minority, they just don't seem to understand that what the American people care about first and foremost is a job. They want health insurance, of course they do. If they have to, they'll pay for it out of their own pocket. But they've got to have a job first. They've got to put food on the table. They've got to put clothing on the backs of their children. They have to have the pride, dignity, and respect of having a job.

As we go into these elections this fall, and all 435 of us in this body and 100—well, in fact, I guess it's one-third of the other body stand for reelection and we elect a 45th—and, indeed, I think we will elect a 45th and not reelect the 44th—President of the United States, it's going to be based on jobs and the economy. That's the thing that this President, since he took office in January of 2009, has just totally missed the point of. And really, it started in January of 2007 with the Democratic majority in this Chamber when we spent another 2 years wasting time, fiddling while Rome was burning, trying to force and cram down the throats of the American people this cap-and-trade regime which would have cost every family $2,500 a year in increased utility costs. Thank goodness the other body stopped that, because the American people didn't want it.

And they don't want national health care. That's why we voted in this body, H.R. 2, to repeal ObamaCare. And that repeal passed in the House of Representatives. We finally had a vote in the Senate. We couldn't get them to pass a budget. They haven't done that in 3 years. But after about a year and a half, we finally got them to vote on repeal of ObamaCare. The Democratic majority rejected that.

So, Mr. Speaker, now we're dealing with plan B, and plan B is to chip away at the most egregious aspects of ObamaCare. It would be a mistake for us to assume the Supreme Court will strike down that individual mandate and will strike down that Medicaid expansion, that unfunded mandate, a $12 billion burden placed on the budgets of our respective States. I think they will strike it down, but I'm not going to stand here in this Chamber holding my breath waiting for that to happen. That would be irresponsible. That would not be representing the people of the 11th of Georgia the way they deserve to be represented.

So, we are going to fight. That's what this is all about today and the vote tomorrow in regard to repealing IPAB, this Independent Payment Advisory Board that literally takes legislative responsibility away from the Congress. Talk about unconstitutional; clearly, that is unconstitutional.

We're going to vote it down tomorrow. And we're going to send that to the Senate, and I expect HARRY REID and the Democratic majority to do the responsible thing. They don't like it either. They don't like it either. Let's don't make an election issue out of it. Let's just do the right thing for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, it's been a long day. We have had a lot of discussion on the floor of the House of Representatives, a lot of eloquence on both sides of the aisle. I feel very strongly that we should respect one another, and I think we do. This is not personal, but when you feel that you have the right idea, it's your responsibility to stand strong, not to pander to anybody, but to stand strong and do the right thing, do the right thing for the American people.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
