

sister, and I was lucky her guitar teacher had contacts, and lucky he knew of a medically competent doctor. But nobody should have to depend on luck to get a safe abortion.

Although that doctor tried to shame me, I am not ashamed. I don't think abortion is shameful and I have never had a moment's regret. My abortion allowed me to live the life I wanted and to become a parent when I was able to raise a child properly and responsibly. This was good for me and my life, but it is also a social and public health good. Abortion is a necessary part of family planning and women's healthcare and denying or restricting access to it means that women can not safely control their reproduction and therefore can't really control their lives, which means they can't participate fully and equally in society. It is bad social policy to hobble half of the population.

Women of my generation already know what pain and hardship results from abortion bans, but younger women have grown up taking abortion access for granted as a right, and I urge them to speak out and tell their stories. And not only women, but men, and other family members and friends who have been involved and who have been affected. Bring up your experiences in conversation, contact your legislators and tell them. They are the ones in immediate danger and whose lives and whose families' lives will be affected.

Senator PETERS' story, Kate's story, Wendy's story are just about how gut-wrenching these decisions are. These are personal decisions that women should make for themselves.

The Senate has no business taking up a vote on a Supreme Court Justice who is already committed to taking away healthcare from millions of people and to take away Roe v. Wade and this protection from millions of women.

We may not have the votes to stop them, but that does not change the fact that what the Senate Republicans are doing is wrong. We will continue to fight it. We will fight it now in the Senate, and we will fight it come election day November 3.

I yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

NOMINATION OF AMY CONEY BARRETT

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, when the Senate considers nominees to the U.S. Supreme Court, it is particularly important that we act fairly and consistently, using the same set of rules, no matter which political party is in power.

When President Obama nominated Judge Garland 8 months before the 2016 Presidential election, I met with him and maintained that he was entitled to a hearing. Others argued that the winner of that year's Presidential election should be allowed to choose the nominee, and that is what happened. My views did not prevail, and the standard was established that a nominee to the Court would not be voted on prior to the election in a Presidential election year. This year, a vacancy has also occurred, notably much closer to the election.

Prior to Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg's death, I stated that, should a vacancy on the Supreme Court arise, the Senate should follow the precedent set 4 years ago and not vote on a nominee prior to the Presidential election. Since her passing, I have reiterated that in fairness to the American people—who will either be reelecting the President or selecting a new one—the decision on the nominee to fill the Supreme Court vacancy should be made by whoever is elected on November 3.

Because this vote is occurring prior to the election, I will vote against the nomination of Judge Amy Coney Barrett. To be clear, my vote does not reflect any conclusion that I have reached about Judge Barrett's qualifications to serve on the Supreme Court. What I have concentrated on is being fair and consistent, and I do not think it is fair nor consistent to have a Senate confirmation vote prior to the election.

REMEMBERING ELLEN M. BLOOM

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Mr. President, earlier this year we lost one of our Senate alumnae—a constituent and a personal friend—Ellen Michelle Bloom. She was a devoted mother and wife, who dedicated her career to public service and advocating for consumers. While she was not a household name, her 40-year career has benefited the lives of millions of Americans.

Ellen began her extraordinary career while a student at the University of Maryland, interning for Senator John Tunney before joining the staff of a newly elected Senator, Howard Metzenbaum. Her first job was in the mailroom, answering constituent mail, learning about the concerns of Ohioans and figuring out how to navigate the bureaucracy.

Over the ensuing 18 years on Senator Metzenbaum's staff, Ellen rose through the ranks, at a time when female aides were a distinct minority, to become his legislative director and an expert in consumer protection. As her many friends and colleagues have written in the months since her passing at age 65, Ellen was not interested in attention; she was only interested in results. A long-time friend and colleague wrote of Ellen, "It's amazing how much you can get done when you don't care who gets the credit." That was Ellen.

From provisions in the 1984 Cable Act mandating Equal Employment Opportunity standards, to promoting children's television legislation, to regulations requiring lavatories on commuter airplanes, to warning labels on large buckets designed to protect small children from drowning, Ellen's work was far-reaching. She advocated for the use of car seats and bicycle helmets and was among a small group who sought to bridge the "digital divide" long before it became a popular phrase. She believed in equality and fairness and sought ways to incorporate these principles into public policy.

When Senator Metzenbaum retired, Ellen was recruited to join the Clinton administration, first at the National Telecommunications and Information Administration, then as the Commerce Department's Deputy Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, and lastly as Deputy Chief of Staff for Commerce Secretary William Daley, where her responsibilities included the 2000 Census.

Following her public service career, Ellen joined the Washington staff of Consumer Reports. As Director of Federal Policy and head of the D.C. office, she led the organization's advocacy in support of the Affordable Care Act, fought for stricter vehicle emission standards, promoted expanded consumer product labeling, and worked on many other issues that protected the safety and health of American consumers.

At a time when so many question the ability of the government and public advocacy to improve the quality of life for our citizens, Ellen's work stands as an antidote to cynicism. She recognized that the work of democracy is hard but always had faith that we could make progress.

Her legacy of good works is a testament to that conviction and an inspiration for all. She was also an example of how to face adversity with courage and fortitude.

While her professional accomplishments were many, her greatest pride was her family: her husband David Bushnell and their children Michael and Jenna Bushnell, her many nieces and nephews, her brother and sister-in-law, her cousins spread across the country. Her life was too short—way too short; but it was full of love and rich in the ways that gave it depth, joy, and consequence.

We were lucky to have such a dedicated and passionate public servant. I was fortunate to count Ellen as a dear friend. She made our country a better, safer place. She may be gone, but her many accomplishments live on and will continue to protect and benefit Americans for generations to come. We need many more Ellen Blooms, but she was one of a kind.
