

courage, and selfless efforts on behalf of another, served to inspire all who observed him and upheld the highest tradition of the United States Naval Services. For his action, he was awarded the Silver Star and Purple Heart by the President of the United States.

Sergeant Weaver spent 11 months in a military hospital for his wounds. Joseph J. McCaffrey, in a letter to Sergeant Weaver's mother wrote, "that his action inspired his men to get the wounded men out of danger." McCaffrey added, "that he literally walked into an artillery barrage and certain death."

Dick Weaver returned to Lees McRae and was graduated in 1957. He was student body president, Phi Beta Kappa, Best All-Around Student, Most Valuable Player in baseball, and the recipient of a prestigious Morehead Scholarship to the University of North Carolina, from where he was graduated in 1959.

After serving in personnel positions at Cone Mills, General Dynamics, and Duke University, Dick founded and served as president of Dick Weaver Associates from 1975 to 1995, and his company was rated by the College and University Personnel Association as one of the top three in the nation.

Dick Weaver has been a friend of mine for decades. As youngsters, we competed against each other on the ball fields of Piedmont North Carolina. In all the years that I have known Dick, I never really knew of the heroism he displayed in Korea. Dick is a humble and self-effacing gentleman who doesn't seek out the glory. I wanted to take this moment, as we celebrate Memorial Day 2013, to honor Dick Weaver and the countless others just like him who serve our country with dignity and distinction.

HONORING KAYLEIGH FAAS

HON. PETE OLSON

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 23, 2013

Mr. OLSON. Mr. Speaker, I am privileged to interact with some of the brightest students in the 22nd Congressional District who serve on my Congressional Youth Advisory Council. I have gained much by listening to the high school students who are the future of this great nation. They provide important insight into the concerns of our younger constituents and hopefully get a better sense of the importance of being an active participant in the political process. Many of the students have written short essays on a variety of topics and I am pleased to share these with my House colleagues.

Kayleigh Faas is a sophomore at Needville High School in Fort Bend County, Texas. Her essay topic is: In your opinion, what role should government play in our lives?

THE POSITIVE POWER OF GOVERNMENT

What role should government play in our daily lives? In my opinion, government should be a structured framework for our education system, economy, and healthcare programs. In hopes of creating a "more perfect union", our founding fathers strived to create a fair and just system to serve Americans.

We depend on our government to protect its citizens. Government affects all human activity. Some of the important groups are consumers, workers, investors, and the environment. The Constitution was designed to defend our "lives, liberties and pursuits of happiness". Only the government has the power to maintain these rights.

Government itself is valuable and beneficial to Americans. It is a powerful force in forming and maintaining a strong society. Citizens have different relationships with their government whether it be at the federal, state, or local level. In my opinion, people should support their governmental systems and view them as an institution rather than an administration. We may not agree with elected officials on all issues, but should work together with them to better our nation. We are lucky to live in a democratic society where we have a voice and the right to vote for our leaders of choice.

We should have a positive attitude towards our democratic government. As stated in our Constitution, our forefathers created our government in order to create a more perfect union and to defend and promote the welfare and tranquility of our citizens. These are assurances that most of the world's countries wish they could achieve.

Government, in my opinion, is valuable and beneficial to all citizens and should continue to positively affect various aspects of our lives on a daily basis. Our government is the only entity that can help us grow together as a strong and healthy nation. It provides the foundation for our economic growth. It also positively impacts our education system and promotes a higher level of competency which results in better lives. Other nations look to our form of government as a model for shaping and bettering their own. Our government has a vital and indispensable role to play in continuing to improve the lives of all Americans. We, as responsible citizens, must support our government system, because after all, WE have created it.

HONORING WOMEN OF INFLUENCE

A TRIBUTE TO ACACIA SCOTT

HON. TOM LATHAM

OF IOWA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 23, 2013

Mr. LATHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor Acacia Scott for being named a 2013 recipient of the Dorothy Andrews Kabis Memorial Internship by the National Federation of Republican Women.

The Dorthy Kabis Internship is named after former National Federation of Republican Women President who served from 1963–1967 before being appointed as the United States Treasurer by President Nixon. This Memorial Internship Program is a highly selective program that offers just three young women from across the nation the chance to work in the headquarters of this prominent women's political organization in our national's capital. This program is reserved for undergraduate college students that display a keen knowledge of government and a strong interest in politics.

Mr. Speaker, Acacia's ability to be named to just one of three nationwide internships by the National Federation of Republican Women speaks volumes to her abilities and renowned Iowa work ethic. It is an honor to represent future leaders like Acacia from the great state of Iowa in the United States Congress and I invite my colleagues in the House to join me in congratulating her for receiving this prestigious designation. I wish her the best of luck in her future studies and career.

AUTHORIZING USE OF EMANCIPATION HALL FOR UNVEILING OF STATUE OF FREDERICK DOUGLASS

SPEECH OF

HON. SHEILA JACKSON LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 21, 2013

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. Con. Res. 16, which authorizes the use of Emancipation Hall for the unveiling of a statue of Frederick Douglass. It is fitting and proper that Emancipation Hall is the venue for the dedication of a memorial to one of this nation's greatest abolitionists and orators, and one of the closest friends and advisors of the Great Emancipator himself, Abraham Lincoln.

Frederick Douglass was born Frederick Augustus Washington Bailey near Easton, Maryland, on February 18, 1818, and lived the first 20 years of his life as a slave before escaping to freedom in 1838 through the Underground Railroad. With the assistance of abolitionists, he resettled in New Bedford, Massachusetts and changed his name to avoid recapture by fugitive slave bounty hunters.

Frederick Douglass had no formal education but he recognized the power of education and taught himself to read and write. He would go on to become the publisher of "The North Star," a leading abolitionist newspaper, whose motto was "Right is of no Sex—Truth is of no Color—God is the Father of us all, and we are all brethren."

Frederick Douglass also authored one of the seminal works in American history, the influential autobiography "Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass, an American Slave," which explained with unsurpassed eloquence how slavery corrupts the human spirit and robs both master and slave of their freedom.

Frederick Douglass devoted his life to the struggle for freedom, human dignity, and the full measure of civil and human rights for all men and women, famously observing that "where there is no struggle, there is no progress; power concedes nothing without demand. It never has and never will."

Frederick Douglass was also one of America's greatest orators. He was the only African American to attend the first women's rights convention in 1848 at Seneca Falls, New York, where he spoke powerfully and forcefully in favor of women's suffrage. In his moving address, he said that he could not accept the right to vote as a black man if women could not also claim that right and suggested that the world would be a better place if women were involved in the political sphere:

In this denial of the right to participation in government, not merely the degradation of woman and the perpetuation of a great injustice happens, but the maiming and repudiation of one-half of the moral and intellectual power of the government of the world.

On July 5, 1852, Frederick Douglass delivered the address for which he is perhaps best known. The theme of that address to the Ladies of the Rochester Anti-Slavery Sewing Society was "What to the slave is the 4th of July?" In that speech, he described in stark and vivid detail the gap between America's principles and practices, its aspirations and the actual condition of people's lives, especially those persons of African descent. In answering the question, "What to the slave is your 4th of July," he said:

[A] day that reveals to him, more than all other days in the year, the gross injustice and cruelty to which he is the constant victim. To him, your celebration is a sham; your boasted liberty, an unholy license; your national greatness, swelling vanity; your sounds of rejoicing are empty and heartless; your denunciations of tyrants, brass fronted impudence; your shouts of liberty and equality, hollow mockery; your prayers and hymns, your sermons and thanksgivings, with all your religious parade, and solemnity, are, to him, mere bombast, fraud, deception, impiety, and hypocrisy—a thin veil to cover up crimes which would disgrace a nation of savages.

But Frederick Douglass was not bitter at America, he was determined to make her better. And he did through his writings, lectures, speeches, and civic activism. Most of all, the bond of friendship he forged with President Lincoln helped the nation summon the will to accept civil war as the price to be paid to abolish American slavery and emancipate from bondage millions of slaves and their descendants.

On April 14, 1876, the eleventh anniversary of the Lincoln's assassination, Frederick Douglass was the keynote speaker at the dedication of the Freedmen's Monument in Memory of Abraham Lincoln in the City of Washington, in which the Great Abolitionist spoke for all former slaves in paying tribute to the Great Emancipator:

Despite the mist and haze that surrounded him; we saw him . . . in the light of the stern logic of great events, and in view of that divinity which shapes our ends, . . . we came to the conclusion that the hour and the man of our redemption had somehow met in the person of Abraham Lincoln. [He] was at the head of a great movement, and was in living and earnest sympathy with that movement, which, in the nature of things, must go on until slavery should be utterly and forever abolished in the United States.

After the Civil War, Frederick served as U.S. Marshal for the District of Columbia and later as the first African American Recorder of Deeds. In 1888 at the Republican National Convention, he became the first African-American to receive a vote for nomination as president of the United States by one of the major parties. From 1889 to 1891, Frederick Douglass served his country as Minister-Resident and Consul-General to Haiti. He died in Washington, D.C. on February 20, 1895, at the age of 77.

Mr. Speaker, the life of Frederick Douglass affirms what is great about our country. Here was a man who overcame the conditions of his birth and the disadvantages of his race to become one of the towering figures of his age. His life proves that Margaret Mead was right when she said:

Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful committed citizens can change the world; indeed, it's the only thing that ever has.

With the unveiling of the statue in memory of Frederick Douglass, fittingly located in Emancipation Hall of the U.S. Capitol, the story of this great man who led such a consequential life will be made known to all who visit for generations to come.

GREAT TEACHERS AND PRINCIPALS ACT OF 2013

HON. THOMAS E. PETRI

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 23, 2013

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, today Rep. JARED POLIS and I are introducing the Growing Excellent Achievement Training Academies (GREAT) Teachers and Principals Act.

The bill would implement reforms to encourage the growth of teacher and principal training academies that are held accountable for producing effective graduates in exchange for freedom from unnecessary regulations and bureaucracy.

Research continues to confirm that effective teaching is a critical component of student success. However, despite these findings, many teachers report feeling ill-prepared for their work in the classroom. These reforms will harness the power of innovation to create teacher and principal preparation programs that are more effective and more responsive to the needs of educators.

One leading study found that a majority of education school alumni (61 percent) reported that schools of education did not adequately prepare their graduates for the classroom. Principals surveyed as part of that study also gave schools of education low marks, with only 30 percent reporting that such schools prepare teachers very well or moderately well to meet the needs of students with disabilities, and only 16 percent reporting at those levels for students with limited English proficiency. It is well known that nearly half of new teachers leave the profession in the first five years.

In our bill, states would be given the flexibility to use a portion of the funds they receive for teacher and principal reforms to support the development of teacher or principal preparation academies. These academies, which may be traditional colleges of education but need not be, would be required to be selective in their admissions processes; emphasize clinical preparation by pairing their candidates with effective teachers or principals in the classroom; and produce a certain number of effective teachers or principals in order to maintain their authority to operate. In exchange for this accountability, they would be
