

facility inspections, mariner licensing, casualty investigations, and marine disaster and firefighting response to train the next generation of leaders within the Coast Guard's Marine Safety program. His leadership and commitment to the professional development of others made an incredible impact on more than 1,200 Coast Guard junior officers and enlisted members, many of whom are now serving as executive level leaders in the Coast Guard and throughout the Federal Government. His mentees include a member of the Senior Executive Service, three Coast Guard flag officers, 10 Coast Guard captains of the Port, and several enlisted members who are now serving in successful leadership roles in government and private industry.

During my time on the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, I have had the benefit of working with a number of Coast Guard members that had been mentored by John. John trained them well. Without a doubt, these members have left their mark on multiple Coast Guard authorization bills that have been signed into law with meaningful improvements to maritime safety and environmental protection at the national level. I am personally grateful to have had the opportunity to work with so many members who were mentored by John, and I am sure that, after John retires, I will continue to learn from those he influenced over his long career.

John also served as an influential leader within Puget Sound's maritime community. In the wake of the tragedy of September 11th, he played a key role in Puget Sound as the Coast Guard implemented the Maritime Transportation Security Act of 2002. He served as the head of the vessel security and Washington State ferries security subcommittees within the Puget Sound Maritime Security Committee and played a critical advisory role in Puget Sound's Harbor Safety Committee. He was always available to provide advice on maritime topics and was frequently invited to speak at maritime events. In recognition of his tremendous impact, the Seattle Propeller Club named John as its Public Official of the Year in 2013 and the Puget Sound Port Maritime Council recognized him as its Maritime Person of the Year in 2017.

John's actions and decisions were always in the best interest of the public in which he selflessly and tirelessly served as he worked to ensure the safety, security, and environmental protection of Washington State and the pristine waters of Puget Sound. He will be missed, but his legacy of service and those he trained will live on. I thank John Dwyer for his selfless service to the United States Coast Guard, the entire Pacific Northwest, and our Nation.
