

The school has completed over 96 major facility renovations and new buildings at OSU campuses in excess of $1.1 billion.

A capital fundraising campaign that successfully raised nearly $1.15 billion for OSU's foundation.

The development of the Student Success Initiative, a comprehensive, university-wide effort led by Ray which has raised $150 million for scholarships, fellowships, and student experience funds.

In 2016, the development of OSU Cascades to enhance access to an OSU four-year degree for the underserved central Oregon region. This is the first new university expansion to be built in Oregon in 50 years.

The development of OSU E-campus into a consistent national top-ranked institution for distance learning. This year, U.S. News & World Report ranked OSU's online undergraduate program number five in the nation—the school's sixth straight year ranked in the top-10 nationally. A reflection of OSU's commitment to providing students with high quality options for attaining an OSU degree that meets their needs.

The expansion of the Hatfield Marine Science Center in Newport that, starting this fall, will provide a coastal campus location for undergraduates, expand student access to marine studies, enhance the marine laboratory, and provide a safe haven for community members in case of a tsunami.

The expansion of OSU's dual-enrollment program to all 17 of Oregon's community colleges, making it easier for students to access and complete four-year degrees.

OSU's research enterprise continues to grow in scope and impact. Awards to OSU faculty in 2019 totaled $439.7 million—OSU's second largest award year ever.

In addition to his work at OSU, President Ray has consistently served on executive boards of national associations including: the NCAA, American Council on Education, the Association of American Colleges and Universities, and the Association of Public and Land-grant Universities.

His leadership in higher education has been recognized with the CASE District VIII Leadership Award (2013), an honorary doctorate from the University of Portland (2014), and the Oregon History Makers Medal (2018) presented by the Oregon Historical Society. President Ray has also been active locally in Oregon communities and currently serves as board chair of Special Olympics Oregon.

President Ray's final State of the University address in February he said, "I guarantee the best is yet to come for OSU". I couldn't agree more and that is in no small part due to his exceptional leadership and dedication for the last 17 years. President Ray leaves OSU with a legacy and vision for a future that will continue in service to student success, faculty and research excellence, outreach, and OSU's mission as a 21st century land grant university.

Ed, on behalf of a grateful Beaver Nation we say, 'thank you'.
