The Republican leader.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I will not be objecting, but I do want to briefly make a comment. This is the result of a successful discussion among the majority leader, the White House, and myself. Based on the White House assurance that there will be no recess appointments during the upcoming adjournment, I will not be objecting.

I wish to say to my friend, the majority leader, this is the way we ought to be conducting business. I think it was a successful negotiation, and I certainly do not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, very quickly—I know the Republican leader is in a hurry—I agree. This is the way we should legislate. I hope—maybe not in the 2-week period we come back, but after that—we start doing appropriations bills. We are both committed—the Republican leader and I—we are committed to doing appropriations bills this year, and we have to do that. We cannot let other things stand in the way of getting them done. I appreciate the cooperation of the White House and my friend the Republican leader.
