

HONORING THE LIFE OF MORTON
(MORT) ROSENBERGHON. TED LIEU

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 24, 2025

Mr. LIEU. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer sincere condolences to the family, friends, and colleagues of Morton (Mort) Rosenberg, who passed away last month.

Mort stands out as one of our strongest and most astute advocates for congressional prerogatives under the Constitution. It is no understatement that every Member of this body—on both sides of the aisle—owes a debt of gratitude to Mort for his tireless and non-partisan work over his many decades of service, both for the Congressional Research Service (CRS) and after his retirement. I am personally indebted to Mort for his seminal scholarship on Congress's power of inherent contempt, which informed my legislative work on the subject, as reflected in H. Res. 136, which I introduced in the 118th Congress to amend House Rules with respect to the enforcement of committee subpoenas to executive branch officials.

Mort was born in Brooklyn, New York, in 1935, graduated from New York University and Harvard Law School, and completed his Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins University. From 1972 to 2008, Mort worked at CRS as a Specialist in American Public Law in the American Law Division. During his career at CRS, he was detailed as legal counsel to a special investigative committee and served as a legal advisor to the House General Counsel. Following retirement, Mort worked with the Constitution Project, Good Government Now, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, and the law firm of Barnett Sivon & Natter. Mort's areas of expertise included constitutional law, administrative law, congressional practice and procedure, and labor law. Some of his most important work focused on the scope of congressional oversight and investigative prerogatives, and the validity of claims of executive and common-law privileges.

During and following his career at CRS, Mort authored and contributed to dozens of significant memoranda, reports, academic articles, testimony, papers, and advocacy pieces. In addition, Mort contributed to federal court litigation, assisting with Supreme Court oral argument preparation in Free Enterprise Fund v. PCAOB (2010), and authoring an amicus brief in NLRB v. SW General (2017), which was cited five times in the majority opinion. He also submitted amicus briefs in congressional oversight cases, including McGahn v. House Judiciary Committee (2020). In 2005, Mort received the 2004–2005 Mary C. Lawton Award for Outstanding Public Service from the American Bar Association's Section of Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice.

In my view, Mort's most important legacy stems from his groundbreaking work on Congress's inherent contempt authority and his proposals for revitalizing its enforcement power as follows:

Congress's Contempt Power: Law, History, Practice, and Procedure (CRS Report RL34097, co-authored with Todd B. Tatelman, 2007)

Testimony before the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform on the Department of Justice's obligation to respond to congressional subpoenas (2011)

Testimony before the House Energy and Commerce Committee on the challenges Congress faces when the executive branch refuses to recognize contempt citations (2016)

Reasserting Congress's Investigative Authority (R Street Policy Study No. 103, R Street Institute, July 2017)

Summary of Proposed Inherent Contempt Rule (Good Government Now, co-authored with William J. Murphy, July 2018)

Why Congress Can Impose Fines for Contempt (Good Government Now, co-authored with William J. Murphy, August 5, 2018)

Understanding and Confronting the Current Executive Challenges to Effective Congressional Investigative Oversight (Good Government Now, July 4, 2018)

Can a Revised Inherent Contempt Procedure Strengthen Enforcement of House Subpoenas to the Executive Branch? (Good Government Now, Statement for Panel Discussion, October 19, 2018)

The Road to Effective Enforcement of House Committee Subpoenas ("Point of Order," April 27, 2019)

Proposed Inherent Contempt Procedure Rule for the House (Good Government Now, 2019)

Above and beyond his impressive body of legal scholarship, Mort was a generous mentor, teacher, and advisor to CRS and congressional staff. In the words of his former CRS colleague (and current Deputy General Counsel of the House Office of General Counsel), Todd Tatelman: Mort was everything you could want in a mentor and teacher. He was a master storyteller, with a steel-trap memory. He would regale anyone who would listen with endless tales of congressional history, recalling meetings, hearings, briefings, and memoranda he wrote on incredibly esoteric subjects with such detail that you had to listen to.

Mort leaves behind an unmatched legacy of family, friends, and colleagues. While Members of Congress may no longer be able to call upon him to testify, write a report, or file an amicus brief on our behalf, we will continue to benefit from his scholarship and wisdom for generations to come.

HONORING THE LIFE AND LEGACY OF VERNIS JACKSONHON. CHRIS PAPPAS

OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 24, 2025

Mr. PAPPAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the life and legacy of Mrs. Vernis Marie Miller Jackson of Portsmouth, New Hampshire—a pioneering educator, visionary community leader, and lifelong champion for civil rights, culture, and historical preservation.

Born in Waycross, Georgia, Vernis' father, Bishop Clinton Miller, and mother, Lottie Butler Miller Randall, immediately moved their baby daughter to Savannah, Georgia, where she would grow up, attending Florence Street Elementary School and Savannah State College before receiving her degree from the University of New Hampshire.

In 1963, Vernis and her husband, Emerald, a sergeant in the United States Air Force, relocated with their two young daughters from Savannah to Pease Air Force Base in Newington, New Hampshire, later moving to Portsmouth, where she would remain for the rest of her life. For 35 of those years, Mrs. Jackson served as a beloved teacher in the Portsmouth School Department, where her dedication to young people left an indelible mark on generations of students. Yet her contributions to our community extended far beyond the classroom.

Vernis served on a task force for the Equity in Mathematics Education Leadership Institute, sharing the program citywide with students and parents. She helped charter an African American women's organization, named Kwanza, which provided scholarships for local students. She was also a charter member of The Greater Springfield, Massachusetts Chapter of The Links, Inc., a national women's organization, where she achieved Platinum status. Mrs. Jackson was a member of the Jonquil Garden Club, a lifetime member of the NAACP, the National Education Association, the New Hampshire Retired Teachers Association, the Crossroads Bridge Club, Friends of Portsmouth Library, and the Portsmouth College Women's Club. Vernis was a member of the Portsmouth Athenaeum and served a three-year term at the Currier Museum of Art and Seacoast Leadership Group. Vernis and her beloved husband, Emerald, also served together for 21 years on the board of the Salvation Army.

In 2000, she co-founded the Seacoast African American Cultural Center (SAACC), an institution dedicated to celebrating and preserving the contributions of African Americans in the Seacoast region and beyond. Under her leadership as president and later president emerita, the SAACC blossomed into a vital cultural hub, curating exhibitions, hosting performances and lectures, offering scholarships, and bringing generations together through history and art.

Perhaps one of her most enduring legacies is her work at the Portsmouth African Burying Ground Memorial Park. After the discovery of the burial site in 2003, Mrs. Jackson became chair of the African Burying Ground Committee, guiding a multi-year effort to honor those interred in what is now recognized as New England's only known African burying ground dating back to the 1700s. Thanks to her leadership, the memorial park was completed and formally dedicated in 2015—a sacred space that invites reflection, remembrance, and justice.

Mrs. Jackson continued her decades-long fight for equity, education, and civil rights, and her tireless work earned her recognition across the state, including as a "Local Hero" by New Hampshire Magazine, where she was praised for bridging generations and inspiring others through action and service. She has been recognized as a Paul Harris Fellow, a Granite-Stater of the month, and has been presented with both the Martin Luther King, Jr., "Living the Dream Award," and the "Spirit of the Prince Hall" award. She was also a recipient of the City of Portsmouth Mayor's Award for her 11 years of service on the African Burying Grounds Committee.

Vernis Marie Miller Jackson passed away in February 2025 at the age of 92. Though she is no longer with us, her legacy lives on through the institutions she built, the lives she shaped, and the history she preserved for future generations.

I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Vernis Jackson for her extraordinary life of service and leadership. May we carry forward her example of dignity, compassion, and commitment to justice.

HONORING LOIS JEAN BUCKMAN

HON. JONATHAN L. JACKSON

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 24, 2025

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Ms. Lois Jean Buckman—a pioneering telecommunications executive, beloved community leader, and lifelong advocate for mentorship, education, and empowerment.

Born on March 9, 1947, in Detroit, Michigan, Ms. Buckman was the daughter of visionary entrepreneurs who helped anchor and uplift their community for over 70 years. Her parents were proprietors of local businesses and neighborhood properties—investments that weren't just about business, but about building opportunity, community, and legacy.

At the age of 19, Lois moved to Los Angeles, California, to begin a new chapter. She would go on to build an extraordinary 37-year career at GTE, later Verizon, beginning as the first African American woman hired as a cashier and rising to the position of regional director, overseeing operations across four states. She broke barriers utilizing an indomitable resolve and never forgot to lift others as she climbed. Her boldness—including proudly wearing traditional African attire to celebrate Black History Month in a space unaccustomed to such pride—left a legacy of education and empowerment in the workplace.

Outside of corporate life, Ms. Buckman dedicated herself to community uplift. She served on the board of the Consortium of Information and Telecommunications Executives (CITE), helping to raise over 1.4 million dollars in scholarships for underserved students.

As a co-founder of Sisters Involved in Linking Knowledge (SILK), she helped create a powerful platform for youth and women in high-risk environments. SILK facilitated everything from STEM workshops and college panels to teen leadership conferences and volunteer programs that cultivated self-worth and future success. She also supported Sisters Involved in Nurturing (SATIN), an initiative focused on life skills and self-image development for young women transitioning into adulthood.

Ms. Buckman further served as president of The Regalettes for over 16 years. Founded in 1958, this organization has been rooted in service to the greater Los Angeles community for more than six decades. Under her leadership, The Regalettes awarded over 850,000 dollars in scholarships, hosted annual toy drives, and celebrated individuals who dedicated their lives to service and social impact.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me to celebrate Lois Jean Buckman as a woman of substance, vision and action. She has opened doors that were never meant to be closed again. Her courage, grace, and commitment to lifting others reflect the highest ideals of public service and private leadership.

RECOGNIZING THE 100TH BIRTHDAY OF HELEN DRAMER JARRELL

HON. MIKE ROGERS

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 24, 2025

Mr. ROGERS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the birthday of Helen Dramer Jarrell. Helen will turn 100 years old on July 3rd.

Helen Dramer Jarrell was born the eighth child of the nine children Ida Mae and Walter Hubert Waldrop on July 3, 1925. Helen had two sisters and six brothers.

On January 16, 1943, Helen married Efton Harrison. They were blessed with a baby girl, Helen Diane, on November 20, 1943. In 1945, Helen and Efton divorced, and she raised Diane on her own. On June 10, 1948, Helen remarried after meeting Jim Jarrell at work at the cotton mill. They were married for 55 years until Jim passed away in 2003.

Helen has always had a servant's heart. She cared for her mother until her passing and worked for many years at the Mary Brandon Nursing Home in Oxford, Alabama, as a nurse's aide. Helen has two grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and eight great-great grandchildren. After retiring from the nursing home, Helen helped raise her great-grandchildren and later helped at the Senior Center until she retired at 90 years old.

On March 13, 2011, her daughter passed away. In December, she moved into the Oxford House Apartments. She has made many friends in the past 14 years. She enjoys playing dominoes and exercising. Helen is a woman of faith and loves her family deeply.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in recognizing Helen on this milestone and wishing her a very happy 100th birthday.

HONORING SUSAN NEWHART ELLIOTT FOR HER SERVICE TO THE UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON SCHOOL OF LAW

HON. MICHAEL R. TURNER

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 24, 2025

Mr. TURNER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I want to honor a distinguished scholar from my Congressional district who is retiring after 31 years of service at the University of Dayton School of Law.

Susan Newhart Elliott has served as a professor at the School of Law since 1994, is Director of the Zimmerman Law Library, and also serves as the University of Dayton Law Review faculty advisor. Susan earned her law degree from the University of Dayton in 1987, and was the law review's Managing Editor while she was a student. She has taught numerous classes in addition to serving as an Assistant Dean.

Susan also holds a Bachelor's and a Master's degree from Miami University, as well as a Master's in Library and Information Science from Kent State University.

After receiving her law degree, Susan clerked for Judge Walter Rice of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Ohio for two years before joining the law firm Coolidge, Wall, Womsley & Lombard, where she concentrated in complex litigation. She has also been an English instructor at Miami University, Xavier University, and Wright State University.

As director of the Zimmerman Law Library, Susan has worked tirelessly to make certain that the library supports the school's mission of providing the highest quality of service to the law faculty and its students. This includes overseeing services to all library patrons, making sure the necessary books and electronic resources are available and accessible, and providing reference service seven days a week with a librarian who holds a Master's in library science and a law degree.

Susan has helped train the minds of the law school's best and brightest students. Graduates have gone on to lead successful lives serving their communities as attorneys, judicial clerks, members of distinguished law firms, legal counsel in state and federal agencies, and on my Congressional staff. Her work has been critical to the law school's growing reputation, as the University of Dayton School of Law is tied for third among Ohio's nine law schools according to the most recent U.S. News & World Report rankings.

For nearly 20 years, Susan has served as a reader for the Dayton Literary Peace Prize, evaluating nonfiction books submitted for consideration by the judges for the award. Inspired by the 1995 Dayton Peace Accords that ended the Bosnian War, the Dayton Literary Peace Prize is the only literary award in the United States that recognizes authors who utilize the power of the written word to promote peace.

In recognition of Susan's longstanding service and contributions to the legal profession, an endowment was created in her name to recruit legal scholars to write for the University of Dayton Law Review, as well as to support the law review in perpetuity.

Susan Newhart Elliott exemplifies all of the best qualities of a teacher, a scholar, and a public servant. She is a credit to her profession, and is loved and admired by her students, her colleagues, and her friends. I ask my colleagues to join me in thanking this truly outstanding citizen for her three decades of service to the University of Dayton School of Law. I wish her a happy, healthy, and productive retirement.

HONORING THE GOLDEN CELEBRATION FOR LOUELLA AVENT'S 85TH BIRTHDAY

HON. JONATHAN L. JACKSON

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 24, 2025

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor an extraordinary woman, Ms. Louella Avent, as she celebrates her 85th birthday. Though her official birthday was May 13, 1940, we joyously mark this milestone with a celebration on Saturday, June 7, at the Rose Room.

Born in Oxford, Mississippi, Ms. Avent was raised by dedicated farmers. For the past 65 years, Chicago has been her cherished second home. A lifelong learner, she graduated high school and continued her education at Loop College, now Harold Washington College. Her commitment to education continues even now as she embraces "senior life."
