RECOGNIZING NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK

(Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize National Library Week, celebrated April 19 to April 25. Since its establishment in 1958, National Library Week has served as an opportunity for us to acknowledge the essential role libraries play in our communities.

This year’s theme, “Find Your Joy,” encourages Americans to discover the new books, spaces, and programs offered at their local libraries.

With more than 100,000 libraries across the United States, these institutions are the cornerstone of our neighborhoods.

Librarians are there for us at every stage of life. From helping young students to read to assisting adults with research, library staff provide the support that individuals in our communities need.

As part of the weeklong celebration, today is National Library Workers Day. I strongly encourage everyone to thank a librarian for their dedicated service and the expertise they provide.

Mr. Speaker, librarians are pivotal to the success of many individuals, and I thank them for their commitment to public service.

CALLING ATTENTION TO FEMA WORKFORCE

(Mr. LATIMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LATIMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call attention to the workforce cuts taking place at FEMA.

We all remember the images from Hurricane Sandy—Coney Island torn apart in our backyard in the New York area, families climbing onto rooftops to escape rising floodwaters.

We remember the lessons of the California wildfires, when entire neighborhoods were crumbled.

We remember the parents in Texas who never got to pick up their daughters after a mudslide overtook their summer camp.

These are real devastations, not hypotheticals, and they are growing in strength and frequency. Yet, this administration is diminishing the very workforce that is tasked with helping survivors rebuild, even questioning the value of the assistance FEMA provided when people had nothing left.

We must urge this administration to protect its essential workforce and pray that no community we call home is vulnerable when the next disaster strikes.

RECOGNIZING JEFFREY WANAMAKER ON HIS RETIREMENT

(Mr. LAWLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and congratulate Clarkstown Police Chief Jeff Wanamaker on his retirement after nearly four decades of service to the town of Clarkstown and Rockland County.

Beginning his law enforcement career with the Clarkstown Police Department in 1987, he rose through every rank of the department, serving as a patrol officer, field training officer, detective, sergeant, lieutenant, captain, and, ultimately, chief. He also served as a volunteer firefighter.

A graduate of Nyack High School, SUNY Oneonta, Seton Hall University, and the FBI National Police Academy, Chief Wanamaker served with distinction on the department’s honor guard, leading with the simple principle of community first.

Chief Wanamaker’s career reflects the very best of law enforcement. A devoted family man and respected leader, he has spent his entire adult life protecting others.

Mr. Speaker, I join the people of Clarkstown in thanking him for his extraordinary service and wish him and his family all the best in a well-earned retirement. I thank my friend for his many years of dedicated service. God bless him.

(Ms. BUDZINSKI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. BUDZINSKI. Mr. Speaker, today, I rise to honor the remarkable life and legacy of Barbara Flynn Currie.

Barbara was nothing short of extraordinary, a true trailblazer in every
