ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

REMEMBERING DR. ELIJAH WASHINGTON

• Mr. SCOTT of South Carolina. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the extraordinary life of Dr. Elijah Washington, a native son of South Carolina, who dedicated his life to healing bodies and nurturing souls in Beaufort County.

Dr. Washington, who passed at the age of 83, exemplified the highest ideals of service to his community and country. Rising from humble beginnings in Sheldon, SC, he pursued excellence in education at Morehouse College and Meharry Medical College before embarking on a medical career that would touch thousands of lives.

In the early 1970s, Dr. Washington made a choice that would define his legacy when, after serving in the U.S. Navy, he returned home and served the people of rural Beaufort County with the Beaufort Jasper Hampton Comprehensive Health Services. At a time when malnutrition and healthcare disparities plagued these communities, Dr. Washington answered the call.

Not only did he deliver more than 10,000 babies during his career in Beaufort County, for almost a decade, he was the only obstetrician-gynecologist at the clinic in Sheldon. Dr. Washington's impact extended beyond the delivery room. When he joined the staff at Beaufort Memorial Hospital, he rose to become chief of staff and played a critical role in integrating the hospital's medical staff. He mentored countless young physicians, setting an example by treating every patient with dignity and compassion. Today, the BJHCHS clinic in Sheldon bears his name, a lasting testament to a man who made a difference in the Lowcountry.

In addition to the medical field, he also lived out his calling in ministry. He not only tended to the physical ailments of the community, but as the pastor at First African Baptist Church on St. Helena Island, he tended to people's spiritual needs as well.

South Carolina has lost a giant, and I ask my colleagues to join me in expressing our deepest condolences to Dr. Washington's family and in celebrating a life extraordinarily well-lived in service to others.●

TRIBUTE TO ROBIN KILLEEN

• Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, on behalf of the people of Mississippi, I commend Robin Killeen for more than 26 years of dedicated service to her community. The residents of Mississippi's gulf coast are better off because Robin has creatively and persistently extended a hand to those in need.

A Pearl River County native, Robin Killeen devoted her career to meeting the staffing requirements of various companies. In 1999, she turned her talents in another direction. Robin founded Women of Wisdom, an organization that helps women uplift one another up through their faith, fellowship, and service. Since Robin launched Women of Wisdom, it has become a pillar of strength and wellbeing in south Mississippi.

It is in Robin's nature to continue improving. She has expanded the resources offered by Women of Wisdom to include "The Care Closet," a wardrobe filled with free clothing available to women in times of financial need. Robin has also pursued a holistic vision for uplifting Mississippi women, including a wellness group that improves physical, spiritual, and mental wellbeing. She has also extended the reach of her nonprofit by partnering with others in the Mississippi community, including Advocates for Freedom and Women's Resource Center. Through this collaboration, she is able to help men, women, and children in need.

As impactful as her work with Women of Wisdom has been, Robin has gone even further, embracing leadership roles in several community organizations. She has served as executive president of the Biloxi Bay Chamber of Commerce, as a member of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce, as ambassador chairperson for the Mississippi Gulf Coast Chamber of Commerce, and as a leader with the Unified Coast Prayer Movement.

Robin moved to the coast in 1986 and currently resides in Gulfport, MS, with her husband Pat Killeen. They are proud parents of two children and are thrilled to dote on five wonderful grandchildren.

Robin Killeen's unrelenting dedication to community service represents the best of our State. I join my fellow Mississippians in thanking her for a quarter-century of meaningful contributions and lasting impact.●
