Title 3—The President

PROCLAMATION 4523

National School Lunch Week, 1977

By the President of the United States of America

A Proclamation

Since 1946, the National School Lunch Program has been serving nutritious lunches to the school children of America. In its first year, the program served lunch to 6 million children daily; today nearly 25 million children in 92,600 schools and residential child care institutions take advantage of this program every day. Lunches under this program are available to 94 percent of all children attending public schools in America.

As the program begins its fourth decade, its dedicated workers are making a significant effort to improve the nutritional quality and appeal of the food while developing menus in keeping with the changing tastes of our children. Those involved in the program maintain their commitment to recognize the children's needs in order to serve them better.

In recognition of the program's contribution to America's youth, the Congress, by a joint resolution of October 9, 1962 (76 Stat. 779; 36 U.S.C. 168), has designated the week beginning the second Sunday of October of each year as National School Lunch Week, and has requested the President to issue annually a proclamation calling for its appropriate observance.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, JIMMY CARTER, President of the United States of America, do hereby urge the people of the United States to observe the week of October 9, 1977, as National School Lunch Week and to give special recognition to the role of good nutrition in building a stronger America through its youth.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this twenty-second day of September, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred seventy-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and second.

Jimmy Carter

Eligibility of Chad To Make Purchases of Defense Articles and Defense Services Under the Arms Export Control Act, as Amended

[Presidential Determination No. 77-20]

Memorandum for the Secretary of State

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, September 1, 1977.

Pursuant to the authority vested in me by Section 3(a)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act, as amended, I hereby find that the sale of defense articles and defense services to the Government of Chad will strengthen the security of the United States and promote world peace.

You are directed on my behalf to report this finding to the Congress.

This finding, which amends Presidential Determination No. 73-10 of January 2, 1973 (38 FR 7211), as amended by Presidential Determinations No. 73-12 of April 26, 1973 (38 FR 12799), No. 74-9 of December 13, 1973 (39 FR 3537), No. 75-2 of October 29, 1974 (39 FR 39863), No. 75-21 of May 20, 1975 (40 FR 24889), No. 76-1 of August 5, 1975 (40 FR 37205), No. 76-11 of March 25, 1976 (41 FR 14163), No. 76-12 of April 14, 1976 (41 FR 18281), No. 77-5 of November 5, 1976 (41 FR 50625), and No. 77-17 of August 1, 1977 (42 FR 40169), shall be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

Title 7—Agriculture

CHAPTER IX—AGRICULTURAL MARKETING SERVICE (MARKETING AGREEMENTS AND ORDERS; FRUITS, VEGETABLES, NUTS), DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

PART 910—LEMONS GROWN IN CALIFORNIA AND ARIZONA

Minimum Size Requirement

AGENCY: Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This regulation continues the minimum size requirement, currently in effect through September 24, 1977, during the period September 25, 1977, through September 23, 1978. The minimum size requirement for lemons is continued at 1.82 inches in diameter (size 235's in cartons). This requirement is needed to provide orderly marketing in the interest of producers and consumers.

EFFECTIVE DATES: September 25, 1977, through September 23, 1978.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Charles R. Brader, Deputy Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, telephone 202–447–3545.

SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION: Notice was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on August 30, 1977 (42 FR 43639), that consideration was being given to the establishment of a size regulation for lemons grown in California and Arizona under the applicable provisions of the marketing agreement and Order No. 910, both as amended (7 CFR Part 910), regulating the handling of lemons grown in California and Arizona. This marketing order program is effective under the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended (7 U.S.C. 601–674). The regulation was recommended by the Lemon Administrative Committee, established under the amended marketing agreement and order as the agency to administer the terms and provisions thereof. The notice provided that written comments in connection with the proposed regulation be submitted by September 14, 1977. None were received.

Shipments of lemons from the production area are now in progress, and such shipments are regulated by size through September 24, 1977, under Lemon Regulation 57 (41 FR 41918), which requires such lemons to be at least 1.82 inches in diameter. The regulation, which would become effective September 25, 1977, would continue in effect this size requirement. The volume and size composition of the lemon crop in California and Arizona is such that ample supplies of the more desirable sizes are available to satisfy the demand in domestic fresh markets. The proposed regulation is designed to permit shipment of ample supplies of lemons of acceptable sizes, maturity, and juice content in the interest of both growers and consumers, and is necessary to maintain orderly marketing conditions and provide consumer satisfaction. Sales opportunities for very small fresh lemons in domestic markets are quite limited, as they have relatively low juice yields. Lemons failing to meet the minimum size requirement could be shipped to fresh export markets, left on the trees to attain further growth, or utilized in processing. The regulation is consistent with the objective of the act of promoting orderly marketing and protecting the interest of consumers.

After consideration of all relevant matters presented, including the proposals set forth in the notice and other available information, it is found that the regulation of shipments of lemons, as set forth in this regulation, is in accordance with the amended marketing agreement and order and will tend to effectuate the declared policy of the act.

It is further found that good cause exists for making this regulation effective at the time hereinafter set forth and for not postponing the effective date until 30 days after publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER (5 U.S.C. 553) in that (1) notice of proposed rulemaking concerning this regulation was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, and no objection to the regulation or its effective date was received; (2) the regulatory provisions are the same as those contained in the notice and are currently in effect through September 24, 1977; and (3) compliance with this regulation will not require any special preparation on the part of persons subject thereto which cannot be completed by the effective time hereof.

§ 910.411 Lemon Regulation 111.

(a) Order. From September 25, 1977, through September 23, 1978, no handler shall handle any lemons grown in District 1, District 2, or District 3 which are of a size smaller than 1.82 inches in diameter, which shall be the largest measurement at a right angle to a straight line running from the stem to the blossom end of the fruit: Provided, That not to exceed 5 percent, by count, of the lemons in any type of container may measure smaller than 1.82 inches in diameter.

(b) As used in this section, "handle", "handler", "District 1", "District 2", and "District 3" shall have the same meaning as when used in said amended marketing agreement and order.

(Secs. 1–19, 48 Stat. 31, as amended; 7 U.S.C. 601–674.)

Dated: September 22, 1977, to become effective September 25, 1977.

CHARLES R. BRADER,
Deputy Director, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Agricultural Marketing Service.

Title 8—Aliens and Nationality

CHAPTER I—IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

PART 341—CERTIFICATE OF CITIZENSHIP

Suspension of Regulatory Provision

AGENCY: Immigration and Naturalization Service, Justice.

ACTION: Final rule, extension of suspension of rule.

SUMMARY: This notice further suspends until April 1, 1978, the special procedure provided in 8 CFR 341.1(b) which permits certain naturalization applicants to make application for certificates of citizenship for their children who are under 16 years of age and will derive citizenship under sections 320 and 321 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, in advance of the naturalization of the parents. This further suspension is necessitated by manpower considerations in the Service.

EFFECTIVE DATE: October 1, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Lowell R. Palmes, Deputy Assistant Commissioner for Naturalization, Immigration and Naturalization Service, 425 Eye Street, NW., Washington, D.C. 20536, telephone 202–376–8459.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On September 1, 1970, the Service implemented a procedure whereby applicants for naturalization who believed that their children under 16 years of age would derive United States citizenship under section 320 or 321 of the Immigration and Nationality Act could apply for certificates of citizenship on behalf of such children in advance of the parents' naturalization. However, due to manpower considerations which arose subsequently, it became necessary to suspend the operation of this procedure by notices published in the FEDERAL REGISTER October 21, 1974 (39 FR 37355), September 15, 1975 (40 FR 42532), March 17, 1976 (41 FR 11172), October 1, 1976 (41 FR 43393) and March 28, 1977 (42 FR 16378). The provisions now stand suspended to October 1, 1977.

Due to the continuing manpower considerations which resulted in the temporary suspension of the special procedure provided by 8 CFR 341.1(b) as set forth in the above-cited prior notices, it is necessary to suspend the provisions of § 341.1(b) for an additional period, until April 1, 1978, unless manpower considerations render feasible or practicable their reinstitution at an earlier date.

In the light of the foregoing, the provisions of 8 CFR 341.1(b) are hereby suspended until April 1, 1978, unless the suspension is revoked prior thereto by notice published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

Dated: September 20, 1977.

LEONEL J. CASTILLO,
Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization.

Title 12—Banks and Banking

CHAPTER III—FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

PART 303—APPLICATIONS, REQUESTS AND SUBMITTALS

AGENCY: Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation revises its regulations on application procedures to include applications for mergers or assumption transactions within the current procedures applied to all other application proceedings. The amendment is intended to provide a uniformity in the application procedures of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

DATE: Effective September 26, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Douglas H. Jones, Legal Division, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, 550 17th Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20429 (202-389-4433).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Section 303.14 of the rules and regulations of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") provides the procedures for application for deposit insurance by proposed new banks, and for de novo branches or office relocations by insured State nonmember banks. Applications to merge or to consolidate, or to acquire the assets of and to assume the liability to pay deposits made in other banks have not been subject to the requirements of section 303.14. In order to present a uniform application process, all applications to merge or to consolidate or for assumption transactions, which require FDIC approval, will be subject to the procedures of section 303.14. These include: (1) Procedures for the processing of the applications; (2) the requirement of publication of notice of the filing of applications; (3) the establishment of public files for the applications; and (4) procedures whereby interested persons may make their views on applications known. For the most part, these procedures are currently applied informally to merger applications considered by the FDIC. This amendment shall be effective immediately for all new applications for mergers which are received.

These revisions are authorized under paragraphs "Seventh" and "Tenth" of section 9 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1819 "Seventh" and "Tenth"), and the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)).

Because this amendment merely represents a formal adoption of policies and procedures that are currently practiced and its promulgation benefits the public, the Board of Directors of the FDIC has determined, under § 302.6 of the rules and regulations of the FDIC (12 CFR 302.6), that notice of and public participation in this rulemaking is unnecessary and that good cause exists for the waiver of the thirty day deferral of the amendments' effective date.

In consideration of the foregoing, Part 303 of 12 CFR, Chapter III, is amended by revising paragraphs (a), (b), and (c)(1)(iii) of § 303.14 to read as follows:

§ 303.14 Application procedures.

(a) Scope of section. This section applies to: (1) Applications for deposit insurance by proposed new banks; (2) applications by insured State nonmember banks to establish branches; (3) applications by insured State nonmember banks to relocate their main offices or branch offices; (4) applications to merge or to consolidate with, acquire the assets of, or assume the liability to pay any deposits made in, a bank or institution, when the resulting or assuming bank is to be an insured State nonmember bank, and all other applications to merge or to consolidate with, or to assume liabilities, which require the Corporation's prior approval under the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)); [11e] and (5) any other applications, requests or submittals which the Board of Directors in its sole discretion deems appropriate. In the case of applications, requests, or submittals which come within the fifth category, the applicant will be notified at the time its application is accepted for filing that the procedures set forth in this section shall be followed in connection therewith.

(b) Notice of filing of application—(1) Notice by publication. (i) In the case of "merger transaction" applications (as defined by the Bank Merger Act, 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(3)), unless the Board of Directors determines it must act immediately in order to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks involved, the applicant must publish notice of the proposed transaction. This notice shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the community or communities where the main offices of the banks or institutions involved are located, or, if there is no such newspaper in the community, then in the newspaper of general circulation published nearest thereto. Publication shall be made at least once each week on the same day for five consecutive weeks and, when published in a daily newspaper, one additional publication shall be made on the thirtieth day from the date of the first publication. Where the Board of Directors of the Corporation determines that an emergency exists which requires expeditious action, then notice shall be required to be published daily during a period of at least 10 calendar days. The published notice shall include the name and main office location of all banks or institutions involved in the transaction and the subject matter of the application. If it is contemplated that the continuing bank will operate the offices of the other bank or banks as branches, the following statement shall be added to the notice:

It is contemplated that all of the offices of the above named banks will continue to be operated (with the exception of [identity and location of each office which will not be operated]).

(ii) In the case of all other applications, within 15 days after the Regional Director has notified the applicant in writing that an application has been accepted for filing, the applicant shall publish one time in a newspaper of general circulation in the community in which the applicant proposes to engage in business notice of the proposed transaction. The published notice shall include the name of the applicant, the subject matter of the application, the location or locations at which the applicant proposes to engage in business, and the date upon which the application was accepted for filing. (iii) In all instances, immediately after final publication, the applicant shall furnish the Regional Director with a certificate from the publisher and a tear sheet or clipping evidencing the publication.

(2) Comments and protests. Anyone who wishes to comment on an application may do so by filing his comments in writing with the Regional Director. Anyone who wishes to protest the granting of the application has a right to do so if he files a written notice of his intent with the Regional Director within 15 days of the date of publication of the notice described in paragraph (b)(1)(ii) or, in the case of merger transaction applications, within 15 days of the last publication of the notice required by paragraph (b)(1)(i).

[11e] Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(1), the provisions of this § 303.14 shall not be applicable to any proposed merger or assumption transaction which the Board of Directors of the Corporation determines must be acted upon immediately to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks involved or must be handled with expeditious action due to an existing emergency condition, as permitted by the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(6)).

(3) Notice of right to comment or protest. In order to fully apprise the public of its rights under paragraph (b)(2), the notice described in paragraph (b)(1) shall include a statement describing the right to comment upon or protest the granting of the application.

(i) In the case of merger transaction applications this notice shall consist of the following statement:

Any person wishing to comment on this application may file his comments in writing with the Regional Director of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation at its Regional Office (address of the Regional Office). If any person desires to protest the granting of this application he has a right to do so if he files a written notice of his intent with the Regional Director by (the fifteenth day following the last date of required publication). The nonconfidential portions of the application are on file in the Regional Office as part of the public file maintained by the Corporation. This file is available for public inspection during regular business hours.

(ii) In the case of all other applications, the notice shall include the following statement:

Any person wishing to comment on this application may file his comments in writing with the Regional Director of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation at its Regional Office (address of the Regional Office). If any person desires to protest the granting of this application he has a right to do so if he files a written notice of his intent with the Regional Director within 15 days of the date of this publication. The nonconfidential portions of the application are on file in the Regional Office as part of the public file maintained by the Corporation. This file is available for public inspection during regular business hours.

(4) Solicitation of comments by Regional Director. Whenever he deems it appropriate, the Regional Director may solicit comments from any person or institution which, in his opinion, might have an interest in or be affected by the pending application.

(c) Public file.—(1) * * *

(iii) Those portions of the investigation report prepared by the Corporation's field examiner in connection with the application which cover the convenience and needs of the community to be served by the applicant or applicants and either the future earnings prospects or the future prospects of the applicant or applicants.

Title 14—Aeronautics and Space

CHAPTER I—FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION, DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

[Docket No. 77-CE-19-AD; Amendment 39-3042]

PART 39—AIRWORTHINESS DIRECTIVES

Beech 18 Series Airplanes

AGENCY: Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), DOT.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This amendment adopts a new Airworthiness Directive (AD), applicable to all Beech 18 series airplanes, which requires repetitive inspections of the pilot's and copilot's control column and the elevator control arm assembly for the detection of cracks and their correction. This action will assure continued structural integrity of these components and will prevent possible failures which can have an adverse effect on aircraft controllability.

DATES: Effective date, September 29, 1977. Compliance schedule, within 30 days after the effective date of this AD and each 300 hours time-in-service or 12-calendar months thereafter whichever occurs first.

ADDRESSES: Beechcraft Service Instructions No. 0889-155, applicable to this AD, may be obtained from Beech Aircraft Corporation, Commercial Service Department, 9709 East Central, P.O. Box 85, Wichita, Kans. 67201. A copy of the service instructions cited above is contained in the Rules Docket, Room 916, 800 Independence Avenue SW., Washington, D.C., and Office of the Regional Counsel, Room 1558, 601 East 12th Street, Kansas City, Mo. 64106.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

William L. Schroeder, Aerospace Engineer, Engineering and Manufacturing Branch, FAA, Central Region, 601 East 12th Street, Kansas City, Mo. 64106; telephone (816-374-3446).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: There have been reports of the pilot's control column and the elevator control arm cracking and failing on Beech 18 series airplanes. The cracks were initiated by loads from wind gusts striking the ailerons and elevators while the airplanes are on the ground. These cracks, if not detected and corrected, can result in failure of the control columns and/or elevator control arm. These failures can cause the existence of unsafe conditions since pilots may lose the use of the primary aileron and/or elevator control and have to fly the airplane using the aileron or elevator trim system. The FAA does not require pilots to demonstrate ability to fly their airplanes using only the trim systems. Furthermore, failure of an aileron or elevator primary control system at low altitudes may not allow a pilot sufficient time to determine what the problem is and begin flying using the appropriate trim system. Subsequent to its investigation, the manufacturer issued Beechcraft Service Instructions No. 0889-155 recommending repetitive inspections of the control columns and the elevator control arm for cracks. The FAA has concluded that cracking of the control columns or the elevator control arm is an unsafe condition that may exist or develop in other airplanes of the same type design. Accordingly, an AD is being issued, applicable to all Beech 18 series airplanes including military models and airplanes modified in accordance with supplemental type certificates. The AD will require initial inspection of the control columns and the elevator control arm assembly for cracks within 30 days after the effective date of the AD and repetitive inspection each 300 hours time-in-service or each 12 calendar months thereafter whichever occurs first. The initial compliance time noted in the AD is based on calendar time rather than airplane total flight hours time-in-service because the cracks are initiated and may be propagated by wind gusts that strike the airplane when it is on the ground. Obviously, these wind gusts are unrelated to airplane flight time. The repetitive inspection time interval is based on both airplane flight time and calendar time since propagation of the cracks after initiation may also be related to aircraft operation. The FAA has coordinated this document with the manufacturer prior to its issuance. The FAA has determined that there is an immediate need for a regulation to assure safe operation of the affected airplanes. Therefore, notice and public procedure under 5 U.S.C. 553(b) is impracticable and contrary to the public interest and good cause exists for making the amendment effective in less than thirty (30) days after the date of publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

ADOPTION OF THE AMENDMENT

Accordingly and pursuant to the authority delegated to me by the Administrator, Sec. 39.13 of the Federal Aviation Regulations (14 CFR sec. 39.13) is amended by adding the following new AD:

BEECH: Applies to all Beech 18 series airplanes, including all military counterparts thereof and those Beech 18 series airplanes modified in accordance with supplemental type certificates.

COMPLIANCE: Required as indicated unless already accomplished as specified below.

To detect any cracking of the pilot's and copilot's control column and the elevator control arm assembly, within 30 days after the effective date of this AD and each 300 hours time-in-service or 12 calendar months thereafter, whichever occurs first, accomplish the following in accordance with Beechcraft Service Instructions No. 0889-155 or later approved revisions and in accordance with the additional requirements of Paragraph A. below:

A. Referring to Figure 1 of this AD inspect the areas identified as "A" and "B" on the pilot's and copilot's control column assembly for cracks using visual and either magnetic particle, or penetrant procedures. Repair or replace any cracked control column components, using airworthy parts, prior to the next flight.

B. Referring to Figure 1 of this AD inspect the Beech P/N 187504 elevator control arm assembly for cracks using penetrant procedures. Special attention should be given to the area around the taper pins. Replace any cracked P/N 187504 elevator control arm with an airworthy component prior to the next flight.

C. Within one week after any crack is found during the above-noted inspections, submit a written report to the FAA via an FAA M or D Report (FAA Form 8330-2) or a letter to Chief, Engineering and Manufacturing Branch (ACE-210), FAA, 601 East 12th Street, Kansas City, Missouri 64106. This report must include identification of the part that is cracked, the length and location of each crack, hours total time-in-service on the cracked component, and the aircraft serial number. (Reporting approved by Office of Management and Budget under OMB No. 04-R0174.)

D. Aircraft may be flown in accordance with FAR 21.197 to a base where this AD can be accomplished.

E. The interval for the repetitive inspections set forth in this AD may be extended 30 hours up to a maximum of 330 hours time-in-service or, if applicable, one calendar month up to a maximum of 13 calendar months to allow compliance at previously scheduled maintenance periods.

F. Any equivalent method of compliance with this AD must be approved by the Chief, Engineering and Manufacturing Branch, FAA, Central Region.

This amendment becomes effective on September 29, 1977.

(Secs. 313(a), 601 and 603 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended (49 U.S.C. 1354(a), 1421 and 1423); sec. 6(c) Department of Transportation Act (49 U.S.C. 1655 (c)); sec. 11.89 of the Federal Aviation Regulations (14 CFR sec. 11.89).)

NOTE.—The Federal Aviation Administration has determined that this document does not contain a major proposal requiring preparation of an Economic Impact Statement under Executive Order 11821, as amended by Executive Order 11949, and OMB Circular A-107.

Issued in Kansas City, Mo., on September 15, 1977.

PART 71—DESIGNATION OF FEDERAL AIRWAYS, AREA LOW ROUTES, CONTROLLED AIRSPACE, AND REPORTING POINTS

Alteration of Transition Area, Fulton, Mo.

AGENCY: Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), DOT.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: The nature of this federal action is to designate a transition area at Fulton, Missouri, to provide controlled airspace for aircraft executing a new instrument procedure to the Fulton Municipal Airport which is based on a VORTAC at Hallsville, Missouri.

EFFECTIVE DATE: December 1, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: A new instrument approach procedure to the Fulton, Missouri, Municipal Airport has been established based on the Hallsville, Missouri, VORTAC. This navigational aid will provide new guidance for aircraft utilizing this airport. The establishment of an instrument approach procedure based on the navigational aid entails the designation of a transition area at Fulton, Missouri, at and above 700 feet above the ground (AGL) within which aircraft are provided air traffic control service. The intended effect of this action is to insure adequate controlled airspace for aircraft executing this new instrument approach procedure.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal authors of this document are Dwaine E. Hiland, Operations, Procedures and Airspace Branch, Air Traffic Division and John L. Fitzgerald, Jr., Office of the Regional Counsel.

DISCUSSION OF COMMENTS

On pages 18861 and 18862 of the FEDERAL REGISTER dated April 11, 1977, the Federal Aviation Administration published a notice of proposed rulemaking which would amend Section 71.181 of Part 71 of the Federal Aviation Regulations so as to designate a transition area at Fulton, Missouri. Interested persons were invited to participate in this rulemaking proceeding by submitting written comments on the proposal to the FAA. No objections were received as a result of the Notice of Proposed Rule Making.

Accordingly, Subpart G, Section 71.181 of the Federal Aviation Regulations (14 CFR 71.181) as republished on January 3, 1977 (42 FR 440), is amended, effective 0901 G.m.t. December 1, 1977, by adding the following transition area to read:

FULTON, MISSOURI

That airspace extending upward from 700' above the surface within a 5 mile radius of the Fulton Municipal Airport (latitude 38°50'22" N., longitude 092°00'17" W.), and within 2 miles each side of the Hallsville, Missouri, VORTAC 154° radial; extending from the 5 mile radius area to 6 miles northwest of the Fulton Municipal Airport, excluding the portion which overlies the Columbia, Missouri, 700' floor transition area.

SUBCHAPTER F—AIR TRAFFIC AND GENERAL OPERATING RULES

[Docket No. 17226; Amdt. No. 1091]

PART 97—STANDARD INSTRUMENT APPROACH PROCEDURES

Miscellaneous Amendments

AGENCY: Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), DOT.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This amendment establishes, amends, suspends, or revokes Standard Instrument Approach Procedures (SIAPs) for operations at certain airports. These regulatory actions are needed because of the adoption of new or revised criteria, or beacuse of changes occurring in the National Airspace System, such as the commissioning of new navigational facilities, addition of new obstacles, or changes in air traffic requirements. These changes are designed to provide safe and efficient use of the navigable airspace and to promote safe flight operations under instrument flight rules at the affected airports.

DATES: An effective date for each SIAP is specified in the amendatory provisions.

FOR EXAMINATION

1. FAA Rules Docket, FAA Headquarters Building, 800 Independence Avenue, SW., Washington, D.C. 20591;

2. The FAA Regional Office of the region in which the affected airport is located; or

3. The Flight Inspection Field Office which originated the SIAP.

FOR PURCHASE

Individual SIAP copies may be obtained from:

1. FAA Public Information Center (APA-430), FAA Headquarters Building, 800 Independence Avenue, SW., Washington, D.C. 20591; or

2. The FAA Regional Office of the region in which the affected airport is located.

BY SUBSCRIPTION

Copies of all SIAPs, mailed weekly, may be ordered from Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The current annual subscription price is $150.00; add $30.00 for each additional copy mailed to the same address.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

William L. Bersch, Flight Procedures and Airspace Branch (AFS-730), Aircraft Programs Division, Flight Standards Service, Federal Aviation Administration, 800 Independence Avenue, SW., Washington, D.C. 20591; telephone (202-426-8277).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This amendment to Part 97 of the Federal Aviation Regulations (14 CFR Part 9) prescribes new, amended, suspended, or revoked Standard Instrument Approach Procedures (SIAPs). The complete regulatory description of each SIAP is contained in official FAA form documents which are incorporated by reference in this amendment under 5 U.S.C. 552(a), 1 CFR Part 51, and § 97.20 of the Federal Aviation Regulations (FARs). The applicable FAA forms are identified as FAA Forms 8260-3, 8260-4 and 8260-5. Materials incorporated by reference are available for examination or purchase as stated above.

The large number of SIAPs, their complex nature, and the need for a special format make their verbatim publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER expensive and impractical. Further, airmen do not use the regulatory text of the SIAPs but refer to their graphic depiction on charts printed by publishers of aeronautical materials. Thus, the advantages of incorporation by reference are realized and publication of the complete description of each SIAP contained in FAA form document is unnecessary. The provisions of this amendment state the affected CFR (and FAR) sections, with the types and effective dates of the SIAPs. This amendment also identifies the airport, its location, the procedure identification and the amendment number.

This amendment to Part 97 is effective on the date of publication and contains separate SIAPs which have compliance dates stated as effective dates based on related changes in the National Airspace System or the application of new or revised criteria. Some SIAP amendments may have been previously issued by the FAA in a National Flight Data Center (FDC) Notice to Airmen (NOTAM) as an emergency action of immediate flight safety relating directly to published aeronautical charts. The circumstances which created the need for some SIAP amendments may require making them effective in less than 30 days. For the remaining SIAPs, an effective date at least 30 days after publication is provided.

Further, the SIAPs contained in this amendment are based on the criteria contained in the U.S. Standard for Terminal Instrument Approach Procedures (TERPS). In developing these SIAPS, the TERPS criteria were applied to the conditions existing or anticipated at the affected airports. Because of the close and immediate relationship between these SIAPs and safety in air commerce, I find that notice and public procedure before adopting these SIAPs is unnecessary, impracticable, or contrary to the public interest and, where applicable, that good cause exists for making some SIAPs effective in less than 30 days.

CHAPTER II—CONSUMER PRODUCT SAFETY COMMISSION

PART 1012—MEETINGS: ADVANCE PUBLIC NOTICE, PUBLIC ATTENDANCE, AND RECORDKEEPING

AGENCY: Consumer Product Safety Commission.

ACTION: Final amendment of rule.

SUMMARY: This document makes an amendment to the Commission's meeting policy (16 CFR 1012) regarding advance notice of meetings between individual Commissioners or Agency staff and outside parties. When amending the meetings policy to implement Pub. L. 94–409, the Government in the Sunshine Act (42 FR 14683, March 16, 1977), the Commission determined that the requirement for advance public notice of meetings covered by the policy would be satisfied by publication of the notice in the printed public calendar or by entering the notice on the master calendar. Prior to that time, only publication satisfied the notice requirement. However, due to an oversight, the language of § 1012.5(b) was not changed to conform to the new procedure. Accordingly, this amendment clarifies the meetings policy by revising the language of § 1012.5(b) to provide that notice of meetings must be published in the printed public calendar or entered on the master calendar at least seven days before the meeting.

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 26, 1977. For further information contact; David Melnick, Office of General Counsel, Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207 (202–634–7770).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Commission has determined that since this amendment is a rule of agency procedure, and further, is in the nature of a clarification of a previously published rule, the notice and public procedure provisions of 5 U.S.C. 553 are inapplicable. Further, the delay in the effective date required by 5 U.S.C. 553 would be impracticable. Accordingly, good cause exists to dispense with the notice and public procedure on this amendment and further to make this amendment effective upon publication.

Accordingly, § 1012.5(b) of Title 16, Chapter II, Subchapter A of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended by revising subparagraph (1) (i) (A) to read as follows:

§ 1012.5 Recordkeeping categories.

(a) * * *

(1) Notice. (i) (A) Notice of Agency meetings with outside parties involving substantial interest matters shall be published in the public calendar or enter on the master calendar at least seven days before a meeting. Any agency employee planning to host or attend such meeting must notify the Office of the Secretary as provided in § 1012.3(a)(4). Once notification has been made, Agency employees subsequently desiring to attend the meeting need not notify the Office of the Secretary.

Title 32—National Defense

CHAPTER VI—DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY

SUBCHAPTER B—NAVIGATION

PART 706—CERTIFICATIONS AND EXEMPTIONS UNDER THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA, 1972

Miscellaneous Amendments

AGENCY: Department of the Navy, DOD.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: The purpose of this rule is to amend Part 706 to reflect that authority to certify those vessels of the Navy which cannot comply fully with certain provisions of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1972 (72 COLREGS) is now granted by the International Navigational Rules Act of 1977, in addition to Executive Order 11964 of January 19, 1977 to the Secretary of the Navy. This rule further amends Part 706 to include notice that USS Oliver Hazard Perry (FFG–7) is a vessel of the Navy which, due to its special construction and purpose, cannot comply fully with certain provisions of the 72 COLREGS without interfering with its special function. The intended effect of this rule is to warn mariners on international waters.

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 25, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Lieutenant M. D. Seiders, JAGC, USN, Admiralty Division, Office of the Judge Advocate General, Navy Department, Washington, D.C. 20370 (202-694-5188).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This amendment of Part 706 is necessary because Pub. L. 95-75, the "International Navigational Rules Act of 1977," became law on July 27, 1977. Section 6 of that law allows the Secretary of the Navy to certify that a vessel of the Navy, because of its special construction or purpose, cannot comply fully with certain provisions of the 72 COLREGS without interfering with the special function of that vessel. Section 6 of Pub. L. 95-75 provides that any requirement of the 72 COLREGS with respect to the number, position, range or arc of visibility of lights, with respect to shapes, or with respect to the disposition and characteristics of sound-signalling appliances, shall not be applicable to a vessel of special construction or purpose, whenever the Secretary of the Navy, for any vessel of the Navy, shall certify that the vessel cannot comply fully with that requirement without interfering with the special function of the vessel. Notice of any such certification issued must be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER. Since Part 706 currently makes reference to certifications issued only under E.O. 11964, it is necessary to amend that Part to reflect that Pub. L. 95-75 also provides authority under which certifications are issued.

This amendment also provides notice that the Secretary of the Navy has certified that USS Oliver Hazard Perry (FFG-7) is a vessel of the Navy which, due to its special construction and purpose, cannot comply fully with 72 COLREGS Rule 21(a) regarding the arc of visibility of its forward masthead light; 72 COLREGS Annex I, Section 2(a)(i), regarding the height above the hull of its forward masthead light; and 72 COLREGS Annex I, Section 3(b), regarding the horizontal relationship of its sidelights to its forward masthead light, without interfering with its special function. The Secretary of the Navy has also certified that the above-mentioned lights are located in closest possible compliance with the applicable 72 COLREGS requirements.

Finally, this amendment provides notice that the Secretary of the Navy has exempted USS Oliver Hazard Perry from full compliance with certain provisions of the 72 COLREGS pursuant to 72 COLREGS Rule 38 and by authority of Executive Order 11964. The Secretary of the Navy finds that the keel of USS Oliver Hazard Perry was laid prior to July 15, 1977, and that the vessel complies with the requirements of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1960.

Since this amendment pertains to a military and foreign-affairs function of the United States, the rule making requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, 32 CFR Part 706 is amended as follows:

1. The table of contents for § 706.2 and authority cite in Part 706 is revised as follows:

Regulated Navigation Area, Kittery, Maine

AGENCY: Coast Guard, DOT.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This amendment establishes a regulated navigation area adjacent to the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard on Seavey Island, Kittery, Maine. This regulation is needed to provide a safe area for floating crane operations by restricting the speed of transiting vessels to 5 mph.

EFFECTIVE DATE: October 26, 1977.

Captain George K. Greiner, Marine Safety Council (G-CMC/81), Room 8117, Department of Transportation, Nassif Building, 400 Seventh Street, SW., Washington, D.C. 20590 (202-426-1477).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On March 14, 1977 the Coast Guard published a proposed rule (42 FR 13841) concerning this amendment. Interested persons were given until April 28, 1977 to submit comments. No comments were received.

DRAFTING INFORMATION: The principal persons involved in drafting this rule are: Lieutenant Commander H. E. Snow, Project Manager, Office of Marine Environment and Systems, and Mr. S. D. Jackson, Project Attorney, Office of the Chief Counsel.

CHAPTER I—ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY

SUBCHAPTER N—EFFLUENT GUIDELINES AND STANDARDS

PART 413—ELECTROPLATING POINT SOURCE CATEGORY

Pretreatment Standards for Existing Sources; Extension of Comment Period

AGENCY: Environmental Protection Agency.

ACTION: Extension of Comment Period.

SUMMARY: This action extends indefinitely the deadline for the receipt of comments on the interim final rulemaking establishing pretreatment standards for existing sources for the electroplating point source category. The comment period is extended because a second, closely related set of regulations will be issued soon. A definite closing comment date for both sets of regulations will be included in the second set of regulations.

DATE: The comment deadline is extended indefinitely.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Harold B. Coughlin, Effluent Guidelines Division (WH-552), Environmental Protection Agency, 401 M Street, SW., Washington, D.C. 20460 (202-426-2560).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On July 12, 1977 (42 FR 35834), the Agency published a notice of interim final rulemaking for pretreatment standards for the electroplating point source category. The notice established a 60-day comment period. This FEDERAL REGISTER notice also stated that further regulations covering additional pollutants would be issued in the near future. The Agency still expects to issue these regulations shortly. Because the two sets of regulations are interrelated, the Agency has decided to extend the comment period on the first set so that the closing date will coincide with the closing of the comment period which will follow issuance of the additional pretreatment regulations.

PART 4-16—PROCUREMENT FORMS

Miscellaneous Amendments

AGENCY: Department of Agriculture.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This rule amends the Agriculture Procurement Regulations by revising the regulations to reflect use of new Departmental purchase order form, rescinding various procurement forms which have become obsolete, changing the submission dates of the SF-37 Report on Procurement to conform to the new fiscal year, deleting the report on Minority Business Enterprises as this information is available in the SF-37 report, and making various editorial and organizational name changes. The listing of Agriculture Department forms is also updated to reflect the forms currently in use by this Department.

DATE: This rule is effective September 26, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Douglas I. Metzger, Procurement, Grants and Agreements Management Staff, Office of Operations, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250 (202-447-7527).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This amendment involves matters relating to agency management and contracting and, while not subject by law to the notice and public procedure requirements for rulemaking under 5 U.S.C. 553, is subject to the Secretary's Statement of Policy (36 FR 13804). The amendment corrects or clarifies existing policy. No useful purpose would be served by public participation, and it is found upon good cause, in accordance with the Secretary's Policy Statement, that notice and other public procedures with respect to the amendment are impracticable and unnecessary.

CHAPTER 9—ENERGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Procurement Regulations

AGENCY: Energy Research and Development Administration.

ACTION: Final Rule.

SUMMARY: This document consolidates, modifies, and reorganizes the Energy Research and Development Administration's Procurement Regulations. The present procurement regulations have not been updated since October 7, 1975. Since that date there have been a number of temporary regulations, procurement letters, immediate action directives, and procurement instructions issued which are not reflected in the existing procurement regulations. This consolidation will simplify and update the procurement regulations, incorporate all the regulatory material into one document for easy reference, and will bring the Energy Research and Development Administration's Procurement Regulations in line with the Federal Procurement Regulations.

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 26, 1977.

ADDRESS: Please address requests for copies of the consolidated ERDA-PR to:

Martin Kestenbaum, Division of Procurement, Rm. C-167, USERDA, Washington, D.C., 301-353-4541.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Martin Kestenbaum, 301-353-4541.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: A copy of the consolidated ERDA-PR has been filed with the Office of the Federal Register rather than published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, in order to save on printing costs for this large volume of regulations. The consolidated ERDA-PR consists of approximately 550 pages and a normal press run of a FEDERAL REGISTER issue is over 50,000 copies. ERDA's previous experience indicates that less than 2,000 copies of ERDA-PRs and/or temporary regulations covering distribution to both internal and external organizations have actually been requested and furnished. Thus, the cost of promulgating the consolidated ERDA-PRs in the usual manner will be extremely high. Therefore, to facilitate publication of the consolidated ERDA-PRs and to save on printing costs, it has been decided:

1. Not to print the full text of the consolidated ERDA-PR in the daily issue of the FEDERAL REGISTER.

2. To provide a copy of the consolidated ERDA-PR to the Office of the Federal Register to be filed as part of this document. This copy is to be printed in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR).[1]

3. To offer free distribution of the consolidated ERDA-PR to all subscribers to the FEDERAL REGISTER who make application within 45 days of the date of publication (November 10, 1977) for copies and to the general public at nominal cost. Please address requests for copies of the consolidated ERDA-PR to Martin Kestenbaum, Division of Procurement, Rm. C-167, USERDA, Washington, D.C. 20545.

Since the inception of ERDA on January 19, 1975, 35 temporary regulations have been prepared as ERDA temporary regulations. Of this number, Temporary Regulation Nos. 1 through 8 were carried over from the Atomic Energy Commission and redesignated as ERDA temporary regulations and Temporary Regulation No. 28 was prepared but never formally issued. All of the temporary regulations, including No. 28, have, where considered applicable, been incorporated in whole or in part into the consolidated ERDA-PR. In addition to the temporary regulations, there were certain internal documents that have also been incorporated into the procurement regulations. A summary of the consolidated material, by specific part, is set forth below.

CHAPTER I—COAST GUARD, DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

PART 182—MACHINERY INSTALLATION

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: The amendments in this document eliminate the requirements of the small passenger vessel regulations that overflow of liquid or vapor must discharge overboard. The regulations require that filling and sounding pipes be so arranged that any overflow of liquid or vapor cannot escape to the inside of the vessel, but will be discharged overboard. By eliminating the requirement that the overflow be discharged overboard, the regulations will be no longer in conflict with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act.

DATES: These amendments become effective on October 26, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Captain George K. Greiner, Marine Safety Council (G-CMC/81), Room 8117, Department of Transportation, Nassif Building, 400 Seventh Street SW., Washington, D.C. 20590 (202-426-1477).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: A notice of proposed rule making was published in the March 17, 1977 issue of the FEDERAL REGISTER (42 FR 14888). Interested persons were given until April 28, 1977 to submit written comments. Three comments were received.

The three comments received expressed concern that the Coast Guard was advocating protection of the environment at the expense of safety. All three commentors stated that requiring the overflow of liquids into the vessel would create a safety hazard since explosive fumes would be able to accumulate in the vessel's bilges or cockpit areas.

The regulations, as proposed, would still prohibit the escape of any overflow of fuel to the inside of the vessel. The only difference in the proposed regulations and the current regulations is the elimination of the mandatory requirement that any overflow be discharged into the water, which could result in a violation of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (86 Stat. 862, as amended; 33 U.S.C. 1321).

Due to the various configurations of small passenger vessels, the Coast Guard does not plan to require on deck containment of overflows. Instead, the proposal allows the vessel's owner to determine the best method of keeping the overflow from liquid fuel from entering the vessel, and carries out the Department's policy of eliminating excessive regulations.

The person filling a fuel tank on a small passenger vessel should exercise caution to prevent any overflow, because, if an overflow does occur, the regulation prohibits the liquid from reaching the inside of the vessel. If the flow discharges overboard, the operator may be liable for clean-up of the spill and a penalty for polluting the navigable waters of the United States.

After considering all comments, the Coast Guard has determined that the amendments should be adopted as proposed so §§ 182.15-30(b) and 182.20-30(b) will no longer be in conflict with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. Accordingly, the amendments as proposed are adopted without change.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal persons involved in drafting this rule are: Lieutenant Commander Paul K. Anderson, Project Manager, Office of Merchant Marine Safety, and Stanley M. Colby, Project Attorney, Office of Chief Counsel.

In accordance with the foregoing, Part 182 of Title 46, Code of Federal Regulations, is amended as follows:

1. By striking in the first sentence of § 182.15-30(b) and in the first sentence of § 182.20-30(b) the words ", but will discharge overboard".

(Sec. 3, 70 Stat. 152 (46 U.S.C. 390(b)); sec. 6(b)(1), 80 Stat. 937 (49 U.S.C. 1655(b)(1)); 49 CFR 1.46(b).)

NOTE.—The Coast Guard has determined that this document does not contain a major proposal requiring preparation of an Economic Impact Statement under Executive Order 11821, as amended, and OMB Circular A-107.

Dated: September 20, 1977.

PART 73—RADIO BROADCAST SERVICES

Maximum Effective Radiated Power Above Horizontal Plane for Television Broadcast Stations

AGENCY: Federal Communications Commission.

ACTION: Memorandum opinion and order.

SUMMARY: In a petition, the broadcast equipment section of the Industrial Electronics Division, Electronic Industries Association requests that the Commission update its rules concerning the maximum permissible effective radiated power above the horizontal for Television Broadcasting Stations. This Order grants EIA's petition by re-wording the provision to accommodate the radiation characteristics of a television transmitting antenna with beam tilt by limiting the effective radiated power above the horizontal to be no greater than that radiated at either the horizontal or below the horizontal, whichever is greater.

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 30, 1977.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER—PROCEEDING TERMINATED

Adopted: September 15, 1977.

Released: September 20, 1977.

In the matter of Amendment of Part 73, § 73.614(b)(4) of the Commission's rules concerning maximum effective radiated power above the horizontal plane for Television Broadcast Stations, RM-1701.

1. The Commission has for its consideration a petition filed by The Broadcast Equipment Section of The Industrial Electronics Division, Electronic Industries Association ("EIA") which seeks amendment of § 73.614(b)(4) of the rules restricting the maximum effective power permitted to be radiated above the horizontal plane by a Television Broadcast Station. Specifically, this petition requests a re-wording of § 73.614(b)(4) to accommodate the radiation characteristics of high-gain television broadcast antennas that use beam tilt to control and shape the vertical radiation pattern.

2. Vertical radiation pattern control accomplished by beam tilt is achieved through either electrical [1] or mechanical [2] means, or a combination of both. For great heights over the terrain, beam tilt may be valuable in increasing the local field, in order to optimize service area coverage, by depressing the maximum radiation lobe below the horizontal. Presently, § 73.614(b)(4) requires that the maximum effective power radiated in any direction above the horizontal plane by a television broadcast antenna shall be as low as the state of the art permits and may not exceed the effective power radiated in the horizontal direction in the same vertical plane. This requirement, written before high-gain antennas with beam tilt were developed, is intended to assure that the station does not radiate excessive power above the horizontal.

3. EIA points out that, inconsistent with § 73.614(b)(4), antenna beam tilt may cause the power radiated by a minor lobe at some angle above the horizontal to exceed the power radiated in the horizontal direction, although such power in any direction above the horizontal plane will be below the maximum power radiated by the main lobe that is tilted downward to achieve better service area coverage. Petitioner's proposed amendment would provide for these radiation characteristics by specifying that effective radiated power above the horizontal plane shall be as low as the state of the art permits, and in the same vertical plane may not exceed the maximum effective radiated power in the main lobe which can be either in the horizontal direction or below the horizontal in the event beam tilt is employed. The Commission agrees with the petitioner and we are hereby amending § 73.614(b)(4) in accordance with the material set forth below.

4. Authority for this amendment is contained in sections 4(i), 303 (g) and (r) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended. Prior notice of rulemaking and public participation therein are unnecessary pursuant to the Administrative Procedure and Judicial Review Act, 5 U.S.C. 553, inasmuch as the amendment ordered herein is interpretative in nature and does not impose additional burdens or raise new issues upon which comments would serve any useful purpose.

5. Accordingly, it is ordered, That effective September 30, 1977, Part 73 of the Commission's rules and regulations IS AMENDED as set forth below.

6. It is further ordered, That this proceeding is terminated.

PART 87—AVIATION SERVICES

Allowance of More Than One Fixed Aviation Instructional Station To Be Authorized at Landing Area

AGENCY: Federal Communications Commission.

ACTION: Report and Order.

SUMMARY: Amendment of Part 87 of the rules to allow more than one fixed aviation instructional station to be authorized at a landing area; and to indicate that persons engaged in activities relating to the operation of free balloons are eligible for aviation instructional station licenses. This action is being taken to eliminate unnecessary restrictions and otherwise clarify the rules regarding aviation instructional stations.

EFFECTIVE DATE: October 31, 1977.

ADDRESSES: Federal Communications Commission, Washington, D.C. 20554.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Robert H. McNamara, Safety and Special Radio Services Bureau, 202-632-7197.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

In the matter of amendment of Part 87 of the rules relative to aviation instructional stations; Report and Order (Proceeding Terminated).

Adopted: September 14, 1977; released: September 20, 1977.

1. A Notice of Proposed Rule Making in the above-captioned matter was released on June 8, 1977, and published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on June 13, 1977 (42 FR 30222). The specified time for filing comments and reply comments has expired.

2. The proposed amendment was designed to remove the limitation in the rules which permitted only one aviation instructional station per landing area, and thereby allow all eligible applicants to become licensees regardless of other stations operating on the landing area. The Commission indicated that such an amendment would eliminate any potential for discrimination in the utilization of the facilities and provide for a more convenient service for the users. In that ground mobile instructional stations are permitted to operate on and in the vicinity of a landing area, and cooperative use of the fixed facilities is required by the rules, it is not expected that a significant congestion problem will develop in this service. In addition, it was proposed that the status of free balloons with respect to aviation instructional stations, be clarified by specifically recognizing the eligibility of persons engaged in free ballooning activities for instructional station licenses. Further, in the nature of an editorial change relative to aviation instructional frequency usage by private aircraft, it was proposed that a clause be deleted from Section 87.343 and a more general statement added in Section 87.183.

3. Comments were filed by the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association (AOPA) representing more than 200,000 aircraft owners and pilots; the Norfolk Navy Flying Club, and Mr. Armond F. Cannella. All three of the commenters viewed the proposal most favorably. AOPA also stated that the rule amendment may result in a larger demand for instructional stations with a concomitant congestion problem in the future. Mr. Cannella expressed the opinion that no interference between subject stations would ensue. As indicated above, we do not foresee a congestion problem in the immediate future. However, we fully intend to stay apprised of existing conditions in this service.

4. In light of the comments received and for the reasons expressed in the Notice of Proposed Rule Making as referenced above, we believe it is in the public interest and convenience to amend the rules relative to aviation instructional stations as proposed.

5. Accordingly, it is ordered, That, pursuant to the authority contained in Section 4(i) and 303 (b), (c), (d) and (r) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, the Commission's rules are amended, as set forth in the attached Appendix, effective October 31, 1977.

6. It is further ordered, That this proceeding is terminated.

(Secs. 4, 303, 48 Stat., as amended 1066, 1082; 47 U.S.C. 154, 303)

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION,
VINCENT J. MULLINS,
Secretary.

Part 87 of Chapter I of Title 47 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as follows:

1. Section 87.183(m) is amended to read as follows:

§ 87.183 Frequencies available.

* * * * *

(m) 123.3, 123.5 and 121.95 MHz: These frequencies may be used by aircraft only for communications with aviation instructional stations when engaged in pilot training, soaring or free ballooning activities, in accordance with Subpart H of this part.

* * * * *

2. Section 87.341(a) is amended to read as follows:

§ 87.341 Frequencies available.

(a) The frequencies 123.3 and 123.5 MHz are available exclusively for assignment to ground and aircraft instructional stations. Mobile stations will be assigned both of these frequencies. However, mobile stations are authorized to operate only on a noninterference basis to fixed instructional stations. The frequency 121.95 MHz is also available to instructional stations. The Commission, as a matter of policy, will attempt to maintain a 1 mile separation between transmitters on 121.95 MHz and adjacent channel receivers. Applicants for authority to use 121.95 MHz should, therefore, coordinate their proposal with the appropriate FAA regional offices prior to submitting their application. A statement of the coordination effected should accompany the application. Applicants for fixed stations may request assignment of any one of the available frequencies, however, the Commission reserves the right to specify the frequency of assignment.

* * * * *

3. Section 87.343 is amended to read as follows:

§ 87.343 Eligibility for license.

An aviation instructional station license will be granted only to flying schools and to persons engaged in soaring or free ballooning activities. Each application shall be accompanied by a statement that the applicant is either the operator of a flying school or engaged in soaring or free ballooning activities.

4. Section 87.345 is amended to read as follows:

§ 87.345 Scope of service.

Communications shall be limited to the necessities of pilot training; coordination of soaring activities between gliders, tow aircraft and ground stations; coordination of activities between free balloons and ground stations; and the promotion of safety of life and property.

§ 87.349 [Deleted]

5. Section 87.349 is deleted.

§ 87.351 [Deleted]

6. Section 87.351 is deleted.

CHAPTER X—INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

SUBCHAPTER A—GENERAL RULES AND REGULATIONS

PART 1033—CAR SERVICE

Erie Western Railway Co. Authorized to Operate over Tracks Abandoned by Consolidated Rail Corp.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1977.

AGENCY: Interstate Commerce Commission.

ACTION: Emergency order (Service Order No. 1275).

SUMMARY: Service Order No. 1275 authorizes Erie Western Railway Co. (EW) to operate over the former Erie Lackawanna (EL) line between Hammond and Decatur, Ind. via North Judson, Ind. Present operation of this portion of the line between Decatur and North Judson is being terminated September 24, 1977, because of cancellation of the subsidy agreement between the State of Indiana and ConRail. The portion between North Judson and Hammond has not been operated since March 31, 1976. Operation by the EW over these tracks of the former EL is necessary to provide rail service to shippers located adjacent to the line.

DATES: Effective 12:01 a.m., September 25, 1977. Expires 11:59 p.m., January 15, 1978.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

C. C. Robinson, Chief, Utilization and Distribution Branch, Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D.C. 20423. Telephone (202-275-7840). (Telex 89-2742).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The order is printed in full below.

At a Session of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Railroad Service Board, held in Washington, D.C. on the 20th day September, 1977.

The Public Service Commission of Indiana has terminated the agreement for Rail Service Continuation Assistance with the Consolidated Rail Corporation over the former Erie Lackawanna (EL) line between North Judson, Indiana, and Decatur, Indiana, effective September 24, 1977.

If service over this line is not continued, numerous shippers on the line will be left without essential railroad service. The Erie Western (EW) is willing to operate the former El line between m.p. 249.6 at Hammond, Indiana, and m.p. 97.6 at Decatur, Indiana, via North Judson, Indiana, a distance of approximately 152.0 miles, subject to the consent to the trustees of the estate of the EL for the use of its track between Hammond, and Decatur, Indiana, via North Judson. In the opinion of the Commission, operation by the EW over these tracks of the EL is necessary in the interest of the public and the commerce of the people. Accordingly, the Commission finds that notice and public procedure are impracticable and contrary to the public interest, and that good cause exists for making this order effective upon less than thirty days' notice.

It is ordered, That:

§ 1033.1275 The Erie Western Railway Company authorized to operate over tracks abandoned by Consolidated Rail Corporation.

(a) The Erie Western Railway Company (EW) is hereby authorized to operate over tracks abandoned by Consolidated Rail Corporation over the former Erie Lackawanna (EL) line between m.p. 249.6 at Hammond, Indiana, and m.p. 97.6 at Decatur, Indiana, a distance of approximately 152.0 miles.

(b) Application. The provisions of this order shall apply to intrastate, interstate and foreign traffic.

(c) Rates applicable. Inasmuch as this operation by the EW over tracks previously operated by the Consolidated Rail Corporation (ConRail) and over tracks of the EL is deemed to be due to carrier's disability, the rates applicable to traffic moved over these lines shall be the rates applicable to traffic routed to, from, or via these lines which were formerly in effect on such traffic when routed via ConRail, until tariffs naming rates and routes specifically applicable via the EW become effective.

(d) In transporting traffic over these lines, the EW and all other common carriers involved shall proceed even though no contracts, agreements, or arrangements now exist between them with reference to the divisions of the rates of transportation applicable to that traffic. Divisions shall be, during the time this order remains in force, those voluntarily agreed upon by and between the carriers; or upon failure of the carriers to so agree, the divisions shall be those hereafter fixed by the Commission in accordance with pertinent authority conferred upon it by the Interstate Commerce Act.

(e) Effective date. This order shall become effective at 12:01 a.m., September 25, 1977.

(f) Expiration date. The provisions of this order shall expire at 11:59 p.m., January 15, 1978, unless otherwise modified, changed, or suspended by order of this Commission.

(49 U.S.C. 1, 12, 15 and 17(2).)

It is further ordered, That copies of this order shall be served upon the Association of American Railroads, Car Service Division, as agent of the railroads subscribing to the car service and car hire agreement under the terms of that agreement and upon the American Short Line Railroad Association; and that notice of this order shall be given to the general public by depositing a copy in the Office of the Secretary of the Commission at Washington, D.C., and by filing it with the Director, Office of the Federal Register.

By the Commission, Railroad Service Board, members Joel E. Burns, Robert S. Turkington and John R. Michael.

PART 1036—INCENTIVE PER DIEM CHARGES ON BOXCARS AND GONDOLA CARS

Incentive Per Diem Charges—Gondolas

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: The Commission is amending its regulation to make such rules effective November 1, 1977, and to modify the method of identification of guaranteed gondola cars, and to make clear the fact that the incentive per diem guarantee will be applicable only on newly purchased or leased (equity and non equity) unequipped gondola cars that have been "built new," but will not have application on used gondola cars that have been subsequently resold or leased. The purpose of the incentive per diem charge is to encourage acquisition and maintenance of a car supply adequate to meet the needs of commerce and the national defense.

EFFECTIVE DATE: November 1, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Mrs. Janice M. Rosenak, phone 202-275-7693.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Upon reconsideration, the regulations prescribed in the report and order of the Commission in Ex Parte No. 252 (Sub-No. 2), decided March 21, 1977, and which appeared at pages 23511 through 23513 in the Federal Register of Monday, May 9, 1977 (Vol. 42, No. 82), have been modified by order of the Commission, dated September 14, 1977. The modified regulations adopts a suggestion of the Association of American Railroads (AAR) that rather than adding the suffix "I" to the "GB" car type as ordered by the Commission in its report, that a better and simpler method of identifying such guaranteed gondola cars, which would not require the railroads to stencil such a designation on the car itself, would be to modify the third numeric in the present AAR Car Types. The AAR suggestion in no way affects the merits of the Commission decision, but would help implement that decision without causing additional burdens and costs for the industry.

The regulations were also modified to make clear the fact that the guarantee will be applicable only on newly purchased or leased (equity and non equity) unequipped gondola cars that have been "built new," but will not be applied on used gondola cars that have been subsequently resold or leased.

The effective date of the new regulations is November 1, 1977.

By the Commission, Commissioner Christian dissenting in part.

H. G. Homme, Jr.,
Acting Secretary.

Sections 1036.1, 1036.6 and 1036.7 of Part 1036 of Chapter X of Title 49 of the Code of Federal Regulations are revised as follows:

§ 1036.1 Application.

Each common carrier by railroad subject to the Interstate Commerce Act shall pay to the owning railroads, including the owning railroads of Canada, the additional per diem charges set forth in § 1036.2 on all boxcars and gondola cars shown below, while in the possession of non-owning railroads and subject to per diem rules. These charges are in addition to all other per diem charges currently in effect or prescribed. Mexican owned-cars are exempt from the operation of these rules. The rules of this part shall apply regardless of whether the foregoing boxcars and gondola cars are in intrastate, interstate, or foreign commerce.

Agricultural Marketing Service

[ 7 CFR Part 1036 ]

[Docket No. AO-179-A43]

MILK IN EASTERN OHIO-WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA MARKETING AREA

Hearing on Proposed Amendments to Tentative Marketing Agreement and Order

AGENCY: Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA.

ACTION: Public hearing on proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The hearing is being held to consider changes in the order that have been proposed by dairy farmer cooperatives and milk distributors. The key proposals would enlarge the marketing area, change the method of paying producers and cooperative associations, and lower the pool supply plant shipping requirements. Proponents contend that the requested order changes are needed to reflect changed marketing conditions and to insure orderly marketing in the area.

DATE: October 12, 1977.

ADDRESS: Port O'Call Motor Inn, 16161 Brookpark Road, Cleveland, Ohio 44142.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Maurice M. Martin, Marketing Specialist, Dairy Division, Agricultural Marketing Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250 (202-447-7183).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Notice is hereby given of a public hearing to be held at the Port O'Call Motor Inn, 16161 Brookpark Road, Cleveland, Ohio 44142, beginning at 9:30 a.m., on October 12, 1977, with respect to proposed amendments to the tentative marketing agreement and to the order, regulating the handling of milk in the Eastern Ohio-Western Pennsylvania marketing area.

The hearing is called pursuant to the provisions of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended (7 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), and the applicable rules of practice and procedure governing the formulation of marketing agreements and marketing orders (7 CFR Part 900).

The purpose of the hearing is to receive evidence with respect to the economic and marketing conditions which relate to the proposed amendments, hereinafter set forth, and any appropriate modifications thereof, to the tentative marketing agreement and to the order.

The proposal relative to a redefinition of the marketing area raises the issue whether the provisions of the present order would tend to effectuate the declared policy of the Act, if they are applied to the marketing area as proposed to be redefined and, if not, what modifications of the provisions of the order would be appropriate. Additionally, Proposals 1 and 6, which involve payment dates for milk received from producers and from cooperative associations, raise the issue of the appropriateness of the two-day delay in applying charges on overdue accounts as provided in § 1036.78. The provisions of this section, therefore, are specifically open for consideration at the hearing.

The proposed amendments, set forth below, have not received the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture.

(b) Subject to paragraphs (c) through (f) of this section, the market administrator shall pay each producer on or before the 18th day after the end of each month for milk for which payment pursuant to § 1036.71(b) has been received by the market administrator. Such payment shall be at the uniform price computed pursuant to § 1036.61 for the month, subject to the following adjustments:

(1) Any applicable adjustments pursuant to §§ 1036.74 and 1036.75;

(2) Less the payments described in paragraph (a) of this section;

(3) Less deductions for marketing services pursuant to § 1036.86;

(c) In making payments to producers pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, the market administrator, on or before the day prior to the dates specified in such paragraphs, shall pay to each cooperative association that so requests with respect to those producers for whom it markets milk and who are certified to the market administrator by the cooperative association as having authorized the cooperative association to receive such payment an amount equal to the sum of the individual payments otherwise due such producers pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

(d) In making payments to producers pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, the market administrator, on or before the day prior to the dates specified in such paragraph shall pay to each handler who so requests for milk received by the handler from producers for whom a cooperative association is not collecting payments pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section an amount equal to the sum of the individual payments otherwise due such producers pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section. The handler then shall pay the individual producers the amounts due them by the respective dates specified in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section. Any handler who the market administrator determines is or was delinquent with respect to any payment and reporting obligation under this order shall not be eligible to participate in this payment arrangement until the handler has met all prescribed payment and reporting obligations for three consecutive months. In making payments to producers pursuant to this paragraph, the handler shall furnish each producer the following information:

(4) The amount and nature of any deductions from the amount otherwise due the producer; and

(5) The net amount of payment to the producer.

(e) The following conditions shall apply with respect to the payments prescribed in paragraphs (a) through (d) of this section:

(1) If the date by which such payments are to be made falls on a Saturday or Sunday or on any day that is a national holiday, such payments need not be made until the next day on which the market administrator's office is open for public business; and results in a delay in the partial or final payments by handlers to the market administrator or by the market administrator to handlers, the corresponding partial or final payments prescribed in paragraphs (a) through (d) of this section may be delayed by the same number of days.

(2) If the application of § 1036.71(c)(2) or paragraph (e)(1) of this section

(f) If the market administrator does not receive the full payment required of a handler pursuant to § 1036.71, he shall reduce uniformly per hundredweight the payments due producers and/or cooperative associations for their milk received by such handler by a total amount not in excess of the amount due from such handler. The market administrator shall complete such payments on or before the next date for making payments pursuant to this section following the date on which the remaining payment is received from such handler. The market administrator shall first complete the payment to producers and/or cooperative associations who have the oldest outstanding payments due them.

(g) Subject to § 1036.71(c) (1) and (2), each handler who receives bulk fluid milk products from a pool plant operated by a cooperative association shall pay the following amount for such milk to the market administrator, who in turn, shall transmit such money to the cooperative association:

(1) On or before the third day prior to the end of each month, an amount determined by multiplying such receipts during the first 15 days of the month by the Class III price for the preceding month, as adjusted by the butterfat differential specified in § 1036.74 for the preceding month; and

(2) On or before the 16th day after the end of each month, an amount determined by multiplying the quantity of such receipts during the month that was classified in each class pursuant to § 1036.42 by the applicable class price, as adjusted by the butterfat differential specified in § 1036.74, less any payment made by the handler pursuant to paragraph (g)(1) of this section for such month. For the purpose of such computation, the applicable Class I price shall be the Class I prices applicable at the transferee-plant.

PROPOSED BY NATIONAL FARMERS ORGANIZATION

PROPOSAL NO. 5

Amend § 1036.13(e) as follows:

§ 1036.13 Producer milk.

* * * * *

(e) The following conditions shall apply to milk diverted from a pool plant to a nonpool plant that is not a producer-handler plant:

(1) Such milk shall be deemed to have been received by the diverting handler at the location of the nonpool plant to which diverted;

(2) To the extent that it would result in nonpool plant status for the pool plant from which diverted, milk diverted for the account of a cooperative association from the pool plant of another handler shall not be deemed to have been received at such pool plant and shall not be producer milk;

(3) During April through August the operator of a pool plant or a cooperative association may divert the milk production from a pool plant to a nonpool plant on any number of days during the month;

(4) During September through March the milk of a producer diverted by the operator of a pool plant or a cooperative association to a nonpool plant shall be limited as follows:

(i) The operator of a pool plant may divert the milk of producers (except producers for whom a cooperative association is diverting milk) for not more days of production of producer milk than is physically received at the pool plant from which diverted or he may divert an aggregate quantity not exceeding 40 percent of the milk of all such producers;

(ii) A cooperative association may divert the milk of individual producers for not more days of production of producer milk than is physically received at a pool plant or it may divert an aggregate quantity of the milk of producers not exceeding 40 percent of all such milk either caused to be delivered to pool plants or diverted to nonpool plants by the cooperative association;

(4) When milk is diverted in excess of the limit by a handler who elects to divert on the basis of days-of-production, only that milk of the individual producer which was received at a pool plant or which was diverted to a nonpool plant for not more days of production than is physically received at a pool plant shall be considered producer milk;

(5) When milk is diverted in excess of the percentage limit by a handler who elects to divert on a percentage basis, eligibility as producer milk shall be forfeited on a quantity of milk equal to such excess. In such instances the diverting handler shall specify the dairy farmers whose milk is ineligible as producer milk. If the handler fails to designate such dairy farmers whose milk is ineligible, producer milk status shall be forfeited with respect to all milk diverted to nonpool plants by such handler; and

(6) Milk diverted to an other order plan shall be producer milk only if a Class II or Class III clasification is designated for such milk pursuant to the provisions of another order issued pursuant to the Act and such milk is not subject to the pricing and pooling provisions of such order.

EGG RESEARCH AND PROMOTION

Proposed Rulemaking

AGENCY: Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA.

ACTION: Proposed Rule.

SUMMARY: This amendment would require egg producers who are collecting handlers to remit assessments on their nest run eggs sold to other collecting handlers in addition to remitting assessments on eggs that they grade, carton, or break. Such action will facilitate the remittance of assessments to the Egg Board. An additional amendment would require that all refund applications be mailed to the Board within 90 days after the end of the calendar month during which the assessment obligation was due and collectible, rather than 90 days after the end of the calendar month during which the assessment obligation was paid. This amendment will make the Rules and Regulations consistent with the Egg Research and Promotion Order and the Egg Research and Consumer Information Act.

DATES: Comments due October 26, 1977.
ADDRESS: Send two copies of comments to the Hearing Clerk, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Room 1077, South Building, Washington, D.C. 20250. Comments will be made available for public inspection at the Office of the Hearing Clerk during regular business hours.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

William C. Paddock, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Room 3950, South Building, Washington, D.C. 20250. Phone: 202–447–5767.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Paragraph (a) (3) of § 1250.516, Collecting handlers and collection, provides, in part, that an egg producer who grades, cartons, or breaks eggs of his own production shall be responsible for remitting the assessment to the Board on that portion of his eggs which he grades, cartons, or breaks and that the assessment on the producer's remaining nest run eggs shall be remitted by the person handling the nest run eggs.

To facilitate the remittance of assessments, it is proposed to provide in paragraph (a) (3) of § 1250.516 that producers who grade, carton, or break shall remit assessments to the Board on their remaining nest run eggs as well as the eggs which they grade, carton or break.

To be consistent with the proposed change to paragraph (a) (3) of § 1250.516, it is proposed to provide in paragraph (a) (4) (b) of § 1250.516 that the producer who grades, cartons, breaks, or otherwise prepares for marketing a portion of the eggs of his own production shall be the collecting handler and shall remit the assessment on his total production of the Board.

To further facilitate the remittance of assessments and to allow for exemptions to be consistent with the proposed changes in paragraphs (a) (3) and (a) (4) (b) of § 1250.516, it is proposed to provide in paragraph (a) (2) of § 1250.516 that exemptions be allowed for eggs for which there is certification of exemption or eggs for which there is a statement indicating that an assessment has already been paid. In addition, it is proposed to provide in paragraph (a) (4) (c) of § 1250.516 that exemptions be allowed for eggs for which there is a statement indicating that an assessment has already been paid.

Concerning the time period in which producers are, if they so desire, to file for refunds, the Act provides, in part, in section 13 "* * * That such demand shall be made * * * but in no event more than 90 days after the end of the month in which the assessments are due and collectable. * * " The Order provides in § 1250.349, Producer refunds, " * * in no event should such period be more than 90 days after the end of the month in which the assessments are due and collectable." Inadvertently, the Rules and Regulations provide in paragraph (b) of § 1250.523, Procedure for obtaining refunds, that "* * * within 90 days after the end of the calendar month during which the assessment obligation was paid * * *" instead of due and collectable. Therefore, language to make the Rules and Regulations consistent with the Act and Order is proposed.

The proposed amended paragraphs (a) (2), (a) (3), (a) (4) (b), and (a) (4) (c) of § 1250.516 and the proposed amended paragraph (b) of § 1250.523 read as follows:

(a) * * *

(3) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a) (4) of this section, a producer who grades, cartons, or breaks eggs of his own production shall be responsible for remitting the assessment to the Board on all eggs produced. This would include the eggs which he grades, cartons, or breaks as well as the nest run eggs which are graded, cartoned, or broken by another handler. Such a producer who remits the assessment on nest run eggs to the Board shall provide the handler specified in paragraph (a) (1) or (2) of this section with a written statement that the assessment has already been paid on the nest run eggs; or

(i) Producer grades, cartons, breaks, or otherwise prepares for marketing a portion of the eggs of his own production and delivers the remaining portion of his nest run eggs to a shell egg packer or breaker—the producer is the collecting handler and shall remit the assessment on his total production to the Board; (ii) producer sells all or a portion of his eggs in nest run form to a handler who is not a shell egg packer or breaker—the handler is responsible for collecting the assessment and remitting it to the Egg Board except for eggs covered by a statement indicating that an assessment has already been paid;

* * * * *

(b) Every refund application must be mailed to the Board within 90 days after the end of the calendar month during which the assessment obligation was due and collectable.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

Bureau of Indian Affairs

[ 25 CFR Part 36 ]

MAINTENANCE AND CONTROL OF STUDENT RECORDS IN BUREAU SCHOOLS

Administrative Regulations and Procedures

SEPTEMBER 13, 1977.

AGENCY: Bureau of Indian Affairs, Interior.

ACTION: Proposed rule.

SUMMARY: The Bureau proposes to add a new Part 36 to Subchapter E, Chapter I of Title 25 of the Code of Federal Regulations. The new part will prescribe administrative regulations and procedures to govern the maintenance and control of student records in all educational institutions under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, whether operated under contract or otherwise. The recent passage of the Privacy Act of 1974 and the Buckley Amendment created the need for these regulations.

DATES: Comments must be received on or before October 26, 1977.

ADDRESSES: Written comments should be directed to: Acting Deputy Commissioner, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Attention: Student Records Task Force, 1951 Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, D.C. 20245, or by hand delivery to the Acting Deputy Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Attention: Student Records Task Force, Department of the Interior Building, Washington, D.C.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Max Harriger, Office of Indian Education Programs, telephone 202-343-3151.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The primary author of this document is Mr. Dave Young, Education Specialist, Indian Education Resources Center, 123 4th Street SW., Albuquerque, N. Mex. 87103, telephone 505-766-3354. Recent enactments of Congress have reflected a strong legislative intent that agencies of the Executive Branch of our Government take strong administrative measures to protect the privacy of records kept on individuals. Recent enactments include: (1) The Privacy Act of 1974 (Pub. L. 93-579). That Act contains special provisions restricting the Federal Government's collection and use of information kept on individuals, and gives the individual greater rights over the access and control of such information; and (2) Section 438 of the General Education Provisions Act of 1974, as amended (Pub. L. 93-380), commonly referred to as the Buckley Amendment, which provides that no Office of Education funds shall be made available to any educational agency or institution which denies parents and/or eligible students the right to inspect and review their educational records. The Buckley Amendment contains special provisions designed to protect the privacy rights of parents and students with respect to such records, and to promote the maintenance of only such records as are accurate and essential.

In order to insure that the spirit of these recent enactments reaches all student records maintained by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, it is deemed necessary and desirable that special regulations be promulgated to apply to the Bureau of Indian Affairs school system. Also, the promulgation of such regulations would serve to alleviate problems existing as to the applicability of the Buckley Amendment to Bureau schools.

The authority for the Commissioner to issue these regulations is contained under the Act of April 30, 1908 (35 Stat. 72, 25 U.S.C. 295), Pub. L. 93-380, as amended, and (5 U.S.C. 301), and sections 463 and 465 of the revised statutes (25 U.S.C. 2 and 9), and 230 DM 1 and 2.

It is proposed to add a new part 36 to Subchapter E, Chapter I of Title 25 of the Code of Federal Regulations to read as follows:

§ 36.1 Purpose and scope.

This Part contains the regulations of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Department of the Interior governing the maintenance, control, and accessibility of student records. This Part will apply to all educational institutions under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, whether operated under contract or otherwise.

§ 36.2 Definitions.

As used in this part:

(a) "Commisisoner" means the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

(b) "Educational institution" means any institution operated under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Indian Affairs either directly or by contract. Including, but not limited to, schools or dormitories from which Indian students attend public schools.

(c) "Eligible student" means a student who has become eighteen years of age or is attending an institution of post-secondary education. When a student becomes an "eligible student", the permission required of and the rights given to the parents of the student shall thereafter only be required of and given to the student.

(d) "Parent" means a natural parent, an adoptive parent, the legal guardian or a legal custodian of a student. (Where the natural parents are unavailable, a required written parental consent may be obtained from the person who has assumed custody of the student.)

(1) Records of any educational personnel which are in the sole possession of the maker and which are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a substitute.

(2) Records made and maintained in the normal course of business which relate exclusively to persons who are employed in an educational institution but do not attend that institution.

(3) Directory information as given in § 36.20.

(4) Records on a student which are made or maintained by a physician, psychiatrist, psychologist, school social worker, or other recognized professional or para-professional acting in his professional or para-professional capacity, or assisting in that capacity, and which are made, maintained, or used only in treating the student, and are not available to anyone other than persons providing the treatment. However, such records can be personally reviewed by the appropriate professional or para-professional of the parent or eligible student's choice.

§ 36.3 Student rights.

The regulations in this part do not prevent educational institutions from giving non-eligible students rights similar to those given to parents and eligible students. Educational institutions may do so at their discretion.

§ 36.4 Annual notification of rights.

(a) Each educational institution to which this part applies and which maintains records on students shall inform parents or eligible students of the rights given them by this part.

(b) In meeting the requirement in paragraph (a) of this section, the educational institution shall give notice to parents and eligible students at least annually of the following:

(1) The types of education records and information contained in them which are directly related to students and maintained by the institution.

(2) The name and position of the official responsible for maintaining each type of record, the persons who have access to those records, and the purpose for which they have access.

(3) The policies of the institution for reviewing and expunging those records.

(4) The procedures established by the institution under § 36.5.

(5) The procedures for challenging the content of education records including those in § 36.10.

(6) The cost, if any, which will be charged to the parent or eligible student for reproducing copies of records under § 36.5.

(7) The categories of information which the institution has designated as "directory information" under § 36.20.

(c) The notice given to a parent or eligible student under this section shall be in a language considered by the institution to be understandable by the parent or eligible student.

§ 36.5 Access to records.

Educational institutions shall give parents of students or eligible students, who are or have been in attendance at the institutions, access to student records, except as stated in § 36.6.

§ 36.6 Limitations on access.

Educational institutions are not required to make available to students the following materials:

(a) Financial records of the parents of the student or any information contained in those records.

(b) Confidential letters and statements of recommendation, which were placed in any student's record prior to January 1, 1975, and which are not used for purposes other than those for which they were specifically intended.

(c) Those records listed in § 36.2(e) which are exempt from the definition of "student records".

§ 36.7 Access rights.

The right of access specified in § 36.5 shall include:

(a) The right to obtain a list of the types of student records which are maintained by the institution.

(b) The right to inspect and review the content of those records.

(c) The right to obtain copies of those records, the cost, if any, not to exceed the actual cost to the educational institution of reproducing the copies.

(d) The right to a response from the institution to reasonable requests for explanations and interpretations of those records.

(e) The right to an opportunity for a hearing to challenge the content of records.

(f) If any material or document in the record of a student includes information on more than one student, the right to inspect and review only that portion of such material or document as relates to that particular student or to be informed of the specific information contained in such part of such materials.

§ 36.8 Destruction of records.

This Part does not prevent educational institutions from destroying any records, if not otherwise prevented by law. However, access shall be granted under § 36.5 before destroying student records where the parent or eligible student has requested access. Only records which are no longer relevant or necessary may be destroyed, subject to § 36.23(c).

§ 36.9 Procedures for granting access.

Each educational institution shall establish appropriate procedures for granting a request by parents for access to the records of their children or by eligible students for access to their own records within a reasonable period of time. In no case shall access be withheld more than forty-five days after the request has been made.

§ 36.10 Right to challenge.

Each educational institution shall give parents of students and eligible students, who are or have been in attendance at the institution an opportunity to challenge the content of student's records to:

(a) Insure that the records are not inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise violating the privacy or other rights of students.

(b) Provide an opportunity for correcting or deleting any inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise inappropriate data in the record.

(c) Insert into such records a written comment by the parents or eligible students pertaining to the content of such records.

§ 36.11 Informal proceedings.

§ 36.12 Right to a hearing.

Upon the request of the educational institution, the parent or eligible student, a hearing shall be conducted under the procedures adopted and published by the institution. Such procedures shall include at least the following elements:

(a) The hearing shall be conducted and decided within a reasonable period of time following the request for the hearing.

(b) The hearing shall be informal and a verbatim record of proceedings will not be necessary.

(c) The hearing shall be conducted by an institutional official or other party who does not have a direct interest in the outcome of the hearing.

(d) The parents or eligible student shall be given a full and fair opportunity to present evidence relevant to the issues raised under § 36.10.

(e) Within a reasonable period of time after the hearing ends, the hearing official shall make his recommendation in writing to the head of the educational institution. Within 20 days after receipt of the recommendation, the head of the institution shall issue his decision in writing to the parent or eligible student.

§ 36.13 Right of appeal.

If any parent or eligible student is adversely affected by the decision of the head of the institution, that party shall have appeal rights as given in 25 CFR Part 2. However, each official decision shall be issued within 30 days from receipt of the appeal.

§ 36.14 Consent.

Educational institutions shall not permit access to or the release of student records or personally identifiable information contained in them, other than directory information of students, without the written consent of the parents or of an eligible student, to any party other than the following:

(a) Local school officials, including teachers within the educational institution, who have been determined by the institution to have legitimate educational interests in the records.

(b) Officials of other schools or school systems at which a student is interested in enrolling. The student or parent must be notified of such release except in cases involving Bureau of Indian Affairs schools. All Bureau of Indian Affairs schools are considered to be components of one school system whether operated under contract or otherwise.

(c) Persons having official involvement with a student's application for or grant of financial aid.

(d) Parents of a dependent student as defined in Section 152 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended.

(e) Accreditation agencies in order to carry out their accrediting functions.

(f) U.S. Office of Education officials and other Governmental education officials when deemed necessary by the institution to carry out their official functions.

(g) An education Testing Center or similar institution as a part of its validation research which has been authorized by the school.

(h) In an emergency, any person to whom the information is necessary in the discretion of the school's administration in order to protect the student's health and safety, subject to § 36.17.

(i) Indian groups, contractors and grantees when necessary to carry out an official function authorized by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

(j) Pursuant to the order of a court of competent jurisdiction; however, the parent or eligible student must be notified of such order in advance of compliance therewith by the educational institution.

§ 36.15 Content of consent.

The consent of a parent or eligible student requested under this part for the release of student records shall be in writing, signed and dated by the person giving the consent. The consent shall include:

(a) A specification of the records to be released.

(b) With any information released to a party under paragraph (a) of this section, educational institutions shall include a written statement which informs the party of the requirement in paragraph (a) of this section.

§ 36.20 Directory information.

(a) Any educational institution making public directory information shall make a reasonable effort to individually notify the parent or eligible student of the categories of information which it has designated as directory information. The institution shall allow a reasonable period of time after notice has been given for a parent or eligible student to inform the institution that any or all of the information designated should not be released without the prior consent of the parent or eligible student.

(b) Directory information may include the following: A student's name, address, telephone listing, date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of members of athletic teams, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, and the most recent previous educational agency or institution attended by the student, tribe, Agency, Area, name of parent, sex, and classification (grade). (a) Records shall contain only information about an individual which is relevant and necessary to accomplish a purpose of the Bureau required to be accomplished by statute or Executive Order of the President.

(b) Student records which are used in making any determination about any student shall be maintained with such accuracy, relevance, timeliness, and completeness as is reasonably necessary to assure fairness to the student in making the determination.

(c) Information which may be used in determining a student's rights, benefits, and privileges under Federal programs shall be collected directly from that student or his parents, to the greatest extent practicable. In deciding whether collection of information from a parent or eligible student, as opposed to a third party source, is practicable, the following factors, among others, may be considered:

(1) Whether the nature of the information sought is such that it can only be obtained from a third party.

(2) Whether the cost of collecting the information from the parent or student is unreasonable, when compared with the cost of collecting it from a third party.

(3) Whether there is a risk that information collected from third parties, if inaccurate, could result in an adverse determination to the student concerned.

(4) Whether the information, if supplied by the parent or student, would have to be verified by a third party.

(5) Whether provisions can be made for verification by the parent or student of information collected from third parties.

(d) Each individual parent or eligible student who is asked to supply information about himself which will be added to a system of student records shall be notified of the basis for requesting the information, how it may be used, and what the consequences, if any, are of not supplying the information. At a minimum, the notice to the parent or eligible student must state:

(1) The authority (whether granted by statute or Executive Order of the President) which authorizes requesting the information and whether disclosure of such information is mandatory or voluntary.

(2) The principal purpose or purposes for which the information is intended to be used.

(3) The routine uses which may be made of the information.

(4) The effects, if any, of not providing all or any part of the requested information.

(e) When information is collected on a standard form, the notice to the parent or eligible student shall be on the form or on a tear-off sheet attached to the form or on a separate sheet, whichever is most practical.

(f) When information is collected by an interviewer, the interviewer shall provide the parent or eligible student with a written notice which the individual may retain. If the interview is conducted by telephone, however, the interviewer may summarize the notice for the individual and need not provide a copy to the individual unless the individual requests that a copy be mailed to him.

(g) A parent or eligible student may be asked to acknowledge, in writing, that he has been given the notice required by this section.

(h) No student records may be maintained describing how any individual exercises rights guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution unless:

(1) Expressly authorized by statute or by the individual about whom the student record is maintained; or

(2) Pertinent to and within the scope of an authorized law enforcement activity.

§ 36.22 Assuring integrity of records.

(a) Student records shall be maintained with appropriate administrative, technical and physical safeguards to insure the security and confidentiality of records and to protect against any anticipated threats or hazards to their security or integrity which could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to any individual on whom information is maintained.

(b) When maintained in manual form, student records shall be maintained, at a minimum, subject to the following safeguards, or safeguards giving comparable protection:

(1) Areas in which the student records are maintained or regularly used shall be posted with an appropriate warning stating that access to the records is limited to authorized persons. The warning shall also summarize the requirements of § 36.23 and state that employees may be subject to a criminal penalty for the unauthorized disclosure of student records.

(2) During working hours, the area in which the student records are maintained or regularly used shall be occupied by authorized personnel, or access to the student records shall be restricted by their storage in locked metal file cabinets or a locked room.

(3) During non-working hours, access to the student records shall be restricted by their storage in locked metal file cabinets or a locked room.

(4) Where a locked room is the method of security provided for a system, the educational institution responsible for the system shall, no later than December 31, 1976, supplement that security by:

(i) Providing lockable file cabinets or containers for the student records, or

(ii) Changing the lock or locks for the room so that they may not be opened with a master key. For the purpose of this paragraph, a master is a key which may be used to open rooms other than the room containing student records unless those rooms are used by officials or employees authorized to have access to the student records.

(c) When maintained in computerized form, student records shall be maintained, at a minimum, subject to safeguards based on those recommended in the National Bureau of Standards' booklet "Computer Security Guidelines for Implementing the Privacy Act of 1974" (May 30, 1975), and any supplements to it, which are adequate and appropriate to assure the integrity of records in the system.

(d) The education institution responsible for a system of student records shall be responsible for assuring that specific procedures are developed to assure that the student records in the system for which it is responsible are maintained with security meeting the regulations in this section. These procedures shall be in writing and shall be posted or otherwise periodically brought to the attention of employees working with the student records contained in the system.

§ 36.23 Conduct of employees.

(a) Employees whose duties require handling of student records shall, at all times, take care to protect the integrity, security and confidentiality of these records.

(b) No employee of the educational institution may disclose student records unless disclosure is permitted under § 36.14 or made to the parent of the student or eligible student to whom the record pertains.

(c) No employee of the educational institution may alter or destroy a student record, unless:

(1) Alteration or destruction is properly undertaken in the course of the employee's regular duties, or

(2) Alteration or destruction is required by an authorized administrative decision or the decision of a court of competent jurisdiction.

(d) The educational institution responsible for a system of student records shall be responsible for assuring that employees with access to the system are made aware of the requirements of this section.

NOTE.—It is hereby certified that the economic and inflationary impacts of this proposed regulation have been carefully evaluated in accordance with Executive Order 11821.

APPROVAL AND PROMULGATION OF IMPLEMENTATION PLANS, MASSACHUSETTS

Proposed Change in the Sulfur Content of Fuel Burned by Three Large Fuel Burning Sources in the Southeastern Massachusetts Air Pollution Control District

AGENCY: Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

ACTION: Proposed rule.

SUMMARY: The proposed revision to the Massachusetts Implementation Plan would permit three large fuel burning sources in the Southeastern Massachusetts Air Pollution Control District (SEMAPCD) to burn approximately 2.2 percent sulfur content residual fuel oil or its equivalent of approximately 1.4 percent sulfur content coal until May 1, 1978. These three sources presently burn residual oil with a maximum allowable sulfur content of approximately 1.0 percent. The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (the Massachusetts Department) submitted this revision pursuant to a state law which requires periodic review of the State Implementation Plan (SIP) to determine if any of the regulations are more stringent than necessary to attain and maintain National Ambient Air Quality Standards (NAAQS).

DATES: Comments must be received on or before October 26, 1977.

ADDRESSES: Copies of the Massachusetts submittal and EPA's evaluation are available for public inspection during normal business hours at the Environmental Protection Agency, Region I, Room 2113, JFK Federal Building, Boston, Mass. 02203; Public Information Reference Unit, Environmental Protection Agency, 401 M Street SW., Washington D.C. 20460; and Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, 600 Washington Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02111 (state data only on file).

Comments should be submitted to the Regional Administrator, Region I, Environmental Protection Agency, Room 2203, JFK Building, Boston, Massachusetts 02203.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Wallace Woo, Air Branch, EPA, Region I, Room 2113, JFK Building, Boston, Mass. 02203 (617-223-5609).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On May 31, 1972 (37 FR 10872), pursuant to Section 110 of the Clean Air Act and 40 CFR Part 51, the Administrator approved, with exceptions, the Massachusetts Implementation Plan for the attainment of NAAQS.

On December 30, 1976, the Massachusetts Secretary of Environmental Affairs submitted a revision to Regulation 5.1, "Sulfur Content of Fuels and Control Thereof," which would allow large fuel burning sources in the SEMAPCD to burn higher sulfur content fuel until May 1, 1978. Existing SIP regulations permitted the burning of fossil fuel with a sulfur content not in excess of 0.55 pounds per million Btu heat release potential (approximately equivalent to 1.0 percent sulfur content residual fuel oil by weight). The revision would permit fossil fuel utilization facilities having an energy input capacity rated at one hundred million Btu per hour or greater to burn fossil fuel with a sulfur content not in excess of 1.21 pounds per million Btu heat release potential (approximately equivalent to 2.2 percent sulfur content residual fuel oil by weight) until May 1, 1978. All other sources would continue to burn 1.0 percent sulfur content (oil equivalent) fuel. The revision also would require that the use of the higher sulfur fuel by each source be approved, and a permit be granted by the Massachusetts Department prior to use, in order to insure that the NAAQS will not be violated.

The Massachusetts Department submitted information pertaining to the 17 sources located in the SEMAPCD which were in the size category under consideration to burn the higher sulfur fuel. On September 2, 1977 (42 FR 44235),

EPA published final rulemaking which approved the use of the higher sulfur content fuel for 10 of the 17 sources, and disapproved its use for 4 of the 17 sources. No action was taken on the remaining 3 sources pending further evaluation of their air quality impact. These three sources are:

1. Harodite Finishing Company, Dighton
2. Montaup Electric Company, Somerset Station, Somerset
3. New England Power Company, Brayton Point Station, Somerset

In this Notice, the Administrator is proposing to approve the use of the higher sulfur content fuel for these three sources. The Massachusetts Department has agreed to incorporate certain conditions into the approval permits for these sources. A discussion of these conditions, as well as a summary of EPA's further evaluation of these three sources follows:

The SEMAPCD is the same geographic area as the Massachusetts portion of the Metropolitan Providence Interstate Air Quality Control Region (AQCR). EPA has designated the SEMAPCD as "attainment" for sulfur dioxide ($SO_2$) standards, based on no recent violations of the primary or secondary NAAQS for $SO_2$ in this area. EPA has designated the SEMAPCD as "non-attainment" for total suspended particulates (TSP) standards, based on a primary 24-hour TSP violation and several secondary 24-hour TSP violations in the area.

By a March 4, 1977 letter to the Massachusetts Department, EPA officially notified the State of the non-attainment designation, and called upon the Massachusetts Department to evaluate whether or not a more stringent SIP for TSP should be devised in order to attain standards. The results of that evaluation, together with any necessary changes in the SIP, will be submitted to EPA by November 1, 1978. However, this date may be extended to January 1, 1979, the date called for by the August 7, 1977 amendments to the Clean Air Act. This plan will also contain provisions to insure the maintenance of both the $SO_2$ and TSP air quality standards.

Prior to final approval of this SIP revision, the Administrator must find that the revision will not allow any concentration of pollutants to exceed any NAAQS. Although the regulation which has been submitted for approval will directly affect only the emission limitation for $SO_2$, it is believed that some additional TSP emissions would result from the switch from 1 percent to 2.2 percent sulfur fuel. Accordingly, EPA has projected the anticipated effects for both $SO_2$ and TSP in reviewing the impact of the proposed SIP revision.

Discussion: Sulfur Dioxide

The Agency's present conclusions about the $SO_2$ impacts of each of three sources affected by this proposed SIP revision are as follows:

1. Harodite Finishing Company. The source presently has raincaps on its stacks. The Massachusetts Department, using the PTMTP model, predicted that this source could cause $SO_2$ standards violations if the raincaps on its stacks prevent plume rise; without the raincaps, modeling predicts that this source could burn 2.2 percent sulfur content residual fuel oil without causing violations of any NAAQS. The Massachusetts Department has agreed to require the removal of the raincaps as a permit condition for burning higher sulfur fuel.

2. Montaup Electric Company, Somerset Station. The Massachusetts Department submitted modeling performed by a private contractor using a proprietary model which predicted the plant would cause violations of the primary 24-hour $SO_2$ standard, both when operating by itself and when interacting with the Brayton Point Station. The Massachusetts Department has agreed that, as a condition of its permit to Somerset Station, it will require that no more than 75 percent of the plant capacity be used in any day, thus reducing the modeled concentrations below the standards for both the single source and interaction cases. EPA therefore projects that no $SO_2$ violation would occur.

3. New England Power Company, Brayton Point Station. The previously mentioned proprietary modeling study predicted that the Brayton Point Station would not cause any violations of the primary or secondary NAAQS for $SO_2$. However, in a supplementary modeling analysis using the CRSTER model, EPA predicted that Brayton Point Station, interacting with the Duro Finishing Company (Duro) plant in Fall River, might contribute to violations of the 24-hour SO standard. However, interpretation of modeling results in the vicinity of Duro is complicated by local topography and micro-meteorology. The impact of the Duro plant itself is clear; the model predicts the plant will cause violations of the primary and secondary NAAQS for $SO_2$ while burning fuel in compliance with the existing SIP emission regulations (i.e., 1 percent sulfur content residual oil). Duro Finishing Company was previously disapproved from burning high sulfur fuel (42 FR 44235), and was referred to the Massachusetts Department for further evaluation because of predicted ambient air quality violations under the present SIP. Interaction of the plumes from the Duro and Brayton Point plants such as to cause a violation of the primary 24-hour $SO_2$ standard is predicted by the modified PTMTP model to occur under moderate to strong northwesterly winds (wind blowing from direction of Brayton to Duro) and under slightly unstable to neutral stability conditions. EPA feels that sufficient uncertainty exists as to the probability of a violation occurring, that the SIP revision herein proposed can be approved. The Massachusetts Department has agreed to require the location of a monitor at the point where maximum impact from the plume interaction of the Brayton and Duro plants is predicted to occur by EPA. EPA believes that should the monitoring indicate the existence of a violation, adequate authority exists in Section 121 of the recent Clean Air Act Amendments to enable the state to require an increase in Duro's stack height if necessary to correct such a violation. EPA further believes that the public health would be adequately protected since the Brayton Point Station would be required by the Massachusetts Department to permanently switch back to the lower sulfur fuel if the monitor measures one excursion over the level of the primary 24-hour standard and emissions from Brayton Point are shown to contribute to the excursion. Thus, no violation of the primary standard, being the second such excursion, would be allowed to occur.

As an additional condition of approval for these three sources, the Massachusetts Department has agreed to require the establishment of a network of TSP and continuous ambient $SO_2$ monitors at specified locations in the vincinity of the facilities eligible to burn the higher sulfur content fuel as necessary. Exceedance of any NAAQS for $SO_2$ or TSP recorded by any monitor would be grounds for an immediate and permanent return to the use of lower sulfur fuel by the source involved, as determined by the Massachusetts Department and EPA on a case by case basis.

Discussion: Total Suspended Particulates

Although the SIP revision herein proposed does not permit an increase in the particulate emission limitation under the SIP, EPA believes that use of fuel with 2.2 percent sulfur content could cause up to 50 percent higher particulate emissions than use of 1.0 percent sulfur content fuel. It is also believed that increased TSP loadings in the atmosphere may result from secondary aerosol formations. The Massachusetts Department will require stack testing in connection with the conversion to higher sulfur fuel, as a condition to the sources' permits to burn such fuel. None of the sources for which approval is being granted will be permitted to continue burning higher sulfur content fuel if the source has particulate emissions in excess of the emission limitation contained in the present SIP.

Particulate emissions at the present time, with sources burning 1 percent sulfur fuel, are below the level permitted by the SIP (now permitted to be up to .12 pounds per million BTU). Burning 2.2 percent fuel would result in source emissions at or just below the permitted level. The sources are legally permitted to burn at this higher level at the present time; this condition would remain unaffected by the proposed SIP revision. These projected particulate increases are an issue because the Brayton Point and Somerset plumes contribute to the TSP loadings in areas of the City of Fall River where TSP violations have been occurring.

Monitoring data for 1975 and 1976 show 16 days when TSP levels exceeded the national secondary ambient air quality standard of 150 micrograms per cubic meter. On three of those days TSP levels exceeded the primary TSP standard of 260 micrograms per cubic meter. These readings resulted in one violation of the primary standard in 1976 and eleven violations of the secondary standard in 1975 and 1976.

EPA has concluded that the ten instances of levels above the secondary standard recorded in 1975 would not be representative of actual conditions in the area of Brayton Point for the purposes of evaluating the impact of this SIP revision, primarily because both Brayton Point (Units No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3), and Somerset Station (Unit No. 8) were given temporary suspensions permitting them to burn coal during all or a portion (varying from unit to unit) of the period in which the exceedances were recorded. Emissions from those units were far higher in TSP during the coal-burning period due to the ash content (approximately 15 percent for Brayton and 10 percent for Somerset) of the fuel and the fact that both plants were allowed to exceed the SIP emission limitation during the period. Accordingly, EPA's analysis of the projected air quality impact of this SIP revision is based on 1976 data. The following table shows the dates, monitoring sites and TSP levels involved:

| Date | Monitoring site | Concentration (Microgram per cubic meter) |
| Dec. 5, 1976 | Plymouth Ave. | 422 |
| June 11, 1976 | North Main St. | 175 |
| Apr. 9, 1976 | do. | 213 |
| Apr. 15, 1976 | Plymouth Ave. | 153 |
| Feb. 9, 1976 | do. | 468 |
| Feb. 12, 1976 | do. | 173 |

EPA has performed laboratory analyses of each of the hi-vol filters showing exceedances of TSP standards during 1976. The results of these analyses are available in the form of a technical report entitled "Evaluation and Validation of Total Suspended Particulate NAAQS Exceedances, Fall River, Mass., 1975–76" which will be made available upon request at the Regional address shown above. The laboratory analyses consisted of optical microscopy performed by a consultant, as well as x-ray fluorescence spectography and chemical analyses performed by EPA. By using these methods, EPA was able to identify not only the elemental chemical composition of the material in the filters (i.e., iron, nickel, etc.) but also to characterize the physical state in which the elements appeared (i.e., sand particles, soot, fly ash, etc.). EPA also checked the dates on which the City of Fall River was sanding, sweeping or salting in the vicinity of the monitoring sites and obtained samples from the City's sand storage area for comparison purposes. EPA also reviewed meteorological data for each day in question. This evidence tends to suggest that the chemical and physical properties of the material found on the filters matches the properties of the material taken from the City's sand piles. The optical microscopic analysis, though subjective, attempted to distinguish between soot (caused by low temperature combustion sources) and fly ash (caused by high temperature combustion sources such as power plants) and concluded that low levels of fly ash (ranging from 3.8 percent to 12.1 percent) are present. Thus, power plants contributed at most only a fraction of the filter loadings. Further, while the fuels used at Brayton Point and Somerset contain relatively high levels of nickel and vanadium, the analyses showed low levels of both on the filters. Finally, meteorological data on the days in question showed that on only one day (June 11, 1976) of the days showing violations of the secondary standard was the wind blowing within 30° from the direction of Brayton Point, and on only two days (February 9 and April 9, 1976) was the wind blowing within 30° from the direction of Somerset.

From the above, EPA has concluded that the non-attainment status of the SEMAPCD is due principally to road sanding operations plus wind-caused reentrainment of sand and other materials. Nevertheless, as indicated by the presence of fly ash in the analysis described above, it can be concluded that the two power stations affected by the SIP revision do contribute to the problem. Consequently, though EPA believes the problem would persist even if both power plants were not in operation, justification exists for continuing to require stringent levels of TSP control at both plants.

As to projected particulate levels associated with the burning of higher sulfur fuels, it is EPA's belief, subject to the results of the State's TSP study, a projected EPA Region I study on particulate nonattainment, as well as other projected and ongoing national studies identifying particulate control measures for both traditional (stationary) and non-traditional sources (including road dust reentrainment), that such incremental amounts could be more than offset by reductions in TSP levels obtained through better controls over sanding and sweeping. In furtherance of this, EPA has required that the Massachusetts Department demonstrate progress towards the development of the TSP attainment plan due in November, 1978, which plan would include measures recommended by the above mentioned studies. In order to assure this, EPA will carefully monitor the development of this plan by the Massachusetts Department. The failure of the Massachusetts Department to satisfactorily demonstrate progress towards the development or submission of the plan as scheduled could impact on the time required to review the terms for a permanent SIP revision after expiration of this temporary revision in May, 1978.

The Massachusetts Department will require particulate stack testing for all sources permitted to burn the higher sulfur fuel and will work with EPA in requiring sulfate testing as necessary. The existing opacity and particulate emission limitation will continue to be enforced by both the Massachusetts Department and EPA. Any source exceeding such particulate regulations will be subject to State and EPA enforcement action, and will not be permitted to continue burning higher sulfur fuel. In addition, the Massachusetts Department has broad authority to require the sources to collect and analyze additional data including sulfate and meteorological data, and will work with EPA in requiring such data as necessary.

The Administrator's decision to approve or disapprove this SIP revision will be based on whether it meets the requirements of sections 110(a)(2)(A) and 110(a)(3) of the Clean Air Act, as amended, and EPA regulations in 40 CFR Part 51. This revision is being proposed pursuant to sections 110(a) and 301 of the Clean Air Act, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1857–(5)(a) and 1857(g)). The EPA solicits comments regarding the approvability of the regulations being considered, especially comments relating to particulate matter consequences and the proposed means of assuring attainment of the $SO_2$ standards in the vicinity of the Duro Finishing plant.

It is therefore proposed to amend 40 CFR Part 52 in the manner set forth below.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

Bureau of Land Management

[ 43 CFR Part 3300 ]

OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF LEASING

Oil and Gas Information Program

AGENCY: Bureau of Land Management, Interior.

ACTION: Proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The proposed rulemaking adds a new § 3301.8 to Subpart 3301 to set up the procedures for the release of specified information with respect to any program, plan, lease, sale or other activity proposed, conducted or approved relating to the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) to the States affected by such activity. This information is needed so the affected States can determine the impact the OCS programs will have and can plan accordingly.

DATE: Comments are due on or before October 26, 1977.

ADDRESS: Send comments to Director (210), Bureau of Land Management, 1800 C Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20240.

Comments will be available for public review in Room 5555 of the above address during regular business hours (7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.).

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Robert C. Bruce, 202-343-8735.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: This proposed rulemaking is being issued under the authority of section 5 of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1334). It specifies the types and kind of information that the Bureau of Land Management will make available to States affected by activities on the Outer Continental Shelf and the conditions under which such information will be provided. This information is needed so the affected States can determine the impact the OCS programs will have and can plan accordingly.

The public's attention is specifically directed to section 3301.8(c) of these proposed regulations, which provides that the Department shall keep confidential the names of the particular parties nominating particular tracts, in order not to compromise the competitive position of any party. This provision is very similar to one included in the OCS Lands Act Amendments of 1977 now being considered by Congress. We concur with the approach taken in S. 9, as appropriate to not compromising competitive positions and to preserving for the Federal owners of the resource full access to tract-specific industry estimates of where the most promising oil and gas prospects are located. This is a different approach than that adopted by the Department in the case of coal, where industry nominations have been made public. The difference reflects differences in the two situations—in the case of coal, industry interest is substantially known already as a result of acquisition of surface rights or adjacent coal, and the government has considerably more information on the location of the resource than it does on the Outer Continental Shelf. also, owners of private surface overlying Federal coal have an interest in learning the identity of nominators which is not paralleled by any interest in the OCS.

The principal author of this proposed rulemaking is Chris Oynes, Division of Minerals Resources, assisted by members of the Bureau's OCS Task Force.

NOTE.—The Department of the Interior has determined that this document does not contain a major proposal requiring preparation of an Economic Impact Analysis under Executive Order 11821 and OMB Circular A-107.

It is hereby determined that the publication of this amendment is not a major Federal action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and that no detailed statement pursuant to section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)(C) is required.

Under the authority of section 5 of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1334) it is proposed to amend Part 3300, Group 3300, Subchapter C, Title 43 of the Code of Federal Regulations as set forth below:

Subpart 3301—Leasing Areas

* * * * *

§ 3301.8 Oil and gas information.

(a) For the purposes of this section, an affected State with respect to any program, plan, lease sale, or other activity proposed, conducted or approved pursuant to the Act, is any State:

(1) The laws of which are declared, pursuant to section 4(a)(2) of the Act, to be the law of the United States for the portion of the Outer Continental Shelf on which such activity is, or is proposed to be conducted;

(2) Which is, or is proposed to be, directly connected by transportation facilities to any artificial island or structure referred to in section 4(a)(1) of the Act;

(3) Which is receiving, or in accordance with the proposed activity, will receive, oil for processing, refining, or transshipment which was extracted from the Outer Continental Shelf and transported by means of vessels or by a combination of means including vessels;

(4) Which is designated by the Secretary as a State in which there is a substantial probability of significant impact on or damage to the coastal, marine, or human environment, or a State in which there will be significant changes in social, governmental or economic conditions resulting from the exploration, development and production of oil and gas anywhere on the Outer Continental Shelf; or

(5) In which the Secretary finds that because of such activity there is, or will be, a significant risk of serious damage, due to factors such as prevailing winds and currents, to the marine and coastal environment in the event of any oilspill, blowout, or release of oil or gas from vessels, pipelines or other transshipment facilities.

(b) The Director shall transmit to any affected State a copy of an index which lists all relevant actual or proposed Departmental programs, plans, reports, environmental statements, lease sale information, and any other similar type of relevant information.

(c) The Director shall transmit to any affected State a copy of any comment or negative nomination timely filed in response to a Call for Nominations and Comments for a proposed sale and shall also provide specific industry interest information on tracts nominated for sale, except that no particular tract shall be identified with the name or names of any particular party so that it will not compromise the competitive position of any party or parties participating in the nominations.

(d) Any information on nominations for the proposed lease sale that would be available to the public under the Freedom of Information Act shall be available to the State without restriction. Information that is not available to the public under that Act and that the Department would not disclose in the exercise of administrative discretion may be made available to the State: Provided, That (1) the Director finds no special circumstances that demand withholding; (2) assurance is given by the State that State law would not require disclosure of the information to the public; and (3) assurance is given by the State that the information would, in fact, be held in confidence.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

[ 47 CFR Parts 91 and 93 ]

[Docket No. 21395; RM-2702; FCC 77-627]

PERMITTING INTERSERVICE GEOGRAPHIC SHARING OF CERTAIN 450 MHz BAND TAXICAB RADIO SERVICE CHANNELS

AGENCY: Federal Communications Commission, Washington, D.C. 20554.

ACTION: Notice of proposed rule making.

SUMMARY: The Federal Communications Commission proposes to amend the regulations to permit interservice geographic sharing of certain frequencies allocated to the Taxicab Radio Service. The proposal is in response to a petition by Forest Industries and is intended to relieve frequency congestion in certain areas.

DATES: Comments must be received by October 31, 1977, and reply comments by November 10, 1977.

ADDRESSES: Federal Communications Commission, Washington, D.C. 20554.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Mr. Herbert Zeiler, Industrial and Public Safety Rules Division, Safety and Special Radio Services Bureau, 202-632-6497.

In the matter of amendment of Parts 91 and 93 of the Commission's Rules to permit interservice geographic sharing of certain 450 MHz band Taxicab Radio Service Channels.

Adopted: September 15, 1977; released: September 21, 1977.

1. Notice is hereby given of proposed rule making in the above-entitled matter.

2. Forest Industries Telecommunications (FIT) has filed a petition requesting amendment of Parts 91 and 93 of the Commission's Rules and Regulations to permit persons eligible in the Forest Product Radio Service to share certain frequencies allocated to the Taxicab Radio Service.[1] Under the FIT proposal, twelve 150 MHz band taxicab tertiary frequencies would be available for Forest Products Radio Service use in areas located outside of standard metropolitan areas (SMA) of 50,000 or more population in eleven different states.[2] Twenty-four 450 MHz band taxicab frequencies (12 pairs) would be made available to entities eligible in the Forest Products Radio Service on a shared basis in the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana. Comments in opposition to the petition were filed by the International Taxicab Association (ITA). FIT filed reply comments.

3. In support of the petition, FIT states that licensing in the Forest Products Radio Service in recent years has experienced rapid growth in the pacific northwest and south.[3] It is argued that such growth has caused severe frequency crowding and congestion in these two areas. Complicating the matter further, according to FIT, is the fact that in the northwest along the U.S./Canadian border, Canadian operation has precluded the use of a number of Forest Products channels while in the south, shortages are experienced because of the required sharing of frequencies with the Petroleum and Manufacturers Radio Services, both heavy users in that area. FIT concludes that since most of Forest Products radio use is rural in nature and Taxicab use is predominately located in and around urban areas, some sort of interservice geographic sharing plan would be the logical approach to relieving the congestion in these areas.

4. ITA opposes the petition. It argues that FIT does not present any channel usage data to document its claims of frequency congestion. In addition, it states that FIT's assumption that taxicab usage is limited to urban areas is not factual and notes, "Taxicab Radio Service licensees make exceptionally intensive use of their frequencies to the point where any sharing is difficult."

5. We have carefully considered the petitioner's request along with comments filed and have concluded that the public interest would be best served by making additional use of 450 MHz band taxicab frequencies, however, only in the more rural areas of the country. Such use would afford some relief to the petitioner. However, for the reasons summarized below we are denying the request for shared use of the 150 MHz band frequencies.

6. The six taxicab frequency pairs sought by FIT are tertiary frequencies, that is to say frequencies separated from the next assignable frequency by only 15 kHz. The 15 kHz adjacencies in this case, are available in the Business Radio Service in areas outside standard metropolitan areas of 50,000 or more population. As business entities, forest industries are eligible to use these frequencies on the same basis as other eligibles in the Business Radio Service. Further, while in all of the other private land mobile services (Parts 89, 91, and 93) assignments with 15 kHz separation are made in the 150-160 MHz band, 30 kHz separations are required in the Business Radio Service. The reasons for this are discussed in the Commission's Report and Order in Docket 17703 (FCC 71-606) and Order in Docket 13930 (FCC 72-312). Basically, 15 kHz assignments require close coordination to assure sufficient geographical separation between systems on 15 kHz adjacencies. In these proceedings, the Commission concluded that this was not practical in the Business Radio Service. The same rationale applies here.

7. The twelve 450 MHz band frequency pairs asked for in the petition are available for taxicab base/mobile operations nationwide, and on a secondary basis for fixed operations under Parts 89 and 91. We have carefully examined the loading on these frequencies and find that they are not used extensively for taxicab operations outside of population centers.

It appears that some of the stated requirements of the petitioner's members could be satisfied on these frequencies without seriously affecting existing or future taxicab use. Accordingly, we propose to grant this portion of the petition. We are, therefore, proposing to make the twelve taxicab frequency pairs[4] in the 450-470 MHz band available for assignment for base/mobile operations in the Forest Products Radio Service in the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana in areas outside standard metropolitan areas of 50,000 or more population. A list of those areas is attached.[5] In those areas, the frequencies, as before, will be available for taxicab operations. To keep taxicab users on par with Forest Products operations in these more rural areas, the maximum transmitter output power will be limited to what is permitted under Part 93, 75 watts.

8. We realize this action will impact secondary use of these base/mobile frequencies under Parts 89 and 91 in these four states. However, with the number of other frequencies available for fixed use, we do not anticipate any problems.[6]

9. Accordingly, the FIT petition is granted to the extent indicated above and in all other respects is denied.

10. Authority for these proposed amendments, as set forth in the Appendix, is contained in Sections 4(i) and 303(r) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended.

11. Pursuant to applicable procedures set forth in Section 1.415 of the Commission's Rules, interested persons may file comments on or before October 31, 1977, and reply comments on or before November 10, 1977. All relevant and timely comments will be considered by the Commission before final action is taken in this proceeding. In reaching its decision, the Commission may also take into account other relevant information before it, in addition to the specific comments invited by this Notice.

12. In accordance with the provisions of Section 1.419 of the Commission's Rules an original and five copies of all statements, briefs, or comments filed

TRANSPORTATION OF LIQUIDS BY PIPELINE

Seams on Adjacent Pipe Lengths

AGENCY: Materials Transportation Bureau, Office of Pipeline Safety Operations, DOT.

ACTION: Notice of proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The Materials Transportation Bureau (MTB) is considering revoking the requirement contained in § 195.218 that the longitudinal seams on adjacent pipe lengths be offset. This notice of proposed rulemaking sets forth the MTB's reasoning why it does not consider the requirement any longer necessary and solicits public comments concerning the proposed action.

DATE: Comments must be received on or before November 1, 1977.

ADDRESS: Comments should be sent to: Director, Office of Pipeline Safety Operations, Department of Transportation, Trans Point Building, 2100 Second Street SW., Washington, D.C. 20590. All comments received will be available for inspection and copying at Docket Room 6500, Trans Point Building.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Peggy Hammond, 202-426-0135.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: In connection with construction of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System, the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. (Alyeska) twice requested waivers from compliance with the general requirements of § 195.-218 for a total of eight girth welds. The information furnished by Alyeska in support of their requests and by welding engineering experts outside the government, supported MTB's granting (41 FR 38202, September 9, 1976, and 42 FR 42943, August 25, 1977) the requested waivers. In addition to finding that the waivers were not inconsistent with pipeline safety and were in the public interest, MTB concluded that the requirement of § 195.218 does not appear necessary for safety. Because of the significance of these decisions and their impact on pipelines to be constructed by others, MTB is considering removing the requirement of § 195.218 from 49 CFR Part 195. MTB is of the opinion that the advancement of technology for pipe manufacturing and pipe welding has made obsolete the need to offset the longitudinal seam when welding lengths of pipe together. MTB's opinion is based upon the following reasons:

1. The ductility of the pipe and girth weld metals presently in general use provides for localized yielding where high residual stresses may exist and thereby prevents fracture initiation and failure of the weld. (Section 195.218 was adopted when pipe and weld materials in general use were less ductile than materials in general use at present.)

2. The similarity of mechanical properties between the girth weld and pipe metals that are presently in general use minimizes the likelihood of any concentration of residual stresses existing at the intersection of welds and surrounding heat affected zone.

3. The fact that longitudinal seams are ground flush with the inside pipe circumference at the joint mitigates the likelihood of any concentration of residual stresses caused by excess metal at the intersection of welds.

MTB invites all interested persons to participate in this proposed rulemaking by submitting in triplicate such written comments, data, and information as they may desire not later than November 1, 1977. All comments received by the close of the comment period will be considered so far as practicable in developing the final rule. Communications should identify the docket and notice numbers and be submitted to the above address. This proposal may be changed in light of comments received. No hearing is contemplated, but one may be held at a time and place set in a later notice in the FEDERAL REGISTER if requested by an interested person desiring an opportunity to comment orally at a public hearing and raising a genuine issue.

IMPACT EVALUATION: MTB has determined that this document does not contain a major proposal requiring preparation of an Inflation Impact Statement under Executive Order 11821, as amended, and OMB Circular A-107.

Principal authors: Ralph T. Simmons, Regulations Specialist, and Robert L. Beauregard, Attorney.

In consideration of the foregoing, it is proposed to amend Title 49 CFR by revoking and reserving § 195.218.

Proposed Threatened Status for Greenback Cutthroat Trout

AGENCY: Fish and Wildlife Service, Interior.

ACTION: Proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The Service issues a proposed rulemaking pursuant to the Endangered Species Act of 1973, which would reclassify from Endangered status to Threatened status the greenback cutthroat trout (Salmo clarki stomias). Conservation efforts by State and Federal agencies on behalf of this species have restored it to the point where it is no longer endangered. Threats from hybridization and habitat alteration exist but are not serious enough to require an Endangered status; they do indicate, however, that the trout is Threatened. The greenback cutthroat trout occurs only in Colorado and this proposed rulemaking would permit the species to be taken in accordance with the laws of that State.

DATES: All comments and materials with regard to this proposed rulemaking received no later than December 27, 1977, will be considered.

ADDRESSES: Comments and materials concerning this proposed rulemaking should be sent to the Director (FWS/OES), U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240.

Comments and materials received will be available for public inspection during normal business hours at the Service's Office of Endangered Species, Suite 1100, 1612 K Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20240.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Mr. Keith Schreiner, Associate Director, Federal Assistance, Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240 (202-343-4646).

BACKGROUND

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The greenback cutthroat trout is currently classified as an endangered species. It was originally listed as endangered under the Endangered Species Conservation Act of 1969, and evidence on hand at that time indicated that it was endangered due to competition from hybridization with introduced species of trout and deterioration of its habitat. We now have evidence that the greenback cutthroat trout is no longer endangered as defined by the Endangered Species Act of 1973 and should be reclassified as Threatened.

Greenback cutthroat trout populations have been located or reintroduced in a number of waters within its former range in the headwaters of the South Platte and Arkansas River drainages, and efforts to eliminate introduced species of trout in selected areas which could hybridize with the greenback cutthroat trout are succeeding. The greenback cutthroat trout is not presently in danger of extinction throughout all or a significant portion of its range.

Section 4(a) of the Act states:

General.—(1) The Secretary shall by regulation determine whether any species is an endangered species or a threatened species because of any of the following factors:

(1) The present or threatened destruction, modification, or curtailment of its habitat or range;

(2) Overutilization for commercial, sporting, scientific, or educational purposes;

(3) Disease or predation;

(4) The inadequacy of existing regulatory mechanisms; or

(5) Other natural or manmade factors affecting its continued existence.

This authority has been delegated to the Director.

SUMMARY OF FACTORS AFFECTING THE SPECIES

Specifically, we have evidence that conditions (1) and (5) above are pertinent to determination that the greenback cutthroat trout be classed as threatened.

(1) The present or threatened destruction, modification, or curtailment of its habitat or range. The greenback cutthroat trout is less tolerant of adverse conditions than are other trouts such as brown trout or rainbow trout. Optimum conditions of oxygen, temperature, water purity, etc., from the greenback cutthroat trout appear to be more stringent than for other trouts. The original distribution of the greenback cutthroat trout was the headwaters of the South Platte and Arkansas River basins. Permanent populations were restricted to the mountains and foothills because the warm, turbid conditions in the South Platte and Arkansas Rivers in the plains did not provide suitable habitat. The extirpation of the greenback cutthroat trout proceeded very rapidly due to competition and hybridization with introduced trouts and loss and degradation of habitat from mining, logging, grazing, and irrigation projects. By 1930, the greenback cutthroat trout in its pure form was commonly assumed to be extinct.

Protection of presently occupied habitat varies. Como Creek and Black Hollow Creek are on Roosevelt National Forest lands with the exception of a few hundred yards of the head of Como Creek, which is on the grounds of the Arctic and Alpine Research Institute of the University of Colorado. Bear Lake, Forest Canyon, Hidden Valley, and Caddis Lake are on lands of the Rocky Mountains National Park; Island Lake and the Boulder Watershed Lakes are on land owned by the City of Boulder. The headwaters of the Little South Platte River is on Roosevelt National Forest and Rocky Mountain National Park. South Huerfano Creek is on a private ranch surrounded by San Isabel National Forest and Florence Creek is on the Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservations. The habitats on public lands appear to be safe from degradation. Waters on private land either known to contain greenback cutthroat trout or in the historic range and possibly containing undiscovered populations continue to be threatened by habitat destruction due to logging, mining, grazing, or water development projects.

(5) Other natural or manmade factors affecting its continued existence. The greenback cutthroat trout is not likely to coexist successfully with other species of trout. The introduction of nonnative trout within the range of the greenback cutthroat trout presents the most serious threat to its continued existence. Hybridization usually occurs with other subspecies of cutthroat trout and with rainbow trout. Eastern brook trout do not hybridize with greenback cutthroat trout wherever the two species occur together. Introduction of nonnative trout into greenback cutthroat habitat by fishermen is a threat to the species, as is destruction of barrier dams.

In spite of the above problems, there is evidence that the greenback cutthroat trout would benefit from regulated taking by noncommercial fishing in some areas. Regulated fishing on streams and lakes which have reached their carrying capacity would be beneficial to the population and increases public support for further restoration projects on public lands.

The Director intends that finally adopted rules be as responsive as possible to the conservation of the greenback cutthroat trout; he therefore desires to obtain the comments and suggestions of the public, other concerned governmental agencies, and private interests on these proposed rules.

Final promulgation of these regulations will take into consideration the comments received by the Director. Such comments and additional information received may lead the Director to adopt final regulations that differ from this proposal.

EFFECT OF THE RULEMAKING

The effects of this determination and rulemaking include, but are not necessarily limited to, those discussed below.

Endangered species regulations already published in Title 50 of the Code of Federal Regulations set forth a series of general prohibitions and exceptions which apply to all endangered species. All of these prohibitions and exceptions also apply to any threatened species unless a special rule pertaining to the threatened species has been published and indicates otherwise. In the case of the greenback cutthroat, a special regulation has been proposed which would allow "take" of the species in accordance with State laws.

This proposed rulemaking, if finalized, would not change the eligibility of the greenback cutthroat trout for the protection provided by section 7 of the Act. That section reads as follows:

INTERAGENCY COOPERATION

The Secretary shall review other programs administered by him and utilize such programs in furtherance of the purposes of this Act. All other Federal departments and agencies shall, in consultation with and with the assistance of the Secretary, utilize their authorities in furtherance of the purposes of this Act by carrying out programs for the conservation of endangered species and threatened species listed pursuant to section 4 of this Act and by taking such action necessary to insure that actions authorized, funded, or carried out by them do not jeopardize the continued existence of such endangered species and threatened species or result in the destruction or modification of habitat of such species which is determined by the Secretary, after consultation as appropriate with the affected States, to be critical.

Although no Critical Habitat has yet been determined for this species, the other provisions of section 7 are applicable.

Pursuant to section 4(b) of the Act, the Director will notify the Governor of Colorado, with respect to this proposal and request the comments and recommendations before making final determinations.

PUBLIC COMMENTS SOLICITED

The Director intends that the rules finally adopted will be as accurate and effective as possible in the conservation of any Endangered or Threatened species. Therefore, any comments or suggestions from the public, other concerned governmental agencies, the scientific community, industry, private interest, or any other interested party concerning any aspect of these proposed rules are hereby solicited. Comments particularly are sought concerning:

(1) Biological or other relevant data concerning any threat (or lack thereof) to the greenback cutthroat trout;

(2) The location of and reasons why any habitat of the greenback cutthroat trout should or should not be determined to be Critical Habitat as provided for by section 7 of the Act;

(3) Additional information concerning the range and distribution of the greenback cutthroat trout.

Final promulgation of the regulations on the greenback cutthroat trout will take into consideration the comments and any additional information received by the Director and such communications may lead him to adopt final regulations that differ from this proposal.

An environmental assessment has been prepared in conjunction with this proposal. It is on file in the Service's Office of Endangered Species, 1612 K Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20240, and may be examined during regular business hours or can be obtained by mail. A determination will be made at the time of final rulemaking as to whether this is a major Federal action which would significantly affect the quality of the human environment within the meaning of section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

This proposed rulemaking is issued under the authority contained in the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531–1543; 87 Stat. 884), and the primary authors are Sandy Hamilton and Dr. James D. Williams, Office of Endangered Species (202–343–7814).

Accordingly, it is hereby proposed to amend Part 17, Subchapter B of Chapter I, Title 50 of the Code of Federal Regulations, as set forth below:

It is proposed to amend § 17.11 by adding in alphabetical order the following to the list of animals:

|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Common name | Scientific name | Population | Known distribution | Portion of range where threatened or endangered | Status | When listed | Special rules |
| Fishes: Trout, greenback cutthroat. | Salmo clarki stomias. | NA | U.S.A. (Colorado) | Entire | T | | 17.44(f) |

§ 17.44 [Amended]

Section 17.44 is amended by adding a new § (f) as follows:

* * * * *

(f) Greenback cutthroat trout (Salmo clarki stomias).

(1) All provisions of § 17.31 apply to this species, except that it may be taken in accordance with applicable State law.

(2) Any violation of State law will also be a violation of the Act.

NOTE.—The Service has determined that this document does not contain a major proposal requiring preparation of an Economic Impact Statement under Executive Order 11949 and OMB Circular A–107.

Dated: September 20, 1977.

NATIONAL PLANT GENETIC RESOURCES BOARD

Intent To Reestablish

The Department of Agriculture proposes to reestablish the National Plant Genetic Resources Board for a 2-year period.

This Board was originally established in July 1975 under the Secretary's own authorship.

The purpose of the Board is to advise the Secretary of Agriculture and officers of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges in order to assess national needs and identify high priority programs for conserving and utilizing plant genetic resources, including such things as collection, maintenance and description of genetic stocks, and utilization of the stocks in plant improvement programs.

The Secretary has determined that continuation of the Board is necessary and in the public interest in order to assure adequate supplies of food, feed, and fiber by minimizing the genetic vulnerability of crops.

Comments of interested persons concerning the reestablishment of this Board may be submitted to Dr. C. F. Lewis, Staff Scientist, National Program Staff, Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, BARC-West, Beltsville, Maryland 20705 on or before October 11, 1977 (15 days after publication).

All written submissions made pursuant to this notice will be made available for public inspection at the Staff Scientist's office during regular business hours (7 CFR 1.27(b)).

[Docket 30091; Order 77-9-64]

BRITISH CALEDONIAN AIRWAYS LIMITED (BCAL)

Order To Show Cause

Adopted by the Civil Aeronautics Board at its office in Washington, D.C. on the 19th day of September, 1977.

Pursuant to Order 73-333 approved March 9, 1973, British Caledonian Airways Limited (BCAL) was granted a foreign air carrier permit authorizing it to engage in scheduled air service between the coterminal points London and Manchester, England, and Prestwick, Scotland, and the terminal point New York; and between London, England, the intermediate point Chicago, Illinois, and the terminal point Los Angeles, California. On November 19, 1976, BCAL requested amendment of its permit to enable it to operate foreign air transportation between points in the United Kingdom and Atlanta, Georgia, and Houston, Texas. The authority requested was not contemplated under the then existing Air Services Agreement between the United States and the United Kingdom. An answer in support of BCAL's application was filed by the City of Houston, and Delta Airlines has filed a petition for leave to intervene.

On August 1, 1977, the British Government designated BCAL to serve U.K. Routes 4 and 11 (Atlanta/Houston combination and All-Cargo services) contained in the new U.S.-U.K. Air Services Agreement signed July 23, 1977. As noted, BCAL's application for amendment of its foreign air carrier permit to include authority to operate between points in the United Kingdom and Atlanta, Georgia, and Houston, Texas, had been filed prior to signing of the new Agreement.

In view of the fact that BCAL has previously been granted a foreign air carrier permit by the Board (for New York/Chicago/Los Angeles authority), and that the United Kingdom has now designated the carrier to operate the Atlanta and Houston services under the new Agreement, we see no valid reason to conduct lengthy hearings to amend BCAL's permit in accordance with the Agreement and the current U.K. designation. On at least two past occasions (Dockets 24509 and 23972), the Board found that BCAL was substantially owned and effectively controlled by citizens of the United Kingdom, that it was financially and operationally fit, and that it was in the public interest to grant BCAL's requests for transatlantic authority. We are aware of no changes in BCAL's structure or operations which would require us to modify those findings.

BCAL's currently outstanding foreign air carrier permit authority is based on a designation to serve New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles. BCAL does not now operate scheduled services under its current permit. Moreover, BCAL's rights to operate to those points under the revised bilateral Air Transport Services Agreement will expire if it is not designated under the new Agreement to provide all or part of the rights contained in its present permit by November 1, 1977. The Government of the United Kingdom has not expressed its intentions with regard to BCAL's present operating authority. It would not be in the public interest to leave such authority outstanding in an amended permit should BCAL's rights under the new bilateral to operate its presently authorized scheduled services terminate. Accordingly, we will provide in the amendment permit that BCAL's authority to serve New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles will terminate if, and to the extent that, BCAL is not designated by the United Kingdom to serve these points on or prior to November 1, 1977. This would place BCAL's permit authority in conformance with the new U.S.-U.K. Agreement.

In view of the foregoing and all the facts of record, the Board tentatively finds and concludes that:

(a) British Caledonia Airways Limited (BCAL) is substantially owned and effectively controlled by citizens of the United Kingdom.

(b) It is in the public interest to amend the foreign air carrier permit issued to BCAL pursuant to Order 73-3-33;

(i) To authorize the carrier, subject to conditions, to engage in foreign air transportation with respect to persons, property and mail between the coterminal points London and Manchester, England, and Prestwick, Scotland, and the coterminal points Houston, Texas, and Atlanta, Georgia; and

(ii) To provide for termination of the currently outstanding authority of the carrier to serve New York, Chicago and Los Angeles on November 1, 1977; Provided, That such authority shall continue in effect if, but only to the extent that, on or prior to November 1, 1977, the holder is designated by the United Kingdom Government to exercise such rights, or a part thereof, pursuant to the air services agreement between the United States and the United Kingdom, effective July 23, 1977.

(c) The public interest requires that the exercise of the privileges granted by such amended permit shall be subject to the terms, conditions and limitations contained in the specimen form of permit attached to this Order and to such other reasonable terms, conditions and limitations required by the public as may from time-to-time be prescribed by the Board.

(d) BCAL is fit, willing and able properly to perform the above-described foreign air transportation, and to conform to the provisions of the Act and the rules, regulations, and requirements of the Board thereunder.

(e) A hearing on the application of BCAL is not required in the public interest.

(f) Except to the extent granted, the application of BCAL, and all other requests in this proceeding should be denied.

The Board further tentatively finds, in view of the limited services proposed pursuant to rights granted in the bilateral agreement previously entered into, that amendment of BCAL's foreign air carrier permit would not constitute a "major" Federal action significantly affecting the quality of the environment within the meaning of section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA). Similarly, we tentatively find that our action would not be inconsistent with the policy objectives of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act of 1975 (EPACA).[1]

All interested persons will be given 15 days following the date of service of this order to show cause why the tentative findings and conclusions set forth herein should not be made final. We expect such persons to direct their objections, if any, to specific issues and to support such objections with detailed analyses. If any evidentiary hearing is requested, each objector should name the specific markets or other issues with respect to which a hearing is requested and should state in detail why such a hearing is necessary and what relevant and material facts he would expect to establish through such a hearing. Vague, general or unsupported objections will not be entertained.

Accordingly, it is ordered that: 1. All interested persons are directed to show cause why the Board should not make final the tentative findings and conclusions set forth herein and why an amended foreign air carrier permit in the form of the attached specimen permit should not, subject to approval by the President pursuant to Section 801 of the Act, be issued to British Caledonian Airways Limited;

(a) Authorizing the carrier, subject to conditions, to engage in foreign air transportation with respect to persons, property and mail between the coterminal points London and Manchester, England, and Prestwick, Scotland, and the coterminal points Houston, Texas, and Atlanta, Georgia; and

(b) Providing for termination of the currently outstanding authority of the carrier to serve New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles on November 1, 1977; Provided that such authority shall continue in effect if, but only to the extent that, on or prior to November 1, 1977, the holder is designated by the United Kingdom Government to exercise such rights, or a part thereof, pursuant to the air services agreement between the United States and the United Kingdom, effective July 23, 1977.

2. Any interested persons having objections to the issuance, without hearing, of an order making final the tentative findings and conclusions herein, or to the issuance of the proposed amended foreign air carrier permit, shall, within 15 days after the date of service of this order, file with the Board and serve on the persons named in paragraph 5 a statement of objections specifying the part or parts of the tentative findings or conclusions objected to, together with a summary of testimony, statistical data and such evidence expected to be relied upon to support the statement of objections;

3. If timely and properly supported objections hereto are filed, full consideration will be accorded the matters or issues raised therein before further action is taken by the Board; Provided, that the Board may proceed to enter an order in accordance with the tentative findings and conclusions herein if it determines that there are no factual issues presented that warrant the holding of an evidentiary hearing.[2]

4. In the event no objections are filed to this order, all further procedural steps will be deemed to have been waived and the Board may proceed to enter an order in accordance with the tentative findings and conclusions herein; and

5. This order shall be served upon British Caledonian Airways Limited, Delta Air Lines, Pan American World Airways, the Ambassador of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the Department of State.

This order shall be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER and transmitted to the President.

By the Civil Aeronautics Board.[3]

PHYLLIS T. KAYLOR,
Secretary.

[1] BCAL's proposed new operations to Houston, as set forth in its application, will consume a maximum of some 18 million gallons of fuel annually. However, the public service benefits of the new service as well as the public interest in compliance with the revised U.S.-U.K. Bilateral Air Services Agreement greatly outweigh any likely negative effect on fuel consumption. Service to Atlanta, Georgia, may not be operated nonstop until July 23, 1980.

[2] Since provision is made for the filing of objections to this order, petitions for reconsideration will not be entertained.

[3] All Members concurred.

The holder shall not grant stopover privileges at Chicago, Illinois on flights over segment 3.

The holder shall conform to the airworthiness and airman competency requirements prescribed by the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland for international air service.

This permit shall be subject to all applicable provisions of any treaty, convention, or agreement affecting international air transportation now in effect, or that may become effective during the period this permit remains in effect, to which the United States and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland shall be parties.

By accepting this permit, the holder waives any right it may possess to assert any defense of sovereign immunity from suit in any action or proceeding instituted against the holder in any court or other tribunal in the United States (or its territories or possessions) based upon any claim arising out of operations by the holder under this permit.

The holder (1) shall not provide foreign air transportation under this permit unless there is in effect third-party liability insurance in the amount of $1,000,000 or more to meet potential liability claims which may arise in connection with its operations under this permit, and unless there is on file with the Docket Section of the Board a statement showing the name and address of the insurance carrier and the amounts and liability limits of the third-party liability insurance provided, and (2) shall not provide foreign air transportation with respect to persons unless there is in effect liability insurance sufficient to cover the obligations assumed in CAB Agreement 18900, and unless there is on file with the Docket Section of the Board a statement showing the name and address of the insurance carrier and the amounts and liability limits of the passenger liability insurance provided. Upon request, the Board may authorize the holder to supply the name and address of an insurance syndicate in lieu of the names and addresses of the member insurers.

The exercise of the privileges granted hereby shall be subject to such other reasonable terms, conditions, and limitations required by the public interest as may from time to time be prescribed by the Board.

This permit shall be effective on _____, 1977. Unless otherwise terminated at an earlier date pursuant to the terms of any applicable treaty, convention or agreement, this permit shall terminate (1) upon the effective date of any treaty, convention or agreement, or amendment thereto, which shall have the effect of eliminating the routes authorized from the routes which may be operated by airlines designated by the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (or in the event of the elimination of any part of a route or routes authorized, the authority granted shall terminate to the extent of such elimination), or (2) upon the effective date of any permit granted by the Board to any other carrier designated by the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland in lieu of the holder hereof, or (3) upon the termination or expiration of the Air Services Agreement between the Government of the United States and the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland effective July 23, 1977: Provided, however, That clause (3) of this paragraph shall not apply if, prior to the occurrence of the event specified in clause (3), the operation of the foreign air transportation herein authorized becomes the subject of any treaty, convention, or agreement to which the United States and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland are or shall become parties.

In witness whereof, the Civil Aeronautics Board has caused this permit to be executed by the Secretary of the Board, and the seal of the Board to be affixed hereto, on the _____.

INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION

Order Relating to North Atlantic Passenger Fares

Adopted by the Civil Aeronautics Board at its office in Washington, D.C. on the 16th day of September, 1977.

By tariff revisions filed for travel to commence on September 15, 23 or 26, 1977, Pan American World Airways, Inc. (Pan American), Trans World Airlines, Inc. (TWA), British Airways, Air-India, and Iran National Airlines Corporation (Iran Air) propose new standby, budget and super-APEX (advance purchase excursion) fares for use between New York and London. The budget and standby fares are proposed at $256 roundtrip, and the super-APEX at $290 roundtrip; all were filed to compete with Laker Airways' Skytrain service which is expected to begin operations September 26, 1977 at a New York-London fare of $236.48.[1]

Numerous complaints were filed by various parties, and the fares were later incorporated, with some changes, into an agreement among the members of the International Air Transport Association (IATA). Additional comments were received on the IATA agreement. On August 30 the Board gave notice that it would hear oral argument on the ITA agreement and the tariff filings. The oral argument was heard on September 7, 1977. This order deals with the IATA agreement. A separate order dealing with the tariffs now on file is being submitted to the President.

For the reasons explained below, the Board has decided to approve the standby fares, disapprove the super-APEX, and approve the budget fare subject to an increase to a more appropriate fare level.

The Proposals

Laker's New York-London one-way Skytrain fares are $135 eastbound and £59 westbound, or about $236.48 roundtrip from New York at current exchange rates. Briefly, the IATA agreement proposes three New York-London fares in competition with Laker: (1) a standby fare at $256 roundtrip; (2) a budget fare at $256 roundtrip; and (3) a super-APEX fare at $299 roundtrip. The standby fare would be available for sale beginning at 4 a.m. on the day of departure with a cutoff three hours before flight time (two hours in London).

The budget fare would require payment at least 21 days before the week of departure, with the exact selection of departure and return days and flights at the option of the carrier, which would inform the passenger not earlier than 10 days before the first day of the week of travel. Capacity for both fares combined would be limited to 700 seats in each direction, per week, for each of the third/fourth freedom carriers (Pan American, TWA and British Airways), while other carriers operating New York-London service would have lower limits.[2] The super-APEX fare is simply a reduction in the level of the current New York-London APEX fare from $350 to $299, basic season, and carries the customary APEX capacity restriction of 25 percent of a carrier's economy-class seats. Super-APEX fares would be made available at other U.S. and European points with a smaller reduction than would apply to New York-London. The IATA agreement was proposed to become effective September 1, 1977, with travel under the standby and budget fares to commence September 15, and super-APEX travel to commence October 1, 1977. A chart comparing the various fares is set out as Appendix A.

Positions of the Parties

Pan American, TWA and British Airways support fares proposed in the agreement as appropriate competitive responses to Skytrain, which the Board assured them it would allow in its order granting Laker's permit. However, each carrier is the proponent of a different option as the best competitive response: TWA, the standby; Pan American, the budget; and British Airways, the super-APEX.

Several parties oppose the proposals on the grounds that they would destroy the supplemental (charter-only) carriers and charter tour organizers, who are alleged to have been the only real competitive spur in providing low-cost transportation and price competition on the North Atlantic; that once the supplementals are eliminated there will be nothing to prevent the IATA carriers from dropping the discounts and raising fares to excessive levels. These parties allege generally that the proposed fares are an over-reaction to Skytrain, would be considerably more attractive to the public than either Skytrain or charters, and are below-cost, uneconomic and predatory. Arguing along these lines are the National Air Carrier Association (NACA), Brendan Tours, Inc. (Brendan), Charter Travel Corporation (CTC), The Educational Cooperative (TEC), the Air Charter Tour Operators of American (ACTOA) and United Buying Service, Inc. (UBS), Unitours, a California Corporation (Unitours), and Vouga Travel Agency (Vouga).

Laker asserts that the proposed fares are not an appropriate response to Skytrain and are essentially conventional reservations service, which is obviously more attractive to the public, offered at a reduced, below-cost level, and would not only destroy Skytrain but would wipe out the charter market as well.

The American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA) supports approval of the budget and super-APEX fares, alleging that they are distinguishable from conventional reservations service by their uncertainties and ticketing and service restrictions, which will also prevent them from being a serious threat to the charter market. ASTA asserts that the budget and super-APEX fares will maintain the value and flexibility of conventional marketing arrangements, and the expertise afforded by travel agents. In contrast, ASTA urges disapproval of the standby fare on the ground that it would not preserve these important values, and is not a proper way to market scheduled air transportation.

The United States Department of Justice (DOJ) opposes the fares with reluctance stating that, while the fares may offer low-price benefits to consumers in the short run, they are likely to be predatory with respect to charter services in the long run. Once the supplemental carriers are eliminated, DOJ argues, the IATA carriers could discontinue discounts and raise fares, and foreign regulatory and political hostility to charter competition could make subsequent re-entry of low-price competition impossible.

[1] Aerlinte Eireann Teoranta (Aerlinte) has also filed super-APEX fares for travel between the United States and Ireland.

The Board's Office of the Consumer Advocate (OCA) expresses the same concerns as DOJ, but believes that the standby fare might be acceptable if offered at a higher level to reflect its greater value and cost than Skytrain.

The positions and arguments of the parties are set forth in greater detail in Attachment B. With the exception of Air India, Iran Air, Aerlinte, and Vouga, all of the parties participated in the oral argument.

FINDINGS

The Board has determined to approve the standby fare and to disapprove the super-APEX. We accept the concept of the budget fare, but will disapprove its use at the proposed level for the reasons set forth below. In reaching these results, we begin with one basic premise: that the scheduled carriers are entitled to make a competitive response to Laker and, more fundamentally, that the traveling public is entitled to the benefits of price competition, which should not necessarily be confined to merely passive imitations of Skytrain. The Board made this clear when we granted Laker's permit, and indicated that the present situation may be a golden opportunity to encourage imagination and innovation in the North Atlantic air travel market. As we stated in Order 77-6-68:

> Our "concern is to ensure that the experiment in low-fare scheduled service represented by Laker's proposed "Skytrain" will be conducted in a competitive environment in which U.S. carriers can take part on a fair and equal basis, one in which they not only are permitted to compete directly and on equal terms with Laker's service, but also are permitted to innovate and experiment with similar but not necessarily identical forms of low-fare scheduled service. In granting a permit for Laker's "Skytrain", we are by no means endorsing this particular concept as the only or even the best possible form of low-fare scheduled service. On the contrary, we tend to believe some of the restrictions imposed on Laker by its U.K. license are unnecessarily burdensome to the traveling public, and may even threaten the ultimate viability of the service. Others, such as the rigid predetermination of the capacity to be offered, are flatly contrary to U.S. policy, and we could not agree to such restrictions being imposed on U.S. carriers.
> "The carriers' response might comprise a separate low-fare service similar to Laker's, or it might comprise, for example, a standby service on presently scheduled flights. We see no reason why the latter alternative should be ruled out in advance. A standby service by definition does not displace normal-fare passengers, the economic vice of most promotional fares which allow or require booking well in advance of departure, and probably does not have the same tendency to induce increases in capacity as other discount fares do. (footnote omitted).
> "The foregoing does not necessarily exhaust the kinds of competitive responses to "Skytrain" by the existing scheduled carriers which might be deemed appropriate; it simply illustrates one possible kind of response which we would consider reasonably within the scope of an experiment in low-fare scheduled service."[3]

Given this proposition, the critical question for us to decide is whether the proposed fares do, in fact, constitute an appropriate competitive response; and, to advert to our more fundamental premise, whether they are a proper part of a healthy competitive process in the basic public interest. We have before us the contention, forcefully expressed, that they are not; that, because they would be much more attractive, both in price and quality, than either Skytrain or charters, they would result in the elimination of both Laker and the supplemental carriers from the market; and that without the low-price innovators, the market would be at the mercy of the IATA carriers, who would undoubtedly raise fares, free from the discipline of even potential price competition.

The proponents have alleged that all of the proposed fares offer, in the short run, the significant public benefits of innovation, low fares and a wide range of price/quality options; and that since there is no way of predicting precisely what will happen in the marketplace, the Board should approve all three fares and let the market itself, which alone is infallible, determine the outcome. On the other hand, we must give at least equal consideration to the question of long-run public interest, which hinges on the magnitude of the threat that the fares pose to Laker and the supplementals, and the risk that they will not be able to re-enter if once driven from the marketplace. In view of the hazard that the public may therefore be deprived of the benefits of price competition we cannot afford to be myopic.

With this resolve, we proceed to our evaluation of the long-run public interest implications of the IATA proposals. The largest and most crucial question is whether it is in fact necessary and desirable to offer some protection to the supplementals and Laker, thus putting ourselves in the uncomfortable position of balancing or fine-tuning competition among the different participants on the market. We believe it is. There is no doubt that the supplemental carriers have been the prime movers in genuinely cutting prices in this market, which is crucial to them, and their benefits to travelers and demonstrable. Neither is there doubt that, while the scheduled carriers have always played a large role in the charter business, their main interest has been to preserve the predominance of scheduled service, and it has been the supplemental carriers, with only charters to offer, who have played the major role as a good and stimulus in offering low-cost transportation to the public. The loss of this competitive spur, we believe, would involve too great a risk to the public, especially since supplemental carriers, once driven from the marketplace, would find it extremely difficult to re-enter given the historical attitude of many European governments. Finally, the theatre of competition on the North Atlantic has thus far been limited to a cast of two classes of carrier; it would be a genuine tragedy if the newest player, Laker, were knocked out in the first act of the new drama about to be performed. The Board has taken very large steps forward in recent years in making the North Atlantic market more responsive to the needs of the impecunious traveler. We are not now prepared to risk unraveling the thread of competition, already so painstakingly woven into the fabric of the market, for the sake of what would likely prove to be purely temporary gains. For the reasons explained below, the Board is convinced that the budget fare, as now constituted, and the super-APEX fare present a serious threat to the supplementals, as well to Laker.

Given our determination to preserve a reasonable balance in the competitive environment, the next question we must answer is: how serious is the potential threat to Laker and the supplementals. At this point we shall examine the three proposals separately to evaluate whether they are an appropriate response to Skytrain, and whether they would unduly threaten the supplementals. At the outset, we consider the contention raised by the complainants that the proposed fares are prima facie predatory and unreasonable because they are significantly below average fully-allocated scheduled-service costs, and should be disapproved for this reason alone. We reject this argument. The fares are designed as fill-up, and are applicable during a period which is predominantly off-season, when capacity levels are high in relation to demand.[4] Under these circumstances, we are not prepared to disapprove the fares on grounds of cost alone, where they are clearly in excess of marginal costs.

We have reviewed the B-747 cost experienced by Pan American and TWA for New York-London operations during Calendar 1976, using standard "Version 6" costing methodology, and find that, on a composite basis, their economy class total economic cost was $376.26 round-trip, at their experienced 58.8 percent load factor. At other load factors, this per-passenger cost would range from a high of $395.12 at 55 percent to a low of $276.44 at 95 percent. These figures, however, reflect fully-allocated costs, including return, and as we have already observed, we regard it as improper to apply a fully-allocated cost test, when the marginal cost of this service is clearly much below that. At a 60 percent load factor, non-capacity costs represent about 37 percent of total cost, or approximately $140.09 on a roundtrip basis, a figure well exceeded by the proposed fare levels of $256 and $299, even allowing for cost inflation over recent months.[5] But it is evident that if we use short-run marginal cost as a test for evaluating scheduled fares offered in competition with charters, the supplementals will not be able to long survive such competition. The supplementals' average costs, while much lower than scheduled carriers' average costs, due to the charters' inherent economic advantage in operating at extremely high load factors and other efficiencies, will always be higher than the scheduled carriers' short-run marginal costs, i.e., the added cost of carrying additional passengers in otherwise empty seats.[5a] To permit the scheduled carriers to price on this basis would indeed place a powerful weapon in their hands. There is ample basis in regulatory theory for the proposition that rates in competitive situations such as these should cover long-run, not merely short-run, marginal costs.[5b]

[4] This is clearly so with respect to the standby fare. Moreover, for present purposes we are assuming this is also the case with respect to the budget and super-APEX fares, both of which require the carrier to make advance projections of seat availability. Nevertheless, there is a serious question as to the carrier's ability to make such advance projections accurately, particularly in the case of the super-APEX which requires reservations and ticketing at least 45 days in advance. To the extent these fares would preempt higher-fare traffic, the use of only non-capacity costs (see fn. 5 infra) as a test of reasonableness would understate the costs properly attributable to this traffic.

Turning now to the issue of the fares' relative attractiveness and competitive impact on Laker and the supplementals, we find that the standby fare is the most appropriate response to Skytrain. It is clearly distinguishable from regular reservations service and is the closest imitator of Skytrain; although the standby passenger could get a confirmed seat between 4 a.m. and three hours before departure (two hours at Heathrow), he could not make advance reservations, and the carrier may close off standby sales for a particular flight at any time to satisfy the requirements of regular fare passengers already booked, and thereby comply with the weekly standby/budget fare capacity limit. On the other hand, it is clear that, in some respects, the standby fare could prove more attractive than Skytrain notwithstanding the $20 price differential. The standby fare offers a greater free baggage allowance; free meals; sales through agents and on credit cards;[6] and a confirmed seat after check-in beginning at 4 a.m. However, the free meals are more than adequately compensated for by the $20 price difference, and the other advantages over Skytrain stem from the limitations of Laker's U.K. permit. Laker is now seeking removal of restrictions relating to baggage, agent sales and time of check-in, and we certainly would not oppose suitable amendments of the Skytrain tariff on file with the Board if the Civil Aviation Authority grants Laker's request for such liberalizations, which would put Skytrain on an equal footing with the standby fares.

As for the charter market, it is composed primarily of conventional vocation travelers, many of whom travel in family groups, have fixed vacation times of limited duration, and must therefore plan in advance and purchase reserved hotel accommodations and other ground arrangements, which may require deposits. Often the air and ground portions are purchased together as part of an overall package put together by a tour organizer. Few such passengers would be able to take advantage of the standby fare, because of its uncertainties. The Board discounted the danger to charters from Skytrain for similar reasons when we granted Laker's permit, and since the standby closely approximates Skytrain its threat should not be significantly greater. Although there would be some inevitable overlapping of the markets attracted to each type of service, we believe that the standby fare would divert much less traffic from charters than would the super-APEX or budget fares, and we are not persuaded, considering also the other actions we are taking here, that approval of the standby fare would present any real threat to the supplemental carriers—let alone an unfair one.

The Board is convinced, however, that the super-APEX does pose a serious threat to the supplemental carriers. Even if it does not actually put them out of business during the duration of the IATA agreement (through March 31, 1978), it would seriously impair their competitive position in the North Atlantic market—which seems crucial to their continued viability—and would therefore weaken their overall financial position.[7]

There is little doubt that the super-APEX would divert significant amounts of traffic from charter services. The conditions of travel on the APEX are virtually identical to those of the ABC charter, and the APEX has the clear advantage of a lesser chance of cancellation and, in general, the greater certainty attached to scheduled service. The super-APEX passenger has complete freedom to select his departure and return dates within the 14/45-day minimum/maximum stay, particularly during the off-peak winter season when there is ample daily capacity available on scheduled service to assure him wide flexibility in making his travel plans. On the other hand, there are many fewer charter programs and seats available in the off-season, and the passenger must not only fit his plans to the available departure dates, but must also return with the same group to which he is assigned.

Further, the super-APEX fares would be available to every major point in Europe from every major U.S. interior point through the extensive network of [5] Here we are using non-capacity cost as a proxy for short-run marginal costs, although there is a minute portion of capacity cost (i.e., increased fuel burn) which varies with the amount of traffic on board and is thus marginal, and a portion of non-capacity cost (i.e., depreciation, amortization, and general and administrative expenses) which falls into the category of long-run marginal cost.

[5a] We are not entirely persuaded that each of the fares here before us meets the condition of exceeding its short-run marginal cost. We have already (in footnote 4, above) described what we see as a genuine possibility that super-APEX, particularly, may preempt some regular-fare paying traffic; in such cases its short-run marginal cost (including the external effect of discommoding regular customers) could well exceed the proposed fare. There is another reason. It must be conceded that if the services merely fill seats that would otherwise go empty, the fares will unquestionably cover short-run marginal production cost by a wide margin. But it does not follow from this observation that these fares are justified even in terms of static economic efficiency. The offerings are held to a limited number of seats, in order to meet the stated condition. The consequence is a genuine possibility that the supply of those seats at these low rates will fall short—indeed, it seems almost inevitable that it will fall short at least at certain times—of demand, and the service will therefore have to be rationed on a first-come first-served basis. Under these conditions, the quoted price is quite definitely not the economically efficient price; this would be the price that clears the markets, i.e., that equates the available seats with the number demanded. In these circumstances the prices are not at the economically efficient short-run marginal social opportunity cost; the pertinent short-run marginal cost is the value of the seat to the particular customer who (a) fails to get one and (b) would have been willing to pay the highest price of all the excluded customers for it.

[5b] If the fares are for seats that would otherwise remain vacant, and if the additional traffic generated by these fares were to have no effect on the carriers' scheduling and other investment decisions, long- and short-run marginal cost would be the same. But this appears not to have been the historic pattern of carrier behavior on the North Atlantic; instead, various discount and promotional fares have repeatedly been introduced for the avowed purpose of filling empty seats, and traffic has steadily increased, in part at least in response to the various discount fares, yet scheduled load factors have remained relatively constant as the carriers have increased capacity in step with the growth of traffic. In the present circumstances, however, we do not find a basis for disallowing these fares because of this possibility. The standby and budget fares are so novel in their characteristics, and at such a low level, that we cannot assume that the carriers will add capacity in response to the added traffic they may generate, as they have in the past. Moreover, the Board does not lack the power to prevent this kind of behavior; the kinds of adjustments we make in passing on requests for fare increases could be so fashioned as to hold revenues per plane mile constant. In that event it would not be rational for the carriers to add capacity because of this additional traffic, and long-run incremental costs would not exceed short-run.

[6] Although we anticipate, and ASTA believes, that few standby seats would be sold through agents.

scheduled-service routes, while charter programs, especially in the winter, are largely limited to originations at New York and other large U.S. gateways, and have a narrower choice of destinations on the European end. Finally, the super-APEX has less onerous penalties for cancellation before departure;[8] and all of the marketing advantages of the scheduled carriers' extensive reservations and ticketing systems. Moreover the proposed super-APEX fare level at $299 roundtrip, NewYork-London, is comparable to or lower than prevailing charter prices for the winter season. While the supplementals' tariffs indicate rates of about $190–$220 per seat to the charter, the price to the passenger is considerably higher due to the markup applied by the tour organizer. In consequence, the charter programs we have examined (including the ones cited by the parties) offer prices from $259 to $369, with most in the $259–$309 range. With a comparable level of $299 and the greater attractiveness of scheduled service, the super-APEX is clearly a superior service and thus would always be preferred by passengers whenever available.

There is no reason why the tour operator's markup should not itself be subject to the pressure of competition; and it is not our intention to eliminate that pressure. On the other hand, there is every reason to believe this market is already effectively competitive. There is no reason to believe it requires the unfair competition of super-APEX to hold those margins within reasonable bounds.[9]

We believe it is clear that the super-APEX is intended to compete primarily with charters, and not with Skytrain. That was the purpose of the APEX when originally introduced, and the Board approved it with great reluctance for that reason, accepting it primarily because it was set at a level significantly above prevailing charter prices.[10]

Of the three proposals, the super-APEX is clearly the least competitive with Laker and the most competitive with charters. When the Board stated its determination and that scheduled carriers be allowed the opportunity to compete with Skytrain, we did not contemplate a fare designed for an entirely different purpose. It seems obvious that the super-APEX is in fact designed to compete with charters rather than Laker, and the presence of Skytrain merely offers an opportune occasion for introducing it. In this we are persuaded not only by the fare itself and the charter parties cogent arguments, but also by our reading of the minutes of the IATA conference and British Airways' presentation at the oral argument, where it indicated that it has sought the introduction of a super-APEX in the U.S.-Europe market for some time, quite independently of the appearance on the scene of Skytrain.

While the Board is seeking to open up new fields for the supplementals such as the Pacific, at the same time we are not prepared to risk the loss of their single largest market.[11] We find it significant that, of the three proposals, only the super-APEX is not limited to London, but is proposed for virtually all major U.S.-Europe markets. For these reasons, and despite the uneasiness we feel about suspending any reduced fares, we must disapprove the super-APEX.

The budget fare presents a much more difficult problem. It is priced at the standby level but provide the passenger with a confirmed reservation in advance of the day of departure. For this reason, the market for this service would overlap that served by charters to a greater extent than it would the market attracted by Skytrain or standby. Its uncertainty is of a different character than that of Skytrain/standby service, since the passenger cannot (at least in theory) select the date of his reserved departure and return; the uncertainty as to the return date would seem to be the greater handicap. On the other hand, we are somewhat skeptical about the degree of uncertainty which will develop in actual practice, since the carrier may be able to offer a good deal of consideration to the passenger's expressed preference, given the amount of excess capacity available in the winter season. The Board is therefore convinced that the budget fare, as proposed, is not a reasonable response to Skytrain, and would also present a more serious threat to charters than would the standby fare. But we are reluctant to disapprove it outright, not only because our previous decision in the Laker case encouraged responses that were not perfectly duplicative of Skytrain, but also because the major virtue of the competitive process is that it encourages just such ingenuity among competitors as the budget fare reflects, and results in bringing benefits to broader strata of the market. It is clear that Skytrain and standby fares are narrowly confined in the kinds of travelers which they would benefit; in this we are influenced by ASTA's arguments.

What then, can we do to preserve the budget fare as an additional price/quality option for the traveling public? We have two basic choices before us. NACA suggests liberalization of various charter rules as a partial but far from sufficient equalizing measure. The other choice is to reduce the attractiveness of the budget fare in terms of price or conditions of travel. NACA, which contended in argument that the budget fare was the least objectionable of the three IATA proposals, suggests limiting it to off-peak periods in terms of season, direction, and day of week.

In seeking to restore a reasonable competitive balance our natural inclination is to prefer to liberalize one competitor's offering rather than further restrict his opponent's, since the latter course involves a tangible loss of benefits to the public.[12] However, the possibilities of liberalizing charter rules are fraught with great difficulties, not the least of which is the very obvious timing constraint. The changes urged by NACA would also present serious potential difficulties with foreign governments and, in these circumstances, this option is foreclosed as a practical matter. We are left then with the option of tinkering with the budget fare, a very distasteful game for advocates of competition, especially considering the real value of this proposed service innovation. NACA has suggested limiting the budget fare to off-peak periods, but the fare is already limited to the winter season, and we do not have before us sufficient information to feel confident in choosing "blackout" periods or days. Further, the whole basis for this fare is that the carrier will administer it to place traffic where it can be most readily accommodated; ideally, the limitation of the budget fare to flights with otherwise empty seats will be achieved anyway, without restrictions imposed by the Board.

Thus we are left only with price as a prospect for alteration. Although less attractive than charters, the budget fare appears to be, in almost every respect, a more attractive, higher quality product than the standby. It should be priced accordingly, for three reasons, first, being more attractive, it is more likely than the others to be characterized by an excess of demand over the available supply, which means its short-run marginal opportunity cost is higher than theirs. Second, it will almost certainly impose more administrative costs on the carrier for handling its complex reservations system, and on this account should be priced higher. Finally, the price of a higher-valued competitive response to Skytrain should be higher than that of a lower-valued service, if that competitive response is to be a proper one—designed to meet rather than destroy competition.

[8] The cancellation penalty on the APEX is the greater of 10 percent or $50, while cancellation penalties imposed by the charter tour operators generally range from 50 to 100 percent of the total charter price in the event no substitute can be found from substitute lists or the general public.

[9] Pan American has stated that the typical wholesaler's markup is about $65, and implies that there should be ample flexibility in this figure for him to reduce charter prices without affecting the charter carrier. Through that markup, however, the tour organizer must cover the retail agent's commission, the cost of advertising and tour brochures, and provision for the shortfall represented by the typical 85–90 percent load factor, since the carrier's per-seat charge is based on a 100-percent load factor. Considering these matters, plus the highly competitive nature of the market, we are not persuaded that there is fat in the wholesaler markups, and therefore cannot conclude that charter could effectively compete with the super-APEX by simply cutting prices.

[10] See Order 75-3-101, March 27, 1975.

[11] During the year ended June 1976, U.S./Europe civilian traffic accounted for over 70 percent of system revenue passenger-miles for the four U.S. supplementals involved.

[12] Except for its reservations feature the advantages of the budget fare over Skytrain are the same as those of the standby fare, and the suggested liberalization of Skytrain discussed above would put it in a better position vis-a-vis budget as well.

On the question of relative quality Pan American's assertion that it has already received over 1,600 reservations on the underpriced in relation to demand for the available seats. The only aspect where the standby seems superior to the budget fare is its lack of a cancellation penalty, and the $50 cancellation fee on the budget fare might not be imposed very often considering that the passenger has already given up his freedom of choosing a departure date in return for the assurance of a confirmed reservation. It is this confirmed reservation that sets the budget fare apart from Skytrain and standby service, and puts it more on a par with charters, through the uncertainty in not being able to choose a departure and return date makes the budget fare less attractive than charters, particularly for those passengers on relatively short vacations who must have a precise itinerary.

On the question of relative costs, we observe that the standby fare would not be commissionable in actual practice, as pointed out by ASTA; the budget fare, in contrast, could be actively sold by agents, and their commission would reduce the net return to the carrier accordingly.[13] Further, reservations cost on the budget would likely be greater than usual due to its more complicated procedures, and the standby fare of course involves no reservations cost at all. On the other hand, the standby fare may also involve some extra cost as well, because of the off-airport checkin requirement imposed by the U.K. authorities.

In view of all these considerations, the Board concludes that a budget fare of not less than $280 would adequately reflect its greater value and attractiveness vis-a-vis the standby service, and its lesser value vis-a-vis charters, and would therefore constitute an acceptable competitive response to Skytrain and the charters.

Disposition

For the reasons set out above, we will approve that portion of new IATA Resolution 071m which proposes New York-London standby fares. We will also approve that portion of the Resolution which contains the conditions of the proposed budget fare, but will not approve its $256 level.[14] The proposed amendments to Resolution 071p, which would reduce the levels of APEX fares, will be disapproved. We will also disapprove the proposed amendments to proportional fares establishing super-APEX levels to U.S. interior points, contained in Resolution 015. Concurrently, we are sending a proposed order of suspension to the President which would suspend the unilateral tariff filings of budget and super-APEX fares.

We will also impose record-keeping and reporting requirements relating to these fares similar to those imposed on Laker in Order 77-6-68.

Conclusion

No agency that regards its principal responsibility as one of protecting the consumer can be happy about suspending proposed reductions in fares, or altering them in such a way as to make them less attractive to the public. Clearly DOJ and OCA are equally uncomfortable in advocating such action on our part. But we cannot ignore the fact that the super-APEX, and, to a lesser degree, the budget fare threaten the survival of what any impartial reader of recent history must agree has been the prime source of competition in this market—competition which has provided demonstrable low-fare benefits to travelers.

We must be careful not to confuse a policy of competition with a policy of laisse faire. The entire logic of our antitrust laws is that competition is not necessarily self-sustaining; that it is necessary to prescribe the rules of the game. This is all the more true where there exists in the market, beyond the reach of the antitrust laws, a collective body of all the major competitors, which serves as an agency for setting their rates in concert and even, as in this case, a limitation on capacity. The notion that we must in these circumstances blindly permit any and all rate reductions agreed upon by such a body, which create a genuine possibility of restoring the market more nearly exclusively to its tender mercies, can only be characterized as either disingenuous on naive.

The Board, acting pursuant to sections 102, 204(a), and 412 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, makes the following findings:

1. It is not found that the following resolutions, incorporated in Agreement C.A.B. 26858 as indicated, are adverse to the public interest or in violation of the Act provided that approval is subject, where applicable, to conditions previously imposed by the Board:

| Agreement CAB | IATA No. | Title | Application |
|---|---|---|---|
| 26858: | | | |
| R-1 | 002kk | JT12 North Atlantic Special Amending Resolution (New) | 1/2. |
| R-3 | 022g | JT12/JT123 (North Atlantic) Adjustment Factors for Sales of Passenger Air Transportation (Amending). | 1/2. |

2. It is not found that the following resolution, incorporated in Agreement C.A.B. 26858 as indicated, is adverse to the public interest or in violation of the Act provided that approval is subject to the condition stated below:

| Agreement CAB | IATA No. | Title | Application |
| 26858: R-4 | 071m | Special Budget/Standby Fare Between London and New York provided that: Approval shall not extend to subpars (2)(a) and (2)(b) insofar as they would establish budget fare level between New York and London. | 1/2. |

3. It is found that the following resolutions, incorporated in Agreement C.A.B. 26858 as indicated, are adverse to the public interest and in violation of the Act:

| Agreement CAB | IATA No. | Title | Application |
|---|---|---|---|
| 26858: | | | |
| R-2 | 015 | North Atlantic Proportional Fares—North American (Amending) | 1/2. |
| R-5 | 071p | North Atlantic Advance Purchase Excursion Fares (Amending) | 1/2. |

Accordingly, it is ordered that: 1. Those portions of Agreement C.A.B. 26858 set forth in finding paragraph 1 above are approved subject, where applicable, to conditions previously imposed by the Board;

2. That portion of Agreement C.A.B. 26858 set forth in finding paragraph 2 above is aproved subject to the condition stated therein;

3. Those portions of Agreement C.A.B. 26858 set forth in finding paragraph 3 above are disapproved;

4. Carriers may file tariffs implementing that portion of Agreement C.A.B. 26858 approved in order paragraph 2 above on less than 30 days' notice for effectiveness not earlier than September 15, 1977. The authority in this paragraph shall expire on October 16, 1977;

5. Tariffs implementing those portions of Agreement C.A.B. 26858 approved herein shall be marked to expire not later than March 31, 1978;

6. All air carriers and foreign air carriers who have on file with the Board valid tariffs containing the fares approved herein shall comply with the following conditions:

(a) At the time of the sale of its tickets, obtain a written statement from each purchaser stating whether or not such purchaser has a confirmed reservation for alternative transportation on another scheduled airline, and, if so, the name of the airline. The holder shall notify the airline in question of the accommodation of the purchaser not less than two hours following the sale of such ticket;

[13] Of course, commission expense on the budget service would probably be somewhat less than on other reservations services due to the absence of tour overrides and the lesser incentive for agents to sell it, in view of its lower fare.

[14] We would, however, give favorable consideration to expeditious amendments to the IATA resolution and individual tariff filings which would raise the budget fare to an appropriate level.

(b) Compile and retain for three months from the date of any flight a list of the names of all persons carried on that flight and, following the departure of the flight, shall furnish a copy of such list to any air carrier or foreign air carrier within 48 hours of any request by it; and

(c) File in Docket 29123 monthly statements, within 30 days after the end of each month, listing by flight number and date: each flight operated, each flight cancelled (including the reasons for each cancellation), scheduled and actual departure times; seating capacity of the aircraft, seats available for sale at the fares approved herein, and seats sold at such fares; and the number of passengers on each flight who stated that they held confirmed reservations for alternative transportation on another airline; and

7. Copies of this order shall be served upon Pan American World Airways, Inc., Trans World Airlines, Inc., British Airways, Air India, Iran National Airways Corporation, Aerlinte Eireann Teoranta, the National Air Carrier Association, Brendan Tours, Inc., Charter Travel Corporation, The Educational Cooperative, the Air Charter Tour Operators of America, United Buying Service, Inc., Unitours, a California Corporation, Vouga Travel Agency, Laker Airways Limited, the American Society of Travel Agents, the United States Department of Justice, and the Office of the Consumer Advocate.

This order will be published in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

APPENDIX B—POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

British Airways asserts that it believes Skytrain service will not prove viable in long-haul markets, because it will only be available to passengers living close to the airport, and will require extremely high load factors to compensate for the low fare level, thus increasing the possibility of strandings and disruption of operations at high-density airports. However, it is necessary to provide an alternative to Skytrain, but with none of Skytrain's deficiencies, in order to prevent diversion from British Airways' own scheduled service. A reduced APEX, which would afford the passenger a firm reservation in both directions and could be marketed through agents, is seen as the best of the many options considered. Rather than introduce another fare into the already crowded fare structure, British Airways contends it is more logical to use the existing APEX fare, which is already capacity-controlled and whose conditions are known and accepted by the public, carriers, and governments. British Airways asserts further that the level of the proposed super-APEX fares may be easily understood by the public in terms of the cost differences between Skytrain and super-APEX service; i.e., it has considered meal cost at $10, reservations costs at $22, and commissions at 8 percent, bringing the net to the carrier approximately to the Laker level. The carrier also states that since APEX is a fare category easily recognizable at the time of booking and has a separate inventory of seats in the reservations system, there need be no concern over reduced access to seats for passengers paying higher fares; and that because normal economy fares are currently at levels lower than those which British Airways has cost-justified to the U.K. Civil Aviation Authority, there would be no cross-subsidization of APEX passengers by normal-fare passengers. Finally, British Airways supports the extension of super-APEX fares to U.S. points beyond New York as a means of treating all major U.S. markets equally, and states that it has sought to introduce super-APEX fares in the North Atlantic for years, as the best way to provide low-cost transportation to the public.

In support of the standby fare, TWA asserts that it is a carefully measured competitive response designed to minimize the significant impact of Skytrain, which TWA estimates would dilute about $8 million in revenues absent a competitive response; that the purported economics by Skytrain service cannot be matched by using narrow-body equipment for a separate, TWA Skytrain-type service; TWA could not mount a daily B–707 Skytrain operation without significant cutbacks in its regular scheduled service; and that the impact of the standby service will be limited by the capacity restrictions attached to its use as well as the ticketing arrangements, since TWA will sell far fewer standby fares than the number of empty seats it expects will be available each day in the upcoming winter season, and the timing of ticketing procedures will minimize airport congestion.[1] Finally, TWA states that it has not attempted to provide a detailed profit impact estimate since, as the Board pointed out in Order 77–6–68, any such forecast would be "highly speculative" in light of the lack of experience in evaluating fares such as those now proposed in the New York/London market.

Pan American states that a low-fare response to Laker is necessary in order to preserve the U.S. flag competitive position on the North Atlantic, and since there is no single scheduled fare that would appeal to all the market segments attracted to the Skytrain, different alternatives are appropriate. Pan American believes the budget fare to be the best response and in support of it alleges that, while in most industries supply can be adjusted to demand, in the airline business capacity is offered in large, discrete blocks and the only effective way to improve utilization is to adjust demand to fit supply; and the budget fare would achieve that end. Pan American asserts that with a sufficient price incentive passengers will give up their right to a particular flight, enabling the carrier to assign budget-fare passengers precisely to those low load-factor flights where additional traffic will result in the optimum improvement in utilization, as well as avoiding any reduction in the availability of seats for regular-fare passengers; that the budget fare will account for no more than five percent of Pan American's total traffic in the market, and plenty of excess capacity is available for budget-fare passengers; and that very few of the new passengers would be diverted from charter service since, to the typical charter passenger, the marginal savings offered by the budget fare would not be worth the uncertainties associated with it. The carrier also contends that the proposed refund penalty ($50 from New York) will substantially alleviate problems of speculative and double bookings, cancellations and no-shows.

Complaints against the tariff filings were submitted by the National Air Carrier Association (NACA), jointly by Brendan Tours, Inc. (Brendan) and Charter Travel Corporation (CTC), by the Educational Cooperative (TEC), by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey (PONY),[2] and by Laker. An answer in support of the complaints of NACA, Brendan, CTC and TEC was filed by the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ). Answers to the complaints were received from Pan American, TWA and British Air-

[1] Concerning ticketing, TWA contends that the 4 a.m. start of boarding-pass issuance will avoid peak-period congestion and inconvenience to regular passengers, and the cut-off three hours before flight time (two hours at Heathrow) will also minimize peak-period congestion as well as limiting revenue dilution from last-minute passengers showing up with both regular and standby tickets in hopes of using the latter.

[2] PONY's complaint, which raised no economic issues, was dismissed by Order 77–8–94, August 19, 1977, which also approved Laker's airport handling plan for Kennedy Airport.

ways. Additionally, comments opposing the IATA agreement in whole or in part were submitted by NACA, Brendan, CTC, TEC, Laker, DOJ, the Air Charter Tour Operators of America (ACTOA), Unitours, a California Corporation (Unitours), Vouga Travel Agency (Vouga), the American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA), and the Board's Office of the Consumer Advocate (OCA). Pan American submitted justification supporting the agreement in addition to its initial tariff justification.

NACA alleges that the super-APEX fares, which would be available in the total U.S./Europe market, are not a bona fide competitive response to Laker but are actually intended to compete with charters, the same purpose as the original APEX fares; that the super-APEX fares are far below scheduled-service costs; that if approved, they will have a devastating impact on North Atlantic charter services, since advance booking charters (ABC's), the primary charter mode, which are sold only through tour operators and are subject to burdensome marketing requirements,[3] would have to compete with a higher quality, more easily marketable scheduled fare at about the same price;[4] and that the Board approved the existing APEX fares only with reservations and after finding they would not unduly harm charter operations since they were priced at levels higher than ABC's. NACA also cites the Board's suspension of scheduled fares filed at levels comparable to the super-APEX, and contends further that the scheduled carriers are attempting to prejudge the issues in Docket 27918, North Atlantic Fares Investigation, by virtue of the radical changes proposed here.

Concerning the standby fare, NACA alleges that it is not a true standby fare at all, but rather a last-minute reserved seat priced at a level equivalent to Skytrain with a much higher value of service; and that it is prima facie below cost, and would divert considerable traffic from charter services as well as being counter-productive for the scheduled carriers due to self-diversion of higher-fare scheduled-service passengers. NACA believes the budget fare, with its substantial restrictions, to be less objectionable than the other two fares but alleges it is still at an uneconomic level, and that the total discretion allowed the carrier for assigning capacity levels lends itself to arbitrary and capricious administration. If the Board does not disapprove the budget fare NACA urges that it should be limited to off-peak periods in terms of season, day of week and direction, and that the supplemental carriers be authorized to provide some form of comparable low-fare services using the charter mode.

Brendan and CTC allege that the budget and super-APEX fares are not truly comparable to Skytrain, but are really designed to destroy plane-load charters; that all three of the proposed fares are below cost and should be disapproved; that the inability to select day of travel on the budget fare is outweighed by the shorter advance-purchase requirement (21–27 days compared to 45 days on ABC's); that the cancellation penalties for charters are higher than for the proposed scheduled fares; that the budget and super-APEX fares divert substantial traffic from charters; and if the Board approves them it should also liberalize charter rules by abolishing advance-booking rules on inclusive-tour charters (OTC's), adopting a simplified tour charter rule, and allowing charter operators to sell up to 40 percent of their seats after passenger lists are filled.

TEC, a travel agency which packages tours for students using ABC's, concurs with the arguments of Brendan and CTC, and alleges in addition that the seats allocated to the standby fare may be preempted by budget fare passengers, and thus the carriers would be holding out a product—the standby fare—which is not always available, a deceptive practice harmful to consumers. Moreover, TEC contends that the scheduled carriers could easily increase the prices of these discount fares after having vanquished the charter operators.

Laker alleges that the super-APEX, standby, and budget fares are essentially conventional reservation services, a vastly superior product which the IATA carriers propose to sell at or near Laker fare level, and are not a bona fide competitive response to Skytrain; that the combined carrier seat offerings at these fares, even assuming the ceilings attached to their use are enforced, are hardly a "limited" capacity offering; and that the fares are predatory and intended to destroy both Skytrain and conventional charter service. Elaborating on the character of the proposed fares, Laker asserts that there is clearly no difference between existing APEX service and the super-APEX other than price; that the budget fare is distinguished from regular economy service only by a gimmicky and costly advance-booking feature; that the standby fare is not a true standby fare at all but rather a late-booking, full-amenity economy-class service; and that in contrast to Laker's severely restricted Skytrain service, the IATA fares would all offer use of more convenient Heathrow airport, sales by agents and airline sales offices, sales on credit, full meals and other amenities, no weight limitation on baggage, and other auxiliary services.[5] Laker contends further that the fares would produce yields far below the scheduled carriers' costs of service, and cannot be accepted unless they cover fully-allocated costs, since they will account for about one-third of the scheduled carriers' total traffic between New York and London, much of which will be self-diverted from higher-fare categories. Finally, Laker alleges that Pan American is guilty of unfair competitive practices because it has already offered and sold the standby and budget fares, without even the customary notice that the fares are subject to government approval or any notice to the passenger that the fares are capacity-restricted.

DOJ, supporting the charter parties' complaints, states that while it has always supported the increased availability of low-cost transportation, nevertheless it has concluded that the proposed IATA fares are likely to be predatory with respect to charter services, and should be disapproved. DOJ argues that the differentials between the proposed fares and existing scheduled fares are so disproportionate that it is difficult to imagine how both sets of fares could be lawful in terms of costs; that the scheduled carriers could cover full costs by allocating the entire burden of capacity costs to higher-rated traffic, whereas the charter carriers have no access to high-yield scheduled service traffic and thus must recover all costs from low-yield charter traffic; and that the danger of a predatory result is even more likely under the new U.S.–U.K. bilateral agreement, since the scheduled carriers will, in effect, share a scheduled-service monopoly, enabling them to increase higher-rated fares with limited danger of profit dissipation from service competition. DOJ fears that, if the fares are approved, the charter carriers will be permanently eliminated, leaving the scheduled carriers free to eliminate the discounts; and urges that an investigation be instituted to carefully examine whether these proposals would have predatory effect and whether they are cost-justified.

ACTOA, UBS, Unitours and Vouga present arguments similar to those advanced by the other charter parties, and ACTOA emphasizes particularly that the proposed IATA fares are merely symptoms of a general disease, which is the effort of the scheduled carriers to destroy charter operations and operators not under their control. ACTOA states that they have succeeded in removing charters from the U.S. transcontinental and mainland-Hawaii markets through such devices as the "Super-Saver Fare", and only the North Atlantic is left for the supplementals; once removed there, they will no longer be available as a competitive force in aviation, and the operators who have the inherent economic advantage (because they are designed to operate only at very high load factors) will have been wiped out by uneconomic predatory fares.

In answer to the complaints of NACA, Brendan and CTC and TEC, Pan American submits that, in granting Laker its permit, the Board expressed the strong determination that the U.S. scheduled carriers be permitted to compete with Laker in a manner appropriate to their situations, and specifically recognized that the U.S. carrier responses might take different forms from the Laker proposal; that the budget fare advocated by Pan American has significant restrictions which offset the fact that it is not a standby fare, and only if it is permitted to become effective will the Board have before it the actual results of competitive responses when it evaluates the Skytrain experiment next year. Pan American states further that the charter parties' allegations of severe injury in opposing the budget and other fares are the same arguments they raised in opposition to the Laker permit, and the Board should reject them here just as it did when it granted Laker's permit.

British Airways characterizes NACA's complaint as a lament against competition, and denies NACA's contention that the super-APEX fares are uneconomic.[6] The carrier also asserts that the supplemental carriers are not prevented from meeting competition as they seem to indicate in their complaint.

In answer to NACA, Brendan and CTC, and TEC, TWA cites Order 77–6–68 in which the Board assured the U.S. scheduled carriers the opportunity to compete with Laker, and asserts that the standby fare is a valid competitive response. In further support of the standby fare, TWA alleges that its capacity and ticketing restrictions will prevent the massive diversion from charters which the complainants fear, as well as limiting self-diversion from higher scheduled fares; and that NACA's arguments concerning costs are irrelevant in light of the basis of the Board's approval of the Skytrain experiment and the [3] ABC operators must obtain written contracts with each passenger, file flight manifests both with the Board and foreign governments and submit to a bond and escrow arrangement.

[4] For example, NACA cites Trans International Airlines' New York-London off-peak ABC programs at $289, as well as other programs at similar or higher prices.

[5] Laker also notes that the budget and standby fares are free of the many restrictions attached to charter fares such as 45-day advance booking, roundtrip travel, minimum stays, passenger contracts and escrow arrangements.

[6] British Airways states that it has submitted full economic justification for the super-APEX fare to the U.K. Civil Aviation Authority.

policy considerations expressed in Order 77-6-68. Regarding the super-APEX, TWA contends that, since the fare will be generative and will fill up excess capacity, and is subject to significant restrictions, it is not surprising that its proposed level approaches that now available on charter flights; and that the fare is the most appropriate vehicle for offering the bargain fares on transatlantic scheduled, reserved-seat service that the public seems to want and the Board is determined to give.

REGIONAL DISCHARGE REVIEW SYSTEM

Hearing Locations

In FEDERAL REGISTER Document 75-27207, published on October 9, 1975, 40 FR 47524, the Department of the Navy published notice that, beginning in November 1975, the Naval Discharge Review Board would convene and conduct hearings for a number of days each quarter in certain announced locations. In FEDERAL REGISTER Document 76-20384, published on July 15, 1976, 41 FR 29190, the Department of the Navy published notice that approval had been granted for the Naval Discharge Review Board to conduct hearings, within assigned resources, on a non-continuing basis, in cities other than the announced locations when the concentration of petitioners in a geographical area so warrants. This expanded availability has facilitated the opportunity for personal appearances before the Board and the initially announced hearing schedule has been modified accordingly.

The following itinerary for October 1977, through March 1978 has been approved, but remains subject to modification if necessary:

October—Chicago, IL; Minneapolis/St. Paul, MN
November—Atlanta, GA; New Orleans, LA; Tampa, FL; Boston, MA
January—Denver, CO; Seattle, WA; San Francisco, CA; San Diego, CA
February—Dallas, TX; Wichita, KS
March—Atlanta, GA; New Orleans, LA; Tampa, FL

Any former member of the Navy or Marine Corps who desires to obtain a review of his or her discharge, either in Washington, D.C. or in one of the other cities in which the Board will conduct hearings, should file an application with the Board using DD Form 293. If a personal appearance is requested, the petitioner should indicate which scheduled location is preferred. Application forms (DD 293) may be obtained from, and the completed application should be mailed to the following address:

Naval Discharge Review Board, Suite 905, 801 North Randolph Street, Arlington Va. 22203.

Notice is hereby given that, since the foregoing itinerary is subject to modification and since, following receipt of a new application, the Naval Discharge Review Board must obtain the petitioner's military records before a hearing may be scheduled the receipt of an application by the Naval Discharge Review Board is not tantamount to scheduling such hearing. Petitioners and/or their counsel will be notified by mail of the date and place of their scheduled hearing when personal appearance is requested.

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY

[OPP-60003; PRL 796-7]

DIBROMOCHLOROPROPANE

Intent To Suspend and Conditionally Suspend Registrations of Pesticide Products

SEPTEMBER 8, 1977.

I. INTRODUCTION

During the past several weeks, the staff of the Agency have been engaged in an intensive investigation of the pesticide dibromochloropropane ("DBCP"). The principal reason for this intensive investigation was recently disclosed information showing that male chemical plant workers exposed to relatively low levels of DBCP have become sterile. However, prior to receiving this information, DBCP was undergoing review to determine whether regulatory action to ban or restrict its uses was appropriate, because of animal test data developed by the National Cancer Institute indicating that the compound is a carcinogen. Based upon the results of this expedited review of the risks and benefits associated with the use of this pesticide, I have determined that it is necessary to take several regulatory actions pursuant to my authority under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act, as amended ("FIFRA"), to insure that the use of this pesticide does not cause unreasonable adverse effects on man or the environment.

The purpose of this notice is to announce my intention to take expedited action to control on an interim basis hazardous uses of the pesticide DBCP, by invoking my authority under Section 6(c) of FIFRA to suspend the registrations of pesticide products found to be posing an "imminent hazard" to man or the environment. As developed more fully below, this provision permits me to prohibit, on an interim basis, the distribution, sale and use of a pesticide in situations where the use of that pesticide appears likely to pose an unreasonable risk to man during the period necessary to conduct and complete more lengthy administrative proceedings, in which the ultimate fate of the pesticide can be determined.[1]

This document contains six parts. Part I is this introduction. Part II is a brief description of the provisions of the statute under which this action is taken. Part III is a brief description of the interim remedies I have decided to impose, and a summary of my findings and conclusions that use of DBCP poses an imminent hazard to man. Parts IV and V are my detailed findings concerning the imminent hazard to man posed by these chemicals for the two different suspension actions which I am initiating. Part VI is devoted to procedural matters. This section describes in some detail the procedures which I have determined should be employed in an expedited hearing, in the event that one is requested.

II. LEGAL AUTHORITY

In order to obtain a registration for a pesticide under FIFRA, a manufacturer must prove that the pesticide satisfies the statuory standard for registration. That standard requires (among other things) that the pesticide perform its intended function without "unreasonable adverse effects" on the environment * * * [FIFRA Section 3(c)(5)]. "Unreasonable adverse effect on the environment" is defined to mean "any unreasonable risk to man or the environment, taking into account the economic, social and environmental costs and benefits of the use of any pesticide." [FIFRA Section 2(bb). In effect, this standard requires a finding that the benefits of each use of the pesticides exceed the risks of the use. The burden of proving that a pesticide satisfies the registration standard continues for as long as the registration remains in effect. Under Section 6 of FIFRA, the Administrator is required to cancel the registration of a pesticide whenever he determines that the pesticide no longer satisfies the statutory standard for registration.

The administrative procedures for making and implementing pesticide cancellation decisions are very time consuming. The Agency's experience has been that two or more years may be necessary in order to reach a final decision in a contested case.

The suspension provisions in section 6 (c) of the statute are designed to give the Administrator authority to take interim action pending the completion of the time consuming procedures required for reaching final registration decisions. Pursuant to that section, the Administrator may suspend the registrations of a product, and thereby preclude its distribution, sale or use, upon a finding that the pesticide poses an "imminent hazard" to man or the environment. "Imminent hazard" is defined in the statute to mean a situation wherein:

[1] In addition to the suspension proceedings set in motion by this notice, the Agency also will be initiating the Rebuttable Presumption Against Registration ("RPAR") process with respect to uses of DBCP which are not involved in the suspension proceeding. See 40 CFR 162.11(a). The RPAR process is designed to permit the Agency to gather information about a problem pesticide and make a decision concerning whether that pesticide should be registered in an open manner allowing maximum participation by all interested groups.

> The continued use of pesticide during the time required for cancellation proceeding would be likely to result in unreasonable adverse effects on the environment or will involve unreasonable hazard to the survival of a species declared endangered by the Secretary of the Interior under Public Law 94-135.

As discussed above, "unreasonable adverse effects on the environment" is defined to mean a situation where the risks of the use of pesticides outweigh the benefits of use. Thus, in order to find an imminent hazard it is necessary to find that the risks of use during the period likely to be required for cancellation proceedings appear to outweigh the benefits.

The courts have repeatedly "cautioned that the term 'imminent hazard' is not limited to a concept of crisis; 'it is enough if there is a substantial likelihood that serious harm will be experienced during the year to require that any realistic projection of the administrative (cancellation) process'" Environmental Defense Fund, Inc. v. Environmental Protection Agency, 510 F2d 1292, 1297, (D.C. Cir. 1975) (Emphasis in original), quoting from Environmental Defense Fund, Inc. v. Environmental Protection Agency, 465 F2d 528, 540 (D.C. Cir. 1972). Moreover, the registrant bears the burden of proof during a suspension proceeding, because, as indicated above, the burden of proof under FIFRA always resides with the proponent of registration throughout the life of a registration. See, e.g. Environmental Defense Fund v. Environmental Protection Agency, 510 F2d at 1297; Environmental Defense Fund v. Environmental Protection Agency, 465 F2d at 540. Finally, the courts have repeatedly held that "the function of a suspension decision is to make a preliminary assessment of evidence, and probabilities, not an ultimate resolution of difficult issues." Environmental Defense Fund v. Environmental Protection Agency, 510 F2d 1292, 1298 (1975).

There are two kinds of suspension proceedings authorized under FIFRA: emergency suspensions and ordinary suspensions. Emergency suspensions require certain special findings, and are effective immediately. Ordinary suspensions are not effective immediately; instead the Administrator is required to give registrants notice of his intention to suspend, and 5 days in which to request a hearing. If no hearing is requested, the suspension becomes effective. However, if a hearing is requested, the Administrator is required to convene an expedited administrative proceedings, in which the sole issue is whether an imminent hazard in fact exists. While a notice of intent to suspend may be issued without issuing a notice of intent to cancel, in order to issue a suspension order it is necessary to have issued or issue at the same time a notice of intent to cancel the registration of a pesticide. This proceeding is, at least for the present, an ordinary suspension proceeding, and no notice of intent to cancel has been issued.[3] If a hearing is not requested, it will be necessary to issue a notice of intent to cancel in order to make this suspension action effective.

III. Summary of Findings Concerning Imminent Hazard and Description of Proposed Suspension Actions

My findings concerning the existence of an imminent hazard with respect to the pesticide DBCP are set forth in detail below. In broad summary, I have found a substantial likelihood that the pesticide poses a cancer risk to man, because of convincing data indicating that the pesticide causes cancer in laboratory animals. I have further found, based upon human data and tests performed in laboratory animals, that DBCP causes adverse reproductive effects in human males exposed to low levels of the compound. These adverse reproductive effects include reduction in sperm counts and sterility. I have found that the risks of these adverse effects to man exceed the benefits of the use of the pesticide during the period of several years necessary for final decision on these matters, in those situations where use of the pesticide results or appears reasonably likely to result in residues of DBCP on agricultural commodities intended for human consumption. The agricultural commodities with respect to which residues of DBCP occur or are likely to occur are root crops and certain vegetable crops grown in contact with the ground. With respect to these food crop uses, I have found that an imminent hazard exists, and accordingly am announcing my intention to suspend the registrations of DBCP pesticides registered for these uses. Moreover, I do not intend to involve the "special rule" provision of FIFRA section 15(b) to permit sale, distribution or use of products registered and labeled for suspended uses.

I have also found that DBCP use in accordance with current label restrictions poses a cancer risk and risk of sterility and other severe reproductive effects to applicators of the pesticide. I have further determined that these risks to applicators can be significantly reduced, if not eliminated, by imposing on an interim basis various restrictions on the use of these compounds. These risk reduction measures include restriction to use only by applicators certified under FIFRA Section 4, restricting some uses to use only by professional applicators, and requiring the use of protective clothing and respirators. The costs of these interim risk reduction measures to users are small, and clearly less than the probable cancer and sterility risks posed to applicators if they are not imposed. Accordingly, I have found that the continued use of DBCP in accordance with current label restrictions poses an "imminent hazard" to man, and I am hereby announcing my intention to suspend them. However, because of my preliminary conclusion that applicator exposure can be controlled at least on an interim basis by imposition of appropriate restrictions, this suspension action shall not apply to DBCP products (i) the registrations of which have been amended to incorporate appropriate restrictions, as described below, and (ii) whose labels reflect these restrictions. The suspension shall be effective with respect to all other DBCP products. Suspended products may not be sold, distributed, or otherwise moved in commerce; however, stocks of these products already in the hands of users (who are not also distributors) may be used, provided that they are used in a manner consistent with the restrictions imposed on the category of product in question, as described below. Finally, I emphasize that my finding that these risk reduction methods adequately reduce pesticide applicator exposure is a tentative finding. If as a result of further review of this problem, it appears that these measures are not providing adequate protection to applicators, other remedies including suspension and cancellation of all uses are available and can be implemented.

IV. Uses in Which Residues Are Reasonably Expected in the Edible Portion of Food Crops

A. USES OF CONCERN

At the present time, there are no tolerances for DBCP[4] per se in or on raw agricultural commodities because it was concluded on the basis of data originally submitted by petitioners for tolerances (Pesticide Petition Numbers 294, 417, 5F4030, 7E0513, 0F0856, and 0F1004) that no DBCP residues would result. However, tolerances for residues of inorganic bromides resulting from DBCP uses on fruits, vegetables and nuts were established (40 CFR § 180.197), based on the rationale that the parent compound DBCP released bromide ions which were fixed in soils and subsequently taken up by plants as inorganic bromide, and based on the fact that the analyses then available for organic bromides in crops grown in treated soil were negative. The analytical method employed at that time for organic bromide had a sensitivity of 0.2 to 1.0 ppm (parts per million) and was based on potentiometric titration. It was not specific for DBCP per se, but rather measured any organic bromide which was extracted by the procedure and not lost in clean-up steps.

[3] However, if during the course of these proceedings additional facts come to my attention suggesting that an emergency situation exists, I can at that point invoke the emergency suspension provisions.

[4] DBCP is 1, 2-dibromo-3-chloropropane, commonly known as dibromochloropropane. Its molecular formula is $C_3H_5Br_2Cl$, with a molecular weight of 236.36; it has a boiling point of 196°C at 760 mm Hg, vapor pressure of 0.8 mm Hg at 21°C and has a solubility in water of 0.1 percent. It is an amber to dark brown liquid made by the liquid phase addition of bromine to allyl chloride.

More sophisticated analytical methods have been developed since the establishment of the tolerances referred to above, and it is now possible to detect residues of the parent compound DBCP using a gas chromatographic-electron capture method which is specific to DBCP and which generally has a sensitivity of 0.01/ppm. This method was first published in 1973 by Hodges and Lear (Nematologica 19: 146) for DBCP in soil, and was utilized by Newsome et al. (J.Ag. & Food Chem. 25: 684 (1977)) for the detection of DBCP residues in root crops (carrots and radishes) grown in soil which had been fumigated with DBCP. Although the dosage applied was lower than that which is currently permitted by existing registrations of products containing DBCP, the study found substantial residues of DBCP per se in both the edible portions and the foliage of both crops. Values ranged up to 0.19 ppm in edible portions of radishes and up to 1.5 ppm in edible portions of carrots.

In addition, other data available to the Agency[4] from supervised field trials approximating registered uses show that detectable residues of DBCP per se result in or on edible portions of certain crops. Crops for which there are positive findings (and the range of analytical results thereon) are as follows: cauliflower (0.01–0.08 ppm); broccoli (0.03–0.13 ppm); cabbage (0.01–0.12 ppm); cucumbers (0.01–0.04 ppm); and peanut meats (0.01–0.14 ppm).

The translation of residue data within groups of related crops (e.g., root crop vegetables, leafy vegetables, etc.) is a common and widely accepted practice (see 40 CFR § 180.34); such extrapolations may also be based in part on common growing characteristics of certain crops in relation to crops within such groupings (e.g., crops whose edible portions develop on or close to the soil surface. Accordingly, the positive DBCP residue data pertaining to the crops enumerated above may be extrapolated to predict the existence of DBCP residues in certain other crops for which there are registered uses and for which residue data are either absent or inconclusive: brussel sprouts, celery, lettuce, endive, parsnips, turnips, squash, melons, eggplants, peppers, tomatoes, and strawberries.

From available data the Agency is presently unable to reach a conclusion that there is a likelihood of DBCP residues in or on the remaining food crops for which there are registered uses. However, further consideration will be given to those crops as additional residue information becomes available.

E. EXPOSURE FROM DBCP RESIDUES IN DIET

The level of human dietary exposure to DBCP resulting from the consumption of food commodities containing DBCP residues may be estimated based on the average daily consumption of those food commodities as derived from published tabulations of their percentage contribution to an average daily 1930 gram diet. It must be noted, however, that estimates resulting from multiplication of the residue levels by the estimated consumption would necessarily be based on an assumption that the entire crop of a particular commodity had been grown in DBCP-treated soil. Since this assumption may not reflect actual use patterns, estimates of the percentage of the national crop which has actually been treated with DBCP have been calculated for each crop and factored into the final calculations of DBCP in the diet.

Those calculations result in an estimated daily dietary intake of DBCP in the range of $2.2 \times 10^{-4}$ mg/kg/day to $6.1 \times 10^{-4}$ mg/kg/day, using the lower and upper limits of the range of analytical (or extrapolated) residue data, respectively. Although this estimated amount of daily intake of DBCP may seem relatively low, analysis of the potential risks to human health as a consequence of its consumption, as discussed more fully below, shows this level of DBCP in the diet to be cause for significant concern.

I have determined that human dietary consumption of DBCP constitutes a serious risk to the population of this country, since it appears that not only is DBCP a powerful carcinogen in animals which provides strong evidence that it is a human carcinogen, but that it may also damage human reproductive functions, and may cause sterility in males.

1. With respect to the carcinogenicity of DBCP, the Agency's Cancer Assessment Group (CAG), in accordance with the Agency's "Interim Procedures and Guidelines for Health Risks and Economic Impact Assessment of Suspected Carcinogens" (41 FR 21402, May 25, 1976) (the "Cancer Guidelines"),[5] has determined that: "There is strong evidence that DBCP is likely to be carcinogenic to man. The compound produces high levels of squamous cell carcinoma of the stomach in rats and mice of both sexes at both exposure levels. A significant increase in the mammary cancer rate was also found in female rats. In addition, the times to tumor tend to be very short, and the tumors metastasize to a wide variety of other organs."

This determination was based on long-term bioassay tests on rats and mice conducted at Hazelton Laboratories, and sponsored by the National Cancer Institute (NCI) between 1972 and 1974. The study was conducted at two dose levels for each species (30 and 15 mg/kg/day for rats and 260 and 130/mg/kg/day for mice); 50 males and 50 females of each species were placed in each of these treatment groups and in the untreated control group. The animals received DBCP via stomach intubation 5 days per week for 78 weeks; the rats were sacrificed after another 32 weeks of observation, while the mice were sacrificed after an additional 12 weeks of observation.

The results of this study obtained at different stages of the bioassay have previously been reported by several of the participants therein. A progress report by Olsen et al. (J. Natl. Cancer Inst. 51: 1993 (1973)) indicated that DBCP was inducing squamous cell carcinomas of the stomach in treated rats and mice. Ward and Habermann (Bul. Soc. Pharm. Env. Path. 74: 10–11 (1974)), the pathologists for this study, reported that DBCP was "very carcinogenic". Powers et al. (Abs. Tox. Appl. Pharm. 33 (1): 171–172 (1975)), at the termination of this study, reported stomach squamous cell carcinomas in excess of 60 percent of the rats and 90 percent of the mice treated with DBCP; they also cited a high incidence (54 percent) of mammary gland adenocarcinomas in female rats. Finally, Weisburger (1977), in a draft report presented at a National Cancer Institute seminar, reported these findings in more detail.

CAG preliminary review of the NCI rat study shows that a high frequency of DBCP-treated rats died with squamous cell carcinomas of the stomach: high dose rats were dying with carcinomas as early as 30–40 weeks of treatment, low dose rats at 40–50 weeks for females and 50–60 weeks for males. Tumors in both dosage groups metastasized by invasion into adjacent organs and by spread to various distal sites; high dose rats were found with metastases earlier in the study than were low dose rats. Up to 6 to 9 organs per rats showed metastatic implants from the gastric carcinomas. Some high dose rats which lacked gastric carcinomas had squamous cell papillomas of the stomach. In addition to gastric carcinomas, both DBCP-treated groups of female rats showed significant increases in the incidence of mammary adenocarcinomas. Tumors were noted as early as 14 weeks of treatment, increased greatly in size, sometimes ulcerated and, in a few cases, metastasized to the lung and kidney.

A second bioassay on rats and mice at Hazelton Laboratories is currently in progress and is funded by Dow Chemical Co. The rat study was terminated at 104 weeks in June 1977, and consisted of 4 groups of 60 female and 60 male albino rats dosed at levels of 0, 0.3, 1.0 and 3.0 mg/kg/day of DBCP in the diet. A 78-week progress report received by the Agency on July 21, 1977 indicates a significant incidence of "possible neoplasms" of the stomach, in both males and females receiving 1.0 and 3.0 mg/kg/day, based on a review of the gross necrospy sheets.

Based on the demonstrated carcinogenicity of DBCP, and using estimates of human exposure to DBCP on the basis of residues of DBCP in food commodities consumed in the human diet, the CAG has evaluated the risk of cancer associated with human exposure to DBCP. These estimates are, by their nature, very crude due to uncertainties in actual human exposure levels and in the extrapolation of dose-response data to very low dose levels, and due to the differences in levels of susceptibility of animals and humans. (Cancer Guidelines, § 2.0.) They have been developed by the CAG to provide me with a rough approximation of the degree of human risk which may be expected to attend the continued use of DBCP, using extrapolation models appropriate to a decision-making process which involves human health considerations. I caution that these estimates should not be interpreted either as scientific certainties, nor as absolute upper limits on the risks of cancer which may be posed by the continued use of DBCP.[4] With these caveats, the estimates developed by CAG are as follows:

[4] Shell submission "Nemagon R Soil Fumigant" with letter dated April 12, 1977; Shell submission under letter of September 6, 1977; Dow data submission to Office of Special Pesticide Review (undated).

[5] The Cancer Guidelines represent the Agency's accumulated expertise concerning the identification and assessment of carcinogens. The approach taken in the Cancer Guidelines is generally supported by the final report of the National Cancer Institute's National Cancer Advisory Board Subcommittee on Environmental Carcinogenesis, entitled "General Criteria for Assessing the Evidence for Carcinogenicity of Chemical Substances" (also known as the "Shubik Committee Report").

Assuming that DBCP is consumed in the diet over an entire lifetime (assumed to be 70 years), the probability of DBCP producing cancer in a human in his or her lifetime ranges from $2.8 \times 10^{-5}$ (using the lower residue estimates) to $7.4 \times 10^{-4}$ (using the higher residue estimates). Put differently, lifetime DBCP consumption may be expected to cause anywhere from 28 to 740 cases of cancer per one million people exposed, during the lifetime of the exposed population.

Assuming that DBCP is only consumed in the diet over a two-year period, the probability of DBCP producing cancer in a human in his or her lifetime ranges from $7.9 \times 10^{-7}$ to $2.1 \times 10^{-5}$. Put differently, two-year DBCP consumption may be expected to cause anywhere from 0.79 to 21.0 cases of cancer per one million people exposed, during the lifetime of the exposed population.

2. With respect to the reproductive effects of DBCP, several reports in the published literature indicate that DBCP causes significant damage to the reproductive organs of several animal species. Torkelson (Tox. Appl. Pharm. 3(5): 545 (1961) conducted several tests for Shell and Dow Chemical Companies pertaining to DBCP. The authors noted that with respect to the inhalation exposure studies, "the most striking observation at autopsy was severe atrophy and degeneration of the testes of all species." Briefly summarized, the studies showed that in groups of 15 rats exposed to DBCP vapors of 0, 5, 10, 20, or 40ppm for a total of 50 exposures over 7 weeks, the treated rats developed gross lesions in the testes at the 10ppm and higher dosages. Testes atrophied in treated rats at 20 and 40 ppm, while testicular weight was reduced in some males at as low as 5 ppm. In addition, 3 male rabbits and 10 male guinea pigs exposed to 12 ppm DBCP vapors 66 times showed severe testicular atrophy and degeneration.

A Russian study (Reznik and Sprinchan, Gig, Sanit: 101, 1975) has reported significant injury to male and female sex gland activity in one group of rats given 100 mg/kg DBCP once perorally and in another group given multiple doses of 10 mg/kg over 4 to 5 months. For males acutely exposed to 100 mg/kg, the concentration of spermatozoa in the ejaculate dropped sharply; after one week the sperm count decreased to 2,617,000/ml in treated rats versus 4,870,000/ml in the control animals ($p<.001$), and the concentration did not change significantly after an additional week (2,847,000/ml vs. 4,850,000/ml). Moreover, the duration of spermatazoon mobility decreased sharply, varying from about 10 to 20 minutes in treated rats and from 30 to 33 minutes for controls ($p<.01$). Accordingly, it was concluded that the final phases of spermatogenesis were damaged and the spermatozoon function destroyed by the acute dosage. In female rats, 94.5 percent of the group exposed once to 100 mg/kg developed atypical estrous cycles. The average number of complete cycles per female dropped and the stages of estrus and diestrus were extended; the stage sequence was also destroyed in many of the females in the treated group.

With respect to the chronic exposures, the function of the testes in the treated groups was also damaged, with the concentration of spermatozoa gradually decreasing after two months to 4,500,000/ml in the treated males versus 5,400,000/ml in the controls ($p<.01$). After four months the concentration decreased to 2,480,000/ml in the treated animals, compared to 4,890,000/ml in the controls ($p<.001$). Moreover, the mobility of the sperm of treated rats at two and four months was also significantly lower than that of the controls ($p<.01$ and $p<.001$, respectively).

Other Russian studies indicating reproductive effects in rats resulting from exposures to DBCP include Faydysh etal. (Med. Zh. Uzbekistant: 64 (1970)) and Rakhmatullayev (Med. Zh. Uzbekistana 7: 75–78 (1969)).

In addition, there are indications from human epidemiological studies conducted at chemical plants which manufacture or formulate DBCP, that employees who have been exposed to DBCP during its manufacture or formulation into other products exhibit signs of oligospermia (reduced sperm counts) or aspermia (zero sperm count). Of 15 employees at the Occidental Chemical Co. at Lathrop, Calif., tested for fertility, 7 employees had zero sperm count, 2 employees were judged "functionally sterile," and 1 employee had an abnormally low sperm count. Moreover, the company stated that the examining physician had advised them that "there is an apparent medical correlation between length of employment in the company's pesticide formulation operations and the incidence of the medical findings of aspermia or oligospermia within the total population group of employees working in the pesticide formation operations." (Telex to EPA, August 1, 1977.) In addition, preliminary examinations of 9 demonstrator-applicators employed by Occidental indicate that 5 had "abnormal" sperm counts. (Department of Labor Informal Hearing on DBCP, Testimony of Dr. Wharton, August 31, 1977.) Shell Oil Co. has reported that 7 of 11 employees with possible exposure to DBCP at its Mobile, Ala., plant have reduced sperm counts (less than 40MM/ml), as do 20 of 27 employees with possible exposure to DBCP at its Denver, Colo., plant. (Letter to EPA, September 1, 1977, with attachment.) Dow Chemical Co. has reported that recent sperm counts of employees at its Magnolia, Ark., plant "have revealed aspermia in 24 percent of the people tested and oligospermia in 46 percent." (Letter to EPA, September 1, 1977.)

In light of this evidence, and in light of the fact that data for conclusively establishing an ample margin of safety for human exposure to DBCP with respect to possible damage to reproductive capacities are not available at this time, I find that exposure to DBCP poses a significant risk of injury to human reproductive capacities. No quantitative estimates similar to those made for the risk of cancer have been made since at this time the Agency does not have an analogous model for the dose-response relationship for damage to the reproductive system (such as reduction in sperm count or other effects).

D. BENEFITS

There are registered alternatives to DBCP for each food crop mentioned above in which residues of DBCP are likely to occur. Moreover, it would appear that in virtually all cases, the major registered alternatives are equally or more effective than DBCP but are more expensive. Therefore, it is estimated that although crop yield would not be reduced to any significant extent as a result of suspending DBCP for use on those crops, the costs of control as a result of a suspension would be increased by approximately $15 million per year (based on the calculation that the that the major alternatives increase average per acre treatment costs by approximately $65). Accordingly, the economic impact of suspending these uses of DBCP during the approximately two years required for cancellation proceedings would be approximately $30 million, attributable primarily to the increased cost of control alternatives.

E. CONCLUSION

On the basis of the information discussed above, I find that the risks of continued use of DBCP on food crops in which residues of DBCP are likely to occur in edible portions (specifically, broccoli, brussel sprouts, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, eggplant, endive, lettuce, melons, parsnips, peanuts, peppers, radishes, squash, strawberries, tomatoes, and turnips) outweigh the benefits of continued use during the approximate two-year period likely to be required for cancellation proceedings and constitute an unreasonable risk to man, and I accordingly hereby issue notice of my intent to suspend all registrations of products containing DBCP which are registered for use on those crops. With respect to the other crops for which there are registered uses, the risk is lessened due to the uncertainty of the existence of DBCP residues, and I have accordingly determined to suspend registrations of products which are registered for use on those remaining crops only in accordance with Part V of this notice relating to conditional suspensions based on applicator exposure.

[4] See, generally, EPA's "Statement of Position on Questions referred to the National Academy of Sciences by the Administrative Law Judge in Proceedings to Cancel Registrations of the Pesticides Chlordane and Heptachlor," dated May 13, 1977.

V. Exposure to Applicators

The principal techniques for the application of DBCP are: soil injection (chisel); pressure or gravity flow (flood) irrigation; sprinkler irrigation; granular deposition; and drench application. The levels of inhalation and dermal exposure to DBCP vary according to the technique utilized.

A. Description of Techniques

Soil injection of DBCP is accomplished by utilizing a tractor with several narrow blades (or chisels) mounted on the rear, and inserted to a depth of about 8 inches in the soil. A tank mounted on top of the tractor delivers the DBCP via hoses to small tubes on the trailing edges of the blades. Since the delivery of DBCP from the tank to the ground is in an enclosed system, there is minimal opportunity for escape of DBCP to either the atmosphere or the soil surface. However, observations of actual applications using this technique indicated that the tractor drivers pulled the blades out of the ground when turning at the end of a row; the driver also accasionally dismounted and tapped on the raised blades, apparently to dislodge particles which clogged up the delivery tubes. Thus, it is likely that some concentration of DBCP will be present in the air breathed by the tractor driver. In addition, mixing and loading operations could potentially result in escape of DBCP into the atmosphere, although for much shorter periods of time than the duration of the actual application to the soil.

In the irrigation technique, DBCP is injected into the irrigation water at a uniform, monitored rate and the water is then dispersed to the crops using either pressure (from pumping) or gravity flow irrigation. Thus, the furrows running the length of the tree rows and the basins surrounding each tree are filled 3 to 6 inches deep with the DBCP-treated irrigation water (which may take from 3 to 4 hours); the treated water will completely penetrate the soil over the next 2 to 4 hours. In areas in which flood techniques cannot be used because of the sand content of the soil, basin application is commonly accomplished by the use of sprinkler pipes which run the length of the tree rows, with orifices into the basins. Since DBCP is volatile, it may evaporate from the water and be diffused by wind or other natural processes, so that applicators in the irrigated fields may be exposed to various levels of ambient air concentrations of DBCP. Applicators' only direct contact with the treated water during this process would be while repairing a broken irrigation border, which might occur one or two times during any particular irregular period. Depending upon the amount of protective clothing worn, the likely routes of exposure to applicators would therefore be through inhalation and/or dermal contact.

The granular formulations of DBCP are principally for use on gardens and ornamentals by home owners. The granules are poured into furrows 4 to 8 inches deep, which are then filled with soil before watering and left undisturbed for several days.

Finally, drench application is accomplished from a truck with a large-capacity tank and a wide-diameter hose delivery system.

B. Exposure Estimates for Each Technique

Estimates of applicator exposure from the soil injection technique may be computed based on estimates of potential concentration of DBCP levels in the air surrounding the applicators. Although no such data for DBCP are currently available, air concentrations of a similar chemical (ethylene dibromide) arising from the same application technique have been measured. Using a ratio of the vapor pressures of the two compounds, a reasonable range of DBCP air concentrations can therefore be computed as 0.01–0.1 ppm, which is equivalent to 0.1–1.0 mg/m$^3$ of DBCP. Inhalation exposure to applicators may then be estimated by assuming a breathing rate of 1.8 m$^3$/hr. (reflecting moderate physical activity), and assuming that all inhaled DBCP is retained in the body. Thus the exposure to applicators using this technique is estimated as 0.18–1.8 mg of DBCP per hour of application.

For soybeans, a major agricultural use, there are an estimated 10,000 applicators who treat approximately 500,000 acres annually with DBCP, at an estimated rate of 4 acres per hour; the average annual application time per applicator is therefore 12.5 hours. Thus an estimate of inhalation exposure to applicators from the use of DBCP on soybeans alone is 2.3 mg/yr. from actual application. In addition, mixing and loading operations for this technique may result in air concentrations of DBCP as high as 1 ppm. Assuming that an applicator spends no more than one cumulative hour per year in such operations, his exposure therefrom will be approximately 18 mg/yr. The overall inhalation exposure from the soil injection technique on soybeans alone, therefore, is approximately 20.3 mg/year.

For pineapples, the soil injection is followed by covering the furrow with a plastic film. Although this would appear to minimize the tractor drivers' exposure to DBCP, it does not eliminate whatever exposure may occur during the mixing and loading operations. Assuming a cumulative two hours per year in such operations, an applicator will be exposed to an overall inhalation exposure of approximately 36 mg/year.

Estimates of applicator exposure from irrigation techniques can be calculated based in part on the fact that irrigation workers can apparently smell DBCP during its application. Since the human odor threshold has been reported to be 0.03 ppm (Dow Chemical Co., 1977), it may be assumed that the air concentration of DBCP reaches at least that level in the ambient air over the irrigated area. Since each of the approximately 4,000 applicators using this technique might thus be exposed to this air concentration for one day each year, the resulting exposure would be 4.3 mg during that one day each year.

For granular formulations, no quantitative information is currently available regarding the duration of exposure or the number of applicators involved. However, inhalation and dermal exposure are probably slight due to both the low rate of application and the granular nature of the formulation.

For drench application, exposure could occur both during the mixing and loading operations and during the actual application. Although it is likely that most applicators who utilize this technique (used primarily for turf and golf course application) are experienced, professional applicators, it is also likely that they will utilize it frequently in the course of a year. However, no quantitative information is currently available regarding the extent of exposure when this technique is utilized, the duration of exposure, or the number of applicators involved.

C. Risks

As discussed in detail in Part IV–C of this notice (hereby incorporated by reference), DBCP poses risks to humans of both cancer and serious damage to the reproductive system. Based on the estimates of exposure to applicators developed above, CAG has evaluated the risk of cancer to applicators associated with applicator exposure to DBCP (with the same caveats discussed in Part IV–C) to be as follows:

Assuming that DBCP is applied during a 40-year working lifetime, the probability of DBCP producing cancer in a soybean applicator in the applicator's lifetime (assumed to be 70 years) is $5.5 \times 10^{-3}$. Put differently, working lifetime exposure of soybeans applicators to DBCP may be expected to cause 5.5 cases of cancer per 1,000 applicators in the applicators' lifetime.

Assuming that DBCP is only applied during two years, the probability of DBCP producing cancer in a soybean applicator in the applicator's lifetime is $1.6 \times 10^{-4}$ or 1.6 expected cases of cancer per 10,000 applicators.

For pineapple applicators, the lifetime probability of cancer from working lifetime exposure to DBCP is $9.7 \times 10^{-4}$, or 9.7 expected cases of cancer per 1,000 applicators.

Assuming only two years of DBCP exposure, the probability of DBCP producing cancer in a pineapple applicator's lifetime is $2.8 \times 10^{-4}$, or 2.8 expected cases of cancer per 10,000 applicators.

Finally, for irrigation applicators the lifetime probability of cancer from working lifetime exposure to DBCP is $1.2 \times 10^{-3}$, or 1.2 expected cases of cancer per 1,000 applicators.

Assuming only two years of DBCP exposure, the probability of DBCP producing cancer in irrigation applicator's lifetime is $3.3 \times 10^{-5}$, or 3.3 expected cases of cancer per 100,000 applicators.

Moreover, in light of preliminary indications of abnormalities in and damage to the reproductive ssytems of applicators of DBCP, and in light of the fact that data for conclusively establishing an ample margin of safety for exposure to DBCP with respect to possible damage to human reproductive capacities are not available at this time, I find that continued exposure of applicators to DBCP resulting from current application techniques during the approximately two years required for cancellation proceedings constitutes an unacceptable risk of serious injury to the reproductive systems of applicators.[7]

D. BENEFITS

I do not find it necessary to undertake an analysis of the economic benefits of the continued use of DBCP for any use other than those which I intend to suspend in accordance with Part IV of this Notice, since I have found that the risks to applicators associated with such remaining uses may be sufficiently reduced during the period required for cancellation proceedings by requiring that those uses be restricted to certified (and in some cases commercial) applicators, and by requiring the use of protective clothing and respirators during application. Therefore, no benefits of those uses would be lost, during the time required for cancellation proceedings, since the products would still be available for ultimate application for those remaining uses. Moreover, any marginal costs that might result from restriction to certified applicators would be minimal, since State programs for the certification of applicators are operational in almost all States, there is a large number of certified applicators, and there is relatively little difficulty in obtaining applicator certification.

E. CONCLUSION

I find that the risks of continued unrestricted use of DBCP during the approximately two years necessary for cancellation proceedings outweigh the benefits of such unrestricted use. I also find, however, that those risks may be sufficiently reduced during the two years required for cancellation by the imposition of certain restrictions.[8]

Accordingly, I hereby announce my intention to conditionally suspend all registrations of products containing DBCP. Relief from this conditional suspension may be accomplished by submitting an application amending the registration to restrict the product's use to certified applicators wearing protective clothing and respirators. In addition, all uses on turf and ornamental trees, shrubs and flowers would have to be restricted to commercial applicators in category 3 (see 40 CFR § 171.3) or an equivalent category under the appropriate State applicator certification plan. Such applications for amended registration would be without prejudice to the registrant's rights to challenge the suspension of the food crops uses in accordance with Part IV of this notice, and without prejudice to the Agency's right to review the adequacy of the restrictions at a later date (e.g., during the cancellation proceedings).

The application for amended registration would also have to include proposed amended labeling which would reflect these restrictions. The following language, if contained in an amended label, would be sufficient to meet these requirements:

For turf and ornamental uses:

RESTRICTED USE PESTICIDE

For retail sale to and use only by certified commercial applicators or persons under their direct supervision, and only for those uses covered by the certified commercial applicator's certification.

WARNING

KEEP OUT OF REACH OF CHILDREN

For turf or ornamental use. Keep people and animals off treated areas until the material has been washed into the soil.

Harmful liquid and vapor. Wear a respirator jointly approved by the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration, and National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health. Wear impermeable protective fullbody clothing to avoid any skin or eye contact. May be fatal if swallowed, inhaled or absorbed through skin. May cause functional infertility. Combustible mixture causes skin irritation and blisters upon prolonged contact. Causes irritation of eyes, nose and throat. May be absorbed through skin. Do not allow material to remain on skin. If clothing or shoes become contaminated, remove them promptly and do not wear again until competely free of material.

For all other uses:

RESTRICTED USE PESTICIDE

For retail sale to and use only by certified applicators or persons under their direct supervision, and only for those uses covered by the certified applicator's certification.

WARNING

KEEP OUT OF REACH OF CHILDREN

Harmful liquid and vapor. Wear a respirator jointly approved by the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration and National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health. Wear impermeable protective fullbody clothing to avoid any skin or eye contact. May be fatal if swallowed, inhaled or absorbed through skin. May cause functional infertility. Combustible mixture causes skin irritation and blisters upon prolonged contact. Causes irritation of eyes, nose and throat. May be absorbed through skin. Do not allow material to remain on skin. If clothing or shoes become contaminated, remove them promptly and do not wear again until completely free of material.

VI. HEARING PROCEDURES

Under section 6(c)(2) of FIFRA, these suspension actions cannot take effect until the registrant has had an opportunity for an expedited hearing before EPA to question the basis of the order. The statute explicitly provides that this hearing is to be conducted in accordance with 5.U.S.C. secs. 554, 556 and 557, "except that the presiding officer need not be a certified hearing examiner". EPA's rules of procedure for such hearings are set forth at 40 CFR Part 164, Subpart C.

I do not know whether a hearing will be requested in these suspensions. However, in the event it is, I am establishing the following procedures to supplement the existing regulations in governing its conduct.

1. A deadline is being established for the completion of all hearing procedures and the rendering of a recommended decision under 40 CFR 164.121(j). That deadline is 75 calendar days from the date of this notice.

2. I am naming the following EPA employees to serve as a hearing panel in any hearing arising out of this notice:

John E. Bonine
Roger S. Cortesi
Thomas R. Sheckells

I am naming the following additional persons to be available to provide technical advice and staff support to the hearing panel. If questions arise at the hearing which persons in this category are uniquely qualified to assess, they may be called on to serve on the panel either in addition to or in substitution for the three panel members named above:

[See Attachment A, hereto.]

The panel will conduct the hearing and submit a recommended decision to me under 40 CFR sec. 164.121(j). None of the persons named above is subject in the normal course of their duties to [7] I have not quantified this risk for the same reasons discussed in Part IV–C, supra.

[8] However, the fact that I have found that the restrictions outlined afford adequate risk-reduction for the period required for cancellation proceedings does not mean that I cannot or will not reevaluate the propriety of restriction as an ultimate alternative to cancellation. In other words, restriction in this context is merely a form of short-term interim risk-reduction during the period required for cancellation proceedings. In the cancellation proceeding itself, however, the issue of long range risks and benefits associated with DBCP will be considered, and a more thorough analysis may indicate that restriction in the long run is inappropriate and that products containing DBCP should be cancelled.

the supervision or direction of any employee or agent of EPA who is a member of the Agency trial staff named below. See 5 U.S.C. sec. 554(d)(2).

Since 5 U.S.C. sec. 554(d)(1) provides that those presiding at adjudicatory hearings may not "consult a person or party on a fact in issue (in the course of preparing their decision) unless on notice and opportunity for all parties to participate," neither I nor my appellate staff will consult with the panel or its supporting staff on any matters involving this case from the date of notice until a recommended decision is issued. My appellate staff shall consist of the Judicial Officer and the Agency's Acting General Counsel, Ms. Joan Z. Bernstein. The three of us will conduct an independent review of the questions presented on appeal of any recommended decision. However, in doing this we will feel free to consult with the hearing panel which will have conducted the initial proceedings and brought expert knowledge to evaluating the record.

The following Agency bureaus or divisions, and their staffs, are designated to perform all investigative and prosecutorial functions in this case: Office of the Deputy Administrator,[9] Office of Toxic Substances and Pesticides, Office of the Associate General Counsel for Pesticides, Toxic Substances and Radiation, and the Office of Enforcement.

From the date of this notice until any final decision, no member of the hearing panel, or its support staff, or the Judicial Officer, the Acting General Counsel, or myself, shall have any ex parte contact with any trial staff employees, or any other interested person not employed by EPA, on any of the issues involved in this proceeding. However, persons interested in this case should feel free to contact any other EPA employee, including both trial staff and persons not explicitly named as panel members or assistants, with any questions they may have.

3. I am directing the hearing panel to proceed as follows to streamline proceedings in this case.

a. All reasonably relevant information regarding the risks and benefits of DBCP is set forth either in this notice or in the documents constituting the record of this notice, which will be available for inspection in the Office of the Hearing Clerk, with certain exceptions.[10] EPA has also attempted to put this information in perspective through a narrative summary and analysis.

Within 21 calendar days from the date of this notice, any person requesting a hearing shall submit written comments on this notice consisting of all relevant information known to them on the risks and benefits of DBCP and a narrative summary explaining its bearing on the case. This shall consist of all material they wish to have considered at the hearing, and any other reasonably relevant material. The Agency trial staff shall have seven days thereafter to file supplemental information and comments.

b. Within three days from the filing of supplemental information by the Agency trial staff, the panel shall convene a pre-hearing conference. At this conference, all parties shall appear prepared to present arguments on the significance and relevance of the material already presented. This pre-hearing conference shall also hear all requests for oral presentation of evidence and cross-examination, and the reasons supporting them.

c. Within five days after the pre-hearing conference is over, the panel shall issue a hearing order setting the schedule for oral presentation of witnesses and cross-examination. Requests for oral presentation of direct testimony shall only be granted to the extent it is demonstrated that the testimony is of such a nature that it can only be presented meaningfully in that form; in all other cases, direct testimony shall be in writing.

No information not included in submissions under paragraph (a) shall be admitted in evidence unless good cause is shown for not having so included it. Requests for cross-examination shall be granted only if all of the following showings are made:

i. The request concerns factual matters. Cross-examination will not be granted on matters of policy or law.

ii. The factual matters are legitimately in dispute in light of the record made under paragraph (a).

iii. The factual matters are material to the decision to be made.

iv. Cross-examination is the most efficient way of resolving the dispute over these factual matters as opposed to such alternatives as production of further information, interrogatories, or informal conferences.

v. There is a reasonable expectation that cross-examination will resolve the issue of material fact in a way likely to influence the final decision.

d. At the hearing, the panel shall take an active role in the development of the record through questioning of witnesses and procedural orders.

e. The panel may revise any of the procedural provisions of this notice other than the overall 75-day deadline.

A. DEADLINES

Deadlines for completing proceedings under FIFRA have been twice endorsed by the National Academy of Sciences (National Academy of Sciences, Decision Making in the Environmental Protection Agency, Vol. II. p. 84 (1977); National Academy of Sciences, Decision Making for Regulating Chemicals in the Environment p. 30 (1975).)

In addition, Congress has demonstrated a concern for speedy action where suspensions based on a potential threat to human health are concerned. It has required a hearing on such a suspension to begin five days after it is requested,[11] and has allowed ten days and seven days respectively for preparation of the initial and final decisions once the hearing is over. FIFRA sec. 6(c)(2). When FIFRA was amended in 1975 to call for consultation by EPA with the Department of Agriculture and a scientific advisory panel before taking action in many cases, suspensions based on human health grounds were exempted from those requirements out of concern that to provide otherwise would prevent speedy action where speedy was desirable. 121 Cong. Rec. H 9895–96 (daily ed. Oct. 9, 1975); 121 Cong. Rec. S 19820–21 (daily ed. Nov. 12, 1975).

Deadlines for completing the hearing have been imposed in prior suspensions. See e.g., In re Velsicol Chemical Co., et al., 41 FR 7552, 7553 (Feb. 19, 1976) [Notice of Intent to Suspend Heptachlor and Chlordane]. The requirements set forth in this order simply carry forward that practice.

B. USE OF PANEL

Despite the need for speedy action, the issues involved in suspension are complex. Under the statute, a judgment of "imminent hazard" must be based on consideration of costs and risks of all types. FIFRA secs. 2(l), 2(bb). Given [9] The Deputy Administrator may properly be included in the trial staff since the prohibitions of 5 U.S.C. § 554(d) do not apply to "the agency." Her inclusion is necessary if guidance on general policy matters is to be available to the trial staff and, to free a high Agency official to talk to outside interested persons about the questions involved without the constraints otherwise imposed by the ex parte provisions of the APA and the Government in the Sunshine Act. The Deputy Administrator will take no part in the detailed work of preparing and presenting the Agency's case.

[10] Some of the information in the record is data submitted by registrants, with respect to which the registrants have asserted claims that the data are trade secret or confidential business or of financial information which the Agency cannot disclose without the permission of the registrant. The Agency does not agree that the data in question are entitled to protection under FIFRA section 10, for the reasons set forth in a memorandum dated March 5, 1976, by Robert V. Zener, the Agency's former General Counsel. However, because a dispute exists concerning whether these data are protected pursuant to FIFRA section 10, they cannot be released except in accordance with the dispute procedures set forth in the FIFRA section 10(c). Until satisfaction of these requirements, only summaries of these data can be released without the permission of the registrant. However, the basic data may be considered in the hearing in accordance with such terms and conditions as the hearing panel may determine are adequate to protect the rights of the submitter of the data.

[11] I do not regard the procedures set forth below as inconsistent with this directive. What concerned Congress was plainly that the hearing stage of Agency decisionmaking begin promptly; not that the oral hearing itself start unconditionally in less than a week. To interpret the law otherwise would forbid the use of such accepted aids to efficient decisions as prehearing conference in precisely the cases where efficiency is most required.

the necessary time constraints and the preliminary nature of suspension as a remedy, factual certainty may be elusive. "[T]he function of the suspension decision is to make a preliminary assessment of evidence, and probabilities, not any ultimate resolution of difficult issues", Environmental Defense Fund, Inc. v. EPA, 510 F. 2d. 1292, 1298 (D.C. Cir. 1975), quoting from Environmental Defense Fund, Inc. v. EPA, 465 F. 2d. 528, 537 (D.C. Cir. 1972).

Arriving at even such a preliminary assessment can present formidable difficulties. Considering risks, questions can arise concerning the dispersion and persistence of the pesticide in the environment and certain parts of it, the conduct of animal feeding studies, the meaning of those studies for human health, arguments about and projections from other data concerning a possible human health risk, and finally on what the upper and lower boundaries of any risks may be and how firmly they are established. Considering benefits, questions can be raised about the extent of use, the crops involved, the availability and effectiveness of substitutes both now and in the future, the actual impact of the pesticide on target species both now and in the future, the value of non-agricultural uses, and the range of the probable economic impacts of banning the pesticide, or some use of it, in the light of all these factors.

This job will be easier, and will be more likely to be well performed, if I am allowed to rely directly on the talents of EPA employees with expert knowledge of the technical fields involved, and the professional ability to assess problems arising in them. I believe it is for this reason that Congress has provided that those presiding over suspension hearings need not be hearing examiners.[12]

C. CONDUCT OF THE HEARING

Overuse of cross-examination and courtroom formalities, I believe, has made many FIFRA proceedings far longer than was consistent with any rational purpose. The overwhelming bulk of legal analyses by those who have studied the problem, and EPA's own experience, demonstrate that scientific and economic issues can be clarified by the exchange of written material far more efficiently than through courtroom hearings. At the same time, particularly where Congress has explicitly called for formal hearings, the accompanying rights to reasonable cross-examination and oral presentation must be preserved.

The reliance on written submissions to focus the issues which I am directing to be used here is an attempt to implement those lessons.

All three elements of these supplementary procedures are meant to work together. The use of a panel will ensure that expert knowledge is indeed brought to the task of making a decision. The provision for preliminary written submissions will allow that panel to screen the issues and narrow the formal part of the hearing down to those that are legitimately in dispute and suited to adjudicatory resolution. Finally, setting a timetable for decision will help make sure that the potential gains in efficiency represented by the first two reforms are realized in practice.

ISSUANCE OF EXPERIMENTAL USE PERMITS

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has issued experimental use permits to the following applicants. Such permits are in accordance with, and subject to, the provisions of 40 CFR Part 172, which defines EPA procedures with respect to the use of pesticides for experimental purposes.

This experimental use permit allows the use of 29.5 pounds of the fungus spores of Colletotrichum gloeosporioides f. sp. aeschynomene used as a herbicide on rice and soybeans to evaluate control of Northern jointvetch. A total of 1,000 acres is involved; the program is authorized only in the State of Arkansas. The experimental use permit is effective from August 1, 1977, to August 1, 1978. A temporary exemption for residues of the active ingredient in or on rice and soybeans has been established.

ISSUANCE OF EXPERIMENTAL USE PERMITS

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has issued experimental use permits to the following applicants. Such permits are in accordance with, and subject to, the provisions of 40 CFR Part 172, which defines EPA procedures with respect to the use of pesticides for experimental purposes.

No. 524-EUP-18. Monsanto Co., St. Louis, Mo. 63166. This experimental use permit allows the use of the remaining supply of approximately 22,287 pounds of the plant regulator N,N - bis - (phosphonomethyl) glycine to hasten ripening and increase the level of sucrose in sugarcane; this use was authorized in a previous experimental use permit. A total of 13,110 acres is involved; the program is authorized only in the States of Florida, Hawaii, Louisiana, Puerto Rico, and Texas. The experimental use permit is effective from August 23, 1977, to August 23, 1978. A permanent tolerance for residues of the active ingredient in or on sugarcane has been established (40 CFR 180.354).

No. 239-EUP-66. Chevron Chemical Co., Richmond, Calif. 94804. This experimental use permit allows the use of the remaining supply of approximately 600 pounds of the herbicide diquat for desiccation of potato vines prior to harvest; this use was authorized in a previous experimental use permit. A total of 950 acres is involved; the program is authorized only in the States of Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin. The experimental use permit is effective from August 29, 1977, to August 29, 1978. Temporary tolerances for residues of the active ingredient in or on potatoes have been established.

Interested parties wishing to review the experimental use permits are referred to Room E-315, Registration Division (WH-567), Office of Pesticide Programs, EPA, 401 M Street SW., Washington, D.C. 20460. It is suggested that such interested persons call 202-755-4851 before visiting the EPA Headquarters Office, so that the appropriate permits may be made conveniently available for review purposes. ## PESTICIDE PROGRAMS

Renewal of a Temporary Tolerance; Diquat

On September 9, 1975, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) announced (40 FR 41833) a renewal of a temporary tolerance for negligible residues of the herbicide and plant regulator diquat (6,7-dihydrodipyrido (1,2-a:2',1,c) pyrazidiinium) derived from application of the dibromide salt and calculated as the cation in or on the raw agricultural commodity potatoes at 0.2 part per million. This tolerance expired September 2, 1976, but was subsequently extended (40 FR 58685) to October 21, 1976. The tolerance was established (39 FR 28316) in response to a pesticide petition (PP 4G1470) submitted by Chevron Chemical Co., 940 Hensley Street, Richmond, Calif. 94804.

Chevron Chemical Co. requested a one-year renewal of this temporary tolerance both to permit continued testing to obtain additional data and to permit the marketing of the above raw agricultural commodity when treated in accordance with the provisions of the experimental use permit that was renewed under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA), as amended (86 Stat. 973; 89 Stat. 751; 7 U.S.C. 136(a) et seq.).

The scientific data reported and all other relevant material were evaluated, and it was determined that a renewal of the temporary tolerances would protect the public health. Therefore, the temporary tolerance has been renewed on condition that the pesticide be used in accordance with the experimental use permit with the following provisions:

1. The total amount of the pesticide to be used must not exceed the quantity authorized by the experimental use permit.

2. Chevron Chemical Co. must immediately notify the EPA of any findings from the experimental use that have a bearing on safety. The firm must also keep records of production, distribution, and performance and on request make the records available to any authorized officer or employee of the EPA or the Food and Drug Administration.

This temporary tolerance expires August 29, 1978. Residues not in excess of 0.2 ppm in or on potatoes after this expiration date will not be considered actionable if the pesticide is legally applied during the term of and in accordance with the provisions of the experimental use permit and temporary tolerance. This temporary tolerance may be revoked if the experimental use permit is revoked or if any scientific data or experience with this pesticide indicate such revocation is necessary to protect the public health. Inquiries concerning this notice may be directed to the Special Registrations Section, Registration Division (WH-567), Office of Pesticide Programs, Room 315, East Tower, 401 M Street SW., Washington, D.C. 20460 (202-755-4857).

STATUTORY AUTHORITY: Section 408(j) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 346a(j)).

REGULATORY REPORTS REVIEW

Receipt of Report Proposal

The following request for clearance of a report intended for use in collecting information from the public was received by the Regulatory Reports Review Staff, GAO, on September 20, 1977. See 44 U.S.C. 3512 (c) and (d). The purpose of publishing this notice in the FEDERAL REGISTER is to inform the public of such receipt.

The notice includes the title of the request received; the name of the agency sponsoring the proposed collection of information; the agency form number, if applicable; and the frequency with which the information is proposed to be collected.

Written comments on the proposed CAB request are invited from all interested persons, organizations, public interest groups, and affected businesses. Because of the limited amount of time GAO has to review the proposed request, comments (in triplicate) must be received on or before October 14, 1977, and should be addressed to Mr. John M. Lovelady, Acting Assistant Director, Regulatory Reports Review, United States General Accounting Office, Room 5033, 441 G Street, NW., Washington, D.C. 20548.

Further information may be obtained from Patsy J. Stuart of the Regulatory Reports Review Staff, 202-275-3532.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS BOARD

The CAB requests an extension without change clearance of the reporting requirement contained in Part 248 of the Board's Economic Regulations. This reporting requirement requires each certificated air carrier which has caused an annual audit of its books to be made by independent public accountants to file with the Board a report reconciling the balance sheet and profit and loss statement included in the audit report with the balance sheet and profit and loss statements filed with the Board as a part of its CAB Form 41 report. Submission of the reconciliation report is mandatory under section 407 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended. The CAB estimates respondents to number approximately 34 and reporting burden to average 11½ hours per report.

Scott for a construction permit to establish a new one-way signaling station on frequency 152.24 MHz in the Domestic Public Land Mobile Radio Service at Chehalis, Washington; Docket No. 21401, File No. 20262-CD-P-75.

1. The Commission, by the Chief of the Common Carrier Bureau acting pursuant to delegated authority, has before it an application filed on June 5, 1974 [1] by C & C Communications Company, File No. 21541-C2-P-74, and an application filed on August 16, 1974 by Marion O. Each application is for a Construction Permit to establish a new one-way signaling station on frequency 152.24 MHz in the Domestic Public Land Mobile Radio Service at Chehalis, Washington.

[1] This application appeared on public notice on June 17, 1974.

2. Since the above-referenced applications request assignment of the same frequency, a comparative hearing must be held to determine which applicant, if any, would best serve the public interest. Ashbacker Radio Corp. v. FCC, 326 U.S. 327 (1945). In this regard, we find the applicants to be legally, financially, technically, and otherwise qualified to construct and operate the proposed facilities.

3. In view of the foregoing, it is ordered, pursuant to Section 309(e) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, that the application of C & C Communications Company, File No. 21541-C2-P-74, and the application of Marion O. Scott, File No. 20262-CD-P-75, are designated for hearing in a consolidated proceeding upon the following issue:

(a) To determine on a comparative basis, the nature and extent of service proposed by each applicant, including the rates, charges, maintenance personnel, practices, classifications, regulations, and facilities pertaining thereto;

(b) To determine on a comparative basis, the areas and populations that each applicant will serve within the prospective 43 dbu contours, based upon the standards set forth in Section 21.504(a) of the Commission's Rules,[2] and to determine the need for the proposed services in said areas;

(c) To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the foregoing issues, what disposition of the above-referenced applications, would best serve the public interest, convenience and necessity.

4. It is further ordered, That the hearing shall be held at the Commission's offices in Washington, D.C. at a time and place and before an Administrative Law Judge to be specified in a subsequent Order.

5. It is further ordered, That the Chief, Common Carrier Bureau, is made a party to the proceeding.

6. It is further ordered, That the applicants may avail themselves of an opportunity to be heard by filing with the Commission pursuant to Section 1.221 (c) of the Rules within 20 days of the release date hereof, a written notice stating an intention to appear on the date for the hearing and present evidence on the issues specified in this Memorandum Opinion and Order.

[2] Section 21.504(a) of the Commission's Rules and Regulations describes a field strength contour of 43 decibles above one microvolt permeter as the limits of the reliable service area for base stations engaged in one-way communications service. Propagation data set forth in Section 21.504(b) are the proper bases for establishing the location of service contours (F50,50) for the facilities involved in this proceeding.

DOMESTIC CRUDE OIL ALLOCATION PROGRAM

Entitlement Notice for July 1977

In accordance with the provisions of 10 CFR § 211.67 relating to FEA's domestic crude oil allocation program the monthly notice specified in § 211.67(i) is hereby published.

Based on reports for July 1977 submitted to FEA by refiners and other firms as to crude oil receipts, crude oil runs to stills, eligible product imports and imported naphtha utilized as a petrochemical feedstock in Puerto Rico; application of the entitlement adjustment for residual fuel oil production for sale in the East Coast market provided in § 211.67 (d)(4); August 1977 deliveries of crude oil for storage in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve; and application of the entitlement adjustment for small refiners provided in § 211.67(e), the national domestic crude oil supply ratio for July 1977 is calculated to be .258119.

In accordance with § 211.67(b)(2), to calculate the number of barrels of deemed old oil included in a refiner's adjusted crude oil receipts for the month of July 1977, each barrel of old oil is equal to one barrel of deemed old oil and each barrel of upper tier crude oil is equal to .328561 of a barrel of deemed old oil.

The issuance of entitlements for the month July 1977 to refiners and other firms is set forth in the Appendix to this notice. The Appendix lists the name of each refiner or other firm to which entitlements have been issued, the number of barrels of deemed old oil included in each such refiner's adjusted crude oil receipts, the number of entitlements issued to each such refiner or other firm, and the number of entitlements required to be purchased or sold by each such refiner or other firm.

Pursuant to 10 CFR § 211.67 (i) (4), FEA hereby fixes the price at which entitlements shall be sold and purchased for the month of July 1977 at $8.68, which is the exact differential as reported for the month of July between the weighted average per barrel costs to refiners of old oil and of imported and exempt domestic crude oil, less the sum of 21 cents.

In accordance with 10 CFR § 211.67 (b), each refiner that has been issued fewer entitlements for the month of July 1977 than the number of barrels of deemed old oil included in its adjusted crude oil receipts is required to purchase a number of entitlements for the month of July 1977 equal to the difference between the number of barrels of deemed old oil included in those receipts and the number of entitlements issued to and retained by that refiner. Refiners which have been issued a number of entitlements for the month of July 1977 in excess of the number of barrels of deemed old oil included in their adjusted crude oil receipts for that month and other firms issued entitlements shall sell such entitlements to refiners required to purchase entitlements. In addition, certain refiners are required to purchase or sell entitlements to effect corrections for reporting errors for the months September 1975 through June 1977 pursuant to 10 CFR § 211.67(j)(1).

The listing of refiners' old oil receipts contained in the Appendix reflects any adjustments made by FEA pursuant to § 211.67(h).

The listing contained in the Appendix identifies in a separate column additional entitlements issued to refiners pursuant to relief granted by FEA's Office of Exceptions and Appeals. Also set forth in this column are adjustments for relief granted by the Office of Exceptions and Appeals for 1975 and 1976, which adjustments are reflected in monthly installments. The number of installments is dependent on the magnitude of the adjustment to be made. For a full discussion of the issues involved, see Beacon Oil Company, et al, 4 FEA par. 87,024 (November 5, 1976).

For purposes of the adjustments to reners' crude run volumes under § 211.67(d)(4), total production of residual fuel oil for sale in the East Coast market (in excess of the first 5,000 barrels per day thereof for each refiner reporting such production) was 11,845,538 barrels for July 1977. For that month, imports of residual fuel oil eligible for entitlement issuances totaled 32,235,079 barrels.

The total number of entitlements required to be purchased and sold under this notice is 22,075,354.

Payment for entitlements required to be purchased under 10 CFR § 211.67(b) for July 1977 must be made by September 30, 1977.

On or prior to October 10, 1977, each firm which is required to purchase or sell entitlements for the month of July 1977 shall file with FEA the monthly transaction report specified in 10 CFR 211.66(i) cerifying its purchases and sales of entitlements for the month of July. FEA has mailed the monthly transaction report forms for the month of July to reporting firms. FEA requests that firms which have been unable to locate other firms for required entitlement transactions by September 30, 1977 contact FEA at 202-254-6296 to expedite consummation of these transactions. For firms that have failed to consummate required entitlement transactions on or prior to September 30, 1977, FEA may direct sales and purchases of entitlements pursuant to the provisions of 10 CFR § 211.67(k).

This notice is issued pursuant to Subpart G of FEA's regulations governing its administrative procedures and sanctions, 10 CFR Part 205. Any person aggrieved hereby may file an appeal with FEA's Office of Exceptions and Appeals in accordance with Subpart H of 10 CFR Part 205. Any such appeal shall be filed by October 26, 1977.

Issued in Washington, D.C. on September 20, 1977.

BACA GAS GATHERING SYSTEM, INC. AND PANHANDLE EASTERN PIPE LINE CO.

Order Clarifying Commission's Order and Vacating Termination of Proceeding

SEPTEMBER 15, 1977.

On June 29, 1977, Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. (Panhandle), and in support thereof, Baca Gas Gathering System, Inc. (Baca), on July 7, 1977, filed in Docket No. CP77-56, et al., a petition for clarification of the Commission's order issued May 31, 1977, all as more fully set forth in the petition for clarification, in this proceeding.

In its order of May 31, 1977, the Commission authorized the abandonment pursuant to Section 7(b) of the Natural Gas Act by Baca, through a sale to Panhandle, of all of Baca's natural gas facilities and the acquisition and operation of such facilities by Panhandle. Panhandle requests clarification on two limited issues concerning the order. First, Panhandle requests that the Commission specifically approve the accounting entries included in Exhibit S to Panhandle's application. Second, Panhandle requests the Commission to confirm that the purchase price of the facilities includes a sum approximately $18,000 to cover the cost of attachment of two wells by Baca subsequent to the execution of the Facilities Purchase Agreement executed by Baca and Panhandle. Said points are within the intent of the Commission's authorization, and the order will be clarified accordingly.

The order of May 31, 1977, also terminated Baca's rate proceeding in Docket No. RP76-133, but the order failed to recognize that Baca would remain liable for any refund obligation incurred thereunder. Therefore, said proceeding will be reinstated for the purpose of refunds.

The Commission finds: It is necessary and appropriate in carrying out the provisions of the Natural Gas Act and the public convenience and necessity require that the Commission's order issued June 29, 1977, in Docket No. CP77-56, et al., be clarified as hereinafter ordered.

The Commission orders: (A) The Commision's order issued June 29, 1977, in Docket Nos. CP77-56, et al., is clarified by approving (1) the accounting entries included in Exhibit S to Panhandle's application and (2) the inclusion in the purchase price of the facilities a sum of approximately $18,000 to cover the cost of attachment of two wells by Baca.

(B) The termination of the rate proceeding in Docket No. RP76-153 is vacated so that Baca will remain liable to make refunds to Panhandle.

(C) In all other respects said order shall remain in full force and effect.

By the Commission.

[Docket No. CI77-773]

EDWIN L. COX (OPERATOR)

Limited-Term Application

SEPTEMBER 15, 1977.

Take notice that on August 18, 1977, Edwin L. Cox (Operator), Applicant, 3800 First National Bank Building, Dallas, Tex. 75202, filed an application for a limited-term certificate of public convenience and necessity with pregranted abandonment in Docket No. CI77-773, Applicant proposes to make a sale of natural gas to Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. (Columbia) for a term of two years commencing prior to the heating season of 1977-78. Applicant has been advised by Columbia that this limited-term purchase is necessary because of the severe gas supply shortage existing on Columbia's system which has prevented Columbia from meeting a substantial part of its existing system's firm requirements. Applicant is further advised by Columbia that its projected system curtailment during the period of this purchase is of such magnitude as to threaten substantial reductions in deliveries of natural gas to high priority users.

The natural gas to be sold to Columbia will be the gas produced from two wells located in the Little Lake Field of Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, known as the Louisiana Land and Exploration Wells No. 1 and No. 2. Such gas will be sold under a Gas Purchase Contract between Applicant, Hawthorne Oil and Gas Corp., Oakland Corp., Arcade Enterprises, Inc., and W. B. Burkenroad, as Sellers, and Columbia, as Buyer, dated July 11, 1977, which agreement is being filed simultaneously herewith. This application is made by Edwin L. Cox, as Operator, for the owners of the Oil and Gas Leasehold estate in the wells covered by said Gas Purchase Contract.

Applicant will deliver such gas into the facilities of Columbia at a mutually agreeable point near the Louisiana Land and Exploration Well No. 1. Columbia will deliver such gas to Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co. (Tennessee Gas) at a point on Tennessee Gas' existing pipeline in the Little Lake Field and Tennessee will redeliver such gas to Columbia Gulf pursuant to an Exchange Agreement.

It appears reasonable and consistent with the public interest in this case to prescribe a period shorter than 10 days for the filing of protests and petitions to intervene. Therefore, any person desiring to be heard or to make any protest with reference to said application should on or before September 23, 1977, file with the Federal Power Commission, Washington, D.C. 20426, a petition to intervene or a protest in accordance with the requirements of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure (18 CFR 1.8 or 1.10). All protests filed with the Commission will be considered by it in determining the appropriate action to be taken but will not serve to make the protestants parties to the proceeding. Any person wishing to become a party to a proceeding or to participate as a party in any hearing therein must file a petition to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules.

EAST TENNESSEE NATURAL GAS CO., ET AL.

Order Re-Opening Proceedings, Establishing Procedures and Providing for Hearings to More Specifically Evaluate Curtailment Impacts

SEPTEMBER 14, 1977.

In the matter of East Tennessee Natural Gas Co., El Paso Natural Gas Co., Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., Tennessee Natural Gas Lines, Inc., Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., and The United Gas Pipe Line Co.

By an Order issued May 11, 1977, in Alabama-Tennessee Natural Gas Company, et al., Docket Nos. RP77-65, et al., procedures were established for ascertaining the magnitude and potential impact of curtailments projected to occur during the 1977-78 winter upon the systems of 29 interstate pipeline companies. It was the purpose of the proceedings initiated by that order to provide an overview of potential curtailment impact for the forthcoming winter on both a normal and 10 percent colder than normal basis. Because the survey was national in scope and encompassed such a large number of pipeline companies, it was necessary to establish expedited procedures for its conduct. Those procedures included the filing of informational reports by the pipelines, the holding of brief hearings where necessary, and the submission of summary memoranda (in lieu of briefs) by the staff and interested parties. The analyzing memoranda were filed with the Commission and served on all parties to the proceedings on August 12, 1977, and have since been the subject of our review.

On the basis of the information which has been collected, the staff reports indicate that the impact of the curtailments projected for next winter should, in general, be of manageable proportions if the weather experienced is no worse than normal. Even if the actual weather next winter is 10 percent colder than normal, the reports show that twenty three pipelines would experience no significant economic dislocations. However, the reports show that severe industrial curtailment projected by six pipelines would result in plant closings. In particular, we are concerned with the apparently critical impacts which are forecasted as resulting from the curtailments of the following six pipelines: El Paso Natural Gas Co., Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co. (TGPC), Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Co., United Gas Pipe Line Co., East Tennessee Natural Gas Co. and Tennessee Natural Gas Lines, Inc.[1]

We regard the curtailment-related impacts forecasted by the above six companies to be of sufficient concern to afford them further consideration.

Our instant effort will be directed to the gathering of further information on the current capability of alternate fuel use by industrial customers that indicated in the earlier proceeding the possibility of plant closings next winter. Secondly, we desire the collection of more specific information regarding the efforts of those customers to arrange direct purchases under Order No. 533 procedures (or any purchase of gas from any source under any circumstances). In addition, we desire that the record reflect similar information regarding corresponding self-help efforts of distribution and industrial customers. Thirdly, plant closings on some systems appear to be more readily avoided through the allocation of emergency supplies to the distressed distributor or direct industrial consumer, rather than through acquisition of emergency volumes by the pipeline supplier for its system supplies. Consequently, it would be useful to have specific information regarding the present and proposed efforts of the six pipelines to allocate any emergency purchases or to arrange for emergency purchases for specific customers.

In order to facilitate consideration of these matters, we direct the continuation of proceedings in the instant dockets, and order that the continuing proceedings address, at a minimum, the following areas of inquiry:

(1) The amount of additional gas supply needed for each distributor or direct industrial customers to avoid plant shut-down during each month of the 1977-78 winter period, including appropriate supporting data from distributors based on the needs of each commercial or industrial consumer that may be forced to shut-down due to curtailment this winter. Indicate the approximate number of days of shut-down for each consumer on the basis of 10 percent colder than normal weather.

(2) Existing commitments and projected availability of emergency purchases by pipeline companies or distributors for each month of the winter period.

(3) For each distributor and consumer faced with the prospect of plant shut-down, list all self-help measures which have been undertaken to date, and other self-help measures which are planned to avoid shut-down, including actions by state authorities.

(4) List for each pipeline and distributor with projected shut-down problems, all existing and proposed contingency plans to mitigate effects of plant shut-down next winter.

(5) For each pipeline and distributor, update the initial report and testimony supplied in this proceeding with any significant changes.

The compilation of an adequate record in these proceedings will only be possible by the cooperation and participation of all distribution companies of all sizes that serve the distressed industrial customers behind the six pipeline companies with which we are concerned. There is a need for more specific information regarding individual industrial consumers. The distribution companies are more likely to possess the specific information we require for individual industrials than are pipeline companies. We therefore call upon these distribution companies to make this information available for the re-opened hearings. We shall continue to rely upon the pipeline companies to collate and analyze information relating to their direct and indirect markets, and to present testimony regarding these matters as well as an updated assessment of the projected impact next winter.

Although the supply projections in the earlier proceedings (upon which the forecasts of plant closings were predicated) did not indicate firm commitments to make emergency purchases, it would appear that any such purchases, if properly allocated, would do much to avert serious economic dislocations. To afford a further analysis of the availability of emergency purchases, we hereby direct the Commission Staff to contact producers, intrastate pipelines (and other potential sources of emergency volumes of which the Staff is aware) who reported large-volume emergency sales last winter. The purpose of these contacts will be to determine whether comparable volumes will be offered to the interstate market on an emergency basis this coming winter, or if not, what their alternate disposition will be.

Our purpose in directing these extended proceedings continues to be the swift compilation of an analysis of the potential curtailment impact for the coming winter, and a measure of the emergency purchases (and other relief devices) necessary to avert critical dislocations. We continue to emphasize the nonadjudicatory information-gathering nature of these proceedings, and therefore, the inappropriateness of adherence to strict evidentiary and procedural rules in their conduct. The proximity of the winter heating season renders it critical that these continued proceedings be conducted with all possible dispatch. We envision hearings of less than two days' duration and direct that they be held between September 19 and October 5, 1977. Thereafter we shall again call upon our Staff and the other parties to file with the Commission by October 14, 1977, summary memoranda in which the data presented in these re-opened proceedings is analyzed, and in which any party may submit any comments that are warranted in light of the facts and data developed.

A copy of this order shall be sent to all of the state commissions and state energy offices affected hereby, and directly to all of the parties to the proceedings.

The Commission finds: It is in the public interest and consistent with the purposes of the Natural Gas Act to reopen the records in the subject proceedings and to schedule further hearings therein.

The Commission orders: (A) Pursuant to the authority conferred upon the Commission under the Natural Gas Act, particularly Sections 4, 5, 7, 14, and 15, hearings shall be held as provided below.

(B) The hearings provided for in ordering paragraph (A) shall be convened at such times and places as provided for in a notice to be issued by the Secretary after receipt of a recommendation made by the General Counsel and Chief of the Bureau of Natural Gas after consultation on this matter with the Chief Administrative Law Judge.

(C) A copy of this order and of the notice provided for in ordering paragraph (B) shall be forwarded directly to parties to the proceeding and to concerned state commissions and state energy offices along with our request for their co-operation and participation in this matter.

(D) An analysis in memorandum form of the information obtained in the continuation of these proceedings shall be presented to the Commission by the Commission Staff and other interested parties desiring to submit such memorandum or comments to the Commission by October 14, 1977.

By the Commission.

Petition for Declaratory Order and Application for Abandonment

SEPTEMBER 19, 1977.

Take notice that on September 7, 1977, Falcon Petroleum Co. (Falcon), filed in Docket No. CI77-799 a petition for a declaratory order pursuant to section 1.7 of the Commission's rules of practice and procedure (18 CFR § 1.7). Falcon requests a finding that its predecessor in interest, Amoco Production Co. (Amoco), has lawfully abandoned sales to Northern Natural Gas Co. (Northern), from the Purdum Well, located in Lipscomb County, Tex., section 901, Block 43, H. and T. C. Railway Survey. Such sales to certificated in Docket No. CI63-805, and deliveries to Northern by Amoco were commenced pursuant to Amoco's FPC Gas Rate Schedule No. 366.

In the alternative, Falcon requests Commission authorization to abandon the sale to Northern pursuant to section 7(b) of the Natural Gas Act. In the event Falcon receives abandonment authorization, it proposes to sell production from the Purdum Well to Transwestern Pipeline Co. (Transwestern), with fifty percent of production to be earmarked for delivery to the city of Perryton, Tex., (City) and the remaining fifty percent to be allocated to Transwestern's interstate pipeline system.

Any person desiring to be heard or to make any protest with reference to said petition should on or before October 7, 1977, file with the Federal Power Commission, Washington, D.C. 20426, a petition to intervene or a protest in accordance with the requirements of the Commission's rules of practice and procedure (18 CFR 1.8 or 1.10). All protests filed with the Commission will be considered by it in determining the appropriate action to be taken but will not serve to make the protestants parties to the proceeding. Any party wishing to become a party to a proceeding, or to participate as a party in any hearing therein, must file a petition to intervene in accordance with the Commission's rules.

NATURAL GAS PIPELINE CO. OF AMERICA

Order Accepting Proposed Stipulation and Agreement

SEPTEMBER 19, 1977.

On June 6, 1977, Presiding Administrative Law Judge Lande certified the proposed Stipulation and Agreement and the entire record in this proceeding to the Commission for its consideration.

On September 9, 1976, Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America (Natural) filed an application pursuant to section 7(c) of the Natural Gas Act for a certificate of public convenience and necessity authorizing the constrction and operation of transmission and storage facilities to provide additional storage service under a proposed new Rate Schedule LS-2. This new service would expand Natural's storage fields in Iowa and Illinois and provide a new leased storage service to its customers. Its stated purpose is to provide customers with additional flexibility in the operation of their systems and to enhance reliability of service to the ultimate consumer.

Natural proposes to expand the storage fields in Iowa and Illinois to increase daily withdrawal capacity by 124,000 Mcf in order to provide the proposed new LS–2 storage service to its customers. A total of 100 days top storage withdrawal allegedly will be available for the period beginning December 1 of each year and continuing through March 31 of the following year, with the maximum available to each customer being 100 times its contracted daily withdrawal quantity. To provide this leased storage service, Natural proposes to allocate from the existing entitlements of participating customers the following:

(1) 12,400,000 Mcf of top storage gas each year;
(2) 310,000 Mcf of fuel gas each year; and
(3) 24,800,000 Mcf of cushion gas for the first year of LS–2 service only.

The service agreements covering the LS–2 service would be for a period of 10 years commencing April 1, 1977, but could be cancelled on one year's notice by Natural if, in its judgment, the severity of curtailment on its system required it. Upon termination of the LS–2 service, the total amount of cushion gas would be returned to Natural's customers. It was proposed that the LS–2 service would be offered to all customers, allocating the 124,000 Mcf per day among them, prorated to their existing daily contract quantities under Rate Schedules DMQ–1 and G–1, and the volumes not accepted would then be re-offered to those customers who did elect to participate in the LS–2 storage service until the total volume is contracted. Natural states that the entire volume is now under contract.

In addition, Natural requests that the inventory limitations of the storage fields, imposed as conditions to certificate authorization heretofore issued, be increased to designated levels set forth in the application. Natural also proposes to construct and operate several additional small gathering lines in order to connect injection-withdrawal wells and other miscellaneous facilities.

The estimated cost of these facilities, excluding cushion gas which would be provided by the participating customers, is approximately $25,000,000. Pursuant to section 2.55(a) of the Commission's General Policy and Interpretations, Natural also proposes to construct and operate six observation wells, dehydration units and other miscellaneous facilities.

General Motors Corp. (GM) filed a protest, petition to intervene, and a request for a hearing, on October 15, 1976. GM's pleadings raised the issue of whether a pipeline which is presently curtailing its firm customers should be permitted to increase its storage capacity to meet the additional demands of its distributor customers resulting from their attachments of new high priority consumers. By its Order of January 13, 1977, the Commission directed that this question should be explored fully in an administrative hearing.

The hearing commenced on May 11, 1977, at which time the proposed Stipulation and Agreement was presented by Natural to all parties. Certain supply evidence was entered into the record that day, and upon reconvention of the hearing on June 1, 1977, the record was completed. The record and the proposed Stipulation and Agreement were then certified to the Commission. Public notice of said certification of the proposal was issued by the Commission on June 10, 1977. In accordance with its comments filed July 1, 1977, GM no longer has objections to the proposed Agreement. All other parties urge its approval.

We find that the proposed Stipulation and Agreement should be approved as being in the public interest. The Commission is concerned about the encouragement of growth in high priority loads which may adversely affect existing customers who may not have alternative sources of energy. Moreover new service to high priority uses may undesirably reduce the flexibility of systems already in curtailment. Accordingly the Commission conditions its acceptance of the proposed Stipulation and Agreement by requiring that Natural report any increase in Priority 1 load for each of Natural's customers annually to permit us to monitor growth of high priority loads by distribution customers of Natural.

The Commission orders: The proposed Stipulation and Agreement is approved, and a certificate of public convenience and necessity is hereby issued authorizing the construction and operation of transmission and storage facilities and appurtenant facilities thereto in Docket No. CP76–517 provided that Natural submits a filing annually which indicates whether there has been any increase in Priority 1 load for any of its customers and if so, which ones and the amount.

By the Commission.

NATURAL GAS PIPELINE CO. OF AMERICA

Order Accepting Proposed Stipulation and Agreement

SEPTEMBER 19, 1977.

On May 31, 1977, Presiding Administrative Law Judge Curtis L. Wagner, Jr., certified to the Commission a proposed Stipulation and Agreement, as well as the administrative record in the above-captioned proceeding.

On September 1, 1976, Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America (Natural) filed an application herein pursuant to section 7(c) of the Natural Gas Act for a certificate of public convenience and necessity authorizing the limited-term transportation and delivery of up to 50,000 Mcf per day of natural gas for United Gas Pipeline Co. (United) and the permanent retention and operation of facilities required to effectuate the transportation service.

Natural proposes to transport gas for one year received from Producers Gas Co. (Producers) for United's account from the points of delivery in Dewey and Woodward Counties, Okla., to a point of interconnection of United's and Natural's lines in Vermilion Parish, La. Natural also seeks authority to retain in place facilities costing $24,950, which were installed to permit the 60-day emergency exchange of gas with United, which was initiated on May 20, 1976, and concluded on July 17, 1976, pursuant to Section 157.22 of the Commission's regulations. The facilities consist of a tap connection at the Woodward County point and a tap connection and measuring facility at the Dewey County point and were financed from funds on hand. Natural's limited-term Gas Transportation Agreement dated August 10, 1976, with United provides for deliveries by United to Natural of up to 50,000 Mcf per day. United has advised Natural that it would deliver an average of 35,000 Mcf per day.

By order issued on October 19, 1976, in the proceeding entitled Producer Gas Company, et al., Docket No. CI76597 et al., Natural was granted a temporary certificate of public convenience and necessity to transport the gas volumes as described above. In a subsequent order in the instant docket issued March 4, 1977, the Commission, inter alia, set a prehearing conference for April 18, with respect to the proposed 15 cents per Mcf transportation charge. Said order took cognizance that "Natural does not have any facilities connecting the point of receipt of the gas in Oklahoma with the point of delivery in Louisiana. Therefore, no gas is physically transported between the two points and it appears that Natural is merely charging 15.0 cents per Mcf in exchange of gas."

As a result of the prehearing conference held on April 18, 1977, at which time settlement discussions were undertaken by the parties, Natural prepared the aforementioned Stipulation and Agreement, which it formally presented to the Presiding Administrative Law Judge at a further hearing held on May 25, 1977. Natural proposes through this proposed Stipulation and Agreement to resolve the transportation charge issue, which is the only major matter in dispute in this proceeding.

Pursuant to the proposed Stipulation and Agreement Natural would charge 15 cents per Mcf for the aforementioned deliveries, but has agreed to refund, with interest, in accordance with the settlement agreement in RP76–106, all revenues which it receives from United and is permitted to retain by final order no longer subject to appeal. In assessing the 15 cents per Mcf transportation rate, Natural maintains that the use of average cost of transportation is a reasonable means of establishing a rate for the displacement service since it operates a fully integrated system with rates on rolled-in costs. The distance between the two contemplated points is approximately 600 miles and the rate of transportation is gauged accordingly, as if the gas were actually transported along an existing pipeline.

The Commission has recognized displacement as a type of transportation for which a pipeline might assess a charge. In the instant proceeding, it receives compensation for its service from United in addition to the concurrent benefit of reducing the distance for transporting its gas supplies. Although we have reservations concerning the proposed transportation rate, we find that the data elicited indicates that the relatively de minimis amounts involved herein do not justify a full administrative hearing. We are satisfied by the record herein that the rate proposed is acceptable under the circumstances; however, our findings as to the rate is based in the particular circumstances of the specific proceedings herein, and the methods used should not be considered as precedent for any other proceedings. The Commission intends to examine, by rulemaking procedures, the need for additional criteria for establishing proper rates for displacement services.

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that the proposed Stipulation and Agreement is in the public interest should be approved, and a certificate of public convenience and necessity should be granted authorizing the limited-term transportation and delivery of up to 50,000 Mcf per day for United, and permitting retention and operation of the subject facilities.

The Commission orders: The Stipulation and Agreement is hereby approved and a certificate of public convenience and necessity for the aforementioned service and facilities as described herein in Docket No. CP76-511 is hereby granted.

By the Commission.

NEW ENGLAND POWER CO.

Compliance Filing

SEPTEMBER 16, 1977.

Take notice that New England Power Company (NEPCO) on August 15, 1977, tendered for filing revised cost of service data. NEPCO indicates that this filing is made in compliance with Ordering Paragraph A of the Commission's Opinion No. 803 and is in conformance with the dictates of that Opinion.

NEPCO states that the cost of service data filed herein demonstrates that the rates at issue in the proceeding are justified in their entirety. NEPCO further states that no revised tariff sheets are submitted in this filing and that no refunds have been made.

Any person desiring to be heard or to protest said filing should file protests or comments with the Federal Power Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, NE, Washington, DC 20426, in accordance with Sections 1.8 and 1.10 of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure (18 CFR 1.8 and 1.10). All such comments or protests should be filed on or before September 30, 1977. Protests and comments will be considered by the Commission in determining the appropriate action to be taken, but will not serve to make protestants parties to the proceeding. Copies of this filing are on file with the Commission and are available for public inspection.

NORTH AMERICAN ROYALTIES INC.

Order Setting Matter for Determination on Brief and Responding to a Petition for Declaratory Order

SEPTEMBER 19, 1977.

On May 17, 1977, North American Royalties, Inc. (Petitioner), filed a petition for declaratory order pursuant to Section 1.7(c) of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure. Petitioner holds a small producer certificate pursuant to an order issued October 1, 1971 in Docket No. CS71-152. On October 5, 1971, petitioner and Public Service Electric & Gas Company (Public Service) entered into an agreement for joint exploration of the Parc Perdue Prospect in Louisiana. On February 17, 1972 Public Service was authorized by petitioner to make a complete assignment of all its rights, responsibilities and duties under this agreement to Energy Development Company (EDC). Such assignment to EDC was made pursuant to an agreement dated March 30, 1972. On October 5, 1973 petitioner and EDC entered into a letter agreement (October 1973 Agreement) setting forth certain provisions which would govern gas purchases from petitioner by EDC from fields or prospect areas covered by the agreement and assignment hereinbefore referred to. The October 1973 Agreement contains the following provision:

PRICE, PRICE REDETERMINATIONS AND BTU ADJUSTMENTS

The price to be paid for gas, provisions for price redetermination, and BTU adjustments shall be agreed upon between the parties for each new field or prospect area and shall be set forth in supplemental agreements. The price determination shall be governed by the provisions currently being authorized by the Federal Power Commission, or any other regulatory agency having jurisdiction over the sale of interstate gas, for gas of the same quality and under the same delivery condition.

By letter agreement of September 23, 1974 (September 1974 Agreement) between petitioner and EDC the October 1973 Agreement was supplemented to provide for price, BTU and tax adjustments, and price redeterminations in the following manner:

"The price provisions [in the September 1974 Agreement] were determined on the basis of Federal Power Commission Opinion No. 699, issued June 21, 1974 * * *. We also agree that if Opinion 699 is amended or should subsequent area rate rulemaking be instituted which is applicable to the pricing provisions contained herein, such new pricing provisions shall be incorporated into this Agreement."

For the period from December 26, 1975 through July 26, 1976 petitioner collected from EDC for gas delivered from the Parc Perdue Prospect the rate established in Opinion No. 699. Petitioner contends that it should also receive the incremental dollar amount calculated by subtracting the difference between production proceeds at 130 percent of the applicable base national rate and amounts previously collected from EDC, or a stated deficiency amount of $118,948.86. In support of its position, petitioner asserts that Opinion No. 742, issued August 28, 1975, amended Opinion No. 699, or alternatively constitutes area rate rulemaking. Specifically, petitioner contends that for the reasons set out on pp. 3-5 of Opinion No. 742, the Commission determined that the rate of return established in Opinion No. 699-H for large producers was inadequate for small producers. Accordingly, petitioner asserts that Opinion No. 742 effectively amended Opinion No. 699-H. Alternatively, petitioner contends that the Commission in Opinion No. 742 set new area rates generally applicable to a particular class of producers (e.g. small producers).

Said petition was noticed on June 6, 1977 and published in the Federal Register on June 13, 1977 at 42 FR 30243. Public Service and EDC filed timely petitions to intervene. Public Service and EDC state that the condition imposed by virtue of the transportation certificates, granted May 4, 1976, preclude payment in excess of the base national rate established by the Commission in Opinion No. 699, issued June 21, 1974, together with modifying orders issued thereafter. Specifically, the language contained at Paragraph 5(a), page 4 of such order is as follows:

EDC agrees that it will not sell gas owned and/or controlled by EDC in the North Parc Perdue Field to its affiliate, PSE&G, at a price in excess of the applicable large producer rate for sales in interstate commerce, such rate being presently the national area rate established by the Commission in its Opinion No. 699, issued June 21, 1974, and modifying orders issued therein.

Public Service and EDC assert that such a price limitation was acceptable inasmuch as Opinion No. 742, issued August 28, 1975, did not amend Opinion No. 699, issued June 21, 1974, along with modifying orders thereafter. Further, the provisions of the October 1973 Agreement and the September 1974 Agreement in the context of Opinion No. 699 were not intended to permit new area rates applicable to small producers in Opinion No. 742 to be collected by NAR. Accordingly, EDC and Public Service contend that NAR has already collected the authorized contractual rate and no deficiency exists. EDC requests a formal hearing only to consider any rate to be collected by NAR in excess of the rate currently permitted to be charged to Public Service. Public Service does not request a formal hearing but requests it be made a party to the above-entitled proceeding. On July 18, 1977, NAR filed a motion pursuant to sections 1.12(a) and 1.32(a) under the Commission's General Rules of Practice and Procedure requesting that the instant proceeding be disposed of under the shortened procedures without a formal hearing.

In our opinion, an evidentiary hearing before an administrative law judge is not necessary for resolution of this matter. We believe it can be disposed of on briefs and will so provide.

The Commission finds: (1) It is in the public interest that the petition for declaratory order be set for determination and disposition on brief.

(2) Good cause exists to permit the interventions of EDC and Public Service.

(3) Good cause exists to deny NAR's motion for disposition without a formal hearing under shortened procedure.

The Commission orders: (A) This matter will be determined on brief. All parties desiring to file briefs, including Commission Staff, shall do so on or before September 28, 1977. Parties desiring to file answering briefs shall do so on or before October 12, 1977. Any party wishing to present evidence herein shall attach same as an appendix to its brief. All such evidence shall be sworn to. All briefs shall conform to the applicable provisions of sections 1.15, 1.16, and 1.17, of the Commission's rules of practice and procedure, as to copies, form, and service, but need not (except as to evidence appended thereto) be verified under oath. Fifteen copies of each document shall be filed with the Commission in addition to the copies served on the parties to this proceeding.

(B) NAR's motion for disposition of this matter under the shortened procedure provided for in Section 1.32 of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure is denied.

(C) EDC and Public Service are permitted to intervene in the above-entitled proceeding, subject to the rules and regulations of the Commission: Provided, however, that their participation shall be limited to matters affecting asserted rights and interests specifically set forth in their respective petitions for leave to intervene; and Provided, further, that the admission of EDC, and Public Service in the manner provided shall not be construed as recognition by the Commission that any or all might be aggrieved because of any order or orders entered in this proceeding and that each agrees to accept the record as it now stands.

(D) The Secretary shall cause prompt publication of this order to be made in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

By the Commission.

[Docket No. CP77-193]

NORTHERN NATURAL GAS CO.

Order Providing for Formal Hearing, Granting Petitions To Intervene, and Prescribing Procedures

SEPTEMBER 19, 1977.

On February 7, 1977, Northern Natural Gas Company (Northern) filed an application in Docket No. CP77-193, pursuant to Section 7(c) of the Natural Gas Act, requesting a certificate of public convenience and necessity to authorize the development and operation of storage facilities, to deliver small volumes of gas to Skelly Oil Company (Skelly), and to construct and operate facilities to accomplish the project. Northern anticipates that this storage will avoid deficiencies that would arise in meeting requirements of its existing firm and small market supply needs during the heating season.

The proposal covers the Cunningham Gas Field (Viola formation) in Pratt and Kingman Counties, Kansas, a nearly depleted gas filed covering approximately 26,240 acres, of which approximately 5,200 acres were productive during the field's life. The Viola reservoir was discovered in 1932 and produced a total of 71 Bcf of natural gas. Northern will be required to deliver to Skelly, for a period of not more than 10 years, volumes of gas not to exceed 500,000 Mcf for use in Skelly's Lansing/Kansas City Water-Flood Program. This represents gas remaining in the reservoir that could be produced in the future, and, accordingly, Northern proposes to deliver to Skelly up to 150 Mcf per day of natural gas for a period not to exceed 10 years. To accommodate the delivery of such gas to Skelly, Northern proposes to construct and operate a delivery point with measurement and regulator equipment on its injection-withdrawal line in the Cunningham Field.

In order to develop the Cunningham Field for gas storage purposes, Northern proposes to drill and complete 35 gas injection/withdrawal wells, eight observation wells, and to convert 13 existing wells to observation wells. Other field facilities to be constructed include approximately 19.4 miles of 4½-inch through 26-inch gathering lines, 15 miles of access roads, four field dehydration units, wellhead meters, a combination warehouse-office control building, a 12,500-hp. compressor station and a 37.1-mile 30-inch pipeline to connect the proposed Cunningham compressor station to Northern's Macksville compressor station. Northern anticipates that full development of the reservoir and construction of necessary facilities will be accomplished over a four-year period. Initial injections to the storage reservoir would commence in June of 1978, with first withdrawals to be made during the 1979–80 winter heating season. The total estimated cost of developing the Cunningham Storage Field is $82,632,600. The designed withdrawal capacity is estimated to be 530,000 Mcf per day, or 40 Bcf annually, with a total of 71 Bcf of gas in the reservoir.

This original application was Noticed on February 18, 1977 (42 Fed. Reg. 11269) (February 28, 1977). Timely petitions for leave to intervene in support, either directly or indirectly, of Northern's application were filed by:

Northern Illinois Gas Company, Iowa Public Service Company, Iowa Electric Light & Power Company, Lloyd V. Crum, Iowa Power & Light Company, Wisconsin Gas Company, Minnesota Gas Company, Iowa-Illinois Gas & Electric Company, and Michigan Power Company.

Three petitions requested a hearing but later withdrew that request:

Lake Superior District Power Company, Minnesota Municipal Utilities Association and Utilities Section of the League of Nebraska Municipalities, and Flambeau Paper Company.

There were also a number of late petitioners, to wit:

Northwestern Public Service Company, Iowa Southern Utilities Company, Eveleth Taconits Company, North Central Public Service Company, Division of Donovan Companies, Inc., Joint Petition of Northern States Power Company (Minnesota and Wisconsin), The Brick People Region 6 of the Brick Institute of America (The Brick People, et al.)

Of these, the Brick People, et al., requested a hearing.

In order to reflect minor modifications in the facilities, Northern filed an amendment to its initial application on June 8, 1977 (as reflected above). On July 26, 1977, Northern filed a motion for expedited procedure, which was answered by The Brick People, et al., on August 10, 1977. On August 15, 1977, Northern filed a request for a temporary certificate to order the needed parts to meet a February 1, 1978, construction date for a June 1, 1978, injection of natural gas. Minnesota Gas Company and North Central Public Service Company filed comments in support of the motion for expedited procedure or issuance of a temporary certificate.

We find these proceedings should be set for hearing. The Brick People, et al., raise the following issues regarding the storage field.[1]

"6. Numerous factual issues are raised by this case and formal hearings seem essential. In addition to the wholly technical questions of whether storage can be accomplished at the Cunningham Field, several crucial issues relating to the public interest must be addressed. Generally speaking, the fundamental public interest questions involve the need for the $82,000,000 facilities, who they will serve, and at whose expense. The many factual questions include: whether there is any real need for the proposed storage field and accompanying transportation facilities; whether the expanded storage service will be used to serve new customers and, if so, whether it is in the public interest to build costly facilities to serve new customers, including small firm commercial and industrial users, at the expense of further curtailing existing customers; which customers, having what end-uses, would in fact be forced to bear the additional gas service interruption caused by the new storage injection requirements; whether those customers who will suffer increased curtailment as a result of the proposed project will have alternate fuel capabilities (other than propane); if the project is to permit growth, whether the proposed new gas customers who would be added now use (or, if not yet built, could utilize) alternate fuels; whether the existing ratepayers of Northern Natural should be saddled with the enormous cost of the proposed facilities; whether the storage service would be used to augment winter service to customers with alternate fuel capabilities, and, if so, at whose expense, and would such service be in the public interest."

[1] Protest, Petition For Leave to Intervene Out of Time and Request for Formal Hearing received April 14, 1977, pages 3 and 4.

While Northern has characterized the issues presented as "growth", both parties argue that Opinion No. 810 (Docket No. CP74-316, et al., issued July 7, 1977) would control. It should also be noted that the entire Northern system is presently the subject of curtailment proceedings in Docket No. RP76-52; however, the specific issues raised by The Brick People, et al., are not the subject of the ongoing proceeding. This situation augurs both factual and legal differences that could be resolved only after a formal hearing and briefing.

In addition to the issues as stated by The Brick People, et al., and because growth is a factor in these proceedings, we believe the hearing established below should address the question of whether Northern should be permitted to increase its storage to satisfy additional demands represented by distributor growth and, if the question is answered negatively, what conditions can be attached to any permanent certificate issued in these proceedings to prohibit such use. Thus, the hearing in this proceeding should develop a record regarding the following issues:

(1) Is the construction and operation of the proposed facilities required by the public convenience and necessity?

(2) What customers and which markets will be served if the proposed facilities are constructed?

(3) What effect would the construction and operation of the proposed facilities have on existing customers?

(4) Who should pay the cost of the proposed facilities and service?

(5) Describe theimpact of diverting additional gas supplies to storage during the summer period on existing customers.

(6) Will any of the existing customers of Northern receive less gas on an annual and peak day basis as a result of the proposed facilities?

(7) If new customers are proposed to be served, identify these customers and their peak day and annual requirements according to the priorities prescribed in 18 CFR Section 2.78(a)(1).

(8) Does the continued addition of new customers advance the public interest?

(9) What conditions, if any, should be attached to any permanent certificate, which may be issued in these proceedings?

Responses to these issues should give consideration to the Commission's determination in Opinion No. 810, Michigan Wisconsin Pipeline Company, Docket No. CP74-316, et al., issued July 7, 1977.

We also find that an emergency does exist as to the ordering of materials and planned work for the calendar year 1977 in the amount of $3.7 million and that the public convenience and necessity require that a temporary certificate be issued.

The Commission finds: (1) It is necessary and appropriate in carrying out the provisions of the Natural Gas Act that a public hearing be held in the matters involved and the issues presented in these proceedings as hereinbefore described.

(2) Participation in these proceedings by all of the aforementioned Intervenors may be in the public interest. Permitting the filing of late Petitions to Intervene will not delay the proceedings and may be in the public interest.

The Commission orders: (A) The proceeding in Docket No. CP77-193 is hereby set for hearing and disposition. The temporary certificate requested shall be issued as hereinbefore limited.

(B) Pursuant to the authority of the Natural Gas Act, particularly Sections 4, 5, and 15 thereof, the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure (18 CFR Part I) and the Regulations under the Natural Gas Act (18 CFR, Chapter I, Subchapter (e)), a pre-hearing conference shall be held on January 9, 1978, commencing at 10:00 a.m. in a hearing room of the Federal Power Commission, 825 North Capitol Street, NE., Washington, D.C., 20426, to discuss procedural issues and the clarification of issues.

(C) An Administrative Law Judge to be designated by the Chief Administrative Law Judge for that purpose (see Delegation of Authority, 18 CFR, Section 3.5(d)) shall preside at the pre-hearing conference in this proceeding with authority to establish and change all procedural dates, to rule on all motions (with the sole exception of Petitions to Intervene, motions to consolidate and sever, and motions to dismiss), as provided for in the Rules of Practice and Procedure.

(D) The direct case of Northern, including testimony on issues raised by this Order, shall be filed and served on all parties, the Presiding Administrative Law Judge, and the Commission Staff on or before November 7, 1977. All supporting Intervenors shall file testimony and exhibits comprising their cases-in-chief on or before December 19, 1977.

(E) The above-mentioned Intervenors are permitted to intervene in the instant consolidated proceeding, subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Commission: Provided, however, That participation of such Intervenors shall be limited to matters affecting asserted rights and interests as specifically set forth in the Petition to Intervene; and Provided, further, That the admission of such Intervenors shall not be construed as recognition by the Commission that they might be aggrieved because of any Order of the Commission entered in the proceeding.

(F) The Secretary shall cause prompt publication of this Order in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

By the Commission.

[Docket No. CP77-610]

NORTHERN NATURAL GAS CO.

Application

SEPTEMBER 19, 1977.

Take notice that on September 7, 1977, Northern Natural Gas Company (Applicant), 2223 Dodge Street, Omaha, Nebraska 68102, filed in Docket No. CP77-610 an application pursuant to Section 7(b) of the Natural Gas Act for permission and approval to abandon and remove certain facilities in Ottawa County, Kansas, all as more fully set forth in the application on file with the Commission and open to public inspection.

Applicant indicates that pursuant to the Commission's order of May 21, 1947 in Docket G-777, it was granted authorization to acquire, inter alia, approximately 6.8 miles of 2-inch branchline serving the town of Delphos, Kansas from the Kansas Power and Light Company (KP&L), and that pursuant to the Commission's order of March 11, 1954, it was granted authorization to install, among other things, approximately 2.65 miles of 3-inch loop line on the Delphos branchline, which is located in Ottawa County, Kansas.

Applicant states that the 2.65 miles of the 2-inch Delphos branchline which is looped with a 3-inch line is no longer required to serve the two of Delphos. Applicant further states that this segment of line proposed to be abandoned also has inadequate cover caused by erosion, and that inadvertently, and absent Commission's authorization, the 2-inch segment of the branchline which is looped was removed. The cost of removing such facilities was $1,500, and was financed from cash on hand, it is said.

Consequently, Applicant requests the Commission's approval of the abandonment and removal of the 2.65 miles of the 2-inch Delphos branchline.

Any person desiring to be heard or to make any protest with reference to said application should on or before October 7, 1977, file with the Federal Power Commission, Washington, D.C. 20426, a petition to intervene or a protest in accordance with the requirements of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure (18 CFR 1.8 or 1.10) and the Regulations under the Natural Gas Act (18 CFR 157.10). All protests filed with the Commission will be considered by it in determining the appropriate action to be taken but will not serve to make the protestants parties to the proceeding. Any person wishing to become a party to a proceeding or to participate as a party in any hearing therein must file a petition to intervene in accordance with the Commission's Rules.

Take further notice that, pursuant to the authority contained in and subject to the jurisdiction conferred upon the Federal Power Commission by Sections 7 and 15 of the Natural Gas Act and the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure, a hearing will be held without further notice before the Commission on this application if no petition to intervene is filed within the time required herein, if the Commission on its own review of the matter finds that permission and approval for the proposed abandonment are required by the public convenience and necessity. If a petition for leave to intervene is timely filed, or if the Commission on its own motion believes that a formal hearing is required, further notice of such hearing will be duly given.

Under the procedure herein provided for, unless otherwise advised, it will be unnecessary for Applicant to appear or be represented at the hearing.

LOIS D. CASHELL,
Acting Secretary.

[Docket No. ER77-127]

OKLAHOMA GAS & ELECTRIC CO.

Order Denying in Part and Granting in Part Reconsideration and Correcting Prior Order

SEPTEMBER 19, 1977.

On December 27, 1976, Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company (OG&E) submitted for filing a proposed rate increase of $2,916, 855 for the 12 month period succeeding February 1, 1977.

On January 26, 1977, the Commission issued its Order Accepting for Filing And Suspending Proposed Rate Schedules, Granting Interventions And Establishing Procedures (Order) which:

(A) Suspended OG&E's proposed rate schedules for two months to become effective April 1, 1977, subject to refund, for those customers whose contracts expired prior to that time;

(B) Ordered a hearing pursuant to the Federal Power Act, especially Section 206 thereof, to determine if OG&E's proposed rates are just and reasonable; and

(C) Granted the Petition to Intervene of the Arkansas Valley Electric Cooperative, KAMO Electric Cooperative, Inc., Indian Electric Cooperative, the Cities of Blackwell, Edmund, Kingfisher, Mannford, Okeene, Ponca City, Purcell, Prague, Stroud, Stillwater, Tecumseh, Tonkawa, Waynoka, and Wynnewood, Oklahoma (Public Systems).

On February 22, 1977, OG&E petitioned for rehearing [1] of the Order alleging that it was in error in the following respects:

(1) Hearings should be convened simultaneously under both Sections 205 and 206 of the Act;

(2) For the six municipal customers whose present contracts provide that the rates will become effective only when a similar increase is made to all of OG&E's wholesale municipal customers, the Commission improperly stated the effective date of the increases to them.

On February 25, 1977, Public Systems filed an application for rehearing [1] of the Order alleging that:

1. The Order is ambiguous as to whether all of the rates included in this docket will be subject to refund.

2. The Order fails to enforce Sections 35.3(a) and 35.13(4)(iii) of the Commission's Regulations by accepting certain of the rates for filing.

3. The Commission failed to enforce Section 35.14 of its regulations by accepting OG&E's fuel clause for filing.

4. OG&E's relationship with one of its fuel suppliers, Mustang Fuel Corporation should be investigated as a part of the proceeding.

5. The Order erroneously stated that the applicable contract between Tecumseh, Oklahoma and OG&E permitted a rate increase prior to a final Commission order.

6. The Commission failed to identify the City of Perry, Oklahoma as an intervenor in this proceeding.

On March 24, 1977, the Commission granted rehearing for the limited purpose of further consideration.

OG&E's Petition

Ordering Paragraph (A) of the Order accepted OG&E's proposed rate schedules for filing and suspended them for two months, to become effective April 1, 1977, subject to refund for those customers whose contracts expired prior to that time. The City of Tecumseh's contract expired on March 7, 1977. The City of Manchester's contract expired on March 29, 1977. The Commission's treatment of OG&E's rates as they apply to Tecumseh and Manchester has been consistent with Sections 205 and 206 of the Act. Ordering Paragraph (B) of the Order inadevertently omitted reference to Section 205. The Commission intended the hearing to be conducted pursuant to both Sections 205 and 206 of the Act.

Section 205(a) states that all rates and charges for the transmission or sale of electric energy must be just and reasonable, and any such rate not just and reasonable is unlawful. Section 205(e) vests the Commission with authority to suspend rates for up to 5 months, after which time the rates can become effective subject to refund. Section 206(a) provides that after a hearing, the Commission upon finding that any rate or charge is unreasonable or unjust, shall determine the just and reasonable rate or charge. Accordingly, both Sections 205 and 206 are the appropriate vehicles for Commission review of all of OG&E's rates filed herein. However, only the rates applicable to Tecumseh and Manchester were subject to suspension pursuant to Section 205(e) of the Act in Docket No. ER77-127.[2]

OG&E maintains that the Order has misstated the proposed effective dates of the rate increase for a number of its customers. At page 2 of its petition it states:

> For the six municipal customers whose present contracts provide that the rates will become effective only when a similar increase is made to all of OG&E's wholesale municipal customers, the Commission has improperly stated the date on which increases to them can become effective. This error, OG&E believes, arises from a misstatement of OG&E's requested effective date on Page 2 of the Order. There OG&E is stated to have requested "an effective date corresponding to the earlier of (1) approval of a rate increase to the other 15 municipals or (2) the expiration date of the longest fixed rate contract." (Emphasis supplied) On page 2 of the letter that accompanied the filing in this docket, OG&E requested an effective date as of the "earlier of the time when either (1) approval is granted for a rate increase to the other 15 municipalities or (2) when the contract has been terminated for each municipality." (Emphasis supplied)

At page 3, OG&E states:

> For the six cooperative customers, the Commission seems to have recognized, on pages 2 and 3, that the effective date of the increase is to be the earlier of (1) the time when approval is granted or (2) the Cooperative's contract has been terminated. [footnote omitted] On page 4, however, the effective date is stated as "when approval is granted or the Cooperatives' contracts terminate, whichever occurs first." (Emphasis supplied) Here, as with the municipal customers, the suggestion is that all of the contracts must terminate. That clearly is not the case.

After considering the arguments advanced in OG&E's petition, and review of the letter accompanying OG&E's December 27, 1976 filing, the Commission agrees that the Order misstates the proposed effective dates of the rate increase for a number of customers. For Manchester, Orlando, Pond Creek, Prague, Tecumseh, and Wynnewood, OG&E requested an effective date of the earlier of either (1) when approval is granted for a rate increase to the other 15 municipalities or (2) when each municipality's contract terminates. For the six cooperative customers, OG&E requested an effective date of the earlier of (1) when the rates are approved or (2) when the cooperative's contract terminates.

Public System's Application for Rehearing

1. Public Systems maintain that the order is ambiguous as to whether all of the rates filed herein are subject to refund. Any ambiguity with respect to this

[1] Petitions or Applications for Rehearing of interlocutory orders do not lie; consequently, the Commission shall treat the applications for rehearing as motions for reconsideration.

[2] As OG&E's contracts with the other municipal customers expired, it filed new agreements which were assigned new docket numbers. The agreements have been filed in Docket Nos. ER77-215, ER77-306, ER77-336, and ER77-502. All of the aforementioned dockets have been consolidated with ER77-127 for purposes of a hearing and decision thereon.

issue has been resolved in addressing OG&E's petition.

2. Public Systems allege that the order fails to enforce Sections 35.3(a) and 35.13 (b)(4)(iii) of the Commission's Regulations by accepting certain of the rates for filing. Section 35.3(a) provides that rate schedules shall be tendered for filing not more than 90 days prior to the date on which the filing party proposes to make any change in rates. Public Systems state that for those customers with contracts expiring more than 90 days after the filing date, the filing should either be rejected or convened pursuant to Section 206. They maintain that if the Commission determines to suspend Section 35.3 (a), Section 35.13(b)(4)(iii) still demands that the customers receive the benefit of current data in this proceeding. It requires that the statement of the cost of service should contain unadjusted system costs for the most recent 12 consecutive months for which actual data are available provided that the last day of the 12 months shall not be more than 7 months prior to the submittal of proposed rate changes. Public Systems state that if the Commission waives this requirement it must convene this proceeding pursuant to Section 206.

Manchester and Tecumseh's contracts expired before April 1, 1977, and as a result, became effective thereafter, subject to refund. The suspension and refund provisions of Section 205(e) are applicable only to them in Docket No. ER77-127.

Public Systems' argument that the Commission cannot consider OG&E's filing as both a rate increase under Section 205 and a Section 206 investigation is untenable. There is nothing in the Federal Power Act nor the Commission's Regulations that precludes the Commission from consideration of all of OG&E's rates filed herein in the same proceeding. The rates applicable to Manchester and Tecumseh are effective subject to refund, and the rates applicable to the other municipal customers and the cooperatives can only become effective after a Section 206 finding of justness and reasonableness. Since the dominant issue of the reasonableness of OG&E's rates is common to all of the customers, it would be wasteful and redundant to order separate hearings. Consideration of OG&E's rates as they apply to Tecumseh and Manchester and the other wholesale customers in the same proceeding will conserve the time and the resources of the Commission as well as the resources of the parties.[3]

3. Public Systems allege that the Commission failed to enforce Section 35.14 of its Regulations by accepting for filing OG&E's fuel clause which it maintains is not in conformity with applicable regulations or recent Commission decisions. The question of whether or not OG&E is including inappropriate items in its fuel costs is a factual one which should be resolved in hearing.

4. Public Systems' request that the Commission as part of this proceeding, investigate OG&E's relationship with Mustang Fuel Corporation (Mustang), one of its fuel suppliers, to determine if:

(A) There is any relationship between management of OG&E and Mustang which would adversely affect "arms length bargaining"; and

(B) Are the present prices paid Mustang for fuel and transmission of fuel in excess of that which is reasonable.

OG&E has the burden of establishing that its fuel costs are reasonably incurred. Consequently, the issues raised by Public Systems are already appropriate areas of inquiry for hearing.

5. The Commission inadvertently failed to include the City of Perry, Oklahoma as an intervenor and party to this proceeding. In its transmittal letter accompanying the filing, dated January 19, 1977, Public Systems indicated that Perry had authorized them to include it among the municipal systems seeking to intervene in this proceeding. We will therefore grant Public Systems' request and accord Perry full status as a party in this proceeding.

The Commission finds: (1) Good cause exists to grant OG&E's motion for reconsideration.

(2) Good cause exists to permit the City of Perry, Oklahoma to participate as a party in this proceeding.

(3) Public Systems' motion for reconsideration in all other respects should be denied.

The Commission orders: (A) The hearing in this proceeding shall be conducted pursuant to both Sections 205 and 206 of the Federal Power Act. The suspension and refund provisions of Section 205(e) only apply to the Cities of Manchester and Tecumseh, Oklahoma in Docket No. ER77-127.

(B) The Commission's January 27, 1977 order in this docket misstated the proposed effective dates for a number of customers. The correct proposed effective dates are shown on page 4 of this order.

The City of Perry, Oklahoma is hereby permitted to intervene in this proceeding subject to the rules and regulations of the Commission, Provided, however, that participation of Perry shall be limited to matters affecting asserted rights to intervene and Provided, further, that the admission of Perry shall not be construed as recognition by the Commission that it might be aggrieved because of any order issued by the Commission in this proceeding.

(D) Other than the issue discussed in Ordering Paragraph (C), Public Systems' motion for reconsideration is hereby denied.

(E) The Secretary shall cause prompt publication of this order to be made in the FEDERAL REGISTER.

By the Commission.

SOUTH CAROLINA ELECTRIC & GAS CO.

Application for Change in Land Rights

SEPTEMBER 16, 1977.

Public notice is hereby given that an application was filed on June 20, 1977, under the Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. §§ 791a–825r, by the South Carolina Electric & Gas Co. (Applicant) (Correspondence to: Randolph R. Mahan, Esquire, South Carolina Electric & Gas Co., Post Office Box 764, Columbia, S.C. 29218; Brian J. McManus, Esquire, Reid & Priest, 1701 K Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20006) for commission approval of the conveyance to certain individuals of fee simple title in several parcels of land, comprising a total of 1.29 acres, within the project boundary of the Saluda Project, FPC No. 516. The project land is located approximately five miles southwest of U.S. Highway No. 76, near the town of Chapin, Lexington County, S.C.

Applicant states that, without its knowledge, a third party filled in certain project waters below the contour elevation of 360 feet m.s.l., the mean normal operating level of the Saluda Project. Applicant also states that, without its knowledge or permission, the third party subsequently divided the filled land into six lots and sold these lots to six different individuals, four of whom have erected private residences on the lots. In order to clear title and to eliminate the encroachment upon project lands, the Applicant proposes to sell the filled land (now project property) to the six aforementioned lot owners. The land would continue to be used for single-family residential purposes.

Any person desiring to be heard or to make any protest with reference to said application, should on or before October 31, 1977, file with the Federal Power Commission, 825 N. Capitol St. NE., Washington, D.C. 20426, a petition to intervene or a protest in accordance with the requirements of the Commission's rules of practice and procedure, 18 CFR § 1.8 or § 1.10 (1977). All protests filed with the Commission will be considered by it in determining the appropriate action to be taken, but will not serve to make the protestants parties to the proceeding. Any person wishing to participate as a party in any hearing therein must file a petition to intervene in accordance with the Commission's rules. The application is on file with the Commission and is available for public inspection.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1977.

Public notice is hereby given that an application was filed July 8, 1977, under the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. §§ 791a–825r) by Yadkin, Inc. (Applicant) (Correspondence to: Ronald D. Jones, Esquire, Lebouef, Lamb, Leiby & MacRae, 140 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10005) for Commission approval of the grant of an easement over certain lands of the Yadkin Project, FPC No. 2197, to the Plantation Pipe Line Co. (Grantee). The Yadkin Project is located on the Yadkin River in Stanly, Montgomery, Davie, Davidson, and Rowan Counties, N.C.

Applicant requests approval of the grant of a 50-foot-wide permanent easement to Grantee for the purpose of constructing a 26-inch pipeline across project lands and waters in Davidson and Rowan Counties, North Carolina. The segment of pipeline to cross project lands and waters is only a part of a pipeline that would extend from Bremen, Georgia to Greensboro, North Carolina. Once completed, the pipeline would transport refined liquid petroleum. The pipe would be buried in the bed of the Yadkin River with a minimum of five feet of earth cover throughout the 784-foot-long river crossing. There are currently two existing pipelines owned by Grantee located immediately adjacent to the proposed pipeline site.

Any person desiring to be heard or to make any protest with reference to said application should file with the Federal Power Commission, 825 N. Capitol St. NE., Washington, D.C. 20426, a petition to intervene or a protest in accordance with the requirements of the Commission's rules of practice and procedure, 18 CFR § 1.8 or §1.10. [AA1921-Inq.-7]

METHYL ALCOHOL FROM BRAZIL

Inquiry and Hearing

The United States International Trade Commission (Commission) received advice from the Department of the Treasury (Treasury) on September 13, 1977, that, during the course of determining whether to institute an investigation with respect to methyl alcohol from Brazil in accordance with section 201(c) of the Antidumping Act, 1921, as amended (19 U.S.C. 160(c)), Treasury had concluded from the information available to it that there is substantial doubt that an industry in the United States is being or is likely to be injured, or is prevented from being established, by reason of the importation of this merchandise into the United States. Therefore, the Commission on September 19, 1977, instituted inquiry AA1921-Inq.-7, under section 201(c)(2) of that act, to determine whether there is no reasonable indication that an industry in the United States is being or is likely to be injured, or is prevented from being established, by reason of the importation of such merchandise into the United States.

The Treasury advised the Commission as follows (confidential data deleted by the Commission):

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In accordance with section 201(c) of the Antidumping Act of 1921, as amended, an antidumping investigation is being initiated with respect to methyl alcohol from Brazil. Pursuant to section 201(c)(2) of the Act, you are hereby advised that the information developed during our preliminary investigation has led to the conclusion that there is substantial doubt that an industry in the United States is being, or is likely to be injured, or is prevented from being established, by reason of the importation of this merchandise into the United States.

Information available to Treasury indicates that there have been no imports of methyl alcohol from Brazil in at least two years. U.S. domestic production of methyl alcohol increased from 1975 to 1976 and petitioner's sales and production also increased over that period. Petitioner anticipates a — percent increase in both sales and production of methyl alcohol in 1977 compared to 1976. The likelihood of injury allegation is based upon a contract for delivery of a quantity of methyl alcohol representing approximately — percent of 1976 U.S. production and — percent of 1976 U.S. sales. No deliveries under the contract have occurred to date and if the 1977 production and sales increases anticipated by petitioner are experienced by the rest of the U.S. industry, the market share held by the impending imports would be even smaller. Treasury has concluded there is substantial doubt as to whether or not an industry is likely to be injured.

Based upon the data submitted by the petitioner, a margin of sales at less than fair value appears to be approximately — percent on the impending imports of the subject merchandise from Brazil.

For purpose of this investigation, the product involved is "methyl alcohol."

Some of the enclosed data is regarded by Treasury to be of a confidential nature. It is therefore requested that the U.S. International Trade Commission consider all the enclosed information to be for the official use of the U.S.I.T.C. only, and not to be disclosed to others without prior clearance from the Treasury Department.

Sincerely yours,
ROBERT H. MUNDHEIM

Hearing. A public hearing in connection with the inquiry will be held at 10:00 a.m. on Monday, October 3, 1977, in Concourse D of the Whitehall Hotel, Cullen Center, 1700 Smith Street (between Pease and Jefferson) Houston, Tex. 77002. All parties will be given an opportunity to be present, to produce evidence, and to be heard at such hearing. Requests to appear at the public hearing should be received in writing in the office of the Secretary to the Commission not later than noon Wednesday, September 28, 1977.

Written statements. Interested parties may submit statements in writing in lieu of, and in addition to, appearance at the public hearing. A signed original and nineteen true copies of such statements should be submitted. To be assured of their being given due consideration by the Commission, such statements should be received no later than Thursday, September 29, 1977.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Office of the Attorney General

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE AND ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY

Civil Litigation

Whereas, the Department of Justice conducts the civil litigation of the Environmental Protection Agency;

Whereas, the conduct of that litigation requires a close and cooperative relationship between the attorneys of the Department of Justice and of the Environmental Protection Agency;

Whereas, the achievement of a close and cooperative relationship requires a clarification of the respective roles of the attorneys of the Department of Justice and of the Environmental Protection Agency;

Whereas, the Attorney General may decline to represent the Agency in particular civil actions, in which case the Agency may be represented by its own attorneys; and

Whereas, most challenges to and enforcement of regulatory standards and procedures adopted by the Environmental Protection Agency involve scientific, technical, and policy issues and determinations developed in lengthy rulemaking proceedings in which the Agency's attorneys have been involved and can provide the necessary expertise.

Now, therefore, the following memorandum of understanding is entered into between the Attorney General of the United States and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency for the purpose of promoting the efficient and effective handling of civil litigation involving the Environmental Protection Agency:

1. The Attorney General of the United States (hereinafter referred to as the "Attorney General") shall have control over all cases to which the Environmental Protection Agency (hereinafter referred to as the "Agency") or the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (hereinafter referred to as the "Administrator") is a party.

2. When requested by the Administrator, the Attorney General shall permit attorneys employed by the Agency (hereinafter referred to as "Agency participating attorneys") to participate in cases involving direct review in the Courts of Appeal and shall also permit such attorneys to participate in other civil cases to which either the Agency or the Administrator are a party; Provided, however, That:

(a) The Administrator or his delegate shall designate a specific Agency participating attorney for each case and shall communicate the name of such attorney in writing to the Attorney General;

(b) Such Agency participating attorney shall be subject to the supervision and control of the Attorney General; and

(c) If required by the Attorney General, an Agency participating attorney shall be appointed as a Special Attorney or Special Assistant United States Attorney and take the required oath prior to conducting or participating in any kind of Court proceedings.

3. Agency attorneys shall not file any pleadings or other documents in a court proceeding without the prior approval of the Attorney General.

4. It is understood that participation by Agency attorneys under this memorandum includes appearances in Court, participation in trials and oral arguments, participation in the preparation of briefs, memoranda and pleadings, participation in discussions with opposing counsel, including settlement negotiations, and all other aspects of case preparation normally associated with the responsibilities of an attorney in the conduct of litigation; Provided, however, That the Attorney General shall retain control over the conduct of all litigation. Such control shall include the right to allocate tasks between attorneys employed by the Department of Justice and Agency participating attorneys. In allocating tasks between the Department's and the Agency's attorneys, the Attorney General shall give due consideration to the substantive knowledge of the respective attorneys of the matter at issue so that the Government's resources are utilized to the best advantage.

5. In the event of any disagreement between attorneys of the Department of Justice and of the Agency concerning the conduct of any case, the Administrator may obtain a review of the matter in question by the Attorney General. The Attorney General shall give full consideration to the views and requests of the Agency and shall make every effort to eliminate disagreements on a mutually satisfactory basis. In carrying out such reviews, the Attorney General shall consult with the Administrator. In implementing this provision, it is understood that the Attorney General will not be expected by the Administrator to interfere with the direction of any trial in progress.

6. The settlement of any case in which the Department of Justice represents the Agency or the Administrator shall require consultation with and concurrence of both the Administrator and the Attorney General.

7. The Administrator and the Attorney General shall make an annual review of both the Department's and the Agency's personnel requirements for Agency litigation. The Attorney General and the Administrator will cooperate in making such appropriation requests as are required to maintain their respective staffs at a level adequate to the needs of the Agency's litigation.

8. The Attorney General shall establish specific deadlines, not longer than 60 days, within which the Department's Attorneys must either file complaints in Agency cases or report to the Attorney General why any such complaint has not been filed. In the event any Department Attorney does not file a complaint, he shall thereafter submit further periodic reports to the Attorney General until the complaint is filed or a decision is reached that it shall not be filed. Copies of the reports required by this section shall be provided to the Agency if requested.

9. If the Attorney General fails to file a complaint within 120 days of the referral of a request for litigation and a litigation report by the Agency to the Attorney General, then the Administrator may request the Attorney General to file a complaint within 30 days. Failure of the Attorney General to thereafter file a complaint within the said 30 days may be considered by the Administrator or his delegate to be a failure of the Attorney General to notify the Administrator within a reasonable time that he will appear in litigation for purposes of section 305 of the Clean Air Act, 42 U.S.C. 1857h–3, section 506 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, 33 U.S.C. 1366, or section 1450 of the Safe Drinking Water Act, 42 U.S.C. 300j–9; Provided, however, That the failure of the Attorney General to file a complaint within the time period requested by the Administrator in a case in which the Administrator requested immediate action under sections 311(e) and 504 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, 33 U.S.C. 1321, 1364; section 303 of the Clean Air Act, 42 U.S.C. 1857h–1; or section 1431 of the Safe Drinking Water Act, 42 U.S.C. 300i; to protect public health may also be considered by the Administrator to be a failure of the Attorney General to so notify the Administrator under section 305 of the Clean Air Act, section 506 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act or section 1450 of the Safe Drinking Water Act.

10. All requests of the Agency for litigation shall be submitted by the Agency through its General Counsel or its Assistant Administrator for Enforcement to the Assistant Attorney General for the Land and Natural Resources Division or for the Civil Division, except matters requiring an immediate temporary restraining order may be submitted by regional Administrators of the Agency simultaneously to a United States Attorney and the appropriate Assistant Attorney General. All requests for litigation shall be accompanied by a standard litigation report which shall contain such information as shall be determined from time-to-time by the Attorney General to be necessary in order to prosecute Agency litigation. Similar reports shall also be provided for suits in which the Agency or the Administrator is a defendant, as requested by the Attorney General.

11. The Agency shall make the relevant file of any matter that is the subject of litigation available to attorneys for the Department of Justice at a convenient location when a request for litigation is submitted or when the Department is required to defend the Agency or the Administrator.

12. The Administrator shall undertake to review the Agency's procedures for the preparation of the record in cases involving direct review in the Courts of Appeal, including analyses of such matters as assembly, indexing, pagination, timing of preparation, and the allocation of tasks between the Agency and the Department. The Administrator shall consult with the Attorney General on the reexamination of these procedures.

13. The negotiation of any agreement to be filed in court shall require the authorization and concurrence of the Attorney General.

14. In conducting litigation for the Administrator, the Attorney General shall defer to the Administrator's interpretation of scientific and technical matters.

15. Nothing in this agreement shall affect any authority of the Solicitor General to authorize or decline to authorize appeals by the Government from any district court to any appellate court or petitions to such courts for the issuance of extraordinary writs, such as the authority conferred by 28 CFR 0.20, or to carry out his traditional functions with regard to appeals to or petitions for review by the Supreme Court.

16. In order to effectively implement the terms of this Memorandum, the Attorney General and the Administrator will transmit copies of this Memorandum to all personnel affected by its provisions. This Memorandum shall not preclude the Department and the Agency from entering into mutually satisfactory arrangements concerning the handling of a particular case.

17. This Agreement shall apply to all cases filed on or after the date of approval of this Agreement by the Attorney General and the Administrator.

18. The Attorney General and the Administrator may delegate their respective functions and responsibilities under this Agreement.

19. The Department and the Agency shall adjust the conduct of cases arising before the effective date of this Agreement in a manner consistent with the spirit of this Agreement.

[Docket RM 77-9]

APPLICATIONS FOR REGISTRATION OF CLAIM TO COPYRIGHT UNDER REVISED COPYRIGHT ACT

Inquiry

AGENCY: Library of Congress, Copyright Office.

ACTION: Inquiry.

SUMMARY: The purpose of this notice is to inform the public of certain issues the Copyright Office is considering in connection with the creation of forms to be used by the public in applying for copyright registration after December 31, 1977. The forms are required to be prescribed by the Register of Copyrights under section 409 of the Act for General Revision of the Copyright Law. The issues under consideration concern the parties entitled to apply for copyright registration under various circumstances, together with certain elements to be incorporated in the forms and their accompanying instructions.

DATES: Comments must be received on or before October 11, 1977 to be assured of consideration. Because of constraints imposed by printing requirements in connection with the new application forms, extensions will not be possible.

ADDRESSES: Five copies of all comments should be submitted, if by mail, to: Office of the General Counsel, Copyright Office, Library of Congress, Caller No. 2999, Arlington, Virginia 22202; or, if by hand, to: Office of the General Counsel, Copyright Office, Room 519, Crystal Mall, Building No. 2, 1911 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, Va.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Sections 408(a) and 409 of Pub. L. 94–553 (90 Stat. 2541) together provide that "at any time during the subsistence of copyright in any published or unpublished work, the owner of copyright or of any exclusive right in the work may obtain registration of the copyright claim" by submitting an appropriate deposit of the work, fee, and application in form prescribed by the Register of Copyrights. Section 408(d) provides that the Register "may also establish, by regulation, formal procedures for the filing of an application for supplementary registration, to correct an error in a copyright registration, or to amplify the information given in a registration."

The purpose of this notice is to offer the public the opportunity to comment on certain matters the Office is considering in connection with the content of application forms for basic and supplementary copyright registration. Although the matters in question are essentially of an interpretative and policy nature, we believe it appropirate to offer them for public comment. These matters pertain to the impact of the doctrine of "divisibility" of copyright on applications for registration.

The divisibility doctrine is reflected throughout the new Act, but is essentially set forth in: (i) section 101, which defines a "copyright owner", with respect to any one of the exclusive rights comprised in a copyright, as "the owner of that particular right"; and (ii) section 201(d)(2), which states that "any of the exclusive rights comprised in a copyright, including any subdivision of the rights [of reproduction, adaptation, distribution, performance, and display] specified by section 106, may be transferred * * * and owned separately." The specific issues which are under consideration, and which will be reflected in the application forms for basic and supplementary registration, may be summarized as: (1) Who is entitled to apply for registration? (2) how many registrations may be made for a particular work?

For the purpose of this discussion, a "basic registration" means a registration made on application under section 408(a) with appropriate deposit and fee; a "supplementary registration" means a registration made on application under section 408(d), to correct or amplify the information in a basic registration.

1. Who is entitled to apply for a basic registration where there has been no earlier basic registration for the work?

Under section 408(a), it is clear that the owner of the copyright, or of any exclusive right in a work, is entitled to apply for a basic registration where no earlier basic registration has been made for the work. We are considering whether, after an author has transferred "all rights" in a work, that author may seek a basic registration.

Where an author retains a royalty interest in the exploitation of his or her work by a transferee of the rights, the author remains a beneficial owner of the copyright[1] and, we believe, should be entitled to make a basic registration for the work. Even where the author has not retained a continuing financial interest in the exploitation of the work, it appears questionable whether that author should be considered any less a copyright owner for the purpose of registration, or be otherwise deprived of the right to secure a basic registration for the work he or she has created. For example, under section 201(a) of the Act the author is the initial owner of all rights comprised in the copyright, and may be considered to retain an ownership interest sufficient for registration purposes by reason of a limited term or grant, or contractual or statutory termination privileges.

2. How many basic registrations may be made for a particular work?

Section 408(a) provides that the owner of copyright or of any exclusive right may obtain a basic registration at any time during the subsistence of copyright. We do not believe this to imply that multiple basic registrations for the same work ar generally permitted under the Act. Similarly, we do not believe that those sections of the Act which make certain benefits conditional upon registration should be considered to impose upon the public the obligation, and cost, of multiple registrations for the same work in order to secure those benefits.

That there is a "general rule against allowing more than one registration (i.e., basic registration) for the same work" is clear from the legislative history of the Act. H.R. Rep. No. 94-1476, 94th Cong., 2d sess., Sept. 3, 1976, at 155; S. Rep. No. 94-473, 94th Cong., 1st sess., Nov. 20, 1975, at 138. Section 408(e) of the Act, which expressly permits an additional basic registration to be made for the published edition of a work registered in unpublished form, is a statutory recognition of this general rule, and would be meaningless otherwise. Although section 408(a) refers to registration "of the copyright claim," we do not believe that this indicates a basic registration to be personal to, or limited to the rights owned by, the applicant. Registration is made for the work, and the reference to "claim" is clearly intended in its historical copyright context, that is, to indicate an assertion of copyright in the work by the applicant as distinct from a governmental grant of rights.

[1] See H.R. Rep. No. 94-1476, 94th Cong., 2d Sess., Sept. 3, 1976, at 159; S. Rep. No. 94-473, 94th Cong., 1st sess., Nov. 20, 1975, at 141.

In view of the above, we plan to adopt the general position that the Copyright Office will not knowingly make more than one basic registration for the same work. The form to be prescribed for applications for basic registration will be designed to elicit information on earlier registrations and, unless it falls within one of the qualifications or exceptions discussed below, an application for a second basic registration will be refused. (As the registration system is intended to make a public record of copyright in a work, and not to resolve conflicting claims to the ownership of copyright, we will not establish priorities of applicants either between authors and other copyright owners, or among copyright owners other than authors.)

As a result of the positions just discussed, it will be possible under the new Act for the owner of only one or part of the exclusive rights in a work to make the basic registration for that work, without identifying other owners and their rights. (The author of the work will be identified.) As indicated earlier, we believe that a basic registration made by any one owner is sufficient to secure the statutory benefits of registration to the author of the work and all other owners of rights in the work.[2] However, where the basic registration for a work has been made by the author or the owner of one or more exclusive rights, and the owner or owners of other exclusive rights wishes those rights to be made a matter of public record, the Office does plan to permit a supplementary registration under section 408(d), "to amplify" the information given in the basic registration for the work.[3] At the same time it must be understood that a supplementary registration made to place the ownership of additional specified rights on public record will not serve as a substitute for recordation of the instrument under which that owner has acquired the rights.

Section 205(d) of the Act provides that "[n]o person claiming by virtue of a transfer to be the owner of copyright or of any exclusive right under a copyright is entitled to institute an infringement action under this title until the instrument of transfer under which such person claims has been recorded in the Copyright Office. * * *" The mere making of a supplementary registration to reflect acquired rights in a work would not meet the condition of this section. Similarly, a supplementary registration of additional rights will not be considered a recordation of the transfer of those rights so as to give constructive notice of the facts of the transfer under section 205(c) of the Act, or to assure priority over a conflicting transfer or license under section 205 (e) or (f). In each of these cases recordation of a document evidencing the transfer rather than a supplementary registration pertaining to rights acquired in the work would be necessary.

Where a basic registration has been made by the owner of an exclusive right in a work, other than the author, the Office also plans to permit the author to make a supplementary registration for the work. The author may, for example, wish our records to reflect his or her retained or continued legal or beneficial ownership of certain rights. The recordation of a document of transfer is an inappropriate, burdensome and in many cases an unclear way to reflect retained rights, and supplementary registration may be the most practical method of accomplishing this purpose. At the same time, we do not believe there is any obligation on an author to make such a registration.

3. Exceptions and qualifications to the general rule against more than one basic registration for a work.

Although the application forms for basic and supplementary registration are planned to reflect the general rule against multiple basic registrations for a work, certain exceptions and qualifications must also be accommodated.

(a) Where the work for which a second (or other) basic registration is sought contains sufficient new copyrightable matter to constitute a compilation or derivative work, and the application clearly relates to that new matter, an additional basic registration can be made.

(b) Section 408(e) of the Act expressly permits an additional basic registration to be made where an earlier basic registration pertains to the work in unpublished form, and the second basic registration is sought for the first published edition of that work.

(c) A supplementary registration presupposes the validity of the basic registration it is designed to amplify. Where an applicant for a second basic registration for a particular work asserts that an earlier basic registration for the work was unauthorized and legally invalid, we do plan to permit the additional basic registration. Since we will not adjudicate or resolve such assertions or conflicts, it would not be appropriate either to cancel the first basic registration or to relegate the second applicant to a supplementary registration.

(d) We are giving serious consideration to permitting a second basic registration for a work in one other situation. Where someone other than the author is identified as the copyright owner in the earlier basic registration, and the author is now seeking a basic registration in his or her own name as copyright owner, there may be grounds for permitting the author to do so. Recordation of transfers of copyright ownership are essentially directed at the transferee, not at the author from whom all rights derive; as indicated earlier they are a cumbersome, impractical, and inappropriate way of making a public record of an author's retained rights in a work. Also, as noted earlier, it may be asserted that for purposes of registration an author always retains some legal or equitable interest in the ownership of copyright in a work by reason of, for example, a royalty interest in its exploitation, an express limitation on the scope or term of grant, or a contractual or statutory possibility of termination of a transfer.

[3] This is discussed more fully in paragraph 4, below.

[2] Supplementary registrations will also be available to authors and other copyright owners to correct errors in a basic registration and to amplify, explain or reflect changes in other information given in a basic registration. Supplementary registration made for these purposes may pertain to a basic registration made by another author or copyright owner in the same work.

Although we plan to make supplementary registrations available to authors who wish to make a public record of their interest, supplementary registrations are ancillary to the principal public record of copyright. We therefore recognize that to prohibit an author from securing a basic registration in his or her own name as copyright owner where an earlier basic registration has been made for the work may conflict with the fundamental thrust of the new Act in identifying copyright, and the origin of all rights comprised in a copyright, with the author. We are equally concerned, however, that to acknowledge an exception for authors may work to their disadvantage.

As indicated earlier, and discussed more fully below, we believe that a valid basic registration by one owner (or author) will secure the statutory benefits of registration to all authors and other owners of rights in the work. Accordingly, we do not believe that a refusal of a second basic registration will injure the second applicant (whether author or other copyright owner) in enforcing his or her rights; indeed, our refusal to make multiple basic registrations for the same work is intended, in part, to avoid any implication that all authors and owners must register their claims in order to enforce their rights. We are concerned that permitting an author to make a basic registration for a work, after an earlier basic registration has been made, may lead to legal or judicial implication that authors must bear the expense of registration in order to enforce their rights.

In considering the possibility of exception for authors to the general rule of "one basic registration per work", we are also considering whether the exception should be applied in cases where (i) the earlier basic registration was made by one co-author of the work, and the second application is made by another co-author; and (ii) the work is one made for hire.

4. Effect of a single basic registration.

Several sections of the new Copyright Act provide inducements to copyright "registration." The purpose of copyright registration is to make a public record of claimed copyright protection in the work for which it is made, not to reflect the division of copyright in that work among different owners. The benefits accorded to registration are to encourage that record. Although "any of the exclusive rights comprised in a copyright may be transferred * * * and owned separately" (§ 201(d)(2)), transfers of rights are to be reflected by recordation of the underlying document. Accordingly, we believe that the statutory benefits of registration are effective upon one basic registration being made for the work; they are not personal to the owner of the rights who has secured the registration, nor limited to the preservation or enforcement of those rights. Similarly, a supplementary registration is not required in order to assure these benefits to the author or owners of other rights. (However, as indicated above, an application for supplemental registration made to place the owner of other rights on public record will not be refused.)

Specifically:[4]

(a) Under section 205(c)(2) of the Act, the recordation of a document in the Copyright Office will give constructive notice of the facts stated, provided that registration has been made for the work. One basic registration will suffice for this purpose, and that basic registration need not be in the name of a party to the document. Since this section pertains to the effect of recording a document which itself evidences a transfer of rights, there is no reason to require that the registration be in the name of such a party.

(b) Section 405(a)(2) of the Act provides that the omission of a copyright notice from publicly distributed copies or phonorecords does not invalidate the copyright in a work, if among other conditions, registration for the work has been made or is made within five years after the publication without notice. The purpose of registration in this case is clearly to protect the public by evidencing a claim to copyright protection; the identity of the owner of particular rights is immaterial to this purpose. Accordingly a single basic registration made by any author or copyright owner will satisfy this condition, and the basic registration need not be in the name of the owner of the exclusive right to exploit the work in the particular form of copies or phonorecords from which the notice was omitted.

(c) Under section 411(a) of the Act, "registration of the copyright claim" must be made before an action for infringement is instituted. A basic registration made by any author or copyright owner will be sufficient to allow an action to be brought by any author or other copyright owner of the work, provided that the plaintiff has recorded an appropriate document under section 205(d). There is no reason to believe that Congress intended to require both recordation and registration of particular rights as a condition of suit.

(d) Section 412 of the Act prohibits a judicial award of statutory damages or attorney's fees in certain cases where an infringement is committed before registration of a work. A timely registration made by any author or copyright owner will preserve the possibility of such remedies for any other author or copyright owner of the work. The section is clearly intended as an inducement to make a public record of protection and, as recordation of a transfer is required before a suit under section 205(d), no purpose would be served by requiring the registration to be made in the name of the plaintiff for these purposes. Additionally, such a requirement would render the specific 3-month provision of section 412(2) meaningless, or prevent the award of statutory damages and attorney's fees to any owner of rights first exploiting the work more than three months after its first publication.

There are sections of the new statute that pertain to a record of particular authors or other owners of rights in a work for purposes other than constructive notice or judicial enforcement of rights under a recorded document. In these cases, the recordation records, special records of identity, or, where appropriate, supplementary registration may be utilized and there is no requirement that a basic registration be obtained in the name of the author or owner for these purposes. These provisions include: (i) identification of the owner of the right to receive royalties under the compulsory license for phonorecords (§ 115(c)(1)); (ii) identification of one or more of the authors of an anonymous or pseudonymous work (§ 302(c)); (iii) identification of the copyright owner where an error has been made in the copyright notice (§ 406(a)); and (iv) the identification of persons having an interest in the copyright for purposes of notice of suit (§ 501(b)). Similarly, the Office does not plan to require that persons requesting an import statement under section 601(b)(2) of the Act be, or be designated by, the person identified as copyright owner in a basic registration for the work.[5]

Under section 410(c) of the Act, a "certificate of a registration made before or within five years after the first publication of the work shall constitute prima facie evidence of the validity of the copyright and of the facts stated in the certificate." The language and history of the Act indicate that certificates of both basic and supplementary registration may be given such effect. See Supplementary Report of the Register of Copyrights on the General Revision of the U.S. Copyright Law: 1965 Revision Bill, May 1965 at 123.

Under section 408(b) of the Act, certain applications for basic registration

[4] The following is by way of explanation of certain actions to be taken by the Copyright Office, and will not necessarily be reflected in regulations.

[5] Under exceptional circumstances, a second basic registration for a work may become necessary under section 601(d)(3). In such cases, the Copyright Office will consider a request for a second basic registration made at the appropriate time.

are to be accompanied by copies or phonorecords of "the best edition" of the work. The "best edition" is defined in section 101 as "the edition, published in the United States at any time before the date of deposit, that the Library of Congress determines to be most suitable for its purposes." Accordingly, the required deposit * in these cases will be determined by Library of Congress acquisition policy and will not necessarily be the form in which the applicant for a basic registration has exploited his or her rights. For example, if a hardcover edition of a work is considered to be the "best edition," an applicant for basic registration who claims copyright ownership by reason of exclusive paperback rights in a work will be entitled to a basic registration if no earlier basic registration has been made for the work. However, the paperback publisher will be required to deposit copies of the hardcover edition of that work if such an edition has been published in the United States, since that would be considered the "best edition."

NATIONAL COMMISSION FOR MANPOWER POLICY

MEETING

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (Pub. L. 92-463; 86 Stat. 770) notice is hereby given that the National Commission for Manpower Policy will conduct a field review on the net employment effects of the public service employment (PSE) program on November 3 and November 4, 1977. The meeting will be held in the South Ballroom of the Stouffer's Denver Inn located at 3203 Quebec Street, Denver, Colorado. The reviews will commence at 9:00 a.m. and conclude at 4:00 p.m. on both days.

The National Commission for Manpower Policy was established pursuant to Title V of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973 (Pub. L. 92-203). The Act charges the Commission with the broad responsibility of advising the Congress, the President, the Secretary of Labor, and other Federal agency heads on national manpower issues. The Commission is specifically charged with reporting annually to the President and the Congress on its findings and recommendations with respect to the Nation's manpower policies and programs. The Emergency Jobs Programs Extension Act of 1976 directs the Commission to study and report to Congress on the net employment effects of PSE programs under Title II and Title VI of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

The purpose of the review is to elicit the views of those at the state and local level (in and out of government) on the effects and effectiveness of the public service employment program. Among the issues to be addressed are:

1. What goals and objectives are developed by state and local governments for the PSE programs? How are these goals developed so that they are supportive of national goals; provide needed public services; and are supportive of other services?

2. To what extent has PSE resulted in an increase in the provision of services by state or local governments? Has PSE been instrumental in maintaining the level of services where they would have otherwise been curtailed due to revenue reductions, increased costs or other factors? What types of services are being provided through the PSE programs? What types of agencies (e.g., public safety, sanitation, education) received PSE jobs? If the PSE program were reduced or phased out, to what extent would these services also be reduced or terminated?

3. To what extent has PSE resulted in an increase in the services provided by nonprofit community organizations? How has this changed as a result of the requirements of the Emergency Jobs Programs Extension Act of 1976? What types of services are being provided by community organizations with the employment provided by PSE?

4. What is the ability of state and local governments to absorb additional PSE jobs? To what extent can this be expanded by increased utilization of nonprofit community organizations? What has been the experience in implementing and increasing the PSE programs to date? What are the constraints to further increasing the size of the program?

5. What effect has the presence of the PSE program had on the personnel practices of state and local governments? Have changes been made to provide PSE employees with improved access to regular (i.e., non-PSE) jobs? Has the PSE program resulted in any changes in the composition of the regular employment of the employing jurisdiction in terms of race, sex, education, experience, or other characteristics? Can PSE be used as a means of training the hard-to-employ and then obtaining access for them to permanent, unsubsidized employment?

6. What should be the areas of concern in consideration of phasing out or phasing down the current PSE programs? What areas should be considered if the target populations or mode of operation of the current programs are to be modified? To what extent and how do changes in the scale, mode of operation, target population and/or continuity of the program effect the delivery of needed public services?

Members of the general public or other interested individuals may attend the Commission field reviews. Members of the public desiring to submit written statements to the Commission that are germane to the agenda may do so, provided such statements are in reproducible form and are submitted to the Director no later than two days before and seven days after the meeting.

Additionally, members of the general public may request to make oral statements to the Commission to the extent that the time available for the meeting permits. Such oral statements must be directly germane to the announced agenda items and written application must be submitted to the Director of the Commission three days before the meeting. This application shall identify the following: the name and address of the applicant, the subject of his or her presentation and its relationship to the agenda; the amount of time requested; the individual's qualifications to speak on the subject matter; and shall include a justifying statement as to why a written presentation would not suffice members or other participants unless these questions have been specifically approved by the Chairman.

Minutes of the meeting, working papers and other documents prepared for the meeting will be available for public inspection five working days after the field review at the Commission's headquarters located at 1522 K Street, NW., Room 300, Washington, D.C.

Signed at Washington, D.C., this 15th day of September 1977.

NUCLEAR REGULATORY COMMISSION

BALTIMORE GAS AND ELECTRIC CO.

Issuance of Amendment to Facility Operating License and Negative Declaration

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (the Commission) has issued Amendment No. 24 to Facility Operating License No. DPR-53, issued to Baltimore Gas and Electric Company (the licensee), which revised the license and its appended Technical Specifications for operation of the Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant Unit No. 1 (the facility) located in Calvert County, Maryland. The amendment is effective as of the date of its issuance.

The amendment authorized the licensee to operate the facility at a power level of 2700 MWt which is an increase from the previously authorized level of 2560 MWt.

The application for the amendment complies with the standards and requirements of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (the Act), and the Commission's rules and regulations. The Commission has made appropriate findings as required by the Act and the Commission's rules and regulations in 10 CFR Chapter I, which are set forth in the license amendment. Notice of Proposed Issuance of the Amendment to Facility Operating License in connection with this action was published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on June 23, 1977 (42 FR 31844). No request for a hearing or petition for leave to intervene was filed following notice of the proposed action.

The Commission has prepared an environmental impact appraisal for the authorized power increase and has concluded that an environmental impact statement for this particular action is not warranted because there will be no environmental impact attributable to the action significantly greater than that which has already been predicted and described in the Commission's Final Environmental Statement for the facility dated April 1973, and the action will not significantly affect the quality of the human environment.

For further details with respect to this action, see (1) the application for amendment dated March 24, 1977, and supplements dated June 10 and 3, and August 8, 1977, and earlier filings by the licensee dated October 1, 1976 and November 5 and 30, 1976, (2) Amendment No. 24 to License No. DPR-53, (3) the Commission's related Safety Evaluation and (4) the Commission's Environmental Impact Appraisal. All of these items are available for public inspection at the Commission's Public Document Room, 1717 H Street, NW., Washington, D.C. and at the Calvert County Library, Prince Frederick, Maryland 20678. A single copy of items (2), (3) and (4) may be obtained upon request addressed to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Washington, D.C. 20555, Attention: Director, Division of Operating Reactors.

Dated at Bethesda, Maryland, this 9th day of September, 1977.

DUKE POWER CO.

Issuance of Amendments To Facility Operating Licenses

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (the Commission) has issued Amendment Nos. 46, 46 and 43 to Facility Operating License Nos. DPR-38, DPR-47 and DPR-55, respectively, issued to Duke Power Company which revised the Technical Specifications for operation of the Oconee Nuclear Station, Unit Nos. 1, 2 and 3, located in Oconee County, South Carolina. The amendments are effective within 10 days after the date of issuance.

These amendments provide for the operation of Oconee Unit 3 Cycle 2 with the cycle length extended from 265 effective full power days (EFPD) to 282 EFPDs.

The application for the amendments complies with the standards and requirements of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (the Act), and the Commission's rules and regulations. The Commission has made appropriate findings as required by the Act and the Commission's rules and regulations in 10 CFR Chapter I, which are set forth in the license amendments. Prior public notice of these amendments was not required since the amendments do not involve a significant hazards consideration.

The Commission has determined that the issuance of these amendments will not result in any significant environmental impact and that pursuant to 10 CFR § 51.5(d)(4) an environmental impact statement or negative declaration and environmental impact appraisal need not be prepared in connection with the issuance of these amendments.

For further details with respect to this action, see (1) the application for amendments dated July 5, 1977, (2) Amendment Nos. 46, 46 and 43 to License Nos. The amendment is effective as of its date of issuance.

The amendment permits elimination of claim sampling from the Radiation Environmental Monitoring Program.

The application for the amendment complies with the standards and requirements of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (the Act), and the Commission's rules and regulations. The Commission has made appropriate findings as required by the Act and the Commission's rules and regulations in 10 CFR Chapter I, which are set forth in the license amendment. Prior public notice of this amendment is not required since the amendment does not involve a significant hazards consideration.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Issuance of Amendments To Facility Operating Licenses

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (the Commission) has issued Amendment Nos. 33 and 30 to Facility Operating License Nos. DPR-33 and DPR-52 issued to Tennessee Valley Authority (the licensee), which revised Technical Specifications for operation of the Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant, Unit Nos. 1 and 2 (the facility), located in Limestone County, Alabama. The amendments are effective as of the date of issuance.

The amendments change the Technical Specifications to clarify that the reactor protection system instrument channels must be operable only when there is fuel in the reactor. In addition, the changes remove the requirement for a minimum countrate on the Source Range Monitors when all the fuel is being removed from the reactor provided that all control rods are fully inserted and rendered electrically inoperable.

The application for the amendments complies with the standards and requirements of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (the Act), and the Commission's rules and regulations. The Commission has made appropriate findings as required by the Act and the Commission's rules and regulations in 10 CFR Chapter I, which are set forth in the license amendments. Prior public notice of these amendments was not required since the amendments do not involve a significant hazards consideration.

The Commission has determined that the issuance of these amendments will not result in any significant environmental impact and that pursuant to 10 CFR § 51.5(d)(4) an environmental impact statment or negative declaration and environmental impact appraisal need not be prepared in connection with issuance of these amendments.

For further details with respect to this action, see (1) the application for amendments dated August 10, 1977, (2) Amendment Nos. 33 and 30 to License Nos. ## ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON REACTOR SAFEGUARDS, WORKING GROUP NO. 3 OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON REACTOR SAFETY RESEARCH

Meeting

In accordance with the purposes of sections 29 and 182b. of the Atomic Energy Act (42 U.S.C. 2039, 2232b.), Working Group No. 3 of the ACRS Subcommitte on Reactor Safety Research will hold an open meeting on October 13, 1977, in Room 1162, 1717 H Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20555. The purpose of this meeting is to review matters pertaining to the scope of the site safety research and reactor safety improvements currently being performed and planned by the NRC.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1977

8:30 A.M. UNTIL CONCLUSION OF BUSINESS

The Working Group may meet in Executive Session, with any of its consultants who may be present, to explore their preliminary opinions regarding matters which should be considered in order to formulate a report and recommendations to the full Committee.

At the conclusion of the Executive Session, the Working Group will meet to hear presentations by representatives of the NRC Staff, Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), industry, and their consultants, and will hold discussions with these groups pertinent to this review.

At the conclusion of this session, the Working Group may caucus to determine whether the matters identified in the initial session have been adequately covered.

Practical considerations may dictate alterations in the above agenda or schedule. The Chairman of the Working Group is empowered to conduct the meeting in a manner that, in his judgment, will facilitate the orderly conduct of business, including provisions to carry over an incompleted session from one day to the next.

The Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards is an independent group established by Congress to review and report on each application for a construction permit and on each application for an operating license for a reactor facility and on certain other nuclear safety matters. The Committee's reports become a part of the public record. Although ACRS meetings are ordinarily open to the public and provide for oral or written statements to be considered as a part of the Committee's information gathering procedure concerning the health and safety of the public, they are not adjudicatory type hearings such as are conducted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Atomic Safety &

Licensing Board as part of the Commission's licensing process. ACRS meetings do not normally treat matters pertaining to environmental impacts outside the radiological safety area.

With respect to public participation in the meeting, the following requirements shall apply:

(a) Persons wishing to submit written statements regarding the agenda may do so by providing a readily reproducible copy to the Working Group at the beginning of the meeting. Comments should be limited to safety related areas within the Committee's purview.

Persons desiring to mail written comments may do so by sending a readily reproducible copy addressed to Dr. Richard P. Savio, ACRS, NRC, Washington, D.C. 20555. Comments postmarked no later than October 6, 1977, will normally be received in time to be considered at this meeting.

(b) Persons desiring to make an oral statement at the meeting should make a request to do so prior to the beginning of the meeting, identifying the topics and desired presentation time so that appropriate arrangements can be made. The Working Group will receive oral statements on topics relevant to its purview at an appropriate time chosen by the Chairman.

(c) Further information regarding topics to be discussed, whether the meeting has been cancelled or rescheduled, the Chairman's ruling on requests for the opportunity to present oral statements and the time allotted therefor can be obtained by a prepaid telephone call on October 12, 1977, to the Office of the Executive Director of the Committee, telephone 202-634-1394, Attn.: Dr. Richard P. Savio, between 8:15 a.m. and 5 p.m. e.d.t.

(d) Questions may be asked only by members of the Working Group, its consultants, and the Staff.

(e) The use of still, motion picture, and television cameras, the physical installation and presence of which will not interfere with the conduct of the meeting, will be permitted both before and after the meeting and during any recess. The use of such equipment will be allowed while the meeting is in session at the discretion of the Chairman to a degree that is not disruptive to the meeting. When use of such equipment is permitted, appropriate measures will be taken to protect proprietary or privileged information which may be in documents, folders, etc., being used during the meeting. Recordings will be permitted only during those sessions of the meeting when a transcript is being kept.

(f) A copy of the transcript of the meeting where factual information is presented and a copy of the minutes of the meeting will be available for inspection on or after October 20, 1977, and January 13, 1978, respectively, at the NRC Public Document Room, 1717 H Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20555.

Copies may be obtained upon payment of appropriate charges.

Dated: September 22, 1977.

CAROLINA POWER & LIGHT CO.

Proposed Issuance of Amendment to Facility Operating License

The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (the Commission) is considering issuance of amendment to Facility Operating License No. DPR-61, issued to Carolina Power & Light Co. (the licensee), for operation of the Brunswick Steam Electric Plant, Unit No. 2 (the facility) located in Brunswick County, N.C.

The amendment would authorize operation of the facility in Cycle 2 after refueling in which about 25 percent of the fuel assemblies would be replaced with new fuel having a 8 X 8 array of fuel rods. The balance of the core would consist of fuel assemblies having a 7 X 7 array of fuel rods, which would remain in the core from Cycle 1 operation. Both fuel types would have two holes drilled in the lower tieplate. The proposed amendment would also change the Technical Specifications for the facility to increase the safety limit for minimum critical power ratio from 1.05 to 1.06 and to establish operating limits for both fuel types for operation in Cycle 2.

Prior to issuance of the proposed amendment, the Commission will have made the findings required by the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (the Act), and the Commission's rules and regulations.

By October 26, 1977, the licensee may file a request for a hearing and any person whose interest may be affected by this proceeding may file a request for a hearing in the form of a petition for leave to intervene with respect to the issuance of the amendment to the subject facility operating license. Petitions for leave to intervene must be filed under oath or affirmation in accordance with the provisions of § 2.714 of 10 CFR Part 2 of the Commission's regulations. A petition for leave to intervene must set forth the interest of the petitioner in the proceeding, how that interest may be affected by the results of the proceedings, and the petitioner's contentions with respect to the proposed licensing action. Such petitions must be filed in accordance with the provisions of this FEDERAL REGISTER notice and § 2.714, and must be filed with the Secretary of the Commission, U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Washington, D.C. 20555, Attention: Docketing and Service Section, by the above date. A copy of the petition and/or request for a hearing should be sent to the Executive Legal Director, U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commisison, Washington, D.C. 20555, and to Richard E. Jones, Esquire, Carolina Power & Light Co., 336 Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, N.C. 27602, and George F. Trowbridge, Shaw, Pittman, Ports & Trowbridge, 1800 M Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20036, the attorneys for the licensee.

A petition for leave to intervene must be accompanied by a supporting affidavit which identifies the specific aspect or aspects of the proceeding as to which intervention is desired and specifies with particularity the facts on which the petitioner relies as to both his interest and his contentions with regard to each aspect on which intervention is requested. Petitions stating contentions relating only to matters outside the Commission's jurisdiction will be denied.

All petitions will be acted upon by the Commission or licensing board, designated by the Commission or by the Chairman of the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board Panel. Timely petitions will be considered to determine whether a hearing should be noticed or another appropriate order issued regarding the disposition of the petitions.

In the event that a hearing is held and a person is permitted to intervene, he becomes a party to the proceeding and has a right to participate fully in the conduct of the hearing. For example, he may present evidence and examine and cross-examine witnesses.

For further details with respect to this action, see the application for amendment dated August 22, 1977, which is available for public inspection at the Commission's Public Document Room, 1717 H Street NW., Washington, D.C. 20555, and at the Southport-Brunswick County Library, 109 West Moore Street, Southport, N.C. 28461.

Dated at Bethesda, Md., this 20th day of September 1977.

CONSUMERS POWER CO.

Request for Exemption From Requirements Concerning Emergency Core Cooling System Performance

Notice is hereby given that the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (the Commission) has received and is considered a request from Consumers Power Company for an exemption for the Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant (located in Charlevoix County, Michigan, and operating under Facility License No.

DPR-6) from the ECCS failure criterion of 10 CFR § 50.46, Appendix K, Paragraph I.D.1 as applied to a Loss-of-Coolant Accident followed by a concurrent single failure in the redundant core spray system. This is for an interim period. Previous requests for a plant life exemption were noticed by the Commission in August 1975 (40 FR 37273) and March 1976 (41 FR 10969). The Commission, in May 1976 (41 FR 22428), granted plant life exemptions for certain aspects of the ECC system and limited exemptions for other aspects of the system. As part of these exemptions, the Commission required additional evidence concerning nozzle spray distribution adequacy for the nozzle spray portion of the ECC spray system. The licensee performed nozzle spray studies and modified the affected nozzle to assure adequate performance. Upon review of spray distribution information, it appears that although the studies were conducted to demonstrate the adequacy of the modified ECCS nozzle spray, further evaluation also suggests some uncertainty in spray distribution from the other ECC spray system, the core ring spray system. Thus, while modifications were made to one ECC system to assure its performance, there is some uncertainty with respect to the other. This may involve a deviation from the Commission single-failure criterion for this instance.

Consumer Power Company has by letter of September 15, 1977, requested an interim exemption from this requirement for the 1978 operating fuel cycle, which will provide an opportunity to gather additional data on spray performance more directly applicable to the core ring spray system and to make modifications in such system if the studies show that modifications are in fact needed. The licensee has submitted, along with its exemption request, information in an accompanying "Technical Justification for Exemption Request" which it asserts demonstrates that the granting of the exemption will not endanger life or property. The exemption request may be granted by the Director, Nuclear Reactor Regulation upon a finding pursuant to 10 CFR § 50.12 that such exemption is authorized by law and will not endanger life or property or the common defense and security and is otherwise in the public interest.

The operating limitations set forth in the licensee's submittal in accordance with 10 CFR § 50.46(a)(2)(iv) are no longer effective. Since that submittal, a new core has been proposed for operation having different fuel thermal and hydraulic characteristics, which have necessitated a revised ECCS performance evaluation, and revised ECCS-based operating limitations. Consequently, the procedural requirements of 10 CFR § 50.46(a)(2)(vi) are not applicable to the requested exemption.

The Director of Nuclear Reactor Regulation finds that it is appropriate to provide interested persons with an opportunity to comment on the exemption request, similar to that provided by the Commission in connection with the prior requests. The Director therefore invites the submission of views and comments by interested persons concerning the alternative requests for exemption made. Such views and comments should be submitted in writing, addressed to the Director, Division of Operating Reactors, U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Washington, D.C. 20555, not later than October 11, 1977.

The licensee's letter of September 15, 1977, and other documents and correspondence related to this request for exemption are available for public inspection at the Commission's Public Document Room, 1717 H Street, NW., Washington, D.C. and the Charlevoix Public Library, 107 Clinton Street, Charlevoix, Michigan 39770.

Dated at Bethesda, Maryland, this 22nd day of September, 1977.

AGENCY: Federal Insurance Administration, HUD.

ACTION: Proposed rule.

SUMMARY: Technical information or comments are solicited on the proposed base flood elevations (100-year flood) listed below for selected locations in Loudon County, Tenn. These base flood elevations are the basis for the flood plain management measures that the community is required to either adopt or show evidence of being already in effect in order to qualify or remain qualified for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP).

DATES: The period for comment will be ninety days following the second publication of this notice in a newspaper of local circulation in the above-named community.

ADDRESSES: Maps and other information showing the detailed outlines of the flood-prone areas and the proposed base flood elevations are available for review at the Bulletin Board in the Lobby of the County Courthouse, Loudon County.

Any person having knowledge, information, or wishing to make a comment on these proposed elevations should immediately notify Honorable William H. Russel, Judge of Loudon County, Box 246, Loudon, Tenn. 37774.

AGENCY: Federal Insurance Administration, HUD.

ACTION: Proposed rule.

SUMMARY: Technical information or comments are solicited on the proposed base flood elevation (100-year flood) listed below for selected locations in the town of Waitsfield, Washington County, Vt. Due to recent engineering analysis, this notice revises the proposed determinations of base flood elevations published in 42 FR 34478 on July 5, 1977, and in the Valley Reporter published on June 30, 1977, and July 7, 1977, and hence supersedes those notices.

DATES: The period for comment will be ninety days following the second publication of this notice in a newspaper of local circulation in the above-named community.

ADDRESSES: Maps and other information showing the detailed outlines of the flood-prone areas and the proposed flood elevations are available for review at the Town Clerk's Office, town of Waitsfield, Joslin Library, Waitsfield, Vt. 05673.

Any person having knowledge, information, or wishing to make a comment on these determinations should immediately notify Mr. Everret Larrow, Chairman, Board of Selectmen, town of Waitsfield, Waitsfield, Vt. 05673.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Mr. Richrd Krimm, Assistant Administrator, Office of Flood Insurance, 202-755-5581 or toll free line 800-424-8872, Room 5270, 451 Seventh Street SW., Washington, D.C. 20410.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Proposed flood elevations (100-year flood) are listed below for selected locations in the town of Waitsfield, in accordance with section 110 of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 (Pub. These base flood elevations are the basis for the flood plain management measures that the community is required to either adopt or show evidence of being already in effect in order to qualify or remain qualified for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP).

These modified elevations will also be used to calculate the appropriate flood insurance premium rates for new buildings and their contents and for the second layer of insurance on existing buildings and contents.

PROPOSED FLOOD ELEVATION DETERMINATIONS FOR THE TOWN OF WOODSTOCK, VT.

AGENCY: Federal Insurance Administration, HUD.

ACTION: Proposed rule.

SUMMARY: Technical information or comments are solicited on the proposed base flood elevations (100-year flood) listed below for selected locations in the town of Woodstock, Vermont. These base flood elevations are the basis for the flood plain management measures that the community is required to either adopt or show evidence of being already in effect in order to qualify or remain qualified for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP).

DATES: The period for comment will be ninety days following the second publication of this notice in a newspaper of local circulation in the above-named community.

ADDRESSES: Maps and other information showing the detailed outlines of the flood-prone areas and the proposed base flood elevations are available for review at Town Office, Route 4, Woodstock, Vt.

Any person having knowledge, information, or wishing to make a comment on these proposed elevations should immediately notify Mr. Robert Horne, Manager, town and village of Woodstock, Town Office, Route 4, Woodstock, Vt. 05091.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Mr. Richard Krimm, Assistant Administrator, Office of Flood Insurance, 202–755–5581 or toll free line 800–424–8872, Room 5270, 451 Seventh Street SW., Washington, D.C. 20410.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The Federal Insurance Administrator gives notice of the proposed determinations of base flood elevations (100-year flood) for the town of Woodstock, Vt., in accordance with section 110 of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 (Pub. L. 93–234), 87 Stat. 980, which added section 1363 to the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (Title XIII of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 Pub. L. 90–448), 42 U.S.C. 4001–4128, and 24 CFR Part 1917.

These elevations, together with the flood plain management measures required by section 1910.3 of the program regulations, are the minimum that are required. They should not be construed to mean the community must change any existing ordinances that are more stringent in their flood plain management requirements. The community may at any time enact stricter requirements on its own, or pursuant to policies established by other Federal, State, or regional entities. These proposed elevations will also be used to calculate the appropriate flood insurance premium rates for new buildings and their contents and for the second layer of insurance on existing buildings and their contents.

SAFETY RULES FOR SELF-PROPELLED VESSELS CARRYING HAZARDOUS LIQUIDS

Title 46—Shipping

CHAPTER I—COAST GUARD, DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

[CGD 73-96]

SAFETY RULES FOR SELF-PROPELLED VESSELS CARRYING HAZARDOUS LIQUIDS

AGENCY: Coast Guard, DOT.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: This amendment revises safety regulations for all self-propelled vessels operating in U.S. navigable waters and self-propelled U.S. vessels in other waters while engaged in the carriage of certain bulk dangerous liquid cargoes. The growing frequency of hazardous chemical shipments in bulk cargo tanks has increased the crew's exposure to cargo hazards and the potential for their release due to accident. This rule will reduce exposure of the crew and people near the vessel to these cargo hazards. The requirements have been chosen to be practical, and economically and technically feasible. The amendment adopts (with some extensions) the recommendations contained in the IMCO Code for the Construction and Equipment of Ships Carrying Dangerous Chemicals in Bulk (Resolution A.212(VII) as amended).

EFFECTIVE DATE: December 27, 1977.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Captain George K. Greiner, Marine Safety Council (G-CMC/81), Room 8117, Department of Transportation, Nassif Building, 400 Seventh Street, SW., Washington, D.C. 20590 (202-426-1477).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On June 24, 1976, the Coast Guard published a proposed rule (41 FR 26126) to revise the regulations governing self-propelled vessels carrying certain bulk dangerous liquid cargoes. Interested persons were given until August 20, 1976 to submit comments. A public hearing was held in Washington, D.C., on August 3, 1976.

Drafting Information

The principal program person and lawyer involved in the drafting of this rulemaking are Mr. Robert M. Query, Project Manager, Office of Merchant Marine Safety and Mr. Michael N. Mervin, Project Attorney, Office of Chief Counsel.

Discussion of Major Comments

GENERAL COMMENTS

The Coast Guard received seven comments of a general nature. The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) noted that "* * * a significant risk will exist until the qualification procedures (for the person in charge of cargo transfer operations) are adopted." As noted in the preamble of the proposed rule, the Coast Guard published a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking describing the qualifications a person must have before being designated the person in charge of cargo transfer onboard a chemical tankship (See "Tankerman Requirements," CGD 74-44, 42 FR 21190). The final requirements will be published shortly.

The NTSB further recommended that "* * * the owner's responsibilities for manning the vessel, for the equipment on the vessel * * * (and) the method he should use to indoctrinate the crew to the vessel's systems and to cargo handling procedures" should be included in the rulemaking. Both the notice and final rule describe the owner's responsibility for the equipment on the vessel and the standards the vessel must meet before obtaining a permit endorsed for a particular cargo. The owner's responsibility for manning a vessel is described in Coast Guard regulations located elsewhere in Title 46. Due to the many and varied types of tankship chartering agreements employed today, the owner is generally not the person most familiar with the systems and cargo handling arrangements installed on his vessel. The ship's officers are usually the most familiar with these aspects of the chemical tanker and are in a much better position to indoctrinate the crew than the owner.

Because the ship's officers are themselves responsible for the operation of the chemical tanker under the new rule, they will provide the crew with the instruction necessary to assure the safe transfer of cargo. To facilitate safe cargo transfer, an additional requirement has been incorporated into the operations sections of the final rule. It requires the person in charge of cargo transfer on the tankship to confer with his counterpart ashore before commencing cargo transfer operations.

The NTSB also recommended that each tankship should be required to have an operating manual which describes in detail the procedures involved in operating the liquid transfer systems. The Coast Guard agrees that some specific information on cargo transfer operations may be helpful to the person in charge of cargo transfer. The operating sections have been amended to require a piping diagram that shows the cargo piping, valves, pumps and any other important components of the cargo containment system. A detailed operations manual, as suggested, that describes every possible valving and piping arrangement would be extremely complex and awkward to use on most vessels. However, the Coast Guard has proposed requirements for a reasonably detailed operations manual in part 35 (see 42 FR 23517). These requirements will apply to vessels certificated under part 153.

Finally, the NTSB recommended that the Coast Guard limit the hours of duty for the people involved in cargo transfer operations. This recommendation falls outside the scope of the material presented in the notice of proposed rulemaking but will be considered for inclusion in the appropriate section of the regulations.

REQUIREMENTS FOR EXISTING VESSELS

The American Institute of Merchant Shipping (AIMS) requested clarification of several points in § 153.7 of the proposal dealing with existing vessels. The Coast Guard has redrafted this section in a second notice of proposed rulemaking discussed later. The redrafted section should clarify these points.

AIMS also forwarded to the Coast Guard the comments of the International Chamber of Shipping (ICS), a group representing, among others, international tanker operators. ICS objected principally to the fact that the Coast Guard proposed standards that exceeded the IMCO Chemical Code in some instances. ICS noted the Coast Guard's participation in developing the IMCO Chemical Code and its support of the adoption of the Code by the IMCO General Assembly in October 1971. ICS feels that the Coast Guard, by going in excess of the Code's requirements in certain instances, is reneging on its support of the IMCO Chemical Code. ICS also commented on the fact that the time period within which existing ships must comply with the rule differs from the timetable prescribed by the IMCO Chemical Code. Several sections of the final rule have been modified to give the Coast Guard wider latitude in its acceptance of equivalent designs than the proposal permitted. One example is the requirement that wheelhouse windows must be tight when tested with a firehose rather than dogged and gasketed.

Since adoption of the Chemical Code the Coast Guard has recommended numerous changes to IMCO. Many of these have been approved as amendments to the Code and will most likely be adopted shortly. However, IMCO intends to amend the Chemical Code only once every two years. Considering the time necessary to put such amendments into effect, a vessel might be operating in U.S. waters for four or more years using techniques and equipment the Coast Guard feels are possibly unsafe. The laws under which the Coast Guard is issuing this rule require that all vessels in U.S. navigable waters operating under the rule meet essentially the same standards. For these reasons, the rule contains standards that in some cases exceed those of the IMCO Chemical Code, even though the Coast Guard has attempted to keep such instances to a minimum.

Section 153.7(c) of the proposal contained a series of dates and section numbers describing the schedule an existing ship would be allowed to follow if it were modified to operate under the new part. This schedule would have extended over a period of approximately five years, so that a ship would have met virtually all the requirements in the proposal by sometime in 1982. A number of people commented on § 153.7(c), mostly on how quickly a ship would have to meet a particular section or whether it would have to meet a section at all.

However, several comments noted that the Coast Guard was, as a practical matter, changing the effective dates of the IMCO Chemical Code. These people argued that the proposed rules would allow ships not following the Code to continue to operate without modification until 1982, whereas those ships which were complying with the Code would have to be modified by April 12, 1978.

This would give an unfair advantage to ships not meeting the Code. Comments also pointed out that the Code was published in 1971 so that the marine chemical shipping industry has had ample notice of the Code's timetable for upgrading.

The Coast Guard reviewed the design of existing chemical ships under U.S. flag and those foreign ships operating in U.S. waters when it assessed the economic impact of the original proposal. The Coast Guard determined that most U.S. flag and many foreign flag ships carrying hazardous chemicals either already comply with or are close to complying with the requirements in part 153. The Coast Guard's estimate of the cost of the original proposal, including existing and new, foreign and U.S. flag ships showed that the cost per year for the first five years (during the period existing tankers were being converted) would be roughly $3,000,000. If the total cost were compressed into one year, it would amount to about $15,000,000, ignoring any inflationary increase since the original evaluation in the spring of 1976 and disregarding costs from lost operating time and shipyard scheduling problems.

After considering the various objections to the time schedule in the original proposal and the costs involved in meeting the schedule for conversion prescribed by the Chemical Code, the Coast Guard determined that the schedule in the proposal should be modified to coincide with that in the Chemical Code. However, since this change represented a significant departure from the original proposal, the Coast Guard issued a second Notice of Proposed Rulemaking on effective dates for existing ships (see 42 FR 23518).

The Coast Guard received two comments on the proposal to change the effective dates for existing ships. One comment, received after the closing date for comments, did not address the subject of the notice but rather differences between the location of deckhouse openings on chemical tankers, liquified gas tankers, and petroleum tankers. The Coast Guard recognizes these differences and has brought the apparent anomaly to IMCO's attention. Work at IMCO is currently underway to harmonize the various Codes as much as possible, and the subject of deckhouse openings will be included.

The second comment concerned an older foreign flag vessel that was to be phased out of operation in the near future. According to the comment the change in effective dates might force this vessel out of operation sooner than expected. However, the comment did not describe in what ways the vessel would fail to meet the new rule, nor how close the vessel was to meeting any standards it failed to meet. The Coast Guard believes any realistic problems can be resolved under § 153.7(c)(6). Therefore, the change in effective dates for existing ships is incorporated in this rule.

One comment suggested that the Coast Guard adopt the IMCO Code verbatim rather than publishing a separate regulation containing the IMCO recommendations. The same comment noted that the IMCO Chemical Code was developed long before this rule was published and for that reason it would appear "* * * that foreign experience should be far ahead of the U.S. flag experience." As previously noted in the preamble of the proposal, the Chemical Transportation Industry Advisory Committee (CTIAC) in cooperation with the Coast Guard began developing the proposed regulations in August, 1968, and completed their recommendations at about the same time the IMCO Chemical Code was adopted in 1971. In the administration of the Letter of Compliance program, the Coast Guard has had about the same amount of experience using the requirements in this rule as it has had using the requirements in the IMCO Chemical Code.

As is the case with many codes and recommendations, the IMCO Chemical Code is not sufficiently detailed in many instances to be used as a regulation. Moreover, the Code's provisions, being written in the form of recommendations, are not suitable as regulations. For these reasons the Coast Guard is required to publish a rule incorporating the Chemical Code rather than to publish the Chemical Code as the rule itself.

The Maritime Administration recommended that the Coast Guard consider incorporating within this rule part of the requirements from 33 CFR Subchapter O that apply to oil pollution prevention. The laws authorizing the Coast Guard to publish this rule are clear in requiring that pollution and safety rules be distinguished. The Coast Guard will develop rules covering chemical pollution but must wait for the Environmental Protection Agency to identify "hazardous substances" in accordance with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act or until ratification and coming into force of the 1973 Marine Pollution Convention.

The Maritime Administration also recommended that the Coast Guard specify a minimum intensity of deck lighting in the cargo transfer area as is now specified in 33 CFR 155.790. The Coast Guard is now in the process of developing regulations that will prescribe requirements for waterfront facilities handling bulk liquid chemicals. Minimum lighting standards for the cargo transfer area will be included in these regulations.

The American Bureau of Shipping (ABS) noted that the proposal would apply to cargoes carried in the deep tanks of chemical tankers and vessels other than chemical tankers. ABS felt that such a requirement on deep tanks is premature. The Coast Guard and IMCO are studying the question of deep tanks and expect to develop standards for these eventually. Because the volume of cargoes carried in deep tanks is quite small at present and because many of the cargoes listed in the proposal would be difficult to carry safely in deep tanks, the Coast Guard will continue to evaluate these situations on a case by case basis.

Several people commented that the term "senior deck officer" does not refer to a specific person but may be the master, chief mate, or whichever officer is in charge of the vessel at any particular time. To clarify whom we are talking about, and to ensure that the master of the tankship is responsible for seeing that the operational responsibilities under his supervision are followed, the term has been changed to "master". To enable the master to delegate his authority to another responsible person if he wishes, the phrase "the master shall ensure that" is used throughout the rule.

COMMENTS ON SPECIFIC SECTIONS

Changes to existing parts. Some of the revisions in sections of other regulations included in the proposal to conform with part 153 were modified to accommodate a revised 46 CFR part 154 that will deal with liquefied gases.

Although the proposal included changes to 46 CFR part 2 dealing with the Hazardous Materials Incident Report, the Coast Guard decided to cancel this report altogether (42 FR 41636).

Section 153.2 Definitions. The definitions contain five new terms: "accommodation spaces," "Commandant," "dedicated ballast tank," "master," and "service spaces." Several of the definitions are the same as proposed in the rules for liquefied gases (41 FR 43822), and each of the definitions should help clarify the rule.

Two comments were received regarding the definition of "independent tanks". One comment suggested that rather than defining integral and independent tanks, the rule should distinguish only between tanks separated from the sea by an intervening space and those that allow the cargo to contact the vessel's side shell or bottom plating. An independent tank is one that has special supports that prevent it from being stressed by the loads on the tankship itself. An independent tank is not only separated from the sea but is also not as likely to leak as an integral tank, regardless of whether the integral tank is surrounded by void spaces. The Coast Guard requires independent tanks in instances where cargo leakage would pose an unusually hazardous condition or where some property of the cargo would make an integral tank impractical. For example, motor fuel antiknock compound, if leaked from a tank, would be extremely difficult to clean out of a void space or wing tank separating the tank from the sea. Therefore, the Coast Guard requires an independent tank to reduce the chance of cargo leaks.

Another comment asked whether a tank whose foundation was welded to the hull or which had one bulkhead formed from one of the ship's transverse bulkheads would be considered independent. The Coast Guard does not consider such tanks to be independent because in both cases the tanks would be forming part of the vessel's hull and would be subject to the same stresses as the vessel's hull. The definitions of integral and independent tanks have been reworded to clarify the difference between the two.

One person recommended that a definition for "designated ballast space" be added to the rule. This phrase is not used in the proposed rule; however, the phrase "dedicated ballast tank" is used. A dedicated ballast tank is a tank within the vessel used only for clean ballast. The Coast Guard has added this definition to the final rule.

Section 153.7 Existing tankships. The Maritime Administration recommended that section 153.294(a) of the proposed rule, requiring piping systems to be marked with the name of the tank they serve, be made effective immediately since it is not a difficult requirement to meet and is useful from a safety standpoint. The Coast Guard agrees with this suggestion and has made section 153.294 effective immediately for existing vessels by adding it to section 153.7(c)(1).

Another comment noted that proposed section 153.7(c)(5) incorrectly implied that a type I containment system on an existing vessel could have a bottom shell clearance less than type II containment on the same vessel. This section has been changed so that existing type I and II containment systems must both be at least 76 cm from the bottom shell of the vessel.

One comment recommended that proposed sections 153.202 and 153.258 not be required of existing tankships. These sections set forth location requirements for doors, airports and the separation distances of cargo tanks from machinery, service and other spaces. In response, the Coast Guard has deleted the 76 cm separation distance contained in proposed section 153.258. This section has been reassigned to section 153.233 in the final rule. It now contains the same provisions as set forth in the IMCO Chemical Code. Existing vessels should have little difficulty meeting the requirements of this section since segregation has been a tankship design requirement for many years. Furthermore, existing vessels certificated under the IMCO Chemical Code will also have to meet this same requirement by April 1978.

Section 153.9 Foreign flag vessel endorsement application. This section, describing measures a foreign vessel must take to get a Letter of Compliance, now includes two certificates under the Safety of Life at Sea Convention. These certificates are necessary to show the vessel meets the Coast Guard's tanker requirements under subchapter D.

The proposed rule may have implied that submitting an IMCO Certificate was optional. The wording of section 153.9 has been changed to make it clear that the owner of a vessel registered in a country that issues IMCO Certificates must submit a copy of the IMCO Certificate in order to receive a Letter of Compliance.

Section 153.12 IMCO Certificates. A new section 153.12 is added to explain under what conditions the Coast Guard issues an IMCO Certificate to a U.S. tankship. The IMCO Certificate shows that the U.S. flag tankship meets the recommendations of the IMCO Chemical Code.

Section 153.30 Permeability of spaces. When the Coast Guard proposed the rules for liquefied gas tankers in part 154, it described the limits it places on permeability assumptions when assessing a vessel's stability after flooding in greater detail than it did in the proposal for this part. To aid ship designers in understanding the Coast Guard's vessel stability requirements, the more detailed description of permeability assumptions set out in the proposal for liquefied gas tankers is included in § 153.30. Sections 153.31 and 153.34 also have been made more detailed for the same reason.

Section 153.32 Damage. One comment suggested that proposed section 153.32(a)(1)(ii) should allow a collision penetration to be calculated from the highest deck level rather than at the assigned loadline so that the protection provided by the flare found at the vessel's bow could be utilized. The same comment stated, with no explanation, that theoretical bottom damage should be based on the vessel's depth rather than it's beam. In both cases, the penetration measurments used were taken from correlations derived from accident statistics. They are convenient reference points from which to describe the penetrations found in IMCO's analysis of accident data, rather than being theoretical deductions. If the Coast Guard had not adopted these recommendations, U.S. flag ships would not meet the minimum requirements of the IMCO Code.

Section 153.200 Portlights, wheelhouse windows, and wheelhouse doors. The proposed requirements for locating openings in superstructure, section 153.200, came from the Chemical Code. This section of the final rule was reworded to clarify the requirements and match the wording of the Chemical Code more closely.

Section 153.202 Location of deckhouse doors and airports. One comment argues that this section and the corresponding section of the IMCO Chemical Code should be written differently. The comment maintains that the purpose of this rule is to keep openings into the deckhouse clear of the cargo space regardless of the location of the accommodations house front and that, for this reason, the measurements should be made from the after transverse bulkhead of the cargo space. The purpose of this requirement is to reduce the possibility of toxic and flammable vapors being trapped in accommodation spaces bounding the deckhouse front. Vapors that are swept against the house front would be free to enter open portlights and doors if it were not for this design requirement. Taking measurements from the end of the cargo containment system, as suggested, would have no effect on minimizing this particular hazard.

Section 153.208 Ballast equipment. One comment said that proposed section 153.208(b)(2) was too restrictive in requiring that a non-return valve be located at the point where the ballast fill line enters the ballast tank. We agree. This section has been modified to allow either a stop value and a check valve or a stop-check valve to be used and to allow this valving arrangement to be located anywhere in the cargo containment area so long as it is not located within a cargo containment system.

Section 153.214 Personnel emergency and safety equipment. Two comments pointed out that the protective clothing described in proposed section 153.214(b) was too specific and would not insure adequate personnel protection from many corrosive or toxic cargoes. This section has been modified to broaden the description of the protective clothing while at the same time requiring it to be made of chemically resistant materials. Other comments suggested changes to § 153.527 as well as this section to require that the respiratory equipment and first aid kits be approved by the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, or similar foreign organization. This suggestion has been adopted. The respiratory equipment has also been described in greater detail to exclude a type that can be hazardous if used incorrectly; the respiration equipment now must be ". . . a portable oxygen inhalation and bag valve mask manual resuscitator."

One comment suggested that the safety equipment lockers required by proposed 153.214(c) should be located in a protected area. While moving these lockers into protected areas may make them less subject to damage, the lockers would also be less available in an emergency. The lockers themselves should sufficiently protect the safety equipment and this requirement has not been changed. Another comment noted that proposed section 153.214(f) did not require the shower and eye wash fountain to operate at any ambient temperature. This suggestion has been incorporated in section 153.216 of the final rule.

Section 153.217 Access to void spaces. A section 153.217 is added that requires access openings to void spaces adjacent to cargo tanks to be the same minimum size as openings to cargo tanks. These void spaces may easily have cargo vapors within them so that a man wearing self-contained breathing equipment should be able to get in them.

Section 153.230 Type I system. One person commented that this section appeared contradictory in that a type I cargo containment system would have to be located 76 cm in from the vessel's shell while also having to be inboard a distance of B/5 at the assigned loadline. However, depending on the curvature of the hull at the tank location, a straight-sided tank located a distance of B/5 inboard at the loadline might be only 76 cm from the hull where the hull turns inward near the turn of the bilge. This section is not contradictory and has not been changed.

Section 153.235 Exceptions to cargo piping location restrictions. One comment stated that the exceptions contained in this section could result in placing the cargo piping in a poor location. This allowance is also included in the IMCO Chemical Code, and permits cargo piping to be located closer to the vessel's shell than a cargo tank, provided that the piping is designed in such a way that no cargo release will result in the event of a collision. This piping location would not present a hazard and may offer some flexibility to the designer. The section has been modified slightly to more clearly reflect its purpose.

Section 153.236 Prohibited materials. In volume 42 number 28 of the FEDERAL REGISTER dated February 10, 1977 on page 8377 the Coast Guard published a final rule modifying the restrictions in 46 CFR 151 on the use of certain materials in containment systems on barges carrying caustic soda and caustic potash. In the preamble, the Coast Guard noted that "there are some data that show that copper alloys with a high zinc content are attacked by caustic." The Coast Guard restricted the use of alloys containing more than 10 percent zinc by weight at that time. This section has been modified to adopt this restriction.

Section 153.258 Tank separation. This section was moved to section 153.233. The entire section was redrafted in an attempt to clarify some of the ambiguities described in several comments. One comment said many existing small tankships will not meet the proposed requirement. Section 153.233, as written in the final rule, is a standard that U.S. tankships have been required to meet for many years and is also an IMCO requirement. The Coast Guard will not exempt existing vessels from this requirement.

Section 153.280 Cargo transfer valving. In response to several questions received regarding the group of sections entitled "Cargo Handling Equipment" in the proposal, this area has been reorganized for clarification. This particular section has been redesignated as section 153.283 and slightly modified to require that a valve be located within each tank a cargo line serves.

Section 153.294 Marking of piping systems. One comment asked whether the cargo piping system should not be marked at more than one location. This section is modified to require that the cargo piping system be marked at each hose connection and at each valve and blind flange in the piping system. This modification should aid in preventing mistakes in tank loading.

Section 153.296 Emergency shutdown stations. One comment recommended that this section be modified to require an emergency shutdown station at the point where cargo transfer is controlled. The Coast Guard agrees with this recommendation and has made the change. Another comment recommended that the power shutdown control in the engine room be acceptable as one of the required emergency shutdowns. Since such a control would be nowhere near the point of cargo transfer and would be awkward to get to in an emergency, the Coast Guard will not accept this as one of the shutdown stations. This section of the final rule contains an additional requirement: emergency actuators must not interact with one another in a way that could prevent operation of the other emergency systems.

Section 153.330 Access. One comment stated that the ANSI standard for industrial stairs referred to in this section of the proposal was inappropriate and conflicted with other parts of the same section. Reference to this standard has been dropped from the final rule. One comment objected to the requirements for guard railings on ladders and platforms. The same comment also found the ladder inclination requirement "difficult and costly." The Coast Guard finds it somewhat difficult to believe that a requirement for guard railings and limitations on the inclination of ladders would have a significant financial impact on a ship costing 40 to 50 million dollars. Except where mentioned, this section has not been changed.

Section 153.361 Arrangements for removal of valves from venting systems having multiple relief valves. Included in the final rule is this new section that allows the use of vent systems with multiple relief valves which can be removed for servicing without taking the cargo tank out of service.

Section 153.404 Containment systems requiring closed gauges. Several sections describing requirements for cargo gauging systems were reorganized for clarity. The requirement for a high level alarm system, originally described in section 153.404 of the proposal, has been separated from the other requirements for closed gauging systems and redesignated section 153.409.

One comment recommended that the Coast Guard review its proposal to require vapor return connections on cargo tanks endorsed for cargoes having the greatest vapor hazards. This recommendation is based on the belief that a number of these cargoes are now being transferred without using vapor return and without creating any "* * * problems whatsoever." The Coast Guard's purpose in proposing this requirement was to minimize the amount of hazardous vapor discharged during cargo loading. Since many of these vapors pose chronic toxicity hazards that may take effect only after long periods of time, their dangers may not be immediately obvious to persons conducting cargo transfer operations. It is for this reason that the Coast Guard is retaining these requirements as proposed.

The same person suggested that the high level alarm and the tank overfill control system should be actuated at the same level. He recommended that 98 percent of the tank's capacity be used in each case but offered no reason for this comment. The high level alarm is provided to alert personnel filling cargo tanks than an immediate corrective action is necessary. The one percent set point difference, as provided in these sections, will give the operator sufficient time to take corrective action before the loading operation is automatically terminated. Both the high level alarm and the overfill control system are provided as safety devices in the event of personnel error or a failure of the required tank gauging system. Routine and frequent use of these backup devices is undesirable from both an operational and safety standpoint. For these reasons the Coast Guard did not change the proposed rule.

Section 153.406 Containment systems requiring restricted gauges. One comment recommended that the restricted gauge maximum diameter should be increased because 5 cm would be too small to allow accurate gauging of cargo tanks of 30 to 40 feet in depth. The maximum diameter has been increased to 20 cm, which has been found to be sufficient to allow gauging of a tank that is 40 or more feet deep.

Section 153.407 Special requirements for sounding tube gauges. In response to several comments, this section has been expanded to describe the requirements for sounding tube gauges in more detail. Sounding tubes will now be required to extend to within one meter of the tank bottom. This requirement will minimize the amount of vapor escaping through the tube during tank loading operations.

Section 153.408 Tank overfill controls. One comment recommended that a 30-second maximum closure time for quick-closing valves be allowed after the cargo tank has reached the 98 percent level. The intent of this requirement is to assure that the shutdown valve is completely closed by the time the tank level reaches 98 percent. Therefore, it is not necessary to specify a maximum closure time. The final rule was reworded slightly to clarify this point.

Section 153.432 Cooling systems. One person commented that this section should also describe the size of the backup units and how readily they must be placed in operation. Paragraph (b) has been rewritten to insure that the standby refrigeration equipment is installed and ready for immediate use. Paragraph (c) was also added; it requires a piping diagram for the refrigeration system and instructions on changing over to the standby unit.

Section 153.438 Cargo temperature alarms required. One comment argued that the cargo high temperature alarm should not be required to be located on the bridge but only to be audible and visible from the bridge. The Coast Guard has not modified this section because in many circumstances, such as when the vessel is underway, a person on the bridge of the vessel might not be able to hear the cargo high temperature alarm or see it if it were located only on the deck of the vessel. It is important that the alarm be immediately recognized and corrective actions be taken.

Section 153.440 Cargo temperature sensors required. One comment recommended that section 153.440 be rewritten to allow a thermometer well on the tank rather than having a remote sensing thermometer located at the point from which cargo transfer is controlled. The comment pointed out that remote reading temperature indicators are unreliable and that the requirement as applied to elevated temperature cargoes affects only the quality of a cargo and not the safety of the vessel or crew. Overheating of cargo can often create safety problems as well as affecting cargo quality. Furthermore, heating a cargo beyond the temperature for which a tank is designed can cause a tank to crack and leak or can raise stresses in main structural members within the vessel beyond the values they were designed to accommodate. This problem has appeared to be involved in some past accidents with sulfur carriers. For these reasons the Coast Guard has retained the requirement, though modifying it slightly to require only two rather than three remote reading temperature sensors on each tank.

Section 153.460 Fire protection systems. A number of people commented on the fire protection requirements described in section 153.460. These comments can be summarized as follows:

a. The section on fire protection systems refers to part 34 of title 46. Part 34 contains no standards for dry chemical fire protection systems.

b. Water spray systems are ineffective in controlling a fire and the requirement should be changed to foam spray systems.

c. Dry chemical systems are ineffective in controlling flash back and reignition.

d. A category of fire protection systems requiring AFFF fire fighting agent should be created.

e. Dry chemical agents are ineffective in controlling cargo vapor.

f. The regulations would allow a dry chemical system to be substituted for any other fire protection system specified. Dry chemical systems may not be effective with many of the cargoes. This provision should be changed to require only approved type fire protection systems.

The objections to dry chemical systems are generally correct. The proposal would have allowed substitution of dry chemical for a type A or B system, (and mistakenly for a type C system) apparently at the choice of the designer. Because of the many considerations involved in substituting dry chemical for other systems, and since standards for dry chemical systems do not exist in part 34, the regulations have been revised. Section 153.460 now requires that a dry chemical system substituted for a type A or B system must be specially approved, by the Commandant (G–MMT). The Coast Guard will publish rules for dry chemical systems on chemical tankers in a future rulemaking.

Water spray systems are generally ineffective in controlling a fire, and are not usually prescribed for fire extinguishment purposes. They are effective, however, in cooling exposed tanks and piping and in preventing reignition of cargo vapors after a fire is out. Therefore, water spray systems are still required for some cargoes.

The Coast Guard has not added a category requiring AFFF agents. These agents are not unique in being effective on both regular hydrocarbons and polar solvents since all Coast Guard approved polar solvent foams are suitable for regular hydrocarbons as well. The terms "alcohol" and "regular foam" have been deleted from the footnotes to table I, since they may be subject to misinterpretation.

Section 153.463 Vent system discharges. One comment objected to the 10 meter separation distance required between cargo tank vent discharges and ignition sources. This section has been revised to apply only to those cargoes requiring PV venting, a provision contained in the IMCO Chemical Code.

Section 153.465 Flammable vapor detector. In keeping with the IMCO Code, this section was modified to permit one of the two required flammable vapor detectors to be the permanently installed type.

Section 153.466 Electrical equipment. This new section was added to ensure that all electrical equipment meets the provisions of Subchapter J of Title 46.

Section 153.467 Ventilation systems for flammable cargoes. This new section requires non-sparking ventilation equipment for all flammable cargoes. This was added because the Coast Guard actually reviews ventilation equipment on tankers carrying any flammable cargo to see that the equipment is non-sparking. To mention the requirement only under alkylene oxides as was done in the proposal would have been misleading.

Section 153.500 Inert gas systems. One comment objected that the proposal required that isopropylamine, toluene diisocyanate, and vinylidene chloride be inerted when carried. Toluene diisocyanate is carried with an inerted, pressurized vapor space to prevent water vapor from entering the tank. The Coast Guard had intended to include for toluene diisocyanate the requirement that the inert gas system supply inert gas with no more than 100 parts per million water. This requirement was contained in section 153.501, and was omitted in table 1 of the proposal. Toluene diisocyanate decomposes when mixed with water and releases carbon dioxide. If much water vapor, such as might come through an inert gas system supplying scrubbed stack gas, mixed with the cargo, the rate of carbon dioxide evolution might be greater than the tank venting equipment could handle, overpressuring the tank. The Chemical Code requires that normal propylamine and vinylidene chloride both be inerted. Since isopropylamine and normal propylamine differ only slightly in the characteristics that make inerting important, such as autoignition temperature, flammable limits, and reactivity with air, the Coast Guard proposed that isopropylamine also be carried under an inert gas pad. The Coast Guard will review with IMCO the requirement that these cargoes be inerted; however, in the interim the requirement will be imposed.

The comment further recommended that the requirements for inert gas systems be modified to allow part of the system's capacity to come from auxiliary inert gas supplies on shore during cargo discharge. This is a reasonable alternative so long as there are operational controls to prevent a tank's vacuum relief valve from operating when discharging a cargo required to be inerted. Therefore, the Coast Guard has modified section 153.975 to add an operational requirement that any necessary auxiliary inert gas supplies be connected before cargo discharge.

One comment remarked that the Coast Guard's proposal to require about 14 kiloPascal (kPa) gauge pressure of inert gas within a tank is excessive. He suggested that a pressure of about 1.75 kPa would be sufficient, would cut down on inert gas use, and would decrease the amount of cargo vapor vented. The Coast Guard agrees that the inerting pressure of 14 kPa is excessive and has modified this requirement to make the minimum inert gas pressure in the tank equal to the minimum pressure at which a tank relief valve may begin to open, that is, 3.5 kPa.

The Maritime Administration suggested that in order to specify the volumetric flow capacity of the inert gas system accurately, the pressure at which the volumetric flow capacity must be computed should be specified. The Coast Guard agrees and has modified section 153.500(d) to specify that when calculating the system's flow, the gas be at 46°C and 3.5 kPa pressure.

Section 153.520 Special requirements for carbon disulfide. Paragraph (d) of the carbon disulfide requirements was modified slightly to specify a type 304 or 316 stainless steel on the pv valves instead of the unspecified type in the proposal.

Section 153.525 Special requirements for unusually toxic cargoes. Two comments suggested changes to the requirements for toxic cargoes contained in this proposed rule. One comment recommended that section 153.525(d) be changed to read, "be arranged so as not to contaminate other systems via supply and return of heating source". The proposed rule would require an independent heating system or a heating system totally external to the cargo containment system. The IMCO Code is worded similarly, but allows a third alternative in which the heat transfer fluid may be sampled for the presence of cargo before being returned from the tank to the heat exchanger. The Coast Guard will consider systems for sampling the fluid that would prevent circulation of contaminated heat transfer fluid into other heat transfer systems. To clarify this point, a provision has been added to section 153.525(d) of the final rule that will allow such sampling systems, provided they have the approval of Commandant (G–MHM).

One comment objected to the requirement in section 153.525(b) that the relief valve on a cargo tank carrying unusually toxic cargoes be set at no less than 21 kPa. The comment argued that venting a tank at about 2-kPa would relieve a much lesser "volume of toxic vapors". Under normal operating conditions a cargo tank carrying an unusually toxic cargo would release vapors through the vent system only because of pressure changes caused by temperature variations within the cargo liquid and vapor phases. This cyclical phenomenon is commonly referred to as "tank breathing". The amount of cargo released during breathing is a function of the temperature extremes encountered and the pressure setting of the vent system relief valve. The Coast Guard has set the lower limit on this relief valve setting at 21 kPa to minimize tank breathing by forcing the relief valve to operate less often. If vapor is vented, it will be released a distance of at least 6 meters above the deck where personnel may be working and at a higher velocity than if vented at 2 kPa. This distance and initial velocity should be sufficient to disperse and dilute the vented vapors.

One comment objected to the excessive separation distance required under 153.525(e) between toxic cargoes and bunkers. This section of the proposal is modified to require separation of the cargo and not cargo containment from bunkers by two bulkheads.

Section 153.530 Special requirements for alkylene oxides. One comment recommended that this section include all IMCO Chemical Code requirements and that the Coast Guard review its requirements for propylene oxide in light of its highly flammable and reactive characteristics. Upon review, proposed section 153.530 was revised to incorporate the restrictions on construction materials contained in the IMCO Chemical Code. In conjunction with the Chemical Transportation Industry Advisory Committee (CTIAC), the Coast Guard is continuing a review of its propylene oxide requirements. The Coast Guard is also conducting an active testing program aimed at determining possible reactions between seawater and propylene oxide in the presence of various catalysts, such as rust. Any rule changes that might result from the test program findings or the recommendations of the CTIAC's Subcommittee on Chemical Vessels will be handled in a separate rulemaking.

Section 153.556 Special requirements for sulfuric acid and oleum. One comment asked why the requirements for sulfuric acid did not mention stainless steel as a material of construction. Although the Coast Guard would consider stainless steel equivalent to mild steel in its ability to resist corrosion by sulfuric acid and oleum, the Coast Guard has no evidence that stainless steels are sufficiently more corrosion resistant than mild steel to be useful at all concentrations of sulfuric acid. Therefore, the Coast Guard has left this requirement unchanged and will handle any requests to use materials other than those specified in the section on a case by case basis as described in paragraph (c) of the section.

The proposed rule was possibly misleading in allowing unlined steel to be used for tanks carrying oleum containing more than 4 percent free sulfur trioxide. The 4 percent figure applies only to a method of measuring oleum concentration peculiar to the sulfuric acid industry. As the proposal was worded, this concentration should have been 20 percent rather than 4 percent. Twenty percent free sulfur trioxide is specified in the final rule.

Section 153.806 Stability test and information. One person commented that this section is confusing because it refers to the requirements for Cargo and Miscellaneous Vessels in Part 93 of title 46 when describing the stability tests and information a tankship must have before its Certificate is endorsed. The requirements in part 93 are general in nature and can be applied to any vessel. In fact, the Coast Guard recently proposed to apply these same requirements to tankers certificated under parts 30–35 of title 46. The Coast Guard does not believe this reference will cause confusion once people become familiar with it and, therefore, has left the rule as proposed.

Sections 153.808 through 153.812. Four sections from the existing 46 CFR Part 154 were added in the "Testing and Inspection" group to describe the procedures the owner of a foreign flag vessel must follow to arrange for the Coast Guard to examine his vessel. The new sections describe a systematic procedure to follow to arrange an examination and list the information the Coast Guard needs for the examination. The Coast Guard requires a minimum of 14 calendar days to set up an examination. A vessel that does not have a Letter of Compliance may carry a dangerous cargo into U.S. waters on the examination voyage only if it has specific authorization from the Coast Guard.

Sections 153.900–153.976. Many of these sections have been moved and renumbered to improve the order of presentation.

Section 153.902 Expiration of Letters of Compliance. A section was added to state that a Letter of Compliance, like a Certificate of Inspection, is good for a period not exceeding two years. This is an existing rule in part 154 that is now incorporated here.

Section 153.907 Cargo information cards. One comment stated that the ship's personnel should not be responsible for ensuring that terminal personnel "* * * be knowledgeable of the nature of the products that the terminal handles." By this rule the Coast Guard is not requiring that ship's personnel ensure that terminal personnel be familiar with all the cargoes handled by the terminal, but rather that they ensure that terminal personnel are aware of the products being carried on the tankship. The ship may have onboard cargoes that are not necessarily handled by the terminal. It is imperative in emergency situations that terminal personnel have a copy of the vessel's shipping document and a set of cargo information cards. Proposed section 153.907(b) is being retained but has been moved to section 153.914 of the final rule.

Section 153.910 Cargo piping plan. As previously mentioned, this new section requires that a cargo piping plan be provided on board each tankship.

Section 153.933 Protective clothing required. This new section is added to the final rule to give direction to the master regarding the wearing of protective clothing for specific cargo handling operations.

Section 153.950 Person in charge of cargo transfer. One comment opposed the description in section 153.950 of the proposal, redesignated section 153.957, of the person in charge of cargo transfer and felt that the Coast Guard should require a tankerman at the point of cargo transfer in addition to the licensed officer. According to the comment, the complexities of cargo transfer are such that more than one person is necessary to continuously oversee the transfer procedures. The Coast Guard agrees that in most transfer operations more than one person would likely be necessary to do all the operations on the ship necessary to transfer the cargo. However, in drafting the rule, the Coast Guard has tried to place both the responsibility and authority to supervise a cargo transfer operation on the person in charge of cargo transfer. The Coast Guard has in no way limited the freedom of the person in charge to use other people on board the vessel and to assign them various tasks in the cargo transfer operations. However, it is unwise to fragment the responsibility for coordination of cargo transfer operations by assigning more than one person responsibility for the overall transfer, and the requirement as proposed has been retained. As mentioned in the preamble to the proposal of this part, section 153.957 refers to proposed regulations for tankermen (42 FR 21190, April 25, 1977). The Coast Guard expects these rules to be published in final form shortly. In the interim, § 153.957 has been changed to refer to 33 CFR 155.710 that describes requirements for the person in charge of an oil transfer operation.

Section 153.952 Warning signs. One comment suggested that 153.952 of the proposal, now redesignated 153.955, might be clearer if the sign containing the cargo warnings were illustrated rather than described in the text. The Coast Guard has retained the description of the sign in the text but has added an illustration of the sign to that section.

Section 153.1020 Unusually toxic cargoes. In the proposal, the requirement that a toxic cargo be isolated from other cargoes was described as a design requirement. However, unless a tankship dedicates certain cargo tanks only to toxic cargoes, it is impractical to guarantee this requirement in the design phase of the vessel. Therefore, the Coast Guard has modified the requirement slightly so that the cargo tank and piping system for an unusually toxic cargo must be designed so that they can be isolated. To make sure this is done when a toxic cargo is loaded, the Coast Guard has added to section 153.1020 a prohibition again any person loading or carrying toxic cargoes in containment systems which are not isolated from other cargo containment systems.

Section 153.1025 Motor fuel antiknock compounds. Two comments questioned the requirement in section 153.1025 that a person get specific approval from the Commandant (G-MHM) before entering a cargo tank endorsed for motor fuel antiknock compounds. The decontamination of a cargo tank which has carried motor fuel antiknock compounds is a difficult, dangerous, and tedious operation. For this reason the Coast Guard does not want people haphazardly cleaning and entering motor fuel antiknock compound tanks. The manufacturers of motor fuel antiknock compounds usually have specially trained personnel to decontaminate materials that have been in contact with motor fuel antiknock compounds. To accommodate in part a suggestion that the manufacturers be allowed to enter tanks without Coast Guard approval, the Coast Guard has added a provision in section 153.1025 which would allow manufacturers to obtain prior approval of a decontamination procedure from the Coast Guard, and to obtain specific authorization to enter a tank in accordance with that procedure by merely calling Commandant (G-MHM).

Section 153.1052 Carriage of other cargoes in acid tanks. One comment questioned why the ship's personnel could not be given responsibility for deciding whether another cargo could be carried in a containment system endorsed for sulfuric, hydrochloric, or phosphoric acid. The Coast Guard's concern in this instance is that lining materials or other materials designed specifically to protect the tank against attack by one of these acids might be damaged if used with another cargo. Determining the compatibility of cargoes and tank lining materials can be quite complicated in many cases. The Coast Guard does not believe that the ship's licensed officers are likely to have the specialized training necessary to make such determinations. Therefore, the Coast Guard has left this requirement as proposed.

Section 153.1055 Nitropropane. One comment argued that the Coast Guard's proposal for nitropropane is too restrictive and ". . . not justified by any published technical data." The Coast Guard proposed that nitropropane be treated as follows:

a. It could not be carried in deck tanks.

b. It could not be carried in heated tanks, adjacent to heated cargoes, or adjacent to hold spaces containing tanks with heated cargoes.

c. If carried in a tank containing heating coils, the heating supply to the coils must be disconnected to prevent inadvertent heating.

The Coast Guard, in effect, is safeguarding against the possibility of this cargo becoming heated while carried on the tankship. The comment is correct in saying that the Coast Guard has no data to show that nitropropane is more hazardous when heated above ambient temperatures. In fact, the Coast Guard has data to show that nitropropane is not shock sensitive, even when heated, some of which the commenter furnished. However, nitromethane sometimes detonates violently when heated, and the chemical similarity of the two products raises the possibility that nitropropane might behave similarly. While some tests have shown that it will not, there is no assurance that those test procedures adequately simulate all the conditions under which the product might detonate. Similar testing difficulties were encountered with nitromethane. Until further testing has demonstrated that nitropropane will not behave similarly to nitromethane when heated under certain conditions, the relatively minor restrictions on the carriage of nitropropane will be retained.

Besides the changes to the original proposal described in this preamble, the final rule corrects many typographical errors.

This rule has been reviewed for economic effects under the Department of Transportation "Policies to Improve Analysis and Review of Regulations" (41 FR 16200). When doing so, the Coast Guard reviewed the design of both new and existing chemical ships under U.S. flag and those foreign ships operating in U.S. waters. As mentioned previously, the Coast Guard estimates that the rule will cost about $15,000,000 over the approximately one year period owners of existing vessels will have to meet the requirements. The rule will reduce the exposure of the crew and others near the vessel to cargo hazards. As a side effect, the rule may also reduce the likelihood of cargoes being spilled into waterways, though the incidence of spillage of these particular cargoes has been very low. Because the rule applies to all tankships carrying the listed cargoes in U.S. waters, and because the rule becomes fully effective on the same day as does the IMCO Chemical Code, no tankship will be put at an economic disadvantage in trying to meet the Chemical Code.

In consideration of the foregoing, Chapter I of Title 46 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended by revoking Part 39; amending Parts 1, 2, 24, 30, 31, 32, 35, 40, 42, 56, 90, 91, 98, 105, 110, and 151 thereof; and adding a new Part 153 as follows:

Subpart A—General

§ 153.1 Applicability.

This part prescribes rules that apply to tankships[1] that have on board the cargoes described in § 153.5 for the purpose of implementing the requirements in the law governing vessels having on board flammable or combustible liquid cargo in bulk (46 U.S.C. 391a) and the law governing the carriage of explosives and other dangerous articles in bulk (46 U.S.C. 170).

§ 153.2 Definitions.

As used in this part:

"Accommodation spaces" means halls, dining rooms, lounges, lavatories, cabins, staterooms, offices, hospitals, cinemas, game and hobby rooms, pantries containing no cooking appliances, and similar permanently enclosed spaces.

"B" means the breadth of the vessel in meters and is defined in § 42.13–15(d) of this chapter.

"Cargo containment system" means a cargo tank, its cargo piping system, its venting system, and its gauging system.

"Cargo handling space" means an enclosed space that must be entered during a routine loading, carriage, or discharge of cargo and that contains an element of the cargo containment system having a seal or packing to prevent the escape of cargo, such as a valve, cargo pump, or cargo vapor compressor.

"Cargo piping system" means a tankship's permanently installed piping arrangement, including any valves and pumps, that carries cargo to or from a cargo tank.

"Cargo tank" means a tank that—

(1) Is part of or permanently affixed to a tankship; and

(2) Carries a cargo described in § 153.5 in any quantity, including residual liquid or vapor.

"Closed gauging system" means an arrangement for gauging the amount of cargo in a tank, such as a float and tape or a magnetically coupled float and indicator, that does not have any opening through which cargo vapor or liquid can escape.

"Combustible" is defined in § 30.10–15 of this chapter.

"Commandant" means Commandant of the U.S. Coast Guard.

The term is often followed by a mailing code in parentheses. The mailing address should include any mailing code and should be written as follows:

Commandant (mailing code), U.S. Coast Guard, Washington, D.C. 20590.

"Dedicated ballast tank" means a tank that is used only for clean ballast.

"Emergency shutdown station" means a part of the tankship where the required emergency shutdown controls are clustered.

"Intank cargo pump" means a pump—

(1) Located within the cargo tank it serves; and

(2) Whose piping passes through only the top of the cargo tank.

"Integral tank" means a cargo tank that also is part of or is formed in part by the vessel's hull structure so that the tank and the hull may be stressed by the same loads.

(2) The tankship meets the recommendations in the IMCO Chemical Code; and

(3) The tankship meets the requirements of this part.

(b) The IMCO Certificate expires on the day when the tankship's Certificate of Inspection expires.

[1] Generally, the IMCO Certificate is sufficient for the Coast Guard to endorse the vessel's Letter of Compliance with the names of those cargoes in table I that are listed on the IMCO Certificate. The IMCO Certificate would not be sufficient when the Certificate authorizes a cargo that is not permitted in U.S. waters, when the Certificate is in error or waives part of the Code, when the regulations in this part exceed those of the Code, or similar situations.

Subpart B—Requirements

GENERAL

§ 153.15 Requirements for U.S. flag vessel permits.

To have its Certificate of Inspection endorsed with the name of a cargo listed in table I, a U.S. flag vessel must meet the requirements for the cargo in this subpart.

To have its Letter of Compliance endorsed with the name of a cargo listed in table I, a foreign flag vessel must:

(a) Have an IMCO Certificate, if the flag administration issues IMCO Certificates, endorsed with the name of the cargo and meet any specific requirements in this subpart that the Commandant (G–MHM) may prescribe; or

(b) Meet the requirements of this subpart and § 30.01–5(e) of this chapter.

HULL TYPE CALCULATIONS

§ 153.20 Type I hull calculations.

Calculations for a type I hull must show that it can survive damage as described in §§ 153.32 and 153.34 to any location.

§ 153.21 Type II hull calculations.

(a) Calculations for a type II hull 150 m (approx. 492 ft) or less in length must show that it can survive damage described in §§ 153.32 and 153.34 to any location except the transverse bulkheads bounding an aft machinery space.

(b) Calculations for a type II hull greater than 150 m (approx. 492 ft) in length must show that it can survive damage described in §§ 153.32 and 153.34 to any location.

§ 153.22 Type III hull calculations.

(a) Calculations for a type III hull less than 125 m (approx. 410 ft) in length must show that it can survive damage described in §§ 153.32 and 153.34 to any location except to an aft machinery space.

(b) Calculations for a type III hull 125 m (approx. 410 ft) or greater in length must show that it can survive damage as described in §§ 153.32 and 153.34 to any location except the transverse bulkheads bounding an aft machinery space.

§ 153.30 Permeability of spaces.

(a) As used in this section, "permeability of a floodable space" means the ratio of the volume within the space that is assumed to be occupied by water to the total volume of the space.

(b) The permeability of a floodable space must be assumed as follows:

(1) Machinery spaces: 0.85 unless a permeability of less than 0.85 is justified in detail.

(2) Storerooms: 0.60.

(3) Accommodation spaces: 0.95.

(4) Voids: 0.95.

(5) Tanks containing consumable liquids: 0.95 or 0.0, whichever is the more disabling.

(6) Tanks containing liquids other than consumables: 0.95 or 0.0, the permeability of partially filled tanks to be consistent with the density and amount of liquid carried in the tank.

(c) If a cargo tank would be penetrated under the assumed damage, the cargo tank must be assumed to lose all cargo and refill with salt water up to the level of the tankship's final plane of equilibrium.

§ 153.31 Free surface effect.

(a) The virtual increase in the vertical center of gravity of the tankship due to a liquid in a space must be determined by calculating either:

(1) The free surface effect with the ship assumed heeled 5° from the vertical; or

(2) The shift of the center of gravity of the liquid by the moment of transference method.

(b) In calculating the free surface effect of consumable liquids, the following must be done:

(1) For each type of liquid, at least one transverse pair of wing tanks or a single centerline tank must be assumed to have a free surface.

(2) Of the two assumptions in subparagraph (1), the one having the greater free surface effect must be chosen.

§ 153.32 Damage.

(a) Calculations must assume both collision and grounding damage, separately; and the damage must consist of the most disabling penetration up to and including penetrations having the following dimensions:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| (1) Collision penetration: | | |
| (i) Longitudinal extent | | (1/3)$L^{2/3}$ or 14.5 m (approx. 0.495$L^{2/3}$ or 47.6 ft), whichever is less. |
| (ii) Transverse extent: (inboard from the ship's side at right angles to the centerline at the level of the summer loadline assigned under subchapter E). | | B/5 or 11.5 m (approx. 37.7 ft), whichever is less. |
| (iii) Vertical extent | | From the base line upwards without limits. |
| (2) Grounding penetration: | | |
| At the forward end but excluding any damage aft of a point 0.3L aft of forward perpendicular. | | At any other longitudinal position. |
| (i) Longitudinal | L/10 | L/10 or 5 m (approx. 16.4 ft), whichever is less. |
| (ii) Transverse | B/6 or 10 m (approx. 32.8 ft), whichever is less. | 5 m (approx. 16.4 ft). |
| (iii) Vertical extent from the base line. | B/15 or 6 m (approx. 19.7 ft), whichever is less. | B/15 or 6 m (approx. 19.7 ft), whichever is less. |

(b) If the damage assumption excludes a transverse bulkhead bounding a machinery space, the machinery space must be assumed to be flooded as a case separate from the damage assumption.

(c) Damage must be assumed to include transverse bulkheads spaced more closely than the longitudinal extent of damage specified in paragraphs (a)(1)(i) and (a)(2)(i) of this section.

§ 153.34 Survival.

A tankship is presumed to survive if it meets the following conditions:

(a) Heel angle. (1) Except as described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, in the final condition of flooding the angle of heel must not exceed 15° (17° if no part of the freeboard deck is immersed).

(2) The Commandant (G-MMT) considers on a case by case basis vessels 150m or less in length having heel angles greater than 17° but less than 25°.

(b) Final waterline. The final waterline, taking into account sinkage, heel, and trim, must be below the lower edge of openings such as air pipes and openings closed by weathertight doors or hatch covers. The following types of openings may be submerged when the tankship is at the final waterline:

(1) Openings covered by watertight manhole covers or watertight flush scuttles.

(2) Small watertight cargo tank hatch covers.

(3) Remotely operated watertight sliding doors.

(4) Side scuttles of the non-opening type.

(c) Range of stability. Through an angle of 20° beyond its position of equilibrium after flooding, a tankship must meet the following conditions:

(1) The righting lever curve must be positive.

(2) The maximum of the righting lever curve must be at least 10 cm (approx. 4 in.).

(3) Each submerged opening must be weathertight.

(d) Metacentric height. After flooding, the tankship's metacentric height must be at least 5 cm (approx. 2 in.) when the ship is in the upright position.

(e) Watertight superstructure. Watertight superstructure beyond the extent of damage adds to the stability of the tankship only if it is separated from the damaged space by a watertight bulkhead.

(f) Progressive flooding. Pipes, ducts, or tunnels within the assumed extent of damage must be either:

(1) Equipped with arrangements such as stop check valves to prevent progressive flooding in other spaces with which they connect; or

(2) Assumed to flood the spaces with which they connect.

(g) Equalization arrangements. Flooding equalization arrangements requiring mechanical operation such as valves or cross flooding lines may not be assumed to reduce the angle of heel. (However, note that spaces joined by ducts of large cross section may be assumed to be common spaces.)

(h) Intermediate stages of flooding. If it is not clear that a tankship meets the requirements of this section throughout intermediate stages of flooding, the shipowner shall furnish calculations showing that the tankship meets these requirements in intermediate flooding if requested by the Commandant (G-MMT).

§ 153.35 Loadline requirements.

General Vessel Arrangements

§ 153.217 Access to void spaces.

Any access opening to a void space must meet the requirements for a cargo tank access in §§ 153.254 (b), (c), and (d) if:

(a) The void space is adjacent to a cargo containment system; or

(b) A part of a cargo containment system lies within the void space.

Cargo Containment Systems

§ 153.230 Type I system.

A type I containment system must meet the following requirements:

(a) It must be in a type I hull.

(b) Except as described in § 153.235:

(1) It may be no closer to the tankship's shell than 76 cm (approx. 29.9 in.); and

The person in charge of cargo transfer may neither begin nor continue the transfer of a flammable or combustible cargo while packaged cargo or ship's stores are transferred unless transfer of the packaged cargo or ship's stores does not hazard transfer of the flammable or combustible cargo.

§ 153.977 Supervision of cargo transfer.

The person in charge of cargo transfer shall—

(a) Supervise the operation of cargo system valves; and

(b) Monitor the cargo loading rate to avoid overfilling cargo tanks.

(a) No person may remove the cover of a sounding tube unless he has authorization from the person in charge of cargo transfer.

(b) The person in charge of cargo transfer may not authorize removal of the cover from a sounding tube gauge unless all tank pressure has been relieved through the tank's venting system.

§ 153.981 Leaving room in tank for cargo expansion.

The person in charge of cargo transfer shall ensure that the amount of cargo in a tank does not exceed the tank's capacity at any ambient temperature between −18° C (approx. 0° F) and 46° C (approx. 115° F).

§ 153.983 Termination procedures.

Upon completion of the transfer operation, the person in charge of cargo transfer shall ensure that—

(b) The transfer lines and hoses are drained of cargo, either into the tank or back to the transfer terminal;

(c) Any electrical bonding between the vessel and the shore facility is broken only after the cargo hose is disconnected and all spills removed; and

(d) Each vent system is returned to its nonloading configuration.

Special Cargo Procedures

§ 153.1000 Special operating requirements for cargoes reactive with water.

When table I refers to this section, the master must ensure that the cargo—

(a) Is carried only in a containment system completely isolated from any systems containing water, such as slop tanks, ballast tanks, cargo tanks containing slops or ballast, their vent lines or piping; and

(b) Is separated by double walls, such as cofferdams and piping tunnels, from any system containing water, as for example those described in paragraph (a) of this section.

§ 153.1010 Alkylene oxides.

(a) Before he loads a cargo containment system with a cargo referenced to this section in table I, the person in charge of cargo transfer shall do the following:

(1) Inspect the cargo tank to be sure it does not have heavy rust accumulations on its walls or bottom.

(2) Purge the containment system until the oxygen content of the cargo tank is less than 2% by volume.

(b) The person in charge of an alkylene oxide cargo transfer shall ensure that—

(1) No alkylene oxide vapor or liquid is released to the atmosphere during cargo transfer;

(2) No vapor return system connected to an alkylene oxide containment system is at the same time connected to another containment system;

(3) Alkylene oxide is discharged only by an intank cargo pump or inert gas displacement;

(4) Transfer hose is approved by the Commandant (G-MMT) under § 153.530 (o) for alkylene oxide transfer and is marked "For Alkylene Oxide Transfer Only"; and

(5) A water hose is laid out on deck with water pressure to the nozzle, and all alkylene oxide spillages are washed away immediately.

(c) After loading alkylene oxides, the person in charge of cargo transfer shall check the composition of the vapor space above the alkylene oxide and purge the space with inert gas until the oxygen content is below 2% by volume.

§ 153.1011 Use of alkylene oxide containment systems and hoses with other products.

(a) An alkylene oxide may not be carried in a containment system that, within the previous five loadings, has carried a cargo in paragraph (d) unless the containment system has been cleaned to the satisfaction of a Coast Guard Marine Inspector or a person specifically authorized by the Commandant (G-MHM) to approve oxide tank cleaning.

(b) No other cargo may be loaded into a containment system which has carried an alkylene oxide unless the containment system has been cleaned of alkylene oxide to the satisfaction of a Coast Guard Marine Inspector or a person specifically authorized by the Commandant (G-MHM) to approve oxide tank cleaning.

(c) No person may use a hose marked "For Alkylene Oxide Transfer Only" for the transfer of a cargo other than an alkylene oxide.

(d) The following cargoes are particularly reactive with alkylene oxides:

(1) Ammonia.
(2) Ammonia solutions.
(3) Amines.
(4) Alcoholamines.
(5) Inorganic acids.
(6) Organic acids.
(7) Phenolic compounds.
(8) Monomers.
(9) Compounds containing a halogen.
(10) Compounds containing sulfur except sulfates or sulfonates yielding a solution having a pH between 7.5 and 6.5 when mixed with water in all proportions.
(11) Caustic soda and caustic potash.

§ 153.1020 Unusually toxic cargoes.

(a) No person may load or carry a cargo referenced to this section in table I unless the cargo's piping system is isolated from piping systems carrying cargoes not referred to this section as shown in the piping plan required by § 153.910.

(b) The master shall ensure that no heat transfer medium that has been circulated through a cargo referenced to this section in table I is circulated through a cargo not referenced to this section unless he determines the medium to be uncontaminated with cargo.

(c) No person may discharge overboard condensed steam from the heating system of a cargo referenced to this section in table I unless he first determines the condensate to be uncontaminated with cargo.

§ 153.1025 Motor fuel antiknock compounds.

(a) No person may load or carry any other cargo in a containment system approved for motor fuel antiknock compounds containing lead alkyls except a cargo to be used solely in the manufacture of motor fuel antiknock compounds.

(b) The master shall ensure that no person enter a pumproom or void space that contains piping from a containment system approved for motor fuel antiknock compounds containing lead alkyls unless—

(1) The pumproom or void space atmosphere has been analyzed for its lead content and found to be less than 0.15 mg/m³; or

(2) The person follows the procedures for entering a cargo tank described in paragraph (c).

(c) No person may enter a cargo tank endorsed for motor fuel antiknock compounds containing lead alkyls without prior specific authorization from the Commandant (G-MHM). This authorization may be obtained by telephone ((202) 426-1217) if the person has previously obtained approval for the cargo tank entry procedure from the Commandant (G-MHM).

(d) No person may enter a cargo tank endorsed for motor fuel anti-knock compounds if he does not follow the conditions in the authorization under paragraph (c).

§ 153.1035 Stabilization of acetone cyanohydrin.

No person may operate a tankship having on board acetone cyanohydrin unless the acetone cyanohydrin is stabilized with an inorganic acid.

§ 153.1040 Carbon disulfide.

(a) No person may load, carry, or discharge carbon disulfide unless the cargo tank has a water pad over the cargo of at least one meter (approx. 40 in.).

(b) The person in charge of a carbon disulfide transfer operation shall ensure that carbon disulfide is discharged only by displacement or intank cargo pump.

(c) No person may remove a cargo pump for a containment system that carries carbon disulfide unless—

(1) The containment system has a gas free certificate issued under the standards in § 35.01-1 of this chapter; or

(2) The vapor space in the pump well is filled with water.

§ 153.1045 Inorganic acids.

When table I refers to this section, the person in charge of cargo transfer shall ensure that the legends "NO SMOKING" and "NO OPEN LIGHTS" are displayed on the warning sign required in § 153.955(a) when cargo is transferred.

§ 153.1046 Sulfuric acid.

§ 153.1052 Carriage of other cargoes in acid tanks.

§ 153.1055 Nitropropane.

(a) No person may load or carry 1- or 2-nitropropane in a tank having heating coils unless the heating coils have been isolated from their heat source by completely disconnecting them, for example, by inserting a blanking plate or by removing a spool piece in a steam supply line.

(b) No person may load or carry 1- or 2-nitropropane in a tank located in a hold, or adjacent to a cargo, whose temperature exceeds 50° C (approx. 122° F).

MAINTENANCE

§ 153.1500 Venting system rupture disks.

§ 153.1502 Fixed ballast relocation.

No person may remove or relocate fixed ballast unless—

(a) the change is approved by the Commandant (G-MMT); or

(b) the ballast is temporarily moved under the supervision of a Coast Guard Marine Inspector for examination or repair of the tankship.

§ 153.1504 Inspection of personnel emergency and safety equipment.

The master shall ensure that the personnel emergency and safety equipment required by § 153.214 is inspected each 30 days and found to be in good condition and operating properly.

40. Protection Support Files and Associated Records—NRC.

These systems of records are those systems maintained by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission which contain personal information about individuals, and from which such information can be retrieved by reference to an individual identified.

The notice for each system of records states the name and location of the record system, the authority for and manner of its operation, the categories of individuals which it covers, the types of records which it contains, the sources of informaton in those records, and the proposed "routine use" of each system of records. Each notice also includes the business address of the NRC official who will inform interested persons of the procedures whereby they may gain access to and correct records pertaining to themselves.

One of the purposes of the Privacy Act, as stated in Section 2(b)(4), is to provide certain safeguards for an individual against an invasion of personal privacy by requiring Federal agencies to "... disseminate any record of identifiable personal information in a manner that assures that such action is for a necessary and lawful purpose, that information is current and accurate for its intended use, and that adequate safeguards are provided to prevent misuse of such information." The NRC intends to follow such principles in transferring information to another agency or individual as a "routine use", including assuring that the information is relevant for the purposes for which it is transferred.

Prefatory Statement of General Routine Uses

The following routine uses apply to each system of records notice set forth below which specifically references this Prefatory Statement.

1. In the event that a system of records maintained by the NRC to carry out its functions indicates a violation or potential violation of law, whether civil, criminal or regulatory in nature, and whether arising by general statute or particular program statute, or by regulation, rule or order issued pursuant thereto, the relevant records in the system of records may be referred, as a routine use, to the appropriate agency, whether Federal, State, or local, charged with the responsibility of investigating or prosecuting such violation or charged with enforcing or implementing the statute, or rule, regulation or order issued pursuant thereto.

2. A record from this system of records may be disclosed, as a routine use, to a Federal, State or local agency maintaining civil, criminal or other relevant enforcement information or other pertinent information, such as current licenses, if necessary to obtain information relevant to a NRC decision concerning the hiring or retention of an employee, the issuance of a security clearance, the letting of a contract, or the issuance of a license, grant or other benefit.

3. A record from this system of records may be disclosed, as a routine use, to a federal agency, in response to its request, in connection with the hiring or retention of an employee, the issurance of a security clearance, the reporting of an investigation of an employee, the letting of a contract, or the issuance of a license, grant, or other benefit by the requesting agency, to the extent that the information is relevant and necessary to the requesting agency's decision on the matter.

4. A record from this system of records may be disclosed as a routine use, in the course of discovery and in presenting evidence to a court, magistrate or administrative tribunal, including disclosures to opposing counsel in the course of settlement negotiations.
