

MTC-00007630

From: Rodney Haas
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:56pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom this may concern,
 Frankly I cannot believe this lawsuit lasted this long. There is no question that an excessive and unfair settlement will further destroy the software business. Microsoft has been the driving force for bringing the price of both software and hardware down. Microsoft not only has not hurt the consumer, but has radically helped.

You only need to look @ apple as a comparison. Apple has indeed harmed the consumer with unreasonably high prices. Apple has clearly harmed innovation except for the chosen few. Microsoft has in fact had open and published interfaces to their software for years. I have used this interface many times to extend my vertical market applications. This has allowed me to add massive power to my applications without having to charge my clients.

In closing I would highly suggest that you focus your energy on something else. While some of Microsoft's competitors have been hurt, must are far to large to even qualify under the monopoly protections. Companies like Netscape were clearly not hurt selling for more than 4 billion dollars. Many other companies that have gone away, have done so because of bad UI, marketing and faulty feature sets.

Rodney Haas
 rodneyhaas@hotmail.com rhaas@directlink.net

MTC-00007631

From: Beckers
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:56pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ et al:
 Please help stop the feeding frenzy at Microsoft and consumers' expense. Microsoft delivers fairly sophisticated products at reasonable prices, and do not manufacture hardware other than basic peripherals such as keyboards. We need them creating superior products to help balance our trade deficit. Instead, you might want to investigate "proprietary" software products by companies who really want to prevent the establishment of industry standards and protocols.

Rick Becker
 California, USA

MTC-00007632

From: Richard Paietta
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:57pm
 Subject: The Settlement

Dear Sirs:
 This suit should have never been undertaken in the first place. It was done by the previous administration for the benefit of Microsoft's competition. At no time was the public hurt or at issue in this case. This action has cost the taxpayers millions of dollars for the benefit of a few (e.g. AOL, Sun, Etc). Not only has this cost the American taxpayer in dollars that could have been spent elsewhere it has cause the present downturn in our economy. DOJ was right in settling the issue and the remaining 9 states that are home to Microsoft's competition should be forced to settle. This was a case of bad law and the legal system showing its worst side. There is no excuse for the Federal Government having to act as the protector of Microsoft's competition. The law was put on the books for the protection of the public. The market place in a free economy determines who stays in business and who does not. This suit has also cost many of us who have invested in Microsoft for their retirement. What do you intend to do to help, since this has cost many large sums of their retirement investments. Settle the case and ask to judge to force a resolution with the hold out states. It is time that DOJ corrected the mistakes of the past administration.

Richard L. Paietta
 PaiettaR@msn.com

MTC-00007633

From: Babafar@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:57pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle with Microsoft and end this litigation. The settlement is fair and reasonable to all parties. It will be good for the economy. Thank you.

Marge Ferrari, 135 Westwood Drive,
 Novato, CA 94945

MTC-00007634

From: Maverick775@cs.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:58pm
 Subject: microsoft settlement

Please settle this case ASAP. I am very tired of disgruntled companies who are not capable of competing on their own trying to use the courts to further their position in the world of tough competition. I thought capitalism is what made us a free enterprise nation, and competition is what enables the best of the best to help build this country on a world wide basis. I still do not understand why the previous administration wanted to punish a remarkable company like Microsoft. Let's get on with life, stop wasting taxpayers money and let the best companies win. That's what it is all about.

Michael D. Arndt

MTC-00007635

From: Jerome Montez
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:59pm
 Subject: Settlement

My opinion on this case is leave private enterprizes alone the government should stay out of it all they manage to do is drive up prices for the consumer

MTC-00007636

From: EthelGee@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:59pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the Microsoft settlement is appropriate and should be enacted.

Ethel Gardner
 175 e. 74 st.
 New York, N.Y.

MTC-00007637

From: Marx Heller
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:58pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to know who determined that the break up of Microsoft would be in the consumers best interest. I would bet it came from a disgruntled competitor like Netscape. Surely it could not have come from the same people that thought that breaking up AT&T was good for the consumer. I feel that to penalize Microsoft for continuing to develop new technology is wrong. It sends a message to others that may want to develop and market a product, that if they get too big or too popular and the competition can no longer provide an equal quality product for a competitive price, that someone well sue them and try to destroy what they have done. If I am successful, the government will take away that success. Enough is enough! Why is it that the courts have recommended a settlement and Microsoft has agreed to it, that their are still those that oppose that settlement. They seem intent on destroying Microsoft. How much do those people give back to the people responsible for their success? How much do they give to charity? How much? I feel that if Microsoft continues to come under assault, that the inevitable result will be less new innovation and new technology and higher prices to pay for it. I am sorry, but my idea of the American Way is not to Pay more for less!

Marx Heller Williamstown NJ heller@eticomm.net
 I VOTE!!

MTC-00007638

From: Zelia Compton
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 10:59pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Please settle now.

MTC-00007639

From: Gus407@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 11:00pm
 Subject: Settlement

In all of this litigation, I have never seen one consumer come forward and actually state that the packages that Microsoft bundled together hurt them. I for one am glad Microsoft put these programs together on my computer. If I would have had to go out and purchase these programs separately, I probably would not have a computer today.

Thank You;
 Gus407@aol.com

MTC-00007640

From: Bruzer703@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/2/02 11:00pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a middle class worker, saving for retirement...with a fair amount of Microsoft stock in my portfolio. Ever since the Reno/Clinton "Justice" Department abused Microsoft through the courts, I have had my retirement portfolio abused also. The settlement has been accepted by DOJ and Microsoft, our nation's economy has already taken enough hits, let Microsoft and the American economy serve our interests by growth and innovation. We have gotten rid of Reno/Clinton, now let's get rid of the droppings they afflicted us with.

END THIS NOW!!

Sincerely,
Kevin Smith

MTC-00007641

From: Robert Heffner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 10:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ:

I am writing to urge settlement of the Microsoft antitrust case now. I have personally benefited enormously in my work from the greater efficiency of Microsoft products, particularly the standardization of the PC platform. Although I am not a lawyer, I believe that this was a dubious case from the beginning, pushed by Microsoft competitors who had been soundly trounced in the marketplace.

Ending this case now, when our country is struggling to regain economic growth, is in the best interest of our nation's international competitive posture, and, hence, very much in the public interest.

Thank you.

Robert H. Heffner

MTC-00007642

From: WEckstine@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to stop harrasing US business. There is no harm to the public by completing the Microsoft settlement now. To the contrary there is more harm to consumers and America to keep up the battle to assist a few of the competors.

MTC-00007643

From: Bmnov20@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:01pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

PLEASE settle this lawsuit with Microsoft with no further litigation. It has gone on long enough for a company that I feel has followed the path that the strength of this country was built on. They started from nothing and built it into a very successful company. If other companies can't compete then they shouldn't be crybabies, but find a different product or become better competitors without running to the fed gov to solve their problems. Bill Linker PS: this is the first time I have tried to make my voice heard but I feel strongly enough about this to respond.

MTC-00007644

From: TweedieRoy@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:02pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,

I urge you to proceed and complete the Microsoft settlement during the first quarter of 2002. This long standing settlement need to be resolved NOW. I also urge you to accept Microsoft's offer to supply computer equipment to our school system and NOT cash. The use of additional cash in our schools will not improve the level of education of our children—computers will. I am suspicious of the motives of our administrators that the cash may be used for their own pet projects and wage increases. I don't trust the integrity of our school administrators. Throwing $$$ at the education system will not improved the education level of our children, it hasn't in the past i.e., lottery etc.

Regards,
Roy Tweedie

MTC-00007645

From: Brownbearman@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:03pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

microsoft never did anything wrong...in business you deserve what you invent and earn from that invention!

MTC-00007646

From: larry novak
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:03pm
Subject: Enough already, callit quits

Dear Sirs'

Enough of this wasting the tax payers money, so that a few lawyers can make a killing of a bigger settlement. The settlement is fair —end it all.

Thank you
Lawrence Novak

MTC-00007647

From: Candace Hawthorne
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Atty. General Ashcroft,

I am writing to commend the DOJ in it's wise settlement with Microsoft. I feel this needs to be wrapped up and completed and quickly as possible for the sake of the technology sector, our economy and Microsoft to restore the status quo. If it is at all possible for the DOJ to intervene with the nine states still pursuing further remedies of Microsoft that would also be supported. Without Microsoft we would not have as a tool in every home the PC, we never would have had the ease of use we have as well. I feel it is a HUGE mistake to a country to go after it's crown jewel. Happy New Year.

Sincerely,
Candace Hawthorne
Metairie, LA 70001

MTC-00007648

From: Rose Rothe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 10:58pm
Subject: Settlement

Enough is enough. Let this case be settled now. This company has done more for the American economy and for all us who are computer folks. If it were not for Microsoft, we would not be where we are now. It takes people who are innovative and visionaries to bring forth products as Microsoft has brought to the world. Again, please put an end to this case without damaging this inovative, visionary company.

Rose and Dietmar Rothe
Cardiff-by-the-Sea, CA villatucan@sand.net

MTC-00007649

From: Lenk10@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I firmly believe that the DOJ should put the Microsoft litigation behind us. Microsoft has continually produced an excellent product with each new release better than its previous software and generally at lower prices. Microsoft has done this while incurring substantial costs associated with litigation and settlements. As a user I have never been forced to use Microsoft software, I have always had available to me a multiplicity of software to choose from and have selected support software based upon capability and support.

I implore DOJ to let Microsoft get on with its primary business. From a user's point of view they have never been a monopoly as alternatives were always available to me, Microsoft was just a cause which the Janet Reno DOJ used to keep people from asking why some other more pertinent issues were not being investigated.

Sincerely
Dr. L. Kreuter

MTC-00007650

From: pernoid
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:08pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

The Microsoft settlement reached by the Court Of Appeals should stand & be the final end of the Microsoft litigation. This will definitely be in the interest of consumers, the industry and the American economy.

Glory Perno

MTC-00007651

From: Borden Nettles
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:09pm
Subject: Microsoft

Please move on to productive work and get out of Microsoft business. I have been ashamed of our government in this case because I believe the entire lawsuit was based on political motives rather than the law. I further believe the USDOJ action and the resulting media coverage in this case has in part been responsible for reduced confidence in the stock market. Thank you for recording my opinion. I am
Borden Nettles
Franklin, TN 37067

MTC-00007652

From: Charles H Caplan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:10pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Let's get this over with. Approve it as it stands and let's get on with business.

Charles H Caplan
Bellevue, WA

MTC-00007653

From: JCDMORT@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Case

I want to applaud the Federal Government's settlement of the Microsoft case and hope that the agreement will be accepted by the Fed and the States. Please use this as one vote to continue on the path that has been proposed and let Microsoft get on with business.

It is my opinion that the competitors of Microsoft have continued stir the pot and to encourage the remaining states that have not settled to ask for more limitations. The continued litigation that these remaining groups are attempting is causing confusion over Windows development for both third party developers and users of Windows. Wasn't the example of the IBM case where billions were wasted in trying to limit the size and power of a wealthy Corporation enough to show that the market place will do in time what will be done without Govt. Intervention?

It seems that this is a case of State Government attempting to squeeze a successful Corporation for funds because the source of their usual funding (Sales Tax) is drying up. What possible good can the States litigation do for the consumers?

The Clinton Administration's insistence of following through with this litigation has cost Technical stockholders a considerable amount in share prices over the life of the litigation. Additionally, the cost of the actual litigation has had to be a very costly drain on Federal Govt and Microsoft's resources. It would seem that this effort would be better spent getting bad guys rather than chasing one of our star Corporations in the Technical world. Now to have the States trying to squeeze more from Microsoft is only depressing the Tech market and innovation even more.

Please curb the Antitrust Division and stop these unnecessary probes of our successful Corporations such as IBM, Microsoft, Intel, AOL, Cisco and AT&T. Govt. should not be creating problems for our leading Tech Corporations that have put America in the leading position in the Information Processing Industry.

MTC-00007654

From: Greg Sprinkle
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Renata B. Hesse
Antitrust Division
U.S. Department of Justice
601 D Street NW
Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20530-0001

Subject: Comments on the Proposed Settlement—Microsoft vs USA

For the public record:
As someone intimately familiar with computing in general and the computer industry as a whole, I have witnessed firsthand the adverse effects of Microsoft's monopolistic business practices and their devastating effects on consumers.

In the last year alone, the computing public has lost one of the most promising consumer orientated desktop operating systems to come along in the last ten years, namely BeOS. BeOS had technology that simplified the computing experience for the average consumer, while at the same time had technology that was vastly superior to what is available under the Windows operating systems. The single most reason that BeOS could not succeed in the market, is the absolute death grip Microsoft has on OEM's and total control of the boot loader process.

As a consumer of computer software and a concerned citizen of the United States, I have a real problem with the proposed settlement. I cannot see how the proposed settlement even pretends to remedy the antitrust violations for which Microsoft has been found guilty. The proposed settlement contains no penalties—monetarily or otherwise. None! It does not nothing to provide further competition or halt Microsoft's continuing maintenance of their monopoly of desktop operating systems. Perhaps the most disturbing part of the proposed settlement is the provision for Microsoft to determine who their competition actually is in regards to revealing API's and source code.

While I believe the initial pursuit to break up the company was the best course of action, I would be willing to accept the alternatives being put forth by the nine states who have refused to endorse the proposed settlement. To add, the barest minimum of remedies possible should include the following features:

* Any remedy seeking to prevent an extension of Microsoft's monopoly must place Microsoft products as extra-cost options in the purchase of new computers. [Consumers who do not wish to purchase Microsoft products are not forced to do so].

* Prices of Microsoft products through OEM's must mirror those same products in the retail channel so that products can compete on merit and not price alone. [Consumers must have a choice in competing office suite products at similar prices].

* In addition to opening the Windows application program interface [API's], the specifications of Microsoft's present and future document file formats must be made public, so that documents created in Microsoft applications may be read by programs from other makers, on Microsoft's or other operating systems. [No consumer or organization must choose Microsoft products based on proprietary file formats or falsely perceived standards].

* Any and all Microsoft networking protocols must be published in full and approved by an independent network protocol body. Furthermore, the controlling body should be a government agency such as the National Bureau of Standards and should apply to the industry as a whole. [All protocols must be available through an "open source" method of development with a small number of comitters to fix bugs and plug security leaks].

* Microsoft must be made to realize that other operating systems have the right to exist and they shall do nothing to erase any or all entries in the master boot record. [Microsoft operating systems shall include utility software to enable dual booting of other operating systems when detected on computer hard drives—not just their own].

The proposed settlement seems to have been made in haste and in light of the attacks of September 11th with little or no thought for the long range implications—for the economy or national security. Many have accused the DOJ of a "sellout", but my opinion is that they are seeking a quick fix in order to revitalize economic growth.

In a study released a year ago by the highly respected Center for Strategic and International Studies, Microsoft's operating systems actually poses a national security risk. Open source advocates have made a compelling case that prove publicly available and open programs, protocols and file formats are much more secure. We are a nation of computers, networks and a vast dependence on technology and as such, are a prime target for cyber terrorism attacks of untold proportions.

I believe we, as a nation, are at a critical junction at the cross roads of the information technology age. In many respects, we are in the same position as that of the early days of the industrial revolution—where we had railroads of different scales, track widths, etc. In the case of the railroads, the problem was one of standardization and it caused loss of productivity and timely delivery. The computer industry desperately needs standardization in the same way; in protocols, file formats and programs. This, I believe, is the single most important part of this whole issue and the fact that Microsoft's sole business plan can be summed up as "control the standard".

In closing, all are surely in agreement that the resolution of this case is of great importance, not just now but for many years to come. This suggests a careful and deliberate penalty is far more important to the health of the nation than is a hasty one.

Respectfully Submitted,
Greg Sprinkle 3907 Lanyard Ct.
Chester, VA 23831-7379
email: hornsmoker@yahoo.com

MTC-00007655

From: Lavajup@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:12pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

sirs, this suit has been tried to death.the remaining states are arguing for microsfts competitors in their home states not for some imagined u.s. citizens who supposedly are being overcharged for microsoft products.these competitors should compete with their products against microsoft not with their lawyers.let us comply with the decision already in place and get out on with moving business ahead.

sincerely,
george o. mills
lavallette,nj 08735

MTC-00007656

From: James Rhodes
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Selltment

It is my firm belief that any more litigation against Microsoft would once more plunge the tec. markets into another freefall just as two years ago when weak insecure corporations turned to the Clinton justice department for help. If the government wants to bring on another down cycle, just keep pounding away at the one company that truly knows how to innovate and develop solutions to complex problems. Why is it that people who know how to get things done are always being attacked by those who can't? The more I see the law being applied in this country, the less respect I have for it. Lawyers, journalists, politicians—they build nothing yet suck the life out of everything.

MTC-00007657

From: Paul Monson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs;

I have been a computer user for many years. I owned one of the first IBM-PC produced and have continually upgraded. I remember the days when competing Operating Systems were available and I am glad those days are gone. It was a nightmare having software that would work under one operating system but not another. I know monopolies in general are undesirable but in the case of computer operating systems they are much better than the alternative. I also do not have any problem with "bundling" of the internet browser. For many years I used Netscape as my preferred browser even when Internet Explorer was the default browser installed with the Microsoft operating system. I have now switched to Internet Explorer simply because it is now better than Netscape, but I would still be running Netscape if it were superior.

I think it is time to lay-off of Microsoft, I believe that most people feel as I do that in general we are much better off with Microsoft as is rather that broken-up or otherwise handicapped. I have found that most Microsoft products are superior to competing products> Why can the public not be able to use such superior products.

I am not a Microsoft employee but a individual public citizen.

Paul Monson

MTC-00007658

From: Michael Beers
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 9:11pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Hello, my name is Michael Beers. I'm a hard-working friendly American male. I'll make it short. Settle the Microsoft case now. It is unfortunate in this country that success, when deemed "excessive," is so despised that we have to attempt to destroy it, to make it small again, to make it average. Pay no attention to the 2 billion dollars Mr. Gates gave to charity this year, to the stimulus his company provides our economy, and to the fact that my computer running his software is one of the most important objects in my life. Leave Microsoft alone! Leave business alone! Let the market decide whose products to buy.

Keep your creepy, altruistic hands off.
Thank you. Did I make my point clear?

Michael Beers
Michael Beers
michaelbeers.com mbeers@idir.net
785-749-3649

MTC-00007659

From: CHARLES E KESSLER

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen,

My family nor I have never worked for or had any connection to the Microsoft Co. and I do not own any Microsoft stock. My only connection is that I have a personal computer that uses Microsoft software.

It has always been my opinion that to penalize Microsoft for improving its software for the benefit of its customers is crazy. The freedom to innovate and provide better software should be rewarded not penalized.

The only reason for these lawsuits is to benefit the attorneys and the politicians who support Microsoft's competitors.

Charles E. Kessler
3000 S. Graham St.
Seattle, WA 98108
206-725-3279

MTC-00007660

From: DEENLENUS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Suit

Dear Sirs:

Please end this action and lets move on!
L.C. Foster
Tampa Fl.

MTC-00007661

From: Rick Salvo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I really don't understand why the Government is trying to destroy one of the world's best achievements. You can buy a Microsoft product that is reliable and utilitarian for less than what most attorneys charge for 2 hours of their time. Where is the injustice here? Their products will last a lifetime (even though they will be improved upon constantly). This whole thing is a big waste of time and money. Just look at what breaking up the phone company did. We now pay about 5 times as much for less service and have 2 to 3 bills for what once came in one every month! Even if some companies are considered monopolies maybe that is the most efficient way to do some things. Leave Microsoft alone and see if all the lawyers involved can add some utility to the world in stead of profits in their pockets. Settle the suit and let's get on with life and look for things that need fixing.

Sincerely
Rick Salvo

MTC-00007662

From: TAURUS5164@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:16pm
Subject: microsoftsettlement

I am voting for the settlement as outlined.

MTC-00007663

From: Ruth A. Lucchesi
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Judge Kollar-Kotelly:

I fear that Microsoft will emerge from the Justice Department and State anti-trust lawsuits with little or no penalty.

Microsoft's offer to spend money to equip schools with their brand of software is certainly not a penalty for them...it is advertising cost. If they are permitted such an easy fate, all of the creative alternatives to the WINTEL platform will be effectively crushed. The Apple operating systems long used by schools will be drowned by the onslaught of Microsoft technology.

Monopoly power in Microsoft's hands is no different than it was in the hands of Rockefeller and Standard Oil nor Ma Bell. Absolute power (monopoly) corrupts absolutely.

Please consider the fate of other creative methods for computing and insist on a penalty for Microsoft that will break their monopoly. The company should be split into at least two separate and competing companies...one for software and one for an operating system. Judge Green's decision to split Ma Bell made possible the many innovations we have in telecommunications today: cell phones, pagers, portable phones etc. The next generation deserves the same opportunity to have similar computing technology at their disposal.

Please split up Microsoft.

Thank you for your time and attention.
Ruth A. Lucchesi
127 Riverside Drive
Northfield, IL 60093-3238

MTC-00007664

From: 4glh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello,

I just wanted to voice my support of the Microsoft settlement. I do believe that they were unfairly targeted by the government in the first place, but since they agreed to this settlement it should be honored! Then the whiners and complainers form both the other software companies and the Government (who really deserve none of Microsoft's money.. they already pay their taxes) should get out of it and leave them alone. Hopefully they can still succeed even after their unfair and I believe unlawful persecution.

Let their settlement stand.
GL Holmlund

MTC-00007665

From: cliff bristow
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This is in reference to the Microsoft Settlement...I am sick and tired of the mess that special interest groups are creating and feel that the government could best serve the people of this great nation by dropping everything. Microsoft has consistently given me all that I have paid for and so much that I didn't pay for. If I need an update for a Microsoft product that I use, they have always given me that update at no charge. Yes, they do charge me if I want to upgrade (like to Windows XP), but, it is my choice whether to upgrade or not. Microsoft is not forcing me to do something that I do not want to do and I for one am tired of people trying to tell me they are. I am a strong supporter for Microsoft and believe that they are serving all of my needs.

Sincerely,
Cliff Bristow
Hebrews 11:1
Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.
Cliff

MTC-00007666

From: TMB999@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:21pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Leave Microsoft alone. Just close out the settlement you already reached with Microsoft and move on. Microsoft is one of the world's greatest companies that has done more for benefiting mankind than almost any other company in the past 10 years. The whole technology revolution of the 1990's would never have happened without Microsoft. Microsoft bashers are just jealous of Bill Gate's success.

CC:TMB999@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00007667

From: HTOPILOWMD@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:25pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Please finally settle this case as per the terms negotiated by Microsoft and the DOJ and allow Microsoft to get back to work writing software and stimulating the economy rather than remaining an unending source of income for the plaintiff's bar. It's enough, get rid of this case. You are not there to defend Microsoft's competitors from competition.

Harvey W. Topilow, MD

MTC-00007668

From: John Petrocci
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:24pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I think that the courts intrusion in the way a corporation manages it business is unwarranted. It became evident the courts were favoring the competitors. I liked the settlement. There are many other companies that could be prosecuted if judged in the same manner that Microsoft was scrutinized.

MTC-00007669

From: WTopper@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I fully support the settlement as I fully support Microsoft's freedom to innovate.

William K. Topper
968 E. 125 S.
Ogden, Utah 84404-4006
WTopper@aol.com

MTC-00007670

From: Alan Hagerman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:26pm
Subject: My opposition to the DOJ Suit vs. Microsoft

Gentlemen....While I am by no means an expert, I do believe that Microsoft was not and is not now, a monopoly. I believe that companies who were competitors of Microsoft, got the government to take the lead to bring Microsoft down or at least, break it up.

I did obtain a Bachelor of Arts degree from Miami Univ, Oxford, Ohio and a CPCU Degree From the Insurance Institute. My major in college was economics. I feel that a great deal of Taxpayer money has been wasted and that the devastation of the stock holdings of Americans (particularly in the computer field) has been great. I am pleased that the US Govt Doj program is ending and I feel that the states who are still holding out should cease and desist their actions too.

I am a retiree, recently retired from the General Insurance business. I have never missed an opportunity to vote and I chair the Conservative Party of Ontario County, New York. Thank you for requesting my opinion.

Sincerely,
Alan Hagerman, Chairman

MTC-00007671

From: Paul Graeber
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy. The law (officially called the Tunney Act) requires a public comment period between now and January 28th after which the District Court will determine whether the settlement is in the "public interest."

Unfortunately, a few special interests are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Don't let these special interests defeat the public interest.

Paul Graeber
Paul and Sherri
paulg@ihot.com

MTC-00007672

From: DMKCPA6959@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:27pm
Subject: RE; microsoft settlement

I HAVE FOLLOWED THE PROCEEDINGS FOR THE PAST THREE YEARS AND I FIRMLY BELIEVE IT HAS FINALLY COME TO A SATISFACTORY AND ACCEPTABLE CONCLUSION. I REFER TO THE LONG AT&T CASE WHICH TOOK MANY YEARS AND RESULTED IN A HUGE EXPENSE TO THE GOVERNMENT AND SUBSTANTIALLY INCREASED TELEPHONE USAGE COSTS TO THE CONSUMER. WHAT MAKES IT EVEN MORE LUDICROUS IS THAT THE SPLIT COMPANIES HAVE MANAGED TO ALLY THEMSELVES WITH EACH OTHER. THOSE WHO DESIRE TO EXTEND THE CONTROVERSY ARE DOING IT FOR SELFISH PERSONAL GAIN. LET US AVOID ANOTHER AT&T DEBACLE.

VERY TRULY YOURS—
DAVID KAUFMAN

MTC-00007673

From: MyMomKas@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen:
Enough is enough, time for settling this matter once and for all. Put a stop to these delays so that MS can get back to business. They have provided a service for us consumers that has been extremely important in the advancement of computer science. So many Americans can now and do, have computers in their homes. I believe without MS this would not have happened.

Why do we want to punish a company that brought USA to the top of this industry?
Kathleen Laitila

MTC-00007674

From: Erol Fox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:29pm
Subject: please complete the settlement

We've used up enough taxpayer money (my money) to punish the one company that has done more for consumers and computing than any other. Let's put an end to the "don't innovate, litigate" credo of the lesser companies. If they'd higher great engineers to make great products, and get out of the courts, maybe they could compete.

As a registered voter, I'm adding my vote to complete the settlement and get America moving again towards innovation!

MTC-00007675

From: Patty
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:
I believe the settlement reached in the Microsoft case is fair. Please make it final and let Microsoft and the American public get on with life.

Thank you.
P. Lea

MTC-00007676

From: Jimmy.Chan@Dictaphone.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,
I am writing this regarding to the Microsoft Settlement Case as a consumer, my point of view is the case has been prolonged enough. It is bad for the economy, derail innovation for new technology. Majorly of the public are aware they do have a choice to choose from all vendors of software makers and they are more acknowledgeable regarding what they buy from a decade ago. Also, technology has been advanced so fast, even the laws can't keep up and I understand you want to protect the consumers.

So, let us decide what's best for the consumers and ends all litigation asap when there is a fair settlement presented on the table for all parties already. And get the economy moving on all cylinders again. Thanks for letting me voice my point of view. Good Luck!

Jimmy

MTC-00007677

From: PaulMons@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Come on, lets get this show on the road and finalized. We have wasted far too much time and money for no real purpose. Let's step up to the plate and get it finalized. Microsoft is being more than fair—enough already. Make it happen.

Thanks for your consideration.
Paul E. Monson

MTC-00007678

From: Camerz5@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom this may concern, The settlement accepted by Microsoft should be accepted by the Court and Microsoft should be afforded quiet enjoyment to innovate and pursue its business.

The entire case against Microsoft is study of abuse of government power against the private sector—Microsoft drove our high tech economy and dramatically increased productivity in America. We owe the success of the 90's to the catalyst "Microsoft". Bill Gates and his team are the new American heroes of our capitalist system, Microsoft brought low priced products to the service of all. Microsoft succeeded against all competitors world wide—they won the Olympic Gold of Business for America and the American government tried to punished them due to complaints from inefficient high price competitors with friends in Congress.

It is time to end this tragic mistaken case and move on. In addition to settlement the Federal government and especially the States should apologize to Microsoft and its shareholders.

God Bless a Free America
Carl A. Merz
President
Hartford Aviation Group, Inc.

MTC-00007679

From: Richard Lewis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:33pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement — Richard Lewis — rlewis0627@earthlink.net — EarthLink: The #1 provider of the Real Internet.

I believe the Microsoft settlement was good and fair and that it should not be overturned by special interests. Litigation is a sorry method of resolving problems, especially since consumers have not suffered from Microsoft's actions.

Richard F. Lewis
22 Tollridge Ct.
San Mateo, CA 94402

MTC-00007680

From: John Buttell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

First of all I do not own any Microsoft stock at this time and am not now nor will I ever be employed by Microsoft. I do use the products created by the company and have never had a complaint or felt that I my choices were being limited in any way by monopolistic practices. Prices for Microsoft products are fair to me the consumer and services have been more than satisfactory. I have felt from the beginning of the legal action that my government was suing a company on behalf of other competing companies that could not do it on their own. I am not anything more than a casual computer user that has never found a time or place where I had to use a Microsoft product when I did not want to. Just because they were able to come up with the dominant operating system for the personal computer in the right place and the right time they should not be punished continually for it. Please let the market place decide what it wants and stop wasting my tax dollars on litigation against Microsoft. In the Bible God tells us not to sue one another.

Thank you, my name is John (jbt1@home.com)

MTC-00007681

From: TPCMD@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:34pm
Subject: settlement

I think the proposal to have Microsoft donate software to schools is excellent. Please lets get this terrible burden to our economy over with and settle this case. Sun, oracle and there states will never settle so please make them.

Tim Carey, MD

MTC-00007682

From: Purdue
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Dept of Justice:
Please settle this case as soon as possible. I do not think that delaying the settlement will solve anything further. Personally, I see the nine states that are in a quandary as inhibiting and not expediting legal or just settlement of this case by any further prolongment.

Barbara Purdue Citizen USA

MTC-00007683

From: charles bolton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:39pm
Subject: The action currently being pursued against Microsoft creates a Business

The action currently being pursued against Microsoft creates a Business climate of uncertainty that prevents them from continuing to innovate and develop new technology that will provide business opportunities and create additional jobs, investment opportunities and other revenue streams. Microsoft has been punished enough by this long drawn out court action, delays, missed opportunities and legal costs. Implement the settlement as decided by the Courts. Continuing to re-open the case on hearsay and speculation is a violation of the equal protection of the laws of the US Constitution and probably a violation of due process.

In these un-settled economic and chaotic world climate we need stability and a level playing field to allow us technology to stay in the lead. Do you think the Chinese and all the other techno wantabees are tying the hands of their premier technology companies. No! Keep it up and you will erode our global technological edge.

There are winners and losers in the market place all the time. I saw my company that had a good product and technology go down the tubes due to the dot.com melt down and we were not a dot.com company. So encourage competition and let people innovate and computer and stop listening to the cry babies.

Cordially
Charles Bolton
Charles@Bolton.Com

MTC-00007684

From: scott juetten
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:31pm
Subject: MS Antitrust case that never ends!

To Whom it may Concern,
I strongly support the proposed settlement between the Justice Department and Microsoft. The settlement more than addresses the concerns brought up at the trial without unduly harming a company that has perhaps done more for the US Economy than any other. This settlement will allow Microsoft to keep innovating, while being sensitive to the needs of competitors and computer makers.

The dissenting states proposed alterations to the settlement are punitive in nature, and are primarily designed to help Microsoft competitors at the expense of Microsoft and Microsoft shareholders. They are designed to prevent Microsoft from innovating, and to make Microsoft hand over intellectual property to competitors. Microsoft has shown signs it is very determined to comply with the settlement, by internally appointing compliance officers. Therefore, I believe the states concerns are unfounded.

It is my opinion that if the settlement is approved, and this case is finally closed, that it will help to eliminate uncertainty in the tech sector of the equity markets. This can also help to spur economic recovery. Therefore, I do not feel it is in the best interest of consumers or the country to drag this on further.

Please accept the settlement of United States vs. Microsoft as submitted by the US Justice Department.

Respectfully,
Scott & Rochelle Juetten

MTC-00007685

From: ThereHugoAgain@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is respectfully submitted that the Microsoft litigation at bar represents a politically motivated abuse of the American judicial system. The conclusions and findings of the Court appear to be an overly simplistic, almost academic, approach that bears little relevancy to the real world of average consumers such as myself.

It is at best absurd that absolutely no consideration appears to have been given to the fact that the explosion of the internet is almost exclusively the result of Microsoft's bundling which effectively gave consumers "all" they needed to permit them to wander through the internet. I'd call it one stop shopping-a convenience-not a punishment.

It is equally absurd that no consideration has been given the issue of whether any of the "competitors" who were "excluded" actually offered products that were truly innovative and competitive with Microsoft's products.

Finally, the penultimate absurdity of the litigation is the lack of any proof that consumers would have benefited financially or otherwise had circumstances been as the Court believed they should have been.

If Microsoft is willing to accept the proposed settlement, it should be approved. The Court and the State Attorneys should not do any further harm.

Respectfully yours,
William J. Breuer
22 Nassau Blvd
Garden City, N.Y.

MTC-00007686

From: Jrq007@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Case

I have been concerned about the Department of Justice lawsuit against Microsoft. I began using Microsoft products in 1981 when I bought my first IBM microcomputer. Nothing in my lifetime has increased my productivity and work enjoyment as much as the microcomputer and Microsoft software. Their creativity and entrepreneurship helped millions of other people and me. I have worked at four universities and most recently as Vice President for Finance and Administration at the University of Alabama in Huntsville. I recently retired but was thinking back to 1981 when I bought six microcomputers and established three residence hall computer labs at Central Michigan University. I think these were the very first residence hall computer labs in the country. Many students benefited from those labs and the Microsoft software we used. From that early beginning I certainly could not have predicted the full impact of either the software or the microcomputer. I have been forever grateful to Bill Gates and all the Microsoft people for providing such productivity enhancements. I am happy to hear that Attorney General John Ashcroft has ended the Department of Justice's three-year antitrust lawsuit against Microsoft with a settlement. I wholeheartedly agree with the Attorney General's decision to get it over with.

The complex agreement is full of provisions that will permanently change the software industry and I personally do not see a one that I would consider positive. Everything about the agreement seems to me to be aimed at reducing creative endeavor. The government even created an ongoing technical oversight committee to review Microsoft software codes, and to test Microsoft compliance to the agreement. Nevertheless, I am glad it is over. What disturbs me is that some government officials and Microsoft competitors aren't satisfied with the decision and want tighter screws on Microsoft. I ask, "How far should the government go on these issues? Free enterprise needs a break!" My hope is that Microsoft will produce even better software in the future that will help all of us. I am doing some consulting now and my son is a software developer who uses all of Microsoft's development software. I don't want to see anything standing in the way of improved software.

Our tax money should be used to deal with the urgent matters of the day. In my opinion, the federal government doesn't need to take any more action on this issue. Please end the Microsoft lawsuit permanently.

MTC-00007687

From: Barbara Gregory
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's time to settle this mess, for the good of all. Why prolong it any longer. Prolonging the settlement hurts the economy and really hurts everyone. Those that don't want to settle are the ones that are really greedy. Let's get it over with.

MTC-00007688

From: Jim Gasparich
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:45pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

To whom it may concern:
As an avid computer user I feel strongly that the settlement arrived at between Microsoft and the DOJ was fair and in the best interest of consumers like myself. Further litigation is a waste of taxpayer money and will not help consumers but rather competitors and the political careers of ambitious AG's. Please do the world a favor and end this.

Sincerely,
James P Gasparich, M.D.

MTC-00007689

From: Wendall Mayson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear DoJ,

Please, it is time for this issue to be put to rest. The entire case revolves around the fact that Microsoft's competitors do not have the will or desire to get out and work hard to develop the technology to compete with Microsoft. They would rather cry and go running to the government. Why not, it is easier and cheaper for them. Microsoft pumps millions of dollars into the US economy. They have for many years and they can for many more if everyone will just leave them alone. In addition, Microsoft develops technology that not only makes the US stronger, but also makes it easier for the average consumer to do what they want to with their personal computer. In addition, Microsoft delivers this technology at a tremendous value.

Thank you!

MTC-00007690

From: SamuelWines
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:45pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that enough resources have been expended to date and that it is time to move ahead. Microsoft is not perfect and certainly should be monitored but is it not time to move to more pressing issues?

Sam Wines

MTC-00007691

From: Perry
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:48pm
Subject: MS Settlement

I think the Clinton Administration made a terrible mistake in using the Dept of Justice in trying to break-up Microsoft. MS is the with the recourses and talent to compete with foreign governments in the development of new and sophisticated software. The remaining states have no case and there has no damage to them, therefore, they should give up there in pursuit of MS.

Thank you for your kind attention to this matter—

Perry Du Long

MTC-00007692

From: Lovemycat@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:48pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This has gone on way too long now. PLEASE settle this ridiculous case and lets move on. Microsoft is an incredible company and I can't believe I live in a country that penalizes it's citizen's for being innovative and successful. Its disgraceful the way our government has treated our own company that we should be proud of. I used to live in Mexico and down there the people couldn't believe what the USA was doing. It was really embarrassing to try and explain it.

SETTLE THE CASE!

MTC-00007693

From: Gcademator@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:48pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

A reasonable and fair settlement has been reached. Lets stop seeking to damage the future of one of the few remaining American companies that is truly a leader in global business and quickly ratify the settlement.

K. Cadematori 1/2/02

MTC-00007694

From: Jim/Carol Renfrow
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:49pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
DOJ—

Come on guys...it's settled. Let's get on with getting on. If this case is continued, you are starting to look foolish. Any further consideration by DOJ against Microsoft will further show how a few individuals in your department has a personal vendetta against Microsoft and Bill Gates.

Let American Capitalism and Democracy work....get out of the way.

Jim Renfrow
2400 Columbine Lane
Montrose, CO 81401-5646
renfrowjim@hotmail.com
(970)-249-6511

PS. I'm a 56 year old who has been a registered Democrat all my life and have never voted for a Republican Presidential Candidate.

MTC-00007695

From: Matias Moyano
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:49pm
Subject: hello

i want to say, that i dont like the settlement that the DOJ has reached with microsoft, this is not helping the consumers, and of course, not helping the economy at all, microsoft allways had the winner track on all these computer business, i think that we are loosing the economy on the computer market with this settlement, the 9 of the 18 states started this because microsoft's MONOPOLIC tactics, they started this because the POWER AND THE MONEY that microsoft have win in this computer market is not ALLOWING other little companys to start or to reach a good market, because MICROSOFT can buy the competitor... or add a "new free feature" to the next os, and the competitor will be down and dead, and microsoft will not spend more money again, this is not helping the AMERICAN ECONOMY, this is helping MICROSOFT ECONOMY, i was wondering why? i can travel to USA proof that im good for the USA economy and the American Gov. will loan me money to start, so i can grow as a business in the USA, a country that i love, and i will like to live on, but what happens here? with this settlement the only thing that you, DOJ, 9 states of the 18 states are doing is destroying the chance of people like me or any other little company that wants to start something in the computer market, why should i do it? if i will loose against microsoft in one way or another? this settlement is not protecting the AMERICAN ECONOMY and that is the big mistake...

because in the way this is handle, 5 years of restricted stuff for microsoft? what is that? microsoft agreed in other settlement to pay 10 billons, that shows to you how much they care of that 5 years, in the 6th year they can recover all the money they loose, please, dont give them the chance to destroy the american economy, this cant be tolerated!!!! the american economy is not moved by microsoft, is moved by hundres or 1000! of people that wants to start something or a business in that great country! but in the way this is going, microsoft will be able to do whatever they want, that is bad!! very bad!

microsoft can loose 10 billons of dollars but they know that they can recover it once again when the 6th year is reached! or by going back to their tactics! the split of the company was the best to do!!! but if you cant make them do that then go for the proposed by the 9 REBEL STATES the open of the code of IE and other things they had in mind please! do it for ALL THE ECONOMY, not just MICROSOFT ECONOMY this move, and the tactics that microsoft allways used is destroying the little and medium companys around, and in some years, you will have nothing, and who can we blame about that?

MTC-00007696

From: Bob Windom
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/2/02 11:49pm
Subject: My husband and I are owners of small businesses. I am a county commissioner as well.

We fully beli My husband and I are owners of small businesses. I am a county commissioner as well. We fully believe that the Microsoft settlement is just and fair. It serves us well as consumers both in private life, the small business sector, and local government. We, therefore, encourage you to move forward with the settlement.

Robert and Rita Windom
303 Voves Ave.
Libby, MT 59923
406-293-6764

MTC-00007697

From: Jbsailboat@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:51pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Department of Justice, I am in favor of the proposed settlement in the Microsoft case. It is time to get this settled so the economy can move forward and recover. Thank you.

James H. Baker

MTC-00007698

From: RMccull955@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement 1/2/02

In the interest of the public, I would like an agreement on the current settlement. A few sour grapes would like to prolong this for there own interest, in the long run this is going to cost us all money and won't accomplish anything. Not all Microsoft products are perfect, but they are generally better than whatever else is around!

Sincerely,
Robb McCullough

MTC-00007699

From: Leslie Veres
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the Microsoft settlement and see no reason to prolong this case one minute longer than necessary. Please complete the settlement process and apply the Department of Justice resources to more important needs.

Thank you very much.
Leslie L. Veres

MTC-00007700

From: Ann Whalen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:53pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

It is time to settle this case. I am a taxpayer and have paid for this case to go on and on. As a consumer, I have enjoyed an operating system that is innovative, creative and an American product. Let's spend time, money and energy on "fighting" cases that negatively affect the American public.

Thanks, Ann Whalen

MTC-00007701

From: LRobe58516@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs or Madams:
I sincerely hope that the Microsoft Settlement, otherwise known as the Tunney Act, would be implemented as soon as possible. Any other course would constitute yet another blow to our struggling economy.

Sincerely,
C. Lawrence Roberts, M.D.
23720 S.E. 18th St.
Sammamish, Washington 98075-8109

MTC-00007702

From: David Hemler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:56pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the proposed settlement between Microsoft and the Department of Justice is in the best interests of the country and consumers. I fully support the settlement and hope that you will enforce its terms.

David Hemler

MTC-00007703

From: THAKORTaru@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:56pm
Subject: (no subject)

Please settle the case as soon as possible w/o hurting economy and citizen of this country.

MTC-00007704

From: kearypk
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I have been asked to comment on the settlement. I think that ANY settlement hurts both the consumer and our country's economy and ability to compete worldwide. However, I agree that this settlement is better than any more litigation and therefore agree with it

Keary Kunz
210 Jennings
Wenatchee, WA 98801

MTC-00007705

From: Scott Cuddihy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe this whole effort is a shame. Large scale damage has been done to our economy by the USDOJ in the name of anti-trust. The consumer has not been harmed by Microsoft, the consumer enjoys more value for its money than any other time in history. This action only benefits AOL-Time Warner, Sun Microsystems and Oracle to name a few.

Please end this tragedy.

Thank you,
Scott Cuddihy

MTC-00007706

From: Timmessmer@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 11:59pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

TO whom it may concern:

As a consumer, I wish to voice my strong opinion that you settle this case with Microsoft as it is now. The Tunney act is fair and needs to be implemented without any further delay. To delay is to prolong the stifling effect on development. Do what is right and settle now.

Timothy Messmer
Anacortes, WA

MTC-00007707

From: marvin thurmond
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:00am
Subject: microsoft settlement
To: us doj

To whom it may concern: Please settle the Microsoft case without further litigation. I believe this to be in the interest of the people.

Thanks
marvin c. thurmond
44 camden way dallas.ga. 30157

MTC-00007708

From: AHWELLNESS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wrote a letter to Microsoft some time ago supporting them in the legal actions. They provided me with this address to continue to show my support...I agree that the settlement seems to be in the consumer's best interests, and I would like the litagatin to cease.

Anne Hazelton MD

MTC-00007709

From: Ronald
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I Agree with California an the other eight states, that Microsoft is the one stalling. I agree with California and the other eight states. Microsoft should split into two or three corporations. They are a bullies.

Ron Bush
End User
Ronald J. Bush
bushr1@home.com

MTC-00007710

From: SUE BONK
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:04am
Subject: Dept. of Justice Put a sock in it!
Settle this NOW!

MTC-00007711

From: Jasha Levi
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:05am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

It is high time to let Microsoft be and let their competitors compete in the marketplace instead of trying to have the courts do it for them.

Jasha Levi

MTC-00007713

From: David P. Schwartz
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:05am
Subject: comments on DOJ v. Microsoft
Gentlemen,

I am a professional computer software developer, and I've been working with and around computers for as long as Bill Gates (we're a year apart in age). While I have not read the proposed settlement in detail, I have read many accounts in the technical press that seem to be in fair agreement, and I thought I'd register my comments. In a nutshell, I think the proposed settlement is off-point and will have virtually no impact in the market place or to any useful extent with either consumers or end users. It's an attempt to compensate for market forces that were in effect several years ago and that might not be relevant today.

For what it's worth, here's my opinion.

I agree that Microsoft has created a monopoly. The issue before the courts was focused on products and product bundling; however, this is not the culprit. The monopoly that Microsoft has so effectively created really lies in a distribution channel that reaches over 90% of all computer users in the North American hemisphere, and probably a majority of ALL users worldwide. The problem with that sort of monopoly is that the monopoly holder has the absolute right to say what goes into that channel. It's not that the products Microsoft chooses to bundle are good, bad, or indifferent. The problem is that the consumer is LOCKED OUT from EVER GETTING THE OPPORTUNITY TO CHOOSE ANY ALTERNATIVES!

Consider this: what if. . . 90% of telephone service was provided by Qwest? 90% of all grocery stores food distributors were owned by Safeway? 90% of all gasoline pipelines were owned by Mobil Oil? . . . And, the owners were also the producers of 100% of the products that were stocked and sold to their customers—meaning that all the services accessible by telephone (eg., long distance, voice mail, internet access, etc) were ALSO owned by Qwest; that 100% of the products found in a Safeway store were exclusively their in-house private label brands; that all the gasoline and oil available through Mobil gas stations was produced and owned by Mobil Oil. It's kind of scary to think about, isn't it? You'd go to the grocery store looking for Quaker Brand Oatmeal, and you have to settle with some gloppy in-house brand because . . . the price of the Quaker Oats product would be twice the cost of the in-house brand because the "house" would take a few tens of million dollars for the privilege of "bundling" it with their other products. (Look what they wanted to charge AOL just to advertise their internet service in Windows XP!) What other company, distributor, news source, publisher, government, or ANYBODY exists ANYWHERE that has that kind of market penetration AND CONTROL? I cannot think of a single one, other than possibly the US Post Office!

What is the impact on me as a software developer? Well, it's rather difficult for me to gain access to this distribution channel. In fact, it's practically impossible. AOL couldn't get into the XP distribution without practically selling their soul; what chance does a smaller company have? Z-E-R-O. That's the primary impact of this monopoly—when somebody buys a Compaq or Dell computer, the only products they get exposure to are from Microsoft (and a few other Fortune 50 companies that can afford the advertising costs). And that's mainly because of contracts between Microsoft and the OEM manufacturers. Even if those contract terms are relaxed a bit, there's no way that smaller vendors are going to get to bundle their multimedia players and text editors with those systems!

The first automobiles were available in "any color you want, as long as it's black". That's ok when you're talking about a product market place with a few thousand or tens of thousands of customers. But today tens of millions of computers are sold each year. Nonetheless, as in Ford's time, consumers can get them outfitted with "any operating system you like, as long as it's from Microsoft". That's NOT a choice!

One measure of the settlement should be this: how do consumers choices change as a result? Frankly, I fail to see how this situation will possibly change given the proposed remedies. Assuming the proposed settlement goes through, in a year or three, will the average consumer have any more choices to him as to what software gets bundled and/or installed on his computer? I really don't see how.

AT&T was broken into several smaller pieces in order to separate the local phone access from the long-distance networks. Now the so-called Baby Bells want to get back into long distance markets, and AT&T wants to get back into local access markets. What solution has been put into place? Local carriers can get into long distance when they've opened their local markets to some percentage of competing carriers, and AT&T can get into local markets when it can demonstrate that its opened it's markets to some percentage of competing carriers. That makes sense. The practical impact of that hasn't been very effective in the market place, but at least it's a start.

WHAT I'D LIKE TO SEE:

As part of the settlement agreement, Microsoft should be required to include installation-time access to third-party products with every release of their software. The qualifications should be that anybody can submit anything as long as it meets certain clearly defined and easily measured criteria. That means that if AOL thinks that users might want to get access to AOL at the time they install Windows XP, the only option Microsoft has is to say "send us a link to your web site".

One thing I believe is that Microsoft will claim that virtually ANYTHING is an "integral part" of the operating system if it suits their fancy. Rather than argue about it, I'd say "the proof is in the pudding". If Microsoft is including something in the release of one of their products, then they should allow third parties to submit similar products as well. In other words, if they want to claim that an Internet Browser is part of the OS, then they cannot say that other Browsers should not be include. Conversely, if somebody wants to bundle a word processor and Microsoft says that's not part of the OS, then they can refuse to include it. However, if someone wants to bundle something roughly equivalent to Notepad or Wordpad, which are acknowledged parts of the standard Windows operating environment, then Microsoft could not deny them trying to say that they compete with Word instead.

In order to facilitate this, I'd suggest the establishment of a web site that is used to promote third-party products that compete with things that Microsoft bundles directly in their products, and require Microsoft to modify their installer so that it connects to this web site at installation time and allows users to select among different tools available on the web site at that time. Some folks might not want to load the Windows Media Player, and might choose to install the WinAmp Media Player instead. Why not? Or, they could choose to load Netscape rather than Internet Explorer as their browser. If Microsoft wants to play games with the API so competitors' products don't work well, then play the same game as the phone companies—they can update their browser as soon as at least one other browser has been tested to be "compatible" with the operating system. Put the onus on Microsoft to provide CLEAR CRITERIA to facilitate successful compatibility testing.

I'd also like to see something in the remedy that addresses the abysmal level of support that's currently available for Microsoft's products, primarily their OEM products. Microsoft says that part of the reason they discount the licenses sold to OEMs is because their contracts require the OEMs to provide support. However, most don't provide any useful level of support, typically pushing it off on their retailers. Very few retailers ever hire the expertise needed to support Microsoft's products well. This is relevant to the monopolistic practices issue because it gives Microsoft a way to dis-own support needs for a very large percentage of its customers. If Microsoft was required to provide even a minimal level of support for their products, they would have to raise their OEM prices enough that the OEMs would in fact be in a position to make a viable choice among different bundling options. Today the OEMs are simply prostitutes for Microsoft products that they bundle with their hardware simply because nobody else can afford to offer them better deals. OEMs cannot afford to support the software that they bundle with their computers, and there's a tacit agreement that retailers and "certified technicians" will take up the slack. The truth is, they don't. But Microsoft gets the benefit of the doubt and is allowed to continue underpricing their products to OEMs using this fraudulent strategy. I think that requiring Microsoft to publish a single, uniform, OEM Price List that only offers volume purchase discounts and that imposes certain specific support requirements would go a long way towards solving this problem. (For example, an OEM can get an additional discount by providing the 800# for their phone support help desk. No support desk, no discount. Conversely, Microsoft would be required to provide the support for those OEMs, hence justifying the higher OEM price.)

Finally, I like the option that several of the States have proposed that forces Microsoft to publish the source code for the core Windows operating system and utilities and require them to license it more openly. This would allow third-parties and even OEMs to use it to compose different configurations, much the way that Linux distributions are really different compositions of mostly the same code bases. It would eliminate most of the issues that have been keeping the OEMs hamstrung in their abilities to modify the boot-up processes of their machines, or shipping alternative browsers. It would also have a beneficial side-effect in that the OEMs would REALLY be required to support their products!

Thank you for taking the time to read this.
David Schwartz
P.O. Box 34338
Phoenix, AZ 85067

MTC-00007714

From: Richard Tackett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:06am
Subject: what I think waste of taxpayers money over nothing!!!!
I stand with Microsoft on this matter!!!!!!
Rich Tackett
19811 Portal Plaza
Cupertino, Calif. 95014
408 253-7810

MTC-00007715

From: Carl
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Sirs
I have been around the computer industry for 40 years and the one thing that stands out in the early days of the computer is that no companies were compatible with software or hardware. Now that one company got it all together and you can buy any hardware or software and be assured that it will run, the Government wants to shut this company down and change the whole industry and set it back to 1970. Microsoft has done it right and the only the disgruntled companies that can not compete want the Government to penalize Microsoft for being successful.

There are a lot of small business that rely on Microsoft and Windows to be the same always. If you do not know how important this is then you must be talking to lawyers and not Computer Developers and Users that were there when using a Computer was not this easy.

Carl Odiam
760 343 3759

MTC-00007716

From: helen bloomquist
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:06am
Subject: Microsoft Litigation
I am in favor of the comprehensive agreement with Microsoft, and vote that the case be settled immediately, without further litigation.

Helen Bloomquist

MTC-00007717

From: Kurt A. Buechler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Greetings,

As a consumer, I am in support of the settlement of the DOJ lawsuit vs. Microsoft now on the table. In my opinion, the settlement is fair and should be enacted ASAP to assist the nation's economic recovery. I own no shares of Microsoft stock and share this opinion as a user of products and services of Apple, America Online, and Microsoft corporations. I am neither an employee nor beneficiary of Microsoft Corp.

Sincerely,
Kurt A. Buechler
127 Claiborne Cove
Ridgeland, MS 39157
U.S.A.
(601) 853-3638
Kurt A. Buechler
Ridgeland, Mississippi
U.S.A.

MTC-00007718

From: LBGARRISON@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:07am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Let the settlement stand as is and let's get this fiasco over with. I thought this country was about entrepreneurship and better mousetraps, etc, but it seems to be moving closer to mediocrity every day, the result of penalizing anyone who can do something better than others. End it.

MTC-00007719

From: Richard Tackett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:08am
Subject: microsoft is a great company and has done nothing wrong!!!!!!
microsoft is a great company and has done nothing wrong!!!!!!
Rich Tackett
19811 Portal Plaza
Cupertino, Calif. 95014 408 253-7810

MTC-00007720

From: Rev. Bill Mounce
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:08am
Subject: Microsoft Judgement
Sirs,

I am an often frustrated but dedicated Windows' user. I have been since Windows 2.1. At times I hate it. But I DO NOT believe Microsoft should be prosecuted for anything. They have been successful because, while they are not perfect, NO ONE has anything better. I feel it is their competitors whining because they are incapable of building anything better that has caused this entire mess at the taxpayer's cost. It is utterly ridiculous. If the other programs were better. . . I would definitely use them. But alas they are not and yet they want Microsoft broken up to cripple the company. The impact on the PC world and business' everywhere would be catastrophic. Let's end this nonsense now and let Microsoft do what they do best. . . build programs for the struggling PC industry. And if anyone else can build a better "mouse-trap", we, the consumers will judge with out money. Thank you.

Bill & Shandy Mounce
Leesville, LA 71446

MTC-00007721

From: Andy West
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:09am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Greetings:

I would like to comment on the proposed settlement to the Microsoft anti-trust case. I have read that certain clauses in section III of the purposed settlement give Microsoft rights unusual for a guilty party. Section III (D), in which Microsoft must disclose information needed for the software of other companies to interoperate with Windows, specifies in its footnotes that only commercial businesses alone receive these disclosures. This in effect bars universities, research laboratories and agencies of the Federal government itself from such information.

Section III (J)(2) gives the right to determine what constitutes a business—for the purpose of licensing APIs, documentation, or protocols—not to the Department of Justice but to Microsoft. This gives Microsoft leave to shut out not just non-commercial entities such as open-source projects, but even federal agencies in the course of their own software projects.

These are the only two clauses I have read about, but these two alone give Microsoft too much power to determine how the keystone of its monopoly may be used. I would like to ask that the settlement be renegotiated on at least these two clauses, if not for the sake of the open-source movement, then for the sake of the agencies and projects of the Federal government itself.

Sincerely,
Mark Andrew West
202 East Washington Street
Fairmount, Indiana 46928
Tel: 765-747-2919 (work)
Email: dysme@dysmey.org

MTC-00007722

From: padam2
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:09am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Please use taxdollars to do something usefull. Stop going after microsoft and use your intellect to stimulate the economy rather than forever piling up the fees paid to selfserving legal entrepreneurs. I am retired and will not visit any of the states that continue to oppose a microsoft settlement.

MTC-00007723

From: SCHWEENER@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:10am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I encourage you to get this settled. The economy won't start a full recovery until this is settled. Get it off the books!

Susan M. Swenson

MTC-00007724

From: CSand385@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:10am
Subject: settlement

it is time that the issue surrounding Microsoft be completed—if the Dept Of Justice has concluded thier tsettlement than the remaining states shoud follow suigt and stop wasting the taxpayers money—the iswsues of monopoly may have some vaility to it—but the benenfit far outweighs the punishment.

Sincerely
Carl Sanders
200 Elm Street
San Mateo. Ca. 94401

MTC-00007725

From: Khozem Poonawala
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:12am
Subject: MicroSoft Settlement

Microsoft, or any company for that matter, should have the freedom to innovate. The Microsoft case should be settled, now, once and for all. It is good for America and the american economy.

Khozem Poonawala

MTC-00007726

From: George Aubrey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:21am
Subject: about time

This settlement should go forward and not delay causing more problems for the consumer. This lawsuit has caused enough problems by not allowing Microsoft freely develop their software. When Microsoft begins to gouge the consumer with high prices of their software then lets get them, in the meantime let the consumer call the shots.

MTC-00007727

From: TWOROME@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

I believe that Microsoft deserves fair and unbiased treatment. I am a supporter of Windows and of Microsoft integrating features. When the computer companies started, I could not afford the great features of the Apple and had to stick with a Vic 20. While dating myself a bit, I found Microsoft to be the only company willing to bring computing down to a level I could afford and my family could understand.

Please stop the nonsense. There are bigger fish such as Credit Card Companies that need to be stopped and Oil and Car companies that should be providing better alternatives and more fuel efficient cars. If you have any questions, please feel free to email back.

Thank you,
Tworome@aol.com

MTC-00007728

From: BUCELATO@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I can accept the ruling of the court BUT I feel that in an open society we can only advance if we provide an environment that supports innovative business strategies. Microsoft started from the bottom and made many investors wealthy, companies successful and our nation a leader in the software development. We need to ask the WHY should we handicap the leadership of current and future companies like Microsoft and allow them to ride on the coat tails by taking legal action.

I, as an INFORMED consumer, knew what I had bought and what the consequences of my decision . . . I assume the responsibility and accountability of my decisions . . . AND others need to do the same. Microsoft would not have grown if through individual research their products were rejected as occurred in many areas of technology.

John Bucelato
301 Willards Way
Yorktown, VA 23693
CC:BUCELATO@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00007729

From: David Watkins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:13am
Subject: <no subject>

Dear Sirs: I am anxious to see the case against Microsoft settled in a manner that is fair to all parties, and does not infringe upon Microsoft's freedom to innovate, to make creative use of a free market to aggressively market its widely used and superior products to the world. I feel that a quick and fair settlement to this case is in the best interest of the consumers and the economy of our country. Thank you for giving me this opportunity to express my opinion.

Sincerely,
David Watkins

MTC-00007730

From: Alex Melli
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:15am
Subject: My Opinion

To who it may concern:

Regarding the Anti-Trust case against Microsoft Corp., and the pending penalty phase, I would like to register my opinion. I do not agree with the penalties being assessed. The proposed penalties I've heard, involving Microsoft contributing loads of computers and software to schools is not appropriate for several reasons:

- It is creating future users (i.e. customers) for Microsoft. It's like letting a drug company give a vitamin to schoolchildren, making them dependent on it and creating a future customer.
- This is actually a bonus for Microsoft, giving them more inroads to the education market!
- The penalty is a minor inconvenience at worst. For that corporation, it is the equivalent of a parking ticket.
- The were found GUILTY of a violation, so the price to pay should be a proactive move to repair their damage AND make sure it does not happer further.
- It is difficult to asses the value of any donated computers of software. Software should be assessed by physical cost of the product. So donating a single program does not count as $300, but the actual cost to the company, probably around $20.

If Microsoft is to be properly penalized, one factor should be an educational donation. The order of money should be in the hundreds of millions (this is supposed to be a penalty, after all), and it should be a flat out cash payment. It should be left to the recipient of the money what to do with it, not the party being "penalized." And why should the guilty part have any say in what their penalty is in the first place? If I think that speeding ticket is too much, do I have any choice? NO. The law dictates my punishment, and I'm bound to that. Just because Microsoft is the biggest player in the game, they are still a player, not the referee.

BOTTOM LINE: Microsoft needs to be PENALIZED for being found GUILTY. And on a final note, the argument that breaking up Microsoft would have too big of an impact on the entire computer industry (and the economy) should be proof in itself that the company is a monopoly. . .

Sincerely,
Alex Melli
Laguna Beach, California

MTC-00007732

From: Gooddadone@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:16am
Subject: (no subject)

Microsoft is the Ford Motor Company of the computer business. It is a shame to penalize a company for being the forward looking and the brains of the industry. Shame on the justice department, our government penalizing a company for doing what is correct, for inventing their components for their use in order to better serve the public.

Ed Logue gooddadone@juno.com

MTC-00007734

From: A. Bairamian
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:18am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement. I support DOJ decision to settle the Microsoft lawsuit.

This ill-advised lawsuit—instigated by jealous competitors and presided over by a biased judge—has caused great harm to Microsoft and the entire tech sector.

It is time to end this useless lawsuit, so Microsoft can go back to producing and innovating.

A. Bairamian
Glendale, CA.

MTC-00007735

From: David Demland
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:17am
Subject: Microsoft Comments

Dear Mrs. Hesse,
Here are my comments about the Microsoft settlement.

David Demland
3506 E. Glenrosa
Phoenix, AZ 85018
(602) 955-3248
demland@home.com
Renata Hesse
Antitrust Division
U.S. Department of Justice
601 D Street, NW Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mrs. Hesse,
I would like to introduce myself. My name is David Demland. I have been in software development for almost 15 years. I have work in all aspects of software development during my career. For the past three years I have been a Quality Assurance (QA) manager. I have spent most of my career centered on not only the software that is developed, but the way software is developed. I have worked hard to get developers to understand that we have to have a goal of “no defects”, weather or not we can produce “no defects”. I have done everything from writing code to leading projects and development teams. I say all of this so that it may be clear that I am an expert in the area of software and software development. I wish that all the following comments are taken in that light. The following comments reflect my feelings about the U.S. Government and Microsoft settlement.

I wish to thank the U.S. Government and the Nine States that have settled this long awaited case for all their due diligence and hard work to finally settle this landmark case. All of us in this industry are in your debt for this work. If for no other reason than that we now know that if a hi-tech company can obtain a monopoly they may break the law all they want to remove competition and nothing will happen. Not long ago I had the hope that free competition and a fair business ethic might return to our industry leader, I now know that will never happen. In July of 1998 there was a great article in the Arizona Republic about John D. Rockefeller and Bill Gates. This article was about a new book called “Titan” by Ron Chernow. This book told about Rockefeller and the author of the article showed how much alike Bill Gates was in respect to business. The only difference is that Rockefeller was not as successful as Gates in getting the government to accept that a monopoly should be allowed to do what it wants with no penalties. Did the author of this article know something at that time that the rest of us missed?

As I have read and followed just about everything that came out from the trial all the way down to this proposed settlement one thing has come to mind over and over again—everything being talked about seems to focus on how Microsoft has conducted its business in the past and how to keep them from doing these practices again in the future. Yet everything points to how fast this industry changes. This leads to a simple question: How will restricting the way Microsoft conducted itself in the 90's apply to today's conduct when the business practices have already changed in the industry as a whole and Microsoft is doing the same thing but in different ways? As a guide I will use the Competitive Impact Statement that describes the way this proposal will work. On page 4 there are two bulleted points that came to my attention right a way, for reference they are the third and fourth bullet points. Both of these points are to ensure that third parties can work with Microsoft products. At this point there are no time lines mention, but the point is clear that this will be done so that third parties have time to get their products to work with Microsoft products. These missing time lines will need to be kept in mind, there will be times I will return to these points again.

I find it interesting that on page 14 it talks about the court findings that: Microsoft threatened to cancel development of its “Office for Macintosh” software, which, as Microsoft recognized, was critical to Apple's business. Microsoft required Apple to make Internet Explorer its default browser and restricted Apple's freedom to feature and promote non-Microsoft browsing software, in order to protect the applications barrier to entry. Yet the current provisions really do not address this behavior. Of course this would mean that Microsoft would have to have a monopoly on office suites was well. Since this has not been an issue in the court it needs to be looked at to understand the company culture. In the industry today, for the most part, it has been conceded that MS Office is a monopoly in the office suite arena

1. Will Microsoft use this tactic again? This will be certain.

1. Window XP / .NET Microsoft's Expanding Monopoly, <http://www.consumerfed.org/WINXP—anticompetitive—study.pdf> A look at what has become known as the halloween documents will give a very detail insight about this issue
2. In the first halloween document Microsoft implies that a way to beat Unix in general would be “Fold extended functionality into protocols / services and create new protocols”. This look shows that in the same matter that Microsoft blackmailed Apple they would blackmail the whole industry if they could. Many thought that Microsoft would never extend a recognize standard after the halloween documents were published, yet in Windows 2000, W2K, Microsoft did just that. A well known and accepted security standard was added to by Microsoft. This standard is called Kerberos. Once again the use of the Microsoft OS can be used by Microsoft to change the industry just by doing. Where does this behavior help the industry and the consumer except just to push Microsoft's dominance farther? In Wired magazine there was a comment about the change that Microsoft was going through at that time when Steve Ballmer was moved into Bill Gates position of presidency. James Wallace said: 2. These are internal Microsoft documents that was published on the internet. After these papers were published, Microsoft not only admitted that were real, but Microsoft went as far as to say this is the way they do normal business. These can be found at: <http://www.opensource.org/halloween1.html>, <http://www.opensource.org/halloween12.html>, and <http://www.opensource.org/halloween3.html>, Ballmer's promotion “represents a fundamental shift away from workgroup computing into not only enterprise computing but internet computing, which requires a different sensitivity” 3. 3. Why Bill Gates Quit His Job, by James Wallace, Wired December 1998 Could it be that James Wallace saw what Consumer Federation of America just reported in September 2001? Once again I ask: How can Microsoft be held accountable in a 2001 software industry using a 1990's industry model when the industry has changed so much? Are we saying that when an industry changes fast enough a business that breaks the law should be allowed to because they can change the industry before any sanctions are handed out to them?

1. Window XP / .NET Microsoft's Expanding Monopoly, <http://www.consumerfed.org/WINXP—anticompetitive—study.pdf> At the top of page 18 there is a discussion about what Microsoft Middleware is. The way this has been defined it allows Microsoft to tell the industry what the middleware is, not what the market believes. To understand how this effects the industry as a whole I will relate a story of a problem I ran into that cost the business I worked for eight months of work and left many of our customers in a bind. Microsoft create the Microsoft Data Access

Component, MDAC, to allow Windows applications to use different ODBC drivers to access databases. When Office 2000 was released, Microsoft release a new version of MDAC. This version of MDAC was not compatible with previous version. There were many problems with Microsoft including a new service pack release that had the same problems. To make a long story short it took eight months to get the two fixes to allow both of our products to work with this new MDAC. This is a very high price for a small business. Does this sound like a business that is trying to work with well their customers? What does this story mean to this settlement? Well if Microsoft can say what is middleware by themselves, what are companies like the one I work for to do? Are we always going to be expected to keep rewriting our products to match what Microsoft tells us to do just because they have a monopoly on the OS and they do not have to care about us as small businesses?

1. Window XP / .NET Microsoft's Expanding Monopoly, <http://www.consumerfed.org/WINXP—anticompetitive—study.pdf>

2. These are internal Microsoft documents that was published on the internet. After these papers were published, Microsoft not only admitted that were real, but Microsoft went as far as to say this is the way they do normal business. These can be found at: <http://www.opensource.org/halloween1.html>, <http://www.opensource.org/halloween12.html>, and <http://www.opensource.org/halloween3.html>. Wait a minute, this settlement dictates that this will not happen because middleware API's have to be disclosed. Take a moment at look closely at this case. Where in this story did anything deal with an API? In fact just after this Office release became a big enough deal to developers, Microsoft announced that MDAC would become part of OS 2. All these problems were backward compatibility issues and this is just one of the new tools Microsoft can use to control the industry in the new environment that has changed since the 1990's and this settlement does not even address these types of issues. Once again I ask, are hi-tech business allow to break any laws they wish and because the industry changes so fast there is nothing that can be done about it?

2. This was at Microsoft developer days here in Phoenix that later the next year. This problem of Microsoft doing what ever they want to control the industry appears on page 19 as well. In the last paragraph a Microsoft Middleware Product mentions the Microsoft's Java Virtual Machine. Did you know that this no longer exists? Microsoft, after losing to Sun on the Java Virtual Machine, JVM, issues has now created a new language and drop support for JVM. How is this going to effect the industry? Once again because Microsoft is using it's monopoly power to force business to rewrite all their products. It is now clear how Steve Ballmer has lead Microsoft into the internet age the same way as Bill Gates lead Microsoft into the 1990's. Their goal is to keep Microsoft the largest player no matter how it effects the consumer or other businesses. What do you think John D. Rockefeller would say today after seeing his business penalized and Microsoft left to doing it over and over again? What is the consumer to think? In all this there is another accomplice to the dirty deeds of Microsoft. This is the government. That's right. On page 20, the last three lines, the government has told the country do not start a business in an area that will compete with Microsoft Middleware it can not be allowed. Where do I get this from? It is simple, what was the last start-up company able to sell at least a million copies of their product from the start? I have yet to find one. So what this means is if there is a start-up in one of these areas do not worry Microsoft does not have to tell you anything. So just think, after spending a lot of money you will go out of business anyway. What a way to go. The government has said as long as the current competition can stay alive there will be competition, but once that competition is gone, O well. Once again thank you for looking out for the consumer. As it is stated on page 21 this "is intended to avoid Microsoft's affirmative obligations... being triggered by minor, or even, nonexistent, products that have not established a competitive potential in the market". This is a great thought, if there is no competition, how can you be a monopoly? How is no new competition good for the consumer? I find the commits on page 24 at the bottom of the page rather odd:

Thus, the key to the proper remedy in this case is to end Microsoft's restrictions on potentially threatening middleware, prevent it from hampering similar nascent threats in the future and restore the competitive conditions created by similar middleware threats. How is this going to be achieved if over a million copies are required on page 21? This seems to be a contradiction to me. Am I missing something? As if this has not been technical enough let's talk about how the dual boot is to be done on page 26. At the current time W2K was released with a small problem, it does not look at the BOIS for the hard disk information at boot up time. This basically renders tools like System Commander useless. So how is a consumer, or GEM, going to be able to use these tools if Microsoft bypasses common practices. Where is this address to ensure that there is no subversion to activating other partitions and making these tools and their manufactures useless. One argument is that this is an API that has to be disclosed, but if it takes months for this information to become available there is no way to have fixes in place for these companies that create these tools. This will be looked at close a little later.

On page 27 is one of the best examples of how the government failed to help support the free market competition. Here the industry has been told that if you are not one of the 20 largest OEMs, that Microsoft licenses to, you can be locked out of information. This is great, once again any small company has been told that they should not enter into this industry. Does this mean that the government supports only having large business? If not how will a small business be able to compete under this section? Even on page 20 and 28 the message seems to be clear the top 20 OEMs are the only ones that count.

On page 32 there are two issues. At the bottom of the page it talks about dual boot systems being allowed. As I have already talked about, how it this going to be handled if Microsoft continues to bypass standard practices on boot up? If tools like System Commander can be rendered useless what is going to keep Microsoft from allowing this same issues on a dual boot system to discourage OEMs from shipping these systems. Would it not have made more since to ensure that Microsoft uses the industry standards to ensure they do not subvert this issue? I think a very important issue has been missed in this area.

The best part of this page is at the end of the first paragraph. I would like to thank you for penalizing all of us in the industry for Microsoft abusing their monopoly power. I find it outrageous that is was agreed that OEMs must use software substitutions that act like the Microsoft software that it is being substituted for. Is it assumed that these OEMs write their own software? If so that is wrong. There are many companies, like the small ones I have worked for, that do this software and you have just told them if it cost tens of thousands of dollars to rewrite their software do it if they want an OEM use your software in place of Microsoft. What did these businesses do wrong to deserve this penalty?

On page 43 it talks about Microsoft putting information on their MSDN for APIs and other important information that has to be shared. I found this amusing because it does not say how this information should be handled on MSDN. In fact this has allowed Microsoft a great way to make more money off of developers. They can put this information on MSDN in a hidden place and when developers call to find it they can be charged to find out where it is. What a penalty for breaking the law.

Now we come to the timeline items. On page 35 the proposal for the releasing of the XP APIs is a great try, but it still gives Microsoft about a year lead time to get a head of all the other developers. I have created, and maintained, this type of documentation at two different businesses in my career and in every case I have had this type of documentation before we got to far into the early stages of testing. Microsoft should already have this as well. It should not take more than two or three months, at most, to polish these API documents to make them public. I find it hard to accept that the definition of this timeline, for documentation, is different for the middleware products. I have a real problem with timeline of the last major beta before release before the first release candidate for the middleware products. In most cases this will be only a couple of months before the final release. This will make it hard for other developers to make changes to work in a timely matter. Especially when there are multimillion lines of code in many products today. Please see above about the MDAC story. The standard that the industry tends to follow for a beta test is best put: The product has completed all of the major features content that has been planned for the final release... During the beta release, the product will be tested for its functionality, specifically with regard to defects.

1. Michael E. Bays—Software Release Methodology 1999 Prentice-Hall This definition makes it clear that the industry believes that at the time of the beta test all functionality is complete, this means that the APIs are complete as well, otherwise it would be an alpha test and the product is still changing. Does this timeline not allow Microsoft to hold back information for middleware APIs until it is hard for competitors to be ready at the same time as Microsoft? How does this keep Microsoft from locking out software like Netscape? Please see page 12. Pages 36—38 deals with protocols but it misses the fundamental problem with Microsoft and how they can hurt the industry and the consumer. How can protocols be talked about without including industry standards? Microsoft has shown that it will do what ever it takes to keep their monopoly. This has been well proven in the trial court level and upheld in the appellate court level. Yet this fact seems to have been over looked when it comes to the use of industry standard protocols by Microsoft. Microsoft has had proposals internally placed on the table to extend common protocols to help lock out competitors 1.

1. Halloween documents <http://www.opensource.org/halloween1.html>, <http://www.opensource.org/halloween12.html>, and <http://www.opensource.org/halloween3.html>, This issue was thrust into the fore front when W2K was released with Kerberos. Microsoft had extended this common industry standard to try to lock out other Unix computers. Microsoft's extension to this industry standard is also a major part of the European case against Microsoft. It also shows how much power Microsoft has to destroy computer connectivity. Why is it that nothing has been said about Microsoft doing as so many of the smaller businesses, in this industry, must do have to have these standards changed? That is make Microsoft have to go before these bodies to get these standards changed instead of being able to dictate to the whole industry a new standard. If this issue is not addressed Microsoft will be able to use this ability to change standards to continue their predatory monopoly actions even in the new Internet age. Can one company be allowed to dictate to the whole world how business should be ran? Should not Microsoft be forced to use common standards so that all competitors will have a chance?

On page 39 the whole world has been told that Microsoft does not have to disclose protocols if these disclosures would compromise system security. Listed items are anti-piracy, anti-virus, software licensing, digital rights management, encryption and authentication features. First of all, Microsoft is not the only business that has had find ways to handle anti-piracy, antivirus, software licensing, and digital rights management. Every business that produces software has had these issues and all of them have found a way to make them work. The only difference is that all the other business have not always be able to have both the OS and the application under their control. So these businesses have turned to common industry standards, and practices, to find a solutions. Why should Microsoft be able to change these standards just because they are the largest software company and control the OS and office suites? As far as encryption and authentication, how does this section protect the industry and consumer from being blackmailed by Microsoft into lower or less secure standards?

How can this type of control and influence be bad for the consumer? Bill Gates once said to the German magazine (FOCUS) that bugs (defects) are unimportant 1. Also Microsoft, itself, has documented that there were 63,000 known defects in Windows 2000, W2K, when it shipped 2. If it is more important to Microsoft to get the product out than to get a properly running product out, how can Microsoft be trusted to do a protocol standard right without other industry leaders giving input?

1. FOCUS Oct 23, 1995—found on-line at <http://www.cantrip.org/nobugs.html>

2. Microsoft, Who Let the Bugs Out? osOpinion.com Oct 23, 2001—found on-line at <http://www.osopinion.com/perl/story/14306.html> Page 40 allows Microsoft to enter into a contract with a developer that limits that developer from promoting other competing software if such limitation are reasonably necessary. The problem here is what does this really mean. For example, if Microsoft is working on a contract with a business that has some existing file converters to bring in other word processing formats into Word for Windows, WinWord, can Microsoft restrict the contracting company from exporting from WinWord so that there is no way to convert out of the Microsoft product? How does this wording work in the internet business model?

On page 45 the second paragraph talks about removing middleware. How is this effected with help files? No matter what browser is installed on a Microsoft computer, when the HTML help system is invoked Internet Explorer, IE, is the only browser used to display the HTML files. This means that no matter what browser is used to surf the internet IE must be present for HTML help to work. How does this section handle this issue? Does this not allow Microsoft to continue this practice?

Also on this same page it is talked about the technical changes to W2K and XP, yet it only gives a timeline for the XP changes. What happens to W2K? There are many consumers that have privacy issues with XP so it is very important that W2K changes must be made and W2K must be maintained.

On page 48 it states that Microsoft can not prompt a user for OEM custom changes for 14 days. Does this mean that Microsoft can then prompt the user all the time until they get so fed up with the prompts they allow Microsoft to change the computer configuration? Why is this even in the document? Is Microsoft saying that if an OEM sets up a computer that users are to stupid to change the factory settings? Why not leave users alone altogether? I give you all a hand for the concept of the TC. This is a great way to ensure that Microsoft abides by the settlement without creating a whole new branch of the government to do the oversight.

I have just one question: Who's stupid idea was it to add the section on page 58 that the TC information can not be used in any proceeding before the Court? Is this a "get out of jail free card" for Microsoft? Are you trying to make it cost the tax payer more money to make sure Microsoft plays by the rules? Is this a loophole that Microsoft can use later so that it can get off the hook after it has failed to follow this settlement? What am I missing? This is something to lead the public to believe that Microsoft is paying a price for breaking the law when it is doing nothing but rewarding Microsoft for do something that no other company has been able to do; break the law and get away with it? This whole section should be removed.

Again on page 60 it looks like there is another loophole that is good for Microsoft and not for the consumer. It says that after the initial five years of this settlement the Plaintiffs may ask for a two year extension. What happens if Microsoft still has problems in the two year extension, nothing? What is the public to think about this? If Microsoft puts up with the TO long enough that everything will go away not matter what? Is this fair for a company that broke the law? On page 62, where there is a list of relief that was looked at but not part of the settlement. In this list there were a couple of items that I find hard to believe were not part of this settlement. I find these two issues to hard to skip over with the weight of what this outcome has on the consumer and the industry as a whole. The first one not ensuring that Microsoft includes non-Microsoft middleware in its distribution of the Windows Operating System. The example here was the Java Virtual Machine, JVM. I go back to what I said before, are we to believe that only Microsoft knows where the direction of the industry should be going? Or should we take it that Microsoft should be allowed to find new ways to maintain it's monopoly at the expense of the consumer? What is it so hard to about Microsoft being require Microsoft follow industry standards like any other business? Is everyone afraid that Microsoft would have to compete with more competition if this is done? After all is it unreasonable for Microsoft to lower the barrier to entry since that was one of the key points of this whole case?

The other item in this list was requiring Microsoft to fully support industry standards. Was this dropped because to force this on Microsoft would also allow other competitors into the market place? Does this point to this whole settlement being nothing more than smoke and mirrors? These two items alone could have great impact on restoring competition to the market. How could these have been overlooked, or removed from the list? Now lets look at some of the other overlooked problems with this settlement. Right now Microsoft seems to have a lot of security problems. This may be misleading in some ways. What I mean is that Microsoft may not be any worst at security than any one else, but because there is no other real competition it makes Microsoft a perfect target

1. This would lead one to believe that for the public's best interest there needs to be a viable option to the Windows OS. This will never happen as long as Microsoft continues down its current path of total monopolization of the PC OS. This is where this settlement fails the most. I would hope that this is not that hard to see and understand, am I wrong?

1. Good security administration is crucial by Madeline Bennett, IT Week Friday October 19, 2001. On Page 10 of Competitive Impact Statement there is a perfect commit that says that users want to know the OS will have the needed applications before investing in an OS. This is important observation. Where does this settlement help towards that goal? Or is it that this goal is to big of a price to be paid for hurting the consumer and destroying competition with predatory practices? How could the Declaration of Carl Shapiro be overlooked when he said that one of the reasons that Linux failed to be competition to Windows is because of the lack of popular applications like Microsoft Office 1. This alone would allow competition back into this industry. So why not have Microsoft port its office suite to Linux? Would this not help restore true competition without rewarding Microsoft for breaking the law? If Microsoft had to port this suite and was required to support it on the Linux platform for three years would not that do much better over all? Just think, if Microsoft had a product line on Linux, it would be less likely to "expand" industry protocols to lock out an OS that it would be trying to recover their expense for porting to. What would be wrong with this? Or are you saying that the industry and consumer are not important in this matter?

1. Declaration of Carl Shapiro page 3. These types of relief would go very far to really help innovation by allowing true competition back into the market place. This is what this industry, and the consumer, need. Overall the current settlement penalizes other business for Microsoft's conduct and it even rewards Microsoft for breaking the law. This is a shame. I hope that this is reject and a real settlement that benefits the industry and consumers is reached.

In the above commits it should also be clear that this settlement, as currently proposed, will do nothing in keeping Microsoft from using predatory practices with the way the current market is moving. We can not expect reliefs based off of the way the industry worked in the past to apply to the way it does business today when it is a different business world and the current settlement does not take that into account. This must not be overlooked if real relief is to be made for the consumer and for the industry as a whole. There are many ways that this settlement encourages Microsoft to continue its current goals for removing all competitors from the market and that means there was a lot of wasted money to get a court ruling that does not change anything. At what point will it finally be accepted that Microsoft will only learn a lesson if it required to give up some of its monopoly power? When will the industry and the consumer finally be defended?

Thank You,
David Demland

MTC-00007736

From: Robert Corkrum

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:18am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Move on!!!!!!The few attorneys generals holding up this settlement need to understand that everyone but them has moved on.It's a new economy stupid! thanks Bob

MTC-00007737

From: ginih
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:19am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I disagree with the tearing apart of Microsoft. It seems if anyone in the U.S. comes up with a wonderful invention there is always someone who is jealous of them. They want a part of it & so they sue. Look at A.T.T. the little companys wanted a part of them. So they sued every time they started to go bankrupt. They also use the Bell Co. lines at very little cost. Do you think we could go into McDonalds & rent their grills for very little money? I don't think sooooo. It's time to tell the sue happy people to crawl back in their holes. If they can't come up with good ideas of their own, don't let them sue & steal from the Co.'s that are contributing to the economy. Let Microsoft alone, they are the creative Company.

MTC-00007738

From: Charlotte Kenworthy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:21am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello, It is my opioion that the Microsoft settlement is a fair and just settlement. It is time to move on and put this whole ordeal behind us. Competitors and special interest groups have carried this far enough...let's abide by given settlement. Charlotte Kenworthy

MTC-00007739

From: CANDA
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:21am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I think it is time for the government to leave Microsoft alone. Why not go after the drug manufacturers and their deals made with insurance companies. The under the counter deals are not in the best interest of the consumers and should be covered by anti trust laws. Microsoft is o.k. and even though I do not use their internet services, they continue to give me excellent service. I agree with Ted Kennedy when he said the case against Microsoft sounded like "sour apples". I will continue to use the products of Microsoft even if they are more expensive because their products are more user friendly. Thank you,

Carolyn Hinton

MTC-00007740

From: Brent Kopp
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:21am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement as proposed should be accepted by both parties. True, MS is a tough and ruthless competitor. That will force anyone attempting to break their dominant position to develop a new software or computing method that will be a significant improvement in order to impress the using public. The "market" is a rough and tumble setting, the higher the reward the greater the energy and risk taking and the more likely chance of really better, as opposed to merely different, products that will benefit the using community.

Their are times when the MS programs drive me crazy with their uncorrected programming errors, syntax mistakes and just sloppy lines of code. But I trust the competitive market more than a government agency to bring me relief. Also, in my opinion the former lawyers in the anti trust division gave too much credence to the complainers(Netscape etc..) who perhaps influenced this entire affair thru their campaign contributions and their political allies. It has been sordid from the start, so let's get it put to bed.

Brent Kopp
saguaroSpouting@earthlink.net
EarthLink: It's your Internet.

MTC-00007741

From: bevnels@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:22am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

In my opinnion, government should get out of the way of free enterprise and let it do the job it does so well!! Microsoft has—and is—providing a good product at a fair price. Consumers are not unsatisfied!

The ones unsatisfied are those who don't have the ability to compete.

Nels

MTC-00007742

From: Clyde w. Butler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:25am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi ! I would like to see the Microsoft case settled and let them have the right to innovate ! Thank you !!!!

Clyed W. Butler
cwmjb@defnet.com

MTC-00007743

From: HDMcBRIDE@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

the government should settle, Micorsoft has been great for the economy of the Northwest and has enabled business that use computers more competative.

H.D. McBride

MTC-00007744

From: William C. Caccamise Sr. , M.D.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft has revolutionized the computer field and the practical use of the Internet by millions of people. It is the Jewel of the American capitalistic system. I have always felt that Mr. Gates should be given the highest civilian award offered by our government. The aggressive attack on Microsoft by the Clinton Administration was a disservice to the computer world and society itself.

I know that my entire family including my grandchildren, my children, my wife, and myself—all avid computer users—are indebted to Microsoft for making the computer world and The Informational Age available to us in such a practicable manner. We hope that the DOJ will allow Microsoft to proceed freely in its unending goal of ever improving our access to the world of computers, software, and the Internet.

Thank you Microsoft—and Mr. Gates—for making the retirement years of this 78 year old physician years filled with excitement and learning.

Sincerely,
William Charles Caccamise Sr, MD
12 South Pittsford Hill Lane Pittsford, New York
wccaccamise@hotmail.com
Telephone : 1-585-381-3855
FAX: 1-585-385-1355

MTC-00007745

From: ann.reid@thomsonlearning.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:26am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I urge you to let the settlement regarding Microsoft go through for all states. It is of no benefit to anyone to delay this process any further. One of the many great American ideals is the free market economy in which the best companies can survive. Because a company is more innovative than its competitors is no reason to prevent it from continuing its business.

MTC-00007746

From: Supern1987@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:25am
Subject: (no subject)

Tell these renegade states to knock it off and get back to the nations business!

MTC-00007747

From: Muelgroup@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:27am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a computer user, I feel that the settlement is more than fair. Consumers world wide have been benefitted by innovation created by competition. I firmly believe that Microsoft competitors are misusing the court system to gain what they could not attain in the market place.

Edward J. Mueller
15000 Village Greem Drive # 40
Mill Creek, Wa 98012

MTC-00007748

From: BCStephenson@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle the Microsoft case as soon as possible: the proposed settlement is fair and reasonable.

Regards,
Brad Stephenson
San Marcos, CA

MTC-00007749

From: morales
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 12:29am

Subject: Bill is God.

Microsoft rules! Resistance is futile. You will be assimilated.

morales 3024 west 25
cleveland, oh, 44113

morales@nccw.net

Victories are temporary, however failure is forever.

MTC-00007750

From: Bob Rasmussen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

May it please the court, I appreciate as a consumer, the opportunity, and right to comment on the settlement agreement between the Microsoft Corporation, and the United States Department of Justice. My comments come as a consumer, specific to the issues that relate to my purchase, use, and experience with the many software products available today, which include those developed and sold by Microsoft.

In the roughly three years that this case has been under trial, I have read much of the available information on the trial, as well as the many, many statements given by competitors of Microsoft, and their concern with Microsoft's behavior, both before and during the trial. Never in my recollection of watching the business world have I observed such a concerted effort by numerous companies to malign and destroy the image, perception, and products, of a successful company. And what amazes me even more is that to a large degree, these companies employ many of the very same tactics used by Microsoft yet without any apparent threat of reproof. America Online (heretofore referred to as AOL) is a company that for every intent and purpose, has today the vast majority of Internet users as customers for their service. Effectively, they are presently as we speak, a monopoly in that industry. Yet to read any news publication today, the most that fact will bring is a limp assertion that yes, AOL is the predominant Internet Service Provider (heretofore referred to as ISP), with roughly 30 million subscribers, and it is left at that. No one is investigating AOL, no Congressional Hearings are scheduled, and in fact, great care is taken to ensure that their product and service in this industry is insulated from competition.

During their recent merger with Time Warner, Inc., the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) had the opportunity in their review of the merger, to require AOL to make their instant messenger service compatible with other similar services. As a consumer, I can instantly relate to the importance and advantage of such a requirement. The FCC however did not capitalize on that opportunity, and as a result, the media giant continues to lock out users of other ISP services from communicating with AOL subscribers.

In comparison, when I review and observe the Microsoft case, as well as comments associated, I see that products where I as a consumer realize a benefit, are under constant scrutiny, not only from the government, but even more so from competitors. For example, the various versions of the Windows operating system have for years offered a form of a media player, which is presently under dispute by many competitors, as that application or device resides within the latest version of the Windows product, Windows XP. For years that was not a concern, but now another company exists, RealNetworks, which offers for free a download player called RealPlayer. Suddenly a benefit that I had as a consumer with the purchase of an operating system is threatened because another company wants to limit what is contained within the operating system. Regardless of the fact that any consumer can download for free the RealPlayer, RealNetworks Inc., for one, among others, protests the inclusion of Microsoft's Media Player within the operating system because it competes directly with what RealNetworks would like to give away for free. The bottom line? As a consumer, I see the potential of a very robust and "application capable" operating system, one that offers me great flexibility and performance, being required to reduce it's service and functionality to me so that others can improve their opportunity to compete. Yet the fact is, this product offered by RealNetworks is an easy download, and is often loaded onto machines alongside of Microsoft's Media Player anyway. Twenty years ago, there might have been a case to consider here. Consumers were still getting their feet wet in determining the right hardware and software to purchase, and many were easily confused, and possibly misled in the process. Today however consumers are quite prepared to make well informed decisions about their hardware and software purchases. With a plethora of information available, through various forms of communication (media, print, Internet, classes, service companies, etc) the consumer has more than enough information available to help them in their purchasing decisions. And frankly, that is supposed to be what all of this is about:

The consumer, and the protection of their purchasing power and decisions. In fact, everyone from Senator Orrin Hatch, to Ann Bingham (head of Antitrust Division, original investigation, 1995) to Judge Penfield Jackson has stated all along that the it was the consumer they were representing in their fight against Microsoft. However the ramifications of their actions has been anything but positive for consumers. I have today countless choices of software I can run on my PC, simply because of the operating system standard provided by Microsoft. I do not use Microsoft software exclusively, nor do any of the people I see regularly who work with computers. As a consumer, I feel I am quite well informed about what products exist in the marketplace, and I am quite confident I can make intelligent choices about the products I wish to purchase. However I believe that of ALL the interests represented in the courtroom, in the media, and in print, the consumer's interests have been the least heard or considered. Companies like Sun Microsystems, Oracle, AOL, Novell, Apple, & IBM are not nearly so interested in what works well for me as a consumer, as they are interested in gaining market share for their own respective companies. If this settlement is derailed, through the lobbying of companies like this, it will prove once and for all that competition, and consumer choice in the marketplace, no longer determine or direct the outcome of products and services, as they have for the last several hundred years.

Market share, and competitive advantage cannot and should not be awarded in a courtroom. The measures within this settlement agreement are sufficient to ensure that Microsoft cannot take unfair advantage of, or punish any company in the future. At the same time however it preserves Microsoft's right and ability to continue to provide the best product possible, which is for me, the consumer, the best and only appropriate outcome.

The additional measures sought by the nine rouge states go well beyond what is necessary, and actually threaten the intellectual property of one of the country's most successful businesses (and this frankly, threatens us all). No other company in this country (or the world for that matter), has been required to dismantle it's showcase product, to it's own demise and destruction, simply to appease the wishes of less successful competitors. To do so now, would unfairly serve only those companies, and would destroy much of the gain realized by consumers through Microsoft's achievements in product integration. If this court truly values the purchasing power of millions of consumers, who are today quite savvy about what kinds of software they need and want, it will allow this settlement to stand, and repel the imperious demands of the nine states that remain as extreme and overreaching. Thank you for your time and attention to review my comments.

Sincerely,

Robert S. Rasmussen
rasm47@nidlink.com

MTC-00007751

From: Gary Sanford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:34am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. I overwhelmingly agree that the settlement is good for the industry and the American economy. I further believe prolonged litigation would only stifle innovation and just benefit a handful of well financed competitors. Sincerely,

Gary A. Sanford
17708 10th Ave N.E.
Shoreline, Wa 98155-3706

MTC-00007752

From: Alfred Holzheu
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:35am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,
Wake up and smell the coffee. We can buy the most incredible engineering marvel of our day (NT) or even Windows for the price of a video game. In what possible way has the public ever been harmed. This insanity (the whole government case against MS) could only be created and promulgated by entirely clueless lawyers, who have no conception of what it takes to create an operating systems or what life was like prior to MS. I doubt that they are angels, but no successful company ever is. The bottom line is what they have done to and for the general public and even mankind as a whole. I can't imagine any possible scenario that trivializes what MS has accomplished into something somehow detrimental to the public, the USA or mankind as a whole. Instead of taxing the public (and a tax it is, since MS must tack on the price of fighting the case to their products and we pay taxes to pay for the num-nuts who are prosecuting this case) with this ridiculous lawsuit, we should be cheering them on. About the only "remedy" that I can even possibly see is the requirement for MS to keep an open book regarding the various Window API's so that their well-earned and deserved defacto monopoly in the operating system area does not preclude others from creating useable and robust third party apps. Even this is a bit of a fool's errand, as the question as to exactly what an operating systems is, is in constant flux. I don't wish to pay lawyers forever chasing an accelerating train. There used to be a Hotel under construction in my town that we jokingly call the "Old carpenters rest home" because of the length of time it took to build it. I fear this lawsuit will become the same.

Whenever a lawyer in the government's employ runs out of meaningful work to do, they can bill a few hours to the "Never ending case". Lets give this up, and stop penalizing MS and ultimately us by this frivolous lawsuit.

Sincerely
Alfred Holzheu
alfred@syv.com

MTC-00007753

From: Don
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:38am
Subject: Microsoft settlement.

I would not still be a Microsoft stock holder if I thought they were not a good American company. I think, the settlement should end as soon as possible.

MTC-00007754

From: Kimberly Helms
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:38am
Subject: Microsoft Decision

To whom it may concern:
Please don't see my address and figure I'm an MS employee, so she doesn't count.

I am proud to be a Microsoft employee. I am a single mom who is able to send my child to private school and be involved in her school and activities. That's because Microsoft cares about people, and especially families and children. Last year, they donated hundred's of dollars, probably more than $1,000, worth of software to my daughter's school so they could learn on the latest, most innovative products. My daughter is 6, so her friends and she especially enjoy the Magic School Bus titles. I am very active in my community and church and let everyone know I work at Microsoft. As I said, I am very proud of that. Microsoft makes such a difference in our community, and the business world. We strive everyday to make someone's life better. We don't want to hurt others. We want to be the best. That's what I teach my daughter, to do the best she can at everything she does. What if her friends' parents started telling me to tell her to not work so hard, so they could catch up? Would that be fair to my daughter? No, and I imagine you would never tell that to your children.

That's what you would be teaching by holding Microsoft back from being the best. "If the competition gets better than you, we'll just hold them back until you can catch up". That's not the ideals this country was founded on. "Be your best" was told to me everyday by my Granny who helped raise me. The anti-trust and anti-competition laws were developed in times for businesses that had great, expensive barriers to entry. Partly due to Microsoft in some places, any person with a brain can go to a public library and learn to use a computer. Anyone could do what we do. Because we have passion for what we do, we do it well. So don't punish or hold us back because we have passion and drive. Let us continue to develop great software and great people, without having to wait on the competition to catch up.

Thank you,
Kimberly S. Helms

MTC-00007755

From: charles jenner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:39am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear DOJ,

Having lived through the debacle of the AT&T trial and the IBM trial, it seems to me that the case against Microsoft is weak, fostered by competing firms whose products were not of equal value and whose sales and marketing personnel were weak. In short, the competition to Microsoft did not have what it takes to succeed. Were it not for Senator Orin Hatch, I doubt that the case would have been launched. I discussed the merits of the Microsoft case with an attorney employed by a dot com company. I reflected upon the fact that each allegation against Microsoft is something I experienced in 35 years of employment in financial services. His reply was "Microsoft got big doing it, therefore the case. If Microsoft had not become successful, no case." That seems to me to be unequal protection or administration of the law.

The case should be closed promptly.

Sincerely yours,
Charles R. Jenner

MTC-00007756

From: DAVID DOLBEE
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:39am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Enough already—this boondoggle should never have begun, it's long past time for it to END. For all the "sins and crimes" Microsoft has been accused of, not nearly enough has been said and credited about their contribution to our society, our economy, and the future. If there's free time to investigate shady situations, start with "representatives" who give themselves a raise at midnight! In the context of the September 11th attack and all its consequences, while "normal life and activities" need to continue, we have no time, money or energy to continue pouring into this PERsecution ... and had we been putting the time, energy, and money into coordinating with Gates/Microsoft in our defense, is it possible September 11th might have been avoided???

MTC-00007757

From: MooseK9@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:41am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear Justice Department, Please wrap up the current settlement with Microsoft. As a tax payer I request that you stop wasting the governments money on this lawsuit against one of this countries best companies. Only the attorneys, Microsoft's competitors, and a few liberal politicians are profiting from prolonging this suit. Thank You. Gordon J Kinzler

CC:dick@durbin.senate.gov@inetgw,RFC-822=SenatorFitzg...

MTC-00007758

From: OYZONE@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:43am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Gentlemen, I feel that further litigation in this case is uncalled for, and the settlement seems fair to all involved. The settlement will certainly help the schools train the students in the use of computers. The settlement also puts Microsoft in the position of giving many of their innovations to the use of their competitors, which may tend to stifle further innovations. Also the cost of further litigation will be a burden on the taxpayers and Microsoft. I further feel that Judge Penfield Jackson had his mind set against Microsoft from the beginning of the trial, and there should have been an unbiased Judge appointed to take over the case.

I am Clarence J. Muth, 125 N.55th Street, Mesa, AZ. 85205.

MTC-00007759

From: JRLowrance@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:43am
Subject: MicroSoft Settlement
To The Dept. of Justice.

I personally think that the settlement between The U.S. Govt. and Microsoft should go forward because it seems like a fair agreement. The rights of the software company to protect its intellectual property, and the protection from monopolies for consumers seems to be balanced. To break up the company would not be in the best interest of either parties.

Thank You

John R. Lowrance
8855 Whispering Oaks
Redding Calif. 96002

MTC-00007760

From: RRB5331@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:47am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This is the first time in 60 years as a citizen I have written to the government about an issue. I feel strongly enough about this one to write. Please settle the above case and stop trying to split this company up. You should have better issues to address than to ruin American Private companies. No wonder they go to foreign lands to do their business. The courts are the ruin of almost everything.

Roger Baird
Portland, Or.

MTC-00007761

From: SANEE TABASSI
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:46am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Hello:

I would like to express my opinion on the Microsoft settlement. First of all I think suing a comp that brought so much money and has created so many jobs for this country is totally out of line. You can not single hand out Microsoft for being the best in what they do, there are so many comp in this country that have monopoly (Las Vegas area could be a great example, casinos, convenient stores, shopping centers, all owned by one persons or one corporation). I believe Microsoft offer is great and the government should except that, and let them move forward in this really bad and unstable economy. Thank you so much for your time.

MTC-00007762

From: GLARP
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:48am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I am CEO of the Gay and Lesbian Association of Retiring Persons Inc. devoted to creating senior housing that is gay and lesbian (LGBT) friendly. As an individual I wholeheartedly endorse the Microsoft Settlement—we need to get on and build America, not waste time with more litigation. It is crucial that this settlement be endorsed and passed.

Veronica St.Claire, 310-478-2245, Los Angeles, CA

MTC-00007763

From: mary-johne hickman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:49am
Subject: MICROSOFT 01-03-2002

To Whom It May Concern:
LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONG—I'M SICK OF YOUR CONTINUAL HARRASSMENT OF THIS FINE COMPANY—SCOTT MCNEALY MAKES ME SICK ALSO. END THIS ENDLESS PURSUIT TO DESTROY WHAT AMERICA MEANS—FREEDOM TO INNOVATE-LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONE, MARY-JOHNE HICKMAN

MTC-00007764

From: Ragnar de Sharengard
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:49am
Subject: Settlement

First, I don't own Microsoft stock and don't work at Microsoft or any other company for that matter, so I don't speak from a selfish motif. I find the US obsession with anti trust insane and is again going too far, all under the disguise of "what is best for the consumer". I remember the Government going after IBM in the '70s and vaguely remember a decade long fight. What were the big benefits to the consumer? It is easier to understand regulation of utilities as their products can be considered necessities in a modern society. Who is forced to use computers in first place and who is forced to choose Microsoft operating systems? Why don't they use UNIX or Linux or whatever is available instead? Why not use IBM's OS/2? If they can't compete whose fault is it?

To me it smacks of socialism the way the State Governors and the Clinton Government go after Microsoft. They should be happy that Microsoft doesn't pull up stakes and move to another country. My native country is Sweden, where socialistic labor laws went hand in hand with general jealousy and equal income through repressive taxation (and still do). The net result has been that many good companies have either been driven to bankruptcy or have moved abroad.

I think Microsoft's and the Bush Government's proposed settlement should be accepted and the company then shielded from new ridiculous law suits.

Ragnar de Sharengard
18325 129th Ave NE
Bothell, WA 98011
Phone: 425-483-0862
ragnarde@sprynet.com

MTC-00007765

From: Jim Olson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hasn't this gone on long enough?

Wouldn't it be in the best interest to get this behind us. I think that it would be a boost in the stock market and the economy to have this settled.

Settle Now for the best of all of us.

Sincerely,
James Olson

MTC-00007766

From: NTPOCKETS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:53am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please bring this suit to a conclusion and let competition settle the score. I am pro Microsoft because I'm tired of buying products that aren't compatible, poorly configured, expensive and from companies attempting to be just as aggressive as MSFT has been accused of being but with a poor product line.

This lawsuit is stifling the software industry, hurting me as a consumer as few companies are developing and innovating compatible products until a settlement is reached.

I made a choice in operating systems by rejecting Apple's offerings, Linux' offerings and I still use programs that aren't compatible with current MSFT programs because they work better for me! BUT,

Microsoft produces a product that evolves, improves and is affordable when it does change.

When other companies get their act together and make something better...guess who'll be curious enough to check it out...me again.

PLEASE, GOVERNMENT, LET ME MAKE MY OWN DECISIONS...IT'S MY MONEY AND I HAVE SPENT IT...AS HAVE OTHERS ON A BETTER PRODUCT AND MICROSOFT HAPPENS TO BE THE BENEFICIARY...ISN'T THAT WHAT IT'S SUPPOSED TO BE ABOUT?

Sincerely,
Staton Lorenz
President
Half Mile Cycle Race Corp

MTC-00007767

From: Wilson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:54am
Subject: Microsoft Sellment
Sirs:

I feel that this judgement or whatever has cost the tax payers enough and should be settled quickly. I believe that Microsoft has bowed over trying to settle this law suit for the benefit to the electronic industry and to the economy of our country.

MTC-00007768

From: ROB FLORY
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Please accept this settlement. It is good for the consumer, and OUR COUNTRY!!!

MTC-00007769

From: WILLIAM KLINE
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:56am
Subject: Settlement
Let's stop punishing Microsoft and get this thing overwith. Think of all the good things Microsoft could do in the way of research to benefit all of us if they weren't having to spend all these millions of dollars fighting a few disgruntled businesses who are afraid of competition, which is after all the American way of capitalism.

Sincerely, William A. Kline Klinehaven@webtv.net or wmakline@yahoo.com

MTC-00007770

From: ROD HALES
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:57am
Subject: microsoft settlement
We are sick and tired of the crybabies who want the last pound of flesh from Microsoft.....the feds settled their case and so did several states...tell the last few states fall in line and lets get it done once and for all...over and out.. Thank you... Rod and Barbara Hales.. Sherwood, Oregon 97140

MTC-00007771

From: Benjamin12148@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To those in power:

The entire system of "Antitrust" law is an abomination, and should be repealed and eliminated forever. "Antitrust" amounts to nothing more than punishing production because it is production. If you want a detailed argument for this position, read Chairman Alan Greenspan's article, "Antitrust", in the book, —Capitalism: The Unknown Ideal—. (Rand, Ayn, editor. New York: The New American Library, Inc., 1967, p. 63–71.)

Because "Antitrust" is in principle a moral and economic equivalent of poison, we should have as little of it as possible. Microsoft has done nothing wrong, and is a paragon of production. So be as lenient on Bill Gates and his associates as you have the courage and integrity to be. If you have a choice between punishing Microsoft and losing your job, think of another line of work. It will be better for the world, for America, and for your own souls.

Sincerely,
Ben Steinhart, M.A.
8699 Kenberton Dr.
Oak Park, MI, 48237-1732
(248) 544-7245 home (248) 435-5353 work

MTC-00007772

From: EVLANDFJL@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement!
Sirs:

It is my belief that prolonging litigation is not in the "best interest" of our economy or concerned citizens. I will concur the agreement you reached tentatively is in the "best interest" of all consumers...so stop procrastinating and allowing these special interest groups to intervene. Get the show on the road and settle this case! This is absolutely ridiculous and very costly to everyone by allowing such utter nonsense to continue this long. Please allow Microsoft the freedom to innovate! Thank you for your time and consideration in allowing me the opportunity to voice my opinion regarding this settlement.

Sincerely,
Frances Leonardini

MTC-00007773

From: Jan Rhees
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:59am
Subject: microsoft settlement
From all indications, this appears to be a fair, and adequate settlement, and I encourage you to validate the settlement decision and move on. Let this be the end of it.

Thank you,
Jan Rhees

MTC-00007774

From: Bob Powers
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:00am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Folks,
I've watched the onslaught against Microsoft for "years" now. Remember when Microsoft "bundled" Internet Explorer with windows??? At this same time Netscape was SELLING its Navigator Navigator for $50.00 to every individual who wanted to surf the internet. Now AOL (owns Netscape) YES, gives away FREE Netscape Navigator to anyone who wants to download it to their computer!!!!!! Has the U.S. Government ever figured out how many million $50.00 bills have been saved by ALL computer users. Yes, Microsoft inovated and forced COMPETITION and AOL was forced to give away the $50.00 Netscape Navigator for free. Hasn't the American consumer saved BILLIONS of American dollars as a result.

If the American consumer has suffered as some have suggested please tell me how much money I would have saved if both Microsoft and AOL charged me $50.00 for each new version of Netscape Navigator or Internet Explorer?????!

Let competition FORCE down prices and let a company like Microsoft (Large enough to compete internationally) bring revenues to the United States from around the world. Our deficit is already to large and Microsoft has NOT added ONE CENT to the United States excessive deficit spending! Why not show the American consumer how much money Microsoft cost them or saved them! Most people are not stupid and what ever you do REMEMBER politicians and government officials WILL be remembered at the polls...

From Just ONE concerned citizen
Robert H. Powers

MTC-00007775

From: kerryduwaldt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:02am
Subject: In Favor of settlement in the Microsoft case

Speaking as both a shareholder of Microsoft and as a long time user of many of their products, I am strongly in favor of a swift settlement in the Microsoft anti-trust case. I feel that competitors of this great company have brought this suit against Microsoft just because they have not been able to produce products that are as good as Microsoft's products. These disgruntled companies have been wasting their energy on trying to break up Microsoft when they should have been trying to improve their products in an effort to compete with Microsoft. I think it is very sad that so much time and money has been wasted in this no win case. This anti-trust suit is bad for consumers. Microsoft should be spending their time producing better and better products for us, the consumers and not spending their time in court because of a few mediocre companies.

MTC-00007776

From: Tim Sedlack
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I'm very disappointed to see special interest groups (read: Microsoft's chief competitors) having such influence on the court. I feel it's wrong to stifle competition, even for the industry leader. Microsoft is in the position it's in because it provides (usually) reasonably priced highly functional software that adheres to most standards. I critically evaluate software for purchase and choose based on price/functionality. Microsoft is a consistent winner, but not the only one. Why are you letting thier competitors sway you? Can we expect to see the same rules applied to AOL—the largest software/service company in the world? Where are the lawsuits against them? After having recieved seeming thousands of offers “Free hours” on AOL, I can say that they are more of a thorn in my side than Microsoft.

Tim Sedlack
timsed@hotmail.com

MTC-00007777

From: G. S. Rana
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:07am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I fully support the MS settlement reached by DOJ. The 3 member overseeing board makes the settlement tough, and frankly much more than I would have expected MS to face.

Thanks

MTC-00007778

From: coinman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:11am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel this has gone on long enough. I say let the settlement stand as it is now. Get it over with and lets move on.

Ray Harcourt Jr.
669 Stable Gate Ln
Florence, Ky. 41042

MTC-00007779

From: Patnich44@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it May Concern:

I believe that enough is enough. The Microsoft case has drug on for years now and it is time to settle it and be done with it. The settlement is fair to all sides. Lets not waste more money and time litigating this issue.

Sincerely,
Patricia Nicholoff
Edmonds, WA.

MTC-00007780

From: Ricky Loynd
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:16am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am strongly in favor of this settlement. It is more than sufficient to redress the affects of any of Microsoft's alleged anticompetitive behavior.

Ricky Loynd

MTC-00007781

From: Karl Van Blankenburg
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:17am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Department of Justice,
Please go forward with the settlement in the case with Microsoft. It would be beneficial for the public/consumers and be best for allowing the justice system to focus on other matters of more pressing nature.

Best Regards,
Karl Van Blankenburg

MTC-00007782

From: AlbertoCSerrano@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:18am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear Microsoft:

It is time to end this litigation that in my estimation does not benefit the consumers and helps mostly attorneys. God knows the US has more of them than most countries, a dubious honor in my estimation.

Prolonging this suit can only help line the pockets of litiginous lawyers, ultimately at the cost of consumers who supposedly should be the beneficiaries!

Hang in there!
Alberto C Serrano, MD

MTC-00007783

From: Evinrude2@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:19am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation. The federal government and nine states have reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. The end.

Jerry Harris
5059 Newmans-Cardington Road East
Cardington, Ohio 43315-9609

MTC-00007784

From: Donald Foster
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:19am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the settlement is in the best interest of the public. Microsoft should be allowed to continue their creative strategy and continue to produce effecetive products which gives pleasure to the public and empowers the average citizen to produce work efficiently.

Respectfully submitted.
Donald H. Foster
dfoster@socal.rr.com

MTC-00007785

From: BESTEFAR99@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:21am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

This suit was suspect to begin with, so lets get on with the business of developing better products and let the market place decide which is the best.

C. H. Schmoll

MTC-00007786

From: Jarim4@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing this to voice my opinion. Please settlement the litigation as soon as possible. I believe that the Microsoft Corporation has offered a just settlement, we need the responsibility of our court system to take charge and dismiss any other suits by small interest groups as the majority have voiced its opinion for the good of the majority. Thank you.

Sincerely,

John Anthony Rim

MTC-00007787

From: Jim Beebe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:23am
Subject: Microsoft Case

Dear DOJ,

I just want to say that I think the work of Microsoft has been of great benefit to the economy of this country and they should not be penalized for making products that do well in the marketplace. If they had not continued to innovate and improve their products this computer would not be half as easy to use. I am starting to use their new operating system XP and it is a huge improvement. Imagine if all we had was the old DOS system. I am not and never have been an employee of MS, just a satisfied customer that wants to see them continue to do what they do so well.

Sincerely,
James L. Beebe
P.O. Box 65472
Port Ludlow, WA 98365

MTC-00007788

From: Needham, James P
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 12:49am
Subject: Time to Move On

As a observer of the Microsoft anti-trust litigation, I must tell you that as a consumer, I have never been harmed by Microsoft. The continuous actions of a few State AGs seems to be more about them getting good press to push their own personal political agenda that to look out for consumers. Our Country is in a recession, we need companies like Microsoft to innovate so we can increase productivity and the value of American products. I am certainly not an expert but it would seem to me that the current anti-trust laws were enacted to address the smoke stack industries in a non-global marketplace. What seems obvious to the average person on the stress apparent escapes the politicians and the high priced political appointees. If the Netscape's of the world cannot compete let them get the hell out of the way. It seems that the government and the some of the states want to decrease competition and innovation by restricting Microsoft. How stupid.

CC: Dennis Hastert (E-mail), Don Nichols (E-mail), Georg...

MTC-00007789

From: gtech
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:29am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please leave Microsoft alone and worry about your own problems, which there are many.
Craig

MTC-00007790

From: JHanker702@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:31am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to voice my APPROVAL for the proposed settlement with Microsoft. I believe it is good for consumers, good for the competition and good for our economy.

Further delays or additional litigation will damage both the technology industry and our free enterprise system.

Sincerely,
John Hankerson
2641 262nd Place SE
Sammamish, WA 98075

MTC-00007791

From: BOBJAZLOVR@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:31am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

MICROSOFT became a "monopoly" by offering consumers a product that simply beat the pants off their competition (IBM, Apple, Sun, Linux to name a few) To this day none of these companies have ever developed a mass market operating software system to come close to MSFT. Microsoft then proceeded to improve its basic operating system to make it easier for the msft customer to access the internet and have the added capability of having the browser interact with its OP systems in a simple, easy manner to learn and operate. So far the consumer is not complaining, not about the bundling, not about the price, not about the fact that computer hardware mfrs and retailers have all this great stuff preloaded on their machines so all the consumer has to do is plug in the computer, follow a few simple instructions and they are off to do a lot of very productive, or non productive work, as they can choose to do! If you read the latest numbers, the number of people ordering merchandise of all sorts on the internet has been booming, recession or no recession. So far MSFT has offered a superior product, offers it at reasonable price, and has made it possible for people of all ages to learn to use the internet to satisfy new workplace requirements and support new internet businesses. So what's wrong with this picture? Consumers are not injured in any way. They are free to buy Apple computers, if they like, they can buy a machine and have linux loaded as the operating system, if they like, or java, or unix or IBM's O/S, if they like, except that they don't!! MSFT doesn't make the computers, or any components, all they do is supply software that is designed to function as easily and smoothly as possible with the latest bells and whistles that the hardware makes possible. Their complaining competitors, some of which are much larger than MSFT, are free to do better, but they haven't. Have you seen any new browser products being offered by these crybaby's to compete with Explorer...??? The MSFT software, a miniscule and continually declining % of the price of the newest computers, whose prices keep going south even as the capabilities of the machines are ten fold from a few years ago!

Having done all this, no harm except to non competitive competitors, seems evident to me and that is no different from the situation in any number of other industries.

Go to any department store and you will see the same brands featured in every major store. Why is that not being investigated? Tobacco companies offer discounts to gain shelf space, so do companies like P&G, How about those sales of coca cola and pepsi that never occur at the same time. One week

Pepsi, next week Coke. Hello, does this look like normal competition? You don't see gas stations alternating promotions with the guy across the street, they match prices a dozen times a day!!

MSFT has not done anything any other company would not do to grow and survive competitive challenges. Are they hardnose? Yes! So what's new? I recall Netscape excess claiming they were going to develop a browser that would "surround" the MSFT operating system and make it subservient to the Netscape browser?? Sun has been screaming JAVA for years, but where's the Sun Java O/S to go head to head with MSFT? Same with Linux, where's the beef? So, let MSFT get on with what it does best...software that keeps adding, improving without wasting our taxes chasing a great company that leads not only the US, but any company in the world in it's field!!! Are we upset we have one standard VCR format? Aren't we trying to standardize digital?, broadband, telecom systems to broaden efficient use and make it easier for consumers? MSFT has done that with out any GOvt help. Tell the states to look for some other patsy to try and extort money from and leave MSFT alone. Do no harm to consumers is the litmus test for anti trust,,there is none here. You want to protect choice? Consumers have already chosen ...with their pocket books...let it go!!

Thank you...a citizen who thinks the DOJ has better things to do with our taxes!!!

Robert Conti

MTC-00007792

From: LYN GILMER
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My view is that the Microsoft Operating System provides a very large value to computer consumers. I have been using PC's since they appeared and "microcomputers" prior to that. Software was very expensive back then. Feature for feature, today's software is a real bargain. Consumers have not been harmed by Microsoft, instead have benefited from the many useful products given as part of the package. Also, remember the thousands of developers who can write software for a Microsoft Operating System knowing that tens of millions of people are their potential customers. They could not afford to develop code for many OS's only one. If they have a good product they will make money and pay taxes. I am a great fan of the Microsoft brand. They are an example of how great a company can grow in our free enterprise system.

Thanks!

Tom Gilmer

MTC-00007793

From: mstat
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:33am
Subject: microsoft settlement

I just want to go on record as opposing this golddigging settlement attempt to fleece microsoft. I sit here at my Compaq computer with Windows XP, using my Microsoft Internet Explorer to access this website and type this response. To me, Microsoft is part of America...a great part. They are family to me. I am upset at the effort to discard competition, innovation, and the assumption of entrepreneurial risk in my country, all for the unscrupulous receipt of ill-gotten monetary gains. LEAVE THEM ALONE! Microsoft is as American as apple pie and a great success story. They have (partially) shaped the way I live and communicate. This shameful attempt to extort money is dispicable.

Sincerely,
mstat
Mark D. Statler MD

MTC-00007794

From: Sharon Wood
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the settlement is fair as it stands now. This has been going on long enough. End it and lets all get back to business.

Sincerely, Sharon Wood

MTC-00007795

From: KULINA@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:42am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Here is my opinion: the DOJ should discontinue wasting the government's (my taxes) monies on prosecuting or mediating a settlement. I, as a consumer of computer products, never felt harmed by Microsoft. The nine states not settling are fishing for money and the courts should dismiss any actions filed by them. I think the DOJ should be held in contempt for "restraint of trade". One man's opinion....

Marty Kulina
206. 972.9704

MTC-00007796

From: Bruce (038) Leslie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam,
Enough is Enough... Settle the case!!... It is an embarrassment to the rest of the free world to continue to allow states whose interest/allegiance/financial backing is with competitor companies like SUN, Oracle, etc—drag this court battle on further....

My wife and I are software engineers and we both feel that Microsoft software is the most user-friendly and supportable product line available... Unfortunately, companies like SUN didn't take the time/energy/funding to make the UNIX operating system easy to use for the common user... It is their own problem that they didn't have superior enough products to compete with Microsoft's products... Microsoft did not force people to use their products... People use them because they are good, easy to use, readily available, etc... And Microsoft products (operating system, applications, etc) are fairly priced...

It is unfortunate we have to hear from whiney company executives from SUN, Oracle, etc—keep droning on and on about Microsoft's unfair business practises... We need to put an end to this sorry part of US high-tech history, and let companies like Microsoft get on with their business...

regards,
Bruce and Leslie Pleshko

Aiea, Hawaii
808-484-5077

MTC-00007797

From: Joe Masters
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

I support this settlement. Let's move on.
Joe Masters
434 Floral Way
Rohnert Park, CA 94928
joe.masters@techie.com

MTC-00007798

From: Alihatami@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi,

a quick settlement is the best for the consumer, industry, Microsoft and Microsoft competitors. If Microsoft competitors had spent half of the money and other resources (which they are spending to drag the case against Microsoft) to develop a new product, they would have possibly come up with a product to compete with Microsoft. please understand the situation and close the case ASAP.

Ali Hatami

MTC-00007799

From: Stephen.Schaefer@emis-intl.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:56am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This settlement is a travesty. There is nothing here to prevent Microsoft's continued use of its monopoly position to destroy any software innovation they do not own. Microsoft must be deprived of the means to maintain that monopoly. A number of possible means to that end are possible, including: publishing all their source code; or making all their operating system interfaces and protocols public on the same basis that internet protocols are made public, i.e., with complete documentation and reference implementations made freely available, for any lawful use whatsoever, including, but not limited to, the construction of a competing operating system. A company that truly benefits the public with their systems will thrive in such a competitive environment, just as Cisco Systems does. Microsoft's egregious and perpetual contempt for the public welfare leaves them no claim to anything other than a competitive environment, if indeed they deserve to continue to exist as a public company.

Stephen P. Schaefer
Computer Systems Administrator
Masters of Science in Computer Science,
UNC—Chapel Hill 1993

MTC-00007800

From: William HAYES
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:58am
Subject: I have voted time and again for Microsoft by buying their software. The only people I know that are

I have voted time and again for Microsoft by buying their software. The only people I know that are objecting to the way Microsoft does business is people who want to pirate their software from me and the ones that think that they should be allowed open access to hack into it easier. As a result of the foresight and vision brought by Microsoft, the price of home computers has come down to the point that every household can afford them and every child can learn to program them and use them if they have the ability and want to use them. Many advancements have been recognized and supported by Microsoft by developing software to support it.

Microsoft is a major source of the balance of payments with other countries. Microsoft has given the US the a technological lead that should help keep the US on sound financial footing, but that financial lead could be overturned by an AT&T type of mistake that will only lead to higher costs and unsettling lack of leadership in home computers.

William C. Hayes

MTC-00007801

From: GDomain4603@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Department of Justice January 2, 2002
Dear Sirs/Madams,

I have the opinion that the Microsoft people were, and are, innocent of the manufacture and propagation of their software-items which are, by very definition, not harmful.

Sincerely from Geoffrey Doman
13900 Cohasset Street
Van Nuys, CA
91405-2501

MTC-00007802

From: Philip R. Palumbo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

I believe the Tunney Act should be adopted for the parties involved. I think that given the circumstances, it is fair and equitable to both sides. It is more important than ever, for the litigation to stop and the productivity to move forward. Competition is good for everyone involved. Microsoft began as a startup company and had to endure all kinds of competition to get it where it is today. They provided a need for a product and consumers voted with their pocketbooks. They did not try to legally "remove" or render helpless their then competitors.

Please move forward with this issue.

Kindly,
Philip Palumbo
prp@palumboent.com

MTC-00007803

From: PILOTGGG@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:03am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Ladies & Gentlemen:

After a tough recession, with many people out of work, it is HIGH TIME to get this country moving again ! Expedite the fair settlement of the Microsoft case !

Pilot GGG@AOL.com (Gunter Gigas)

MTC-00007804

From: Steve (038) Robin Lee
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 8:33pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

It's definitely time to settle the Microsoft case. I felt that the suit was frivolous to begin with and the fact that it has dragged on for so long trying to cripple a company that has done so much just completely angers me. I think the message this suit sends is 'that if you are great at what you do and make a product better than your competitor then we are going to make you pay.' I really hope everyone involved can settle this case and move forward.

Sincerely,
Robin L. Lee

MTC-00007805

From: bcathcart
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Give it a rest already. Stop the litigation. Without Microsoft all of those pencil neck attorneys would still be writing their briefs on a legal pad.

Bill Cathcart

MTC-00007806

From: zeta54@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Do America a favor-settle this case by terminating DOJ action against Microsoft! This litigation has destroyed huge valuations in the tech stock market, financially injuring lots of shareholders(direct and in mutual funds) and pension funds. It may also be responsible for terminating the great bull market and causing the start of the economic downturn, thanks to Billy Clinton and his juvenile delinquent administration.

No, I'm not a Microsoft employee or direct stockholder. I am a user of their products. Are they the best? Probably not. Are they the PC standard? Don't you know it!

Bill Drake
Bothell, WA

MTC-00007807

From: Fred B. McCarty
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:14am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Microsoft established the de facto standards for the software industry that caused the phenomenal growth and success that astounds the world and enriches our country. Microsoft is the goose that lays golden eggs. LET MICROSOFT ALONE! Microsoft continually strives to improve the quality and value of its products. The people who complain about Microsoft's leadership are whiners who seek to rely on politics and lawyers instead of technical excellence and fair prices. Most of the businesses that now oppose Microsoft would never have achieved their present status and success without the standardization established by Microsoft and its unrelenting pressure to improve software and explore new technology.

When our government tries to cripple a successful business, to punish technical innovation, to create chaos where there is order, to stifle legitimate competition, it is the beginning of the end of our prosperity! Don't meddle with a miracle! Go and sin no more!

Fred B. McCarty, P.E.

MTC-00007808

From: Chris Blount
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:14am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
U.S. Department of Justice

Dear Sirs,

I believe it is time to finish the anti-trust case against Microsoft. I believe the proposed settlement as accepted by Microsoft is fair and should thus terminate this matter once and for all.

I have yet to find even one person in Alaska who can honestly say he or she has been harmed by Microsoft; to the contrary Microsoft technologies have been extremely advantageous for bush Alaska.

D.O.J. should not let itself be degraded and used by inferior competitors or manipulated by Congressmen from competitor's districts and states to fight in the market place.

Please accept the settlement now and end this matter for good.

Sincerely yours,
Chris T. Blount
PO Box 503
Nome, AK 99762

MTC-00007809

From: Steve Black
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:18am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Comments on proposed settlement for civil action No. 98-1232: Without doubt, I cannot agree more with the proposed settlement. Primarily for the following reasons:

1. In the civil action, numerous allegations are presented that are no more than unproven statements of marketing hype and propaganda. It's no surprise that the statements are one-sided and ignore Netscape's public comments regarding their planned demise of Microsoft's commercial viability, which are as meaningless as the civil action allegations. In the civil action complaints, the authors excel at presenting misleading information.

2. There is a near-monopoly in PC operating systems, however it, has been created by competitor incompetence, sloth and greed. PC OEM's are only interested in what earns them the most profit and America's millions of large and small businesses cannot afford the expense of maintaining, training, installing and resolving the compatibility issues of networking multiple PC operating systems. As it is, having to maintain separate server and desktop PC operating systems is more than enough headache and there are strong financial forces to compel the integration of these systems.

3. Microsoft failed at the outset to enhance Windows Explorer to have the capabilities of Internet Explorer. The Internet is simply one large array of networked hard drives. Every computer should be able to connect to these shared drives. There is no need for separate "Explorers" or "Navigators". However, there is nothing to prevent a competent product from being commercially successful if consumers and businesses identify ownership value. Unfortunately, there has never been a sizeable market for a separate "browser". Netscape's theft of the browser concept and attempt to create a marketable product is something they have every right to attempt, but this product concept is doomed from the beginning. Microsoft's Internet Explorer was offered to consumers who wanted to update their browsing capability, but did not want to update their operating system; otherwise there is no reason to make it a separate program since it is conceptually integral to an operating system and control of the directly attached and networked computer hardware.

4. Alternative operating systems have done poorly in the marketplace for reasons of commonality, cost of training and lack of return of investment for businesses. Consumers are an integral part of companies and gain most of their computer knowledge on the job and therefore share the same beliefs which they pass on to their lesser experienced friends. The Apple monopoly could have been wildly successful, except they chose to maintain high prices and monopolize their hardware designs. The only high business cost of operating system entry is hard work, investment and technical competence. Allegations that a Microsoft operating system monopoly makes it more difficult to market a competing operating system are nonsense. This is as absurd as saying that no new products of any kind can be invented because everything has already been invented. There are no barriers to marketing any other software products as thousands of large and small companies have done, provided they have a viable marketing concept and consumers consider the product to have value.

5. There is no browser threat to an operating system. This is a totally ludicrous statement and is not just my opinion, but the opinion of hundreds of PC experts that have published over and over again how totally void of technical knowledge such a statement is. Quoting Microsoft statements to the contrary is simply misuse of marketing propaganda, proves nothing, and has no basis in fact. Do you believe everything you hear in commercial TV advertisements?

6. Software that runs on multiple operating systems is no threat to Microsoft. JAVA, which is not a competitor to the Microsoft operating system, is being avoided more and more by many PC users because it is the language of choice of many hackers and PC terrorists. The success of JAVA is only dependent on its authors making it a safe and viable product. JAVA's technical competence and business acumen are on trial in the eyes of the market place. I know of no reason to run JAVA on my computer and simply avoid all web sites that try to load it on my machine. Microsoft does not force any PC user to install their operating system. But, like junk email, numerous web sites offer to install JAVA on Internet users computers on a daily basis. Linux, Unix, Beos and several other operating systems are available, but do not provide the features and benefits of Windows and will not even be considered by businesses for desktop computers for these reasons.

7. This civil action has never been in the interest of consumers. Netscape and Sun have used their political influence to leverage anti-trust concepts to a new level of distortion. Ambitious politicians like Bill Lockyer have been financially induced to support egregious legal actions by companies that have lost billions of hardware dollars to windows PCs. That is, thousands of small companies that could not afford $60,000 work stations with proprietary UNIX software, can now use $3,000 PCs to engineer products that consumers demand. Increased productivity in thousands of industries due to Microsoft innovation is the real benefit of a free market. This is why Sun is losing billions due to the demise of their hardware empire and why they are in such a panic to get revenge by destroying Microsoft. They are misusing the legal system to compensate for their business failings. I am not now, nor have I ever been a Microsoft employee or employed by any organization working for Microsoft. I am a mechanical engineer, consumer and computer hobbyist. For a few years, I did struggled with the issues of providing computer services to fellow engineers and I learned to dislike a number of large, arrogant, 3-letter-named computer/software companies. Their adversarial attitudes and ludicrous prices will remain etched in the minds of an entire generation that today prepare the budgets in many corporations.

Steven Black 1916 Camas Court SE
Renton, WA 98055

MTC-00007810

From: Don Holtzinger
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:21am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Department Of Justice.

I'm very proud of the way you and Microsoft have worked to find a solution to the Anti-Trust case, and I think the solution promotes competition while letting the industry move forward with standards that will ensure another 20 years of continued technology growth. This settlement is tough, but I believe it's reasonable and fair to all parties involved.

Please don't let this lawsuit get sidetracked by special interest groups or Attorney's Generals who are trying to keep their names in the public spotlight.

Thank you.
Sincerely,
Don Holtzinger
17605 NE 101st Court
Redmond, WA 98052

MTC-00007811

From: RGA
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:22am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Department—

The settlement that you have negotiated with Microsoft is in the best interest of all involved. I urge you to fulfill your promises in that settlement and defend it in Court, in Congress, and in the press.

It is obvious that the critics are either competitors who cannot compete in the market without outside assistance, or people like Sen. Hatch whose influential constituents are apparently those same competitors.

This is no place for the tainted political process to interfere with entrepreneurial success and risk-taking.

Gordon Appleman

MTC-00007812

From: Don Holt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:28am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Department Of Justice:

I'm very proud of the way you and Microsoft have worked to find a solution to the Anti-Trust case, and I think the solution promotes competition while letting the industry move forward with standards that will ensure another 20 years of continued technology growth. This settlement is tough, but I believe it's reasonable and fair to all parties involved.

Please don't let this lawsuit get sidetracked by special interest groups or Attorney's Generals who are trying to keep their names in the public spotlight.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Donnie Barren

MTC-00007813

From: Histone6@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:29am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello,

I think the entire persecution of Microsoft was unnecessary, uncalled for and a waste of tax payers money. The settlement is another form of government extortion. I do not feel one bit safer, one bit freer, one bit more capable of making purchasing decisions with the Federal government having filed this suit and all the attendant cost to us via taxes and the revenue lost to the government with Microsoft being able to deduct their legal expenses.

Do not waste another minute of time or expense on this issue. This entire issue was a display of blatant class envy. The foremost users of class envy where the communists. Are there any correlations here?

Allow Microsoft the ability to do charitable works with school systems they select.

Thank You,
HJH

MTC-00007814

From: Theresa Hancock
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it may concern:

I would like to voice my opinion that the Microsoft case be settled without further litigation. I think further litigation is not in the best interest of the consumer, economy, or the industry. As a consumer, I do not feel damaged by Microsoft, but quite the opposite, and think that further litigation is only politically motivated and costly to the American taxpayer and economy.

Thank you,
Theresa Hancock
103 Patrick Ct.
Sunnyside, WA 98944
509-837-8550

MTC-00007815

From: Ken (038) Michelle Walters
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:42am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please complete the settlement on the Microsoft case. Please include my voice with those wanting you to accept the proposed settlement.

Thank you
Ken Walters
4506 226th ST SW
Mountlake Terrace, WA 98043

MTC-00007816

From: Brenda Wagner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:41am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please accept the Microsoft settlement. Our state and our country need to put this to rest and Microsoft has done everything to come to a fair agreement.

Thank you,
Brenda Wagner
4245 230th Way SE
Sammamish WA 98075

MTC-00007817

From: markthome
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:43am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir/Madam:

I hope that the settlement reached between Microsoft, the federal government and several states will be allowed to stand. Lets end this thing in one more effort to get the economy moving again! I am 77 years of age and do not remember a circumstance before where a few competitors of a company, along with a few quisle-like congressional representatives, have been able to derail our system of competition with so little basis. Please do whatever you can to ensure that deserving contributors get their due, and that those who want to compete by deriding the deserving get exactly what I feel they have earned. Nothing.

Sincerely,
Mark Thome, Bellevue, Washington

MTC-00007818

From: Cym98gz@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:45am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Judge:

I feel Microsoft have done too much to settle this antitrust case. Their products are so good and easy to use. I think it is time to let the company continue to do their business.

Microsoft consumer
1-3-02

MTC-00007819

From: Daniel Wahl
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 2:45am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the Department of Justice ought to be morally condemned for even charging Microsoft with the alleged crime of coercing its very satisfied customers (of which I am one out of many). I am writing this using my hotmail account, a free service given to everyone by Microsoft. I am on the internet via Explorer, thanks to Microsoft. Hell, I can even navigate myself around on the computer thanks to this company. Because of this (and more) are you actually asking me whether I think the punishment for Microsoft is too soft? Hell no it's not too soft! They shouldn't be punished at all. And, despite mumbling that the company's prosecution was a "victory for consumers everywhere" Janet Reno knew this. So does Ashcroft.

What they both know, but fail to admit, is that Microsoft has gained its market dominance, not by using fraud or force, but by consistently offering better (more popular) services and products for a cheaper price than their competitors. Is it for their achievements that this company has been damned? If the new Department of —Justice— wants to prove it has a right to actually bear that name, it should "ettle" with Microsoft by first apologizing, then paying restitution for any money that the firm has lost as a result of this immoral trial.

—Daniel Wahl, Kannapolis, NC

MTC-00007820

From: Elizabeth R. Baecher
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:47am
Subject: Settlement

Had government applied the same zeal regarding US security as they had harassing Microsoft, New York City undoubtedly would still have its skyline intact and thousands of lives would not have been uselessly lost.

Please feel free to pass these comments on.
Elizabeth R. Baecher
Mount Kisco, New York

MTC-00007821

From: John Grubb
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:51am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The best thing that can happen for the whole country and the economy is to settle the case against Microsoft. The technology industry moves so quickly that the government should be more concerned about companies like AOL, than Microsoft. AOL is a perfect example of a company positioned to take control of the digital media business from end to end. Focus on the future, not the past! Many say it is a coincidence that the stock market dived sharply when it was announced the first time that negotiations between Microsoft and the plaintiffs had been broken off. I however think there was a direct correlation, and the longer this thing drags on, the worse it is for everyone.

The states that are not part of the current settlement happen to have major Microsoft competitors headquartered in their states, what a coincidence. These companies need to innovate and stop litigating. I find it hard to understand why everyone is up in arms over Microsoft, when government backed monopolies like Airbus Industries in Europe exist to compete unfairly against Boeing. The US is not able to trade freely with many other nations on this planet, yet we waste our time attacking our own companies. I can only imagine how many countries would love to have a Microsoft. Yet, instead of enjoying such a successful company, our country seeks to destroy it. What a huge waste of resources.

Yes, my tax dollars and many other hard working American's tax dollars. Where does it stop? Please do not forget that Microsoft commoditized the personal computer industry. If we had three or four major PC OS vendors, then software would cost more, and do less. Having a common standard to write to is very good for the consumer. What if we had four different standards for electricity. A company who makes blenders would have to make four flavors to accommodate the different standards. Of course they would have to pass the cost of the extra tools to make the four flavors along to the consumer.

As for integrating into the OS useful tools and utilities like a browser or media player, I think it is good. Even though Netscape has failed to technically innovate in a long time, Microsoft's browser gets better and better even though it does not have to. When I bought my first PC I spent hundreds of dollars on utilities, that often did not work well with my DOS OS. When I called for support I was told it was an OS problem, call IBM. I would rather integrate than have to spend more money to buy the extras I need from a third party.

Some food for thought, a good spreadsheet, word processor and graphics package in the mid-1980's cost about $500 each, for a grand total of $1,500. None of them worked together and the menu systems were different on each. Sharing data between them was far from easy. Today you can buy the same three packages from Microsoft for about $500 for all three, and they work very well together. Sounds pretty good to me.

As a market leader, Microsoft does not have to innovate at the rate it does. That is what happened to so many other software vendors—they viewed success as a destination. Microsoft views success as a journey, one that they are always shooting for.

In closing I will admit Microsoft is no saint. They are a fierce competitor. Yet I believe an America with Microsoft is better than one without. If we are not careful the next Microsoft may end up being in a foreign country where we do not benefit nearly as much as having it in our own backyard.

Please get this issue behind us and move on. . .

Thank you for your time.

Regards,
John Grubb

8116 Pecan Ridge Drive
North Richland Hills, TX 76180

MTC-00007822

From: Susan Griffin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:55am
Subject: microsoft settlement
Regarding legal settlement Microsoft/DOJ

I believe that the lawsuit was very unnecessary, considering other very large companies who have of late become conglomerates. Time Warner to name a high profile situation. Then we have the oil companies, and the supermarkets and the pharmaceutical companies, etc. There are others as well. I feel this was a rather selective law suit and I certainly feel Microsoft has been reasonable and responsive enough. For heavens sake settle this!. It is the American way to compete and create, therefore excell. I am astounded that this even has occured, and yes I am aware of the circumstances and this is my opinion. wonder what

DOJ would do to Henry Ford today??

Susan Griffin
19407 Turtle Ridge Lane
Northridge, CA. 91326

MTC-00007823

From: Terry Elder
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support the settlement between DOJ and Microsoft. I use Microsoft products because they are good. I chose them. I was not coerced in any way. When I began using a computer, I did not use Microsoft products, but after Windows 3.1 came out, I moved and gradually used more and more Microsoft products. I certainly don't want to see them broken up. As far as I am concerned, Microsoft is a great success story and should not be hounded. There are a few zealots who can't compete, so they use taxpayer money to try to destroy Microsoft with the law. Some of Microsoft's business practices probably do need to be modified, and so I agree with the settlement.

Franklin Terry Elder
8168 Erin Street
Juneau, AK 99801

MTC-00007824

From: Joe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:03am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear DOJ

In my opinion, and the opinion of everyone I know, Microsoft should have never been sued. They provide amazing software that has made my life immensely more successful and rich. Now that a settlement has been worked out, I feel it should be accepted as written and the matter should be put behind us.

Thanks,
Joseph M. Shikany, Seattle WA

MTC-00007825

From: BETTYBOBS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please do not prolong a settlement of the Microsoft case. It is in the best interests of Microsoft shareholders to end the case as soon as possible.

MTC-00007826

From: Mike Eddy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:11am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft has done good more for individuals and the US economy than any other company in this decade. Penalizing them will only hurt customers and benefit some select competitors. Leave Microsoft alone.

Mike Eddy

MTC-00007827

From: Vlad Mayzel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:20am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi there,

Leave them alone! They (Microsoft) do a great job and do much more good than harm to me, the consumer. Actually, what harm? Constantly pushing the industry to the progress? If other suckers can not do any better job, they manipulate the government forcing it to dig dirt pretending that it is on behalf of the consumers, but in reality to make the government to fight for them instead of improving their own technology. Of course it is easier and free but at taxpayer's and consumer's expense.

If government really wants to help the consumers—fine, HELP any of Microsoft's competitors to make their technology BETTER and help them RISE to the Microsoft's level, but do not DESTROY Microsoft's success forcing it to FALL to the competitor's level, otherwise you will get the same kind of results as communists used to get using the same approach!

Thank you for your time.

Best regards,
Vlad Mayzel.
Smart Technologies,
President.

MTC-00007828

From: Dbjroberts@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:34am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
I AM 69 YEARS OLD AND I AM GREATFUL TO MICROSOFT FOR THEIR SOFTWARE. THEY HAVE MADE IT EASY TO USE AND LEARN ABOUT MY COMPUTER. I HAVE OWNED A COMPUTER FOR ONLY TWO YEARS. PLEASE SETTLE THE LAWSUIT SO MICROSOFT CAN GO AHEAD WITH NEW IDEAS. I WANT TO CONTINUE TO ENJOY MY COMPUTER. DON'T MAKE IT DIFFICULT FOR US SENIORS.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION,
BETTY J. ROBERTS
DBJROBERTS@AOL.COM

MTC-00007829

From: Bob Long
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:29am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Department of Justice:

I am completely in favor of the settlement reached with Microsoft. I believe that this Microsoft settlement is in the public interest. I do not support further litigation on the Microsoft Antitrust case.

STOP WASTING TAXPAYER MONEY.
Sincerely,

Robert Longariello
Taxpayer and Citizen
Laguna Niguel, California
blongari@home.com

MTC-00007831

From: John Johnston
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:26am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

As a consumer I have used computers for sixteen years now. I have a computer network setup between my shop, my home, our patio area and another house on the property. I harbor no doubt that I am not the usual consumer in this respect. I have been very happy however to be able to do this networking without having to purchase additional software, or to have found the process technically intimidating. I have found the inclusion of such items as networking, CD playing, mpeg viewing, Internet browsing, e-mail, picture viewing and such to be innovation at its best. I have purchased programs written by others that allow greater graphics capabilities, engineering capabilities and so forth. Essentially these programs run flawlessly for me in the MS Windows environment.

I have in older versions of MS Windows purchased upgrades, one for instance was from Real Networks in Seattle, I think they are a part of this case also, they offered a free downloadable upgrade. What a dirty trick, as soon as I had it they wanted me to buy the full functional upgrade, and their newly installed software kept activating my firewall software with its attempts to report back to Real Networks what features I was making use of in their program without my knowledge. This is pretty much akin to planting a Trojan horse program and I think the practice stinks. I used their uninstall routine and it removed most but not all of their code, I still trap messages with it uninstalled trying to "phone home." I have not had that problem with Microsoft; in fact Microsoft's collection of personal information is entirely upfront and with clear explanations.

Across the same years I worked for Diebold Inc. and spent a great deal of time using the IBM operating system OS2. In those years IBM clearly attempted to capture a larger portion of the desktop PC software market and they had promotions to that end. Diebold used OS2 as the OS on many computer systems, and nearly all of their ATM machines. Diebold regarded me during my employment with them up until my retirement last year at age 51 as a Fast Track Engineer. I got to solve the problems our field technicians were stumped on. We had plenty of problems; Windows was not nearly as cumbersome, or intolerant as OS2. To amplify the difference further between OS2 and Windows, IBM and Diebold were business partners; we had special access to IBM engineers to resolve problems. During this time I purchased OS2 for a computer at home and attempted to install it, even with "inside" help, the IBM engineers could not make it operate on the hardware I wanted to install it on. I had in fact purchased a new 486 system just to play with OS2 on, finally they told me all we can recommend is that you buy some new hardware that is on our supported list. That was it, I still have a box full of OS2 sitting here, and anytime someone wines about Windows I offer it to him or her.

Clearly, most persons have never had to put up with anything like what I described above, but I want you to consider with the time and talent that IBM has, why couldn't they displace Microsoft. I will suggest that the market place chose the best software, and I will further suggest that in comparison to what is available the only choice for me will be Windows. Diebold Inc, was in the process of dropping OS2 for Windows at the time of my retirement. The reasons for this boiled down to IBM's failure to put innovations into their operating system fast enough for the market place. We were connecting ATMs into TCP/IP networks and VPNs, as a result of telnet sessions our customers are downloading streaming video and audio to our newer products. All of this is just a colossal pain because support for these advanced features is just too rudimentary in OS2, even though it comes from the granddad of computer giants.

The enormity of gain to productivity and to our economy during the nineties was clearly connected to the computer industry. It is also clearly evident that the axe that cut the juggler was the U.S. vs. Microsoft, assisted by Judge Jackson. I can't help but feel that more innuendo and misconceptions were furthered during that time than at any other.

Microsoft may have business practices that need attention, but if the government restricts them in writing software innovation will collapse. If the support utilities that are included in Windows currently had to be purchased separately and worse yet, from other companies, I would not have networked, I probably would not have bought at least three of the computers that I currently have, and a lot of other consumers would have held back as well. I get a lot for my money with Microsoft products and it sounds like to me the government would like to see that value stopped. Upgrading software over the years has often meant buying new programs. Microsoft up until now has retained backwards compatibility with software wrote twenty years ago. Apple Computer with most upgrades of their operating system trash any legacy software.

I would like to comment on Sun Microsystems, Scott McNeally has publicly stated he intends to litigate against Microsoft forever. I always thought threats belonged more to the terrorist than to a business, and might even be against the law. But you see, I can see why Scott gets so red faced all the time. With the improvements in Windows NT the electrical engineering software vendors were no longer locked into compiling their code for the Unix operating system. Scott built boxes that ran their own version of Unix up until this time (there are eight versions of Unix, not one is compatible with the other) and when the software tool people saw the possibilities in Windows NT and then Compaq and HP started selling NT boxes for $6,000 suddenly Scott's $30,000 Unix boxes were not in so much demand.

Just imagine what that did for his blood pressure, its no wonder he gets so red faced when talking about Microsoft.

Then there is Oracle's Larry no doubt would like to keep Microsoft out of the data base arena as well. Microsoft in practice takes a product that is way to complex, and costly, and builds a version that anyone can use, without factory engineers help, and makes it immensely popular by turning it into a commodity product at Staples and Wal-Mart. Lastly as I mentioned just before, there are eight versions of Unix no less. Software transportability between them is close to zilch. If the Unix people can do that to consumers it seems strange that Microsoft should have to bear a burden in maintaining compatibility for all these other leaches.

Yours truly,

John H. Johnston
Drawer 149
Boulder, MT 59632
Fax 406-225-3946
Phone 406-225-9137

MTC-00007833

From: Didier Maignan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:01am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The uncertainty is no good for Technology. The settlement is fair. Please consider the impact on the Worldwide economy, and accept the agreement already accepted by the 9 states and the federal government.

Didier Maignan
Chairman of "interprojet" France

MTC-00007834

From: Thomas Arthur Sweeney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:01am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This case should have never been prosecuted to begin with. It is not the business of government tell a legally operating business what it can and cannot do. It is necessary for the Justice Department to get out of the way, tell the states that "object" to the settlement to get over it, because it is done. If these states have so much time on their hand, that they can afford this case, then perhaps they are meccas we all should move to, because they have no crime!!!!!!!!!!!!

www.geocities.com/thomasweeney/

MTC-00007835

From: Richard Poorman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:09am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

DOJ: Give the public a break! Stop spending our tax money and settle this stupid extended legal action.

I have felt, from day one, that Microsoft have conducting some undesirable sale practices. But, where was our government watch dogs. I'll tell you, they were sleeping at the switch. The public used to be protected from product loss leaders which are used to get high profit items in front of the unsuspecting consumer. This is about all Microsoft was doing. When their competition was taking a licking, they complained to Big Uncle. Now, Big Uncle wants to show off his power and destroy Microsoft. Get real, Microsoft is a fine company, has brought great prosperity to America. Give them a minor fine and get on down the road to a strong economy. Microsoft lead us in the past to great things and will again. I bought 300 shares of Microsoft in the middle of this mess because I had confidence that Big Uncle would do the right thing. Tell me you will. Give Microsoft a minor fine, turn they loose to doing great things for the consumer again. Please stop this crazy loss leader practice that is going full force today. The dumb public is getting kicked in the ass. Banks give away credit cards at low interest rates, just to hook the public later. Auto companies sell with zero interest just to hook us later when we pay for the over priced cars. My stores have these give away items to get me in the store so they can soak me on some items that are hard to check. There are laws again this practice but Big Uncle just lets it go on. Stop this practice of selling products at one price to some consumers and another price to others.

Get our economy going again!
Richard Poorman
2395 Pine Lake Trail
Arab, AL 35016

MTC-00007836

From: DonmesswithTX@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:10am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

In reference to Microsoft and the litigation, I feel that Microsoft has been very cooperative, not to mention that there is no other competitor that even comes close to the Microsoft products!

Any further litigation is unjust!

Sincerely,

Lindsey Ford

Southern Critters Sales and Marketing LLC

MTC-00007837

From: OCP2332@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:12am
Subject: lawsuit

i use microsoft and feel they have done nothing wrong. i can use any system and change at any time....to penalize a company for advancements is the wrong message to send to start ups.

MTC-00007838

From: Ray Vardon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:42am
Subject: Settle

Let Microsoft conduct its business fairly and without the federal govt. involvement!!
Happy Trails!! (:) Anne

MTC-00007839

From: Adam Gates
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To anyone who anyone who may read this, There is an extremely gross misunderstanding as to how Microsoft works. It would be much more effective for a high level government official to DROP all legal action and just ask Microsoft to create a more competitive environment. This is the TRUTH!!! Simple and quick. A judgment like this would turn the economy around in a day. Microsoft would take the responsibility seriously and would take a commanding role in turning things around. Microsoft WILL succeed in whatever direction they are pointed in so point them at the common good.

Adam Gates
972-742-5465
ahgates@hotmail.com or ahgates@yahoo.com

Please feel free to contact me with any questions on my comments.

MTC-00007840

From: Ricardo Villar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
DOJ.

It's about time the government (DOJ) stops harassing Microsoft. Isn't it enough the harassment they have from their competition? It's a tough world out there, when you don't have the privileges of being a public servant. Microsoft is responsible for thousand of jobs in the States and worldwide. Microsoft made computing accessible to everyone, at a time when Motorola, Apple, Netscape and others were selling their products to a select group of people who could afford their prices and conditions. How can you criticize Microsoft for their policies, when the government policies are, some times, even dirtier and deadly?

Stop this case at once and dedicate all your efforts in protecting the States from the internal and external enemies, not from people who want to make America big.

Ricardo Villar

MTC-00007841

From: Stanley Shoeman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:58am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Let's finally get this case behind us. The proposed terms are reasonable.

MTC-00007842

From: Risto Raitio
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:02am
Subject: Justice and free market economy or Microsoft socialism (very briefly!)

Helsinki, January 3, 2002

Dear Justice Officer,

I am a (retired) theoretical physicist who has worked with computers for 30 years, the last ten years in an international software company. I've learned American way of life as a visiting scientist at Stanford University in 1974-76.

May I call your attention to the following points: first quoting Mr. Ganesh Prasad of Sidney, Australia

—"Microsoft has also had secret agreements with OEMs that prevent them from offering consumers the choice of which operating system to boot when they start up their computers."

—"Microsoft's monopoly profits are the direct result of these and other illegally anti-competitive tactics."

—"It is being argued that in the current difficult economic climate, Microsoft should not be broken up or otherwise punished, because that will in turn affect the rest of the economy (through a fall in the stockmarket index, a delay in the recovery of hardware sales, more unemployment and hardship, etc.). On the contrary, the lessons of Economics are that monopolies are always bad. They reduce efficiency, innovation and economic activity. In other words, Microsoft's monopoly has already affected the economy adversely."

Microsoft speaks often of their innovations. Most educated people consider Microsoft rather an implementor of other companies' innovations. For example, the graphical user interface and the spreadsheet software Excel. Another example, Microsoft realised the importance of the Internet quite late. Microsoft's unstable operating systems (all of them before Windows 2000), proprietary software and binary file formats have caused high and unnecessary expenses for Microsoft software user organisations. Of course, Microsoft claims the opposite. But I'm not against Microsoft, I'm only against illegal business methods. In fact, a decent kind of Microsoft is needed! The bottom line is whether the United States Justice system wants to maintain the free market economy or open the door to centrally controlled sectors of economy, which are known to fail ultimately.

Sincerely,

Risto Raitio, PhD

Espoo, Finland

MTC-00007843

From: Larry Ownbey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:20am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Hi, how are ya?

The simple fact is that free enterprise is what made USA the great nation that it is or should I say was? Let me ask a simple question; because Midas makes mufflers does that mean that Ford cannot make mufflers? Because Netscape makes a browser should Microsoft be disallowed? Smaller software companies have made a choice to make programs that rely on Microsoft's operating system. As far as I know there is no rule or law that says that they cannot develop their own operating system and programs to run under them.

Netscape chose to make a browser that runs under Microsoft's operating system. Why in the name of hell should that mean that Microsoft cannot include the browser that they make as a part of their operating system. Nowhere in that effort did Microsoft in any way do anything that would prevent anybody from getting and using any browser they choose. If the other guy wants to compete they need to "make a better whistle". If they cannot "make a better whistle" then maybe they should consider another line of work!

Microsoft has done some great things for this country and it's people, I really don't think they should be punished for it. If you ask me the whole litigation was just done to make a bunch of nearly worthless lawyers rich at the consumer's expense. For every good thing that anybody find in what lawyers do I can guarantee there are at least 25 bad things. Their sole existence is based on the ill fate and sufferings of others. Lawyers will destroy this country.

Thank you,
Larry Ownbey

MTC-00007844

From: K Orum
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:23am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
January 3, 2002
United States Dept of Justice
To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing in behalf of Microsoft. I don't think there is any reason to break up a company that has supplied us with good products and good service since personal computing began. I have never felt "victimized" or limited by any of the Microsoft applications. I see AOL/Time Warner and your old friend AT&T as much bigger problems/threats to the public. I am a subscriber of both of these services and feel victimized by their underhanded billing methods and misrepresented services.

I am a shareholder of all three so I don't give this opinion carelessly or unfairly.

Sincerely,
Karen E. Orum

MTC-00007845

From: tom holzman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:34am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

I am quite pleased the case with Microsoft has been settled. In my opinion it should never have been brought to begin with. Microsoft's competitors in the marketplace were simply using government intervention as an attempt to block Microsoft's superior marketing skills and products. I am neither connected with Microsoft nor am I connected with any other software or hardware company. I use Microsoft operating system software on PC's as well as Apple operating system software on their machines. I am simply a home consumer who feels this whole episode is simply another example of politically motivated government waste excess. As a consumer I feel the whole prosecution of the government case against Microsoft has been a huge waste of time and money. The consumer has never had more inexpensive choices for home computing than under the current/previous market environment. Please go away and leave these people alone to innovate and develop new useful products for consumers! If you want to do something really useful for me as a consumer you should investigate why I can't get connected to the internet at high speeds because the last two miles of wire to my house is under monopoly control by Ameritech/SBC. This behemoth is clearly blocking other companies from selling me true high-speed DSL access.

This is corruption on a huge scale!
Regards,
holzmant@telocity.com

MTC-00007846

From: Ralph Baur

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,
the proposed settlement is reasonable and fair. I totally agree that the settlement is good for the customers, the industry and moreover it means an important signal to the worlds economy. In my opinion the settlement is of public interest and I respectfully ask the district court to honor this in its fourthcoming decision.

Best Regards,
R. Baur

MTC-00007847

From: Chris Boonham
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:56am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I just wanted to take the opportunity to record my opinion.

I believe that the settlement between Microsoft and the federal government/nine states, is tough on Microsoft, but is fair to the Consumers and the IT industry as a whole. It is in the interests of the everyone, including the US economy, for this settlement to proceed swiftly to it's final conclusion.

Thank you.
Chris Boonham

MTC-00007848

From: DivalLibraE@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please, do not this situation continue. I believe an end should be put to this, and that the present settlement agreement be let stand with a guarantee that this settlement stand. Continuing to prolong action against Microsoft will not be in the public/consumers interest. This entire action has hurt our economy, industry and the American citizen. In my opinion, the continuation of this case over so many months was caused mainly by our pre-Bush government and politicians.

I think that when the public learns that Microsoft if no longer in litigation, the response of business and citizens will react with a positive response.

Thank you.....LillianEibert

MTC-00007849

From: JACK PURSER
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:08am
Subject: Settlement

If you don't leave our corporations alone they will be forced out to overseas countries and more of our jobs will be sent over there, LEAVE THEM ALONE!

Jack E. Purser Sr.
A Voter
Jack Purser Sr.

MTC-00007850

From: MadRGO@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:11am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We believe strongly that it is time to settle the Microsoft lawsuit and move on. The country is in a recession and it is not prudent to stifle innovation on one of our home-grown businesses. Microsoft is a business that creates jobs and is a good citizen. The settlement is fair and the nine states should be made to accept that. Their interests are merely self-serving.

Madison McCall
Dorothy McCall, Charlottesville, Virginia

MTC-00007851

From: cauvel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:20am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would just like to add my voice to the many people asking you to stop this useless waste of public money and resources. The continuation of this legal battle can have no benefit to anyone in the public sector. You are suing a company for bundling its products, and saying you are doing it for the benefit of the people. Can I please have someone explain to me how it is going to benefit me to have to pay for each separate piece of my operating system for my computer? So, for one price I have recieved everything I need to operate my computer and to go online, it works perfectly together, I dont have conflicts to deal with in case I buy the wrong thing, and most importantly I GOT IT ALL FOR ONE PRICE! I think that this case to begin with was baseless harrassment from the government, and with everything I have read about it, I still believe that is true. I think that we need to go ahead and settle this and move on. And in closing, I would just like to mention... AOL/TIME WARNER. Lets apply the same rules to all corporations, regardless of who the major stockholders are.

MTC-00007852

From: RANDVIC@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:22am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

End your legal attacks on Microsoft. Accept Microsoft's offer. The government legal attacks on Microsoft are simply yet again attempts to penelize those who are successful, while at the same time rewarding those who are not. That is backwards.

MTC-00007853

From: DEBROTA—DAVID—
J@LILLY.COM@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:23am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Sirs—

I support the Tunney Act. I also support reducing the period of copyright protection of computer software (for everyone, not just Microsoft), with an option for extension if the copyright holder places source code into escrow. We simply must encourage both innovation and reuse.

David DeBrotta

MTC-00007854

From: Ron Graves
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:24am
Subject: microsoft case

To whom it may concern:
I strongly object to the protracted suits against Microsoft. As a user I feel that Microsoft has given me the best possible platform on which to run my computer. All other solutions (Linux) appear like solutions looking around for a problem—try to install it as opposed to Windows. As a former computer programmer, I can appreciate the complexity and work that went in to Windows development. Finally, as a shareholder I feel that I and the other shareholders have been punished enough with the devaluation of the shares since this case first got major publicity. Enough is enough and the state Attorneys General should stop as well. Let's get on with the business of making Windows better and not having a company look over its shoulders all the time.

Ron Graves

MTC-00007855

From: Lois Tilles
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Dept. of Justice Representative,
I believe the settlement that has been proposed for Microsoft is fair and equitable. I support it going forward. Also, I think it would further endanger our weakened economy to spend precious time, energy and focus on reopening issues that have already been fairly settled.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Lois Tilles
ltilles@pacbell.net

MTC-00007856

From: Dan Cannon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is clear to me that Microsoft is a innovative company and the envy of most of their competitors. Many of the entities opposed to the proposed settlement are either Microsoft competitors, have a financial stake in the outcome, or simply do not like any successful corporation. Our country has already spent way too many resources on this lawsuit which in my opinion is actually hurting the consumer and our nation's economy by stifling innovation. If Microsoft ever truly harms the consumer, the market will speak. I urge the DoJ to accept the proposed settlement and allow (and even encourage) technical innovation to once again flourish.

Dan Cannon
drcannon@hotmail.com

MTC-00007857

From: Edward W. Hackett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:34am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please set this case aside. The settlement reached with the government should be good enough. Let Microsoft get back to the business of writing computer computer programs.

MTC-00007858

From: Rex Plent
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:42am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I'm a Microsoft share holder and I believe that Microsoft has been good for this country and the world! I believe that the company was unfairly attacked and that this whole affair should be put to rest. Microsoft has been good to me and their products are great. Let's get on with it! The world has more important things to be concerned about.
redrex@msn.com

MTC-00007859

From: NicSca@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:52am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's time to end this injustice perpetrated by a few competitors who simply cry foul because they can't defeat Microsoft on the playing field using the normal rules of the game. I am one American who truly believes that Microsoft did not violate any laws of this great country. Being a fiercely competitive and relentlessly intimidating player in the great economic arena of today's world is correct, necessary, and JUSTIFIED!

Microsoft broke no laws. Let us end this travesty now!

CC:NicSca@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00007860

From: hterhoeve@gmstl.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:49am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Comments regarding proposed settlement.
Proposed settlement is too severe to Microsoft.

MTC-00007861

From: Marge Seybert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Show me an American made television set.
Shanley J. Seybert

MTC-00007862

From: CTerry@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:00am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time for the gov't to move on and stop hindering the productivity and creativity of the software company that single-handedly stopped the madness of the duplicity of operating systems (software companies had to re-write the old code just to make it available on the different systems instead of innovating), stopped the madness of the duplicity of office software products that all worked differently, wouldn't talk to each other and made computers hard to work with and limited people to working effectively from product to product. Oh...by the way, do you remember the price of Lotus 123, which didn't have a new upgrade (1a to 2 and 2.1) for 3 years... $395. We now get in MS Office Excel, Word, Powerpoint, Outlook and Access for less! Quit it. They have innovated, made the product available to everyone all for a significantly less price. Go chase some terrorists!

Charles W. Terry
13201 Dodie Dr.
Darnestown, MD 20878

MTC-00007863

From: vze27x6e@verizon.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:00am
Subject: Microsoft

Please settle this suit as soon as possible. It is an unjust suit to begin with. Microsoft is only guilty of being successful. The states attorneys general and the other companies that are suing are only being opportunistic. Microsoft is a great company and good for our nation.

MTC-00007864

From: Snowman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:07am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Sir/Madam

I beleave that Microsoft and the American public have and are tired of this action. I also beleave that Microsoft is one of the fuee companys that has a direct influence on our economy, if this sort of action is continued the recovery of our economy will be delayed.

Thank you for your time in this grave acct of misdirected justice.

Glenn Eugene; Frantz

Copyright Notice: All rights reserved re common-law copyright of trade-name/trade-mark,

GLENN

EUGENE FRANTZ(C)-as well as any and all derivatives and variations in the spelling of said trade-name/trade-mark-Copyright(C) 1969 by Glenn Eugene; Frantz. Said trade-name/trade-mark,

GLENN EUGENE FRANTZ(C), may neither be used, nor reproduced, neither in whole nor in part, nor in any manner whatsoever, without the prior, express, written consent and acknowledgement of Glenn Eugene; Frantz as signified by the red-ink signature of Glenn Eugene; Frantz, hereinafter "Secured Party."

Secured Party neither grants, nor implies, nor otherwise gives consent for any unauthorized use of GLENN EUGENE FRANTZ(C), and all such unauthorized use is strictly prohibited.

Unauthorized User(s):

(1) grants Secured Party a security interest in, and a distress warrant and lien against, User's property and interest in property in the sum certain amount of $500,000.00 per each trade-name/trade-mark used, per each occurrence of use, plus triple damages, plus costs for each such use, as well as for each and every use of any and all derivatives and variations in the spelling of GLENN EUGENE FRANTZ(C);

(2) authenticates a Security Agreement wherein User is debtor and Glenn Eugene; Frantz is Secured Party and User pledges all of User's property and interest in property as collateral for securing User's contractual obligation;

(3) authenticates a UCC Financing Statement wherein User is debtor and Glenn Eugene; Frantz is Secured Party;

(4) consents and agrees that said Financing Statement is a continuing financing statement, authorizing Secured Party's filing of any continuation statement necessary for maintaining Secured Party's perfected security interest in all of User's property and rights in property pledged as collateral in the aforementioned Security Agreement, until User's contractual obligation theretofore incurred has been fully satisfied;

(5) authorizes the filing of the aforementioned UCC Financing Statement and Security Agreement in the UCC filing office by Secured Party;

(6) consents and agrees that any and all such filings referenced in paragraph "(5)" above are not, and may not be considered, bogus, and that User will not claim that any such filing is bogus; and

(7) waives all defenses.

Record Owner: Glenn Eugene; Frantz, Autograph Common Law Copyright(C) 1969.

MTC-00007865

From: Bob Sammons
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:09am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Uncle Sam,
Please settle this Microsoft fiasco ASAP. September 11th has been a drop in the bucket compared to what this government debacle has done to the economy.

Thanks,
Bob Sammons
2000 Sammons Davis Ct
Arlington, Texas 76015

MTC-00007866

From: D. G. Cragar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough is enough. Get this settled without further litigation.
D. G. CRAGAR
P.O. BOX 142
ADONA, AR 72001-0142

MTC-00007867

From: Jamesjmorgan@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:16am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To DOJ:

It seems appropriate that the DOJ finalize the settlement agreement at this time.

I found it hard to comprehend the concept that Microsoft stifled competition when they actually were an incubator and catalyst for the most concentrated intellectual development in history. Sour grapes has cost all of us too much time and money. Get on with the settlement and let's get back to more important issues.

Sincerely,
James J. Morgan
Paradise Valley, AZ.

MTC-00007868

From: rufuswon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:21am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I approve of the proposed settlement and wish to see it implemented.
Jeff Ballard

MTC-00007869

From: James R. Wright Sr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:22am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I strongly believe your proposed settlement of the Microsoft antitrust action is fair and equitable. Your proposal will continue to allow research and development of new products and technologies by the best and brightest in the industry.

I also believe any further restrictions would significantly inhibit future advances in technical development areas if large vendors like Microsoft is restricted, just so it will be perceived "fair" for other developers to enter the market. Regardless of the software developers size if their products are actually good they will find a place in the market. After all didn't Microsoft succeed in a market dominated by IBM when it first started?

I don't remember the Justice Department going after IBM to level the playing field for Microsoft.

The unique thing about private enterprise is consumers do have brains and they will do what's best for themselves regardless of what is perceived a "politically correct."

I hope you will stick with your original decision and allow the consumers like me determine what is good and what is bad in the market place, not the courts. Let's put an end to this type of corporate harassments once and for all!

James R. Wright Sr.
313 East Appleby Avenue
Cambridge, Maryland 21613

MTC-00007870

From: Colleen Chapman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:28am
Subject: Memory !!!

Hello—

This whole damn thing with Microsoft is stupid ! Way back when computers were just getting started into home desktops Apple came out with their OS and wouldn't license or allow anyone to use their system. Monopoly ?? Several other systems were developed for the IBM clones, Microsofts DOS among them. Why did Microsoft become the system in use ?? For the reasons of 1 that it was reasonably user friendly and 2 mainly it was available to the whole market. In days gone by when a person developed something that the buying public wanted he could make a profit and build a business. Now that common sense has taken a back seat to Lawyerize if a person is successful he gets sued. Pure male bovine fecal material.

I'm a retired Los Angeles City fireman and have seen bureaucracy in action big time. The whole message of this deal and the other many "do gooder" issues will do nothing but stifle any incentive of the people that have ambitions other than being a happy hamburger flipper.

Cordially and sincerely. Howard L Chapman

MTC-00007871

From: BAADBBBOY@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:31am
Subject: Tunney Act

To Whom It May Concern:
Please, enough already with hassling Microsoft and Bill Gates! Bill Gates has done a lot of good for our country with his company Microsoft! Stop the nonsense and leave the good company and Bill Gates along already! Just because a few of our government elected officials are against Microsoft and Bill Gates because of the brilliant man he is and because he has founded one of the best companies in the world gives our government NO right to continue to harass him!

I say to our government ENOUGH ALREADY! Spend our tax dollars on more important issues in this country, like coming up with a way STOP THE TERRORIST THAT THEY ALLOW INTO THE USA!

Sincerely,
Mary Chance
20515 East Country Club Drive
Apt. #2243
Aventura, Fla
33180
305-937-1507

MTC-00007872

From: Robert Brady
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:37am
Subject: microsoft settlement

i think it was crazy to go after microsoft in the first place. look at what the market has done because of it !. get off their back, please

MTC-00007873

From: STAN HELENIK
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:43am
Subject: pro-microsoft

i am a canadian doing extensive work in the states.i find too much critical emphasis as of late on microsoft by the nine states..it seems to me that sun,aol and others are lobbying still..i am very happy with my new XP operating system as well as the previous others..let the american dream persevere and let microsoft alone. stan h.

MTC-00007874

From: NaplesMac@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:45am
Subject: Subj: Microsoft settlement

To whom this email concerns;
I do believe that the settlement that has already been agreed upon between Microsoft and the US Government/States, I believe it to be fair for all parties concerned. Most of all this settlement is in the best interest of the American public and the country as a whole. I am in favor of the courts settling this case to allow our country to get on with the recovery that is so badly needed. I see no further litigation's needed. It is time that we as a country get this case behind us and to go on with the more important issues facing the nation and the economy.

Thank you so much for taking the time to read my comments dealing with the Microsoft lawsuit.

Mr. William MacKenzie

MTC-00007875

From: STAN HELENIK
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:47am
Subject: microsoft settlement
From: STAN HELENIK
<hetstan@oxford.net>

To: <Microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov>
 Sent: Thursday, January 03, 2002 7:43 AM
 Subject: pro-microsoft

i am a canadian doing extensive work in the states.i find too much critical emphasis as of late on microsoft by the nine states..it seems to me that sun,aol and others are lobbying still..i am very happy with my new XP operating system as well as the previous others..let the american dream persevere and let microsoft alone. stan h.

p.s. BILL GATES,IN MY OPINION IS AN EXTRAORDINARY PHILANTHROPIST AND MODEL AMERICAN.

MTC-00007876

From: Pajoarnold@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:48am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ:

Get done with this! This is way too long and too expensive to continue. Had Microsoft been issuing product at an exorbitant rate then you have cause to worry. Microsoft is and has been attacked because they got there first! I thought that this was the way it worked in the US, at least it did for my forty years in business.

John Arnold
 Little River, SC 29566

MTC-00007877

From: Alkay99@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:56am
 Subject: Settlement

It's time to end this ridiculous lawsuit against one of America's finest corporations.

From what I read in the media, Microsoft's offer is more than fair. This corporation has made the U.S. the leader in computer sciences, has added to the security of the country, and has done nothing to be ashamed of.

Time to end this persecution of a fine corporation!

Al Kay, Orlando, FL

MTC-00007878

From: Ed Schone
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:58am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it May Concern,

I am a Microsoft consumer and I use both IBM compatible and Macintosh computers. I use Microsoft software on both types of computers. Why—because it provides the most advanced features at prices I can afford. Even on the Macintosh, where there is very little Microsoft software available compared to the IBM compatible world, when I had the choice, I've bought Microsoft (or downloaded free) over the other vendors. You guys have done enough. Just let agreed decision carry on and let Microsoft continue to develop innovative software products.

Ed Schone
 eschone@hotmail.com
 704.573.4177

MTC-00007879

From: Harvey Waxman
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:58am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

What good does it do to protest? Microsoft owns the operating system world. Why else would a cumbersome, complex, frustrating and, generally acknowledged to be, inferior operating system prevail? Could it be that Mr. Gates had the vision to understand that once his DOS was installed on the vast majority of computers in homes, courtesy of his arrangement with IBM, he could do anything he wanted without the benefit of competition?

There is no competition because of stupid and naive decisions made by Apple computer. But the fact is that there is no competition.

Harvey Waxman D.M.D.
 73 Wright Lane
 Wickford, RI 02852-5846

MTC-00007880

From: JOHN BASHAM
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:58am
 Subject: Re: Settlement

I am writing to you to urge you to approve the settlement with Microsoft. I am a user of Microsoft products and have felt all through this court case that I have purchased a good product at a fair price. Jack Basham "One of the penalties for refusing to participate in politics is that you end up being governed by your inferiors."

Plato

MTC-00007881

From: James MacLaughlin
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:01am
 Subject: SETTLEMENT

Please do not punish Microsoft beyond the current negotiated settlement. Business is about competition which include strategies and tactics that may not seem fair to people who are not in business.

This entirely DEMOCRAT suit has damaged our economy. Don't make it any worse.

Thank you,
 James A MacLaughlin
 1633 Eton Way
 Crofton, MD 21114

MTC-00007882

From: Vern Scoggins
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:00am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to thank you for settling with Microsoft. Please don't let all those whiney competitors dictate what they think is right for the consumer and the economy when they are really only concerned about themselves. Your settlement with Microsoft IS the right thing for consumers and the economy.

Sincerely,
 Vernon A. Scoggins
 13937 Dovehunt Place
 Charlotte, NC 28273

MTC-00007883

From: Ruth Pennock
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:02am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Please settle this case. Thank you.

MTC-00007884

From: BRIAN HOLLAND
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:03am
 Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Sirs,
 After years of debate, argument, charge and counter charge, conflict, and inflammatory unsubstantiated claims of wrong doing, a settlement has been achieved between the government and Microsoft. It is my opinion that the energy and resources, both human and capital, that have been exhausted during this period went way beyond what was required to protect consumers from the abuses of market domination.

The settlement achieved is fair. The competitive model of commerce in the most advanced and admired economy in the world has been preserved. Free market competition incents innovation and growth, and ultimately advances the quality of life for all.

I urge you to accept this settlement and reaffirm the character of commerce in the U.S.

Sincerely,
 L. Brian Holland
 PO Box 353
 13091 Kibler Road
 Greensboro, MD 21639

MTC-00007885

From: bill shaw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:07am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle this ridiculous case ASAP!!!!

MTC-00007886

From: Alice Allen
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:06am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel that it is essential to our country and our economy that the Microsoft case be settled for once and all; I hope the most recent settlement will be quickly approved and initiated.

Alice Allen

MTC-00007887

From: KEN NELSON
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:10am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Why punish a company that has competed fairly on a head to head basis?

Why punish a company that has kept prices "LOW" not high?

Why punish a company that has done so very much for the high tech industry, this country and the world?

Why punish a company for doing such a good job?

Doesn't punishing a company for doing well send the wrong message to our children, friends and family?

Thank you.
 Ken Nelson

MTC-00007888

From: Robert P. Blaisdell
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:12am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Department of Justice (DOJ)
 Representative, Marzen Group LLC is a small business that integrates software and provides secure solutions for Department of Defense (DOD), as well as our commercial customers. Our Corporate headquarters is located in New Hampshire and we also have a location in Alabama. Our expertise includes supporting and securing both the Windows-based and UNIX platforms, software development, and providing turnkey hardware/software solutions to our various customers. Our customer's requirements are split on a platform basis as follows: 85% demand for Windows and 15% for UNIX/Linux.

(By the way, it has been our experience that the UNIX space within DOD is controlled by Sun Microsoft Systems Solaris at about 92%. Within our commercial UNIX space, it has been our experience that the market share for Sun Microsoft Systems appears to be the same. We have also seen that the DOD router space is controlled by CISCO to the tune of about 96%. If market share is the key indicator there are lots of other antitrust targets depending how you define the market space.)

We have followed the case against Microsoft and have reviewed the DOJ settlement. We agree with Microsoft that the settlement is fair and preserves the ability of our company to continue compete in the software integration and security marketplace, while preserving Microsoft's right to be innovative with their products. Since the case began, the software industry has continued to become more competitive place, and we believe this will continue especially during these economic down turn. The fact there are ten times more software developers choosing to use the Microsoft economic model and tools, should not be worrisome to DOJ. This means that many third party companies, like my company, are betting their futures using the development platform framework provided by Microsoft, will work correctly with that framework. It means many jobs for our citizens and it allows customers to obtain the best software solutions made in the world. If each software company had to develop our own framework, much like the current state of UNIX/Linux, the cost and time to market of products that are needed would be significantly higher. In some cases this would force us to scrap the project, thus leaving our customers with inferior solutions.

The United States is known for its innovative capabilities within the software arena. Microsoft is an important partner in this space as well as other companies like Oracle, Sun and Red Hat. Microsoft has significantly invested in Standards Groups, which benefits all software developers, regardless of their O/S affiliation. Microsoft's large scale support of the open standards committees (IETF, UPNP, W3, to name just a few) has helped them to become even a better corporate citizen within the software industry. The restrictions placed on Microsoft by your agreement will also allow us to move past the period of uncertainty which has plagued many companies for several years. As a company president, I can tell you that waiting for this legal case to be settled, has had a significantly impacted our strategic planning model for the past couple of years. With the case settled, it will allow companies like ours, to forge ahead with strategic plan, certain that we they are based on a development framework that is understood and will be stable for the foreseeable future.

The settlement DOJ proposed, and that was accepted by Microsoft, is fair and we believe it is in the best interest of the citizens of the US. I urge DOJ to stay the course with the settlement as proposed, to remove the cloud of uncertainty over software integration and third party development plans and to move forward. Let get on with the business of providing innovative solutions to our citizens!

Bob Blaisdell—President
M'rzeen Group LLC
35 Pine Street Ext.
Millyard Technology Park
Nashua, NH 03060-3213
Corporate: 603.889.9522 Mobile:
603.860.8200
Fax 603.889.9567 rpb@marzen.com www.marzen.com
CC:mailbox@gregg.senate.gov@inetgw, opinion@smith.sena. . .

MTC-00007889

From: Punto Info
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:15am
Subject: Domini Prestigiosi
ACQUISTA un di questi 5 autorevoli domini:
AFFARI.INFO IMPRESA.INFO
SPONSOR.INFO SPOT.INFO
LESBO.INFO
E avrai da subito un grande numero di visitatori, senza contare il prestigio che la tua azienda ne trarrebbe.
Per informazioni: <http://www.toprete.com/domain.htm>

MTC-00007890

From: Jmmenoud@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:19am
Subject: Microsoft
The settlement reached with the 9 states is a big step in the right direction. I find it ridiculous that American companies fight each others while foreign companies competing in the same field try to fill the gap. Microsoft is a pioneer and it is a shame that other companies which could not catch up attempt to penalize Microsoft. Who are these people who do not accept the rules of free market ? and what are the benefits for US companies to continue this legal war ? Abroad people are laughing when they see the millions of dollars spent on this purely legal fees. ... What is the finality ? Certain CEO of losing companies should swallow their ego and accept the ruling. ...

I expect the DOJ do bring an end to this case against one of the biggest pride of the USA.

Jean-Michel Menoud

MTC-00007891

From: njcolonna
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:20am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
TIME TO PUT AN END TO THIS ISSUE.
PLEASE STOP NOW AND LET'S MOVE ON

TO BETTER THING TO DO. WE HAVE REVISITED THIS MANY TIMES BEFORE.

I AM CONFIDENT YOU RESPECTS THE VIEWS OF AMERICAN CITIZENS LIKE MYSELF WHO WISH FOR OUR JUSTICE SYSTEM TO ACT WITH CARE ! PLEASE CEASE ANY FURTHER ACTIONS WITH GOING FORTH WITH A CASE SETTLEMENT REVIEW.

SINCERELY, NORM COLONNA 440 237 4581

MTC-00007892

From: LotusInn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:28am
Subject: We support the efforts of Microsoft and its effect on our success as a company and personally. We t

We support the efforts of Microsoft and its effect on our success as a company and personally. We think that Microsoft has had a tremendous benefit on our nation by enhancing people's productivity.

This keeps inflation down. We see no need for this unnecessary litigation. We realize that Microsoft's software and innovation has made our life better.

MTC-00007893

From: philip.lindsey@na.biomerieux.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:
Please let it be known as part of the Public Record that I am in favor of a full settlement of this case in favor of Microsoft. We have better things to do in this country than to penalize a successful organization that is a backbone of our economy. Please stop this madness.

Philip M. Lindsey, C.P.M. bioMérieux, Inc.
Hazelwood, MO

MTC-00007894

From: Mark E Fogg
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:30am
Subject: Microsoft

Dear Sir:
It is now time to settle the Microsoft case. Microsoft is one of the leading companies in the tech field. You must realize that the companies fighting Microsoft have a vested interest in causing the company trouble. The states attorney generals still holding out are more interested in enhancing their political careers than anything else. Settlement of this case with the current solution is the best option.

Mark E. Fogg

MTC-00007895

From: Michele Acerra
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:31am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT.
Ladies or Gentlemen.

I understand that the D.O.J. is accepting comments on the "Microsoft proposed settlement".

My opinion is that the proposed settlement is fair and that should be enforced. I believe that all the States should accept it and in fact

I believe that they should not have entered in the litigation since this was, if any, a federal offense and was already prosecuted by the D.O.J. Although undoubtedly there were abuses by Microsoft of their technological and commercial position, I believe that it is time to move on and that freedom of innovation has to be respected and protected.

Sincerely,
Michele Acerra

MTC-00007896

From: Robert Dreyer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:22am
Subject: Microsoft.

It seems that so called lidigation into the Microsoft law suit has become no more than an extortion on the part of a bunch of greedy people who use the excuse of "were only thinking about whats best for the people". I don't think any of the Attorney generals whether they be Federal of state have any other reason for the suit except its a place to shake a Co. down for the money All these law suits are just for the money be it greedy lawyers or state and federal offices. Get off microsofts back and let them go on about there business. It seems if a Co. has some smart people and is innovative we can't have that, we have to bring them down to our level. Thats the way people in government work any body with brain doesn't stand a chance there is no room in government for a thinker.

Sam Spade

MTC-00007897

From: Joseph Maccaro
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:35am
Subject: complete the agreement

Sirs:

We urge the DOJ to end the Microsoft case and implement the recent government-Microsoft agreement. It is time to direct DOJ energy to other critical matters.

Mr & Mrs J. Maccaro
154-61 22 Ave
Whitestone NY 11357

MTC-00007898

From: Kenney, George
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:38am
Subject: Opposition to Microsoft Settlement

I strongly oppose the Microsoft settlement because the parties harmed by the business practices are not compensated by the proposed settlement.

1) Low income school district are not the customers who purchased Microsoft products. The proposal to only provide relief to low-income schools, as opposed to all schools is a Robin Hood feel good approach to the problem. As a consumer who has been required to purchase Microsoft products, both stand alone and pre-loaded by the manufacturers of the PC's I have purchased, my children do not go to low income schools and therefore will derive no benefit from the settlement.

2) Competitors of Microsoft will be further harmed by being excluded from selling products to the schools which will be flooded with Microsoft products as a result of the settlement. The damage to these competitors will actually increase as a result of this settlement.

I would like to see this settlement be rejected for the reasons mentioned above.

sincerely,
George Kenney
1304 Sequoia Rd
Naperville, IL 60540
Phone: + 630 541 8628
Fax: + 630 541 8204
george.kenney@ca.com
<mailto:george.kenney@ca.com>

MTC-00007899

From: Donna (038) Gary
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:41am
Subject: microsoft settlement

To the DOJ. It is my opinion that you should end the battle with Microsoft and go forward with the settlement.

Personally I believe the suit was wrong from the get go. We need more innovative companies like Microsoft. They make a good product,market it well, and make money doing it. This gives people jobs that provide the income to help stimulate the economy. When Microsoft raises their prices to help pay the settlement who gets hurt? Us the people your "protecting" that's who. Open and free competition is what drives a market, not the courts.

Thank you for taking the time to read my views.

Gary Chierici

MTC-00007900

From: Daviduk, Matthew
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 8:41am
Subject: Comment

If not for Microsoft, where would we be today? The settlement is fair. For the goodness of the technology world and the consumers out there, let it be settled.

Is there going to be the same lawsuits against companies like AOL?

The software industry would self-destruct if Microsoft goes away. . . . But if I were Bill Gates, I would say "Fine, you don't appreciate my contributions. . . . then Good Bye"

MTC-00007901

From: Julsxn@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:42am
Subject: Settlement

I think that it is a bunch of c—— for a company having to share with others who have been sitting on their duff what they have achieved with their efforts. If I were Bill Gates I'd tell them to go U know where.

MTC-00007902

From: Arnold(u)Agre
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I as Microsoft investor and user have been concerned about antitrust suit against Microsoft for some time. While Microsoft has become more or less the standard for their operating system and personal computer software, they earned it by providing innovative products. I believe I as a consumer have benefited from what Microsoft has done over the years.

The Department of Justice has spent millions of tax payer dollars over the years prosecuting a case that I as a consumer feel was unnecessary to begin with. Microsoft has spent millions of dollars defending themselves. This money could have been used for more R&D or made Microsoft more profitable which would have enhanced the value of the stock in my portfolio. I think it ridiculous to punish a company because they have been successful.

The uncertainty caused my this litigation needs to stop. Microsoft has agreed to a settlement that I think goes far beyond what was required. I think it is in the public interest that the case be settled with the terms that have been agreed to by the DOJ and Microsoft.

Arnold Agre
8762 Gray Fox Dr.
Evergreen, Co 80439

MTC-00007903

From: Daphanie M. Mullins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:44am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
From: Chu4021748@aol.com
To: piu@doj.ca.gov ;

attorney.general@po.state.ct.us ;
ag@oag.state.fl.us ;
consumer@ag.state.ia.us ;
GENERAL@ksag.org ;
webmaster@ago.state.ma.us ;
attorney.general@state.mn.us ;
uag@att.state.ut.us ; consumer@wvnet.edu ;
timb001@attglobal.net

Sent: Monday, December 17, 2001 3:11 PM
Subject: Don't Settle with Microsoft

Watching MS behavior for years I do not favor a settlement as they have destroyed what once was a very competitive marketplace. The unethical behavior they have shown should not be rewarded with a slap on the wrist.

Charlie May

MTC-00007904

From: Daphanie M. Mullins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:45am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
From: "Dan Van Fleet"

<danvanf@erinet.com>
To: <piu@doj.ca.gov>;
<attorney.general@po.state.ct.us>;
<ag@oag.state.fl.us>;
<consumer@ag.state.ia.us>;
<GENERAL@ksag.org>;
<webmaster@ago.state.ma.us>;
<attorney.general@state.mn.us>;
<uag@att.state.ut.us>;
<consumer@wvnet.edu>;
<timb001@attglobal.net> Sent:
Wednesday, December 19, 2001 11:01 AM

Subject: Don't Settle with Microsoft
Hi,

I'm from Ohio, one of the states that wimped out on the Microsoft case. I stand and applaud you all for not stopping without a real fix. I use OS/2, Linux. Of course I'm forced to use Microsoft products in many instances. I have noted that not only is OS/2 superior to all versions of Windows including XP, I believe that Microsoft used unfair monopolistic tactics to quash OS/2. (The psudo 32 bit extensions that Word required, which broke OS/2 in the early 90's would be one of them)

I was very happy with Judge Jackson's understanding of the industry, it was the FIRST time in history that I thought a Judge had a clue about the IT industry. Depressingly, he let Microsoft get the best of him, (his temper had to have been raised due to the lies MS told in his court, which were proven to be lies in his court) and he spouted off when he shouldn't have.

Anyway, Keep up the good work, stand your ground. BTW, I've also contacted Betty Montgomery (AG-Ohio) to express my displeasure with their actions.

Dan Van Fleet
Springfield, Ohio
danvanf@erinet.com

Standard disclaimer: My E-mail address is for communications for and between myself and the address list of this original e-mail only. It is not for sale, rent, trade, barter, or any other purpose. You have not right to give, sell, trade, or otherwise transmit it, without my consent.

MTC-00007905

From: David Storm
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:44am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe it is crime to continue to let the Microsoft competitors that can't compete in the marketplace to continue to hound Microsoft in the courts. What has started as an argument over whether Microsoft could enhance their product by incorporating a browser, has degenerated into "we don't like them because they are so successful, or so competitive, and therefore we must hamstring them".

I think it is fairly clear that Microsoft has sparked the current technological revolution. Remember it was just 8-10 years ago that we felt our technological economy would be surpassed by the Japanese. What has happened?. Obviously, without government inference in the marketplace, good old American ingenuity came through again. I believe I am getting a better product for less money because of Microsoft.

Settle the case without killing Microsoft. As a consumer I don't want to have another ATT-like breakup.

David Storm

MTC-00007906

From: Daphanie M. Mullins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:47am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
From: "John Losse" <jn—jdlosse@juno.com>
To: <consumer@mail.wvnet.edu>
Sent: Monday, December 24, 2001 5:43 PM
Subject: Fw: Microsoft Settlement
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the settlement is not strict enough and does not limit Microsoft business practices. I believe that they should be split up and the soft ware and operating programs should be separate companies.

John Losse
668 Wakefield Rd.
Goleta, CA 93117

MTC-00007907

From: RFWeg@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:46am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

PLEASE settle the Microsoft litigation as negotiated. This has gone on long enough. It is time to put this behind us and move on. Thank you for your attention in this matter.

MTC-00007908

From: david schofield
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:53am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear Sir:
I urge you to go through with and approve the settlement approved by the DOJ and Microsoft.

The operating system is so inexpensive relative to what you get, it is hard for me to relate to the statement that Microsoft charged too much.

Please end this nonsense.
David Schofield
7675 Classic Way
Atlanta, Georgia 30350
CC:dscho@mindspring.com@inetgw

MTC-00007909

From: Richard A. Beers, MD
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:54am
Subject: Microsoft settlement
Dear US Department of Justice
Representative:

I find the Microsoft settlement to be a good one that is fair to all concerned parties. I would urge the DOJ to proceed with the settlement and NOT to pursue further litigation. Thank you for considering my views.

Sincerely,
Rich Beers
Richard A. Beers, MD
Associate Professor, Department of Anesthesiology
SUNY Upstate Medical University
Syracuse, NY 13210
phone 315-464-4720
email <beersr@mail.upstate.edu>

MTC-00007910

From: Larry Rehg
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's time to stop the litigation against Microsoft and get on with the important things in our country, like getting rid of those forces that want to topple our way of life and government. It's obvious to me that those who want to prolong this debacle are just looking for a big "pay check" and don't give a darn about the rest of the citizens.

We know you're powerful, so you don't need to prove it by continuing this maddening attack on private industry.

Larry M. Rehg
Plano, Texas

MTC-00007911

From: Balloonz2u@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:56am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

When we had nothing better to do, it was fashionable to blame Microsoft for the world's ills. We have lived through Sept.11th, so with thanks to G-d, let's get on with living and once again smile when we read the rising stock market prices. Settle the damn case!!!

MTC-00007912

From: Gale
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:58am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir/Madam—
I am writing you to let you know my opinion about the Microsoft pending settlement. The courts need to do whatever possible to see that this settlement goes through. Microsoft has done some things that may have hurt competition, but the consumers have done nothing but benefit from their products and practices. Consumers are being hurt so much more by all the litigation that is going on. What Microsoft has done for the consumer is force all software companies to make their products compatible with each other, make them easier to use and offer more features. The monopolistic practices may have hurt competition in the long run, but us consumers are much better off right now. The only people really standing to benefit from further litigation and/or a more stringent ruling against Microsoft is Microsoft's competitors. If this is truly a case to protect consumers, then protect us by allowing this settlement to go through and forcing other states not signing it to settle quickly. If competitors' products are as good as what Microsoft produces, let the capitalistic marketplace benefit these companies. Having the government assist them in gaining market share will not benefit consumers.

Thank you,
Gale Dahlager
Co-Owner (and bookkeeper) of Razor Rock Racing (bicycle component manufacturer)

MTC-00007913

From: George Dziuk Jr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:58am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it may concern:
I would strongly urge you to settle this matter on terms favorable to Microsoft. Without companies like MS, the future of this country's ability to compete and lead in important economic areas will be severely restricted.

I grant anyone the argument that there are warts all over Microsoft but they pale in comparison to the great good that MS brought to the computer industry years ago when a standard operating system didn't exist and those, like myself, who were into the infant personal computer craze wondered how anyone outside a big company could ever use one? It was too hard to buy a CPM based machine like I did then watch things go over to DOS and then wonder if Apple was going to really be "it" after all.

DOS did make it and the rest is history. Without Bill Gates imposing the industry standards, regardless of whether anyone agrees with how he did it, this country would still be doing things with pen and paper on ledger sheets.

George L. Dziuk Jr.

MTC-00007914

From: Cdsau@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I do not believe in more litigation. The settlement is good and fair for all. Thanks,
Carlos Diaz

MTC-00007915

From: John Kerr
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:01am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It appears that the settlement allows for benefits to organizations that would not normally receive benefits. Additionally the heightened awareness of the issue should preclude these actions in the future there by putting the issue to rest. Now is not the time to further weaken our economy by adapting the rules to favor a few.

I think the Government would be better served by applying its resources to areas where help is truly needed such as airport and border security and the rights of individuals trying to access our Country.

Regards,
John Kerr

MTC-00007916

From: JFAshbaugh@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:01am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to complete this settlement and get on with other business. In my mind most of the allegations were unfounded to begin with, and the government was overzealous in it's pursuit of Microsoft.

James F. Ashbaugh

MTC-00007917

From: Raymond Le Blanc
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:03am
Subject: Settlement

I want to suggest that the DOJ accept the settlement terms as proposed by Microsoft as being fair and equitable to the consumer public.

With warmest regards,
Ray Le Blanc

MTC-00007918

From: RSaliba@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:03am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir/Madam:

Can we please put this matter behind all of us so we can get on with better things? As a consumer, Microsoft has revolutionized my personal and business life. I never felt they cheated me on the prices of their products. Moreover, it appears these anti-trust actions were brought not for the benefit of the consumer but for the benefit of the competitors and a bunch of attorneys who wanted to advance their careers.

Even the class-action suit is a sham. How can an agreement to drop the suit in exchange for the company making a contribution to charities be of benefit to the class of plaintiffs the suit was originally designed to benefit? As a stockholder of many years, the Company has been very good to me, and I have no apologies. That's what our enterprise system is all about.

Robert G. Saliba

MTC-00007919

From: jack engel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:07am
Subject: settlement

Dear DOJ,

The settlement with Microsoft is more than fair to the public. Please don't let the special interest groups and wanna-be Microsoft competitors get in the way of progress, and innovation. Microsoft has done far more good for this country than any other firm I can think of.

John A. Engel, Jr.
Susan C. Engel small shareholders
Jack Engel
82 South Avenue
New Canaan, CT 06840
203 966-7576

MTC-00007920

From: lee.morrow@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

May I add my voice as you consider the settlement of the Microsoft case. The suite brought against Microsoft and subsequent judgment was the beginning of the recession we find ourselves in at present. Please settle this matter as presented by Microsoft so it serves to lead us out of the recession and on the road to recovery. Our Congress is dragging it's feet. The Department of Justice can make a major contribution in moving our economy forward by rendering a timely decision.

Lee Morrow

MTC-00007921

From: vera reitmeier
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:17am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
WILL YOU PLEASE SETTLE THIS CASE
ASAP!! IT IS COSTING US MONEY AND THE ECONOMY NEEDS A BOOST!!
SINCERELY, V. REITMEIER

MTC-00007922

From: AHenrij@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:11am
Subject: I like my Microsoft Stuff

I see no problem with Microsoft and its operations. It is easy, quick and convenient.

Don't mess with Microsoft !!!
Axel Henri

MTC-00007923

From: Tom Collison
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:11am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel that the judgement imposed on Microsoft as it now stands, is fair. In my opinion, further litigation delays implementation of the present agreement. Microsoft is an aggressive but innovative company whose developments have driven the entire industry rapidly forward.

Thank You,
Tom Collison.

MTC-00007924

From: Loumak@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:11am
Subject: (no subject)

i feel that microsoft has done nothing wrong and this whole affair is a sham.

MTC-00007925

From: anthony vorias
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:13am
Subject: Settlement

Dear Sirs

I'm In favor of settling the Microsoft case as soon as possible for the following reasons:

1. What we have is a solid American company that should continue to do world wide business and not be ham-strung by spending millions on non productive defense of their case. Put that revenue and effort to positive future use.
2. The products provided are productive and are at a fair price.
3. Settlement was to provide computers & software to schools. Lets do it but modify the deal. 50% of the settlement products will be Microsoft's and the other 50% in Dollar value will be paid of by Microsoft for other manufacturers products and software. i.e. they can buy Microsoft, Apple, Linus etc, etc. etc WHATEVER THE SCHOOLS CHOOSE!!! [Microsoft will pay up to 50% of the settlement fee] Let's get these kids working with the technology of the future!! T. Vorias

MTC-00007926

From: Robert Sori
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:14am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to comment on the proposed settlement with Microsoft. I use Windows, and several of the other products that have abused the legal process to try to defeat Microsoft in the courtroom.

Windows is a great operating program that comes with several basic programs, The ability to surf the net, write a note, listen to an music file.

Do you really think the consumer benefits from getting nothing in the package, and having to buy add-ons from day one.

If I use my computer for graphics, the included "Paint" program is inadequate. But it's inclusion is just fine if my kids want to play with it. The same is true for "notepad" it is simple a basic way to type a note, not some conspiracy to destroy Wordperfect. And as for "Internet Explorer" has anyone installed Netscape, why can Netscape assume after installation that it is the default program for surfing the internet, and that is fine. Isn't this an unfair practice?

You can not include every program that exists in the Windows package, and excluding one over another is bound to effect the company not selected.

The Government should not be in the business of siding with one company over another. And like the supposed cigarette settlement, This trial will only enrich some small group of lawyers. I have several checks for .75 or .60 cents, my portion of a multi million dollar credit card company trial, The Lawyer who though up the lawsuit gets 20 to 30 percent of the total, while the supposedly injured parties get literally pennies. This is your great profession at work, this is how your efforts help the injured.

But I doubt any effort will be made to insure that settlement money is fairly distributed, and Lawyers don't walk away with millions while the litigants get pennies.

What's next?

Why don't you DOJ people starts to look at the buggy whip conspiracy, how Detroit industrialist, worked to create the automobile, and destroyed the leather industry giants. Or how electricity destroyed the candles makers, get real people, move on.

Robert Sori
7716 Robinglen Ave.
Las Vegas, NV 89131

MTC-00007927

From: Garron (038) Anita Riechers
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:57am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Enough is enough. The settlement reached is equitable for all parties. As a consumer, I am satisfied. Call it a done deal and move on to something meaningful.

Garron Riechers DDS

MTC-00007928

From: Jim/Carol Renfrow
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:21am
Subject: Fw: Microsoft Settlement
From: Jim/Carol Renfrow
Sent: Wednesday, January 02, 2002 9:23 PM
To: Microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
DOJ—

Come on guys...it's settled. Let's get on with getting on. If this case is continued, you are starting to look foolish. Any further consideration by DOJ against Microsoft will further show how a few individuals in your department has a personal vendetta against Microsoft and Bill Gates.

Let American Capitalism and Democracy work....get out of the way.

Jim Renfrow
2400 Columbine Lane
Montrose, CO 81401-5646
renfrowjim@hotmail.com
(970)-249-6511

PS. I'm a 56 year old who has been a registered Democrat all my life and have never voted for a Republican Presidential Candidate.

MTC-00007929

From: Moondog123@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:27am
Subject: Comment on Microsoft settlement
Believe that it is the public and the government's best interest that the above be expedited ASAP with minimal restrictions on Microsoft's ability to compete in marketplace. DOJ should remember and learn from similar efforts in the eighties to restrict IBM which came close to wiping out that company. Legal efforts at restricting operations in this area are usually doomed to failure because of its nature.

J. Kahn
Redding, CT

MTC-00007930

From: John Koval
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:27am
Subject: Microsoft

The government needs to get out of the free business environment. Microsoft is what every American is working for, the American dream! Stop the wining competitors of Microsoft and tell them to put their wasted efforts into their business and compete in the free business world. The handcuffs should be taken off Microsoft. Stop wasting the tax payers money. Tell Sun, Oracle and the rest of them to compete on the business platform or choose another business to pursue. I have strong competitors in my business field and I am wondering if the DOJ is going to fight my battles. Shame on the politicians using this issue for additional press time for their own personal gains. It is time to put an end to this nonsense!

John Koval

MTC-00007931

From: Cyril Paciullo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:29am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I personally think that Microsoft do excellent software and competitors should be ashamed to give so much efforts in the destruction of this company. Without Windows, most of these competitors wouldn't even exist. I agree that Microsoft, due to business reasons, made some hard choices in some of its designs but companies such as Netscape chosed to take their time to any Microsoft and not to try to improve their software.

Cyril Paciullo.

MTC-00007932

From: Marjorie M. Ford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft very well maybe a powerful company and top in computer stuff, but let me tell you what happened in my home some years ago. My son was having trouble with his microsoft windows program and wanted to change so we went to a local computer store and bought OS (I don't remember what version it was) he wiped the computer clean, reformatted the hard drive and install OS— What a mess we ended up with, the computer kept freezing up and when it didn't there wasn't anything you could do that was compatible with anything else, so OS got the boot and Microsoft windows was reinstalled, there isn't enough competition out there that is useable for the computer dummies like me to use anything but Microsoft Windows. I realize there are those that say if there was anything else available they wouldn't use

Microsoft, seems to me like those that want to cut down Microsoft just are not thinking beyond the end of their nose, they want to make demands that could very well be unreasonable, and they do have the money to go with another system so why don't they just do it and in so doing would help build a network of competition for Microsoft, why should us commoners have to suffer at some nerds expense? I just don't understand why if someone doesn't like a product instead of saying one company is all wrong they just don't find another brand to use and keep their big fat mouths shut! Why don't they go buy Macs' and use that system? Personally I don't like Navigator, I found it to be not! user friendly like windows is and it got uninstalled from my computer in nothing flat!

The settlement that the DOJ agreed to should be the final thing and these other AG's should be told to deal with it and quit acting like they are "God's gift to the earth and know what everyone wants" they don't! they just want money to spend on some pet project that won't get financed without the Microsoft money.

Thanks for listening to me vent.
luckyme3990@hotmail.com

MTC-00007933

From: Gerald Weston
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:32am
Subject: MicroSoft Settlement

Its time that this thing was ended. It should never have started. This is nothing more than an example of how "bought and paid for" senators (i.e. Orin Hatch) are brought into the competitive arena to give a competitive advantage to companies that cannot succeed on their own. Market forces will find the proper balance if everybody leaves them alone. Microsoft does not have any sort of the competitive edge that IBM did with the mag-card typewriter.

MTC-00007934

From: MSINGEBORG@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:31am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

IT IS TIME TO SETTLE THIS ANTITRUST CASE AND THE SETTLEMENT SEEMS FAIR. IT IS IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST TO END THIS CASE AND MOVE FORWARD INTO A POSITIVE BUSINESS ENVIRONMENT.

INGEBORG TESSNER

MTC-00007935

From: Joseph Wages
To: DOJ Microsoft
Date: 1/3/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Tunney settlement brings this matter to a close as fairly as can be expected after all the effort that went into the trial Anti-trust laws are for the benefit of the consumer not competitors. This settlement should be approved so we can get on with the business of technology.

Joseph E. Wages
1813 Cliffside Drive
Pfaftown NC 27040

MTC-00007936

From: William Oneil
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Sir: I'm glad you settled the Microsoft case. Its been a major drag on the economy, in my opinion one of the main causes of the recession we're in. I'm also glad you did not require Microsoft to leave a lot of programs out of windows. Its already hard enough to use, without having a bunch of restrictions on including programs that will make users lives easier.

Bill O'Neil
bill711@home.com

MTC-00007937

From: VJCapece4@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:35am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel Microsoft as a company has gone through enough. Now it is time for the Government and States to settle this case and let Bill Gates get back to business. 911 proved to the world that as a people we can come together regardless of our differences and get the job done, now is the time to do so in this case. Lets think of all the contributions Microsoft has made to the economy and the computing industry and let these guys and gals get back to work and make the USA even stronger.

MTC-00007938

From: visionmt@mail.msy.bell.south.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:36am
Subject: microsoft settlement

TO THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE:
It is time for the Microsoft vs. DOJ litigation to end. In the best interest of our free enterprise system, and therefore America, the settlement in the Microsoft case must be accepted. What if Microsoft existed in another country? How dissimilar would our economic independence be if we were in a position in software capabilities as we are in our energy situation to the "Oil Cartel?" How much of a joke would it be if we tried to "rein in" a "software cartel" from another country?

It's time to end this silliness!
Cordially yours,
Kenneth R. Parker

MTC-00007939

From: Wagner, Joyce, CIV, 164 CEGS, DE
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 9:37am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

What a shame the government has spent so much time and money to go after a company that has an operating system that just "can't be beat". If there is a better option from any other company, let "them" come up with a marketing strategy and present it to the public just as Microsoft has done.

Bill Gates started this company with nothing—free enterprise at it's finest! Let all the other Bill Gates comes forward if they have something better to offer—until then, the government needs to get out of the business of running Microsoft's business and wasting taxpayers money.

I wonder how many of these people who are so against Microsoft have uninstalled the Windows system from their computer and installed another operating system—

Joyce B. Wagner
thewagnerclan@aol.com

MTC-00007940

From: R Thomsen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:39am
Subject: microsoft settlement

PLEASE be done with this stupid and harassing suit against Microsoft. This country is based on initiative and free enterprise. Because one firm is able to supply what the public wants is no excuse for the competition to run to the Govt. and cry unfair. Let them instead improve their products and compete. A settlement has been reached, let it be so.

Roy A. Thomsen

MTC-00007941

From: Dorothy MacDonald
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:40am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to settle this. I am for the settlement agreement.

Dorothy MacDonald

MTC-00007942

From: Joe Giunta
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

An agreement has been reached that exceeds what the Appellate court had mandated. It is time for the federal and state governments to resolve this conflict that has actually harmed many more people than it ever intended to help.

MTC-00007943

From: JCOCKMAN12@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:40am
Subject: (no subject)

I am in favor of the settlement.

MTC-00007944

From: liles
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:43am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear Sirs:

I would certainly support the earliest settlement of the case against Microsoft. In the light of current economic conditions the advantages that Microsoft had in the past have largely evaporated. Let's get back to business!! Microsoft is a very valuable asset in our economy and the continued uncertainty in the markets need a settlement very important.

Jerry B Liles
1009 East Sixth
Alice, Texas 78332

MTC-00007945

From: Marcia3838@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:45am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen: I am completely in agreement with a swift and immediate settlement of this case. Marcia Lichti

MTC-00007946

From: dan heines
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:45am

Dear DOJ—I understand that you are interested in comment from the public re Microsoft. I say, enough is enough. Let them go back providing great products. You and the various States get off their back. I hope you have more important and productive things to do.

Yours truly,
Dan K. Heines

MTC-00007947

From: BDS4530@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:47am
Subject: Mocosoft Settlement

Absolutely this settlement should be made!!! It should never have even been brought in the first place. This country is great because of innovative people like Bill Gates. I can't believe that our justice system allowed it to go on this long. When we attack our own is it any wonder that fools like Ben Laden and his followers think they can?

MTC-00007948

From: Henry Harriss
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:46am

Subject: microsoft settlement

All charges and suits against Microsoft should be immediately dropped. Such a fragrant and evil interference with the free economic system and against free enterprise is having terrible consequences for Microsoft, the consumers, the industry, the shareholders and this country. Let the market rule. Otherwise, our country suffers except for a few greedy lawyers and state attorney generals.

H. Harriss

MTC-00007949

From: Jonas Poblador
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:47am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a software developer and consumer, I strongly agree that the currently settlement is fair. The CONTRACTS issue has been resolved and I with that, it would be nice if the same rule will apply to every other industry and sector.

The right to innovate and add new features in product is an all American right. This bundling or packaging marketing scheme is currently well and alive across all sectors of American business. The bundling of CD/stereos & air-conditioning in the car industry worked well for everybody. I also do not believe that the govt should protect companies like SUN, ORACLE and AOL. These companies are big enough to compete. They should come up with new ideas in order to survive. SUN, ORACLE and AOL has been the leader in thier respective market for a number of years—they should be inovative to stay ahead. They should also be more realistic in thier pricing to keep thier leadership. The Govt should just let the market dectate thier faith. We should avoid the protectionism mentally that is adopted by our EUROPEAN freinds because they only work in the short term. I feel that the current DOJ team is fair and more up to date on current issues than the previous team.

regards,
Jonas Poblador

MTC-00007950

From: Jerry C. Johnson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:48am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement 1/2/02

Dear Sir:

I have recently purchased a home computer with Microsoft Windows XP Home Edition operating system preinstalled.

First, I found that as part of the user's agreement, I had to agree to allow Microsoft to upgrade the operating system and install supplemental software while I worked on the internet. By using this approach to maintaining the operating system, I will not be able to apply fixes and upgrades myself if I decide not to use the internet. In addition, I do not want Microsoft determining how I use the internet. Finally, no one has been able to explain what types of supplemental software Microsoft plans to install.

Secondly, I found that other Microsoft programs that came pre-installed on this computer also set up communication links with other remote computers, which I can only assume are Microsoft computers. I have no idea what types of information is being transmitted while these links are open.

Thirdly, I found that I was not provided with an original copy of the operating system on a CD for me to use to restore the system if I have problems or to restore files if they become corrupted. Instead I am required to provide space on my hard drive for a backup copy of the operating system that they can use to restore my operating system if I have any problems. This is a poor strategy to system recovery, because I cannot do normal system maintenance myself. And, if I have a hard drive failure, I have to buy a new hard drive with an operating system already installed, where I should have the option of replacing the hard drive myself and using the CD to restore the operating system.

I believe that Microsoft is using unfair business practices by depriving me of my right to maintain my own computer if I so desire, and by transmitting information from my computer where I have no idea what the information is. I also believe that Microsoft is infringing on my right to use the internet and my computer as I wish..

Thank you.
Sincerely,
Jerry Johnson

MTC-00007951

From: KSHAH36633@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:47am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I do not understand all liality about this subject. This case is going on for more than 4 years. I am sure by this time our justice dept. must have heard from both side all sorts of argument & evidence, and collected lots of evidence of their own. Enough is enough. It is time to stop appeals after appeals & make final decision once & for all, but fare to all parties.

MTC-00007952

From: Gary Masterson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:51am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madame:

I have been working in the computing industry since my graduation from college in 1972, practically 30 years. From my vantage point, Microsoft Corporation has been a primary player in revolutionizing the way computing is done. They have been the catalyst for producing less costly operating systems and software so that today virtually any home owner can own and operate a computer. This would have been financially impossible not too many years ago.

For the community of users who have come to rely on Microsoft, the case that the justice department has brought against them is a true misuse of justice. Microsoft has made things better for the business community, better for the home owner, improved the quality of programs available, provided software and support at reasonable prices (unheard of low prices compared to where the industry was 20 years ago), and spawned many, many other businesses. It is an outrage that the US Government would use our tax dollars to prosecute a company that has done so much. I urge that this case be settled in the most expeditious manner possible. Thank you.

Gary Masterson
Director of Marine Simulation
Buffalo Computer Graphics
3741 Lake Shore Road
Blasdell, NY 14219
Phone: 716-822-8668
Fax: 716-822-2730
email:
gmasterson@buffalocomputergraphics.com

MTC-00007953

From: Ventura, Albert Arthur (Al)
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 9:50am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

To Whom it may concern

Please be advised that I feel as do many of my co workers do that the suit against Microsoft should be finished by forcing the remaining 9 States that have not settled to come to some type of agreement with Microsoft. The US taxpayer has had enough time wasted on this suit and wants it over with. Also it is my opinion that the US Judicial System should show more restraint of actions against Microsoft in the future because its certainly starting to look like their singling out one corporation even though that corporation has done so much to provide increased productivity applications not only for the United States Corporations but for Corporations around the World.

Thank You
Albert Ventura
Lucent Technologies
Technical Support Services
3G-UMTS Data Provisioning

MTC-00007954

From: Kris Ruckman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to offer my thoughts on the microsoft settlement. I work for one of the big 5 consulting firms where I help my clients utilize many of microsoft's products as well as products of their competitors (sun microsystems, oracle, etc.). My experience with microsoft's product suite is that they develop world class software. Their software is consistently well developed and integrated and offers my clients a very good solution.

Their products have increased in functionality and usability while consistently being competitively priced, a compelling combination for any business. Microsoft has consistently beaten the competition in delivering software that is useful, price competitive and well integrated. Sun, Oracle and others have good products, but their claim Microsoft that has some monopoly on the market or somehow forces companies to use their products is completely wrong. My clients choose Microsoft products because they routinely beat the competition in functionality, integration and price. In the ultra-competitive software industry, a monopoly simply does not exist.

While I do not agree with the majority of the rulings in the settlement, namely that microsoft operated as a monopoly and stifled competition, it is now time to settle this case. Microsoft needs to get back to the business of developing world-class software that meets the needs of companies. I encourage everyone to settle this quickly and fairly so we can all get back to business.

Regards,
Kris Ruckman

MTC-00007955

From: Yomamasana@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:54am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

As an American citizen and registered voter, I beg you to accept the settlement against Microsoft. For the benefit of our economy and our future, let's move forward as a nation healing it's wounds. Thank you.

Ana Crafton
701 Garlyn Ct
Saint Louis, MO 63123

MTC-00007956

From: J. Drew Dials
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:56am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello,

As a technology professional, I've been following the Microsoft/DOJ case from the beginning. It is my opinion that these remaining unsettled states do not have the consumers best interest in mind at all. These states are being influenced by the companies within them that are unable to compete with Microsoft solely on a product comparison basis. As a software developer, I have enjoyed the benefits that Microsoft has built into their development platforms and technologies for a few years now. These technologies and accompanying support, documentation, user communities, etc. are what make Microsoft stand above the rest. These features are what enable Microsoft to win business on many fronts. These features are what draws the consumer to the Microsoft platform. And these features are what these other "unsettled" companies refuse to compete with. Now, instead of making a comparable product or even better product that the consumer would readily embrace, they are attempting to use government to fight their battles for them. If these companies were making these high quality products to compete with the Microsoft platform, then this case would not even exist and we would not have spent millions of taxpayers dollars in an attempt to stunt Microsoft's growth. And this is for the consumer? I think it would be a crime and a shame for this government to play favorites to a few companies because they can't compete in this highly competitive economy and I hope the DOJ feels the same.

Thank you,
Jon Drew Dials

MTC-00007957

From: mppanter@hotmail.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe it is time for this to be over! The tax payers have spent enough chasing a vendetta type lawsuit with the chance to put some money in your pockets. Admit it States Attorneys!

Bill Gates simply has a superior product and is much smarter than you!

M.P.Panter

MTC-00007958

From: Tim Schuele
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The US Government has wasted enough time and money pursuing Microsoft. I wholly support the settlement. This matter should be put to rest as soon as possible.

Thank you
Tim Schuele

MTC-00007959

From: MKuechmann@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion Microsoft is being punished for its innovations and vision for the future. I am not a computer genius. I only perform simple tasks on the computer by using Windows and Microsoft Word and Excell. That is it. Vey simplistic tasks.

So, Justice Department give these people compliments. Their competitors have not been able to develop software as easy to use as Microsoft.

Regards,
Maria Kuechmann

MTC-00007960

From: loiso@mindspring.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:58am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
RE: Tunney Act

I believe that the settlement reached between Microsoft and the government to be a fair settlement for all concerned. Please settle this action quickly to allow Microsoft to continue doing its job with its greatest creativity for its users and profit to its shareholders.

Thank you for your consideration, Lois Ogburn, Microsoft shareholder

MTC-00007961

From: neh—teh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:58am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The microsoft case shold be settled with no further litigation. The settlement is more than fair to all parties involved. Continued litigation will only benefit an extremely few wealthy corporations. Let this great American economy get on with innovation which can only benefit the economies of the world.

MTC-00007962

From: Robert Krance
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Regarding the Dept of Justice settlement and the appeal put forth by a number of states to further punish and limit the company, I wish to say that these efforts to control Microsoft will nothing to help the individual end user.

I have been using computers to perform my occupation and personal responsibilities for the past 20 years. I am not literate in computer technology but consider myself reasonably competent in using software for word-processing, spreadsheet, and database applications. I remember beginning with DOS and working with WordPerfect, Lotus, Quattro, etc. Attempting to integrate operating systems and software, no matter whose, was always a frustrating and non-productive process. I never want to return to that situation again.

Frankly, I still spend too much of my time trying to make hardware, software and operating systems compliant with each other. Innovation is a dirty concept when it means frustration, wasted time, and in the end a soup of diverse components that don't work together on my machine much less work with other users. This is what we face if the states persist in their attempt to punish and ultimately limit Microsoft. I would mush prefer seeing Microsoft being held accountable for compatibility issues with their operating system and the multiple software and hardware applications that require it.

It seems to me that in real dollars the cost of computing has come down exponentially in the twenty years I have been doing this. We must owe something to Microsoft, Intel, IBM and a number of others. Left to its own elitist approach (disguised as an advocate for the common man, remember the Ridley Scott commercial during the Super Bowl), Macintosh would cost thousands of dollars more today. In my first attempts at computing, I bought DOS and an IBM-based system, simply because it cost half as much as Macintosh. Back then DOS and the Intel-IBM configuration were not equal to Macintosh, but the cost of the latter was prohibitive for many of us.

Oracle and Sun are doing just fine, thank you. They've never approached the individual end user to provide a product. If allowed to foul up the current computing environment, these companies will price millions of us out of computing, just as Macintosh did. The Internet would remain a perk for academics and industry. Please don't kill the goose. Make Microsoft even more responsive to end users.

Robert Krance
13 Clear Springs Court
Sugar Land, TX
77479 rkrance@airmail.net

MTC-00007963

From: Mustangdrv@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:04am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We support the settlement as set forth by the government and other states. Further litigation will not have a positive effect on the general public; it will merely fatten the purses of the attorneys involved.

The fact is that the majority of folks who purchase new computers (including ourselves) prefer the Microsoft operating system. If Microsoft 98 had not been preloaded on our computer, we would have purchased and installed it.

Let the settlement stand.
Connie & Roger Larson
PO Box 648
Auburn, WA 98071

MTC-00007964

From: James E Bauer, MD
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:07am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the suggested settlement is fair to all parties, and I also believe that our country has suffered and will continue to suffer until the settlement is effected. Let us not punish success in the marketplace.

Microsoft has led the way in making America the technology capital of the world. Let's get on with the future!

MTC-00007965

From: John Folino
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:06am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
I HAVE USED MICROSOFT PRODUCTS FOR YEARS AND AM VERY HAPPY WITH THEM. I PAID A PRICE THAT WAS SATISFACTORY TO ME AND HAVE SAVED THOUSAND OF MAN HOURS FOR MY BUSINESS.

I AM A HAPPY CAMPER.
SINCERELY,
JOHN F. FOLINO
CEO AMERICAN TRANSMISSIONS, INC.

MTC-00007966

From: johnny sterneker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to close the case against Microsoft. In my opinion, the whole power and majesty of the U.S. Government was brought to bear against an American Corporation in very questionable circumstances!

Get it overwith, NOW!

MTC-00007968

From: RMondillo@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:08am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,
 Enough with these continuing litigation talks! I cannot see how this helps the American consumer at all. Microsoft has been chastened, and I assume there are now "firewalls" in place to prevent abuse in the future. We tout a free enterprise system in this country, so long as certain 'special interests' are not offended, and so long as one innovator does not become too successful. Tell me, how does the innovator stop him/herself from innovating? That is what built and continues to build our country.

I believe that Microsoft like them or not, has been more a benefit to the consumer than a hinderance. In our system, if there were a better, more efficient product available, people would flock to it. So, now that Microsoft has been exposed (as the greatest innovator) and slowed down, where are all these other great products from the competitors, which are going to better all of our lives?

Continuing litigation smacks of a few more hangers on (states) attempting to draw freely from an entity they had nothing to do with creating, and most certainly have benefited from on an ongoing basis (taxes on many Microsoft sales for example).

The settlement is tough and fair! Let's all get on with our lives. I for one hope that Microsoft continues to find the incentive to innovate.

Ron Mondillo

MTC-00007969

From: CB32X4@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:07am
 Subject: RE: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I wish to state my views on the Microwave settlement and they will be short but they fairly represent my position on this matter. I am a small business owner that works from my home as a home builder in North Carolina with 30 years of building experience. I graduated with a degree in Chemistry from Elon College (now Elon University) and started my building career before the computer revolution began. Slide rules, ledger paper, and hand written checks were the order of the day.

I recognized that the computer revolution was going to leave me behind if I did not get on board. So I computerized my business in 1983 and immediately found that I could multiply my efforts with technology in lieu of manpower. As a self taught computer person I cannot continue compete in the building business without the benefits of quality and compressively designed software and compatible hardware. The Microsoft windows software and similar programs are essential to the success of my business and to so many more of the baby boomers trying to compete with the more computer literate recent graduates of today.

I worry that this litigation would reduce the gains of Microsoft technology to another VHS/BETA war that some win and some will loose out and who is looking out for the loosers. Please allow this great innovative company to settle the litigation and let the rest of us continue to operate our businesses with the best available choices that we can find. If Microsoft's product did not work they would not be selling them the way that they are. This country cannot continue bust up good companies for the sake of a chance on new upstarts that may or may not workout.

The past histories of the breakup of AT&T and the cell service divisions within cities is all of the proof that our Justice Department should stay out of Corporate America. The Justice Department must have better things to do that screw up hard work of so many small business people.

Thanks for reading my views and lets get on with the business of being cooperative Americans, we all have much to celebrate and with which to be proud.

Sincerely,
 Chester W. Burgess
 Burgess Construction Co.

MTC-00007970

From: Chirrip@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:10am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is past time for this settlement, which is fair to all, to be accepted and finalized !!!! Let's now put it to bed. George Chironis, of Melville, NY, 11747

MTC-00007971

From: Melvin C. Phillips
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:10am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir,

I believe the settlement between the US Dept of Justice and Microsoft is fair and should be finalized. I feel the United States is fortunate to have Microsoft as a company. I trust Microsoft 100% more than any of the media or politicians.

Mel
 Melvin C. & Lillian H. Phillips [757-566-4578]
 7277 Osprey Drive, Lanexa, VA 23089-9410
 E-Mail: mel.va@home.com or mel.va@netzero.net

MTC-00007972

From: Anthony Kozojed
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:08am
 Subject: Microsoft Litigation

My husband and I have used microsoft along with Netscape Navigator and AOL since 1994. We are both over 60 and have time to use the computer at home. We can see no possible reason to sue Microsoft when we purchased our computer, we added Microsoft Windows 95 by our choice and since we live in far Northern Minnesota there was no internet service available except through Netscape Navigator from Radio Shack, since then a local phone company and cable company have started internet service. We use the "E" symbol from Microsoft to connect to the ebay site, the light house from Netscape for our family history site, and man from AOL to talk to family and friend and email. WHAT IS THE PROBLEM?

Sharon @ Anthony Kozojed

MTC-00007973

From: Ted Staplin
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:10am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:
 I believe that the settlement agreed to by Microsoft, the government and participating states should be enacted.

I am most concerned about spending tax payers dollars pursuing legal action that is not in the taxpayers best interest.

I have worked in the computer business my entire career (37 years).

I have never worked for Microsoft and in fact have worked for their competitors.

It is my belief that they have made a significant contribution to the USA economy and in particular to advancing Computer technology. The consumer has directly benefited from this in being able to buy computer technology that has advanced significantly during my career, at a fraction of the cost.

Sincerely
 Ted Staplin
 104 Garrison Road
 Chelmsford, MA 01824

MTC-00007974

From: J Houston
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:11am
 Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Get off Microsoft's back. Without its so called monopoly we still be figuring change at the cashier line.

Jesse Houston

MTC-00007975

From:
 John.Shaver@fairfaxcounty.gov@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:11am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam:

The Microsoft settlement case should be settled without further litigation. I see little need to prolong this case. The current provisions are fair for all parties. The interests of the American people are better served with less litigation and more innovation.

MTC-00007976

From: Curt Mackie
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:17am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

I am a resident of the State of Iowa. I am very disappointed that our Attorney General continues on what I believe to be a "witch hunt" with regards to Microsoft and its business practices. I have owned personal computers since 1983. I have had many opportunities in the past and currently to purchase other software, both operating systems and application programs. I have elected to run Microsoft Windows and Office as my major production package after trying several others that I have purchased and currently still own. (Red Hat Linux, IBM OS2, and BEOS are examples of the operation systems currently available to anyone who wants them. Also there are too many application programs available to list them all, however I will mention Lotus 123. I can remember when it was the only spreadsheet available and it cost several hundreds of dollars. And, it was copy protected to boot. So heaven help you if you lost or damaged your disk! I am very happy that Microsoft makes available the products that they do. I am free to chose to purchase them or not. When something better comes down the road I will make that decision also.

I think we should put this mess behind us. Let Microsoft do business. Let its competitors come up with better products and we will purchase them. I am a home user. Thank you for listening.

Curt Mackie
curtmackie@hotmail.com
515-981-0720 cell 515-779-1300

MTC-00007977

From: Win Bartsch
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:17am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing to inform you that I am in favor of the proposed settlement with Microsoft Corporation. Since I never agreed with any part of the governments case, I am in favor of ending the issue as quickly as possible.

Mr. Win Bartsch
1850 Beans Bight Rd. NE
Bainbridge Island, WA
98110

MTC-00007978

From: Iceducks@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:17am
Subject: SETTLEMENT WITH MICROSOFT
DEAR SIR,

I WILL MAKE THE COMMENT BRIEF AND TO THE POINT. I FEEL, IT WOULD BE THE BEST INTEREST OF THE COUNTRY TO CLOSE THE ISSUE WITH MICROSOFT AND MOVE FORWARD. I SEEMS THAT ALL ISSUES HAVE BEEN DISCUSSED & NOW IT IS TIME TO FOCUS ON THE FUTURE. KEEP THE INNOVATIVE MICROSOFT AS IT WAS PRIOR TO THE LAWSUITS & DO NOT BREAK UP THE COMPANY! THIS ENTIRE PROCESS HAS BEEN A NEGITIVE FOR OUR ECONOMY! PLEASE SETTLE THIS ISSUE NOW!

JOHN MAJOR

MTC-00007979

From: Lovelace Rucker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:19am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This is to advise that as a consumer I am satisfied with the Microsoft Settlement as it now stands. We are tired of always trying to satisfy the jealous public interest people. We are for free enterprise and capitalism. The size of the company makes no difference as the cream always rises to the top. Our government needs to get on with their own business and let ALL the cream risers keep supplying consumers with their tremendous products and new innovations. Micro-soft is a wonderful example of USA spirit in capitalism and the freedom to be successful in the Land Of The Free.

MTC-00007980

From: DCarpenter
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:15am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Congrats doj the settlement is OK for me
Love Dave

MTC-00007981

From: paul stout
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:21am
Subject: Good Morning,
Good Morning,

As a consumer using Windows, I have never been injured from its use. I find the software to be very productive. The government is wasting tax payer money pursing this matter. The original issue is mute by the march of technology.

Sincerely,
Paul K. Stout Training Coordinator
ASTD Member info@PaulKStout.com

MTC-00007982

From: bilehnert@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:23am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
DOJ:

I have continued to believe that the case against Microsoft has been carried too far. It is important not to stifle innovation. I have been retired for 11 years and my former company still benefits from the 17 years of protection that has been provided for the patents under my name.

One of the issues in the Microsoft case revolves around the browser. I have always had Netscape as my browser and in the 4.5 and 6.2 versions they are just as all consuming as Micosoft in their service.

It seems to me that no one has gained in this litigation, especially because it has been dragged out so long. Let's put this thing to rest once and for all. It was my understanding that a settlement had been worked out but some States have continued to keep the case going. I have already expressed disappointment that my home state of Florida is one of the procrastinators. I have also been disturbed at the way the DOJ has handled the case. The fairest and most sensible thing for all concerned is to end it once and for all. Charles W. Lehnert, retiree and consultant.

MTC-00007983

From: Tyler, Joanna
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:26am

I believe that the Microsoft settlement is in the public interest. I believe that Microsoft has not engaged in monopolistic practices; that the company should have never been sued; and now a settlement should occur—closing this case forever.

Joanna Tyler, Ph.D., M.B.A.
Research Director
Northrop Grumman Information
Technology Health Solutions and Services
1700 Reseach Blvd., Suite 400
Rockville, MD 20850
301-294-5643

301-294-5401
jtyler@hq.row.com

MTC-00007984

From: leathers@nwlink.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have read and followed the case on and off through the months. I have not read the entire proposed settlement but I will give you my two thoughts on the matter for starters.

- I believe that it is a good thing for our lives, to keep microsoft together, one company, doing the many things that they do best. And that dividing the company in any degree, would be a solution that just pleases certain people, but does not solve anything and probably makes it worse.

- However, I agree with Apple computer spokespeople 100%, that microsoft should not be allowed to pay fees to the court, by flooding the education market "schools, libraries, etc.", with "free" computers, in essence, doing something they have not been able to do through sales, which is to infringe on that market. Allowing them to do so, would tie schools into using their software, their upgrades, for decades, and would further empower them as a monopoly, taking away from the market power of competitive hardware and software companies, like Apple, and Sun.

MTC-00007985

From: Gary H. Minar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:29am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Let's be serious about what is happening. MS Corp. has created more beneficial products that have made the world become better 'connected, enhanced how we commuicate, improved business productivity, improved Gov't efficiency, among others. Why is MS being punished for such never-before seen creativity? It is UNJUST. MS should be applauded at every opportunity. They have done more for human kind thru computer technology than anyone else I know.

05) 688-7957, FAX: 693-8618, Solvang, CA

MTC-00007986

From: Ann Keefe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle this suit with Microsoft so the country can move ahead. I believe the uncertainty about the outcome has played a tremendous roll in the stock markets inability to sustain a major rally. The country needs some good news right now, especially with our service men & women overseas and others here still cleaning up ground zero.

Thank you,
Ann Keefe, Concerned Citizen

MTC-00007987

From: Stewart.Menking@relian cenational.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:22am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft created an industry that revolutionized how we work and play. The cost of their products goes down as their products improve. And when they gave something away for free, a few big companies started to scream. I have yet to understand how this has hurt me or any other consumer.

This case should be put into the history books as soon as possible.

MTC-00007988

From: Davis, Suzanne
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 10:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's time to put this issue to rest and proceed with the agreed upon settlement. As a business user and a personal user I have always believed that all end users would not be where we are today without the efforts and uniqueness of Microsoft development. I'm not a lawyer so it is possible that Microsoft did go over the legal line with regards to marketing and sales efforts, but competition certainly did not have these same tools to offer. I don't believe that this suit was fair in the first place and it was a "marketing tool" used by competitors to save their businesses and "award" them for not being able to fairly compete with Microsoft. Do not waste my tax money on any more proceedings that do not result in this settlement being completed. The lawyers have had a chance to earn their fees. Our economy and international business communities need to get back on track.

Thank you for allowing me to express my feelings.

Sincerely,
Suzanne Davis
Information Manager

MTC-00007989

From: JRobin1001@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:31am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen
It is my view that the Microsoft Settlement is fair and reasonable and should be concluded without further litigation or delay
John G. Robinson
49 Bay Shore Drive
Plymouth, MA 02360

MTC-00007990

From: linnco .
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:32am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing to express my strong opinion that this case be settled once and for all. Please do not allow business competitors to derail the settlement for their own gain. SETTLE THIS CASE! The economy needs this to be finalized.

MTC-00007991

From: PopPopOne@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:32am
Subject: microsoft settlement

The settlement the government has reached with Microsoft is more than fair for the Government. I happen to believe that this suit should not have been brought in the first place. Settle it and get it over.

Jerry Simmons

MTC-00007992

From: Mike Gnad
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it may concern/DOJ:

I am the owner of a small business that has been using Microsoft products for over a decade. During this period, I have found the pricing, after-sales support and user friendliness to be superior to other products that we have tried.

In addition, the availability of an extensive variety of different products and business tools that are designed to run on the Windows operating system has enabled me to be more productive at a cost that is affordable. Consequently, I have been able to reduce the cost of doing business and pass some of savings on to my employees in the form of higher salaries.

I have had a significant share of my own personal retirement funds invested in stocks like Microsoft and other related companies that rely on the business generated by Microsoft. Since the DOJ initiated the litigation with Microsoft, I have watched my retirement funds retreat to lower valuations. It is my sincere belief that this litigation, while being extremely expensive and unproductive, it is not in the best interests of the American consumer. Additionally, the cost to the economy in general is too much to sacrifice for a litigation with such little merit. Basically, I do not believe that the Government has demonstrated that Microsoft has damaged the consumer; and, therefore, Microsoft should not be forced to divert any more financial and intellectual resources to its defense.

Very sincerely,
Myron A. Gnad

MTC-00007993

From: WenParrish@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:33am
Subject: Re: Microsoft Settlement

Department of Justice:
I'm very much in favor of the Microsoft Settlement, and believe it's in the best interest of the Country to get this settled now. The economy will suffer if this settlement is not honored.

WenParrish@AOL.com.

MTC-00007994

From: El Sawy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:34am
Subject: Common Sense

Can good common sense please prevail?
Our portfolios have been devastated ever since the Department of Justice started taking creative US technology to court.

Soraya El Sawy

MTC-00007995

From: David G Marek
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:35am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am not one accustomed to writing letters to the DOJ. However, I believe it is time that we put the entire Microsoft fiasco behind us.

I look at what Microsoft has given us in terms of Operating System, Word Processing, Spreadsheets, Presentation Software, Database, etc. and am amazed of the seamless interfaces between these products. I am tired of special interest groups trying to manipulate government for their own interests. It is time to move on. As a government, with terrorism, recession, etc. facing us, we have much better places to spend our time and money. The only thing this continued case is doing is putting a lot of lawyers to work.

david g marek

MTC-00007996

From: Betty Thompson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:35am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Further litigation is unnecessary, you should settle now ! It is in the best economic interest of all concerned, especially the consumers. SETTLE!!!!!!

Betty Z. Thompson

MTC-00007997

From: Blondin, John Q (SEATTLE SE/TE/ZQ 335)
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 10:38am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear DOJ:

This suit has drained this country for far too long both financially and mentally. It is time to wrap up and move on. Microsoft has created the standard for computer usage in the world. It has become much like the English language, the common language of business and air traffic and tourism. It enables the world to function much better than it would with many computer languages. It has created a platform from which many others can build and sell products further enabling us all to communicate and do business. The US Govt is wasting its time and taxpayer dollars trying to hamstring a national treasure at the request of its competitors. I thought this country was about competition.

The US Govt should spend even a fraction of this effort on doing something about airport screening. Since 9/11 almost nothing has been done. Nationalize the job and get QUALIFIED US CITIZENS to work there. Stop just talking.

John Q. Blondin; Seattle, WA., 98136

MTC-00007998

From: Jumana Scoggins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the settlement with Microsoft. Do not let Microsoft's competitors dictate what will only benefit them in this settlement. The consumers and the economy need this settlement.

Sincerely,
Jumana S. Scoggins

MTC-00007999

From: Joe Taylor
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I am writing to voice my support for the settlement with Microsoft. I think this lawsuit has been a travesty of justice from the beginning. The lawsuit does not stem from consumer harm but from the mindless ambition of the Clinton administration and the corruptness of Janet Reno. The state attorney generals have proven to be nothing but greedy opportunists who have no regard for the well being of their citizens, many of whom are Microsoft or other technology stock investors. The supposed "harm" that Microsoft has caused has only been noted by one group, the competitors of Microsoft. The lawsuit against Microsoft, on the other hand, has created real harm to our entire country. The stock market has been decimated, wrecking retirement accounts, college savings accounts and all other investment vehicles. The snowball effect of the stock market decline has brought our entire economy to its knees, and is the true reason our country is in a recession today. It is time to put this entire affair behind us by settling this lawsuit.

Sincerely,
Joe W. Taylor, II
160 Willow Bend Court
Bowling Green, KY 42104

MTC-00008000

From: CTJ592@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Tell the government to go after bin Ladin, Kadafi and all the other government terrorist that are right here in the U.S. with the same zeal that they are going after Microsoft and maybe we wouldn't be in the predicament that we're in now.

MTC-00008001

From: e baxter lemmond
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:44am
Subject: microsoft settlement
APPRVE THE SETTLEMENT! END THE LITIGATION!
E. BAXTER LEMMOND
2711 BROOKWOOD ROAD
RICHMOND; VIRGINIA, 23235

MTC-00008002

From: bdkittley
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:47am
Subject: Observations about case & Microsoft business practices

I think that the original motives of DOJ in bringing the lawsuit were misplaced. Fear it was punishment, because Microsoft no longer wanted to "cooperate" with other US agencies demands for access to systems. Microsoft writes good software, but some of the things that the systems "enable" are regularly abused by third party software. This is why the OS is always locking up.

Financially punitive remedies will solve nothing. This said, "It would be a mistake to allow Microsoft to continue to extend the standards to insure incompatibility with all other OS's". This practice cost the government and consumers far too much, and contributes little new value. Please, bias this settlement to focus open standards and on building a better mouse trap, not another marketing scam.

Settle this thing, and get on with business.
Dave Kittley
P.O. Box 203
Rule, TX 79547
bdkittley@westex.net

MTC-00008003

From: Pierre PAPA DOC Legrand
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:44am
Subject: Stop attacking one of the engines of our Growth...

Sheesh will you people find something more constructive to do..? Like maybe find the people responsible for killing so many of us...? That might be a bit more useful than going around extorting money from AMERICAN corps. Im embarrassed that I have to say that to adults who are supposedly smart.

STOP ALL ACTION AGAINST MICROSOFT NOW. Allow the market place to work...its impossible for anyone except the government to break the way the marketplace works.

Pierre Legrand
4137 Broussard Street
Baton Rouge, La. 70808
225-924-6661

MTC-00008004

From: Motelman2@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:44am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The proposed Microsoft settlement is tough, fair and just. The vast majority of the people in the nation believe the antitrust case should be settled now and we should move on!

Special interests should NOT be allowed to drag this thing out. Technology is our strong suit from a business and innovation viewpoint. It drives our economy. It should not be hampered by undue preoccupation with fighting a case that has already been fairly decided.

MTC-00008005

From: Lauren Friedman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:45am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it May Concern,
I strongly support settling the Microsoft case. Too much time and effort has been wasted on this already. It is time to let a company that has brought good products to the American public get on with business. By the way, I have no relationship with Microsoft other than a small investment in their stock.

Lauren Friedman

MTC-00008006

From: Origger@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:46am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The nine states that have refused the federal government's settlement with Microsoft are trying to make Microsoft share holders pay for their foolish spending.

MTC-00008007

From: Pierre PAPA DOC Legrand
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:46am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement ——— Original Message ———

From: "Pierre PAPA DOC Legrand"
<plegrand@home.com>
To: <Microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov> Sent:
Thursday, January 03, 2002 9:48 AM
Subject: Stop attacking one of the engines of our Growth...

Sheesh will you people find something more constructive to do..? Like maybe find the people responsible for killing so many of us...? That might be a bit more useful than going around extorting money from AMERICAN corps. Im embarrassed that I have to say that to adults who are supposedly smart.

STOP ALL ACTION AGAINST MICROSOFT NOW. Allow the market place to work...its impossible for anyone except the government to break the way the marketplace works.

Pierre Legrand
4137 Broussard Street
Baton Rouge, La. 70808 225-924-6661

MTC-00008008

From: McCauley, John Joseph Jr.
(091)AMSTA-AR-WEA(093)
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 10:48am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it May Concern,
Settle the Damn Case, for the life of me I still can't figure out how it got to Court in the first place. Stop wasting money and time on this situation. It is a shame that with Real Estate Rip Off's, Insurance Rip Off's, Health Care Rip Off's and yes the Attorney Fee rip Off's the Government has the time and the money to waste to continue with this.

John McCauley
4123 Conashaugh Lakes
Milford, Pa.18337

MTC-00008009

From: Robert MacCallum
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:48am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please bring this settlement to a close. It is my personal opinion that the stock market drop had its beginnings in the Microsoft case brought by the DOJ. Whether it really did, or not, it seems that dragging out this settlement can do nothing to help the economy get going again.

Your truly, Robert W. MacCallum
Travelers Rest, SC.

MTC-00008010

From: Mike and Judy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:50am
Subject: This is to submit my comments on the Microsoft anti-trust settlement:

This is to submit my comments on the Microsoft anti-trust settlement:
1. It is encouraging that the justice department was able to save the tax payers money by allowing Netscape to write/dictate the complaint. They didn't charge us for that, did they?

2. I was much encouraged that the word monopoly was used so frequently in the complaint. I am sure that by using the word so frequently it must be true.

3. Now that you have used millions of our tax-payer dollars to prosecute this case, I am sure the reasonable prices previously experienced by the American software users will be greatly enhanced. This, I am sure will offset the great expense.

Conclusion: If you haven't determined from my remarks, I feel this entire proceeding is a miscarriage of justice. However, since justice is not the business of the American court system, I hope at least the lawyers who profited had a good time.

I believe it is in the best interest of the American people to complete this case now, with the settlement that is on the table.

Mike Frye

MTC-00008011

From: Diane Crawford

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 10:53am

Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I HAVE NEVER QUITE UNDERSTOOD EXACTLY AT WHAT POINT FREE ENTERPRISE BECOMES MONOPOLY BUT I THINK THIS SUIT AGAINST MICROSOFT HAS GONE ON LONG ENOUGH. THERE WILL PROBABLY ALWAYS BE SOMEONE WHO IS NOT HAPPY WITH THE RESULTS BUT IT IS TIME FOR BUSINESS TO CONTINUE AS USUAL. MICROSOFT HAS DONE SO MUCH FOR THE SEATTLE AREA AND WASHINGTON AND THE COUNTRY. PLEASE END THIS SITUATION AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

THANK YOU

DIANE CRAWFORD

MTC-00008012

From: Keith D. Olinger

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 10:53am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I strongly urge the Court and the remaining nine states to accept the settlement reached between Microsoft, the DOJ and nine states. It is long past time to put this very politically motivated piece of our history behind us, and let the economy begin to heal. It is truly a sad time in our history when good American companies are put through this type of punishment for being innovative and relentless in their pursuit of helping the world advance. End this pathetic madness now! As a person that deploys massive numbers of computer desktops, laptops and servers, I can tell you that the benefits of having a common desktop, massive resources for development and deployment, and literally thousands and thousands of applications that work on that platform are a tremendous time and money saver for me.

Take a trip though history to find out why Windows has the largest market share. It is because they provided a great, open operating environment at a reasonable price that runs on commodity hardware, and ironically, opened up the operating system to developers through vehicles like MSDN and developer API's and tools. That is precisely why OS/2 faltered, and the Mac never lived up to its potential. Mac has still not opened up the developers! If Scott McNealy, Larry Ellison and Steve Jobs would spend half of the time they spend bashing Microsoft in developing and marketing their own product line, they would be have much better companies. Have you ever heard these guys?! It is amazing!

Again, I STRONGLY urge you to end this now by accepting the proposed settlement. This suit does not, in any way, reflect on capitalism and a free market society. Actually, it reflects quite the opposite.

Thanks

Keith Olinger

MTC-00008013

From: LHSig@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 10:54am

Subject: Microsoft settlement

I wish to voice my opinion that the Microsoft settlement should be concluded with no further litigation.

Bill Clinton spent more time and money investigating and prosecuting Bill Gates than he did Osama Bin Laden!!!!!! Look where he got us. Consider all the millions of PC users who have benefited from Microsoft's products.

Sincerely,

Linda Hood Sigmon

5805 Woebegone Trail

Maiden, N. C. 28650-9038

704-483-5159

MTC-00008014

From: Dennis Santoro

To: Microsoft ATR,attorney.general@po.state.ct.us@inet...

Date: 1/3/02 10:55am

Subject: Comments regarding the 2 proposed settlements in the Microsoft cases

To the Department of Justice and the States Attorneys General,

I am writing in submission of comment regarding your proposed settlements in the 2 cases regarding Microsoft corp. I beleive I am entitled to submit comments as per the Tunney act of 1974 and wish you to consider the below as public comment on the cases.

With regard to the proposed settlement in the antitrust case, unless the remedy actually addresses a consumer's ability to buy any computer from any manufacturer with a choice of any OS (Linux, Unix, Windows) preconfigured on the machine and MS is prohibited from using its market position to make that difficult or to impose penalties on manufactures who wish to do so, MS's position and behavior will not be changed.

No remedy that fails to address this issue will be successful. Further, similar measures should be enacted to address bundling of productivity software (office suites) to allow competition form Corel, Star Office, IBM (Lotus) and others. The fact that purchasers have only the MS office suite as a choice in most cases (as per terms usually included in the Windows OEM license) means that most other suite vendors are precluded from much business de facto.

The bundling issue should also be addressed but, in my opinion, with the exception of the browser and e-mail client choices, most of the rest is a non issue. But MS should not be allowed to further bundle

IE and Outlook unless other choices are also provided and the APIs are sufficiently published and documented so that other competitors can easily offer seamless integration.

All remedies should be monitored and enforced by a group actually capable of doing so. MS has proved by past behavior that they are untrustworthy in terms of following the letter or spirit of agreements they enter into. Penalties should be clear, easy to exercise and easy to trigger. The proposed settlement does none of that. Nor will simply requiring MS to provide a stripped down version of Windows. Furhter, MS's attempt to become the arbitor of identity on the internet (Passport) should be precluded so that MS cna not extend their monopoly to the internet itself using the strength of their current monopoly. As for the consumer suit, while the fund amount and it's distribution to schools is quite appropriate, these funds should be given without restriction. MS should have no input into the spending of these funds. Schools should be able to use these funds for infrastructure (wiring, PCs) software from ANY vendor, OSs from Apple, Linux vendors, Sun, or MS, etc. These funds should be placed in the hands of a group that can not, and will not, be connected to nor influenced by MS. MS should not have any representatives on the board responsible for the funds. It should be made up of credible education professionals and computer professionals unaffiliated with vendors and manufacturers. The charge to the board should be to help schools meet the needs the schools believe they have in the best way possible for the school in question. It should NOT be for the purpose of promoting MS products in the schools.

Thank you for your attention and feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

Denn Santoro

President

Resource Development Associates

<http://www.RDAWorldWide.Com>

Offices in the United States and Germany

Providing solutions to health care, business, governments and non-profits since 1982

MTC-00008015

From: Henry Cimetta

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 10:54am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement is good for everyone, but most important to the US economy and financial markets.

MTC-00008016

From: gjohnson@ground.fedex.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 10:49am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Government,

Please spend your time and my money hunting terrorists rather than Microsoft.

Thank you,

Gary

MTC-00008017

From: Kevin Edwards

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 10:58am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to you, in accordance with the Tunney Act, to let you know my comments and feelings regarding the Microsoft Settlement.

I strongly feel that this case has gone too far, has lost the interest of the nation, has caused quite enough economic and legislative disturbance, and feel it is time for it to come to an end.

As a consumer, I feel Microsoft did nothing wrong. In fact, I shudder to think what position we might all be in today had Microsoft not risen to the challenges in this "information age". They are visionary and we are all fortunate that they have hired the best and brightest minds to help keep America at the helm of this burgeoning, new world. In fact, I believe they helped create this new world. Punishing them for it is senseless, useless and harmful.

The suit again Microsoft has caused harm to our economy beyond calculation. A company as large as Microsoft can change the whole climate of the economy when it falters. And it has faltered over the past two years not due to quality of product or due to quality of service or due to inability to continue to innovate. It has faltered due to this useless lawsuit.

It is time for it to be over. After the events of September 11th, this country has greater things to worry about than this lawsuit. Also, the economy is suffering and needs the shot in the arm that an unencumbered Microsoft could provide.

Let's finish this thing. Let's get on with the business of being Americans and with the business of innovation, creation and design. The world suffers while we ponder and clog the courts with this useless matter.

As a consumer, as a stockholder, as an American, I want this thing to end.

Thank you very much for your time and for hearing my thoughts.

Kevin D. Edwards
302 West Sixth Street
Benton, IL 62812

MTC-00008018

From: jay@comter.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We are a small consulting company in the Fairfax, VA area managed by a group of very entrepreneur US citizens—Comter Systems Inc. We also do have issues with the bigger players in the field but I have to say salutations to them for getting there. I feel the same for Microsoft. They started out like everyone else and had worked their way to the top and I cannot believe a bunch of jealous competitors can create this level of aggravation and insult to them.

Hope you settle with Microsoft ASAP and thus they can move forward and take us to the next generation of Technology and keep US, the leader in Technology like they did last time.

Thank you

MTC-00008019

From: dale janus
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:01am

Subject: microsoft settlement

January 2, 2002

Dear Justice Department:

I would like to add my comments to the proposed settlement of the microsoft antitrust case.

I feel the DOJ has not done enough to end microsoft's monopoly position. The remedies in the settlement will not change the way microsoft does business. The DOJ has already been down this road with microsoft before and the remedies imposed in the past have done nothing to change their business practices.

I feel the settlement should be thrown out or at least re-negotiated so that microsoft changes their business habits.

The penalty that has been imposed and is going to be paid to school districts is so overtly designed to gain sympathy for microsoft that I question the skill of your negotiating team. Every person with school age children in the country are going to clamor for their share of the penalty pot. Microsoft has used their vast fortune to create allies among the general public by paying their fine to schools instead of the DOJ.

The current settlement is not enough. The microsoft monopoly will continue.

Dale Janus
dalejanus@compuserve.com

MTC-00008020

From: robert e tolleson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:01am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a citizen in Nashville, Tennessee, who is tired of this continuous dragging out of the Microsoft case. From the beginning I have felt that proving the consumer has been harmed by Microsoft over the past 10 years was hard to comprehend. Today a consumer can own a computer for less than $1000 with an operating system of software under $100 that ten years ago cost thousands of dollars and only corporations could afford them. Also by Microsoft pioneering this home computer industry many other companies have emerged and grown tremendously on the surge of this new industry. If competitors have been harmed, I am not sure they would have been in business if not for the early innovations of Microsoft. That brings us to today and a few states funded by special interest groups who will benefit at Microsofts demise are continuing to pressure the politicians in thier states to refuse to accept a settlement hashed out by the Federal Government and other states. We are at war as a country, and I feel that to prolong this case is embarrassing and ridiculous in the scope of priorities for our country now.

Please use whatever means legally to discourage these states who do not represent the average consumer by continuing this case. IT IS TIME TO STOP.

MTC-00008021

From: Tina Johnson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:04am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

To Whom It May Concern:

I would like to let you know my feelings on this proposed settlement. I believe it is a tough but fair settlement and should be approved. It is not in the best interests of consumers or our economy to prolong this litigation further. To do so would stifle further innovation.

Sincerely,
Dan R. Johnson

MTC-00008022

From: rbonine@millermartin.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR,attorney.general@po.state.ct.us@inet...

Date: 1/3/02 11:05am
Subject: Comment on Microsoft settlement
This e-mail is sent in accordance with the Tunney Act of 1974. It is my personal opinion as a 17-year veteran of the IT industry that the proposed Justice Department settlement is completely useless, and it will not hinder Microsoft's attempts at monopoly in any way. Microsoft's monopolistic actions since the settlement proposal have only intensified; witness the early release of Windows XP to try to avoid an injunction, and the continual push toward usage of Microsoft Passport, which has potentially serious consequences to not only software companies, but to all e-commerce. For the long-term health of the IT industry in specific and the American economy in general, I strongly urge that the DoJ settlement be completely rejected and that much harsher measures be put into place. I would like to further suggest that the original judgement (the breakup of Microsoft into seperate companies) be upheld.

Thank you.
Roger L. Bonine
Information Technology Manager
Miller & Martin LLP
Chattanooga, TN
(423) 785-8393

MTC-00008023

From: ROBERT STROHL
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

AS A concerned citizen I uge the DOJ to end the political persecution of Microsoft and do all things necessary to make the proposed settlement become reality.

A George BUSH Supporter
Robert D Strohl

MTC-00008024

From: The SHADOW know
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam:

The public perception is that more money was spent by the previous administration fighting Microsoft than was spent fighting terrorism. True or not, perception is everything, so it is time that the Microsoft settlement be approved. We need to put this behind us so that we can concentrate on America's real enemy—international terrorism.

Thanks,
Dr. Ray A. Gaskins
Hampden-Sydney College
Hampden-Sydney, Va
rayg@hsc.edu
Ray Gaskins

“The world’s a little poorer for a soldier died today. We’ll hear his tales no longer for he has passed away. He was just a simple soldier who was sworn to defend his home, his kin, his country, and would fight until the end.” Anonymous

MTC-00008025

From: Harry LeBlanc
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:06am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I am a professional software developer with 13 years experience, and have used both Microsoft and non-Microsoft operating systems, middleware, development tools, and applications. I am deeply disturbed by the proposed settlement, both for what is included and what is left out. I exhort Judge Kollar-Kotelly to remedy these flaws.

What is included:

1. A five-year limit. Given that Microsoft is riding the wave of ill-gotten profits accrued over a decade of illegal monopolistic practices, five years isn’t enough to restore a marketplace of normal competition, even if the settlement didn’t provide mechanisms (noted below) for Microsoft to hamper the function of the implementors of the proposed settlement. It seems to me that the enforcement period should be at least twice the duration of Microsoft’s criminal past, and perhaps certain structural elements of a sound settlement should be enforced in perpetuity.

2. Microsoft’s voice in the technical committee. Since when does a criminal choose its guards? Given the pervasive influence of Microsoft in the market, and their persistent monopolistic behavior, it is dubious at best that their chosen representative, and the representative who can be vetoed by that person, will fully have the interests of the public at heart. Watchdogs chosen by Microsoft, on the Microsoft payroll, and working fulltime in secrecy on the Microsoft campus, do not meet any reasonable criteria for impartiality.

3. Moreover, crafting in a feature that allows Microsoft to dispute costs gives Microsoft a handy built-in mechanism for sandbagging. I quote: “Microsoft may, on application to the Court, object to the reasonableness of any such fees or other expenses. On any such application: (a) the burden shall be on Microsoft to demonstrate unreasonableness; and (b) the TC member(s) shall be entitled to recover all costs incurred on such application (including reasonable attorneys’ fees and costs), regardless of the Court’s disposition of such application, unless the Court shall expressly find that the TC’s opposition to the application was without substantial justification.”

Given the vast wealth Microsoft has illegally obtained from the public through its monopolism, setting enforcement expenses as “reasonable”, and giving Microsoft a mechanism for subpoenaing their watchdogs (thus distracting them from their true duty) is asking for trouble. Microsoft’s bearing of the “expenses” of such activity will be trivial, and more than compensated by the implicit protection of any future monopolistic behavior concealed from the technical committee—not to mention that it lets Microsoft run out the clock at a very cheap cost. The technical committee should have a free hand, and an unlimited budget underwritten by Microsoft.

4. Microsoft has implicit control over who is permitted to be their competitor. Again, I quote: “(c) meets reasonable, objective standards established by Microsoft for certifying the authenticity and viability of its business...” Why does Microsoft get to apply the litmus test of the “authenticity and viability” of who is permitted to see their API’s?

Another quote: “Microsoft shall disclose to ISVs, IHVs, IAPs, ICPs, and OEMs, for the sole purpose of interoperating with a Windows Operating System Product, via the Microsoft Developer Network (“MSDN”) or similar mechanisms, the APIs and related Documentation that are used by Microsoft Middleware to interoperate with a Windows Operating System Product.”

Doesn’t Microsoft have control over who participates in their proprietary MSDN program, and don’t they set criteria of participation (eg, nondisclosure, etc)? This is one of the very mechanisms by which Microsoft has implemented their monopolistic strategy. Such APIs should be freely distributed to the public, not sold to the few acceptable competitors that Microsoft designates, on terms of their own setting. Allowing Microsoft to use their MSDN mechanism and decide which business is authentic and viable is too weak. It specifically gives Microsoft a mechanism to exclude open source developers, academics, etc.

What is left out:

5. Recompense. Microsoft has illegally profited for years from their monopolistic practices. That money rightfully belongs to the public, and should be returned to the public. It should be fairly straightforward to measure the average profitability of their nearest competitors vs. Microsoft’s illegally enhanced profit margins, thus determining how much Microsoft illegally profited. Perhaps this money could be funneled into educational grants for computer hardware and (completely non-Microsoft) software for elementary, secondary, and college tuition. These funds should easily cover the expense of putting (for example) a Linux computer on the desktop of every student in public schools, state universities, etc.

6. Punitive damages. Over and above returning the ill-gotten gains to the public, Microsoft should be penalized for their illegal activities.

7. Document formats. Microsoft enforces its monopoly by keeping their file formats proprietary. Since Microsoft chooses which competing operating systems to support with their applications, companies who have been monopolistically pressured into buying Microsoft applications (eg, MS Office) are trapped on the Microsoft platform by their inability to migrate their (proprietary and copyrighted) corporate data to other operating systems. This is key. Microsoft applications compel users to stick with Microsoft operating systems, this perpetuating their monopoly. The only remedy would be to open up their file formats (or possibly to require them to provide fully and publicly documented import/export features that allowed users to migrate all their data (including “objects” such as forms, reports, etc.) to competing products, and to likewise recreate data from compliant import files (even if created by competing products). In other words, the public deserves a way to get all their data out of Microsoft products, and Microsoft should pay for providing such a mechanism.

I’ve heard the rationale that punishing Microsoft would be bad for the economy. First of all, that’s no excuse for failing in the duty to enforce justice. Secondly, the leverage Microsoft has in the economy was acquired through their crimes, and the judgment should not perpetuate the consequences of their crimes for fear of rocking the boat. Third, monopolists have always been bad for the economy, the contrary arguments of monopolists notwithstanding. And finally, the amount of money from recompense and punitive damages, pumped back into the economy in such a way as to stimulate competition in the computer software field, should provide an enormous economic boost.

American citizens are counting on Judge Kollar-Kotelly to faithfully perform her solemn duty to uphold justice by preventing this weak and flawed proposed settlement from being implemented, and properly addressing the true interests of the United States of America by returning the ill-gotten wealth from Microsoft to the public from whom they stole it, further penalizing Microsoft financially, and crafting structural remedies to prevent Microsoft from ever being able to commit the same crimes again.

All America is counting on you, Judge. Do your duty.

Sincerely,
Harold C. LeBlanc
1300 Powderhorn Terrace
Apt. 11
Minneapolis, MN 55407-1669
(612-729-9670)
hleblanc@bitstream.net

They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety, deserve neither liberty nor safety. —Benjamin Franklin

MTC-00008026

From: alton.g.declaire@gm.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

I think the government has spent enough money and time to litigate the Microsoft Settlement and should close this case.

Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft

MTC-00008027

From: Robert Cahall
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:06am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The court should accept the settlement and put this matter behind us for the best interests of all of us

Bob Cahall
drquaack@fuse.net

MTC-00008028

From: Retha Bennett
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:10am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I do believe this is a settlement that does benefit the consumer. Microsoft has always built a better mouse trap and the market place has reflected it. It is time to get this behind us and get the economy moving again and Microsoft is a key player in that process. We do not need a few to benefit we need many to benefit if we are going to move forward and this settlement certainly helps.

Sincerely
 Retha Bennett

MTC-00008029

From: Vance L. Ray
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:13am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,
 I disagree with the Final Judgment against Microsoft, it is much too harsh.

Microsoft does not have a monopoly.
 - Vance L. Ray

MTC-00008030

From: MMRHART@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:13am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please accept the settlement as it presently stands. There has been too much intervention by others in the developments made by Microsoft. Where would America be today, if it were not for Microsoft and its wiliness to bare the cost of development? Inventions should be encouraged, not discouraged by law suits, etc.

Joseph W. Hart
 Naples FL

MTC-00008031

From: Bill Colburn and Susan Marcolina,
 M.D.
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:12am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am completely in favor of the Microsoft settlement that has been reached between the DOJ, several states and Microsoft, and I urge the Judge in this case to accept those terms, reject the outrageous claims of the states who have refused to settle and close the case in it's entirety.

Please stop your horrendous waste of our tax dollars in harassing and prosecuting one of the most admired companies in America, one that will be a key to getting our economy out of the dumps, and get back to the serious business of pursuing terrorists, murderers, gangsters and others of their ilk. Get back to the real work of serving the people of the United States instead of continuing to waste the taxpayers' money on private vendettas driven by failed competitors of Microsoft and a few Attorneys General who think a tough position on high profile case will help them get national name recognition and either re-election when their terms expire or a nice spot on a national party ticket in the next presidential election.

Thank you.
 William Colburn

420 Datewood Court NW
 Issaquah, WA 98027

MTC-00008032

From: Sheldon Katz
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:14am
 Subject: microsoft settlement

it seems outrageous to me that the government has spent so much time and money prosecuting microsoft when there are other problems that are so much more deserving of the money and effort.

you spent years chasing ibm amd accomplished nothing but making lawyers rich.

you broke apart at&t so that we all pay more money for less phone service and cannot identify which vendor is at fault when things 'do not work'. while microsoft is not perfect, they do produce a consistent predicable product that fully integrated those option in the pc operating system that i care to use.

i do not look forward to the government getting me something better that i will end up paying more for and spending hours installing it.

it ain't broke—why do you have to fix it. let sun and oracle fight their own battles.

the american consumer has been well served by microsoft- better than the doj serves us in this case spend your time on terrorists and organized crime—do something useful sheldon katz

MTC-00008033

From: Cecily Wood
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:11am
 Subject: MS Monopoly comment

I was appalled at the settlement for the regular suit, and for the settlement for those states that held out for more. The remedy is little more than a slap of Ann Lander's proverbial wet noodle. And, as Apple has rightly pointed out, the schools provision puts the fox solidly within the hen house. Microsoft engages in monopolistic practices. So we hand them a great opportunity to take over one of the few markets of its alternative in operating systems? I don't need a doctorate in electrical engineering or jurisprudence to see this lacks any common sense, nor does the punishment fit the crime.

Microsoft's disdain for any government remedy for its monopolistic tendencies was revealed at about the same time as the regular settlement was announced. They knocked all users except those using Microsoft browsers and email programs off their MSN.com internet provider service - which is generally paid for by users. A free subscription to the MSN ISP is often given for a limited time with new Windows machines, but after that free period, people have to pay to get the use.

Of course there was a great uproar and they were forced to back down, but the very fact that they'd pull such a egregious stunt at the very time they were to learn of their court penalties shows that they MUST be closely monitored.

Their new operating system doesn't show much of an improvement in the monopolistic tendencies although it's made some grudging hooks so different web browsers can be used. And it has grudgingly allowed PC makers the option to sell machines on which the Windows operating system is not installed.

And they say they will offer open systems? And they say they will follow/allow existing standards? That must be why the cell phone standards are being set by all except Microsoft which is offering its own? Unhuh, and I have a bridge to sell you.

Cecily Wood,
 Technology Planning and Support
 (Although my views are part and parcel of my job, they may not represent the school system's.)

MTC-00008034

From: M. G. Fred Kick
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:18am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel it is long overdue for the settlement, prolonging this action to please special interests especially AOL (the most consumer unfriendliest ISP and the most expensive) will only hurt the consuming public and cost the taxpayer an other fortune. Let Microsoft get on with it's service to the consumers worldwide, it will help our exports, provide jobs, and help our ailin economy.

M.G. Fred Kick

MTC-00008035

From: HPotler@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:18am
 Subject: Settlement

Please settle this matter as quickly as possible.

Harold Potler

MTC-00008036

From: Jpricecpa@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:19am
 Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
 TO WHOM IT CONCERNS,

I AM NOT A PERSON THAT TYPICALLY WRITES THESE LETTERS.....JUST TOO BUSY.

HOWEVER, I FEEL STRONGLY THAT IT IS TIME TO CLOSE THIS CASE AGAINST MICROSOFT.

THE INDUSTRY AND THE PUBLIC HAS GREATLY BENEFITED FROM THE STANDARDIZATION BROUGHT BY THEIR STRONG MARKET POSITIONS. WE SHOULD STOP PUNISHING THEM.

ALSO, OUR ECONOMY NEEDS US TO LET THIS GO AND FOCUS IN OTHER AREAS.

Judy L. Price
 Judy L. Price, CPA, Inc.
 jpricecpa@aol.com
 REDDING OFFICE:
 1616 West Street
 Redding, CA 96001
 530-246-4114
 530-246-4115 fax
 COTTONWOOD OFFICE:
 3861 Country Estates Drive
 Cottonwood, CA 96022
 530-347-1726
 530-347-4558 fax

MTC-00008037

From: Jack Burleigh
 To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/3/02 11:21am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir:
 I've read about the Microsoft settlement on the Department website. The settlement seems entirely fair and reasonable to me and I urge the Department to finalize the settlement. In my humble opinion, it is time for this litigation to end.

Sincerely,
 Jack Burleigh

MTC-00008038

From: Nbpman@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:22am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement should stand in its current form. Those who desire to reject it and force the breakup of Microsoft do not understand economics. If Microsoft truly does not serve the public market because of security flaws in its products or other factors, then innovation on the part of competitors will bring about desired changes. It may take a little longer than a government lawsuit, but ultimately the free market will be served and government intervention will not be needed. Microsoft became as large as it is because its products were innovative and made computers easier to use by the general public. They may have gone in a direction that discouraged competition, but I personally have not found many products that can compete — and I have looked. Linux may be the catalyst that causes the corporate shakeup the Clinton Administration looked for in the original lawsuit. We do not need the expense or use of DOJ resources for additional action against Microsoft.

Abbott Barclay
 Richmond, Virginia

MTC-00008039

From: Rudolf Forster
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:22am
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

I believe that the settlement accepted by the DOJ is fair and reasonable and should be the end of the litigation. We have spent far too much already on this vendetta of a few competitors and it is time to end it.

Stop this fruitless litigation and let Microsoft and the US get on with life. The very people (the public) that the litigation was supposed to have been protecting have NOT been complaining so who is this really about?

Rudolf Forster
 rforster@alltech-inc.com

MTC-00008040

From: Betty H meng
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:23am
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

Sun and Oracle need to compete fairly with Microsoft in the market place not in the courts—anti-trust doesn't apply when there is no way to put a price tag on creativity and entrepreneurship—

Let the customers be the judge and the jury—We know how to make our decision—

These 9 states should not be granted a license to sue—Let them all create competitively and we be the judge and jury and decide—

Mrs Betty B Meng (78 years old and experienced)

MTC-00008041

From: Dewire
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:23am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is hard for me to understand my government's instance on trying to punish an American company that has become a world wide standard for excellence. How does it help consumers to prevent a company from giving away features with their product? True, it hurts their competition because their competition did not think of it first.

I as one American Tax Payer, am tired of the government wasting my money going after a tax paying American Company.

Foreign government encourage and support their industries...only in America do we try to tear down what our citizens create and develop...under the banner of being too big and powerful. Other countries laugh at our Justice Department for doing their work for them in trying to eliminate our own American powerhouses.

In Japan Bill Gates would be declared a Living National Treasure...In Great Briton he would be knighted....here you are doing everything you can to destroy him!

Come to your common senses and enjoy and hail what Microsoft has accomplished.

Robert and Carol Dewire
 3640 Bal Harbor Blvd. # 511
 Punta Gorda, Florida
 33950

MTC-00008042

From: RKlein8198@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:22am
 Subject: microsoft settlement

can you imagin the mess the computer industry would be in if microsoft had not set a standard that every could follow. boot the politicians out out of the process.

MTC-00008043

From: Dixie DeRoshia
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:23am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support Microsoft's right to innovate and feel the Federal Government has overstepped it's duty to protect and it has in fact, harrassed a private concern unnecessarily.

Dixie Coster-DeRoshia

MTC-00008044

From: William Wertz
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:24am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 CC:tellupton@mail.house.gov@inetgw

MTC-00008045

From: Bob Blake
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:25am
 Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I concur in the agreement in the Microsoft Case

Robert Blake Jr
 13 Ethel Avenue
 Peabody, MA 01960-530813

MTC-00008046

From: RPPVLP@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:25am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

There needs to be a prompt resolution of the cases involving Microsoft. I am a substantial user of various interrelated Microsoft products which I use to conduct my daily business. Those products currently meet my needs very well. I cannot afford to have their interdependency shattered!

MTC-00008047

From: JANE WALKER
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:27am
 Subject: Case settlement

This case needs to be settled as soon as possible. With the state of the economy, another company does not need to be damaged by the interference of the government and people who are not dependent on this company for their living. We should not punish people for being brilliant and having innovative ideas.

Martha Jane Walker
 3663 Briar Creek
 Beaumont, TX 77706

MTC-00008048

From: richard tigue
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:29am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please- Let us settle the Microsoft case, and not continue to litigate!

MTC-00008049

From: Fred Benson
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:31am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

In my opinion the Tunney Act covering the Microsoft Settlement is fair, equitable and in the public's interest. I think that this law should stand, all the litigators should go chase other fire engines and our country should get back to building our economy instead of tearing it down. We should not attack corporations based on the fact that they have been successful. If a company can't compete it can't make it up by litigation. We should let the best continue to innovate and, unshackled, push the frontiers of technology for the betterment of all people.

Thank you very much.
 Sincerely yours,
 Fred C. Benson

MTC-00008050

From: Leroy E Gardner
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:29am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I urge you to complete the settlement as proposed. It is fair and balanced and removes further uncertainty over an entire industry. This should be beneficial to the stock market and to business generally. Leroy E. Gardner

MTC-00008051

From: Rick Deno

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 11:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please put this litigation behind us and let the economy finally take a step forward. Microsoft's customers made Microsoft a monopoly, NOT Microsoft. If we chose some other alternative, I want to be the one doing the choosing, not the Government.

MTC-00008052

From: Hrenforth@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:32am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The DOJ wants to hear from YOU!
For nearly four years, my voice has been instrumental in the debate over the freedom to innovate. Tens of thousands of concerned citizens have communicated to their public officials about whether the Microsoft case should be settled or further litigated. Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

However, this settlement is not guaranteed, and my voice is more important than ever.

The law (officially called the Tunney Act) requires a public comment period between now and January 28th after which the District Court will determine whether the settlement is in the public interest. Unfortunately, a few special interests are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Don't let these special interests defeat the public interest.

The Department of Justice will then take all public comments and viewpoints and include them in the public record for the District Court to consider.

Please send your comments directly to the Department of Justice via email or fax no later than January 28th. Whatever your view of the settlement, it is critical that the government hears directly from consumers. Please take action today to ensure your voice is heard.

I AM IN FAVOR OF TAKING THE SETTLEMENT THAT HAS BEEN APPROVED AND LETTING THIS MATTER BE SETTLED ONCE AND FOR ALL. ANY FURTHER LITIGATION WILL DO NOTHING BUT MAKE A LOT OF LITIGATORS WEALTHY AND THAT IS NOT NEEDED AT THIS TIME IN OUR LIVES.

THANKS FOR TAKING THE TIME TO LISTEN TO MY COMMENTS.

HOWARD F. RENFORTH
144 CROSSTIDE CIRCLE
PONTE VEDRA BEACH FL 32082

MTC-00008053

From: Clark, Nick
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 11:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is good to see that some of the states are finally getting on with settling their dispute with Microsoft. Although I've never felt indebted to Microsoft for the career I'm currently in I do however feel that it was their foresight and technology that pushed a technology market so far that eight years ago I finally found what I wanted to do for the rest of my life. I love working with their product! If it weren't for all the dumbass hackers making it harder on consumers Microsoft would probably be an even bigger company.

It's a shame for the states that are still in dispute over the current settlement agreement but you can never please everyone all of the time. I know alot of the issues that are still being mulled over are purely political and it's sad that nobody will remember the idiots still attacking Microsoft come the next election. Microsoft got to where they are because of their innovative ways. Yes, business deals have been made and they do need to play nice with their desktop and server operating systems. As for the market that either competes or works with Microsoft, they too need to develop better technology. If they didn't get behind in the first place we probably wouldn't even be going through this right now. Thank you for your time.

Nick Clark
IT Manager/Consultant
<<http://www.kebcpa.com/html/information-technology.html>>
Kerber, Eck & Braeckel LLP <<http://www.kebcpa.com/>>
Springfield, IL 62701

MTC-00008054

From: Katy Ainsworth
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:37am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

To Whom it May Concern:
Please note that I am a voting citizen of the United States of America. I am writing this letter in response to the settlement agreement with Microsoft. I feel this settlement to be in the best interest of consumers, the country, and especially the economy. With the downturn of the economy of the United States since the 9-11 I feel it to be of utmost importance to get this mess behind us and keep the economy stable. America is a capitalist country and we should do all we can to keep it this way.

Thank you.
Katy Robertson

MTC-00008055

From: LNLEVERETT@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:37am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

This suit by the federal government against Microsoft has not been in the public interest. Microsoft has plenty of competition and prices on all things electronic continue to drop. Please settle this case so Microsoft and the country can get on with it.

F. Lynn Leverett
7604 SW 178 Terrace
Miami, Florida 33157

MTC-00008056

From: rewone.nineoh@verizon.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:39am
Subject: Micosoft Settlement

You must force Microsoft to place a warning sticker on any software that requires the user to first install the Microsoft Internet Explorer browser before the said software can be installed. I use the Netscape browser and they wanted me to install MS IE before I could make greeting cards! I declined and asked for a refund.

William Kenney
Jamaica, NY

MTC-00008057

From: levinej@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:41am
Subject: microsoft settlement

I am in favor of the Microsoft settlement. I believe it works in my favor as a customer.
Joann levine—

MTC-00008058

From: Mary Selvick
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:40am
Subject: settlement

I hope you can forward this to the senators; I have had it with the government sticking its nose into "honest" companies! Leave Microsoft alone! The settlement was fair!

What I would like to see is a committee come together to investigate the "Pork" that all the senators push through and the tax payers have to foot the bill!

I am for term limits and get those damn bloodsuckers out!

MTC-00008059

From: MVL240Z@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:46am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Bill Gates did not force me to buy his products. I evaluated his products and am glad I do not have to hire a consultant to make various software programs work seamlessly together. My productivity has increased because I do not have to waste time figuring out various software programs. Clearly, Gates and Balmer have been aggressive and at times arrogant (Balmer).

Give them a fine, tell them not to do it again but let them get on with business and offering new products. Microsoft may not be the most innovative but they certainly make things work better. Do you use Word and PowerPoint? I am considering switching from Quicken to Microsoft because Quicken constantly crashes and according to reviews has been surpassed by Microsoft Money. Netscape and AOL's internet browser are inferior to Microsoft Explorer.

Give Microsoft credit for turning on a dime and realizing that the internet would change our lives. Do not be dictated by competitors who think a lawsuit is the only way of "beating" Microsoft.

Stop wasting more time and money and let's move on. America should concentrate on being an economic superpower that will further globalization to help wipe out individuals or groups like the Taliban and bin Laden.

MTC-00008060

From: MSullivanMaram@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:46am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 TO: Dept. Of Justice
 FROM: Mary Ann Sullivan 65 Park Ave.
 Williston Park, NY 11596

I am pleased with the DOJ ruling on Microsoft. I do not believe that it would be in the best interest of the American economy to break up Microsoft. If other states want to go ahead and sue Microsoft, I wish them luck! They won't succeed. We need a company like Microsoft to keep the American economy strong and progressive.

There are idiots today who hate Microsoft and don't even know how to use a computer!
 CC:MSullivanMaram@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00008061

From: CpiCfo@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:46am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The attack on Microsoft because they built a better mousetrap is unwarranted and outrageous.

I have been a computer user and analyst since my entry into the workforce some thirty years ago. In 1966, I was first introduced to programming (FORTRAN) as an engineering student. I can tell you I had no interest following this experience in being a computer geek! I left school and served in the USAF, with Viet Nam service. I returned to school on the GI Bill and obtained my BA and MBA. In this process, I was exposed to GPSS, Wang calculators and other cutting edge (at that time) computer models. They still left me with wanting someone else to do my modeling.

Graduating with my MBA, I then became a systems and financial analyst for a Bank holding company designing major banking systems (we were the first to install ACH in Florida and mini-computers in the bank branches) and using timeshare models. As computers moved away from the "big box" towards the ultimate "personal computers" I became more of a hands on user.

I became a CPA working for a major firm and then as the #3 financial spot with a fortune 500 which became a LBO and then liquidated. After the liquidation, I went into the work force as a consultant/CPA with my only staff being a PC under DOS. Without my computer background, it would have been extremely difficult for me to grasp what was going on in the PC—DOS environment—with separate, unintegrated Lotus, WordPerfect, database and other applications. It was only several years later that I finally migrated to Windows which I initially resisted because I did not want to retrain myself.

When I found what Windows and the integrated applications could do—I never looked back. AND THE TOTALLY INTEGRATED PACKAGES I PURCHASED WERE FAR CHEAPER, MORE EFFICIENT AND BETTER than the more expensive packages that I had perviously been working with. Because of the systems created by Bill Gates—I have less office staff, am more efficient at what I do, am willing to do my own modeling and correspondence, email, internet access, etc. etc. etc.

I am at a loss as to what you think Bill Gates and Microsoft have done to harm me—the consumer! As I understand it, the major issue against microsoft revolves around their internet access system (MSN) which I do not use. I am an AOL user. And while I have found some conflicts which are an irritant—I do not consider them actionable. I still use AOL (my kids would not let me move) and have figured out how to defeat whatever conflict (perceived or real) existed. Note: AOL Instant messenger is another example of an innovative creation which for the life of me I do not understand why someone who creates and builds a better mousetrap (and is the only one who has and everyone wants it) needs to be punished for doing so! If you want someone to attack—why don't you look at some of the tax software firms—Why do I have to pay so much for software from them? Their fees are excessive in my opinion.
 SETTLE THIS ACTION AGAINST MICROSOFT AND MOVE ON!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

MTC-00008062

From: Ralph Askam
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:50am
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

I am in favor of settling the microsoft case as has been proposed in the final sttlement agreement.

I think enough time and money has been wasted on this matter and that every one would be better off withit's settlement.

Thank you
 Ralph F. Askam M.D.
 4120 Nobhill Dr.
 Muskegon.Mi. 49441 231 780 2252

MTC-00008063

From: Robert Hess
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:47am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

I'm writing to you in regards to the proposed settlement of the anti-trust suit against Microsoft.

I have several points of view on this matter.

As a (minor) shareholder, I feel too much time and money has already been spent by the company and the taxpayers on this matter. The company has agreed to abide by the proposed settlement to which the federal government and nine states have also agreed.

As a long-time personal computer user, I have never been forced to utilize Microsoft products. Over the years, I use, and have used, different operating systems, internet browsers, word processing software, spreadsheet programs, etc. In some cases, the Microsoft product was the best choice for me, in other cases, it was not...but I have a choice.

As an American taxpayer, I'm tired of the taxes I pay being wasted on a handful of lawyers making their careers on long, drawn out bureaucracies such as this.

It is time for this matter to be settled.

Respectfully,
 Robert Hess
 Wyomissing, PA

MTC-00008064

From: Ted Michael

To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:50am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I think that Microsoft should be able to conduct business as it sees fit. Microsoft has announced its plans all along to the competition who thought that their grip was enough to see it through. When reality struck they called foul. When they had Microsoft on the ropes and tied up in Federal court they forged alliances themselves trying to become the ruler of the computer/on-line worlds. To what avail? Allow Microsoft to continue to move ahead in its product development and desktop integration. Don't punish them for their innovation but rather allow the market place to dictate the direction of the marketplace and may the best companies win!

Ted Michael
 248-877-5772
 CC:MSFIN@Microsoft.com@inetgw

MTC-00008065

From: JRKRAWIEC@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:50am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wish to make my voice heard regarding the Microsoft suit. The suit against Microsoft was a huge mistake from the beginning. Since when is our government in the business of suing successful businesses, because the competition says it is unfair.

I believe that the settlement which has been reached is fair to all parties. The government has never made a case showing where consumers were harmed by Microsoft. In fact, the exact opposite is true. Microsoft has made it possible for more and more consumers to benefit from use of computers and the internet.

Please end this costly suit at once and move forward with the settlement already agreed upon.. If Microsoft had an unfair advantage, shouldn't the competitors have been benefitting from the tough times of Microsoft this past few years (due to this litigation)? The opposite has occurred. We have all seen our stocks in all of the internet companies go down the tube. Look at the numbers. This decline began almost in direct correlation with the Lawsuit. Now consumers truly have been harmed, but not by Microsoft, but by our own Government which will not leave the free market free.

Please do the right thing now.. Thank you for your time...Joyce Krawiec

MTC-00008066

From: Hjbaron@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:51am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Leave Microsoft alone-The settlement is reasonable to all parties-Stop wasting money on more litigation pushed by wealthy special interest groups!!!!

Julie Baron

MTC-00008067

From: MEIJERA@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 11:56am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear US Department of Justice,

As we all know, our economy is suffering and we are now in a recession. If the case against Microsoft is resolved soon, I think our American public will gain the confidence it needs to begin investing in our great economy again.

Because Microsoft has brought so much to this world in software technology, they should be applauded and not obnoxiously criticized for their efforts. Sure, they should operate accordingly and be punished accordingly, but enough is enough. Let's get on with it and start this economy rolling again.

AMM

MTC-00008068

From: Edgar Lambert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:56am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It appears to me the states are only interested in getting revenue out of this law suit similar to the tobacco lawsuit. I don't believe the public interest has anything to do with it. Microsoft should be free to continue to innovate as they've done in the past which has made vast changes in our lives as well as helped the economy to grow.

Ed Lambert

MTC-00008069

From: Margaret Murdock
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:55am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sirs:

I think you should accept the Microsoft settlement that has been reached by the DOJ and the various 9 states who wanted something different than the original DOJ agreement. Microsoft has paid enough for being a successful company. As far as I am concerned the whole thing has been a miscarriage of justice.

You learned all your computer use/knowledge at tax payer expense and with an Information Specialist standing by to get your computer straightened out from any screwups you did. We tax payers have not had that luxury.

When I bought my first computer, for my son to use at college, it cost more than I was able to save in one year, and then when I got it home, I had to figure out how to put DOS 3.3 (for which I had to pay extra) on it. Then I had to pay another $150 for a word processor, which I had to install on it, in the hopes that it would all work together. AND, I did not have the luxury of any one to help me if it didn't all work OK. And if I broke it—to bad.

Microsoft has made the purchase of a computer to use a pleasure, not the nightmare it use to be. All the software that you need to do the things that you want your new computer to do—is on it, and runs correctly!! More than any other company, Microsoft has made computers able to be used by anyone in the world. It is no longer only for the computer savvy few. Even you would not be able to use your computer if it were not for Microsoft making it easy enough that you can simply point and click your way around different windows.

Don't let the special interest groups stop the settlement.

Margaret Murdock

MTC-00008070

From: Joe Johnson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:58am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

I believe that the lawsuits brought against Microsoft are for the most part politically (self interest) motivated. Obviously Microsoft has been very successful and, as a result, has become very big. However, it is still important that the software industry be allowed to have a definite leader in a free market. I think that other companies should be guaranteed the right to compete with Microsoft, but they should not be guaranteed success! In general, I believe that the current proposed settlement with Microsoft by the DOJ is more than fair to the parties which have filed charges against Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Joe E. Johnson

MTC-00008071

From: Jim Applebaum
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Dear Sir or Ms.,
I believe the settlement of the DOJ suit against Microsoft should be approved as soon as possible.

Thank you,
Jim A.

MTC-00008072

From: DnBMcKee@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:58am
Subject: Micro Soft Settlement

My wife Billie and I both believe that the whole Microsoft trial has been unamerican and a total travesty. We grow up being taught that as Americans the sky is the limit. We are told that hard work, original thinking and attaining goals are the keys to success. Apparently not so if we take the example of the Microsoft affair as an indication of how it works. There isn't a single company in the U.S. that has done more for the American Image than Microsoft, and it is a world-wide perception. They should be rewarded, not punished!!!!

Billie & Don McKee

MTC-00008073

From: Lyle McDermed
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is my opinion that Microsoft is being punished for being successful. There seem to be several Microsoft wannabees that have an inferior product that want to see Microsoft pay through the nose for good business practices that the wannabees do not have! Since capitulism allows for and encourages success, I fail to see why the federal Justice Department and the different States are trying to destroy Microsoft. Success should breed additional success and not PUNISHMENT!

Lyle K. McDermed

MTC-00008074

From: Ken (038) Audrey Smith

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We feel the settlement is fair and should apply to all the states involved.
We are not sure why the states should get anything, Microsoft has given all states computers and training.

Sincerely,
Audrey Smith

MTC-00008075

From: DICKBEAN
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:02pm
Subject: End The Legal Obstructions
Senator Hatch and Microsoft's Utah competitors should get a life. The court has ruled and we should all be moving on.
Richard C Bean

MTC-00008076

From: GERALD HARTZ
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Ladies and Gentlemen,

I think this foolishness has gone far enough, too far in fact. If you can't see that these lingering nine states are in "it" strictly for the money than I have a bridge I want to sell you after this foolishness is concluded. We cannot control the success of one company, i.e. Microsoft, and the failures of others by taking money from the successful one and giving it to the slackers in an attempt to even the playing field. This is absolutely stupid, and My Government must act more intelligently than that. This entire "suit" thing (designed by the previous Clinton Administration who when faced with what to do and had no intelligent way to turn, sued) makes me sick. Wake up Justice Department!!!!!!

This email comes to you from US Citizen:
Gerald Hartz
19 Diller Line Road
Chesterville, ME 04938

MTC-00008077

From: Frank (038) Debbie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Please finalize the settlement. Stop further frivolous litigation and let the computer industry get back to business.
Thank you,
Frank Hobin
409 S. Beech St.
Winnsboro, Tx 75494
(903) 342-9222

MTC-00008078

From: Thelma Stevens
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:04pm
Subject: No subject was specified.
Re. the Microsoft Settlement:
With regards to the new Microsoft settlement, we would like to add our thoughts to what so much of the American public thinks. We agree with the settlement and find it a tough but beneficial settlement for all concerned. We believe that the interests of all the parties are well served by this proposal and we urge you to finalize this settlement as soon as possible. As a consumer, we think the terms are fair to us as well as to the aggrieved parties. Please do not delay this proposal, Let's get this behind us, and keep the American economy moving!

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Thelma and Nelson Stevens
Barrington, IL.

MTC-00008079

From: Luiz De Lima
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:05pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The litigation against Microsoft has already damaged the economy perhaps more than terrorist acts. I think it is time to settle the case and move forward to resume growth.

MTC-00008080

From: Allan Kalar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:08pm
Subject: MS Settlement

Yes, Microsoft has some problems, but delaying the settlement is not the way to solve them.

Microsoft's biggest problem is that their operating systems aren't reliable. No amount of legislation or court action is going to fix that. The marketplace will. Linux is currently replacing Windows as the system of choice for web sites because it's more robust and cheaper per node. Hardly the scene you'd associate with a monopoly situation. Don't let the special interests whine their way into the proceedings. Settle this thing now so the world can get on to something important.

Allan Kalar
Viking Waters (not connected with Microsoft)

800-838-5958
alkalar@attglobal.net
PO Box 1975
Elma, WA 98541—

Don't put a question mark where God put a period.

MTC-00008082

From: Arden Warner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Get off of Microsoft's back.

Please end your never-ending, apparently obsessive, interest in the Microsoft case. You've done enough. Send your people after someone—or something—of consequence. Prosecuting a business, simply because the business is successful, provides a large group of—otherwise (possibly/probably) unemployable—attorneys with ample, overpaid, employment and on-the-job training. But it serves very little, if any, meaningful purpose. Microsoft does more good for the United States of America, by sheer accident—in one week, than your organization does, with hundreds of overpaid bureaucrats, working around the clock, in 20 years.

Buy your staff some pool tables and foosball machines, and keep them busy with those interests and activities. By giving them anything else to do—you are taking the risk of doing much harm. I am proud of what Microsoft has done for society—and for the entire world. I am not at all proud of what you people do—either for a living or as a potential benefit to society. In fact, what you do for a living is kind of embarrassing. Try looking for some honest—and meaningful and productive—work. There must be something that you can do.

Arden Warner
11038 Quail Run
Dallas, TX 75238-3712
214-341-8174

MTC-00008083

From: Larry Cox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:10pm

I work in the travel industry. We're struggling to stay in business and it will be a tough year in the best of scenarios.

In the interest of our nation and economy, I ask that the case against Microsoft be closed.

Thanks,
Larry Cox

MTC-00008084

From: Marty McCafferty
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am very disappointed with the settlement. It seems to just bandage the problems with Microsoft's monopoly powers. Microsoft can easily use the delays in court to damage competitors.

Microsoft's illegal advantages have striped the computer industry of real innovation. A simple look at the computer related technology growth in the 80's compared to the 90's to present Microsoft era shows we are stagnate. Microsoft has choked off innovation so only the monetary strong can attempt to compete. This severely limits innovation.

For instance, In the 80's a $300 Commodore 64 could play music and simple voice recognition and used the latest technology and most people could afford it. An Amiga computer was about $600 could 32-bit multi tasking operating system, play digital music, speech synthesis, video capture and has hundred of affordable graphic and sound programs and was capable of hi speed modem access. The PC controlled by Microsoft has just recently been able to offer these abilities mostly because of the cost to do business with Microsoft and the ability of Microsoft to starve a small innovator out of the market using there illegal monopolistic power.

The only way to really help the consumer is to break Microsoft's up into competing Microsoft companies. The vacuum left behind would be filled with lots of innovative competitors keeping prices down and new ideas and technologies affordable. We would see the computer growth of the 80's of a scale of today's PC market.

Microsoft's biggest market strength is they can "include" products in there OS that a person would not purchase but may keep someone from purchasing a competitors product. Netscape is one big example, Explorer was an inferior product and few would download it, so Microsoft included it in the OS. Now a user could use the inferior product because it was included and they may be less likely to download the competitive product. Microsoft's recent Media Play 8 is following the same game plan. There are better products out there but users are less likely to download them because they have a "similar" product included with the OS.

Why invest in competing with Microsoft with their ability to force new computers to have there competing products "integrated"?

The computer industry could really used more competition in the OS and application fields to bring down the cost of good products.

Regards, Marty
Marty McCafferty
Network Administrator
Nissei Sangyo America, Ltd.
Phone: (847) 273-4327 Fax: (847) 273-4127

E-mail: marty.mccafferty@nissei.com mailto:marty.mccafferty@nissei.com

MTC-00008085

From: LRoddis@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern: Without Microsoft products, I would be unable to have my business and help my daughter with school. Microsoft made products that work for the private person and are affordable. The case against this innovative company is ridiculous and is hurting our economy. I wish to express my disappointment in the governments continual pursuit of Microsoft. Please put an end to the legal action. Microsoft has been a model in creating technology that is affordable to so many people.

Thanks for providing a means for me to express my opinion
Linda Roddis
St. Paul, MN

MTC-00008086

From: maryasara
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:22pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This was never really a DOJ case. If there was a problem with Microsoft's competition, they should have spent their own money and brought a civil case. How about a DOJ case against the competition for collusion.

MTC-00008087

From: James Morss
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:22pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Hello,
It's time to settle and get on with business. We need companies like Microsoft to stay healthy and competitive. Microsoft has given the US a big competitive edge in the tech market and we need to help them not punish them further. Let's move on.

Jim Morss
206 174th Pl. NE
Bellevue, WA 98008

MTC-00008088

From: Annegstout@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 12:23pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

To the Department of Justice:
I am writing to let you know that I am in favor of the settlement of the Microsoft dispute. I believe that it will be for the good of our economy and our sense of fairness and freedom to accept the settlement and get on with the growth of our technological businesses.

Sincerely,
Anne G. Stout

MTC-00008089

From: CHASTU@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:21pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Continued interference by government in the free market is unwanted and not what we are electing politicians to do. They are only hurting economic recovery. Get off the back of business.

C.S. Griffith, Ponte Vedra, Florida

MTC-00008090

From: John, Christine, Cailyn and Jared Cattell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please complete the proposed settlement as soon as possible. I strongly believe this is in the best interests of our country's freedom to innovate and to help our economy pull out of recession. I believe these lawsuits were motivated by Microsoft's competitors who are trying to "rob" Microsoft of their rewards for producing outstanding products that have propelled our technology growth over the last decade.

Again, please do not stand in the way of an economic recovery and freedom to innovate with new products. Complete the proposed settlement now and let's move on.

Thank you,
John Cattell

MTC-00008091

From: Bill Williams
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:22pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My thoughts on the subject case.
I am glad the subject case is coming to a close. I understand litigation of this magnitude takes time, however, in this case you took way to long in reaching a final decision.

By not coming to a quicker decision it affected the economic well being of many developers waiting in the wings for a decision. Small to mid-size organizations are still the backbone of our economy and you under-cut their ability to act and/or react. Most organizations do not have the cash that a Microsoft has, therefore, quicker decisions are necessary. I agree Microsoft should not have been broken up.

I am disappointed that you are allowing them a long-term free hand in entering the education market. The long-term effects will favor Microsoft and put competition at a disadvantage. Other remedies would have been more realistic and would have encouraged long-term competition.

Punishment was in order and you fell short.

Bill Williams
wgv21@hotmail.com

MTC-00008092

From: LAPUNE@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:23pm
Subject: settlement of governmebt lawsuit
Come on!! Lets get this thing behind us and encourage the lawyers to work on something that really is worthwhile.

Microsoft has been a boon to world economy. They shouldn't be punished! Microsoft deserves to be #1.

Microsoft's competitors should spend their money $$$ on improving their businesses, not on lawyers.

Al Boden

MTC-00008093

From: Vince Yelmini
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In the midst of these uncertain economic times, the last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

This settlement is in the public's interest: it is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. It is good for consumers, the industry and the American economy.

Please settle this and clear the court system!

Sincerely, V.A. Yelmini

MTC-00008094

From: Fred Clarke
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:25pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

It is time to settle. The DOJ had a poor excuse to start with and hammered the tech sector with the threat of breakup. Settle as agreed.

MTC-00008095

From: Catherine Ansbro
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:28pm
Subject: comments

I am concerned about the proposed "penalties" on Microsoft. These so-called penalties do not really punish this company for its monopolistic activity over many years. In fact, they make it possible for Microsoft to continue its monopolistic activities in the years to come. This is simply not acceptable.

Microsoft has attempted to maintain a monopoly on the Internet Web Browser market. This is more apparent to a software developer who works within Microsoft operating systems. The technical aspects involved in the operating system itself, specifically, development with the Microsoft Foundation Classes and use of '.Net' technology marries the software developer (happily or unhappily so) to Internet Explorer, and the operating system. The newer versions of Windows have the Internet technologies wrapped in them. This is an obvious attempt to maintain a monopoly on the Internet Browser market. Whether or not they supposedly did it 'on purpose', the result is the same: a monopoly.

Specific training programs such as MCSE (Microsoft Certified Software Engineer) and MCS D (Microsoft Certified Solution Developer) are geared towards maintaining the internet browser market by gearing Microsoft Certified individuals (who must pay for courses and tests, and so become personally invested) to use only Microsoft Products.

One could argue that nobody else has attempted these things on the level that Microsoft Inc. has. Of course not, because they didn't have the chance to because of Microsoft's illegal monopoly and its unfair treatment of would-be competitors. This lack of competition is still hurting us all, at the level of individual users who do not experience freedom of choice in the products that are made available to us, and at the level of businesses who could have made different and better products and considerable profits during these years that Microsoft was an illegal monopoly.

Hardware manufacturers is hiding the price of the operating system on new computer systems. And they are not permitted to sell the hardware separately from the software. This is fundamentally wrong.

The legal resolution to this matter should include the following demands on Microsoft:

(1) Microsoft products—or products of any software manufacturer—must be sold as separate items by computer vendors. Users can then make a CONSCIOUS choice, and other software manufacturers will have a chance to compete. Installation of software selected by the user can remain free. For example, I prefer to be able to buy a linux operating system installed on a new computer. Why should I have to also pay for a Microsoft OS that I do not want or need? And why is the price of the Microsoft OS & Software not published?

(2) All Microsoft networking protocols must be published in full and approved by an independent network protocol body. This would prevent Microsoft from seizing de facto control of the Internet.

(3) The specifications of Microsoft's past, present and future document and network formats must be made public, so that documents created in Microsoft applications may be read by programs from other makers, on Microsoft's and other operating systems. This is in addition to opening the Windows Application Program Interface ("Windows API", the set of "hooks" that allow other parties to write applications for Windows operating systems), which is already part of the proposed settlement.

(4) The level Microsoft is certified by the Software Engineering Institute must be made public to the consumer, as well as insight into their development process for Operating Systems. SEI level 3 is required by the United States Government for software companies that supply software to it (or that was coming in 1999). This certification was created to protect the government from software manufacturers that had no software development process. This same certification should protect the average consumer, AND insight into the Software Development Process for creation of their operating systems would give software manufacturers a chance to keep up with Microsoft.

(5) Device Driver information for new operating systems MUST be made public prior to the release of the operating system by a minimum of 6 months. This is VERY important when dealing with future web enabled embedded devices. It also helps the average consumer because they get a better product. Judgment in this case needs to be fair to the consumer, because future cases will look toward this as a precedent. Please take these steps to ensure that Microsoft is truly penalized from its years of monopoly activities—including harsh financial penalties that will resound throughout the computer industry—and include the recommended steps above to ensure that Microsoft is never able to do this again.

Catherine Ansbro
236 Pawnee
West Lafayette,
Indiana 47906

MTC-00008096

From: Fdcdyc@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:28pm
Subject: (no subject)

I think the Microsoft settlement is fair. Lets get this over with. There must be more important things to spend our tax dollars on. FDCartwright.

MTC-00008097

From: branden—hoopes@peoplesoft.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:
I have no business affiliation with Microsoft. I am simply a very happy consumer of their products. I have used Microsoft and competing products for years and I firmly believe that Microsoft's dominance in the market is the result of a superior product. Computer software has never been so easy to use and has never been so integrated.

On the other hand, I am not blind to the mistakes Microsoft has made. However, I believe the remedies agreed to by Microsoft and the Department of Justice are more than adequate. The states that have chosen to not accept the agreement between nine states, Microsoft, and the Department of Justice are states in which Microsoft's largest competitors are based. These states are rejecting the settlement because large corporations in there districts want Microsoft removed as a competitor, NOT because there is a public outcry by consumers over how they have been mistreated and overcharged by Microsoft.

Please accept the proposed agreement and let Microsoft survive. The alternative remedy proposed by the other nine states would cripple Microsoft, demoralize their employees, and ruin any incentive the company has for continued innovation of their products. It would be a mistake far bigger than the collapse of Enron.

Branden Hoopes
A happy Microsoft consumer

MTC-00008098

From: Harry E. B. Sullivan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe there should be no governmental action of any kind against Microsoft. I have used a wide variety of Microsoft software and hardware since 1992. For the moderate amounts of money these items cost, I have received immense value. These products have made computing and use of the internet much more efficient and enjoyable. Instead of penalizing Microsoft, the U.S. Government and the American people should praise Microsoft for its many innovations, which have greatly improved American productivity and provided thousands of good high-tech jobs for Americans.

The anti-trust case against Microsoft is ludicrous—to prove an anti-trust violation, the government must prove harm to consumers, and it has failed to do so. From personal experience, I know of no such harm. Besides, anyone who does not like Microsoft has always been free to buy Apple products. Thank you for your attention to my views.

Sincerely,
Harry E. B. Sullivan

MTC-00008099

From: JEBenecki@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

First I offer my relevant credentials. My wife and I are retired residents of South Carolina, owners of 400 shares of Microsoft and users of Microsoft products in our home computer and previously in our careers.

I am very grateful for the productivity gains Microsoft has given all sectors of our economy through the products it has made available to the consumers at what I believe have been reasonable prices. Microsoft was also a leader in providing products and systems that are both compatible and integrated for ease of use by the consumer.

On the other hand, Microsoft was overzealous in pursuing market position in the past and the public has a right to expect some adjustment in Microsoft's behavior.

I believe the settlement agreed to by nine states is fair and sufficient to control Microsoft's business directions in the coming years. I encourage the Justice Department to use its influence and power to bring the other nine states into agreement with the settlement as well.

Thank you for your attention to my views.
John E. Benecki

MTC-00008100

From: Connie Hutchison
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a school board member of the McFarland School District. We are a small school district in Wisconsin and face a difficult time continuing to provide a world-class education because of climbing costs and a limited tax base. Funding for computers, hardware and internet access must be balanced with the other basic educational and staffing needs in our district.

However, in order to help prepare our students for the jobs, businesses and the everyday world they will face after graduation, our district's ability to provide current technological equipment and training is essential. The proposed Microsoft settlement will help small schools districts like McFarland provide the technology our students need to meet the challenges they will face in the coming years. The settlement not only provides the technology, but also provides the training so teachers can effectively use the computers in the classrooms.

Please support the proposed settlement which establishes an independent foundation to distribute technology funds, computers and software to those districts in the most need of these essential resources.

Thank you for your consideration,
Connie Hutchison
5608 Chestnut Lane
McFarland, WI 53558
(608) 838-3728

MTC-00008101

From: Francesco Gallo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:30pm
Subject: Microsoft proposed settlement

From: Francesco P. Gallo 216 Hitching Post Dr.
Wilmington, DE 19803
To: CHARLES A. JAMES
Assistant Attorney General
Antitrust Division

United States Department of Justice
I would like to express my gratitude, as a small consumer of PC products, to the US Attorney Office that in few months has put the basis for an end to a saga that has attempted to destroy an industry leader for so many years, and certainly not favoring the consumers and the economy.

Although I'm not a technician, I have perused the documentation on the Antitrust Case, and I'm very happy to express as consumer few comments for the Tunney Act.

It seems appropriate that the remedies invoked by the Proposed Final Judgment and the Competition Impact Statement are a reasonable solution to this long war, giving competitors an opportunity to integrate products and forcing Microsoft to reveal its source code, without stopping Innovation. In addition, Microsoft would be under federal monitoring until 2008. It is time for the few States opposing this settlement to dedicate more of their resources to support the economy and the innovation that will enhance the productivity.

Respectfully,
Francesco P. Gallo
CC:Francesco Gallo

MTC-00008102

From: BOB52545@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir/Madam:

I am writing in support of the proposed settlement of antitrust claims against Microsoft Corporation. As a retired lawyer, I believe that settlement of these claims is in the best interest of the taxpayers and the American consumer. Far too much money has already been spent prosecuting questionable claims (although I suppose Judge Jackson's Order, to the extent upheld by the Court of Appeals, has laid to rest the questionability of these claims).

I don't believe that the consumer was ever really damaged by any monopoly power wielded by Microsoft, nor do I believe that any competitors were seriously harmed by "monopolistic practices", if any, of Microsoft. Having a superior product is not against the law nor should it be. I seriously doubt that any true unregulated monopoly exists in the US today, nor has one existed here for a long time.

It is time to move on to something that will truly make a difference in the lives of Americans and leave successful businesses alone.

Robert G Currin, Jr,
225 Springlake Rd,
Columbia, SC 29206

MTC-00008103

From: Harold (038) Dorothy Clinesmith
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:22pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs: I feel that it is high time to settle this litigation and get on with business. It serves no purpose to keep chipping away at a company that has had such good success at innovations that make the computer easier to us by the average person. Why keep punishing a company that has done such a good job just because other companies didn't have the ability to do the same if they had had the expertise to do the same first. Lets get on with the business of being a country that rewards companies and people for doing things that helps the economy of this free country. Please end this as soon as possible.

Sincerely,
Dorothy Clinesmith

MTC-00008104

From: tbrown@orionconsulting.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to express my support of Microsoft and request a swift and fair completion to their litigation. I am both a consumer of Microsoft (MSFT) software and in a business that relies in part on MSFT's success. As a technology professional, I am keenly aware of the importance of fair competition in our field. Unfair competition or monopolistic behavior is very damaging to us as it slows the development and adoption process of new and better technologies. To this end, I support the prosecution of MSFT and the success the DOJ has had in getting MSFT to stop their unfair practices.

On the other hand, there is an overwhelming danger to our industry if this settlement is drawn out or if the punishment is too severe. MSFT has created some of the best software products on the market today. They create millions of jobs and drive billions of dollars in the U.S. economy. My company and thousands of others are working with MSFT everyday to expand the technological lead the U.S. enjoys over other countries. I rely on them to be successful in selling their software so I can sell consulting services and make my own company profitable. Punishing them unfairly will hurt many innocent people, like myself and my employees.

The settlement with MSFT should be focused on assuring they adhere to open standards for their software and open commercial arrangements for potential resellers or licensees of their technology. The technology industry in the U.S. has tried in vain for years to create a sanctioning organization that everyone subscribes to—fairly. If there is a single greatest opportunity for the DOJ to provide a legacy out this huge prosecutorial effort, it would be in the mandate for the creation of a technology standards council.

Companies like MSFT, AOL, Oracle, SAP, HP, Sun, etc would all be required to be involved in and fund this organization. This would allow the technology industry to police itself with oversight by the government. Our economy has been hurt enough by recent events. Our industry is in its worst slump in 10 years. Please do what you can to reverse this decline, not make it worse.

Sincerely,
Thomas J. Brown
Chicago, IL

MTC-00008105

From: William Browning
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a shareholder of Microsoft as you might have guessed. I favor the settlement, of course.

There is, however, another aspect which I find particularly disturbing. That is the transmission by the Senate Judiciary Committee to Judge Kotar-Kelly of the results of their hearings favoring modification. If ever there was inappropriate interference by the legislative with the judicial branch this is it. The threat that the Judge will not get a promotion to higher judicial office unless she follows their recommendation is palpable. I really hope you can do something about that.

Bill Browning.

MTC-00008106

From: Ross, Joyce
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 12:22pm
Subject: MSFT

Dear Sirs ... I feel that the proposed settlement with Microsoft is both reasonable and fair. We need to allow for innovative research and expect that the best will rise to the top.

jrross

MTC-00008107

From: RCllnd@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:35pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the Clinton Administration's going after Microsoft was not a good thing to do. Microsoft is a very good company and has made many people successful in their business. Leave it alone. Let the settlement that has been agreed upon stand.

Sincerely yours,
Rosemary Cleland
Bishop, Ca 93514

MTC-00008108

From: JR LONGMEIER
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:37pm
Subject: SETTLEMENT

THE SETTLEMENT WITH MICROSOFT NEEDS COMPLETED AS SOON AS POSSIBLE AND GET ON WITH BUSINESS. IF THE PREVIOUS A.G. HAD SPENT AS MUCH TIME HARASSING BIN LADEN AS IT DID BILL GATES, I THINK WE WOULD HAVE A BETTER WORLD TODAY.

MTC-00008109

From: JBWeed@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To: DOJ
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to register my support for the proposed Microsoft Settlement. I think it represents an acceptable way to resolve the issues.

Jeff Weed
11320 Grenelefe Ave. N.
White Bear Lake, MN 55110

MTC-00008110

From: Theodore Nelson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:38pm
Subject: Microsoft

The DOJ and majority of states have reached an agreement with regard to Microsoft. I believe this settlement was in the best interest of consumers and American business. We as Americans must be concerned about our global competitiveness and further litigation of this case will further increase the risk of damaging the competitive edge we have in computer software. Therefore, I strongly recommend proceeding with this settlement agreement.

Theodore W Nelson
2812 Shamrock Drive
Allison Park, PA 15101

MTC-00008111

From: Jim Dowling
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:38pm
Subject: Enough is truly ENOUGH !! Let's move on and quit wasting Enough is truly ENOUGH !! Let's move on and quit wasting my tax dollars as well as the tax dollars of other tax payers

Sincerely,
Jim Dowling

MTC-00008112

From: Danoe38111@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:39pm
Subject: Microsoft/ Settlement in the Courts under the Turney Act; The Contribution that Microsoft has made to the Computer Industry over the Years, has been phenomenal. Today's Computer expertise by millions would not have happened if there had not been a system that had some continuity to it, and kept it as simple as possible.

Therefore, I hope that the powers to be will accept the present settlement that is being offered, and get on with teaching more people to utilize the computer and its many many advantages. Please settle now, this has gone on for 4 years too many.

Thank you for listening.
D Noe.

MTC-00008113

From: Eddie Bunn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The previous Clinton administration seemed to attack big business as bad for us private citizens when a lot of folks either work for those type of companies or related industries. They went after tobacco, they went after the firearms, and they went after Microsoft to name a few. They said they were doing it for us, but most Americans saw through this ruse and realized it was a way the politicians could bring in more money, through fines, to support their spending habits. It wasn't about us, it was about money, money, money for our government. Ultimately, it had a very real and negative effect on our economy... Enough is enough. When Microsoft was attacked, it seemed to mark the beginning of our economic downturn. I thought it then and I believe it now. Why? I'm not sure, but it falls under weakening consumer confidence. I don't work for a big company. I'm a small independent businessman. But my feeling is that the economy is trying to turn around and if this Microsoft case doesn't continue to drag on, and is settled soon, it will be a big boost to the American psyche which in turn will help consumer confidence. We sure could use that right now.

W.E. Bunn

MTC-00008114

From: Jim Stout
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I just wanted to voice my opinion regarding the settlement. I think the settlement is tough but fair. I'm glad to see that this matter can be settled and that we can all just get back to the business of making this country a leader in the world. Get on with it and let the economy recover!

MTC-00008115

From: Barbara Winter
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To: Department of Justice
Re: Review period for Microsoft Antitrust case

As a consumer of Computer software for 20 years, I wish to express my dismay that special interest groups—primarily Microsoft competitors—are attempting to derail the Court of Appeals settlement agreed upon in November of 2001. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy. Unfortunately, a few special interests are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Don't let these special interests defeat the public interest.

In the settlement, Microsoft has agreed to provide software developers the necessary access to the code that enables them to create programs that interact with Microsoft platforms. The new .NET platform has raised more excitement in world-wide software developer communities than any previous operating system, in large part because Microsoft is encouraging developers to innovate, and supporting them in that effort regardless of their allegiance or affiliations. This freedom to innovate is essential to American values. It's good for competition, good for consumers.

Please take a balanced and fair look at how the proposed final settlement will affect CONSUMERS. That is the group anti-trust laws were meant to protect.

Thank you,
Barbara Winter
13872 NE 60th Way
Redmond, WA 98052
425-895-8836

MTC-00008116

From: Mail
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:44pm

MTC-00008117

From: Chris Mayhall
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The last thing this country needs at this point in time is a prolonged randomizing conclusion to the Microsoft anti-trust case—let's finish it with the proposed settlement as it stands.

After seeing how decisively the American public reacted to the horrific acts of September 11, do you (the DOJ) really think that the people of this nation would support Microsoft or any other company if we actually thought that their products were designed and built to our detriment? This must be a time of rebuilding, economically as well as spiritually, to show the terrorist community that they have not succeeded in their efforts. Further litigation against Microsoft would very likely lead to even more stagnation in the economic markets, and this would surely be viewed by some as a direct effect of the recent terrorist acts.

Certainly people everywhere, and in particular in the United States, have become more productive through the use of Windows, the Internet, and software applications that run on the Windows operating system. To overlook this economic trend of the past decade, is a significant oversight.

And finally, to anyone who has not developed software it is unthinkable that a manufacturer would release a new product, such as an operating system, that "didn't work well" in the marketplace—it is an economically-driven decision with sharp competitors (such as AOL and Sun Microsystems in this case) doing all that they can to take that marketshare. The number of hours and test cases examined in order to be sure that Windows works well with all of the popular software products is staggering. Integrating software such as an internet browser with the operating system, as in this case, is done in order to raise the quality of the software. This occurs because common code that is shared between the two software applications only has to be written once, tested once, documented once, manufactured once, and sold once. If these same two applications were not integrated, all of these production facets are doubled. Eventually support costs double and the price of the software increases. It is hard to imagine how this latter approach is ultimately to the benefit of the American public.

Sincerely,
Chris Mayhall, Applied Digital Photography, LLC

MTC-00008118

From: Bill Gish
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Department of Justice

With the job losses, Income losses for most citizens, Stock market down; it is time that when a settlement is reached, for it to be honored and the individuals who profit, who already have more income and assets than the average person stop prolonging the final settlement to enrich their pockets, get votes in their states, to hold offices that they are unable work and reach agreements with other government departments. Any system that can't reach an agreement is shorter time than this should refund their pay for ineffectiveness. People are losing faith in the over all government. The auto industry doesn't have compatible parts for interchanging with other autos, neither the appliance industry, or for that matter the human body. Every company tries to increase their market, look what your organization has allowed the Super Stores to do the small business person. Stop this delay now.

William D. Gish

MTC-00008119

From: Gregory Slayton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:48pm
Subject: Microsoft—Settlement

THE PFJ IS RIDICULOUS. WHY LET THEM GET AWAY WITH PAST ABUSES AND GIVE THEM A DEFACTO GOVT APPROVED MONOPOLY GOING FORWARD???

GWS

MTC-00008120

From: Phillip Young
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:51pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ, Complete the Microsoft Settlement. Please settle with Microsoft to allow Microsoft and the whole electronics industry get on building their industry. Let the market place decide the winners and loser—NOT THE GOVERNMENT.

Thanks,
Phil Young
San Diego, CA 92109

MTC-00008121

From: Alexandra Stocker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To The Justice Department:
Please end the litigation against Microsoft once and for all. As a taxpayer, consumer, and small business owner, I object to our government intervening in the free market and persecuting a company such as Microsoft, one of America's great success stories, whose only crime was to be too successful.
Sincerely,
Alexandra Stocker
Alexandra Sanderson Stocker Principal
Sanderson & Stocker, Inc.(R) (formerly Sanderson Capital)
2333 N. Tripphammer Rd. #201
Ithaca, NY 14850
(607) 257-5117

MTC-00008122

From: JD Loden
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:52pm
Subject: Resolution
Microsoft has made the technology industry more competitive, and has demanded that it's competitors achieve excellence. When the automobile was invented, could we've prevented car makers from designing cars with four wheels similar to the first car?
Obviously we need a platform, and from this platform competitive products and services will surface.
J.
D. Comprehensive Business & Personal Financial Planning Services
Naples, FL 941-430-0104, FAX 941-403-9987 EMAIL jd@gulfaccess.net
Investments offered through Jefferson Pilot Securities Corporation-Concord, NH

MTC-00008124

From: Judy Sawyer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust suit
I feel this litigation has taken up valuable time and money and should have been over a long time ago.
Microsoft have been a wonderful intivator. I do not see any gain for anyone in pursuing this case 1 day further.
Judy Sawyer
Sawyer@wilmington.net

MTC-00008125

From: Nkozimor@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:56pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
I want to commend our government on finally putting this settlement behind us! I thing that Judge Jackson was way out of line with his decisions and I applaud the new judge who is showing some semblance of common sense!
Nick Kozimor

Mansfield, Ohio

MTC-00008126

From: DBC1998@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:56pm
Subject: msft settlement
I think this settlement is fair & i congratulate doj for it.

MTC-00008127

From: Richard Beckert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:56pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
Hi, I am writting to express my support for the Microsoft antitrust settlement. I believe it is in the public interest, it addresses the monopoly maintenance charge upheld by the appellate court and it is fair and reasonable. While addressing the anti-competitive behavior, the settlement still allows Microsoft to innovate and compete with other companies.

In these tough economic times, this is one uncertainty that can be put behind us. Imposing tougher restrictions on Microsoft could cost more jobs and cause more uncertainty in the high tech industry. I believe this settlement is in the best interest of the consumers and the public. I only wish that all States could have been on board as oppose to holding out for their own self centered political gain!!
Sincerely,
Richard D. Beckert
11620 127th. Ave. N.E.
Lake Stevens, WA 98258
(360)653-5464

MTC-00008128

From: Normakorn@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:57pm
Subject: Microsoft
I would hope that Microsoft be allowed to pursue their efforts in developing cyberspace. They have done so much, and success should not deter them from marching forward in their plans to better this computer age.
Sincerely,
normakorn@aol.com Norma Korn

MTC-00008129

From: Charles A Schuster
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:58pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

MTC-00008130

From: JTDDDS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:58pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sir:

I am writing to encourage the that all litigating states be required to accept the DOJ settlement with Microsoft.
This case has drug on entirely too long and now is only hurting the economy. The states who are not accepting the settlement are politically motivated by Microsoft competitors in their respective states and are not considering the national interest.
Sincerely,
John T. Darling, DDS

MTC-00008131

From: BETH KEMMER
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:58pm
Subject: settlement
We should leave them alone!

MTC-00008132

From: Clyde Serda, CC
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Setteltment
Why is the government ordering Microsoft to do just what they sued them for? Giving away software with each computer or giving away software to public schools. I still leaves out the consumer who purchased the software. if you can't get it right just drop it....Clyde Serda

MTC-00008133

From: Reve Carberry
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To The Department of Justice,
I believe it is in the interest of the public and the economy for the case against Microsoft to be settled as proposed in the agreement crafted with Microsoft by the federal government and nine states.
Reve Carberry
Reve@CarberryGroup.com www.carberrygroup.com
914-277-1103

MTC-00008134

From: Douglas Hale
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
I think your judgment was fair and just for all!

MTC-00008135

From: LEJ254@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:04pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTELMENT
THE STATES AND THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT SHOULD GET OFF MICROSOFTS BACK AND GET BACK TO GETTING THE ECONOMY BACK ON TRACK. THE STATES SAY THEY ARE DOING IT FOR THE CONSUMER,WELL I AM A CONSUMER AND I DON'T THINK THAT MICROSOFT HAS DONE ANYONE HARM. THEY ARE TRYING TO GET THE BEST PRODUCT TO THE PUBLIC BUT THE GOVERNMENT AND THE STATES WANT TO TIE THEIR HANDS.
SETTLE THE CASE AND LET GET ON WITH BUSINESS.
L. E. JACOBS,....CONSUMER

MTC-00008136

From: Jim Greene
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
<bold>It's time to settle this case and move on to something more important !</bold>

MTC-00008137

From: Elizabeth Grandy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:08pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

January 3, 2001

I think it is about time this ridiculous lawsuit against Microsoft is settled once and for all. As far as the public is concerned Microsoft did not do anything detrimental to the public. The crybaby companies that cannot compete are just trying to get money from the best software company ever built. Companies like Microsoft should be free to make their product anyway they see fit. If the public want to buy the product they will and if not they won't. The only reason Microsoft has a monopoly is because they are the best and everyone wants their products (including the US Government!). This whole suit should have just been thrown out of court instead of costing Microsoft thousands of dollars in attorney fees and court cost and the taxpayer also. Please settle this with as little harm to Microsoft as possible. The suing states and companies should be the ones paying not Microsoft!

Sincerely,

Gary and Elizabeth Grandy

MTC-00008138

From: John Carey

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:10pm

Subject: Microsof Settlement

John L. & Patricia A. Carey
4072 Peshurst Park, Sarasota, FL 34235
941-378-8666 careysrq@home.com
January 3, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

This letter concerns the settlement that was reached earlier this fall in the Microsoft case. We think that it was a mistake for the case to have been brought about in the first place and, at this point, the settlement should be accepted, and the matter put to rest. No company should be penalized for creative thinking.

This settlement punishes Microsoft more than enough. Microsoft will be forced to disclose information about the internal working of Windows, making it easier for computer companies to remove Microsoft programs and install similar programs from other software vendors. Microsoft will also be forced to streamline Windows so that other programs will run as well as their own in the operating system.

Additionally, Microsoft will be obligated not to seek retribution on any of the firms that originally sued it.

Finally, Microsoft will submit to oversight by a government committee to ensure that it complies with the terms of the settlement.

Microsoft has agreed to all of these terms in order to shift its resources away from legal strategy. We hope that the settlement will be swiftly finalized and implemented.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

John & Pat Carey

MTC-00008139

From: NIK9@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:12pm

Subject: MICROSOFT LAWSUIT

To Whom it may concern:

I believe it is wrong for the government to attack private business. I also believe the Microsoft finding in mar/Apr of 2000 is directly responsible for the recession we are in now.

Please quit pursuing this company. They have done nothing but be a great company, responsible for untold jobs in this country.

Very Truly Yours

Greg Loomer

MTC-00008140

From: Edwin(038)phyllis Evans

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:17pm

Subject: microsoft settlement

I think the government and microsoft should accept the terms of the settlement. if microsoft is indeed a monopoly , we need more like it. where else can i get a product that me and my family enjoy and use at work and home every day, that last for years, and costs less than a hundred dollars.

edwin evans

631 ne washington

lewistown,mt 59457

MTC-00008141

From: Mike Springer

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:12pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Honorable Sirs:

I have been an independent systems consultant for the last 20 + years. I have seen IBM screw its customers with predatory activities and with providing Products did not work very well at all. Yet they were left unscathed.

Now you have an entrepreneurial company, Microsoft, that has attempted to make A product that is easy for the relatively unsophisticated end user that will provide him with all the tools to use his computer effectively. (That's more than IBM ever thought of).

Yet, for their ability to meet the market effectively, you have persecuted them in the name of the people. Your track record is less than stellar in protecting the people. Would you like to revisit MCI and ATT. The courts broke up ATT and now we have very little logic In our phone systems. I can call someone from a pay phone and pay $7 or $8 for a two minute call.

That is working in the best interests of the consumer? I suggest NOT. Of should we talk about the tobacco settlement fiasco? Ask the people in your office over 50 years of age what the slang was for cigarettes. May be we called them ?cancer sticks? or even ?coffin nails?!

That was over 50 years ago when I was a teenager. I knew they were deadly then. Let Microsoft due what they can to make end user use of computers more effective. Ultimately, That will benefit our society more than a bunch of restrictions and penalties will. Just get the government out of this mess without spending a ton more in our tax dollars. It would be far more beneficial for our tax dollars to go for paying our military, or replenishing our arms inventory.

Respectfully,

Michael Springer

630-202-2921

1800 East Denison Road

Naperville, Illinois 60565

MTC-00008142

From: dinshah

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:13pm

Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear Sir,

As the Federal Government and the state governments except nine states have agreed the settlement, the case should be decided on this settlement basis. To me it is not prudent to waste our resources at the time of the severe recession in US economy and World economy with unstable political climate.

Thank You,

Dinesh Shah

MTC-00008143

From: john tabar

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:14pm

MTC-00008144

From: Bill Wallace

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:18pm

Subject: Microsoft

Please drop all of the lawsuits against Microsoft immediately. This has all been a bogus witchhunt from the start. Let us get on with trying to make money instead of spending time and money defending lawsuits that are already totally outdated by the speed of progress in the technology business.

Bill Wallace

Box 10354 Midland, Tx 79702

MTC-00008145

From: Thomas W. Culbertson

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:15pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I want doj to leave Microsoft alone.

MTC-00008146

From: larry schaffel

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:18pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a proud American and Microsoft shareholder of long standing, I am highly distressed by the continuing effort by a small, self-interested group of companies—of which, incidentally, I am also a shareholder, to continue harassing the efforts of Microsoft to continue innovating and providing a great service to the public and the economy as well as its shareholders. I urge those responsible to accept the recent settlement reached with the justice department and many states so that we can get the economy and technology industry back into a growth mode in 2002.

MTC-00008147

From: Irv Alpert

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:20pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

To quote Mark Da Cunha, is Microsoft a "predator" as the Department of Justice insinuates? A predator is someone like Adolph Hitler who kills people in concentration camps, or a member of the mafia who hunts down a neighborhood businessman for not obeying his wishes. A predator is someone who initiates the use of physical force. Microsoft has pointed a gun at no one. Clearly, a far stronger case for predatory acts can be made against the Department of Justice—who seeks to violate Microsoft's rights by taking control over its property—than for the make-believe "predatory" acts Microsoft is accused of.

Is Microsoft a "monopoly"? Not in the proper, derogatory, traditional sense of the term. Unlike the old AT&T Bell monopoly, or today's U.S. Post Office monopoly, Microsoft did not gain its market share by having the government outlaw its competitors: Microsoft earned its position in the free-market. All real monopolies are the result of the government giving a business a "monopoly"—exclusive control of a given market by outlawing the entry of competitors. Free competition is not some Marxist, egalitarian, "perfect" ideal where all competitors end up with an equal market share of a given industry. Whether in sports, or in business, the whole point of competition is to beat your competitors—even to the point of having them going out of business. Bigness should not be confused with monopolistic; size is not a criterion of wrongdoing; success is not a crime.

Did Microsoft halt "innovation"? Innovation is the process of discovering a better way to do things. No private business can stop other companies from innovating except by out-innovating them, or by buying them out (in the which case the buyer would want the acquired company to innovate even more). The only way to halt innovation is by the threat of physical force, which is a legal power that only governments possess.

Did Microsoft "twist the arms" of its competitors? This sloppy metaphor is a vicious lie. Only the government has the legal power to twist—and even break—arms. The only "twisting" Microsoft engaged in was the legitimate practice of setting the terms of sale for its property. By what stretch of the imagination, does the Department of Justice conflate "arm-twisting" with Microsoft's refusal to license its products to vendors who do not accept its terms? This is not coercion because if a vendor refuses Microsoft's offer and walks away (and he is free to), the vendor will be no worse off than if he did not deal with Microsoft in the first place. For a real example of "arm-twisting" see what happens when you refuse to hand over half your income to the IRS next April.

Did Microsoft "hurt" competitors like Netscape by giving away a free Internet browser with its Windows operating system (when Netscape wanted to charge you $30)? No more so, than when McDonald's bundles its meat patties with a McDonald's bun does it hurt all the bread makers. Such actions may frustrate their competitors wishes, but their rights are left untouched.

Did Microsoft violate the rules of competition? It is the application of the political principle of individual rights to the economic realm of production and trade that gives rise to the rules of free-competition. To determine whether Microsoft violated the rules of competition; therefore, one has to determine whether Microsoft violated anyone's rights. Clearly, Microsoft did not violate the rights (life, liberty, and property) of anyone.

Yet, in the name of "protecting" competition, it is these inalienable rights that the antitrust process ignores in favor of such subjective considerations as the "public interest" (which fails to include the interests of the millions of members of the public who do not side with the Department of Justice), the "consumer interest" (which the Department of Justice has awarded itself the title of official spokesperson for), and "relevant markets" (the government defines the relevant market small enough so that Microsoft becomes a monopoly, even though Microsoft comprises less than 4% of the computer industry). Such "protection" is tantamount to helping a man to see by thrusting burning coals into his eyes.

By allowing judges to sidestep the issue of rights in favor of considerations, such as the "public interest," the antitrust laws effectively grant government the power to violate Microsoft's rights, i.e. the power to take over and control Microsoft's property against use it against Microsoft's interests. Thanks to the antitrust laws once a judge has arbitrarily classified a business as a "monopoly", the government is given free rein to: plunder of vast sums of money from Microsoft's bank account (through triple fines for so-called "damages"); replace Bill Gates with a government "overseer" who will make the important strategic decisions at Microsoft; force Microsoft to advertise and distribute its competitor's products; compel Microsoft to give up its "trade secrets" and intellectual property to those who condemn it.

From start to finish the entire antitrust process is no more than a process of sacrificing successful American businesses—such as Microsoft, ALCOA, US Steel, Standard Oil—on the guillotine of egalitarianism to appease envious competitors. Or, to quote Alan Greenspan, who upon a complete examination of the theory and history of the antitrust laws wrote that ". . . the effective purpose, the hidden intent, and the actual practice of the antitrust laws in the United States have led to the condemnation of the productive and efficient members of our society because they are productive and efficient."

The truth of the matter is that Microsoft is not the predator; Microsoft is the victim. The real predators are the bureaucrats in the Department of Justice when acting according to the antitrust laws, second-rate competitors-like Sun, Novell, and Netscape—who seek to profit from the government's actions (what do they think will happen when the government under the antitrust laws deems them "too successful" in their "relevant market"?), and the anti-capitalist intellectuals who support them. Businessmen like Bill Gates are the one group of minorities that best symbolize the American way of life: that of a free, moral, rational, capitalist society.

Irv
Irvine Alpert
Founder, OnviaGuides
Executive Vice President
Onvia, Inc. (www.onvia.com)

1260 Mercer Street
Seattle, WA 98109
(206) 373-9541 direct
(206) 890-9471 mobile
ialpert@onvia.com

MTC-00008148

From: Old3putter@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:19pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Only the public will be hurt by imposing harsh penalties on Microsoft. Microsoft has enabled users (individuals) to get the most out of their computers. The various states Attorney Generals are not thinking of computer users. Microsoft developed the software should not be penalized. It is a proprietary. Any other software manufacturer had this opportunity and, they still have the opportunities, to develop their own software. Hurting Microsoft will certainly not be in the best interests of the individual users.

MTC-00008149

From: raymondw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:21pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Department of Justice,

Please do all you can to settle the Microsoft settlement as quickly as possible. In these trouble times we need to do what we can to move forward, and not tie up our resources in court battles. For the records, I do own Microsoft stock, but I use an Apple computer. Thanks Raymond Wolf

MTC-00008150

From: Troceen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:22pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the Microsoft settlement, and support this action being completed expeditiously.

Dan Troceen

MTC-00008151

From: Augenstein, Rob
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 1:28pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have been following the anti-trust case against Microsoft for almost four years now and believe that Microsoft did nothing wrong. The bottom line is that consumers were not harmed. As a user of Microsoft products, and previously of Netscape Navigator, I actually benefited. When I was using Navigator, Netscape improved and expanded the product due to the competitive pressure from Microsoft. To make a switch in Internet browser compelling, Microsoft had to make their own improvements. Now that I've switched to Microsoft, I wouldn't go back to Netscape. What no one involved in this case seems to see is that people like me benefited because we had choices and the products available to us were improving at a rapid pace.

It is not necessarily a bad thing if a company has monopoly power and then tries to use it. It is most certainly a good thing in fact if a broad base of consumers will benefit. Unfortunately, Judge Jackson did not see that people like me benefited from Microsoft's actions. In fact, I have actually been harmed since the ruling by Judge Jackson. With Microsoft on the defensive, the pace at which significant new products have come to market has been slow. I think the browser was the latest new product genre—and that was 5 years ago. So I haven't had as much new software to play with as I did before. More importantly, the ruling initiated a long slide in the stock market that still continues. Since my investments in the stock market have declined in value, I have not made further investments in things for my family like a new car, house or computer. And since I believe that I am not the only one who has had this happen, I attribute our country's economic slowdown to the ruling by Judge Jackson against Microsoft.

I am interested in seeing the economy get back off the ground and firmly believe that letting Microsoft pursue its free enterprise strategy of innovating with new products is in our country's economic interests, both domestically and internationally. I am hoping you will see things similarly and will move aggressively to stop the legal challenges aimed at Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Rob Augenstein, CPA
Lighthouse Group <http://www.lighthousegroup.com>
<<http://www.lighthousegroup.com/>>
800.385.2511
770.512.8990, extension 1015
770.512.8991 fax

MTC-00008152

From: Blake Buzzzini
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing to express strong support for the proposed settlement between Microsoft and the Department of Justice. The proposed settlement is reasonable and fair and addresses the issues found by the Court of Appeals. I also urge you to dismiss the vocal minority of Microsoft competitors who seek to hobble the company permanently.

MTC-00008153

From: James Buzzanco
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough! Microsoft is one of us. Bill Gates is not Osama Bin Laden! Microsoft is the philanthropic industrialist of our time. Our Country and world is better off because of it. Microsoft is the Einstein of our time. Enough already. Let's get on with life and progress in the United States as it should be. Don't stifle the progress of American Citizens. Microsoft is not just one of us, it is us. Enough!

Sincerely,
James P Buzzanco

MTC-00008154

From: Bill Williams
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This country was built upon the ability to spend time and effort to invent and develop new products and ideas. If this is not the case, we would not have patents, copyrights, etc. I believe we have provided enough time, effort and lawyers salaries, in developing the present settlement. This can drag out forever, as the breakup of Bell Telephone did in the last century. We do not need to duplicate that mistake in this century.

Bill Williams

MTC-00008155

From: LJ Sweet
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:25pm
Subject: Microsoft

Mircorsoft made the computer work for the common person at a price we could afford they should not be punished for this "Stop the political blackmail" LJSweet Taxpayer

MTC-00008156

From: LJSJD19012@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Litigation

Doesn't the govt. have enough to do to protect the air travelling public and its office workers from airplanes used as bombs than frustrate one of the most dynamic companies in the world?? It appears to be a question of mixed priorities. The politicians grandstand at the public expense to ensure their own continuity. All that posturing on C-span is ludicrous.

MTC-00008157

From: Ooott@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:27pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I am in favor of the settlement agreement reached in the Microsoft lawsuit. Please allow free enterprise to continue. No further litigation should be pursued.

thank you.sharon doyle las palmas way sarasota, florida

MTC-00008158

From: nateandsandra
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We believe that it is definitely in the best interest of the consumer for the case to be settled. We also feel that Microsoft has more than demonstrated a reasonable attitude and made every effort to settle this case, in the consumer's best interest. We are very tired of hearing all the complaints from Microsoft competitors and their special interest groups and in-turn the Attorney Generals from some states that seem to feel that it is their job to side with Microsoft competitors. We feel that the Microsoft competitors have the same opportunity in the USA as all businesses. They need to work a little harder, hire bright, and innovative employees and stop whining all the time.

Let's get on with getting the economy back on track. Stop punishing companies for hard work, brains, and innovation.

Thank you,
Nate and Sandra Ribelin

MTC-00008159

From: ALTRU1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:28pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

DEAR SIR,

CAN THE NATION AFFORD TO "FIDDLE WHILE ROME BURNS" IN THE MICROSOFT CASE? SURE, COMPETITORS SHOULD GET A SHOT AT THE BRASS RING, BUT SHOULD GOVERNMENT BE CHOOSING WINNERS AND LOSERS AS TELECOMMUNICATIONS EVOLVE?

THE RACE TO THE NEXT LEVEL WILL BE "TEMPORARILY" HELD BY THE COMPANY OR INDIVIDUAL WITH THE MOST AGGRESSIVE MARKETING METHODS AND THE MOST INNOVATIVE PRODUCT, AND THAT POSITION WILL BE HELD SECURELY ONLY AS LONG AS IT APPEALS TO CONSUMERS POCKET BOOKS AND COMMON SENSE.

MICROSOFT WENT ONE STEP FURTHER. THE FOUNDERS OF MICROSOFT IDENTIFIED THE ONE THING MISSING FROM EARLY PERSONAL COMPUTERS. A "STANDARD OPERATING SYSTEM" THAT COULD BE USED AS A PLATFORM FOR FUTURE GROWTH WAS A "MUST HAVE" ITEM. MICROSOFT EXPLOITED THE IDEA OF A STANDARD OPERATING SYSTEM. EVOLUTION AND ADDITIONS WOULD APPEAL TO CONSUMERS WHO WANTED A COMPUTER TO DO THINGS FOR THEM EASIER THAN THE WAY THEY DID THE TASK AT PRESENT. THUS, THE MASS APPEAL FOR THE PC WAS CREATED, ALONG WITH AN ENTIRE INDUSTRY TO SERVE THE DEMAND FOR MORE AND MORE FEATURES AND FASTER AND FASTER SPEEDS.

A WHOLE INDUSTRY DEPENDS ON THE STANDARDS. CONSUMERS SIGHED WITH RELIEF! AT LAST THE COMPUTER COULD BE UPGRADED EASILY. ACTUAL WORK COULD BE DONE. HOW MARVELOUS! MICROSOFT RESPONDED TO THE DEMAND BY LOOKING THE OTHER WAY WHEN BOOTLEG COPIES WERE ADDED TO OTHER MACHINES. CREATING A STANDARD WAS THE KEY TO FUTURE SUCCESS. LET THE BOOTLEGGING CONTINUE. ALONG THE WAY MORE FEATURES WERE ADDED AS PART OF THE PACKAGE (BUNDLING), AND CONSUMERS LOVED IT. WALMART DOES THE SAME THING AND CONSUMERS LOVE IT!

WHY DO THEY LOVE IT? SIMPLE, IT'S CHEAPER!! MARKETS WORK THAT WAY. SO WHY MUCK IT UP?

MTC-00008160

From: Sue Shannon-Biddiscombe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:29pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I want to see this case settled immediately and with as little disruption to Microsoft as possible. Microsoft has not taken advantage of consumers; on the contrary, Microsoft has always provided the best products and progressively lower prices. Frankly, if I turn on a computer and do not see the Microsoft logo, I will be very concerned about what I am getting myself into. It only makes sense to have a standard software so computers can communicate. The last thing this country (and World) needs is several different platforms. Deregulation is not working to consumer advantage in telecommunications or utilities. Sometimes it makes sense to have uniform service.

Sincerely,

MTC-00008161

From: jryan@nmsu.edu@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

—I am a firm believer in free enterprise system. The government has a right to watch the adventures of large companies to insure our competitiveness. I do not want the government to take over the running of the system as a whole. We need companies that are adventures. The system of private entrepreneurship is the best for the United States. Ask any one in the government run venture.

Thank you

Jim Ryan.

James Ryan Email: jryan@nmsu.edu
New Mexico State Univ. Voice: 505-646-1641
Box 30001, MSC 3545 Fax: 505-646-1253
Las Cruces, NM 88003

MTC-00008162

From: Richard H. Miller
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello: I am a Microsoft user of many products. Specifically, WindowsXP, WindowsME, OfficeXP. I have been a Microsoft software user since I started using a PC—back in 1991.

I feel that my use of a computer has been greatly enhanced by the Microsoft Operating Systems and other compatible software. I think that it is competitively priced and think that my computing experience would be greatly LESSENE if there was not a company such as Microsoft that offered excellent functionality and compatibility.

The number of software offerings that DO NOT talk to each other (compatibility) would have seriously damaged the business workplace and greatly increased costs.

Microsoft, for all of its faults, which are few in comparison to other large companies—provides Industry Standards so critical to anyone using a PC.

I would like to know what remedies AOL is under in not making their Email and Instant messaging software compatible with the majority of the industry? AOL clearly has the market share in the Online Subscriber area—Where are the “government encouragements” for AOL to join in an industry standard?

The tremendous cost of litigation for Microsoft, The Federal Government, The States should indicate that it is time to close this chapter soon. It is hard to see how the consumer has been harmed by the invention of integrated WORKING software that is very competently supported (technically).

Lets get on with productive endeavors—the introduction of new products and the encouragement of innovation and not hamper one of the most successful and profitable AMERICAN companies.

Thank you

MTC-00008163

From: Richard A. Arrett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:33pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a patent attorney and a Microsoft product user. I am glad that the Federal Government finally settled with Microsoft. I think that the settlement should go through and we should let Microsoft get back to improving their products and making the competition improve theirs.

Richard A. Arrett, Esq.
Vidas, Arrett & Steinkraus, P.A.
6109 Blue Circle Drive
Suite 2000
Minnetonka, MN 55343⁹¹⁸⁵ USA
Phone: (952) 563-3000 Facsimile: (952) 563³⁰⁰¹ E-Mail:
rarratt@vaslaw.com

MTC-00008164

From: avenger999@earthlink.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:32pm
Subject: On Microsoft.

Attn: USDOJ

As a taxpaying citizen I would like to say I'm disappointed that all this effort is being placed to investigate an honest company such as Microsoft. It has broken no laws. Microsoft's competitors are only upset that they have been beaten in the business market. They can't compete against Microsoft so now they want the US to control Microsoft in order to level the playing field. The playing field was already fair, and they lost.

Please allow Microsoft to continue running the company as it has done, without violating any laws, which ultimately benefits the people.

Don't allow this to continue.

Thank You,
Sam Torres

MTC-00008165

From: Brett and Angela Wharton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
DOJ representative,

I would like to voice my opinion as an “average consumer” concerning the antitrust settlement with Microsoft. I work in the computer industry developing new servers and PCs for a major computer manufacturer, and I have been using computers for over 12 years (ever since the days of 9600 baud modems and BBS's). Obviously I have seen a lot of changes over the years in our industry.

Having said that I will make my observations concerning Microsoft and the antitrust case. Microsoft has put out some great software over the years, but it is painfully obvious that their focus has shifted from designing great software for the industry to designing software that garners more money, power, and influence over the industry. I remember the days when the software industry flourished with creativity and unique ideas from many different companies. I was always excited about the newest titles and ideas that were being put forth year to year. Microsoft was at their best in this environment, and it would be unfair to say that they did not contribute to the boom of the PC industry around the world.

Unfortunately Microsoft's business practices have also done a severe injustice to both America and the computer industry at large: Their unchecked monopoly power has stifled the creativity and competitive environment that they thrived in. Their continued bundling of Microsoft only software is no longer helpful to the consumer, but in fact it serves to limit choice and crush competition before it even starts.

As an example, when CNET recently reviewed browsers on their website (www.cnet.com), they graded Opera, Netscape, and Internet Explorer on several fronts: ease of installation, feature set, usability, etc.. Internet Explorer won the comparison, but what is interesting is that CNET concluded that it was basically a tie except for 2 facets: Internet Explorer comes preloaded on PCs so the installation was therefore easiest and cleanest, and its integration with the OS made it much more stable. I say that is unfair. Microsoft's mantra is that “integration is innovation and is good for the consumer”. If that is the case, then why don't they integrate MS Office, since that is the most useful feature set for the user outside of the OS itself? I'll tell you why, because they would lose $300 per license on the Office Suite.

So why is it ok to integrate Internet Explorer, Messenger, Passport, Media Player? Because they have direct competition in these areas (i.e. Netscape, AOL Messenger-ICQ-Yahoo Messenger, and Real Media Player to name the obvious ones). Microsoft must not be allowed to use their OS platform monopoly to undercut their competition like that!

It is my strong opinion that Microsoft neither regrets, nor intends to change, their business tactics or their corporate behavior. It is also my opinion that the proposed settlement plays right into Microsoft's hand—that they will be able to skate around the words and ambiguities in the agreement to maintain their status quo, and therefore their monopoly. I am sad to see that the possibility exists that they will get off “scott free”. For what its worth, I think they should be held to the carpet and made to see the error of their practices. I propose Microsoft be required to do the following:

1) Offer a stripped down version of Windows at a much cheaper price, and allow OEM computer makers to bundle whatever they want with the OS at the Factory Level.

2) Be required to share APIs and protocols that a competitor would need to know in order to develop a stable competitive product. Microsoft should also not be allowed to “tweak” their OS in such a way that it “accidentally” breaks competing software titles.

3) They need to be publicly convicted of their behavior! Examples are VERY necessary, and if we don't punish Microsoft's behavior then other industry players will follow their “example” of success.

Do we really want that?

In conclusion, I respectfully ask that we please uphold the law and punish them for the violations that they have committed. Only then will creativity flourish again in our industry.

Thank you for your time,
Brett Wharton.

MTC-00008166

From: Sean Flynn
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:33pm
 Subject: United States v. Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern regarding the matter of United States v. Microsoft Settlement,

In general I believe the terms of the agreement are fair and just. It should be noted that NO other company in this industry provides the levels of access to source code and APIs as defined in this agreement. This includes the Java platform which unfairly has been described as a "community" of vendors. The Java platform is a significant competitor to Microsoft and is a proprietary implementation that falls under the sole discretion of Sun Microsystems in how it is used and by whom it is disclosed to.

Two significant factors should be examined when considering the fairness of this agreement: the merits of the original case made to the courts and the current climate of competitiveness. On the first point the main case against Microsoft was concerning the anticompetitive actions against Netscape. Upon examining the history of Netscape one can easily see that it was purchased by a significant competitor of Microsoft, AOL, and then purposely dismantled the company to prevent it from effectively competing. It should be noted that Netscape, after the purchase by AOL, did not release a major version of their browser until just a few months ago after the Microsoft verdict was overturned on appeal. Obviously it was in AOL's best interest to show that Netscape was harmed by Microsoft so they purposely prevent the product from moving forward. On the second point the computer operating systems marketplace is extremely competitive. Depending on how you distort the figures you can make them say anything you want them to. The normal statistic quoted it that 95% of the operating systems run on Intel PC processors is Microsoft. If you broaden this to say what operating system do most end users interact with: IBM mainframe OS's. If you look at what operating system most transactions are processed on: IBM mainframe OS's. If you look at what most Internet sites and applications run on: UNIX. When you look at the whole computer field you can easily see that the it is a very competitive environment.

Thank you for considering my comments.
 Sincerely,
 Sean Flynn

MTC-00008167

From: Earl Helbig
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:36pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

With all the important matters facing our nation, it is time we act on a Microsoft settlement that favors innovation and protects competition. Dragging out this settlement is not in the national interest. Let us have closure at once.

Sincerely,
 Earl G. and Ruth E. Helbig

MTC-00008168

From: PEDAMNER@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:35pm
 Subject: microsoft

the agreement between microsoft and the doj should let stand. the country is in a rfecession now and perhaps the agreed settlement could helOp to allow everybody to get back to work and the doj to tackle more meaningful cases. i knows a lot of people and all with computers and i have never heard,not one, complain that windows software was too high. i don't know where that came from.

yours very truly,
 philip damner.

MTC-00008169

From: Paul F. Poelker
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:38pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The agreement reached between Microsoft, the nine states involved, and the Federal Government addressed in the Court of Appeals ruling should be ACCEPTED.

It is time to stop any further litigation in this case and finalize the above mentioned agreement.

Paul F. Poelker
 Dallas, TX

MTC-00008170

From: Linda Welshons
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:41pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please end this destructive and unjustified lawsuit now. Microsoft has done nothing to harm customers. They enjoy popularity because their products work and are inexpensive. Their competitors want to charge high prices and are fighting to protect them. This suit does not serve the American people. It is a waste of our tax dollars and it is destructive to the economy.

Linda Welshons

MTC-00008171

From: Valda Redfern
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:44pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

Sir,
 Microsoft has done nothing wrong. It has EARNED its "monopoly". Nobody has ever been forced to buy Microsoft products; every single one of Microsoft's millions of customers chose to buy them. You can get computers that don't come bundled with MS—I used to use them all the time in my work. If most people prefer computers that do come bundled with MS, that's because Microsoft offers them a value.

If the government of its own country, the freest in the world, continues to victimise it, what hope will Microsoft have in Europe?

Yours truly,
 Valda Redfern
 17 St Laurence Road
 Bradford on Avon UK BA15 1JQ

MTC-00008174

From: Espey, John
 To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:33pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I do not believe that ANY settlement against Microsoft is just. In fact, I believe if anything the US government owes reparations to Microsoft for the damage that was caused over the past year and a half. Bill Gates should be revered as our greatest man, not spit on and insulted at the behest of jealous and less wealthy billionaires (Larry Ellison, Steve Case, Scott McNealy, et al).

Thank you for your time and consideration
 John Espey

MTC-00008175

From: Matthew Ballin
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:45pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please defend the free market by not persecuting Microsoft for being more successful than its competitors. America has risen to greatness by leaving the talented and productive alone to do what they do best; an attack against Microsoft is an attack against our founding principles.

Regards,
 Matthew Ballin

MTC-00008176

From: Norm Thomas
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:46pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I write in support of the current settlement agreement between the US DOJ and Microsoft. Please defend it assiduously against further corrosion by the judge(s) and/or the remaining states attorneys general.

MTC-00008177

From: Auren Hoffman (BridgePath)
 To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/3/02 1:44pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Judge,
 Though I am a huge believer in free markets, I do not believe the Proposed Final Judgment (PFJ) is a the best solution. Microsoft is a wonderful company staffed by wonderful people, but they are guilty of some very grave anti-competitive violations. Moreover, the PFJ does not provide an effective enforcement mechanism for its remedies.

Best,
 Auren Hoffman CEO, BridgePath Corporation
 Auren Hoffman BridgePath
 <<http://www.bridgepath.com/>>
 463 Bryant Street, 2nd Floor, San Francisco, CA 94107
 dir: 415-946-6019

The BridgePath Exchange enables staffing firms to monetize unfilled job orders and unplaced candidates

CC:'microsoftcomments(a)doj.ca.gov'

MTC-00008178

From: John Arnold
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 1:49pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The attached article I wrote to illustrate my concern for the Microsoft suit. Please read it and include it in the record of the public comments.

Thanks

John E. Arnold

John E. Arnold

2521 SW Pepperwood Ct Topeka, KS

66614

Mr. Walter Mossberg WSJ via email: mossberg@wsj.com. Re: The Microsoft Case I read your column regularly and usually enjoy what you offer. I wrote this piece a bit ago on the Microsoft Case as my perspective. I'm moved to send it to you after your piece today on Microsoft costing consumers. I don't think so.

The U.S. Justice Department in its zeal to protect the anti-trust laws has destroyed about two trillion dollars worth of the nation's economy. It has done more damage than Castro, Saddam Hussein, global warming, and the last five hurricanes. Defenders of the Justice Department will say, "Yeah, right. Those stocks were over priced." Those need to recall that the Great Depression was caused, historians and economists uniquely agree, by the actions of the U.S. regulators misjudging their actions' impacts. The Justice Department is wrong and wrong-headed on the issue. Microsoft has, arguably more than any other firm, made the so-called New Economy, and brought unparalleled economic health to the country. Moreover it has made the use of the computer seamless.

Contrast Microsoft with the AT&T breakup. I had the joy of starting a new agency in 1986, just after the breakup of AT&T and the creation of all the entities necessary to get phone service. Where before that you called "the phone company" and ordered "phones and phone service and maintenance," afterwards you called the phone company and could get only local service. When you asked for long distance, they said you have to call someone else. Surprised, you asked who to call, who was out there? You were told, "I can't tell you that." When you asked about phones, you were told you had to go somewhere else. But again, they couldn't tell you where. Maintenance of the lines? Somewhere else.

So while before we had a seamless, wonderfully efficient phone system, all bundled together, afterwards we had to become knowledgeable about phones, knowledgeable about long distance, knowledgeable about maintenance of lines, knowledgeable about all the disparate pieces. It no longer was easy and quick. It will be worse with an unbundled Microsoft.

Think of the complexity if Microsoft had not bundled operating system with software with Internet connections. I had an early microcomputer. Not all the software was compatible with it. I had to become knowledgeable of arcane details I wasn't interested in learning, and this was a simple machine. I wanted to spend my time using the machine, as a productivity tool. As the PC has progressed and the seamlessness has progress—largely through Microsoft's efforts—I am more and more able to use my time the way I want—in applications. I don't want to have to go to one store for my computer, another for my operating system, another for my software—which may not work with other software—and another for the Internet connection.

That's a wrong-headed approach, a step backward from productivity. In fact, I think no judge, attorney, or justice working on the case should be allowed to do so unless they are the systems operator of the computer of their family or office, and routinely add software, software upgrades, and computer enhancements. No one who doesn't know firsthand the complexity of determining which component of the mix of hardware, middleware, and software is the incompatible one can say that forced unbundling is a good idea.

Incredibly, I heard Judge Jackson interviewed on NPR and he said he didn't know what kind of operating system his computer at home had. He said it wasn't a Mac. The interviewer was incredulous and so was I that the man we allowed to make the most critical judgment on the integrated operating system and the industry had so little knowledge.

In fact, most attorneys in my experience do not even do their own keyboarding. They rely on dictation or hand written legal pads. None who do business that way are sufficiently grounded in the technology to be involved in the case.

Many have written articles offering evidence that the Justice Department is on the wrong track. The evidence of pricing: a monopoly would have raised the prices, and the evidence is clear the prices of software and of operating systems and of computers have declined. That early computer I bought cost me $2,000. It had less power than today's Hewlett Packard calculator. Today we can buy a personal computer with power of a 1975 Cray machine (which the U.S. government prohibited from being sold to a foreign nation as an issue of national security) for less than $1,000, some less than $500. That's not the workings of a monopoly and the Justice Department and the Judge must not be seeing clearly as these impacts are relevant.

Byte editor Jerry Pournelle recounted the competitive wars and the bad business decisions made by the competitors of Microsoft, when they were strong and Microsoft was weak, allowing the Microsoft innovations to make inroads into markets others had sewn up, the better product beating out the inferior. That's what innovation and creativity in an atmosphere of freedom is supposed to do. Microsoft was inconsequential to IBM and to Apple and they didn't surpass either by monopoly tactics but by building products that served consumers. Pournelle pointed out several products that commanded the market and failed to take advantage of it, while Microsoft built a better one. VisiCalc was the spreadsheet lead (it was on the first computer I bought), then Lotus 1-2-3 had the lead and let it slip, and now Excel is dominant, as is Word, having innovated beyond Word Pro, WordStar, Wordperfect and others.

Attacking Microsoft for its successes as excesses of power is just plain factually wrong. And it's wrong-headed. I hope you find that of some use.

Sincerely,

John Arnold

MTC-00008179

From: OKUBOHB@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:49pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir:

It is about time that the federal government reached an agreement with Microsoft. American economy need to move forward, continued lawsuit against Microsoft is counterproductive to the economy.

Sincerely,

Hikaru Okubo, PE

MTC-00008180

From: HeleneTr@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:50pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Let's roll. Settle the Microsoft Court litigation. I agree with the law as stated in the Tunney Act.

Barbara Reinoehl

MTC-00008181

From: Beverlylsky@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:48pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Leave Microsoft Alone! Lets put our energies into creating not destroying. Lets get to work on helping everyone in the world get connected. There are universes of technology waiting to be discovered.

Beverly Sky

<http://www.beverlylsky.com>

MTC-00008182

From: Mildred Weiner

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:51pm

Subject: Netscape Litigation

Good Luck!

VTY MMW

MTC-00008183

From: John Ritchie

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:52pm

Subject: microsoft settlement

Microsoft got its start in inovation and is contionous in these veins to build a strong company. Why must costly and unnessary leagal actions persist, even after bush administration and federal government has endorsed the completion of this juducial wrangling. Please for the world, nation, states, company, and mostly for the high cost that consumers will pay stop this wastful investigation! This matter will only give money to a handful of lawyers and hope to further the careers of some prosicutors who hope to use this as a platform from which to aide their political ambitions. It has grown time to resolve and rebuild not wound and drive at the very heart of U.S. economic strienght, where market influence can and will over time reduce this to a non-issue. Please urge all states to have a hands off approach to this matter. In hopes that these comments can help you decide.

John B. Ritchie

Carlisle, MA. 01741

MTC-00008184

From: Jeff Hatfield

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 1:52pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Greetings,

I wish to express my view that the Microsoft Corporation is right and the U.S. government is wrong in its Antitrust case.

It is my opinion that the U.S. government should stop wasting my tax dollars to persecute Microsoft's alleged "Antitrust" violation. Antitrust is just a means for envious politicians to cut down successful businesses that supply the public with goods that are in popular demand. Antitrust is a throwback to a fabian socialistic era that sacrificed the demands of the consumers to the demands of the politicians. Any settlement terms are a compromise of the right to the wrong. That is if you believe that a free market is right... If I were Bill Gates, I would "settle" this case by offering to close down Microsoft, instead of prostrating myself to the incompetent.

Sincerely,
Jeff Hatfield
P.O. Box 2151
Windermere, Florida 34786

MTC-00008185

From: Quinn Woodworth
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:56pm
Subject: Micosoft Settlement

The anti-trust assault on Microsoft is immoral and anti-American. The government is attempting to punish Microsoft for the same moral values that have helped make America the beacon of the world: hard work, creativity, achievement. Unlike kings of the past and governments of the present, Microsoft has acquired its wealth—not by confiscation—but by production, by creating products that people want to buy. Politicians have been bought by Microsoft's competitions to bring suit against Microsoft. Since they are unable to compete fairly then they resort to gaining political pull. Then government pawns can cripple their opponent for them. That's what this anti-trust suit against Microsoft is all about. It has nothing to do with serving the public. If the government truly was interested in the public good, it would leave Microsoft alone and the government would stop interfering by "regulating" business. All the government does is cripple some business so their competitors can take over.

The anti-trust suit should be abolished. Microsoft should be left alone.
Quinn Woodworth

MTC-00008186

From: FitzS1801@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We are sick and tired of Senator Hatch and his Utah competitors of Microsoft make Microsoft and the government spend so much time on this issue. After all microsoft has done all the work to bring this computer business to so many millions of people around the world that to let these politicians keep this issue alive is a travesty. Only the nasty lawyers get anything out of it. And our government looks stupid!

Very truly yours,
Mr. Richard FitzSimmons

MTC-00008187

From: vince duschean
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:52pm
Subject: micrsoft settlement

To whom it may concern at the justice department. Please settle the suit you have with microsoft as you have outlined. The only advantage continuing this or other suits against Microsoft goes to other non-performers in the software business like SUN-Micro systems and Oracle who have not delivered and continue to blame others for their failures.

MTC-00008188

From: Munari@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:52pm
Subject: Settlement

I firmly believe that this whole Microsoft thing has gone on too long. Since the government and nine states have come to a settlement, I see no reason to drag this whole thing on.

Our country has bigger problems that trying to crucify one corporation. Let the government's decision stand and put this matter to rest.

Jo Ann Feikes
Las Vegas, NV

MTC-00008189

From: Dick Jensen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 12:13pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I am in agreement with the microsoft settlement. Let's not waste any more government money on this matter.

R.F.Jensen

MTC-00008190

From: Ricky Morris
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Speaking as a private citizen on the proposed Microsoft Settlement, I strongly support the DOJ's proposed settlement and urge all concerned to accept it as the final arbitration of the dispute in question.

Ricky Morris, MCSE Microsoft Small Business Server Support,
Las Colinas, TX
* 469-775-7290 (Direct Line)
Email: rickym@microsoft.com

MTC-00008191

From: Bruce Rogovin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:58pm
Subject: Microsoft

Dear Sir,

I am writing regarding the proposed settlement between Microsoft and The US Dept. Of Justice.

I find it totally unacceptable to not put Microsoft in a position where it is unable to pursue the immoral and unethical business practices that it has shown itself prone to. I read the findings of fact that were released by the judge months ago, and was dumbfounded that any company could get away with the actions that Microsoft took. Anyone involved with the case should reread these statements of fact that show Microsoft as a monopolistic predator with almost unlimited power. A viewing of the video taped depositions of Bill Gates would convince anyone of the 100% sleaze of Gates and Microsoft. They will do anything to increase their power if left unchecked.

Please take the appropriate measures to remedy the situation. Microsoft should be broken into smaller companies that do not have a death grip on the tech market. If this is too drastic, at least do something that makes a difference and restores competition.

Sincerely,
brogovin@fuse.net
Dr. Bruce Rogovin
8686 Winton Rd.
Cincinnati, Ohio 45231

MTC-00008192

From: PROWLON99@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:58pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, BILL GATES WAS ABLE TO PROVIDE A VERY USEFUL COMMUNICATIONS TOOL TO VERY LARGE NUMBERS OF PEOPLE WORLD WIDE. THE SAYING IS SOMEONE ELSE WOULD HAVE DONE IT, BUT WE HAVEN'T SEEN THAT HAPPEN IN PAST YEARS.

I'M VERY THANKFUL TO BILL. I'M NOT AN EXPERT ON THE COMPUTER BUT MANAGE TO GET AROUND WITH THE BASICS. THE COMPUTER HAS PROVIDED ME MANY HOURS OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAS A TOUGH TIME MANAGING ITS SELF, SO IT SHOULDN'T TAKE ON OTHER COMPANIES. ENOUGH TAXPAYERS' MONEY HAS BEEN SPENT ON THIS CASE MAKING ATTORNEYS SUPER RICH. HOW ABOUT WE FEED AND CLOTH THE POOR?

THANK YOU, DRUE

MTC-00008193

From: Otto Dieffenbach
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 1:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Seems about right. Now lets get on with the economy!

MTC-00008194

From: Melinda York
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:00pm

Settlement is good do it now. Enough time and money has been wasted on all this needless litigation. Imagine in the one country in the world where creativity and imagination can lead the way to tremendous development of new technology and creation of jobs for people, where the government is going after and murdering and stifling one of the largest and most successful companies of its kind. Leave Microsoft alone so it can continue to create jobs and new technology in the world and especially in the US where we need it now. Get off their back and let us recover this weak and sad economy. YOU the government are using my money for the wrong things.

Thank you.

MTC-00008196

From: David Berry
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:01pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

As a concerned citizen, I wish to use the public comment period regarding the Microsoft Settlement to comment as follows.

1/Discharge AOL Complaints: With reference to the 1995 case of AOL vs Microsoft regarding bundling of the MSN on-line service with Windows 95, AOL claimed that this bundling would make it difficult for AOL to succeed in the on-line market, and so it was anti-competitive. The case was overturned. Since 1995, AOL has achieved approximately 80% market share, and built profits that enabled them to acquire Netscape and Time-Warner (one of the largest mergers of all time). Therefore, it's clear that bundling MSN with Windows 95 was not anti-competitive.

AOL's role as an injured party in the current Microsoft case is disingenuous. In fact, history shows that after MSN was bundled with Windows 95, on-line services became more pervasive, companies like AOL boomed, and consumers obtained services more easily because connectivity infrastructure was included with Windows. The pervasive nature of this infrastructure in Windows made it possible for a generation to participate in the "internet revolution", which yielded significantly greater consumer benefits than the closed nature of (for example) AOL, MSN, and CompuServe, as these existed in 1995.

2/Discharge Netscape Complaints: I understand that the current case against Microsoft is based on a complaint that Netscape's browser market was damaged by the bundling of Internet Explorer with Windows, and that this was not in the public interest.

In fact, Netscape's browser (Navigator) was free (like Internet Explorer), so the business that may have been damaged was non-existent. If Netscape chose to base their market on a zero-price commodity, that's bad management on their part, not Microsoft's fault. AOL now bundles Netscape Navigator as part of their service, which is clearly in consumers' interests, just as the bundling of IE with Windows.

If such bundling had not taken place, it's believable that the "internet revolution" may have been delayed, as people would have been required to purchase separate pieces of software, and figure out significant technical complexities in order to go on line. Not having a browser in the internet age is like having a car without an engine - the Internet would be useless. Therefore, it's unthinkable that a software company with vision and leadership would NOT bundle a browser as a fundamental base technology. Obviously Microsoft's actions benefited consumers, and did not damage any then-existing revenue stream for other companies. On the contrary, Microsoft made a contribution to the entire US economy by helping to drive connectivity and Internet browsing as base functionality available to all consumers.

3/Discharge "Monopolistic behavior" complaints: In 1991 I worked for Chevron (oil company) and attended a forum for the top customers of the Lotus Corporation (spreadsheet software vendor). At the time, Microsoft Excel and Word had negligible share in a market dominated by Lotus 123 and WordPerfect, and Microsoft was trying to encourage all software vendors to produce applications with a graphical user interface (GUI), to make it easier for consumers to use their software.

At this 1991 forum, Mr Manzi, then Lotus CEO, gave a keynote speech in which he spent 45 minutes explaining why users did not need a GUI, and why Lotus would not have a Windows version of their spreadsheet. He was followed by Mr Peterson, then CEO of WordPerfect Corporation, who presented almost the same speech about why WordPerfect users did not need a GUI.

Obviously, both these companies were wrong about what their consumers required. The fact that Microsoft Excel and Word have replaced Lotus and WordPerfect as market leaders is a result of bad business management, and wrong strategic decisions by Microsoft's competitors. It is not due to monopolistic behavior, as Microsoft did not have a monopoly in spreadsheets or wordprocessors. The success of Excel and Word is because these are superior products, not because of behavior that makes Microsoft a threat to the public interest.

Conclusion: While it's true that Microsoft is an aggressive company, I cannot understand why their vision, commitment, and resulting success should be held against them. Windows has approximately 80% of the operating system market. Logically, this means that Windows should get credit for 80% of the success in making computers pervasive, and the resulting benefits to consumers and the US economy. The only entities that could benefit if the Microsoft Settlement is overturned are a small number of companies that compete with Microsoft. I am convinced that these companies have their own management to blame for any perceived lack of success, and in many cases (like AOL/Netscape), they are actually more successful as a result of Microsoft's market position.

Please resist the self interests of the companies that complain against Microsoft, and consider the enormous progress that has been made in consumer-oriented computing in the past few years while Microsoft has been providing vision, leadership, and superior software.

Dave Berry

MTC-00008197

From: Lynne Garvie
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:02pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I would like the Microsoft case to be settled and have no further litigation.

Thank you,
 Lynne Garvie

MTC-00008198

From: Albert Howard
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:01pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Madam/Sir:

I cannot accept without writing the settlement agreed to by the Department of Justice.

The usual expectation is that when a property crime is committed, the perpetrator is required to restore the ill-gotten gain. And, after that, the perpetrator is punished.

The proposed settlement does not begin to approach restoration of a competitive environment for computer operating systems. Nor for computer applications. The breakup of Microsoft looked like a reasonable start to me. While hardly the total punishment deserved, it certainly was the proper starting point.

I hope you will refuse to accept the DOJ agreement with Microsoft. We deserve better service from our system of justice.

Yours truly,
 Albert O. Howard

MTC-00008199

From: Mike Zyskowski
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:05pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the settlement proposed by Microsoft should be agreed to and accepted by the Federal Government.

Michael K. Zyskowski

MTC-00008200

From: Ron and Lucy Flenner
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:04pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We are sending you this e-mail to ask that the Justice Dept accept and approve of the settlement that has been made with Microsoft recently. We believe that the settlement is kinda tough, but fair and reasonable to all sides. To delay the instrumentation of this settlement would only serve to delay final justice.

Sincerley,
 Ron and Lucy Flenner
 Louisville, IL 62858

MTC-00008201

From: Jearl R. Waddell
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:07pm
 Subject: Microsoft

Please insure that the Microsoft settlement is carried out and not derailed. The settlement is good for the consumer and the country.

Thank You,
 Jearl R. Waddell
 115 Lauderdale Road
 Woodbury, NJ 08096

MTC-00008202

From: Sparky Sanford
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:03pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

After observing this case for four year, it's time to settle, and let America and Microsoft return to work. This case has gone on long enough. The proposed settlement properly restricts Microsoft's business practices without the extreme penalties being asked for by some.

Byrne Sanford
 Sammamish, Washington
 Sparky Sanford

PI
425 889-1615

MTC-00008203

From: Tempel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:10pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear Sirs,
Please accept the Microsoft settlement as is. My family believes that this is a tough but fair settlement. And any more delays to getting this behind us is going to be bad for our economy and bad for our belief in the fairness of our justice system!

Bob Tempel
Sherman, IL

MTC-00008204

From: web blank
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:11pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

"((hey associate top boxes))" "9job code; NO5rc-en)" "99hey pay per view channels cable net microsoft at&t time warner comcast puget sound technology microsoft what is the innovation I.D. code dismissed or ignored or brushed off it is mine govt)"
(((signed, RICHARD JOHN FRANK 1-4-2002)))

MTC-00008205

From: Lou F
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I feel that Microsoft has done everything right, he has worked on this project form many, many years, There should not have been any settlement on this company at all. As for how much, 1.00 US dollar should be more then enough. Leave this man alone, and let him bring us into the furture. That is all I have to say.

MTC-00008206

From: Jean Thompson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:14pm
Subject: Litigation, submitted 1-3-2002
To Whom It May Concern:

It is my belief from the information I have read That this has been going on too long. The freedom of progress has been slowed, and the publicity has been mostly adverse. It is time to close this matter and get on with regular daily business for the sake of promoting our economy. Microsoft is one of the most generous business firms in the world, and should be a promotion business to follow.

Sincerely submitted,
M. Jean Thompson,
2034 E. No Crescent,
Spokane, Wa 99207
The greatest of these is LOVE!

MTC-00008207

From: Susan Barba
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:14pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

This is to urge you to please settle the Microsoft case without further delay and litigation. As an American consumer, I believe the settlement is fair and is to the benefit of the American public. Thank you for your consideration of my request.

Sincerely,
Susan Elizabeth Barba

MTC-00008208

From: David Eckman
To: microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
Date: 1/3/02 2:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please submit the following comments to the Judge hearing this matter: I urge you NOT to approve the settlement terms with Microsoft that the federal government has negotiated. Following are several reasons and suggested order terms, based on my extensive use of personal computers in my law practice since 1983-84 and my knowledge of and experience with many operating systems and a wide variety of computer software, as well as in developing software:

I and millions of other OS/2 users have been damaged by Microsoft's illegal use of tying agreements and other illegal conduct to gain a monopoly and its retaliatory and predatory use of its monopoly power against OS/2 (and other operating systems). Based on my experience and knowledge of the industry, what I believe will punish Microsoft most effectively while also stimulating competition would be an order directing Microsoft as follows for at least 20 years:

(1) Require Microsoft to LICENSE AT NO COST to the licensee ALL CODE necessary (a) to allow all other operating systems to run 32-bit (and eventually higher level) programs written for Windows and every other operating system developed by Microsoft, and (b) to allow other developers' software to run as effectively under Windows and such other operating systems as Microsoft's own programs. That code should be made available to developers of operating system enhancements and plugins as well as the operating system developers themselves and should be made available as soon as it is being incorporated into any Microsoft product. The only limitation on such a requirement should be that the licensee be a U.S. citizen or company.

(2) Prohibit Microsoft from any arrangement by which its software would be included in new computers. Microsoft's past use of its monopoly power and its use of tying agreements and other illegal arrangements to discourage computer manufacturers from offering non-Microsoft operating systems and other software on their computers has seriously harmed competition, and those still willing to compete need many years without Microsoft's predatory conduct to catch up.

(3) Prohibit Microsoft from any alterations, modifications or additions to Java and other other open software except those approved and adopted by the consortiums developing the open software for everyone's use. Microsoft has used its monopoly power to write its own version of Java, which was offered by Sun as open software. There are presently sites that my version of Netscape cannot access because they use a Microsoft version of Java. Java developers have felt the stinging impact of Microsoft's illegal behavior. Its consequences in the future may be even more severe if the federal government's weak legal precedent is established.

With the order components set forth above, what Microsoft does with Explorer would be irrelevant since other operating systems could include other web browsers, yet all operating systems could run Windows (and other Microsoft operating system) programs, which has become the standard for most software being developed today because of Microsoft's past illegal conduct. Imposing the restrictions for a minimum of 20 years would allow other operating systems to strengthen and grow in usage to the point where software program developers would find it profitable to produce native versions of their software for such systems. The history of OS/2 shows that this would work:

While Windows was a 16-bit system and its 16-bit code was included in OS/2, sales and use of OS/2 grew, and native applications were being developed. But when Windows became a 32-bit program and Microsoft's 32-bit Windows code was not included in OS/2, OS/2's market position and its growing acceptance were seriously hurt. That was exacerbated by Microsoft's illegal tying and other agreements that kept manufacturers from including OS/2 on their new computers. While OS/2 has remained alive despite Microsoft's illegal conduct (because of OS/2's superiority as an operating system over everything Microsoft has produced thus far) it cannot return to marketing success without the ability to run applications that most users want. In fact, IBM has been forced to scale back further work on OS/2, and it has almost given up on it because of Microsoft's pressure on it and the difficulty of dealing with Microsoft's illegal use of its monopoly power. OS/2 could return to effective competition with licenses of Microsoft's operating system code, at no cost to IBM and/or those who might want to enhance the system if IBM chooses not to do it. Finally, I understand that Microsoft has violated with impunity consent decrees of the past. It should be ordered to pay a substantial fine. It should also be ordered to pay all costs of monitoring its compliance in the future. This should continue for at least 20 years.

IBM was severely punished over 20 years ago for its antitrust behavior. It then managed to behave in a responsible manner and has continued to do so. There is no reason why Microsoft should not be similarly punished now, so that it and Bill Gates can learn to behave as responsible corporate citizens. The economic consequences to Microsoft, however severe, would be entirely appropriate to its outrageous and illegal conduct. And I have no doubt that it could survive as a healthy company.

[J:] David Eckman
Law Offices of David W. Eckman daveide@eckman-law.com
http://www.eckman-law.com
3730 Kirby Dr., Suite 1200
Houston, Texas 77098-3927
713-661-2065

MTC-00008209

From: Frank Angrisano
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 2:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

As a Microsoft product user I want the Justice Department to accept the agreement that has been mutually agreed upon. The hold out states should be ignored, as they seem to have an ulterior motive for not agreeing with the present settlement. As a product user I have never felt that Microsoft has taken advantage of me or that I have paid an excessive price for any of their products.

Sincerely,
Frank Angrisano
78 Rancho Del Sol
Camino, CA. 95709
e-mail: franking@cwnet.com

MTC-00008210

From: H.Barr
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen:

I feel that the settlement process should go forward with haste. The public and Microsoft have paid a huge price to get to this point and to continue to waste taxpayer dollars is wrong. Microsoft has been an innovator in the tech industry for a long time and they should have the opportunity to continue to do so for the good of the country and its consumers. Please see that this reaches a conclusion soon

Sincerely,
Herbert A Barr
309 Willow Drive
Enterprise, Alabama 36330

MTC-00008211

From: IVLABONNE@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:21pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle this matter. We do not need any more litigation. This does NOT serve the public purpose of the anti-trust act.

Microsoft has been punished enough.....probably more than it should.
Irene M. LaBonne

MTC-00008212

From: Narendra Parekh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:22pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am IN FAVOR of the settlement that DOJ and states have reached on Microsoft issue.

Thanks!
- Narendra Parekh
- Amishi Parekh
- Saheli Parekh

Address: 5341 FORTE LANE, CONCORD, CA 94521

MTC-00008213

From: ford658
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Justices,
Is Microsoft a "monopoly"? Not in the proper, derogatory, traditional sense of the term. Unlike the old AT&T Bell monopoly, or today's U.S Post Office monopoly, Microsoft did not gain its market share by having the government outlaw its competitors: Microsoft earned its position in the free-market. I like all consumers vote with my pocketbook. Since Microsoft is the champion in innovation, products, and business acumen, I buy their products. I also avoid the products of those who seek the power of the government to compete.

The problem is not with Microsoft, it is with the anti-trust law—it should be rescinded.

Frederick Ford

MTC-00008214

From: avawter1
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Public Comment Attorneys
Department of Justice

As a member of the public using products in the field covered by the recent & lengthy litigation of this case, I urge you to finalize the settlement reached last year. It was evident that much hard work and "give" took place on both sides of the dispute and this is appreciated. It was also evident that this anti-trust case had a severe impact on the technological economy and on product innovation that affects consumers. Please, let's lift this burden with a swift conclusion to the matter in accord with the terms of the settlement.

Antoinette W. Vawter
Pismo Beach, CA

MTC-00008215

From: tom dobbin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs;

I would like to take this opportunity to encourage you to accept the settlement that is now before the courts. It seems to me that we as taxpayers and shareholders have suffered enough at the hands of those who want to return to the protection of the "buggy whip" industry. The antagonists in the Microsoft case are woefully out of touch with reality. In this age of technological advances which look more like a tidal wave, anyone who tries to hold to the status quo of yesteryear is dreaming. For the benefit of us all, let the proposed settlement go forward as written.

Thank you.
Sincerely,
Thomas D. Dobbin
422 Island View So.
Mattawa, WA 99349

MTC-00008216

From: Debbie Purdie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think it is high time the government (Feds and State) and Microsoft put an end to this case. We have learned over the years that when both sides are not happy with it, then it is probably as good a deal as one could ask for. We hear the complaints from both sides which tells us it really is time to put this thing to bed. We strongly urge the Justice Department to accept the settlement!!!!!!

I have informed my Senator that I am not in favor of anymore political posturing via hearings, and that the dissenting states

Attorney's General should stop the political barking (which is just to appease the big software and Internet companies that want to destroy their competitors). Competition is good for the computer industry and this settlement seems to assure fair and honest competition will take place.

Respectfully,
Scott and Debbie Purdie

PS We are stockholders of BOTH AOL and Microsoft and actually have a greater stake in AOL than Microsoft. We think AOL's lobbying against this settlement is little more than sour grapes (and we have communicated with them our feelings as expressed above).

— Debbie Purdie
— purdies@earthlink.net

MTC-00008217

From: Kurt Wiseman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that settlement in the DOJ case against Microsoft is in the best interest of the U.S. and the American people.

Sincerely,
Kurt Wiseman

MTC-00008218

From: jhministry
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think that the dept of Justice has done enough to Microsoft. It has made its case and levied its verdict.

It is time to move on. And allowing the other companies to continue to drag Microsoft down after your verdict has been given is a shame. Every business would love the opportunity to squash its competition to fill its own pocket and that is what you are allowing the other 9 states to do lead by the Microsoft competitors. When will it stop????????????????

Rev Johnie Hinson
109 Flinton Dr
Hampton, VA 23666

MTC-00008219

From: Jack (038) Dot O'Hara
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Our Comment on the subject ,as provided by the Tunney Act, is that the settlement is the best available result in a case that should never have been prosecuted by the U. S. DoJ or the Attorney Generals of the States involved, because there has been no damage to the purchasers or to the users of computers that were sold with Microsoft software installed. On the contrary, the public, the computer manufacturers and the economy of the nation were, and continue to be, greatly benefited by Microsoft products and marketing practices.

We have studied the bases advanced by the USDoJ and the States as justification for their prosecution and have found them to be wholly without merit. On the contrary, our study has convinced us that the prosecution was politically motivated and has resulted in a gross injustice to Microsoft and has done irreparable damage to the credibility and the reputation for trustworthiness of the Attorney Generals of the US and of the States concerned and of the Federal Judiciary.

Respectfully submitted

John A. O'Hara, Jr. and Dorothy M. O'Hara
81 Highpoint Lane
Chelan WA 98816

MTC-00008220

From: Jim
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I respectfully submit these comments and observations. I am a technologist who has been in this industry since 1985. I currently work for a brand building corporation that uses both Windows and Macintosh systems. In a prior career I worked for Ameritech (now SBC) for 30 years, five of which were in the IT organization.

I am writing this letter because I strongly believe the proposed settlement between the Department of Justice and Microsoft fails to achieve the necessary goals of a proper remedy: halting the illegal conduct, promoting competition in this industry, and depriving Microsoft of its illegal gains. It appears that Microsoft has again accomplished its objectives and will continue now on its campaign of total dominance of anything it chooses. I fail to understand why our US Justice representatives, would once again offer a simple slap on the wrist to a company that has ignored a similar punishment in the past. Clearly, this approach has not and will not work. Microsoft has so many ways to interpret this proposed agreement that it is a total waste of paper. Were they not convicted of being an illegal monopoly? Did they not destroy competition in as many ruthless and illegal ways as they desired? Will this agreement, increase competition? Is this agreement good for our future? I believe, along with many others, that the answer to all these questions is a resounding NO.

I strongly encourage you to persist in your efforts to vigorously bring this case to justice. A justice that will encourage competition and send a clear message to Microsoft and any others who operate outside the law. Microsoft's aggressive and illegal behavior should be curbed once and for all. I believe it is harmful to our future IT economy to allow this evil doer to continue in its illegal pursuits.

Respectfully submitted,
James R. Felbab
Technologist,
Hanson, Dodge Design
jfelbab@hanson-dodge.com

MTC-00008221

From: Catherine
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:34pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I think it is high time this come to an end. Dragging this (ridiculous) lawsuit on any further is helping no one. I wish I were more eloquent— but I just want to be heard that some of us are sick and tired of this and ready for it to come to an end. Personally, I think it should never have happened in the first place.

Catherine North
Federal Way, WA

MTC-00008222

From: SandybyC@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer of Microsoft products, and one who was supposed to have been "damaged" by the business practices of Microsoft, alleged by their competitors, I must tell you that this action has dragged on for much too long. It seems to me that the Settlement reached and agreed to by all parties should be the end of it. The economy cannot stand any more of the never-ending litigation which has been the real cause of damage to me as a consumer and stockholder of Microsoft.

Sandra L. Pratt
Carmel, CA

MTC-00008223

From: mark@wt6.usdoj.gov@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR, Michael.McLagan@Linux.Org@inetgw, joh...
Date: 1/3/02 2:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Government Anti Trust litigation has achieved 2 things to date.

1) Bringing the Linux and Open Source communities (as the only credible competition that Microsoft faces) to the attention of Venture capitalists, the stock market, etc too soon, resulting in the destruction of many good companies who were not ready for the ruinous competition from the rise of companies that had no business being in business... the ones that survived will be stronger, and new ones will spring up.. but that does not set aside that fact that this entire industry was set back a several years by capitalist greed out of control. From the very beginning I'd prefer that this case against Microsoft had never happened.... eventually the bully gets turned on by everyone else. The effectiveness and Return on Investment of Open Source technologies are so stunning that Microsoft has been looking for an effective way to battle it, discredit it, whatever works and this brings about the second point

2) Assuring Microsoft that they can beat anyone, and don't need to fear even the government, so now they are free to continue as they always have, with impunity. The many blatant lies they told in court make this clear. Why isn't this a good thing? Because it deprives real innovators of the fruits of their innovations, and as a result removes the incentive to people to keep our nation in the lead technologically. It also reinforces many people's worship of the ends despite the means being inappropriate, and this undercuts our entire society. Winning is not everything, it is just part of life. But isn't Microsoft an innovator? A marketing truism is that if you say something often enough and loud enough people will believe it. And people don't care enough to find the truth. For any innovation that Microsoft has made, it can also be shown who they busted in the chops to take it away from them, generally with strong arm tactics, and no thought of ethics. This goes all the way back to their original product, Microsoft Basic. They've left many a good company and organization shattered in their destructive wake. People break laws, not companies... and I think they should face penalties appropriate to their situations. That certainly has not happened in this case. The public interest is not served by encouraging mafia like tactics in the name of economic recovery, the very greed and business tactics that lead to the recession in the first place.

The next Einstein will probably be a kid from a third world country that had access to a cheap castoff PC, the source code for Linux, and the internet. With clubs formed by these kids, that country, and other countries that actually allow and encourage continued innovation, will then have a new technological revolution. It can only happen outside the sphere of Microsoft's control. Linux is only the beginning.. and companies that spring up around new technologies need the opportunity to succeed.

Microsoft has 2 strengths, and they have been there from the beginning. 1) Convincing sales, marketing & PR, and 2) a willingness to be totally ruthless and as unethical as they have to be to get what they want the way they want it. And then claim credit for it.

When have you seen someone who fights clean in the schoolyard beaten a dirty fighter? Only if they are much, much better trained, especially if smaller. Aren't trust, ethics and morals the fabric of our society, especially assumptions behind our legal system? So wouldn't the biggest winners be those actually able to get around the rules, above the law so to speak?

If ethics don't stand then our society falls into anarchy. How often have you heard "It's not personal, It's business" used as a justification? But don't people who act this way deprive themselves and their organizations of future benefits that might be gained from those whom they are cheating? Isn't this counter productive?

Most people won't believe this, but Microsoft not only has NOT invented the computer industry and the internet, but rather they hijacked it, and in the process actually slowed it down... and the slowdown continues. Now we are paying the price of what they have sown. As The founders of our great country knew, freedom requires responsibility, and when we abdicate responsibility in great enough numbers, we will also lose our freedom in time.

Microsoft is about making money, selling whatever they can push, always creating a new need, a new desire... remind you of anything? How about the drug pusher at the schoolyard? Ever wonder why computer people are called "users"? Think of it, an entire economy held hostage by one company and what Microsoft chooses to do or not do. Thinking that daily or hourly reboots are the way computers "are", and putting up with the unnecessary loss of productivity, the continual and often unneeded upgrades. Microsoft is not concerned beyond getting your money, and what they sell you being just "good enough" that they get to keep it that money. What is more, as Microsoft slowly takes over the internet, and everyone's computers, as they get everyone's data on their servers at MSN, or have access to it through hidden back doors concealed in proprietary source code on your system. These hidden doors could only be found by legions of programmers looking at the source. What do you mean that Microsoft wouldn't do this? Check your history, they have already been caught doing exactly this at least twice. What is next for this organization? Where will they stop? When will it get to the point that even the US government will not be able to face down this entity already capable of buying Nukes should they choose to do so?

There is a word in Russian "Pravda", and it is usually translated to english as "truth", but it in fact means not "truth", but rather "what best serves the state". Read Robert Heinlein's extensive essay on the subject ... This is how Microsoft defines truth as used in their various articles and whitepapers, not to mention what they say in their business dealings and the courtroom. This is an opponent the like of which the world has rarely seen, and never with as much terrible power and influence as is within their grasp within a very short time to come if the government does not act appropriately towards them now that the battle has been engaged. When will we all wake up?

Attached to this message is an earlier message I wrote regarding what I consider to be equitable remedies, and also a follow up message by Jon "maddog" Hall, Executive Director of Linux International, which has since been published.

Mark Bolzern
Mark@Bolzern.Org
<http://www.Bolzern.Org> Phone: 303-690-2806 Fax: 303-693-6064

MTC-00008224

From: skip@steuart.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have been told that this is where opinions on the Microsoft settlement should be sent. Please correct me if I am mistaken.

As I understand the current state of the Microsoft (MS) antitrust case, MS has been found guilty of abusing its monopoly position. The proposed settlement is that MS will be subject to government oversight for 5 to 7 years. As a 42 year old MIS veteran with Math and Computer Science degrees and over 15 years experience designing and managing computer systems for companies with up to 1,500 users I would like to offer a simple vision of what "conduct" the government should insist that MS follow.

MS has used its dominance of their Operating Systems (OS) to achieve dominance of the Applications that run on top of the OS. The object of the government oversight should be to break MS's lock on the link between the OS and the Applications. The only way to do this is to FORCE MS to publish the documented (and undocumented) Application Program Interfaces (APIs) in the OS necessary to load and run MS Windows Applications. MS will scream bloody murder, and try to spin this as un-American, but running an abusive monopoly is un-American too. Publishing ALL of the necessary APIs should enable other OS vendors to modify their OSs so that they can run industry standard Windows Applications (including Microsoft Office). I have emulated other OSs like Windows on top of OSs like Macintosh and UNIX. so I have seen it work to varying degrees. Unfortunately these emulated MS OSs have been problematic because they had to be reverse engineered without MS's support. Not only doesn't MS support OS emulation, they have been proven in court to sabotage these efforts (DRDOS). If the government FORCED MS to cooperate then the other OSs could be enhanced to run MS programs natively.

Compliance would be EASY to monitor. If MS were forced to release their OS APIs, then I predict a stampede in the LINUX world (and probably the UNIX and Mac world) to support the APIs in order to run native Windows Applications. The LINUX community already has a global and public means of development and review for projects, and I am sure that a Windows port would become a high priority multi-year project. LINUX should be used to verify compliance because it is the ONLY transparent OS allowing anybody in the world to view the source code of the OS. If MS complies then the LINUX world will be able to make a workable clone of the MS OS. This OS clone would run on top of LINUX and be able to run all MS Applications. If MS "forgets" to mention some of the APIs, the LINUX crowd with its global review system will identify what is missing. If a clone MS OS can be built and it runs MS Applications, then MS compliance will have been achieved. Microsoft Excel, Word, Media Player, Internet Explorer, and Power Point and any other MS Applications that the US government uses could be the applications used to verify compliance.

Even though MS would cry bloody murder, they shouldn't worry unless they are afraid that their OS is so weak that a LINUX based clone could outperform the MS OS. Either way the consumer benefits. If the MS OS is superior, then the consumer has two choices: buy the MS OS or use the slower but free LINUX clone. If the free LINUX version of the MS OS ends up being superior then the consumer is allowed to use a higher quality lower priced (free) product. Either way the MS monopoly on the OS and the abuses that have resulted from the monopoly will be fixed.

By eliminating MS's monopoly on the OS, I predict a new golden age in software development. There should be NO time limit on the publication of the APIs, as long as MS makes OSs they should be forced to publish the APIs.

Skip Steuart
Steuart Investment Company
Chevy Chase, Maryland
phone:301/951-2744

MTC-00008225

From: Bud Graham
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:38pm
Subject: Settlement

The Microsoft settlement proposed by the JUSstice Dept is a gfair and just dicsision for all parties Emewrson H graham

MTC-00008226

From: RCB1938@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:40pm
Subject: MS Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I really wish our US Government would accept decisions as they stand instead of dragging suits out years and years and millions and millions of dollars being wasted. A decision was reached.....let's get on with it! The Federal Government and 9 states agreed. Let Microsoft "pay" its reduced liability and let's get on with life! Having been a senior officer in a publically traded company for 20 years, I personally know that a company can't plan anything until it truly knows where it stands. Think of the inefficiencies not to mention the cost! When is our legal system going to get into the 21st Century and quit practicing "Guilty until proven innocent"!!!!!!!

Bob Burress.

MTC-00008227

From: AlirezaR@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement, 1/3/02

Thank you for the e-mail and providing me the info.

I believe we live in the "Free Enterprise Systems". My vote is for the Microsoft Executive, Bill Gate. I believe that the court should support Bill Gate and let him do the job to run the technology in our country.

Ali

MTC-00008228

From: Tom Lane
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:46pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
To: DOJ

The current ruling is in the best interest of the industry, consumer and our countries economy.

The on going objections originate from competitors who want the government to cripple Microsoft, there by giving them an unfair advantage over Microsoft. Please throw out the petitions filled against Microsoft.

Tom Lane

MTC-00008229

From: David Freitag
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 2:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The economy has suffered terribly from the overzealous pursuit of punitive damages against Microsoft which one of the main foundations of the USA economy. Please expedite the current agreement and do not allow expansion of the suit as sought by the states and competitors of Microsoft. The sooner this litigation is completed, the better.

This e-mail and attachments, if any, may contain confidential and/or proprietary information. Please be advised that the unauthorized use or disclosure of the information is strictly prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please notify the sender immediately by reply e-mail and delete all copies of this message and attachments. Thank you.

MTC-00008230

From: Westover, Michael (US-LIHI)
 To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/3/02 2:46pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello,
 I just wanted to let you know that I believe the proposed Microsoft Settlement is fair and it's time to stop all of the Microsoft bashing.

Michael D. Westover
 Liberty International, e-Commerce michael.westover@libertyinternational.com
 (617) 574-5765
 CC:'attorney.general(a)po.state.ct.us'

MTC-00008231

From: Bud Graham
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:47pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The microsoft settlement as submitted by the Justice Dept is fair and equitable for all Parties involved.

Submitted by Emerson H. Graham

MTC-00008232

From: TNSig@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:50pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

Leave Microsoft and Bill Gates alone. Their success is earned. Allow this settlement to take place.

MTC-00008233

From: Bob LeVitus
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:52pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Department of Justice,
 I've just read the news on the proposed one billion dollar settlement with Microsoft. As I understand the deal, this seems to me to be very much in favor of Microsoft. In addition to few to no changes to their behavior, a portion of the punishment is, in fact, a real benefit to them. The resolution including the dissemination of their software and compatible hardware, training to use their products, and loads of their often bundled software, seems to fly in the face of the very point of the trial.

They have been declared a monopoly for illegal tactics that were specifically meant to increase their market share, for bundling products for free to get market share, and for illegally blocking other's products to gain market share, and now, a good portion of the settlement specifically increases their market share of both the OS and their bundled products.

I believe this settlement should be declined. It does nothing to address their behavior and will not change it in the future, allowing them to continue to bilk the public.

Please don't let them get away with it.

Regards,
 Bob
 Bob LeVitus
 Writer and raconteur boblevitus@boblevitus.com
 http://www.boblevitus.com

MTC-00008234

From: m.martwick@att.net@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 2:53pm
 Subject: Microsoft Lawsuit Settlement
 To whom it my concern:

I am in complete support of the current settlement between Microsoft & the DOJ. I think to continue to pursue Microsoft and seek additional penalties will in the long term damage the American Computer Industry.

MTC-00008235

From: Jerry Blackwill
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:55pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I want to support the justice department in the terms of the Microsoft settlement. By taking this action, the justice department has put the US on a better economic footing.

Jerry Blackwill

MTC-00008236

From: FPCANDEGC@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:56pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please conclude your current agreement with Microsoft and ignore their competitors

Thank You
 Frank P.
 Cyrill Jr.

MTC-00008237

From: RWBurg@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:57pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I hope that the government soon stops this harrassment of Microsoft. I realize that Microsoft has a virtual monopoly on operating systems for the personal computers, but that seems to be a more reasonable approach than having to deal with multiple operating systems. If software developers had to write software for multiple operating systems, everything would become more complex and more expensive.

Sincerely yours,
 Richard W. Burg

MTC-00008238

From: Utemills@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 3:00pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Complete the Microsoft settlement NOW! It is time we put this matter behind us and allow Microsoft an opportunity to get back to running its business. Why should our own government keep trying to undermine this great American company? Leave Microsoft alone.

M. Mills
 1/03/02

MTC-00008239

From: toynymi
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 2:57pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the settlement proposed by the DOJ is fair and adequate, and I would like to see it accepted by the court. I believe the demands of the nine holdout states, including my own home state of Kansas, have greatly exceeded the scope of any remedies needed. As I understand it, antitrust settlements aren't supposed to rob the plaintiff of intellectual property, and two of the terms proposed by the holdouts do just that, namely the requirements that Microsoft provide source code for Internet Explorer and license Office for other operating systems.

I also object to the request that Microsoft provide a stripped-down version of Windows. I'm a retired software engineer with 30 years of experience, and I know this idea is just impractical. Features that the holdouts want removed work much more effectively if they are integrated into the operating system, not slapped on as an afterthought. It's analogous to air conditioning on an automobile; factory air always works better than an add-on unit. Smart customers would avoid the product, and customers who did buy it would regret it, so what's the point of forcing Microsoft to produce it? It also runs counter to industry trends; every modern operating system now includes these added features, and customers expect them. If Microsoft is burdened with this requirement, they should be allowed to affix a prominent label saying "This product was designed for you by the Attorneys General of Kansas, California, etc. ... Please forward all complaints to them."

I believe that the AGs of the holdout states only want to prolong the case for political reasons (to placate Microsoft's rivals) or for greed, hoping to somehow milk a windfall from Microsoft. I don't think they are the least bit interested in justice, only in benefiting themselves. Prolonging the case is holding back the high-tech industry, and therefore the entire economy. I request the court to accept the settlement as a fair one, move on, and help our country recuperate.

Thank you,
 Tony Miller
 316 Lawrence Avenue
 Lawrence, KS 66049
 785/331-4592
 toynymi@msn.com

MTC-00008240

From: JennetteWilson@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 3:02pm
 Subject: (no subject)
 SETTLE

MTC-00008241

From: Joseph F. Buchanan
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 3:00pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to express my dismay at the settlement concerning Microsoft Corporation. Because of Microsoft's tactics in forcing their products (Windows OS and Microsoft Internet Explorer, especially) and forcing out competition, we have to deal the problems that come with not having alternatives to their systems. I work at the University of Utah and deal with a lot of computer users. Because of the monopolistic actions of Microsoft, alternatives to their email systems are not common among our users. Microsoft Outlook, Windows OS and Internet Explorer form together a serious security threat that has caused much expense to our support systems. Because of their overwhelming market, they are slow to respond to the problems they cause and slow to address quality issues in their products. People have grown to accept what they provide, regardless of inferior quality, security problems or even cost.

I feel that the current settlement has let Microsoft off the hook and allows them to conduct business as usual. This should not be the case. Please seriously consider the states' petitions against Microsoft.

Thank you for your consideration,
Joseph F. Buchanan
(801) 566-1083
joseph.buchanan@utah.edu
Joseph F. Buchanan—
Internet: Joseph.Buchanan@utah.edu
University of Utah
http://www.cc.utah.edu/joseph/
TACC—Marriott Library—295 S. 1500 East
—(really ML2751C)
Salt Lake City, UT 84112-0860
— (801) 581-8814
X-Pgp-Url: http://www.cc.utah.edu/joseph/pgpkey

MTC-00008242

From: Aqualyst
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To the DOJ:

Although I may disagree with some of the ways in which the Microsoft Corporation conducts its business strategy, Microsoft is no more harmful to me than the US Post Office, the local cable TV company, or any other of a myriad of companies that, unlike Microsoft, are monopolies in the true sense of the word.

These companies are granted monopolies by government force, against which I have no recourse except to do without. Conversely, regarding Microsoft products, I can always cast my vote against them by purchasing other products. I can think of no area in which Microsoft actually holds a true monopoly; neither in operating systems nor in any other software currently in the marketplace. I can use an open-source operating system such as Linux on my PC, or I can purchase a computer from Apple that requires me to adjust to, and buy software compatible with, their proprietary operating system. I can use Netscape, and often do, to browse the Internet from my PC with Windows installed.

I can purchase excellent word processing software from Corel, instead of using Microsoft Word. I can even purchase a complete, integrated Office Suite without spending one cent on Microsoft products. The list goes on and on.

Here's what I can't do...

I can't subscribe to a competitive cable TV provider, who may offer better service at a lower price... I must use the one granted a monopoly in my neighborhood. I can't use a telephone company that may offer more value and trouble-free service in my neighborhood... I must use the government-granted monopoly in my calling area. I can't change my provider for electrical service... I must use the power company with a government-enforced monopoly in my area.

I'm sure you get my point here. The Department of Justice (if you're truly seeking justice) should be striving to eliminate all of the government-enforced monopolies in this country that do untold damage to the economy. If you question the damage that government intervention in the marketplace can cause, I would refer you to the situation in California regarding power generation. Microsoft has earned its market position. It deserves to hold its dominance over the competition because it continues to provide me with ever-improving software and hardware, which enriches my life and makes me individually more productive. The best thing the DOJ could do would be to repeal the Sherman Antitrust Act and get out of the marketplace. The term "laissez faire" is not just a cute phrase. It is a caveat, and a marketplace axiom, that the DOJ, and the rest of the government, should observe. There is not now, nor has there ever been, a justification for government manipulation of business. The marketplace will ultimately take care of itself through the profit motive. The Sherman Act, itself, is an atrocity which was enacted to resolve a situation caused by government intervention. One doesn't cure an illness by administering more of the poison which caused it.

Sincerely,
Robert E. Mehan 1151 Carrollton Ave.
Metairie, LA 70005

MTC-00008243

From: Joan Clarke
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
I am all for the comprehensive agreement that the Federal Government and nine states reached with Microsoft. Enough is enough.
Sincerely,
Joan T. Clarke Fairview N. C. 28730

MTC-00008244

From: Kbobbi@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:05pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
RE: the Tunney Act
For the sake of the public at large please be assured that this settlement is in the public interest and to continue more litigation against Microsoft will only hurt the American economy and benefit a few special interests. Please do NOT continue more litigation against Microsoft and continue to hurt the economy.

The attack on Microsoft has already done damage to the stock market. Just go back to when it emerged during the last administration and see the effect on the market every time a new announcement came out about punishing Microsoft. Its not Microsoft that gets punished its the American Public and Freedom that suffers.

George Korey
060 Marcus Ct
Pinole CA 94564

MTC-00008245

From: Peter Kain
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:
Please stop wasting taxpayers money litigating against Microsoft. It is an inefficient use of the taxpayers money. I buy and use many of the products they sell and do so willingly. Why? They are great products. They are reliable. Most importantly, they allow me to communicate with others who also use Microsoft products.

Enough is enough. Let's move on. There is a time and place for pursuing justice, and that time has passed. The horse was dead a long time ago.

Let's not beat it any more.

Sincerely,
Peter J. Kain
Peter Kain Lighting Accessories Inc.
petek@madpark.com

MTC-00008246

From: Bob Beaudoin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
The Utah Attorney General is pursuing harsher punishment for Microsoft along with 8 other states (California, Connecticut, Florida, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, and West Virginia).

The Attorney Generals' of these states are correct in pursuing Harsher penalties. The DOJ settlement is not a deterrent on what Microsoft has done to many other companies. The DOJ needs to support the case of these states against Microsoft.

Bob Beaudoin
5435 Riley Lane
Murray, UT 84107
Bob Beaudoin
Computer Support Plant Operations
University of Utah
801 585-5919

MTC-00008247

From: Patrick McCarthy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom it May Concern—
I would like to urge the DOJ to back off Microsoft and allow this settlement to go forward.

Very truly yours,
Al Maiolo President
Al J. Maiolo
President
Aero Hardware & Parts Company, Inc.
130 Business Park Dr.
Armonk, NY 10504
E-mail: ajm@aerohardwareparts.com
Fax: (914) 273-8550
Phone: (914) 273-8612

MTC-00008248

From: FAY243@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:12pm
Subject: (no subject)
I THINK AS THE NEW YEAR IS HERE, WE SHOULD ALL TRY AND GET BACK TO OUR NORMAL LIFE STYLE. I THINK MICROSOFT AND THE SETTLEMENT IS VERY FAIR. I DON'T THINK THE OTHER STATES ARE BEING FAIR WITH MICROSOFT OR THE ECONOMY. MICROSOFT WILL HELP STIMULATE THE ECONOMY, IF THE OTHER STATES WILL GET OFF OF THEIR BACK.
THANK YOU

BERTIE F. SMITH
243 CR. 2446
SALTILLO, MS 38866

MTC-00008249

From: Henry G Absher
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

January 3, 2002
Attorney General Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, DC 20530-0001
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I write you in support of the recent settlement between the Department of Justice and Microsoft. After three long years of court battles and round-the-clock negotiations, a fair and reasonable settlement was reached, and then we find out that there are some who feel it needs further examination. What about spending our dollars and time on examining our current economic status or our nation's security? These might be more pressing issues at the moment.

This settlement was not only well thought out, but was formulated with all parties in mind. Not only did Microsoft give up a great deal to allow the competitive market to flourish, but also they agreed to allow these companies to sue them if, in fact, they weren't complying. The settlement addresses everything from pricing agreements to code disclosure, and this should be considered a real coup for competitors. Microsoft has bowed down to dozens of demands, and now we need to let the technology industry get back to business.

The American economy could use some boosting at the moment, and holding up the IT sector and their competitive growth can only harm things. I urge you to support this settlement by helping to see that it no longer gets challenged from those in the federal government who would compromise it. Thank you for your time and effort on this issue.

Sincerely,
Henry Absher

MTC-00008250

From: alfred mizner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I've worked in the technology industry for over 10 years and I have been mystified by the governments apparent attempt(through obvious competitor funding) destroy Microsoft. It is because of their leadership and support for building a common PC platform that we are not still working on disparate and disjoint systems and software platforms. My comment on the settlement is that it goes well beyond what I think is necessary or appropriate. Therefore I would request that this be the end of this odyssey and start putting money and focus in a more appropriate place.

Regards
Al

MTC-00008251

From: GrumpyWes@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:14pm

Subject: Settlement

Please get off Bill's back!!!!!!! All he and Mrs. Gates do is good for the people and kids. Not to mention what he has done for the Kids. We are in a lot of bad times now , and mostly in Seattle.

Thank You
Wes Boyd.

MTC-00008252

From: Sumit Pal
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:17pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi
The settlement is certainly a positive one for the industry and the American people at large.

Cheers,
Sumit

MTC-00008253

From: mryan@telebyte.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think it's time to move on and get off Microsoft's back. This market is moving too rapidly for anyone to maintain an edge too long.

Matt Ryan, CLU
9080 Illahee Rd NE
Bremerton, WA 98311

MTC-00008254

From: Mitch Millar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

This case has been going on too long and has especially added detrimentally to all Technology stock losses in the last two years.

Microsoft is highly competitive, all successful companies are. If they are not breaking the law, get over it!!

Special interest factions are trying to skim the cream off of Microsoft's success because they cannot or are unwilling to compete. Leave Microsoft alone!!

The technology Microsoft provides make the market for the rest of us out there in the software world.

Mitch
mitch@tetradigital.com

MTC-00008255

From: Cathryn22@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:19pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

To Whom it May Concern,

I am a public school teacher in Wisconsin and am writing on behalf of the proposed settlement in the Microsoft case. I support the goals that are set forth in this settlement to establish an independent foundation comprised of educators to distribute technology funds, computers and software to the nation's poorest schools.

As a public school teacher, I am made aware of the importance of technology on a daily basis. I am also well aware of the huge technology gap that exists between wealthy and poor communities. This settlement would make a big difference in Wisconsin in that we are below the national average when it comes to computer availability for students. These funds could also help provide teachers with sufficient technology training, another area in which we are behind in Wisconsin.

Technology can be a powerful teaching tool and if we are going to fully prepare today's students for tomorrow's world, we have to stay current and we have to make technology available to everyone. In my school district we are just beginning to see the impact that technology can have. We recently passed a referendum that enabled the district to purchase one computer per teacher, and is slowly striving to have one computer for every 6 students. While that still is sorely behind what we see in the business world, it has already made a big difference. A settlement such as this could assist other districts, as well as my own, in obtaining the technology necessary for education in the 21st century.

Thank you for your consideration,
Cathy Atkinson
Social Studies Teacher
Waukesha, WI.

MTC-00008256

From: TRENTWOLF@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:22pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

To Whom it may concern,

I believe that the US Government would find it's self better occupied paying more attention to the terrorist problem, the airplane security problem than bothering with Microsoft. This company only does good, helps our nations civilian and military, with the latest in technology and contributes computers to the nations libraries, provides jobs and pays its taxes to support the Government.

G. C. TRENTANOVE

MTC-00008257

From: DADavis22@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:24pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

PLEASE, LET IT BE KNOWN THAT I
DUANE A. DAVIS AGREE TO THE SETTELMENT, WE NEED MORE JOBS, NOT SPECIAL INTERESTS WHERE THE TRIAL
LAWYERS RAKE IN ALL THE MONEY
THANKS
DADAVIS22@AOL.COM

MTC-00008258

From: Joseph F. Buchanan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement (added my address)

(This is the same message sent before, but I forgot to add my mailing address) I would like to express my dismay at the settlement concerning Microsoft Corporation. Because of Microsoft's tactics in forcing their products (Windows OS and Microsoft Internet Explorer, especially) and forcing out competition, we have to deal the problems that come with not having alternatives to their systems. I work at the University of Utah and deal with a lot of computer users. Because of the monopolistic actions of Microsoft, alternatives to their email systems are not common among our users. Microsoft

Outlook, Windows OS and Internet Explorer form together a serious security threat that has caused much expense to our support systems. Because of their overwhelming market, they are slow to respond to the problems they cause and slow to address quality issues in their products. People have grown to accept what they provide, regardless of inferior quality, security problems or even cost.

I feel that the current settlement has let Microsoft off the hook and allows them to conduct business as usual. This should not be the case. Please seriously consider the states' petitions against Microsoft.

Thank you for your consideration,
Joseph F. Buchanan
7472 Silver Circle
West Jordan, UT 84084-3946
(801) 566-1083
joseph.buchanan@utah.edu
Joseph F. Buchanan
—Internet: Joseph.Buchanan@utah.edu
University of Utah
—http://www.cc.utah.edu/~joseph/
TACC—Marriott Library—295 S. 1500 East
—(really ML2751C)
Salt Lake City, UT 84112-0860
—(801) 581-8814
X-Pgp-Url: http://www.cc.utah.edu/
~joseph/pgpkey

MTC-00008259

From: Konrad M.Kempfe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:26pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement:

This is to express my disapproval of prolonged litigation in the Microsoft case. The settlement reached is fair and should be accepted.

It is definitely not in the interest of the public or the US economy to continue court proceedings.

Respectfully
Konrad M.Kempfe, MD
715 Bogar Drive
Selinsgrove, PA 17870

MTC-00008260

From: Kevin McDaniel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think it is imperative that any settlement should be in the form of CASH only It should NOT be in the form of additional gifts or sales of Microsoft product to schools and others.

I would like to see this case brought to a swift conclusion, but not at the expense of other firms marketing competing products.

Kevin McDaniel

MTC-00008261

From: rick
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:27pm
Subject: My 2 cents

This case against Microsoft has been poorly executed by the government, companies and handful of states taking part. It is also quite hypocritical of those companies because they simply do not have the products to available to replace the Microsoft software. I could see their point if they actually had something to sell me but they don't. Have you ever tried writing a letter, doing a spreadsheet, made a greeting card, edited a photograph on a UNIX machine? I didn't think so. All these companies have a perfect right to manufacture competing products, but they dont, even for their own die hard users.

In addition I as a consumer feel that the deal Microsoft gives me is a tremendous value. Where else can I get a state of the art operating system, with many applications for under $200? There is no case here.

Microsoft software has done more for our economy, military strength, and business productivity than any single company in history.

Let them keep it up. Or invite them to leave the US and become a corporation of lets say, India. I know the country of India would welcome them with open arms, unlike our own government which scorns them.

MTC-00008262

From: William J. Crittenden
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:28pm
Subject: Microsoft

There are basically three types of people who have opinions on the U.S. v. Microsoft case:

(1) People who have no idea what the law says or what Microsoft has actually done. (These people should be ignored)

(2) People who have some vested interest in supporting Microsoft or some ideological axe to grind such that they support Microsoft for reasons that have nothing to do with the case, Microsoft's obvious and unrepentant guilt, or appropriate remedies.

(3) (Myself included) People who are absolutely outraged by Microsoft's pattern of deliberate illegal conduct and its total disregard for the law. READ THE DAMN COURT OF APPEALS OPINION!!! IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF!! Bill Gates is a crook and a liar, and he has created, illegally maintained and repeatedly abused a monopoly in computer operating systems. The harm to consumers is staggering.

Windows is an overpriced and unreliable pile of crap, but most people have no real choice (Apple is an expensive alternative, and there are no other widely used consumer operating systems). In some cases, more than half of the cost of a new computer is the preloaded Microsoft software (which costs Microsoft almost nothing to make). Many non-Microsoft software products perform poorly because Microsoft is constantly fiddling with Windows and refuses to release the source code that developers need to write for.

Windows XP includes many new bundled features which clearly should be sold as separate applications and not as part of the operating system. This practice is clearly illegal and destroys innovation and competition. If this practice is not stopped, Microsoft will soon have a monopoly in virtually the entire personal computer software industry.

TERMINATE THE ILLEGAL MONOPOLY!
STOP THE BUNDLING! STOP WINDOWS XP!

PROTECT REAL JAVA FROM MICROSOFT'S ILLEGAL ATTEMPT TO DESTROY COMPETITION! BREAK UP
MICROSOFT!

AND THROW GATES AND BALMER IN JAIL!!!!!!

William J. Crittenden Law Office
1325 Fourth Avenue, #1730
Seattle, WA 98101
(206) 729-0259
wjcrittenden@attbi.com

MTC-00008263

From: DYMOND Christopher S
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir,

I am shocked at what appears to be a disregard for anti-trust laws and the lack of timeliness of enforcing them.

I ask that you please issue a punishment for Microsoft's violations that is both sufficiently punitive to dissuade future companies from behaving as Microsoft has and that it is done quickly.

Christopher Dymond
Salem, Oregon

MTC-00008264

From: David Ayala
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen: Please accept this message as my support for the proposed settlement. As a result, I believe Microsoft has learned to act and behave in a manner that promotes fair trade and competitiveness in the business world. Thank you.

D. Ayala, Jr.
West Hills, California

MTC-00008265

From: John McIntosh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:33pm
Subject: microsoft settlement Please lay off Microsoft. I have no financial interest in the company.

John

MTC-00008266

From: SHerman999@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:34pm
Subject: microsoft case

please leave microsoft alone. the consumers like me are not complaining, only competitors who aren't as inovative, nor as consumer oriented. microsoft has done an excellent job for the publi worldwide. it's time the justice dept focused on somebody committing a crime that hurts the public. leave them alone and allow them to get back to the business of making a major contribution to the public and business world.

MTC-00008267

From: paul kelly
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:32pm
Subject: RE: Microsoft settlement.

Dear DOJ:

I have followed the MSFT "case" and want to add my voice to those of many others. The 18 States continuing efforts to force MSFT to divest is a poor use of valuable time and seems to be largely politically motivated at this time. My vote is to move on quickly to more pressing issues, such as Enron and collusion between accountancy and business today that are costing consumers and shareholders Billions.

Thank you.
P Kelly, MD

MTC-00008269

From: Sandy Armsrtong
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:35pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In early 2000, I had made investments, mostly with money inherited from my mother's lifetime savings, on the advise of my investment counselors, for myself and my children. I had about one fourth of what I needed to retire and my children had about enough for college educations and a future down payment on a house. My children were set for a good start in life and I had a start toward financial security for my future. Then, disaster came, in the form of a suit against Microsoft. In my opinion, this suit was the catalyst of the tremendous downfall in the stock market. This occurrence has left me and my children with only 40% of the money we had in early 2000. I never felt that Microsoft was at fault in the first place. What has happened to Americans who have budgeted and saved all of their lives to make their and their children's futures secure in order to improve profits of a few disgruntled corporations who were not able to compete with the innovations of Microsoft is very wrong.

Nothing can be done to compensate for the devastation caused to the American people by those who brought the suit against Microsoft, but the best that can be done is to finalize the Microsoft settlement which has been agreed upon by nine states as well as the federal government. It is time to put an end to this suit. It is my hope that such a decision will act as another catalyst to bring the stock market once more to more favorable gains and that my children and I may recoup some of our tremendous losses.

PLEASE, rule in favor of the present Microsoft agreement

Thank you,
Sandra M. Armstrong
Santa Cruz, California

MTC-00008270

From: LuLuFin@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:35pm
Subject: Final Determination of this case

This has gone on far too long. I think it is too strong against Microsoft. It requires that Microsoft disclose all the interface and related technical information for the middleware use and much more I don't think is fair. If Microsoft is smart enough to have figured it all out why do they have to give it away. Let the competitors come up with another way to get their middleware to be compatible. It seems to me you are punishing someone, who has been creative, because the other party can't come up with a better idea and product. If Microsoft agreed then let's get it over with and move on.

Lucille Finamore

MTC-00008271

From: Brown, Terry
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 3:39pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I consider the entire pursuit of Microsoft for antitrust violations a witch hunt against a company that is guilty of nothing more than engaging in production and free trade in what, upon my last reading of the constitution, was a free and capitalistic society. Based on the evidence and judgments I have reviewed to date, I oppose any form of punishment or sanction against Microsoft. Let the free market reign.

Terry S. Brown
Vice President, Manufacturing and Process Industry Practice
Balanced Scorecard Collaborative, Inc.
55 Old Bedford Road Lincoln, MA 01773
Tel. 781.402.1183
Fax 703.991.7542
Cell 781.929.2713 tbrown@bscol.com
Join Balanced Scorecard Online Free at <http://www.bscol.com>

MTC-00008272

From: Daphanie M. Mullins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
From: <madodel@ptdprolog.net>
To: <piu@doj.ca.gov>;
<attorney.general@po.state.ct.us>;
<ag@oag.state.fl.us>;
<consumer@ag.state.ia.us>;
<GENERAL@ksag.org>;
<webmaster@ago.state.ma.us>;
<attorney.general@state.mn.us>;
<uag@att.state.ut.us>;
<consumer@wvnet.edu>;
<timb001@attglobal.net>;
<Microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov> Sent:
Wednesday, December 26, 2001 3:27 PM

Subject: Microsoft settlement
I'm writing to ask you to consider removing all preload contract terms that require only Microsoft operating systems as well as requiring Microsoft to release all information regarding their proprietary file formats and APIs to be as part of any real settlement of their predatory monopoly finding. As it stands now the proposed settlement is worthless and a complete sellout by the USDOJ and does absolutely nothing other than validate their monopoly status and treat it as if it is a natural outcome. Microsoft has developed and expanded their monopoly by forcing hardware manufacturers to only pre-install

Microsoft operating systems on personal computers for years. It is a disgrace that IBM will not pre-load its own superior computer operating system (OS/2) on its own personal computers. Last year during the trial, several major manufacturers had declared they would offer the Linux operating system as a pre-load option. Then it was only to be available on a few models, then only on one or two models, now, after the farce of a settlement outcome of the trial, try and find more than a handful if any among all the major manufacturers. Microsoft can only continue its monopoly by coercion, requiring only its own software on every PC and charging a Microsoft tax on those of us who purchase these systems, but don't want and will not use their products. The only real solution is to make the operating system an option and all systems must be allowed to be sold without an operating system, or with a choice including but not necessarily limited to, OS/2, eComStation Linux, FreeBSD, and Microsoft's current version of WIndows.

Currently on my chosen platform, IBM's OS/2 and Serenity System's eComStation (an OEM version of OS/2), I can get some interchange of documents with Microsoft Word and Excel using Lotus SmartSuite or Star Office, but other formats like PowerPoint and Microsoft Media Player are completely inaccessible. Open formats and APIs can be ported over to non-Microsoft platforms and break Microsoft's stranglehold on the world's information. Making all their proprietary formats and APIs open and freely available will allow those of us who don't use Microsoft products to not be locked out of electronic discourse and electronic media features.

Please stand firm and refuse to give in to the monopolist Microsoft organization.

Mark Dodel —

From the OS/2 Desktop of: Mark Dodel
"The liberty of a democracy is not safe if the people tolerate the growth of private power to a point where it becomes stronger than their democratic State itself. That in its essence, is Fascism—ownership of government by an individual, by a group or by any controlling private power." Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Message proposing the Monopoly Investigation, 1938

MTC-00008273

From: Daphanie M. Mullins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
From: "sbskinner" <skskinner@helicon.net>
To: <consumer@wvnet.edu> Sent: Sunday, December 16, 2001 6:45 PM
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust Settlement

Dear Ms. Mills,

I am delighted that you continue to reject the administration's settlement of the Microsoft antitrust case. Although the below experience I had this morning is trivial, I thought you might like to view it from a very basic consumer standpoint. I am sending this also to the AGs of Massachusetts, California, West Virginia, Minnesota and to the District of Columbia (I haven't at this time located the remaining AGs rejecting the settlement).

Thank you again, and happy holidays.

Suzanne B. Skinner

To: Microsoft Customer Service
Dated December 15, 2001

"For the last week or more, every time I after I signed into hotmail, whether via Netscape Communicator 4.78 or from IE 6, the home page either didn't load at all, OR I had to keep refreshing the page to make it load.

Then, next, while trying to access my inbox/junk mail boxes, the same thing occurred. Finally, this very morning and as I speak, when I logged on via IE, half the home page appeared on the screen AND the other half of the screen had that disgusting white page that said to "Detect network settings," etc, because my browser could not support nahda nahda nahda... Also my IE often a/or continually rebuffs my ability to access even the most innocent of sites: e.g. last night to get to Google I had to perform the most herculean efforts and even then, most of the links (e.g. such real horrors as perhaps symantec, ancestry.com, also came up with the white "network ... page and I was unable to get through. Fully exasperated, I then disabled cookies entirely (usually I keep them to return to sender), and the same tragic story was repeated. Netscape, while giving me the very same Hotmail issues, does allow me, even with cookies returned to sender, access to these above-mentioned wild sites without problem.

WHAT IS HAPPENING?

Suzanne B. Skinner

P.S. Speaking of bugs, at least three or four times over the each of the last five or six weeks, that "do you wish to debug now" error pops up. I would be glad to debug, if only the process didn't seem to occupy a vast amount of time, thereby leaving me too exhausted to finish up the rest of what I have to do online.

sbs

P.P. S. NOW: I am unable to send this email to you because, even though THERE IS NOT TOPIC TO BE SELECTED IN THE TOPIC AREA DROP-DOWN MENU, I CANNOT SEND THIS TO YOU BECAUSE I HAVE NOT SELECTED A TOPIC! THIS IS REALLY BAD, GUYS. I have to cut and paste this complaint into a word document to save it so I can send it via some other route. What a disaster.

P.P.S.S. NEXT NEXT: I have tried to follow your rotten process to get to tech support, and low nothing I can do can get me there. I am only trying to report a problem with Hotmail; I have been sent all you're your 900 sites and get stuck back where I started. This is a really asinine "computer lack of support" program. I could get Bill Gates or the Pentagon more easily than getting through to you. no wonder every one I know is hoping that Linux is us and running lots of stuff in the near future. Just now, immediately before I was returned to the "get help from a Microsoft support (the operative word) professional, I was given a full screen announcement that LO there was a run time error. Are you guys talking with each other? Where the heck is the ability to reach customer service? I am planning to send a copy of this notice to the justice departments anti-monopoly unit, as well as to the attorneys general of every state and—if I have to—every European Community nation that refuses to settle the anti-trust suit against you.

Now I have to find another way to reach Customer Disservice, without going through this painful and futile process."

As an afternote, once again, you might be interested to know that when I went to the WV AGs website just a few minutes earlier, and tried to send this email to that office, the above-mentioned "can't be displayed: detect network settings, etc" came up and prevented my emailing Mr. McGraw. Very small potatoes, but very big irritation—plus two more requests from Microsoft for runtime error and another two requests to debug. Just keeps us chuckling, doesn't it?

Thank you again.

MTC-00008274

From: Allan Tingey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,

I am a computer scientist working in human genetics research at the University of Utah and I just wanted to pass along my feelings about the Microsoft settlement. I can tell you, without question, that the Microsoft monopoly has made our work more difficult and wasted considerable tax dollars. Because there is no viable alternative, we are forced to purchase Windows systems for each workers desk so that the usual desktop applications are available. The Microsoft operating systems, however, are not adequate for our research so additional UNIX systems must be purchased. The incompatibility of the systems creates many problems and the extra hardware and training needed to operate both systems is very wasteful.

"Multi-user" operating systems like UNIX, Linux, and now Mac-OS, are able to handle the work of many people if only the application software were available. The "single-user" operating systems from Microsoft require the purchase of a personal computer and software licenses for every user and it is incredibly wasteful. Because of the Microsoft monopoly, tax dollars are purchasing 50 to 100 times as many computers as are really needed with similar inefficiencies in software licensing.

As a computer scientist and a tax payer, I hope to see the Microsoft monopoly completely dismantled so a more efficient method of computing can be adopted.

Allan Tingey
University of Utah
20 South 2030
East Salt Lake City, UT 84112
810-581-4157
al@genetics.utah.edu

MTC-00008275

From: Diane (038) Roland Freeman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:41pm
Subject: Microsoft

Dear Sirs,

I believe that Microsoft has done no wrong and should not be punished for their actions. Was Ford guilty in the early 1900's, when he dominated the auto industry? The courts said no. I see a remarkable similarity to the Microsoft suit, and the Ford suit. Those who can't compete, have a "sour grapes" attitude. I worked on top secret programs that the government and the vendor both used Microsoft programs to exchange data via the internet, because the "system" worked. This saved the government and the taxpayer lots of money.

Microsoft has done the world a favor by developing what amounts to be a "standard" that the world can use to advance all parties. To punish them for this great accomplishment, would be wrong. All government, should stay out of business that does no one harm. If you want to get involved in bad business practices, look into Enron. How about when oil companies

"conspire" to raise prices ($3.00/gal) for no reason?

Thank you for your time and efforts.
H.R. Freeman
dinro@pacbell.net

MTC-00008276

From: Daphanie M. Mullins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
From: "Robert Lyday" <rh43@oakhurst.net>
To: <consumer@wvnet.edu> Sent:
Wednesday, December 26, 2001 11:03 PM

Subject: Don't Settle with Microsoft

The government's proposed settlement is a disaster. Please do not settle according to these standards! Hold out for a settlement that will really hold MS' feet to the fire! The government's settlement will do almost nothing at all to stop MS' illegal behavior, which has almost destroyed computing. MS must be stopped for the sake of the industry and businesses and consumers all over the world! Bob Hiroshima '45, Chernobyl '86, Windows '95.

MTC-00008277

From: Dan Broughton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:45pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I wish to express my opinion that this litigation has gone on long enough! Without Microsoft where would PC users be? Would the "information superhighway" be all that it has become without the innovative software produced by Microsoft? The answer to both these questions is no! It's beyond me why the FEDS deem success a criminal act.

SETTLE THE DAMN THING, ALREADY—I AM SICK OF HEARING ABOUT IT!!!
Dan

MTC-00008278

From: Caltax1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

DOJ: As taxpayers and citizens of the US, we are frustrated by the ongoing legal battle waged by your department against Microsoft. It is time to move on. The proposed remedies are enough! Let's move on and spend our energies and resources on rebuilding our damaged nation, not on tearing down one of our most innovative companies. Let's use our resources, enriched by Microsoft and other technology-related companies, to take our country to the next level.

Accept the proposed settlement and encourage the hold-out states to do the same.

Thank you,
Callene Lumbard
Callene Lumbard
4600 177 Ave SE
Bellevue, WA 98006
425-641-3688
caltax1@aol.com

MTC-00008279

From: Scuta101@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please add my name to the list of those who strongly oppose the proposed settlement agreement. The proposed settlement does nothing to curb the competitive tactics of a proven monopolistic predator and Microsoft continues to violate provisions of the Sherman Act (i.e., break the law) even as I type this e-mail. Surely our legal system can do more to ensure justice than the politically inspired "sell out" agreement offered by the Justice Department.

Mike Perkins

MTC-00008280

From: Michael Brunskill
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:49pm
Subject: Public Comment Period

Dear Sirs,

As a computer user who has participated in the evolution of computer systems from the old teletype terminals of the Dartmouth Timesharing System on which I learned to program in Basic in 1973 to the incredible PC technology that exists today, I can say emphatically that Microsoft has done more to improve and enhance computing than any other single entity.

To say that Microsoft has stifled competition is ludicrous. The cost of software, absolute and relative, has plunged dramatically because of the WORLD's acceptance Microsoft's Windows operating system. The very fact that the closest competitor, LINUX, is FREE to consumers proves this point. Another competing product to Microsoft's Office product line, Star Office, is also FREE, and like all others that want to have any chance of acceptance, the files are fully exchangeable with Microsoft systems. I well remember the days of several competing word processing systems, none of which were interchangeable, which truly hampered commerce. Microsoft, though it's innovation and superior products, has set the standard WORLDWIDE for consumer software interoperability far better than any government organization ever could. This in turn has led to sustained increases in worker productivity, which have been a major factor in the economic boom of the 90's.

One of the largest detractors of Microsoft is America OnLine. While Microsoft has opened up it's operating system to any competent software developer, AOL software is proprietary and closed. They do not use industry standards for such basic services as email and news services, requiring the use of their unique software for this purpose. Please consider the source in evaluating the objections to this settlement, which is still punitive to Microsoft in my opinion and entirely unnecessary.

Best Regards
Mike Brunskill
76 Cranbury Neck Road
Cranbury, NJ 08512
michael.brunskill@realiscorp.com

MTC-00008281

From: J MALLOY
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:49pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft has built the best mousetrap. Let them sell it.

Why should my cost include the wages of half of the lawyers in Washington. Please draw this to a close.

MTC-00008282

From: Bertram Kundert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:48pm
Subject: Re: Microsoft Settlement

As an IT professional of 11 years standing, I have little confidence that the stated remedies will do much to restrain Microsoft from past anti-competitive practices. More safe guards and clear punishment for transgressions need to be in place. As long as they can claim that adding programs to the operating system is "innovation" they can use their monopoly power to squeeze out any new concept that appears, and claim it for themselves. This is how they have consistently acted in the past and there seems no reason to believe that they will change in the future.

Bertram Kundert
University of Utah
101 Wasatch Drive
Eccles Broadcast Center
Salt Lake City,
Utah 84112
801-581-5698
Bertram@media.utah.edu

MTC-00008283

From: BobJ8806@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:49pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it May Concern, I feel strongly that the current settlement that was reached by Microsoft and the Justice Department is fair and equitable. It makes no sense to continue the current law suit being made by several states. If half of the current law suit participants agreed to the settlement, then why are the half trying to prolong the process. The longer the case continues, the more it going to cost the tax payers. Microsoft has been a pillar for the High Tech industry and without them and their contributions, I don't believe the many industries that exists today could have existed. Microsoft is a business that has been very successful and because they have been successful, others in the same field are just jealous of their accomplishments. How many companies in the world have not done "things" that would increase their assets, even if it were a little not according to Anti-Monopoly rules.

I am glad that the current judge in this case is taking the appropriate actions to end this ridiculous time consuming case against a respectable company that has been and will continue to be successful. Their projects and service to the customers is great and to say that they are monopolizing the software market, and that consumers do not have a choice, is really stupid. Let the company be and stop wasting tax payers money for a few companies that can't stand the competition.

MTC-00008284

From: Linda Johnson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I give thanks that a settlement can be reached and am anxious for this great company to be able to get back to work on what they do best without fear of government intervention.

Linda Johnson, 308 Seventh Street
Fort Madison, Iowa 52627

MTC-00008285

From: Jim McKinney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:52pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I think the government should be happy with any settlement from Microsoft. In my opinion, the government should leave Microsoft alone to do whatever is necessary for it (and the rest of the tech industry) to survive.

Jim McKinney
14691 Bueno Drive
Chino Hills, CA 91709
Professor, Mathematics; Calif. State Polytechnic Univ., Pomona

MTC-00008286

From: herb1000
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is high time the DOJ put this mess to rest. We do not approve of our tax dollars being used to help certain competitors compete with Microsoft. This is supposed to be a free market. If IBM's OS2, Linux and Unix cannot compete with Windows, it is not the Governments problem. You are in danger of unfairly destroying the only competition the huge AOL-Time Warner conglomerate has.

This has never been about protecting consumers.....it IS about helping certain competitors who made some poor business decisions.

Herb & Loretta DeVaan
1749 Tanner Circle Henderson NV 89012
herb1000@email.msn.com

MTC-00008287

From: FarhnerB@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:54pm
Subject: MS Opinion

We need a technologist and entrepreneur like Bill Gates. Let's settle this thing and move on, hopefully without disabling the software and costing the consumer more money.

Having lived in the silicon valley for some 20+years, I have confidence that technology will always be competitive.

MTC-00008288

From: EDWARD W REID
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Department of Justice: For years the competitors of Microsoft have been trying to force it to permit them to use its successful technology, a technology which they themselves could not develop, and in the process tried to viciously destroy Microsoft. Microsoft quite naturally resisted these efforts, but finally an agreement has been reached by most of those involved. However, a small remaining greedy cadre of states and competitors are hanging on for the "kill".

The judge should recognize the motivations of this cadre and end this process with the Agreement for the good of the country

MTC-00008289

From: Vulich@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:56pm
Subject: Settlement

I cannot understand why this case is still going on because of a few states who apparently are not tending their own affairs and are cheating their constituents while they are squandering their time and their state's money while they are away from the real work they should be doing and wallowing in their 5 minutes of fame.

Microsoft has done more for more people throughout the world than any other company in history. Thanks to Bill Gates and Microsoft, and the wise decision I made years ago to buy their stock, I am assured of a decent retirement. I am sick and tired of seeing success being punished in our country and as soon as someone has it the leeches come out of the woodwork to bleed them dry with idiotic lawsuits, etc. PLEASE, let's get over it and let Microsoft progress and continue to do so much good for so many.

Malena Preston
Bothell, WA.

MTC-00008290

From: Bplshrine@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Isn't it about time to let go and let the settlement go forward.

Billy P. Langfeldt, 3115 25th Street,
Boulder, CO 80304-2842 eMail—
BPLSHRINE@CS.COM. Let it GO!!

MTC-00008291

From: Oscar Myre
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 3:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello, I find the proposed Microsoft settlement to be unacceptable.

It fails to achieve the necessary goals of a proper remedy: halting the illegal conduct, promoting competition in this industry, and depriving Microsoft of its illegal gains.

Please don't except the settlement. Thank you.

God Bless,
Oscar Myre
http://omoriginals.com
360.575.9839 (office)
305.422.8285 (fax)

MTC-00008292

From: Fred Fiechter
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen: Let the Microsoft settlement stand and keep the few special interests with their large lobbying budgets out of the resolution process. Our system of justice and our nation are ready to move on in the interest of fairness and the American economic system. Enough is enough!

Frederick C. Fiechter III
162 Stone Block Row
Wilm., DE 19807

(302)656-6643

MTC-00008293

From: Nick Trikouros
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion this has been a plot by Microsoft's competitors to derail the company. "We can't compete with them so lets get together and sue." What went on in the Jackson court was a travesty. That he is still a sitting judge is a joke. I also believe that this case has harmed our economy by giving the EC an excuse to follow through with their version. I can't prove this, but I feel that they (EC) were emboldened to stop the GE/Honeywell merger. This situation with the states not excepting the compromise is nothing but politics by the (would be Governors/Senators) State Attorney Generals. For the sake of the industry and our economy, this should end now.

Sincerely,
Nicholas M. Trikouros

MTC-00008294

From: Atlas Int'l
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:07pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam,

I believe the DOJ has buckled to the very thugs it purports to protect U.S. citizens from. Microsoft has done nothing but bully its way to the top of the technology heap by infiltrating one segment of tech business sector after the other, infecting each with its own brand of assimilation or destruction.

In 'punishing' Microsoft by literally forcing it into a market in which it is yet have a stranglehold (the education market) you are in effect bowing to the power of the 'almighty' MS. This disease of a company needs to be broken up, disbanded or otherwise prohibited from entering and dominating other markets—not forced into ones they've yet to conquer.

Please know that I could easily write volumes on topics ranging from free competition, business ethics, the bastardization of corporate America right down to basic criminal acts and corporate responsibility. But, as you are no doubt busy weeding through hundreds of thousands of such letters, let me just cast my vote of disapproval at the job being done by the government.

Boo!
Bob Holkan
8109 Otium Way
Antelope, CA
95843 (916) 725-4055

MTC-00008295

From: tlcarrhart@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:07pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please consider immediate settlement of the Microsoft antitrust case. Only competitors of MS and the various attorneys benefit from dragging it on and on.

Regards,
Tom and Betty Carhart, Houston, Texas

MTC-00008296

From: FRKFRANKK3@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think this litigation should stop right now. The settlement is fair, and any delay can only prolong the recession.

Frank Keeshan

MTC-00008297

From: Spilger Philip G (Phil) PSNS
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 4:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To The Department of Justice,

As a consumer, I want to see this lawsuit against Microsoft settled. My own personal opinion is we consumers have only benefited from the Microsoft Corporation's innovations. The accusations against Microsoft are ludicrous. Unfortunately, a few special interests are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Phil Spilger, 10838 Evergreen Terrace SW, Lakewood, WA. 98498

MTC-00008298

From: Crlawren34@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:13pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

This has dragged on long enough. The settlement agreed upon by the U.S. Gov't and the nine states involved is fair and settling this now is certainly in the best interest of the public. We do not need more prolonged litigation.

Settle!
Carol R. Lawrence

MTC-00008299

From: davidhenryart
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support a prompt settlement to the Microsoft suit.

David Henry

MTC-00008300

From: rfkilmmer@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it may concern,

I am writing this e-mail to let you know what I think of your attack on Microsoft.

It seems to me that the DOJ misunderstands basic economics. In a free society the market will set prices and standards that they are willing to pay. And, if a company tries to charge too much for their product competition will bring them back to a rational price or in to bankruptcy. Competition is what moves us forward, without it there would be no need to advance because there would be no incentive. Competition is what weeds out the companies that don't have the insight to move forward. But this is not a bad thing. A company is trying to get a piece of the market share. They do this by getting the best product for the best price to the customer. If a company cannot do this it is not their competitors fault. The market will always weed out those companies that don't make the most out of their resources. More gov't controls are not what is needed. If you look into your history books you will see what that has done over and over again. It has and will crush progress every time. So I hope that America can become the first country to recognize it before it crushes us.

In conclusion I would like to state that each individual knows or should know their economic priorities. Man is not born with the right to have a computer or a certain software system. Microsoft nor any other company owes them anything. If they like the product and have the economic means to purchase it they should, if not so be it. It is not up to the government to decide which company we put our money into.

Thank you for your time
Ray Kilmer

MTC-00008301

From: Dan Warrensford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Ladies/gentlemen:

Reject the arguments of the neo-Fascists who are still attempting to crucify Microsoft—for doing what Capitalists are supposed to do: Use creativity to make our lives better. No one has ever forced anyone else to use Internet Explorer, or any other Microsoft product. All of Microsoft's "competitors" have been free to develop better, more attractive products; none of the "competitors" should be allowed to use DoJ or U.S. Taxpayers' money to attack Microsoft.

Tell each who wishes to use the U.S. Government as a club to "get a life."
Thanks/regards,
Dan Warrensford
40 Uranus Ave. Merritt Island FL 32953-3158 (321) 453-2217; warrensd@gte.net

MTC-00008302

From: Douglas Mayne
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To the Honorable Judge Kollar-Kotelly:
Here are my comments regarding the proposed settlement in the Microsoft Anti-trust Case.

1. The difference between Judge Jackson's proposed breakup and the proposed settlement is much too great. This gives the perception that a company can win if it can just outlast those pursuing it. The judiciary should be more stable than the executive, and not appear to flow with changes in administration.

2. While Judge Jackson's behavior outside the court was stupid and a poor example to set as the court's representative, it should not have bearing on the finding of fact. However, if his behaviour is deemed too egregious, then start over from the beginning.

3. Microsoft's behaviour at trial was outrageous and contemptible. Here is a specific instance which stands out: the infamous Internet Explorer video with James Allchin on the stand. This video was requested by the court and was willfully manipulated to show an untruth. The video was a mockery, and Allchin and others responsible should be held accountable. It should not be just "another product demo" when presenting evidence in a U.S. court proceeding. Also, Gates statements about Microsoft keeping the companies overall financial records using paper and pencil were outrageous lies, considering his statements in "The Road Ahead."

4. Microsoft's agenda is to make money. They have been successful in capturing market share in every segment of the software industry where they chosen to compete. It has been noted that Microsoft's cash reserves can be used to out spend any rival in product advertising and governmental lobbying.

5. Microsoft's business agenda does not complement the nation's desire to secure its computer infrastructure. Microsoft's software vulnerabilities have led to exploitation and business interruption. Any settlement, short of the breakup, needs to address how Microsoft will work with the software community to address this serious problem. The "code red" virus has shown a few infected systems connected to a high speed network can do great damage.

6. Microsoft's business agenda forces an "upgrade path" upon end users to ensure a continuing revenue stream. This is not necessary or rational, especially now that the PC has matured and works well enough for everyday business use. Software should be treated the same as a "consumer durable good," much like a washing machine. Case in point: the comparable prices for Office XP and a Maytag washer. Microsoft's approach is to simply declare software obsolete, and unsupported after a specified date. This is not the best choice for business, as new versions always contain bugs and vulnerabilities. The maturity of Windows NT at Service Pack 6 provides a stable base to build a business on, and appears to have advantages over later, more complex software such as Windows 2000 or Windows XP.

Because Microsoft holds the copyright to their software, they can choose to market it how they please, or withdraw it from the market entirely. This limits consumer choice and is unfair.

In the breakup scenario, I envisioned the "children" competing against one another to distinguish their product. A product offering the most stable and secure platform would have had appeal to business users, and would have been worth supporting through continuing fees for bug and security fixes. Without the breakup, this is an unlikely outcome as Microsoft sees there is much more profit in entirely new versions.

7. Without a major remedy, Microsoft's egregious behaviour will continue. Consumers will have less choice and be forced to pay the monopolist's price. This is the continuing harm to consumers which was a finding of fact.

Thank You,
Douglas D. Mayne
Salt Lake City, Utah

MTC-00008303

From: Malcolm C King

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:15pm
Subject: the good it has done..

Without Windows from Microsoft, I wouldn't have a computer, know what the Internet was nor have a lot of contact with the world of 2002. I am stunned by what the DoJ thinks is wrong with Microsoft. As usual, no one in the real world (non-government) is offended, hurt nor angry with someone who has done a good thing for the majority of Americans. Show me the millions of people that complained about "M" then go after them with all your might. Until then chase the millions of truly bad people there are in America, like the FBI office in Boston.

MTC-00008304

From: laverne(u)jim
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:15pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The Tunney Act should be accepted as law, and the oppressive law suite against Microsoft ended. The court of appeals ruling seems to be fair to all parties. I do not think that further action against Microsoft is in the public's best interest.

MTC-00008305

From: Rrmontesi@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:
I believe the Microsoft settlement is reasonable and fair and that it is time to put an end to all litigation regarding this matter. Please add my name to the list of those in favor of the settlement and make my opinion known to the District Court.

God Bless America,
Rosemary Montesi
15 Westway Road
Wayland, MA 01778

MTC-00008306

From: Alys Hinkle
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My personal opinion is that Microsoft is the only software company that provided the public with the tools necessary to use the internet. Originally all of the software programs written for the computer; with the exception of Apple and the only programs that were written for Apple had to be used on a Apple computer, therefore if you owned anyother brand of computer Apple software was not compatible; were individual programs, the public had to be a computer wizard or guru to make them fit together, the only way business's could operate was to take individual reports from each software company and put them together by hand, none of the programs integrated. Microsoft's generosity gave the public the tools it needed to use the computer for all aspects of a business operation, from writing letters, to posting reminders on payments due, to business reports that allowed consolidated financial information available for day to day operations of their business.

At the time Microsoft put together the consolidated computer program that a layman could understand and use, the other computer companies offered only spread sheets, letter writing programs, etc. that an individual had to have the training to put that information together with another report before the information was usable.

I believe Microsoft was a public servant, they refined the reports and programs so that the individual could use them in the manner in which the bookkeeping world had recorded it's information from the beginning. Microsoft allowed the small business man to gain information pertinent to his business with the same speed and accuracy that big business had been able to do, allowing the middle man to operate more competitively.

If the companies bringing the lawsuits against Microsoft had been as wise as Microsoft and offered their reports and information to the public that was usable by the public, before Microsoft they would have gained the same amount of public esteem and been as fortunate as Microsoft.

I feel the suit against Microsoft should be settled, without added penalties, I feel Microsoft has given the people a tool that no one else could deliver, and with their help the economy has benefitted as well as Microsoft.

Alys Hinkle, 290 Adams Street, Lander, WY 82520
307-332-3756

MTC-00008307

From: Elaine Sipes
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:20pm
Subject:

It is time that the government get off of Microsoft's back. I think that It is time that the government get off of Microsoft's back. I think that the states still trying to battle this issue are just trying to get a free hand out of cash. Thank God for Bill Gates, and the jobs that he has brought to the Pacific Northwest. It is time for the money grabbers in government to BACK OFF.

Elaine Sipes

MTC-00008308

From: Kupfer, Ellen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:24pm
Subject: microsoft settlement
To whom it may concern,

I am writing in support of the proposed settlement. As research shows there is a significant gap along economic lines in availability of technology. 82% of the classrooms in richer communities are connected to the Internet while only 60% of the classrooms in lower income classrooms have access. Funds are tight in Wisconsin due to our revenue control law which limits the amount a school district can raise to fund education. In addition we have a huge budget deficit. Education is one area that is being talked about as a source of money to help balance the budget. Many schools need computers and Internet for their students. This would help them tremendously. Life is not a level playing field for many of our students. Their families cannot afford computers at home so school is the one place that they may have access to them and the help they bring. There is a huge world out there that many would never know without the Internet.

Educators must be trained to use the technology so they can comfortably implement it in the classroom. It is the teacher in the classroom that most influences the student mastery and use of new knowledge. The component of teacher training is critical.

I hope that the court will support the goals as set forth in the settlement. If we truly are to leave no child behind we must give them all the tools they need to be successful.

Thank you for your time,
Ellen Kupfer
KEA, President
CC:weac.org

MTC-00008309

From: kirsten matson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:24pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
PLEASE SETTLE THIS CASE!

ONLY IN AMERICA WOULD OUR JUSTICE DEPARTMENT GO AFTER THE ONE COMPANY WHO HAS DONE THE MOST TO DRIVE THE ECONOMY.

SHOW ME ANOTHER COMPANY WHO HAS CONTRIBUTED TO THE WORLD AS MUCH AS MICROSOFT.

I CAN'T BELIEVE HOW MANY YEARS THIS HAS BEEN ON GOING!
SINCERELY,
KIRSTEN MATSON

MTC-00008311

From: Bill Brent
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 4:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I urge the United States Government and the Justice Department to refrain from punishing Microsoft any further. Their actions do not warrant prosecution by the Justice Department under the antitrust laws. They have not coerced anyone. They are being punished simply for being better than their competitors.

Bill Brent Writer
Portland, Oregon

MTC-00008312

From: Gloria Gottiaux
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft case should now be settled once and for all.

Gloria Gottiaux

MTC-00008313

From: GriffinF@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom it may concern:

I am writing to express my extreme displeasure at the he proposed Microsoft Settlement. It is FAR TOO LENIENT!
Among the settlements obvious flaws are:
NO punishment for past behavior.
NO attempt to make them lose the spoils of their crimes

NOT leveling the competitive playing field enough Without stronger government intervention Microsoft will control the Instant Messaging and Media Player markets using same tactics they used in the Browser markets—UNFAIR BUNDLING.

Read the popular press! EVERY JOURNALIST FROM JUST ABOUT EVERY PUBLICATION AGREES THE SETTLEMENT DOES NOT GO FAR ENOUGH.

Sincerely
Michael A Fitzgerald
Alexandria, VA

MTC-00008314

From: Ralph Weil
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:31pm
Subject: Microsoft
Please settle this problem with Microsoft and let us get back to the business of growing America stronger.
Ralph Weil

MTC-00008315

From: Jack C Moore
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:32pm
Subject: Microsoft Lawsuit

I feel that the justice system is entirely wrong in allowing the legal action against Microsoft to continue. Not only has it taken money from taxpayers and shuffled it into the pockets of the attorneys but the public is suffering as a result of Microsoft not being able to develop new generation products.

PLEASE, stop this insanity and let the many schools profit from the receipt of the free computer systems that Microsoft has agreed to provide!

Jack C. Moore
330 Hollipat Center Drive, #18
Santa Barbara, California, 93111

MTC-00008316

From: Dixon Teter
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:30pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear Sirs: As a U. S. citizen and as a consumer I am served extremely well by a free market. Your continued persecution of businesses and of Microsoft in particular is both economically and morally wrong. Without Mr. Gates brilliant creation: Microsoft, we all would be computing 20 years in the past. They compete by bring us ever more powerful computing tools and at ever less expensive prices. To viciously attack such a company—attacks begun and continued primarily out of petty jealousy, the inability to compete, and partisan politics—has cost the consumer dearly because Microsoft has been forced to waste incredible assets that could have been used to develop even more great products.

Your unwarranted attacks on Microsoft have cost hundreds of billions of dollars in wealth as the result of their causing the Stock Market to lose a tremendous amount of equity—in short you have contributed to the enormous slide in the entire sector of businesses that includes Microsoft.

Do the right thing and just drop it. Do our country and the economy a huge favor. Kindly desist.

Drop the suit without prejudice. This has a precedence in the past with the wrongful IBM suit. Be bold.

Sincerely,
Dixon Teter, Ph.D.

MTC-00008317

From: CRichner@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:37pm
Subject: (no subject)

I would like to write a letter saying Leave Microsoft alone, but please advise.

Carol Richner
A Fan of Bill Gates

MTC-00008318

From: Robert Lantz
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the Microsoft settlement
Robert J. Lantz

MTC-00008319

From: Joelle Thompson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

For nearly four years, this lawsuit has been dragging on. I believe that this settlement is absolutely a good thing and is in the public interest. It's tough on Microsoft, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. As a consumer, I overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for me, the industry and the American economy. Let's not prolong this litigation in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing this country needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation. Microsoft has never harmed consumers, all they've done is make great software and be a strong competitor. Microsoft's competitors are trying to waste our tax dollars by competing with Microsoft through the court systems, instead of having the courage to do it in the marketplace. I SUPPORT THIS SETTLEMENT! Let's move on, put an end to this case and spend my tax dollars on more worthy causes. Like ending terrorism!!! Thank you for giving me an opportunity to express my opinion.

Sincerely,
Joelle S. Thompson
San Clemente, CA

MTC-00008320

From: Poppopbax@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:42pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

To whom it may concern:
Further litigation is wasteful—let all parties involved except the current Judge's decision.

MTC-00008321

From: belob@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We believe the settlement made with Sicrosoft was fair & equitable. In our opinion, Microsoft has been instrumental in the advancement the use of technology which has led to our long bear market. Let things stand as agreed, and encourage the other 9 states to drop the matter.

MTC-00008323

From: Kitkhan@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:45pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Will you people please do whatever it takes to settle the Microsoft litigation so that technology can continue to march forward in the 21st century. Four years ago I paid $79.00 for Windows. Today I bought my 4th copy of Turbotax by Quicken—Total cost in 4 years = $160.00. I consider Windows a huge consumer advantage when I can perform multiple tasks vs. Turbotax, double the money, for a limited capability. I do not believe you should open a case on Quicken, but any idiot who says Microsoft has not been consumer friendly is simply misinformed.

Walter Strain

MTC-00008324

From: Nolan Lameka
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Sirs:

I believe that the current settlement is fair for all parties. The dissident states seem to have political motives behind them rather than economic.

Nolan A Lameka

MTC-00008325

From: jimturke@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:45pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Settle it for drying-out-loud. The only reason the few want to drag it on is the "lawyers" want more case money—they don't give a hoot otherwise.

JKT

MTC-00008326

From: AlSirkin@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:53pm
Subject: microsoft

I wish the government would just get this thing over with so Microsoft can keep delivering new products to us computer users and my shares will increase again. Fight terrorists not our best companies.

Alan Sirkin

MTC-00008327

From: d-dmiller(a)shaw.ca
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:58pm
Subject: Justice

I wish to request that the court consider the liberty that has been provided by the US Constitution and reach the only rational conclusion in the Microsoft judgement which is to accept that company's complete innocence. At this critical juncture of history, America must uphold liberty even more vigilantly. To judge against Microsoft would send another chill through business and entrepreneurial spirit in America. Do not eat the goose that lays the golden egg.

Dennis R. Miller
3938 Elsey Lane

Victoria BC V8X 5K1

MTC-00008328

From: MIPRESS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a writer and constant user of computer programs, I am ever so grateful to innovative companies such as Microsoft that have made my life so much easier, to say nothing of how much it has improved my work and that of millions of others. I am appalled at the attempt to tear down a company that has given the whole world so many better ways to operate and to communicate. Give me a break! If you have to spend your time in litigation of American companies, why not pick on the phony sleezeball outfits that target innocent citizens with get-rich and other bogus schemes. I applaud Microsoft and the rest of the world does too, or at least the rest of the "thinking" and hard-working world.

Judith Welsh,
Independent Journalist,
Miami, Florida

MTC-00008329

From: BALAR53@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is past time that the DOJ acted in the BEST interest of the USA and its citizens. The settlement signed off on is more than enough punishment for a case never should have been brought. No other country in this world is destructive to the inventions and intellectual property successes of its corporations. But for the grace of God, the USA has survived the misjudgments (like this one) by its government—that goes for antitrust as well as how we the people have been protected from enemies who would (and did) kill us. Let us not kill our own brilliant ideas anymore.

MTC-00008330

From: BRTSTAR1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:03pm
Subject: settlement

Dear Sirs:

I feel Microsoft should not be penalized for creating a great network that has benefited so many.

Many of his competitors are greedy and want his fame. Let Bill Gates and Microsoft go and let then invent many wonderful things to make life easy and safe.

Sincerely,
Valerie Rogers,
Louisville, KY

MTC-00008331

From: McCarthy, Kathleen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 4:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I live in Utah. I was told you were looking for opinions as Utah wants to pursue harsher punishment against Microsoft. My opinion is that my state should not try to pursue harsher punishment. I think they should just go with the current settlement and be done with it.

Spend my tax dollars on pursuing things like violent crimes.

Kathleen McCarthy
Citrix/Client Support
Admin Computing Services
University of Utah

MTC-00008332

From: marv matson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:06pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
PLEASE APPROVE THE MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT AND LET THIS OUTSTANDING COMPANY LEAD US OUT OF THE DEPRESSION. EIGHT YEARS OF LITIGATION HAS COST EVERY AMERICAN WHO HAS A RETIREMENT PLAN TENS OF THOUSAND OF DOLLARS. ANY COUNTRY WOULD WELCOME MICROSOFT MOVING TO THEIR COUNTRY. LETS STOP THE LITIGATION AND LET MICROSOFT CONTINUE THE INNOVATION THAT DRIVES THE ECONOMY.
M.L.MATSON
TACOMA,WA

MTC-00008334

From: John Robert Hooten
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:09pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
January 2, 2002
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN;
Please register my support for the proposed settlement of the Microsoft litigation. While I support the proposed settlement, I thought the entire litigation was absurd and a situation where certain competitors were successful in convincing the government that the government should try to even the playing field when the competition could not win by competition. The litigation should not have been commenced in the first place.

Like so many other so-called "senior citizens" (those over 65, I guess) before the Microsoft Windows program came out, I had no idea how to operate a computer or to even turn it on. After Windows came out, I found that operating a computer was easy for one who knows virtually nothing about computers.

Because of the ease of operating the computer brought about by Microsoft for the general public, the company should be given credit for helping the public rather than attempting to punish Microsoft for becoming successful and bringing the world of computers to people like me.

Do not let anyone convince you that Microsoft has done anything bad for the public because that is not true. The opposite is true. Now that the government and most states have agreed to settle the litigation, the settlement should be approved. The government should go about performing governmental functions and the competition should go about trying to make a better product for the public.

John Robert Hooten
P.O. Box 452
Oriental, N.C. 28571
Tel # 252-249-2015
cell # 252-526-1111

MTC-00008335

From: tomld@msn.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
The damage that is being done to the US technical world position by the the lawsuit is terrible. Only the lawyers are making out. I can't believe the greed of the states and companies for not going along with the settlement.

Microsoft has done more for this country than any other technical company in the last 15 years. They should be rewarded for their contributions to the country and world. Please stop and consider how Microsoft software know-how has impacted every area of our lives. Where would we be today in the fields of medicine, engineering, economics, military and many others without the Microsoft. Also, please don't forget the the contributions Mr. Gates has made through his trust funds to various charitable organizations.

Sincerely,
Tom Dougherty

MTC-00008336

From: Lee Moulds
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sir:

I am disappointed to learn that the Microsoft Settlement may not go through. It has taken four years to reach this settlement, which appears to be fair to all parties concerned. Please do whatever is necessary to bring this matter to a conclusion so that "business" can move forward.

Thank you,
Mildred Lee Moulds,
Phoenix, MD

MTC-00008337

From: james newcomb
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Settle it Now!! Enough already. Too much even!! Let's got on with free enterprise, the American way, Etc. Quit wasting Tax dollars.. Thanks.
FED UP

MTC-00008338

From: dave rose
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Is Microsoft a monopoly? Not in the proper, derogatory, traditional sense of the term. Unlike the old AT&T Bell monopoly, or today's U.S Post Office monopoly, Microsoft did not gain its market share by having the government outlaw its competitors: Microsoft earned its position in the free-market. Give businessmen a break. It is the only way our country will progress. Why don't you attack the trial lawyers with the vigor you attack business?

David rose
5 ellen rd
Marblehead, MA

MTC-00008339

From: J Tanne
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:13pm

Subject: Rejection of Microsoft Settlement
Honorable Attorney General, Members of the Department of Justice: I, my family, and many of my friends and business associates are extremely concerned over the lack of fortitude in the offer drawn between the Department of Justice and Microsoft Corporation. The proposed settlement does NOTHING to make repair to the damages done through years and years of unrestrained illegal behavior by Microsoft and its executives and will do NOTHING to level the playing field and bring competition to what was once a thriving industry. Even now as civil suits are being settled, Microsoft is walking away unscathed and in some instances planting the seeds for future market domination. Somehow the mistakes of the 1995 consent decree are dangerously close to being repeated. Please reconsider this settlement and reconstruct it to offer a REAL remedy to the Microsoft situation. Until a remedy which TRULY protects consumers and encourages competition can be reached keep, please the case alive and in pursuit of a suitable and practical remedy.

Regards,
James Tanne
190 N 980 E
Lindon, UT
84042

MTC-00008340

From: Tony Palumbo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:16pm
Subject: One additional Comment

As I've been reading through the proposed Microsoft settlement, I have yet to see (what I feel) is one of the most troubling issues. I refer to the fact that many web sites use Microsoft specific technology that allow only Windows users to access features on their sites.

On Yahoo, there are various stories that are available on Yahoos ON24 service. If you're an Apple (or Linux) user, you're told that only the windows operating system is supported. The other day I was at an auto shopping site and clicked a button to price a car. Once again I received a message saying "Your operating system is not supported by this site" If this type of behavior represented isolated instances, it wouldn't bother me, but it is becoming more prevalent on the internet. As an Apple user, I find this very annoying as well as highly discriminatory.

Basically I'm being told to get rid of my Apple and buy a PC if I want access. The whole concept of the internet is freedom. Microsoft has taken that from many of us I think any settlement should address these issues, by forcing companies (Microsoft specifically) to produce software that allows all internet users (regardless of operating system) to be granted the same access to all websites. I further believe that large corporations such as Yahoo, AOL and others be prevented from offering Widows only services. Only when specific services are available to all, should they be allowed to offer them.

I feel this will go a long way to putting a dent in Microsoft's monopolistic behavior
Thank you for your time
Sincerely,

prosecute one of the most successful and innovative corporations in the US! I therefore feel that the proposed settlement is more than fair and that the US government should find better witches to hunt.

Bill Weirich

Matrix Capital Markets Group, Inc.

11 South 12th Street

Richmond, VA 23219

Phone: (804) 780-0060

Fax: (804) 780-0158

E-mail:

bweirich@matrixcapitalmarkets.com

Web Site: www.matrixcapitalmarkets.com

MTC-00008350

From: BOLENDERJ@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:30pm

Subject: Microsoft settlement

Let's get back to innovating and producing by accepting the compromise settlement agreement. Lawyers are the only ones to gain by continuing to yak and yak.

James H. Bolender

MTC-00008351

From: Jim Furlong

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:32pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Can't we get on with things and settle. It's obvious to me that the States holding out for a bigger settlement all have business interests in seeing Microsoft hurt further (ie Utah, Oracle). Tell those states I wouldn't buy any of their winey products, just because they can't compete without a tilted playing field.

Please urge them to settle or you will throw them back to ground zero and dismiss all gains agreed to by the other states.
jimfurlong@hotmail.com

MTC-00008352

From: Steve Lussier

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:29pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

I believe that the current Microsoft settlement is fair. Further action by the Federal Government as well as the 9 states who continue to fight Microsoft only serves to weaken an industry already battered by foreign competitors using unfair trade practices, an economic recession, major downturn in capital spending as well as other factors. Let's not turn the US's future competitive advantage in software and all-into today's electronics market dominated by Asian COUNTRIES and manufacturers. I'm the owner of a small business and the less Government interaction / intervention- in business (Federal-State-Local) the better off EVERYONE is.

Steve Lussier

President

Technico Inc

Warren Ohio

MTC-00008353

From: Alfred Petermann

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:31pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's about time that this matter is put to rest. For almost four years, DOJ has danced with industry advocates that are trying to succeed in the court of law because they fail daily in the enterprise markets. The people vote with their wallets and they support Microsoft products. Just imagine if the government were to improve its products annually, increase its service and features and then charge less every year for it. Will never happen, that's why government proponents are so desperate to derail Microsoft. How much damage can you guy do to our economy?

Alfred R. Petermann

SpiritMed

MTC-00008354

From: ronnie harris

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:36pm

Subject: microsoft settlement

microsoft settlement should be labeled "microsoft witch hunt"... microsoft has done nothing out of the ordinary for modern business practices...if microsoft is to be the goat for modern business procedures then every other big and middle sized businesses should be closed down...if this is what the witch hunters really want-then they are a bigger danger to our country than all the "outsider"...stop picking on the engines of our economy and let them compete with each other without government intervention...
thank you.

MTC-00008355

From: Sam Brown

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:39pm

Subject: just leave micro soft alone

THIS THING THAT THE GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN DOING TO MICRO SOFT IS A DISGRACE TO THE FOUNDING FATHERS OF THIS COUNTRY. I RECOMMEND THAT YOU PEOPLE JUST LEAVE THEM ALONE AND DROP ALL THE THINGS THAT ARE BUGGING YOU

EVERETT BROWN

MIAMI OK. 74354

MTC-00008356

From: AlexZakson@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:39pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Computing technology changes very rapidly. (I know I have been in computing for 40 years.) Dominant companies that do not keep up, or drop the ball find themselves in oblivion. You cannot blame the demise of DEC, Digital, Univac, NCR, and others on Microsoft.

Please Let Microsoft innovate. It's very important to computing. If others cannot keep up, penalizing Microsoft will not give them an advantage; it'll just hold the whole industry back.

Sincerely,

Alex Zakson

MTC-00008357

From: Foxisland3@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:41pm

Subject: RE: Microsoft Settlement

I am in total favor of the government settling its claim against Microsoft. In my opinion, I feel it was a bogus, costly, unjustifiable law suit. It would behoove the government to spend taxpayer money on more critical issues than going against a successful company that has done nothing but bring prosperity to this country. Someone in Washington, DC got greedy and a little sidetracked with special interest groups in its pursuit of Microsoft. It's time the Democrats worked for the good of this country and got off the political merry-go-round it so intently works to nourish.

Cheri Landers

MTC-00008358

From: David Stanley

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:40pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I understand the need to finish this case and move on, but should we do it without resolving anything? How many times does a company need to be taken to court for the same type of actions and each time be told to stop doing it? You're like the parents who say "No", but never back it up. No one learns from someone telling them, "Stop, and if you do it again, we're going to tell you to stop again!"

With Windows XP and the .NET strategy, it should be fairly obvious that Microsoft does NOT intend to stop anti-competitive practices. The .NET strategy alone is a complete step toward total domination on the internet. I can't imagine a world where Microsoft rules the net. This company can't even protect it's on servers from hackers and we're going to let them control commerce on the net?

If Microsoft had climbed into the position of being the dominant one because of better products or better business practices, that would be one thing. But, from the start, this company relied on lies and bullying to get where it is, and we just tell them to quit. Over and over again. As the world becomes even more dependent on the computer, we are only allowing Microsoft to completely monopolize the situation.

When you control 90% of the world's computers, you control competition. I don't care how competitive the tech world is, you can't compete with them.

When Microsoft integrates products into their operating systems, only Microsoft wins. Most users, and this is their own fault, see that program there and use it because it's already there for them. Why go out and get competitors products if you can get it free from Microsoft, even if it is an inferior product? It's like NBC trying to run ads on CBS, it's not going to happen and Microsoft knows this.

The problem also is that Microsoft knows that the government will not do anything about it. Why stop what got you to the top, if there are no consequences?

Thanks for your time,

David Stanley

MTC-00008359

From: Joanne Murray

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:42pm

Subject: microsoft settlement

We believe the settlement is fair and timely. With the present economic situation in the US, it is time to settle and get on with other issues that are more important right now, like homeland security and national defense against terrorism.

Sincerely,
Joanne & Jay Murray

MTC-00008360

From: dan dengel,m.d.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:48pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The lawsuit against Microsoft should be settled via the Tunney Act. Let's get on with our economy. There's been enough damaging litigation which is NOT helping the consumer!

Daniel M. Dengel M.D.

MTC-00008361

From: rdour
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft suit should be settled as quickly as possible with little damage to the Company. Microsoft has made a major contribution to American industry's productivity, and provided the home user with valuable tools.

The suit should never have been brought against the company.

Robert Dourian
9215 Shoshone Ave.
Northridge, Ca., 91325

MTC-00008362

From: Fergers@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it may concern. As a strong supporter of Microsoft and the free Market system of the United States of America, I can't believe that in the year 2002, we still have 9 states still going after Microsoft. Don't these Attorney Generals have any thing else to do with there time. Maybe they should try getting a life instead of making a career going after Microsoft. If I were the governor of the 9 Attorney Generals I would fire all of them for wasting the peoples money. Maybe they should do there Job and go after real criminals instead of protecting Microsofts competitors like Sun Microsystems and that idiot larry elison from oricle who everytime you see him on TV bashes microsoft. I would love to know maybe 5 or 10 years from now when these Attorneys leave office who the ex Attorney Generals work for or represent in there practices. Would it be a surprise or not to see them hook with one of these Companies. Only time will tell. Maybe someone should watch them as hard as Microsofts Competitors watch Microsoft when they leave office.

Sincerely
John Redgrave

MTC-00008363

From: SUE HAMILTON
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:47pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

To whom It may Concern
Please leave Microsoft alone. They have done wonders for our country. Do not stifle their new innovative spirit! How can this be a monopoly, when Bill Gates and company have done everything from square one. The did not buy out or take over any other company; as the oil companies are doing. Please let them alone and let them go about their business of making our lives easier.
Sue Hamilton

MTC-00008364

From: Sam Brown
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:47pm
Subject: just leave micro soft alone

THIS THING THAT THE GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN DOING TO MICRO SOFT IS A DISGRACE TO THE FOUNDING FATHERS OF THIS COUNTRY. I RECOMMEND THAT YOU PEOPLE JUST LEAVE THEM ALONE AND DROP ALL THE THINGS THAT ARE BUGGING YOU PEOPLE. I RELIVE THAT WITHOUT PRIVATE ENTERPRISE THIS COUNTRY IS GOING TO GO DOWN THE TUBES.

SO GET OUT THE BUSINESS OF TRYING TO RUN EVERYONES BUSINESS. START TO FIX THE HIGHWAYS OF THIS GREAT COUNTRY AND GET OUT OF THE BUSINESS WORLD BUSINESS.

MTC-00008365

From: Gary Herbert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:50pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Further litigation by either the Justice Dept. or by the states is like a dog chasing cars. There is nothing to be gained! The settlement is fair to all parties. The competitors have had their day in court and now it's time to move on.

The consumer is having it's say by continuing to purchase Microsoft products.

Gary Herbert herbert@madnet.net

MTC-00008366

From: Rossulus@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:51pm
Subject: (no subject)

Enough hassle has been given to Microsoft. The ruling was fair and for all concerned this legal nonsense should cease.

Jane Ross

MTC-00008367

From: Mumsy37@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:53pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Department of Justice:

Please let Microsoft get on with their company business. Enough is enough. I feel all of us need to get on with the business of this country. I am hopeful that Microsoft and others may develop systems to help us ferret out the evil people who are trying to kill us and destroy our country. They can't do this while fighting for their very being, let alone the cost of lawsuits. I hope you will do whatever is necessary to encourage the states still trying for more punishment to cease actions.

God Bless America. She needs everyone to join the fight and not be fighting each other. Thank you.

Janet Munson
Corpus Christi, TX

MTC-00008368

From: Joseph McCallion
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlepeople,
I HOPE IN THE INTEREST OF ALL CONCERNED THAT THIS WHOLE ISSUE WILL BE PUT TO REST. I FEEL THAT THE ATTORNEYS GENERAL OF THE VARIOUS STATES WHO WANT TO FURTHER THIS CASE SHOULD BE REPRIMANDED. IT IS TIME TO END THIS TRAVESTY OF JUSTICE AND MOVE ON. MICROSOFT HAS BEEN AN INNOVATIVE COMPANY AND SHOULD NOT BE PUNISHED FOR ITS SUCCESS. I OWN A SMALL AMOUNT OF MICROSOFT STOCK AND HAVE BEEN HURT BY THIS SUIT BECAUSE THIS ACTION HAS DRIVEN DOWN THE PRICE OF THE STOCK. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH.

SINCERELY,
JOSEPH McCALLION

MTC-00008369

From: trialawyer@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:56pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

I support the Microsoft Settlement with the Federal Government. This costly litigation should end with this fair settlement. The cost is to the America People as well as to Microsoft.

Sincerely yours,
Jonathan M. Murdoch-Kitt
3217 Chamberlayne Avenue
Richmond, Virginia 23227-4806

MTC-00008370

From: coolcraw@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:57pm
Subject: DOJ:

DOJ:
Why aren't these State attorney generals at the airport?? These are the real criminals. If you want to take on a monopoly, take on OPEC.

C> Kapikian

MTC-00008371

From: Jeane Harkins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle this now the way it has been proposed. The current proposal seems very fair to all parties concerned. At this time we should be concerned with other problems on the home front not this one.

Thank you for your consideration.
Jeane

MTC-00008372

From: Denny1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 5:59pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
Gentlemen:

Free enterprise was attacked by the Clinton Democrats when they filed charges against Microsoft. A company that has done more to encourage the economy than any other organization in our lifetime.

If there had to be a settlement, giving to schools, equipment needed to advance the knowledge of young folks, is terrific. Mr. Gates is truly a giver and this just adds to his consideration of others.

Denny DeVries

MTC-00008373

From: DearKata@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:01pm

Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I'm totally IN FAVOR of Mr. Gates & Microsoft & its innovative & creative products to help better our lives. LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONE to use its time to continue to do this.

Please do not waste their time in court in the name of "justice" ... it is NOT justice to stifle the minds of brilliant people working for a brilliant company producing goods which we all buy to enhance our endeavors. This IS a free Country ... so let them be free to continue to innovate.

Thanks,
Kata Patton

MTC-00008374

From: MARK JADEED

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:03pm

Subject: microsofy

To whom it may concern, We feel that the current settlement between Microsoft and DOJ is fair. We hope that this would end the dispute and would give a chance for our high tech economy to recover and lead the world the way it was before litigation.

sincerely,
mark jadeed

MTC-00008375

From: Janet Tashima

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:05pm

Subject: msft settlement

I live in silicon valley. I feel a lot of the companies who have made this action against microsoft have just had inferior technology and they want to use their political position to have the government help them be competitive. I do not think that is the role of government. The companies that have the best tech will win, and that is the best thing for customers in the long run.

I also own a lot of other tech stocks and I feel that the justice dept action against Microsoft started the downturn in the tech econ and the stock market. All one has to do is view the charts of the tech stocks. I think companies such as Oracle and Sun are so blinded by their jealousy of Gates, that they are willing to let the whole tech econ suffer. They seem to not even care if their own companies have taken a major hit. I guess why should they care, they are not just a worker in their company and they are billionaires even if the stock takes a tumble. They do not want to acknowledge that a multi million dollar action against one tech company is harmful to tech in general. It is time to move on and get rid of the excesses of the past administration.

Yours,

Janet Tashima 408-243-8424

MTC-00008376

From: LTP3801@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:04pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a citizen grateful for innovative and useful products bringing tax revenue at home and abroad, I hope the settlement tentatively arrived at regarding Microsoft will be upheld and the matter finally brought to conclusion so that the time, energy and resources of Microsoft AND the government can be more usefully employed.

There are competitive forces working in the economy and the time has come for them to be the determinants.

Very truly yours,
Lydia T. Pfund
Highland Beach, Florida

MTC-00008377

From: NMorgan296@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:05pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I urge that steps be taken to ensure that the negotiated settlement with Microsoft proceed to conclusion without undue delay. The settlement is the best resolution of the litigation and any steps to derail the settlement should be strongly resisted.

Neil and Debbie Morgan

MTC-00008378

From: Carole Joy

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:38pm

Subject: Lawsuit

I am 100% in favor of microsoft being able to make and keep control of their own products. I think Microsoft invented it and should make the profit for it and be able to retain it as their own product. Other companies can make their own products.

Carole Joy

MTC-00008379

From: geno284@juno.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:08pm

Subject: Microsoft

I AM 100% BEHIND THE MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT AND WANT THE GOVERNMENT TO PASS THE LAW AND STOP HARASSING A COMPANY THAT IS THE VERY BEST AT WHAT IT DOES!

EUGENE T. YOUNG
23 CHAPEL HILL DRIVE
ROCHESTER, NY 14617

MTC-00008380

From: Heidar E-Mail

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 5:58pm

Subject: microsoft litigation

Dear Sirs,

I would like to register my opinion and frustration that there continues to be delays in reaching a full settlement in the Microsoft case. It is long overdue that we put this matter behind us and move on.

Continuous harassment of this company only serves to impede its progress in giving us better technology and this acts as a drag on the U.S. economy. So, settle and move on. We have better things to do than this.

Helgi Heidar

MTC-00008381

From: Keith Steensma

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:10pm

Subject: Microsoft Anti-Trust

I am a shareholder of both Microsoft and Compaq stock. And as such, I should be very interested in seeing Microsoft operate (and make profits) un-hindered by any barriers. The fact is the what is good for Microsoft (and the other companies, like Compaq, that rely on Microsoft) is good for the nation.

The is definitely not how I feel. I was a small businessman during the late 1980's and all of 1990's and felt the impact that (the infamous) WalMart had in our community. What was good for WalMart was not good for me. Eventually, we closed the store because we couldn't compete. My business was impacted by WalMart, but it was also impacted by the actions of Microsoft. Our business had supported Atari, Netscape, and IBM, and depended on the 'alternatives' that these companies offered. Needless to say, as these companies failed in there quest to be an alternative, our business suffered. I believe that Microsoft has acted improperly. I have read all of the documents (concerning this case) that have been released by the courts. I was stunned to read some of the actions that were taken (by Microsoft) to 'make sure' a certain company or product failed. I believe that Microsoft needs to change the way they do business. And I don't believe that this will happen unless the company is severely sanctioned and regulated. I believe that the agreement that the government has reached with Microsoft is a joke and is an insult to my belief in my government. Please look at all the aspects of this case and arrive at a more 'real' settlement of this case.

Keith Steensma
Jacksonville, Arkansas

MTC-00008382

From: warren

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:11pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi. I am writing to express my displeasure at the proposed "settlement" between the Dept of Justice and Microsoft. Not only does it NOT halt the illegal, anti-trust activities of Microsoft, but in some cases actually promotes Microsoft (ie. allowing them to flood the schools with free software).

Hopefully the unfairness of this proposed settlement will be recognized and dealt with accordingly by the courts.

Thank you for the opportunity to express my point of view.

—Warren Friedman
Fairfax, California

MTC-00008383

From: miburt

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:10pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Get off of Microsoft's back. You have already spent too much of the taxpayer's money in trying a bum cause. Quit wasting our money and let Microsoft continue to give us better products for less money as they have in the past. Find some more important things to do.

Doris & Burt Shearer

MTC-00008384

From: Michael E. Warren
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the Microsoft settlement is reasonable and that continued litigation serves no purpose except to increase legal fees and burnish the reputation of political office seekers.

Indeed, although Microsoft may effectively have a monopoly on certain software products, they have gained this by producing quality products at a reasonable price to the great benefit of the general public. I have made it a point to use the software of many competing companies before migrating to Microsoft products, and unfortunately found them to be lacking in effectiveness.

Microsoft has succeeded largely because they built a better mouse. I hate to see competition stifled, but I also hate to see the government stifle innovation.

Where were all the DoJ lawyers when Kenneth Lay and his team were taking the public on a very expensive ride with Enron? Maybe if Bill Gates and company had been as effusive with political donations as they have been with charitable donations, Microsoft might not have had to face this purgatory.

Mike Warren
Gainesville, FL

MTC-00008385

From: Joanie Garborg
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I urge the court to accept the settlement reached between Microsoft, the federal government and nine states. I believe that the settlement is just and fair. This case has dragged on too long already and this is the best way to resolve it.

Joanie Garborg

MTC-00008386

From: Park31825@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen:

I strongly believe the settlement against Microsoft recently is just and fair. Let all accept it and get on with our lives

Mr.I.E.Park
2417 Vining St.
Bellingham, Wa.98226
360-734-1589

MTC-00008387

From: Eric Lanser
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The anti-trust laws are of dubious constitutionality. They are more a-kin to a "government of men" than to the stated American ideal of a "government of laws." They do NOT treat all equally before the law (i.e. the successful). Finally, the laws violate the rights of the successful in favor of any mistaken and short-sighted voice of the "consumer interest." The anti-trust laws' dubious constitutionality is one of the primary reasons why they ultimately hurt consumers more than help them.

Ignoring the question of the rights to dispose of one's property in any way one wishes, another issue is at stake as well. The very existence of Microsoft and would-be corporations like it is greatly hindered by the presence and enforcement of the anti-trust laws. If Bill Gates had not ever existed, the world today would literally be a very different place. I'm not speaking of any sort of "It's a Wonderful Life" scenario here, but one of even greater importance. One where a single man has affected billions of people in a greatly positive way. Bill Gates provided the world with a vastly more efficient and effective platform than any other in existence. American people, and American corporations responded by purchasing it in vast numbers. Without Windows, the computer age would have, at best, been delayed a number of years. Although alternative platforms do exist, nearly every major company in the United States (and the world) uses some version of Windows on its machines. An office-place without computers would seem a strange site today, but it would be much more common without Bill Gates' actions.

Among the many successes of Windows is its integration of multiple applications smoothly and effectively. Incorporating Internet Explorer into windows served as a terrific convenience to purchasers of windows. It saved consumers not only the money to buy the program but also the shipping time of some alternative browser to their house, school, or business.

The entire reason Microsoft is being victimized by the anti-trust laws is because its business practices have been so successful, it products so vital, and its impact on America and the world so great. Microsoft should be held up as a model to emulate and Bill Gates as a hero and innovator of our times. By punishing the successful precisely because they have done what they have done in the most efficient, innovative, and profitable ways is beyond impractical; it is immoral.

The direct implications of penalizing Microsoft would mean one of a number of things (or some combination thereof): a. Layoffs at Microsoft; b. Higher prices for Windows and other software; c. Fewer innovations in the software field. Any voice of the "public" or "consumer interest" should not overlook the simple fact that a hefty fine on Microsoft will NOT come out of Bill

Gates pockets (nor should it), but ultimately out of the pockets of the "public" or consumers themselves. Even if no fine is involved, losses in profit (not to mention the costs to Microsoft for defending itself at trial) will have the same affects on prices/labor/innovation. In the long run, if Microsoft is penalized for its successful business practices, it will forever be an example to future would-be innovators. Without Bill Gates and his would-be equals, no stimulus package in the world would be able to propel this economy or any other at the rate it has been growing since the early nineties. Without innovation in the computer field, or any other, the standard of living of the United States would stagnate, productivity would cease to rise, and every human being in the United States would suffer the consequences—from the highest paid CEO (who would see his portfolio crumble and his own business stagnate) to every factory worker (who would cease to have increases in pay do to rises in productivity).

Most of all the consumers would suffer. They would have far fewer quality products coming to market. The new products that would, against all odds, come to market would be at higher prices and/or of lower quality than they would otherwise be. Once again, I urge any speaker for "the public good" or the "consumer interest" to take a look at the ultimate (and even immediate) consequences of penalizing the successful for doing exactly what they do best, providing the public with innovations, improvements, and quality products at low prices. The whole spirit of the United States was that of a nation in which great minds and average minds alike could live and think as they pleased—a symbol to the world of what the human mind and human self-interest could do for man and the world if he were left free.

MTC-00008388

From: keithgarborg@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:15pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I urge the court to accept the settlement reached between Microsoft, the federal government and nine states. I believe that the settlement is just and fair. This case has dragged on too long already and this is the best way to resolve it.

Keith Garborg

MTC-00008389

From: Patricia Andrews
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:16pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It seems to me that the case against Microsoft has gone on long enough and that it would in the nation's best interest to finalize the settlement. With everything that is going on in the world, why don't we free up the bright minds of our country to focus on improving all of our lives as I feel Microsoft has done and continues to do. If the competitors of Microsoft spent as much time and money on their ideas and products as they are spending on this long, drawn-out litigation, they would probably be more successful in the business world.

Pat Andrews
145 Scottsdale Square
Winter Park, FL 32792
Phone: 407-718-5184
Fax: 407-644-9951
E-mail: patandrews38@hotmail.com

MTC-00008390

From: Judy Tallman
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 6:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Folks,

I strongly believe that the proposed settlement is fair and just to all parties. I highly recommend that the settlement be approved. It is time for us to allow Microsoft get back to the business of developing software. The first judge could not have been computer literate or he would not have made some of the comments if what was printed was indeed what was stated. For anyone like myself who has been using computers since mainframes and 300 baud modems were state of the art, many of the charges against MS are totally ridiculous.

I have nothing but admiration for Mr. Gates both in his business practices and in his personal life. I checked the charities that MS support and they are very thoughtful and oriented towards helping children and schools especially. To me, this whole fuss seems to be all about lawyers trying to get more MS money for themselves.

Let's please let MS supply the kids with computers and get on with business.

Happy Trails,
Judy Tallman
Dancing Horses, Inc. www.dancinghorses.com

MTC-00008391

From: Bryan DeBois
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern: Please allow Microsoft to settle with the United States!! This judicial farce has gone on long enough, and wasted far too much of the tax-payers' money. It is high time that the Department of Justice give a vote of confidence for the consumers and their ability to think for themselves, instead of allowing large Microsoft competitors to whisper in justices' ears. We are on the brink of a new year, under a new administration, it is time to let it go.

Sincerely,
Bryan DeBois
debois@uakron.edu
Senior, Computer Science Major
The University of Akron

MTC-00008392

From: Melvin Henderson-Rubio
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

For the record, I need to state that I am a long-term Microsoft employee (over 15 yrs). Obviously, I have been aware of the current case filed by the DOJ and number of states as well as the settlement reached with DOJ and several states.

It goes without saying that I have never fully grasped the justification for the case nor similar cases filed earlier along the same grounds. I am well aware that our competitors have been and will continue to use the legal system and public option to try and accomplish what they have failed to in the marketplace, develop and market some of the best software in the industry.

As taxpayer, not only in my residing state of Washington (which I'm glad to see our Attorney General opted not to join in on the case) and as a US tax payer, I fail to understand what the DOJ and states see as the benefit to consumers and the use tax dollars to fund such investigation, beyond a reasonable review. What did and what do these states really think they are doing to assist their citizens? As a consumer, if I do not want Microsoft products pre-installed on my system, I can remove them and replace with other products. Similar to what happens when I purchase a car. If I do not like the radio I pay purchase one after market and the same goes for wheels or tires. There is a huge after-market for these items. Similarly there are options in the high-tech industry, but the vast majority of consumers are okay with an "industry standard." Currently it's Microsoft, in the early days of the pc, it was Apple, and someday it will be someone else. If you look at history, first it was the Chinese, Greeks and Egyptians, then French, Dutch, Spanish and British who ruled the world. In recent times, the Russians and now the US. History takes care of things.

As a consumer and watching the growth of the pc industry for more than 15 years, Microsoft along with industry partners such as: Intel and major pc companies (including Apple to some degree) have done more to stimulate the pc industry and economy overall than any other sequence of innovations in US or for that matter, contemporary world economy. I equate that Microsoft (along with Intel) has done for the pc and high tech industry what McDonald's has and continues to do for the "fast-food" industry; Disney for the concept of amusements and family entertainment; Starbucks for the coffee industry and CNN for 24 Hour News.

Yes, Microsoft has been extremely aggressive when it comes to getting it's product into the marketplace, but not any more than a sports franchise looking to win the Super Bowl or NBA Title. Just image had the DOJ and states outside of Illinois and/or Texas and California opted to oppose the Bulls, Cowboys or 49'ers from winning as many world titles as they have.

It should not be the role of the government to pick and choose winners and losers, nor overly support the lobbying efforts by competitors to try and level the marketplace. Over the years Microsoft has seen numerous opportunities and markets to pursue and set clear-cut objectives to enter those markets. I do not recall Microsoft asking the DOJ or various states Attorney Generals to keep displace or slow-down the efforts of: Lotus (1-2-3) or Word-Perfect or other industry leaders. Microsoft has not always been successful, there was Microsoft Bob and the failed merge with Quicken. Numerous current Microsoft and industry standards took several attempts, such as: MS-DOS; Microsoft Windows to become industry standards; the Microsoft Mouse was major undertaking and the Microsoft Office Suite took years to become the standard.

As a consumer, I can go into any store and with Microsoft Windows being the world-wide standard; I have 10's of thousands of applications, games and accessories to choose from. Prior to Microsoft becoming the standard (pre-Ms-DOS days), there were no where near the selection. Each app or game had a few choices, because developers and distributors did not know or what to risk developing and distributing for an operating system that might not be well received. Microsoft has without a doubt created and huge high-tech industry (again, long with key partners such as Intel) and stimulated the US economy more than any other company in US history.

It is somewhat ironic that a number, if not most of our competitors usually solely develop and support their applications to the Microsoft Windows standard. The vast majority of their developers use the Microsoft Windows standard, so do their techs support folks and sales and marketing forces. Without such a dominate operating system, our competitors would have to decided and divide their resources into 2-3 different focus areas. The same applies and more so related to the development of independent applications and services.

Not agreeing in the first place the lawsuit has merit, I am in agreement with the proposed settlement. Students and teachers, especially in lower-income areas will need to make sure they are prepared and able to compete in the marketplace as well as various careers. For the foreseeable future, Microsoft products and services will remain the world-wide industry standard (that is not to say that some other company will not displace Microsoft).

CC:Melvin Henderson-Rubio

MTC-00008393

From: Johnson, Daniel 1.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I recommend that the Court require in its remedy, in addition to the stipulations already provided (located at <http://www.usdoj.gov/atr/cases/f9400/9495.htm> and <http://www.usdoj.gov/atr/cases/f9500/9549.htm>), that: Microsoft be required to include compliance with relevant industry-standard, publicly available interconnectivity protocols and file formats in all software products, and provide these as the installed defaults. This does not forbid Microsoft from offering enhanced protocols as well, as options, but to foster competition. Microsoft must be required to make publicly available all technical details of "enhanced" or customized formats and protocols so that competitors can ensure interconnectivity.

Microsoft be required to demonstrate compatibility of OS and software with these standards. Microsoft must not "extend" any independent formats, protocols or standards unilaterally. Microsoft be not permitted to engage in deceptive marketing practices misrepresenting the strengths of MS software and OS's and the weakness of competitors'.

Industry groups exist for many standards; these tend to be dominated by leading vendors. With regard to this Action, it is important that Microsoft and its client firms not be permitted to dominate standards groups' membership for a period of years. Microsoft should be required, for a period of several years, to seek extensions of these standards only as part of industry consortia and that it and its client firms are forbidden dominate numerically.

I understand that these may seem to be too broad; it is not, for all "connectivity technology is "middleware." Details and rationale for why this action is appropriate to this case follow below. This recommendation is essentially an enhancement of Section III. E.

Respondent:

Daniel L. Johnson, MD
Red Cedar Clinic, Ltd.
Mayo Health System
Menomonie, WI 54751
johnson.danl@mayo.edu

Respondent's background:

Profession: general internal medicine since 1978
Experience relative to this case: I've been a user of microcomputers since 1980; an "occasional" amateur software developer of word processing software 1982-1988; I have monitored the microcomputer and medical software arenas, as a consumer and an interested spectator, since 1983. I have experience with Apple computers and IBM PC's, and have used all versions of MS-DOS or PC-DOS through PC-DOS 7.0, Windows 3.10 through Windows XP, and Linux OS from Red Hat 5.0 through 7.2 (the current version). I am a knowledgeable non-professional with no vocational stake in software or operating systems.

Limitations:

I do not have the time to document the factual basis for the observations and conclusions I offer below, due to the demanding time constraints of my job as a physician and due to other personal commitments. I regret this, and would simply point out that this factual basis has been well documented within industry publications (often indirectly, however) and on the internet. None of my judgments are based on private information except perhaps some of my knowledge about excess costs to the health care industry due to the effects of Microsoft's monopoly on desktop operating systems and software.

Reason for responding:

I am concerned about the continued non-competitive situation in the microcomputer software industry because I have observed that Microsoft has used its market and public relations power destructively; to stifle competitive innovation, to indirectly hinder production and sales of needed custom-built software, to destroy, in several ways, many small companies whose expertise and software tools have not been replaced; the result has been to place inefficiency burdens on consumer businesses generally.

It places inefficiency burdens on consumer businesses in two ways: First, the severe security flaws in Windows operating systems and Microsoft's Outlook and Word software (which also have monopoly strength in the their markets) have slowed operation of the Internet, cause repeated system crashes that harm companies' businesses, and expose confidential personal data via software cracking.

Second, Microsoft is using its monopoly position to raise license fees and restrict license terms in ways that create harmful fiscal burdens on companies dependent on their OS and applications, burdens that would not exist if there were actually competition. This is creating financial inefficiency in the business sector generally, and in health care in particular—because we are finding that software vendors, whose software has run well on non Microsoft platforms, are wholesale porting this software to Windows out of fear of being left outside the monopoly, resulting in uncontrollable increases in license fees and in hardware costs to users. It is useful to contrast Microsoft's use of its monopoly markets and Intel's. Intel also enjoys monopoly power, but it has not been able prevent competition: first Cyrix and now AMID have been able to provide satisfactory alternatives to Intel (although some would argue that Intel as done its best to destroy both competitors, with significant although incomplete success).

The COMPETITIVE IMPACT STATEMENT says: "On May 18, 1998, the United States filed a civil antitrust Complaint alleging that Microsoft Corporation ("Microsoft"), the world's largest supplier of computer software for personal computers, restrained competition in violation of Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. ?? 1-2..... The United States District Court for the District of Columbia, which found that Microsoft violated both Sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act The Proposed Final Judgment will provide a prompt, certain and effective remedy for consumers by imposing injunctive relief to halt continuance and prevent recurrence of the violations of the Sherman Act by Microsoft that were upheld by the Court of Appeals and restore competitive conditions to the market." I am convinced, based on my extended observation of the computer industry in this country, that the proposed Final Judgment will NOT provide a remedy that is effective, certain or prompt in restoring competition to the markets in which Microsoft has a monopoly position because it does not adequately take into account the manifold and pervasive means that have been used by Microsoft to achieve and maintain its monopoly position.

Rationale:

First, the remedies only address middleware (because the Complaint addresses middleware). Unfortunately for prospect of a remedy that is either "certain" or "effective" in restoring competition to the desktop computer industry, middleware is only a small though important factor. It will not be possible to restore competition by addressing middleware alone. Microsoft has successfully created for itself monopoly positions in operating systems for pc's email programs word processing programs spreadsheet programs browsers ("middleware") other less "significant" market areas By "monopoly position" I mean that potential competitors can survive only by offering software that mimics the operations and functionality of Microsoft software; Microsoft continually changes their software's specifications and file formats to prevent this, and to make their own earlier versions incompatible with files created by new versions, forcing users to abandon the software both of competitors and of Microsoft in order to be able to interchange documents efficiently.

Microsoft does not have monopoly positions in server operating systems database software programming languages mail service internet protocols file/directory management customized software This does not obviate Microsoft's monopoly position in all the other software areas that it already dominates.

Microsoft understands that the most important key to complete dominance of the software industry is by controlling "connectivity"—sharing of documents, images, email, data, and directories. I will not expand this response with details; I will simply say that Microsoft is attempting to gain control of every area that it does not now dominate; the only area that seems relatively safe from monopolistic control right now is large databases. In every other area Microsoft has in place either technological programs or marketing programs that have some reasonable likelihood of controlling markets or technology or both.

As I have observed the evolution of the desktop-computer market during the last 21 years, it has been rare for Microsoft to gain competitive advantage by itself producing a functionally or technically superior product. MS-DOS was a badly designed operating system that happened to enjoy the imprimatur of IBM and the advantage of open computer architecture. Microsoft purchased the leading email software vendor; it waited for the word processing market to mature, then imitated the best of what was available from multiple competitors, and made Word the "best" by preventing competitors from learning how to make their own software work well with upcoming versions of Microsoft operating systems until Microsoft had completed its own work on Word, guaranteeing that the competition would always be "behind" on the dominant OS. It did the same thing with Excel, its spreadsheet program.

It was not able to do this with Netscape, and so it behaved in a variety of destructive ways that are well documented in the trial proceedings. In general, I can identify four ways in which Microsoft has stifled competition: by purchasing its competition by inviting its competition to consider being purchased, examining their software technically, and then duplicating their software engineering while abandoning the proposed acquisition on one or another technicality. through a consistent pattern, since about 1990, of false and misleading advertising that inflates falsely the strengths of Microsoft software and denying its faults or limitations while falsely slandering the strengths of competitive versions and emphasizing their faults and limitations. By claiming to adopt industry standards when offering software for which "connectivity" is important, but actually departing from those standards in the implementation, meaning that the output of these programs is not actually "portable" or exchangeable. (By "actually" I mean that it is not feasible within pragmatic limitations of time, effort, and money, not that it is conceptually impossible.)

I may be argued that these actions of Microsoft have not always been successful, but these instances of failure do not imply that Microsoft has failed to leverage their monopoly position; moreover, it has attempted to do so in every conceivable way. The effects of this monopoly, as I've noted above, are financial inefficiency and operational inefficiency. Microsoft is now using its monopoly position to squeeze its business licensees (users) financially by raising license fees, requiring software upgrades, limiting user rights and otherwise restricting licenses.

In general, it is true that Microsoft operating systems, in comparison to other operating systems (Unix versions, Linux, OS/2, Macintosh, BeOS) are more prone to crashes, are more susceptible to security breakdowns and breaches, and do not run as efficiently on hardware (computers), entailing financial inefficiency for users who must purchase additional servers and spend more money on energy. My understanding is that in general, Microsoft operating systems require about twice the expenditure for electricity and for computers as alternatives. In addition, software vendors are burdened with the inefficiency of having to convert software to Windows because of the real threat to their businesses from not having Windows versions.

Microsoft will argue that to restrain its practices is to stifle technological improvement. It will point to specific instances in which its software performs better than other choices. But the existence of such specific instances of superiority does not imply that its software is generally superior in performance or in design; furthermore, even if this were true, Microsoft's practices effectively destroy competition and enhance its monopoly powers; this defect is more important to efficient commerce than the relatively small technical superiorities it points to. Restoration of competition.

In my judgment it will not be possible, by any fiat a court is capable of issuing, to "promptly" restore competition to the market, as the Competitive Impact Statement proposes. At most, the court may be able to hinder Microsoft's destructive practices sufficiently to permit genuine competition to emerge by establishing a competitive environment. Because the future of computing lies in interconnectivity of machines and exchange of data and communications, the only way to free our commercial society from monopolistic domination by Microsoft or any similar entity is to mandate that in all its operating systems and software applications, Microsoft supply, as defaults, file formats, directory handling, encryption methods, data-handling protocols, and other technology important in interconnectivity that are publicly available and conform to consensus industry standards.

Conclusion (reprise): Thus I am recommending that the court require, in its remedy, that: Microsoft be required to include compliance with relevant industry-standard, publicly available interconnectivity protocols and file formats with all software, and provide these as the installed defaults. This does not forbid Microsoft from offering enhanced protocols as well, as options, but to foster competition, Microsoft must be required to make publicly available all technical details of "enhanced" or customized formats and protocols so that competitors can ensure interconnectivity.

Microsoft be required to demonstrate compatibility of OS and software with these standards.

Microsoft be not permitted to "extend" any independent formats, protocols or standards unilaterally. Microsoft be not permitted to engage in deceptive marketing practices misrepresenting the strengths of MS software and OS's and the weakness of competitors' Industry groups exist for many standards; these tend to be dominated by leading vendors. With regard to this Action, it is important that Microsoft and its client firms not be permitted to dominate standards groups' membership for a period of years. Microsoft be required, for a period of several years, to seek extensions of these standards only as part of industry consortia and that it and its client firms are forbidden dominate numerically.

MTC-00008394

From: Warmenup@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:20pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

As a consumer please note that i agree that a settlement in the Microsoft case is good for both the consumer, the industry and the American economy.

Please get on with it.
Thank you
Meredith St Pierre
Boca Raton, FL

MTC-00008396

From: Billie R Cox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:27pm
Subject:

It is beyond my understanding why the government wants to waste the money It is beyond my understanding why the government wants to waste the money of the tax payer to try to destroy Microsoft through senseless litigation when Microsoft has done so much for the economy of the United States by creating jobs.

Billie Cox

MTC-00008397

From: Stefan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:29pm
Subject: Thoughts on MS settlement

Dear sir or madam:

I am a U.S. Citizen, a long-time computer user and am appalled by the Department of Justice's proposal to give Microsoft a monopoly in education by allowing them to donate Windows-based computers, the bane of computing, to poorly-funded schools in the country. This proposal is a shame and travesty of justice. Microsoft has acted illegally time and again, thus, it clearly is not just nor in the public's best interest to reward their illegal and predatory behavior with such a largess. While I am not an Apple Computer stock holder, I favor the counter proposal submitted to the Department of Justice by Apple's CEO Mr. Steven Jobs.

Sincerely,
Stefan Ingannamorte
Apopka, FL

MTC-00008398

From: JNWGOLF@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please be advised that I believe that the settlement agreed to between the Department of Justice and Microsoft is fair and reasonable to the consumer and is in the public interest.

It is time for everyone involved to get on with being concerned about innovation, creativity, and doing constructive things to help stimulate the economy. It is necessary for this matter to be resolved for the benefit of the consumer, Microsoft's stockholders, and for all the companies that do business with Microsoft. Needless to say, I encourage the Court to approve the settlement agreed to between Microsoft, the nine states, and the Department of Justice.

Jerome N. Weinberg

MTC-00008399

From: Max Burford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:31pm
Subject: Microsoft case

It's my feeling that the Microsoft case ruling by the court of appeals should be final.

Quite dragging it out.
Max O. Burford burford@ccountry.net

MTC-00008400

From: Geo and Steven Mayes
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:33pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The government should have stayed out of this in the first place. Microsoft should be able to do business without being manacled by the government.

George Mayes
Lamay@quixnet.net

MTC-00008401

From: Rees31@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the proposed government settlement with Microsoft which I think is fair to all concerned. Microsoft is a significant investment in my personal retirement fund which I will need to supplement social security when I retire in March, 2003.

Rees Himes
31 Sylvan Road North
Westport, CT 06880

MTC-00008402

From: Steve (038) Pam Lock
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Ladies/Gentlemen:

We are extremely hopeful and pleased that the Microsoft case may finally be settled. We feel very strongly that it is in the best interest of both the economy and the country—especially in light of recent events—that this settlement proceed to completion.

In this critical time we feel the DOJ should turn its attention and spend its taxpayer funds on the security of this country. We feel spending any more of tax payers money or DOJ time and energy on this case would not bring any further benefit to us the consumer or to our country.

Thank you for your time in reading this and we continue to be hopeful that this matter will finally come to a close.

Sincerely,
Steven and Pamela Lock
1580 SE Pioneer Way
Oak Harbor, WA 98277

MTC-00008403

From: Ying, Xingren
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 6:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle the case! U.S. economy and HiTech cannot afford this endless lawsuit. Let's compete in the market not in the court. Even Microsoft competitors can kill MS in the court. But the consumer will be the loser also. We will pay the higher price to buy the software and the leadership of software industry will transfer to other country.

So, please settle. We just want Microsoft behave better, not to kill it.
Xingren

MTC-00008404

From: Chance Yohman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Is it unjust for a company to share a large sector of a market? This is one of the questions before the United States Department of Justice right now concerning Microsoft and the software market. If Microsoft does a good job at what it does, then undoubtedly it will gain a large share of the market just like it has. Its time to end this attack fueled by petty jealousies of other software competitors and our federal government's fear of letting individuals do their own business. Let Microsoft be and let the market dictate who comes out on top. One of the many citizens who this country belongs to rightfully,

Chance E. Yohman
East Waterboro, Maine
THE GEEK SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH

MTC-00008405

From: james k davies
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:41pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

To all those concerned:

It is my hope that the settlement, which has been reached in the issue of the Department of Justice (and some state suits) and Microsoft, will be found by the District Court to be fair, complete and comprehensive. From my perspective, that of a consumer who is dependent on the trouble free, low maintenance, smooth cross-application performance of my operating system (Windows) for a business software function free of problems, it is not realistic to deny Windows users this settlement and move on in the world of software development and innovation. Please do not be put off by my use of the word "innovation." It is the most descriptive and exciting word in the world of technological development.

I am weary of the denial of the existence of other software operating systems, systems which have developed contemporaneously with Windows, with varying levels of success—DOS (which IBM decided they didn't want), IBM's OS2 (a dreadful, cumbersome, and generally non-performing system), Apple's MacIntosh (priced out of my market—by Apple, not Microsoft), Unix (too expensive and too technical as it was developed for the scientific and engineering markets of which most of us are not members) and Linux (until very recently not performing in the cross-application market (through no fault of Microsoft's) most users require and still not 'up to snuff' for this user.

Until there is something better than Microsoft's Windows—and it's browser—I suggest we stop punishing Microsoft for being the best.

Elizabeth B. Davies

MTC-00008406

From: DwightNancy James
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:45pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

We want you to complete the Microsoft Settlement. The agreement is too stringent in our view, but the US Govt has spent entirely too much time and money on this inquisition already. There are many more pressing matters needing our tax dollars. Please do not allow the opponents of the settlement drag this out any longer.

We have always felt that Microsoft has served our needs properly and have never felt used or abused.

Thank you.

Dwight and Nancy James 10124 Sharon Spring Dr
Fredericksburg, VA 22408
(540) 371-4625
cc: Congressman Frank Wolf
Senators John Warner and George Allen

MTC-00008407

From: Chris Aveni
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/3/02 6:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

It is of my opinion, and many other Americans of sound mind that Microsoft has suffered ridiculous penalties as a result of over zealous attorneys and sour competitors. Please name me one other company in this country that exports as much as Microsoft in which keeps our trade deficit from soaring. Without Microsoft in our economy, we would not only have a much more devastating trade deficit, but an economy that would be much worse off than it is today. Also keep in mind that Microsoft has brought technology allot further than any other company has over the years. Microsoft did try to stifle competition, and they should be prevented from doing so in the future, but it is know time to get off their backs and all get back to business. The proposed settlement is overly far to the competition.

Christopher J. Aveni
Technical Analyst
AremisSoft Corporation, Manufacturing Division

E-mail: chris.aveni@aremissoft.com
Internet: http://www.aremisoft.com/

MTC-00008408

From: CACUSN@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:47pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Sir—

Just a quick note to let you hear my opinion on the subject settlement (Tunney Act). I would really like to see litigation ended immediately. I believe the settlement is fair as is and further fighting in the courts will do nothing for me as consumer and everything to further fatten the pockets of lawyers and a few wealthy plaintiffs. I do not wish to see my tax dollars wasted in further litigation against Microsoft and request that DOJ move to accept the settlement as it stands. Thank you.

Chris Carbott
11508 Boathouse CT
Bowie, MD 20720
301-805-6987

MTC-00008409

From: ANTIQUESFM@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:48pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer and a stock owner, I am satisfied with the settlement which has been reached.

MTC-00008410

From: Larry Steinbecker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:51pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I would like to take this opportunity to speak forcefully in favor of Microsoft regarding the DOJ's legal actions against them. Unlike the monopoly previously held by AT & T, and currently held by the U.S. Post Office, Microsoft did not gain their dominant position by outlawing competitors; they outperformed them, thus earning a dominant position.

I speak directly from experience as the owner of a computer software firm when I say that Microsoft has done this country a great service in delivering a single dominant operating system. Since my company only has to write software for a single environment, it is able to deliver higher quality products and offer lower prices than if it had to write software for numerous, incompatible environments. Our 2,000+ customers are the direct beneficiaries of this fact to the tune of tens if not hundreds of thousands of dollars. This same fact holds true for every producer of software that runs on Microsoft platforms, multiplied by each of their respective customer bases.

Further, every one of Microsoft's customers, by having free access to a web browser, was measurably and positively impacted by the fact they did not have to spend an additional $30—$100 in order to browse the web. True, Netscape was hurt by this action, but the benefit to the country as a whole was immense. Every Microsoft customer saved $30 to $100 by not having to purchase a separate browser. Each of these millions of users were then able to save that money, or use it to purchase other goods or services that they would not have otherwise bought.

Remarkably, Microsoft has been painted as the "bad guy" for making business more difficult for their competitors. Never mind the fact that every action taken by every business in every field is done precisely to benefit their own company at the expense of their competitors. Every advertisement, feature, and service provided by a company negatively affects their competitors' ability to compete with them. And yet we are to believe that Microsoft is evil and conniving for not wishing to bestow bounty upon its competitors, nor make life easy for them.

The DOJ's actions thus far have further cost the economy untold billions. It is not a coincidence that the stock market plunge began precisely on the day that the judgment was announced against Microsoft. Since that time, the stock market has lost nearly $1 trillion in value as investors became worried that the tech sector, our most productive market segment, was going to come under persecution and micromanagement by U.S. Government. The DOJ's actions have not just eviscerated Microsoft's value, but the retirement and savings accounts of countless citizens who gladly owned Microsoft and other tech stocks.

It should be obvious to anyone of even limited intellectual resources that Microsoft, while having a dominant position, can only do so if they continue to outperform their competitors. Microsoft has stumbled in particular areas, such as personal finance software, on-line services and even server operating systems. In every case the market has gone to their competitors (Quicken, American On-Line and Linux) quickly, efficiently, and without government intervention. This same migration will happen if Microsoft ceases to offer the best operating system at the best price.

Microsoft's envious competitors are largely driving this case. They are seeking to gain in court that which they could not achieve in the marketplace. But it is time for the DOJ to stop acting as the special-interest arm of the government for these competitors; instead the DOJ should act in the interest of the countless citizens benefited directly and indirectly by use of Microsoft's products and ownership of Microsoft's stock. I strongly urge you to settle this case with the least possible damage to Microsoft, and to let America's most productive company alone in the future, to benefit of our country.

Sincerely,
Larry Steinbecker

MTC-00008411

From: James F. Miller
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The proposed settlement is good for the consumer, the American economy and the public interest. I urge you to settle this case immediately and not let a few dissidents continue to block a reasonable settlement.

Sincerely,
James F. Miller

MTC-00008412

From: Abe Shapiro

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:58pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir:

We are in favor of the present settlement. We think continuing the litigation should be stopped.

Abe Shapiro

MTC-00008413

From: Robert Feeney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:05pm
Subject: Settlement Suit

Dear DOJ,

Microsoft Corporation like yourselves and me are still evolving. This evolving in a harsh and competitive electronic universe has shown us the best and the worst of Microsoft. Still, I believe it is in our best interest to leave MSFT intact and not break up the company.

Sincerely,
Robert Feeney
707-863-8898
707-863-8899 fax
707-491-0737 pager
rfeeney@interx.net rfeeney@interx.net

MTC-00008414

From: Lonnie Malaska MIS CD(038)C
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:58pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

With respect to a document, re: "Utah Attorney General is pursuing harsher punishment..."

And, a following response, re: "The Judge in the Microsoft case ... will decide whether additional (or different) remedies are appropriate..."

As an Systems Administrator working with microsoft products has been both, positive and negative. But, the Antitrust Case needs to be resolved. I have personally noted that Microsoft is taking over other software vendors ideas and thus their product, due to the 'ownership of the only viable computer OS on the market to-day'.

Other vendors can't possibly compete with such a giant, I think our Fore Fathers addressed this issue.

Lonnie Malaska
1795 E. South campus Dr.
Salt Lake City, ut 84112
Lonnie Malaska
Campus Design
University of Utah
lmalaska@campplan.utah.edu
ph: 801-581-3136
fax: 581 6081

MTC-00008415

From: Warren Hoffman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:59pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

As a citizen, a Microsoft shareholder and a retired engineer of AT&T, I hope you can come to a positive solution for Microsoft in the ongoing litigation. I think that Microsoft has been the most progressive software provider, a leading worldwide organization. I feel that we will see great progress for the United States computer and communication fields that will surpass whatever we have seen up to now. Please keep Microsoft's software leadership intact.

Warren L. Hoffman

MTC-00008416

From: Virgsal@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:58pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Although I think Microsoft does have dirty hands in this affair, the settlement they have proposed seems fair to all parties concerned. It is in the interest of our economy to finalize this mess and get on with business. This is a very fast changing industry and their competitors who are spending so much to fight them would do better by putting their money where it could be used to innovate! There are still many open avenues to explore!

Thank you for your time!
Sally McQueen

MTC-00008417

From: k7rdn@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 6:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the settlement is fair & some of the States involved also agree, it seems foolish for States that don't want to settle to hold out. It's been a couple of years already-enough is enough!!!

I think M/S did great things for the average Joe with home computers & really don't see how they forced anything on people that didn't want various programs.

I am 79 yrs. old, always thought I was of average intelligence until I got a computer about 6 yrs. ago (I never cursed or talked to myself before that). I just wish I was 70 yrs. younger as my grand-kids (all under 18) really catch on compared to people my age.

Thanks for letting me spout off.
Fred Murrell
K7RDN (HAM RADIO CALL)

MTC-00008419

From: Sid Ghosh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion, Justice Dept. lawsuit against ha very little merit. Microsoft indulged in the same business practice as any other reputable viable business enterprise would do. Just that Microsoft became successful- may be very successful.

I think DOJ should reach a legal settlement with Microsoft and move ahead, without further punishing a very innovative US Corporation.

Sid Ghosh

MTC-00008420

From: Auguste Schwab
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement Gentlemen/
Mesdames.....

I believe that the proposed settlement in the Microsoft case is fair and should be approved.

It is important to realize how much Microsoft has done for the technology sector not to mention what they have done for the average American citizen. Without them, we would be years behind and prices for hardware and software would be far higher than they are today. Microsoft has made us the world leaders in the field. Everyone else had the opportunity—but Microsoft did it. Were they aggressive? Yes, but it served us all well. A shrinking violet in this industry does not do us any good.

A billion dollars worth of hardware and software for children would be a godsend and would provide them with knowledge they can put to good use in their adult years. It will help the economy and the reputation of the United States immensely in the long run.

Do not be misled by special interest groups which object to this settlement for their own benefit.

Sincerely,
Auguste Schwab
6281 Evian Place
Boynton Beach FL 33437

MTC-00008421

From: (00B0)(FFFF)
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen/Madam

Let us not derail an already fragile economy. History does repeat itself as George Bush Sr. found out abruptly-ITS ALL ABOUT THE ECONOMY, stupid! See, I softened my stance at the end of the statement..Keep those middle class jobs flourishing and good things will happen...

Dave Mckay

MTC-00008422

From: Paul DeMar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:12pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I think the proposed settlement would be fair to all parties involved. Its time to settle the case and move on.

Sincerely
Paul DeMar

MTC-00008423

From: c.g.kazinsky@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:14pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

MTC-00008424

From: Joe Doyle
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:18pm
Subject: Settlement

I am all for the Microsoft settlement.
Joseph J. Doyle

MTC-00008425

From: LELAND ERICKSON
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:17pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Just settle this case now as is——don't waste any more time and money'

MTC-00008426

From: JAMES .F. OVERSTREET
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:18pm

Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I THINK THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT WITH MICROSOFT IS A FAIR SETTLEMENT AND IS CERTAINLY IN THE PUBLIC'S INTEREST AND IS CERTAINLY IN MY INTEREST. WHILE I AM A CITIZEN OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA THE STATE'S ATTORNEY GENERAL DOES SPEAK FOR ME, BUT FOR SOME SPECIAL INTERESTS, WHICH ARE INTERESTED IN HAVING THE GOVERNMENT DO FOR THEM WHAT THE MARKET HAS NOT.

ESPECIALLY IN THESE TROUBLED ECONOMIC TIMES IT IS TIME TO REMOVE THE SCHAKLES THAT HAVE SLOWED MICROSOFT DOWN. GET THIS THING SETTLED ALREADY!!!

SINCERELY:
JAMES F. OVERSTREET

MTC-00008427

From: Paul Allen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

As a concerned citizen, I would like to express my opinion that the settlement reached between the DOJ/9 States and Microsoft is fair and should be accepted.

This entire Microsoft litigation is a terrible waste of taxpayers money. It should come to an end as soon as possible. There are a lot more pressing issues we have today.

Thank you for accepting my opinion in this matter.

Paul J. Allen
17000 Red Bird Road
Winter Garden, FL 34787
407-656-0934
redbird@mpinet.net

MTC-00008428

From: Norman Martinusen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This matter should be settled promptly. The settlement others accepted was tough but fair to all concerned; and should be accepted by the other parties which have not yet settled.

N.J. Martinusen

MTC-00008430

From: Daniel Bontz
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think it is time to settle this issue and stop spending the tax payer's money. I am currently living in Florida and do not understand what Florida is not agreeing to the Government offer.

I believe it the offer is a good offer and the matter should be settled now.

Thank you for considering my opinion.
Daniel L. Bontz

MTC-00008431

From: John Moore
To: microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
Date: 1/3/02 7:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to comment upon the proposed settlement between the United States Department of Justice and Microsoft.

Since the company has been found both to be a monopoly and to be misusing the power inherent in that position, it would seem that any final result of the public's money and effort spent reaching this point should accomplish three things at a minimum: halting the illegal conduct of the company, promoting and restoring competition in the industry, and depriving the company of the gains it has accrued through its illegal conduct.

The proposed settlement fails to accomplish any one of these three goals. In addition, the Court is aware that the original suit arises because of a difference of opinion regarding the effect of an earlier consent order. The wording of the proposed settlement appears vague to this software engineer. Even one unschooled in the law can spot huge holes which would permit Microsoft to evade the apparent intent of the document. From past behavior, this would likely lead to continued illegal activity. As an example, the proposed settlement allows Microsoft to define the "Windows Operating System." This means that it will be unfettered from employing the method of "bundling" additional functionality into the OS to attack future competition, just as it has attacked Netscape, Real Media, Apple Computers' QuickTime, and a near-endless list of others.

There is no economic incentive for a software company to expend the research and development time necessary to create a new application if its functionality can be bundled into Microsoft's definition of the "Windows Operating System." At the trial, Microsoft did not contest that it could define the operating system to include a ham sandwich if it desired. This is not appropriate and needs remedy.

The government's proposed agreement does provide that Microsoft cannot penalize some manufacturers if they offer to sell the application of a competitor. Unfortunately, it does permit Microsoft to offer inducements to a manufacturer to exclude competitors' products. It seems that under the proposed settlement, it would be illegal for Microsoft to—as an example—sell Windows to a manufacturer for $30 per PC if it didn't use competing software, but charge $100 if the manufacturer included competitors' products. On the other hand, nothing in the proposed agreement would seem to stop Microsoft from charging everyone $100 for Windows, but offering a $70 inducement if no competitor's products were used by the manufacturer. To someone who is not a legal scholar, this appears to be the same thing. It would undoubtedly have the same result—and would not restore competition.

A just settlement would not only prohibit penalties imposed by Microsoft to stop others' pro-competitive activities, but also prohibit it from offering any inducements which lead to the same result: exclusion of competition from other software companies. As a professional software engineer, I can assure you that no settlement will truly promote competition unless it fully addresses what are known in the field as Application Programming Interfaces (most frequently abbreviated "API's"). In the past, Microsoft has used its control over operating system

API's to extend its monopoly. These APIs are not engraved in stone; they change. In the past, they have been deliberately changed by Microsoft to hamper other companies. Some of them were not even disclosed publicly until experts found that Microsoft applications were using "secret" OS calls to accomplish results that were otherwise impossible.

Likewise, I see nothing in the proposed settlement which will limit Microsoft's typical philosophy of "embrace and extend." This exercise of power, only possible to a monopoly, allows Microsoft to "embrace" an open and publicly-defined internet protocol and "extend" it—adding functionality that makes it work properly only with Windows clients. To allow for competition to exist, a Monopolist Microsoft should have to fully disclose all protocols and protocol changes to foster interoperability.

The proposed settlement will accomplish nearly nothing with regard to API's and protocols. Full disclosure is not mandated, and Microsoft will see any vagueness in a light that serves the company's interest. This is a highly technical area, but a solution is available and workable. No API is placed into the Windows Operating System without a purpose. There are documents inside Microsoft that detail what the API is supposed to do, and how it is to be used by programmers. To achieve full disclosure, all that need be done is to publish this information publicly—perhaps on the internet. API disclosure should not be limited to the Windows Operating System, but should also include Microsoft Office. Although this suite enjoys over ninety-five percent market share, it has not been addressed in the proposed settlement. This will allow Microsoft to evade the settlement's rules by simply moving functionality from Windows to Office, or offering special terms for Office that would not be allowed with Windows.

If an API should change during the development process, all the company should have to do is post the details of the change within a reasonable number of days. It would be possible to completely automate the process so that when details of the changes are placed in the proper electronic "folder" for internal sharing among developers those changes would instantly disseminate to the Web. This will not require any access to any part of the Windows source code, but it will level the development "playing field."

Another element of the proposed settlement is allowing Microsoft to retain the gains it has obtained through its browser monopolization. As a warning against future misconduct, I feel a just settlement would require full source-code disclosure of Internet Explorer. Since the PC interface seems to be migrating from the desktop to the Web browser, failure to do this will simply allow Microsoft to continue to do with Internet Explorer what it cannot do with Windows itself.

I will close by bringing up a point which worries me greatly. The original decree contained a prohibition against Microsoft from taking knowing action to disable or adversely affect the operation of competing application products. This seems to have totally vanished from the proposed settlement. Microsoft has done this sort of thing many times in the past. Unless this anti-competitive behavior is addressed by the Court, I fear this business practice will continue. Indeed, having gone to trial and been convicted, I feel that the proposed final settlement is nothing less than an invitation to continue "business as usual." It fails to provide even a meaningful penalty for failure to comply. The only penalty I see is an extension of the term for two more years.

Lacking any further penalties, why would Microsoft even care whether it chose to ignore these so-called "restrictions" for five years or seven?

I urge the Court to reject the proposed final settlement.

John Moore
1970 Fisher Trail, NE
Atlanta, GA 30345

MTC-00008432

From: JANH1999@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:33pm
Subject: microsoft settlement.

As a consumer I feel that Microsoft's products have made my life easier. I have felt from the beginning that this suit is an attempt by Microsoft's competitors to use the DOJ to "get back" at Microsoft. The DOJ under Janet Reno, allowed itself to be manipulated into prosecuting this case. Thankfully, the DOJ under Mr. Ashcroft is not buying into this farce. The States Attorneys Generals who continue to block a settlement seem to be doing so to grab headlines. If I lived in one of these states I'd make it a point to vote them out.

MTC-00008433

From: Raymond Browning
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in support of Microsoft.
Those people trying to block the settlement are just after the money, PLAIN and SIMPLE. Its not about the consumer, its about money.

Raymond Browning

MTC-00008434

From: JPiscioner@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a Consumer, Taxpayer and Shareholder I am opposed to any further litigation regarding Microsoft, it seems to me that we are penalizing a company who has developed the competitive edge in its industry and the competition is crying wolf. I would think that enough resources have been spent on both sides to move this litigation alone to closure, for the benefit of the consumer and the taxpayer.

MTC-00008435

From: Aila M. Horan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ:
It's time to get this whole politically inspired, Clinton-initiated Microsoft travesty over with. Take the settlement and get busy on more important matters.

Richard F. Horan
9442 Clocktower Lane
Columbia, MD 21046-1817

MTC-00008436

From: jrod(a)mindspring.com
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 7:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Mam/Sir,

As a graphics designer, I make my living using computers. Therefore the issue before us affects me in a uniquely personal way. The recent decision by the U.S. Department of Justice to allow Microsoft to remain intact even after a Federal judge ruled that they were indeed a monopoly and guilty of anti-competitive practices boggles my mind. This decision confirms to Microsoft that they are totally free and able to take up the whole personal and business computer market without anyone even lifting a finger in opposition. First it was Netscape and other smaller computer companies/makers. Who is going to be next? Are they going to destroy LINUX and the GNU free software movement because it's such a thorn in their side? Current memos floating around Microsoft that I have read confirm that Microsoft is getting ready to wage war on LINUX. Does everybody have to be running Microsoft products and pay them accordingly for that company to be satisfied? It seems that is so.

Frankly, enough is enough. I refuse to stand by and allow a large conglomerate of a corporation like Microsoft to exclusively engulf the computer market and destroy the freedom of choice that I have today. The freedom I have to buy and purchase my own software (Microsoft's .NET strategy is trying to change all that with web based "subscription" fees). The freedom I have to switch out components of my machine without having to report them to big brother (the new windows activation features in XP become void if I change a certain number of hardware components). Microsoft does not care about my freedoms as a computer user. They only care about my pocket book. If we just stand by and watch, they will take over every gate to the internet and computing world, and then set up a toll booth and charge us fees for use.

So I implore you to please not back down to the Redmond giant in a feeble settlement. To Microsoft, money is nothing. Charging them with a fine for their corrupt practices and nothing more allows them to continue in their march toward total domination of the computing world without any resistance. Stand by your decision to not approve the DOJ's decision, and please fight for a win that would allow us as citizens and computer users to remain free in our choice of what we can and choose to do with our computers. Thank you for your time.

Jason Rodriguez
Graphics Artist/Designer
797 Whitehurst Landing
Virginia Beach, VA 23464

MTC-00008437

From: bgates
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/3/02 7:46pm
 Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
 TO THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

We never felt there was any crime committed by Microsoft in the first place! What did they not want to do? They didn't want to share their system & their knowledge with their competitors???? That was the big criminal conspiracy??? Yes, they are an extremely large company; yes, all of their systems intermingle & co-mingle beautifully. Should Microsoft have stopped innovating & subsequently stopped growing?

The other companies which try to keep Microsoft in the courts all the time would be better off if they spent their time trying to develop some new & innovative systems & playing the game fairly. We have never heard of any company that gives other companies the secrets of their business practices & allows them access to their innovative methods which (sad to say) earn money for THEM, and lessen the profits of their competitors, HAVE YOU? AND—We still don't understand how the states got involved and were even given monetary settlements for their supposed abuse at the hands of Microsoft. We hope the settlement with the 9 states ends this case. There has been an exorbitant amount of money spent on this case & the time expended by high paid, valuable employees of the Justice Department could be better spent bringing to justice REAL CRIMINALS such as terrorists, murderers, rapists, gangsters, robbers, etc, etc, etc. PLEASE CLOSE THE CASE!!!

BILLY & ELIZABETH GATES

MTC-00008438

From: Ron Sadler
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:49pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

Its enough!! Lets get our economy moving again. This has had a very negative impact on all technology issues.

Ron Sadler

MTC-00008439

From: Sandy (038) Jeff Melin
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:48pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Gentlemen,

May it please the Court: that I, as a non-techie computer user both at home and work for the last 12 years, recognize the benefits of Microsoft's products as superior in delivering utility and function to both the average and advanced business user. I also recognize the superiority of other vendors products in casual at home, the arts, and design applications.

As a senior citizen, and lifelong student of business and economics; I find it abhorrent that an innovator, the likes of which have been penalized before for similar achievement and creativity—would again be brought to its knees by the least common denominator of our society—success! What has happened to the American Dream? Do we really want to squash the incentive to excel and achieve?

Jeffrey N. Melin Carmel, IN

MTC-00008440

From: Carol Sandt
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:54pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To the Department of Justice:
 I am writing to register my opinion that the Microsoft case should be settled as soon as possible and not be further litigated. I base my opinion on the fact that the federal government and nine states have already reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. I believe that this settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. I also believe that this settlement is good for consumers, industry and the American economy.

Carol H. Sandt
 382 River Road
 Pequea, PA 17565 USA
 717-284-2881
 csandt@psu.edu

MTC-00008441

From: Kevin Kendrick
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:54pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

While I commend the US government and most of the states in reaching a settlement agreement with Microsoft, I believe that the process and the costs are out of line with the value the citizen/consumers have received. This is not where we should be spending our valuable resources.

I do not see how this "U.S. settlement" helps me and definitely do not see how the "holdout states" settlement is significantly better and worth the wait and expense of getting it. It is the job of the government to protect the consumer (not the competitors) against harmful practices. I am hard pressed to believe that consumers like me need the help of the government in deciding if we are getting the value out the product for the price. We vote with our checkbooks and companies respond by adding more features or reducing the price in line with the value they are delivering. As for the response of the competitors, they should be responding in the marketplace and not in the courtroom.

I am a user of Microsoft products and have enjoyed all of the additional features they are constantly adding to make the product easier and better to use. I call these improvements and am well qualified to determine if I should purchase the product that offers the improvements. Microsoft remains diligent in providing what the customer demands and is spending what it takes to deliver the technology to the customer at a great prices.

Let's get on with it and settle the case. It's dragged on too long. Let's spend government resources where they are needed, in helping people that need help.

Quit wasting our money and SETTLE.

Sincerely,
 Kevin Kendrick
 Kevin Kendrick
 1305 Lombard Street #6
 San Francisco, CA 94109
 t: (415) 922-3078
 m: (415) 572-4447
 f: (419) 793-7306

e: <mailto:k-j-k@pacbell.net> k-j-k@pacbell.net

MTC-00008443

From: Texpop@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:58pm
 Subject: Microsoft AntiTrust Settlement

Dear Sir/Madam,
 This AntiTrust Action by the government has gone on too long already; let's close this action and carry on with progress. I am disturbed that some litigants in this case want to prolong the legal process.

Microsoft did indeed overstep the bounds of fair competition in some of their agreements with hardware suppliers, but the solution to that problem could have been resolved many years ago by addressing the unfair practices and stopping them. Instead the competitors enlisted the government to resolve their grievances at no cost to them. These competitors had legal recourse of their own in the court system if they wanted to pursue it. The complaint about bundling software was and remains specious and against the benefits to the consumer. For example, Netscape's programs could run on Windows. How is that possible? It is because Microsoft gave them all the information needed to program their software to run on Windows. That is not the action of a company trying to deny use of their system. I have yet to hear anyone complain about the cost of Windows and other Microsoft products, so where has the consumer been hurt? The bundling of software is one of the profound advances in system operating systems. This is one of the profound improvements in computer software developments.

Note that Microsoft has been very helpful financially and technically to one of its arch rivals, Apple. Microsoft has maintained Word and Excel software on Macintosh, even though they probably have not made much money for their effort.

I do not understand what the States (and their lawyers) have to gain by rejecting this settlement. Are they more interested in a large financial settlement or a resumption of the economic growth of the technical industry?

I think it is the former!
 James R. Lloyd
 514 Whitewing Lane
 Houston, TX 77079
 texpop@aol.com

MTC-00008444

From: Arlene A DiRocco
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 7:59pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough is enough. Special interest groups and politicians who want some free publicity are attempting to derail the settlement agreement. September 11 is what we should be focusing on and the security of our nation and its people. Please finalize this and get it over with.

Arlene A. DiRocco
 10 Old Colony Road
 Burlington, MA 01803

MTC-00008445

From: KBOOM62@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Let Microsoft alone the only reason they were persecuted is that Microsoft was a big target for Fed employees who didn't have anything to do. God Bless Bill Gates & Microsoft & Windows did you ever have to navigate a computer using keystrokes?

Dan Keith

MTC-00008446

From: GYPSYB2@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In full support of the recently reached Microsoft settlement, I wish to express my opinion. This is a reasonable and fair agreement and will be to the advantage of all concerned and most especially, the public. I am a voice of many seniors and am most grateful that this settlement has been reached, though I have no personal reason other than the enjoyment of the Microsoft programs.

Sincerely,
B. Eaton Rhea

MTC-00008447

From: HAROLD WEISSENBURG
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:02pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Please settle. Just like the VCR, we need a standard and Microsoft has nearly provided that.

Now lets get
Apple to merge!
Harold W. Weissenburg
(halw83@msn.com)

MTC-00008448

From: Nationgate@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello,
As a citizen of the United States, I believe that our gov't. has already wasted millions in their worthless pursuit of a company that has done more for technology and the economy than one could imagine. Any "settlement" should avoid any and all types of financial punishment.

MTC-00008449

From: Robert Carlson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:03pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please lets get this thing behind us. Microsoft has done wonderful things for this country. Let the litigation end and force the lawyers to go find other work. BnB.

CC:VRBush5056@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00008450

From: Barb (038) Chuck
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:12pm
Subject: class action law suit against microsoft

It is my opinion that the U.S.G. is spending a lot of time trying to find a dead horse. The several states that are pushing to get a verdict friendly to them are just plain greedy. They

(the states) hopped on a band wagon to get "free dollars". The thing that one must do at this point of time is say that they will suffer no more expenses, fire their lawyers and say that is enough. Not being a lawyer it is apparent that the USG has recovered many dollars through income tax and other methods.

thank you.

MTC-00008451

From: Paula Hettler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please bring about the end to this lawsuit as soon as possible. I believe it is best for all involved.

Paula Hettler
1208 Nyssa
McAllen, TX 78501

MTC-00008452

From: Marion Dye
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:22pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have never been so upset in my life over the wanton waste of money for this whole lawsuit.

Why should anyone be penalized for being intelligent and industrious, and making things happen. It's a shame that someone has to sue because they came a 'day late and a dollar short' to compete. Where was this 'person'(s) in the beginning?? They could have started this whole thing too. They had every opportunity.

But no, they would rather whine & moan that they can't compete—go figure? For the service provided, and being a consumer, I don't feel that Microsoft has been unfair to us. We revel in the 'new' world they have provided for us.

I would hope that this 'rubbish' is over—let the competitors compete for a piece of the pie.not sue!

I thank you for the opportunity to add my voice to the 'outcry'.

Sincerely,
Marion Dye

MTC-00008453

From: JIMRUNTOM@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:18pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Just dropping you a line asking for the government to stop attacking Microsoft and use our general tax revenues toward more productive purposes. Get politics out of free enterprise.

thank you,
JIM Thomas

MTC-00008454

From: RRodg43063@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

I have never written to the government about anything in my 49 years. However I felt compelled to send a brief email message about the Microsoft settlement. Considering the other crisis this country has been hit with in recent times. I feel the government has spent enough of our tax dollars on a witch hunt. The time has come to finally settle this matter and move onto more pressing National concerns! Please put me in the column of the Microsoft suit be settled, final answer.

Yours,
Robert Rodgers

MTC-00008455

From: Regchuck
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:20pm

As a deeply concerned and productive citizen I urge the court to accept the settlement proposed in the Microsoft case. The advances made by our country by virtue of computer technology has allowed enhanced prosperity across the nation. Competition put us there, and it must not be curtailed simply because others feel threatened. Every business feels threatened by competition, and that leads to enhanced creativity and well serves our public interest. One look at the marketplace leaves the undeniable impression that any person or company with the guts to get out there and compete, is allowed to do just that. Witness the number of computer oriented companies that existed when Microsoft came about, versus the staggering number successfully competing today. That would not be the case if the field were anything but level. The proof, is looking us in the eye. I consider this case to be fairly considered, but unrealistically brought to court when viewed in the bright light of cold truth. The expense to the taxpayer has been great enough, and the settlement remedy fair.

Charles M. Asbury
Attorney at Law
Sacramento, California

MTC-00008456

From: Walt Haas (www.xmission.com/haas)
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Sirs:

I oppose the settlement negotiated by DoJ in the Microsoft case. I support stronger protections against continued criminal conduct by Microsoft as requested by the nine dissenting states, including my own State of Utah.

Walter O. Haas
717 Ninth Avenue
Salt Lake City UT 84103

"Linux is a cancer"—Steve Ballmer
"First they ignore you. Then they laugh at you.

Then they fight you. Then you win."—
Gandhi

MTC-00008457

From: Frakestate@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:22pm
Subject: the settlement

Bill Gates and his Companies have advanced computer technologies beyond anyone's imagination. Leave him run his companies his way and we'll all profit.

Victor S. Frake
frakestate@aol.com

MTC-00008458

From: Larry Greene

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:25pm
Subject: Microsoft lawsuit
Attorney General Ashcroft:

Please drop all anti-trust suits against Microsoft. Microsoft has done nothing wrong. Microsoft is simply popular and deserving of success. Bill Gates is an American hero. Anti-trust laws are anti-business and should be abolished. If monopoly busting is a goal of the Department of Justice, then go after the true culprits: Amtrak, the U.S. Postal Service, public education, and Indian casinos to name but a few.

Larry Greene
127 Rt. 2A
Preston, CT 06365
860-887-5350

MTC-00008459

From: Suresh C. Rastogi, Ph.D.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer, I strongly agree with the Microsoft Settlement. This is in the interest of progress and freedom to bring to the consumers the best products at the reasonable prices.

Suresh C. Rastogi, Ph.D.

MTC-00008460

From: Wes Farmer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I strongly support the proposed settlement with Microsoft. I believe we, as a people, have many more important things to do than stifle innovation.

MTC-00008461

From: Russell Yuma
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir,

I was not in favor of litigation against Microsoft in the first place. Now that a settlement has been proposed I believe any further litigation should be terminated. The States against settlement are wrong in asking for further restrictions on Microsoft and are extreme in their thinking. They do not understand competitive business and are in fact hurting the consumers they say they want to protect.

There should be no more consideration for further litigation. All this will do is damage the economy and not help consumers in any way.

Do you hear consumers complaining? I think not and believe consumers are satisfied. So, let's put an end to all this action against Microsoft.

Russell Yuma
PO Box 165
Oakland, OR 97462

MTC-00008462

From: Meredith Raney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
1/3/02

Dear DOJ Sirs,

It is my understanding that the purpose of the anti-trust laws is to protect the consumer and only the consumer. As far as I can tell, the only entities even alleged to be damaged in the Microsoft case are a few whining competitors of Microsoft.

I have seen no evidence presented that any consumer has been damaged by Microsoft, so leave Microsoft alone.

Please, just do your job and enforce the law as written to protect the consumer and don't worry about a few companies who can't run with the big dogs.

If the consumer starts getting hurt, we'll be the first to let you know. Then, and only then, should you jump in and enforce the law.

Sincerely yours,
Meredith Raney
2488 Burns Ave.
Melbourne, FL 32935 Phone (321) 254-5481

MTC-00008463

From: ThrumHall@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:36pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

To whom it may concern,
I think the DOJ settlement concerning the Microsoft settlement is fair. Keeping the company intact is in the interests of all. However oversight needs to be taken for a period of time collecting any instances of not following the points of the settlement. These should be documented and any serious non-compliance of this matter should cancel the settlement. Microsoft has been given a chance to work out this matter and should take advantage of the settlement and work fairly in the marketplace.

Ted Maligranda
82 David st
South River
NJ 08882

MTC-00008464

From: Dayna Nichols
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the Department of Justice stopping any actions it is pursuing against Microsoft. The stock has plummeted and numerous investors like myself have lost a lot. I feel if the government had not pursued Microsoft, the stock market, technology stocks, would not be in the condition it is in. We can thank Bill Clinton.

If Microsoft has done something so terribly wrong, then why is it every government agency and business uses Microsoft products to run their computer systems? I am a Federal employee and everything we use at our agency is a Microsoft product. All laptops, desktops and shared workstations are run by Microsoft.

I'll bet if some took a look around the Department of Justice your computer systems are all Microsoft based. How about email? How about work processing programs? How about calendar systems? How about spread sheet programs? Should I continue? What about companies like Intel? What about their processors? What other companies use their processors in as many computers?

Drop what you are doing, let them get back to business. Microsoft is producing the best computer software in the world. Let them continue.

MTC-00008465

From: Hollis Scarbrough
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I urge the Department of Justice to discontinue all litigation against Microsoft. I was totally opposed to the government's role in the action taken against Microsoft. Microsoft should not be penalized for being a success.

MTC-00008466

From: Randy Hackney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:39pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

RE: Public comment period for the Tunney Act. Leave Microsoft alone; let the settlement agreement stand without further litigation being allowed. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Don't let the lawyer lobby keep this alive for their benefits in fees; nor allow the competitors who want to use Microsoft to defeat the public interest in encouraging innovation.

Judy Hackney
Voter, District 1 of GA

MTC-00008467

From: TESTA558@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:41pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I found the settlement being by far in the interest of all us consumers and the entire economy. In settling the case forthright we will be able to focus on a much higher priorities: security, waging this war and restore our economic growth. At time like this, I repeat; The Nation at war and with a collapsing economy, this settlement will be definitely in the interest of all America.

Sincerely,
Anthony Testa

MTC-00008468

From: Stuart Holden
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I was pleased to hear that the Microsoft Antitrust case had settled in Federal Court, but then disappointed to hear that the states (including my own—Connecticut) were continuing their own cases. In my 25 year career I have used many software products from a variety of vendors—Borland, Symantec, Oracle, Microsoft, Lotus, IBM, Sterling Commerce, MicroPro (WordStar), Red Hat, Aldus, to name a few. I have found Microsoft software to be the most intuitive and easy to use software; the commonality across its products has saved countless training dollars.

While Microsoft could be viewed as a monopoly, it can also be viewed as a provider of products which work together in a consistent fashion. Doesn't anyone remember "IBM Compatible" which "meant buy it, see if it works and doesn't stop anything else from working".

The courts should get out of the marketplace and let consumers decide with their wallets.

Stuart Holden
Shelton, Connecticut

MTC-00008469

From: Nancy T. von Hohenleiten
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:47pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

MTC-00008470

From: Larry (038) Sandy Bancroft
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:50pm
Subject: overzealous greed!?

All we heard for years is how Microsoft created unfair competition. Now, we seem to have governments that aren't happy with the results. Maybe we need to check out what is driving them. It seems to me that the states & the federal government can't get enough corporate dollars that consumers pay for.

The Tobacco & Microsoft settlement for instance, has shown state governments that if they tie-up corporate America in the courts long enough they will get free dollars. In Illinois the state in 2000 sent out refund checks to tax payers from the tobacco settlement. Small as they were, the state said not to worry we have plenty more dollars coming from the settlement. Of course the money was spent faster than it was coming in now we have budget short falls. Yes not all of our budget blunders could have been foreseen but the point is that money was for smoking related illness that the state will be stuck with in the years to come.

But then again who pays corporate America? No the consumer. Now is the time to say to all states & the usdoj, sign on to the Microsoft settlement are be left out in the cold without a dime. Microsoft has offered a fair settlement to all but some never seem happy. Don't get me wrong it's just not the states that aren't happy many inefficiently run companies are just as unhappy. They want more in the way of free handouts too. America was built on hard work by both cooperate & labor. The freedom to take an idea make it work & be so revolutionary in a industry is the American dream. Take the settlement with all the perks just let Microsoft have the ability to continue innovate. For that matter let all companies have the right to innovate.

Sincerely
Larry Bancroft Shareholder

MTC-00008471

From: Bill Richardsn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:49pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As usual the Hatch justice system and the DOJ allegations are misguided and inappropriate. Would you also defile the sanctity of all Intellectual property as monopolistic and predatory? How in a world with freedom to innovate can you be so blatantly non-objective? Would you also expose the formula for Coca-Cola and

Colonel Sanders 11 Secret Herbs and Spices? If so what freedom to innovate would I as an Internet software developer have to protect my interests? Because I find a market and take advantage of it am I predatory? Is the effervescent struggle between Coca-Cola and Pepsi the next target for your insane jealousies and obvious favoritism for Sen. Orin Hatch ?s and Time Warner's Quest for more dollars and favoritism because their product is without Office applications and without a viable desktop graphical operating system? Coca-Cola and Pepsi came out of their rift better companies because of a system we treasure here in this United States "free enterprise". Would you make Ford put in Chevy engines because Ford in using it's own engines is predatory and unfair. Is any thing called a "free enterprise system" fair? No it is predatory and unfair. That is the basis of capitalism. If the shoe were on the other foot for Hatch he would be gloating and all puffed up like the banty rooster he resembles Concerning Microsoft and Netscape, Ford and Chevy had the same problems as did Coke and Pepsi, Where Coke had a 90% market Pepsi had none in comparison, they remarketed and repackaged their products and bought some other popular come latelays Mountain Dew and so forth to enhance their market base to compete, then Coke had to do the same thing. Ford and Chevy continually made different styles of automobiles to appeal to different strata of the market. You must be blind to the times when competition was paramount and the devising of new strategies be came what stuff men and women were made of, competition proved the playing field and then leveled it, due to those fresh ideas and innovations of those individuals. (Harley in the Chevy design of the 50's that gave Ford it's impetus to innovate, in example)

You people need a reality check.
William "Bill" Richardson
Cheif Operating Officer
Richcorp, Inc. <<http://www.richcorp.net/>>

MTC-00008472

From: SusanHobbs
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:51pm
Subject: Please add my support to the settlement that the Justice Department has now

Please add my support to the settlement that the Justice Department has now offered Microsoft. I believe it is in the interest of the American economy and in the interest of innovative freedom to support this settlement.

Sincerely,
Dr. Susan A. Hobbs

MTC-00008473

From: richardlaughlin@webtv.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:50pm
Subject: America Punishes Success

Dear DOJ,
Individuals and businesses continue the struggle against Federal Government. The economy does not grow; rates of return are down to low single digits; and the high tech industry is on ts back.

The punishing tax rates in the USA and the abuse of the legal system by greedy lawyers just holds America back.

I enjoy Microsoft products. For what little I pay for them, I receive tremendous value. Why Oh why do you let Microsoft's competitors—with their greedy lawyers—abuse the legal system to try to punish Microsoft for being successful? We consumers are not complaining about Microsoft's products or prices!!!

Please please stop punishing Microsoft and lets get the economy rolling again.

Very truly yours,
Richard Stouts
P.O. Box 4378
Pahrump, Nv. 89041-4378

MTC-00008474

From: Yemm (038) Hart Ltd
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:51pm
Subject: Settlement Comments

Hello DOJ:

We are a small 2 person business, selling special building products in the US and Europe. We could not have had the success we have had without the benefit of integrated software from Microsoft. Business is difficult enough, and we have little time to invest into the workings of our computers or software too, however we must. We have found that there is more of a chance for integration errors when there is more than one type of software. So we appreciate the Microsoft Windows, Explorer and Office software all working together, almost seamlessly.

We have followed the case hoping Microsoft's advisories would not prevail. The settlement as we understand it is fair and will benefit many young people who otherwise may not get the chance to learn and interact with such an essential tool as a computer and good software. I would hope that the DOJ could divert its assets devoted to this case towards seeking out foreign and domestic terrorists because that is the most serious issue we in the civilized world face today.

Sincerely,
Stephen W Yemm, Yemm & Hart Ltd

MTC-00008475

From: Roentman@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 8:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Because of their dominant position in the computer operating system market I the consumer can walk into any office or home and do some constructive work immediately. If the market consisted of plethora of competing OS's that would be nearly impossible. My life is better, easier and much more productive with the essential standardization that has happened largely due to market conditions. I have owned computers with different operating systems and while theirs is far from perfect, the fact that it is the same whether at work or in a cyber cafe in UlanBator, Mongolia has improved my computing life not harmed it.

Christopher Stahler
Wenatchee, WA

MTC-00008476

From: Hite, Peggy A.

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/3/02 8:52pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 RE: My opinion regarding Microsoft's Antitrust Lawsuit Although Microsoft's domination of the market could be perceived/interpreted as undue control in the market, the packaging made the end product far easier for users like me who want one easy, complete unit (software and all) ready to be used. If I had to make more decisions up front about issues such as whether to use internet explorer or netscape, I would not have known what to use. By virtue of choosing a windows product, I wanted a compact, streamlined, ready to use package of software—without having to spend hours deciding which of this and which of that, when I wouldn't have understood the choices anyway.

Because of Microsoft, we are all more savvy than we would have been without their readily available packages to get us started. They should not be punished for making an entire system more user friendly.

Peggy Hite, CPA, Ph.D.
 2304 Linden Hill Rd
 Bloomington, IN 47401

MTC-00008477

From: Mplgf2000@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:54pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please to all conmmcerned: settle tjis matter and let's get onto positive matters and stope wasting money.

Good luck.
 Robert Gregoire
 Rumney New Happshire

MTC-00008478

From: John S. Hartley
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:54pm
 Subject: Stupid Clinton
 CC: RFC-822=Finflash 1-2-02.UM.A.
 1154.142@commpartners....

Dear DOJ,
 You people can and do screw up more things than you take care of or at least it seems. I believe it was really the Clit-tongue administration. Leave people alone, Microsoft does more good that we benifit from directly as consumers than any other company, when it comes to computers. I dislike the government enough without you people messing around with my computer and software at home. Say hello to Mr Ashcroft for me, I have trust in him.

Regards, God Bless America &
 George Bush
 John
 (jhartley3@msn.com)

MTC-00008479

From: Elvinscow@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 8:56pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

Early settlement is in the consumer's interest and it should be implemented as soon as possible. Microsoft has done more for the technology and consumer than any other company. This litigation non-sense should be finished once and for all.

CC:Elvinscow@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00008480

From: crussell4
 To: microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
 Date: 1/3/02 9:01pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the current remedies are totally inadequate to protect the consumer.

I have thought for years that the monopolistic and predatory business practices of Microsoft required the splitting of the company into an OS company and an applications company. In that way, all application developers are on an equal footing...Microsoft vs independents. As we found out in 1983 with the break-up of AT&T, the development of telecommunications technology flourished. Further remedies may be appropriate in this age of the internet and other future possibilities.

Above all, Microsoft must not be allowed to flood schools with software as part of this settlement. It would be tantamount to the government promoting the MS monopoly.

Chuck Russell in Great Neck

MTC-00008481

From: R. C. Dobson
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:01pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I cannot believe that we/our government is still chasing after Microsoft's dollars-and that is what this witch hunt is about more than just "justice".

Why didn't we look into the anti-trust area regarding Cargill taking over Continental Grain? At least we don't have to use computers and we could always buy an "Apple". I'll bet virtually every meal eaten in the U.S. has a food directly or produced from grain that Cargill/Continental Grain has touched.

Leave Microsoft alone and call off the 9 + or—states individually pursuing their own agenda. Microsoft may have bent the rules, but Sun or many others would have likely done the same if they could have. I remember when you were never sure of the compatability of programs. Microsoft has done a great service in standardizing many applications. (Now if Windows always operated just as it is supposed to, but I digress.)

Thank you,
 R. C. Dobson, Ph.D.
 R. C. Dobson, Ph.D.
 215 Starbright Court
 Wellington, CO 80549
 cell: 970-215-7173 res:970-568-3991 e-mail: robert—c—dobson@yahoo.com or largeanimalconsulting.com
 fax: 970.568.3992

MTC-00008482

From: JCapFox@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:03pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We believe that the proposed settlement is just and fair. It is good for consumers and industry.

Dr. and Mrs Joseph Fox

MTC-00008483

From: E. H. John Johnson

To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:04pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Ladies and Gentlemen:

I believe that consumers should have equal access to application system providers other than Microsoft. If this is accomplished, then I believe the judgment should be accepted so that all the uncertainties that are affecting Microsoft will be eliminated and the company can go forward for the benefit of consumers and, also, its stockholders.

E. H. John Johnson

MTC-00008484

From: MJS4835665@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:06pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Re: Tunney Act
 Dear Court of Appeals:

I very much support the Tunney Act as currently written (1/02/02). As a Professor of Management at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, I have long felt that Microsoft has been unfairly attacked in their business practices.

Since they are willing to accept the current conditions under the Tunney Act let's bring this situation to a quick resolution.

For the record I do not own stock in Microsoft or have anything to do with the company.

Best wishes,
 Marc Schniederjans
 5901 S. 72nd Street
 Lincoln, NE 68516
 E-mail: MJS4835665@aol.com

MTC-00008485

From: TXExperiment@cs.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:08pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am an a middle aged female of average intelligence who has been watching the Justice Department go after Microsoft for what it considers 'unfair and predatory practices' for several years now. I have heard both sides speak and I must say that while I believe that Microsoft did use practices that some may consider questionable, (There are also many who believe that WalMart, Intel and several others have done the same thing.) they were also improving the lives of many average Americans who would not be able to sit at their computers today and point and click to go wherever they want.

Before the Windows operating system became the industry standard, the average person, was not able to use a computer at all. Therefore Microsoft has helped bolster not only itself but also all the hardware and software manufacturers out there, including those who have come out publicly against them. I have heard more than one CEO of a large company make the claim that without Microsoft's innovation their job of running their company would have been made more difficult. Most of us don't even remember that this whole lawsuit began with a disgruntled company wanting to charge a premium price for what Microsoft wanted to give away free. (Netscape) Somehow this takes most of the meat out of the claim that Microsoft's practices are bad for the consumer. It may not be too healthy for the companies wanting to make money, but such is our wonderful free enterprise system. Only the strong will survive and Microsoft's very survival over the last years certainly is testimony to their strength among consumers. Yes, it may seem unfair that computer manufacturers have to pay extra to Microsoft to install Windows, but so would the consumers. They would probably rather see the consumer pay the extra money for Windows, which most will gladly spend. Windows is a licensed product and therefore it should cost manufacturers to install it. They should also keep in mind that computers would not be in as widespread of use and therefore bolstering computer company profits, if it weren't for their ease of use with the Windows operating system.

The Government also employs monopolistic practices in many of its daily operations. I pay many taxes for things that I don't even know about and yet the Justice Department has not once suggested that the current systems be examined.

I recently had an unpleasant experience that convinced me even more that Microsoft has done only good for the average computer user. (I'm saying average now, not educated.) Our home computer was the victim of a virus which totally wiped out Windows. We were trying to use MSDOS to save important files and found it too frustrating and ended up reformatting our hard drive just so we could reinstall Windows. I am only one consumer, but I know that I speak for many when I say to the Justice Department, "LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONE AND LET THEM CONTINUE TO DEVELOP PRODUCTS WHICH MAKE

ALL OF OUR LIVES (INCLUDING YOURS!) EASIER."

Thank You for giving me the opportunity to voice my opinion. I love being an American...GOD BLESS AMERICA!!

MTC-00008486

From: Stan0613@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

I've followed the US Department of Justice litigation against Microsoft for several years. It is my opinion that the US Department of Justice should not pursue further litigation against Microsoft.

Microsoft is a large benefit to the United States and the world today. They are innovators and market creators, and they have created more jobs than any other corporation in today's economy. The corporation has allowed small investors to become financially independent by creating individual investment opportunities for them.

More importantly; Microsoft has pioneered, developed, and led the market in a very successful technology that has allowed the United States to lead the world in data processing and machine communications.

How can the US Department of Justice think this is preventing competition? Microsoft has created opportunity for competition. This corporation has standardized the industry and fostered growth through excellence in design engineering. Competing corporations would have fractured industry standards which would have raised prices to the consumer and stifled growth.

If competing corporations had a better idea, a better mouse trap so to speak, and had been able to succeed in the market place, in real market place competition, they would have been the first to stifle competition. That seems to be the problem. Competing corporations were not able to compete in the market place and have resorted to influencing government litigation to stifle Microsoft.

This is my opinion and I thank you for allowing me to express myself.

Stan Foster
211 Robin Lane
Panama City Beach, FL 32407
850-249-2110
stan061336@aol.com

MTC-00008487

From: Paul J Richards
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement q

Please tally my vote in favor of not imposing any penalties on Microsoft or its creator, Bill Gates. An American hero who has the talent and ability and drive to create a better mousetrap should be rewarded, not punished. Our present day technological capabilities with personal computers couldn't exist without the products developed and marketed by Microsoft. Whatever rewards Mr. Gates has garnered from his contributions to our way of life are well earned. On his way to improving our lives, he has created untold wealth for untold thousands of others including the very individuals who are actively trying to promote the suppression of Microsoft and its superior products. Our nation has no business trying to downgrade the production of capable companies for the benefit of competitors who don't have the talent to do equally well. We need every bit of forward progress that people of ability can provide. Punishing Microsoft and Bill Gates is the equivalent of jailing Columbus, gagging Newton and Copernicus, burning Galileo's books or prohibiting Einstein from publishing and teaching. This country is great because of people like Bill Gates and our reaction should encourage more like him and not grind them down. Should we prohibit Microsoft from tying Internet Explorer into Windows? Should we prohibit a furniture maker from putting a fourth leg on a chair because his competitors don't know how to make a good fourth leg? Let Microsoft go; turn it loose and America will be better for it. When the competitors develop truly advanced innovations, Microsoft will not be able to hold them back unless our own government contributes to their suppression. Thank you.

MTC-00008488

From: David Clarke
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To whom it may concern:

It is my belief that a settlement should be made between Microsoft and our State and Federal Governments. Innovation is good for all concerned and Microsoft has been instrumental in providing this not only in our country, but throughout the world. It is my opinion that we put this behind us and move forward instead of backwards.

Sincerely,
David Clarke

MTC-00008489

From: EdandReva@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We agree with the settlement and hope that it will be executed.
Ed and Reva Potter

MTC-00008491

From: Ian Joyner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:17pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft is guilty deserving suitable punishment. The current settlement with them is not suitable punishment.

Ian Joyner
Expert shortcut tip: Dump Windows; get OS X; fire MCSE certified time wasters. XP—eXtremely Pathetic!
i.joyner@acm.orghttp://homepages.tig.com.au/ijoyner

MTC-00008492

From: Norfly@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:17pm
Subject: MSFT settlement

I feel a settlement should be made as soon as possible. Included should be a clause disallowing further litigation whatsoever in the future. This settlement would also help get the economy going again since all the effort being expended to destroy MSFT can be directed to the common good.

NF

MTC-00008493

From: Chetan Desai
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to appalud the Department of Justice in dealing with Microsoft anti-trust violations and reaching a fair settlement. I understand that most of 9 states that continue to pursue additional penalties are politically motivated and driven by Microsoft competitors and/or greed in trying sue a big corporation with deep pockets. If there is a legal way to do this, I would urge you to separate yourself from the nine states that will not settle for anything less then destruction of Microsoft. BTW, I am software engineer and truly understand the areas where Microsoft has been wrong and where Microsoft has been an aggressive competitor who went a little too far into the illegal. However, the remedy (several proposed are downright un-American and crazy) sought by some of states are equivalent to a death sentence for stealing an item from a retail store. Best Wishes to the Justice Department and keep up the good work!!

Chetan Desai

2042 Pinecrest Drive
Morgantown, WV 26505
(304)292-0683

MTC-00008494

From: Robert Kossman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Stop the frivolous lawsuits and get on with life.

MTC-00008495

From: Ted Keese
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to stop punishing American Corporations for being successful. Microsoft products have been reasonably priced and of exceptional quality. I am very disappointed that the government is wasting time and money pursuing this matter. There are much bigger problems to solve in this world than trying to figure out how to punish people for providing products consumers want and are happy with. It is time to get over it!

Sincerely

Ted Keese

500 Forestdale Drive
Atlanta, GA 30342

MTC-00008496

From: MLMoehle@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:23pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

It is in the best interest of the public at large to proceed with the settlement that has been agreed to by Microsoft and the DOJ. It would be a mistake to prolong the litigation when there is an opportunity to reach a settlement now. The opposition has had their day in court—now it's time to move on with the settlement at hand.

Melvin O. Moehle

MTC-00008497

From: JERRYTCFO@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:26pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I FEEL THE SETTLEMENT IS FAIR AND I SUPPORT THE COMPANY FOR THEIR MANY INOVATIONS WHICH HAS REDUCED THE COST OF COMPUTER THROUGHPUT.

SINCERELY

JEROME L. SOBEL

MTC-00008498

From: warren stewart
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:29pm

Subject: As a free person of the world I implore you to keep As a free person of the world I implore you to keep the world free. People do not have to but the product of any company if they choose not to. Microsoft may have bought some companies but the owners did not have to sell them to Microsoft.

Do not split up Microsoft as it might stop ALL new inventions becoming worldwide and only the very privileged might get them. I reiterate. Please do not split companies up. If a company does wrong, the other companies in that field do not work with them or the public boycotts them.

Keep microsoft the way it is.

Thank You

Warren stewart Perth

MTC-00008499

From: larry@wt6.usdoj.gov@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:35pm

Subject: Comment on Microsoft Settlement
According to Microsoft, their number one competitor is Linux and other open source software. Most people agree. The proposed DOJ settlement is supposed to make API's and protocols available to other developers. However, the current proposed settlement has a loophole that would deny to Linux access to Microsoft proprietary protocols and file formats. An agreement which which excludes Microsoft's main competitor is almost completely empty.

File formats and network protocols should require approval of an independent review committee such as the IETF and be made available to open source developers. Open protocols and data interchange formats are an essential part of the Department of Defense's Joint Technical Architecture (JTA—see <http://www-jta.itsi.disa.mil/>). Proprietary protocols are at odds with the both the JTA and the need to have competitive sources available for military communications equipment.

Larry Doyle

Software Architect—Small Unit Operations Situation Awareness System (SUOSAS) A program of the Defense Advanced Research Project Agency (DARPA) program

ITT Industries
Home address:
314 Stone Rd
Hazlet
NJ 07730

The opinions expressed are my own and are not necessarily endorsed by ITT Industries, DARPA or the DoD.

MTC-00008500

From: Bob Giese
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:36pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please leave Microsoft alone. Only the lawyers are getting rich. Where would the P.C. be without Microsoft?

Robert Giese

MTC-00008501

From: R Patrcik Scanlon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Can you folks please get this thing settled. I think that what is on the table is fine. I have no interest in this other than it is time to move on. I think that Microsoft's competitors are trying to derail.

R. Patrick Scanlon

MTC-00008502

From: The Washingtons
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:45pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I strongly urge you to impose a harsher penalty on Micro$oft for their illegal activities. I don't believe they take seriously the findings of the court and are not acting in a manner consistent with halting their illegal conduct and promoting competition in the industry. The court should be insistent on depriving Microsoft of its illegal gains, not extending their monopoly into the education field.

Craig Washington
Happy New Year

MTC-00008503

From: Bill Rice
To: billg@microsoft.com@inetgw
Date: 1/3/02 9:48pm
Subject: windows xp

Dear Mr. Gates

I am a long time Microsoft supporter . . . have bought almost every upgrade version of Windows, Office, FrontPage.etc !!!! . . . I work on as laptop and have a desktop for home, a laptop for my wife, and two desktops for my 2 children. I recently purchased the latest version of everything available.spending over $750 before the holidays. I have been buying Microsoft products for years . . .

I am ABSOLUTELY APPALLED that the XP operating system requires that I purchase an additional license, for hundreds of dollars, for every PC in my house . . . (this is not obvious on the purchased product, from the retail salesperson, on the Microsoft website, or in any advertisement.I looked! I didn't have my bi-focals and couldn't read the VERY SMALLEST PRINT) I have always supported Microsoft.and have not supported the federal and state lawsuits . . .

BUT . . . I FEEL ROBBED.no salesman warned me that, unlike all previous versions . . . I would have to buy separate, EXPENSIVE licenses for each computer in my home.(I buy a VCR tape.and use it in all my VCRs.) . . . so I am sad to say that tonight I am writing to Judge Kollar-Kotally as well as to all of the states attorneys general . . .

To convey my personal experience.that Microsoft is not playing fair with its market advantage . . . UNTIL TONIGHT, I WAS AN ARDENT MICROSOFT SUPPORTER . . . THERE IS NO CLEAR INDICATION ON THE XP BOX THAT THE UPGRADE WILL ONLY WORK ON ONE COMPUTER . . . I feel misled and disappointed . . . my children use XP at school and I wanted to use the same operating system at home for projects and homework.but to put the operating system on their PCs costs over $500 and there is no alternative operating system platform.

I think the uniformity of platform created by a broadly successful Microsoft has helped propel significant increases in our national productivity. I now believe that Microsoft is taking advantage of the "little guy," and that this pricing scheme may reflect a portion of what others in the technology industry have been complaining about. I didn't understand or appreciate the problem until tonight.

Thanks for taking the time to review these comments.

Bill Rice

CC:Microsoft
ATR,microsoftcomments@doj.ca.gov@inetgw,
. . .

MTC-00008504

From: Clif Ars
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:52pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel strongly that it would be in the best interest of the public and the economy for the "Tunney Act" to go through. I have little doubt that many view Microsoft's domination within the technology sector as a monopoly, but to define a true monopoly the public's benefit and interest must be harmed. As a consumer, I cannot see where I or the consumer base at large has been hurt by Microsoft. We as a nation should realize the part that this company played in the strongest economy growth in history. The jobs, the taxable revenue, and the products that have put this country on the map in the I.T. World. Please take a look at some of these companies at the forefront of this costly litigation and ask yourself, "Is it the consumer that they are trying to help, or themselves?" Is this the cost of doing business in America?

What company is going to be targeted next?
 Thank you

MTC-00008505

From: Rick Becker
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:58pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support the DOJ settlement with Microsoft. I wish my Attorney General could look past his campaign contributions from Silicon Valley and support it also.

Richard Becker
 El Cajon, CA

MTC-00008506

From: Ross Fontenot
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 9:57pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think that you should either accept the agreement by microsoft and the states or drop all charges. If you try to screw Microsoft they will screw you out of millions of tax dollars by taking the offer made to them by British Columbia. Microsoft was just as big as a monopoly as Walmart but no one ever brought charges against them even though charges should be brought against them because they squash their competitors especially in small cities like I live in. That is why I buy everything on the net because I will not support Walmart but I will support Microsoft because they care about their consumers and try to be the best while offering great products. DO NOT stop this by limiting their innovation. If you want to screw someone screw Walmart.

MTC-00008507

From: Keith Beavers
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:02pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement.

I sincerely urge acceptance. Lets move on.

MTC-00008508

From: chojnack@swbell.net@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 attorney.general@po.state.ct.us@inet...
 Date: 1/3/02 10:02pm

Subject: MS Anti-trust and Tunney Act of 1974
 Good Folk—

In accordance with the Tunney Act of 1974 I'm offering my public comment on the MicroSoft Anti-trust case now in it's 60-day public comment period that started on Nov. 28. I have worked with computers and computer software in a wide variety of jobs for the past 35 years.

I do not think that the current settlement is in the best interest of the American people. Microsoft's arguments that browser (et al) functionality is part of the operating system is specious and without any technically provable merit whatsoever. Further, their dominance of the computing field today parallels IBM's over 30 years ago; even the argumentative stance of the corporate legal staff is vaguely familiar to me. And, of course, both companies, at the times of their litigation, made and delivered notoriously shoddy software products.

Please contact me if you have any questions or need more information ...
 Leon S. Chojnacki CBCP

MTC-00008509

From: jerry bergeron
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:04pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel this lawsuit has consumed way too much time and expense on both sides...

Leave the settlement as is...

MTC-00008510

From: RMinott@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:04pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

I have followed this case from the very start. As an educator, parent and computer user. I think the current proposed settlement offer is more than fair. It is outrageous to consider complaints that: A) the computers offered are out of date or reconditioned. ALL computers are out of date within 6 months to a year! If these computers are networked in a school, they are simply work stations. 1. By supplying windows systems, MS is being self serving. If anyone else had offered windows, they would have loved it! NO other company in the history of our country has EVER been asked to supply a product other than their own as part of a settlement! Has the government asked General Motors to supply Chrysler products as a remedy? and Firestone? NEVER! It has always been, fix, repair, REPLACE, supply or refund. The precedent this would create is to ridiculous to consider!

I support an immediate settlement...as proposed by Microsoft.
 Bob Minott

MTC-00008511

From: Joy Staveley
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:05pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Dear Justices,

I am a Mac Computer (Apple) User, but I also use Microsoft software. I believe the recent settlement proposal fo the Microsoft lawsuit is fair and in the best interest of the end user—people like me. Microsoft has made a huge positive difference in the personal and business computer world. Their user friendly, practical applications have advanced the technology of computers faster than one could imagine! It's time to put this lawsuit behind us, and move forward. It has taken a long time to get to this point. Careful review and decision has been made. I would urge the court to follow through and confirm the decision.

Sincerely,
 Joy Iris Staveley, Vice President
 Canyoneers, Inc.
 <joy@canyoneers.com>
 PO Box 2997
 Flagstaff, AZ 86003

MTC-00008512

From: William
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:08pm
 Subject: Please read this letter
 Judge,

I am very concerned about the direction that this case is turning into and its like other case brought before MS. Now its time for MS to wiggle out of this like they have so many other times. MS proposes that they give a billion dollars of there products and services to schools. I am shocked that anyone that knows anything about the software industries can even call this a penalty. This is like putting the fox in charge of the chicken coop (I am sorry for using this old phrase). This penalty is a reward to MS. In years to come they have more buyers of there product and they get to dominate a market that they have battle for many years with Apple.

I propose:

First a billion dollars is a slap on the hands (which is what they want) for MS. You need to get really tough with this people or they are back to doing this again (I my opinion they already are doing this with Windows XP). It needs to really hurt this company and 20 billion is much better. Second have them put some of this money into a trust fund for schools to choose which computer system and software they believe is better. Last and most important if they have wronged other companies they need to pay these companies big dollars or what good does this whole process accomplish? Netscape was my web browser of choice for many years but now its MS explorer. Not because MS did better but Netscape could not compete under the unfair market that existed at the time and ended up selling off to AOL. These people have been robbed of there hard work. MS needs to pay the wrong to these people!

I also believe that MS needs to be broken into many smaller companies but this is now a thing of the past.

Thanks for your time.
 William Davis
 232 So. Washington
 New Bremen Ohio 45869
 william@nktelco.net

MTC-00008513

From: John Manning
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/3/02 10:15pm
 Subject: End Law Suit

MTC-00008514

From: Cagakiss@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Anti Trust Division
Department of Justice

I am interested in saying YES to the recent microsoft settlement. I have reviewed many of the documents in this case and think it a good fair settlement for all parties. Our country and its citizens have been through enough, let it stand. The settlement as it stands would be good for our economy and we can all move on.

Sincerely,
camille mangakis

MTC-00008515

From: RDL300619@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle the Microsoft case. Do not let a few disgruntled staes and competitors prlong this case. For the good of the worldwide economy, settle the case as agreed upon with the government. With any decision there will always be a certain segment of the population that will not agree, but the good of the country should prevail.

MTC-00008516

From: Audrey Klein
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please hear my voice..This is America..We have the freedom to Innovate..We are a proud capitalistic society. Don't take away our Freedom.

MTC-00008518

From: DANLDP@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:32pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to have my comments in this e-mail considered when making the final judgement in the Microsoft settlement. If you want to consider damages, my governments' actions against Microsoft have damaged many consumers much more than Microsoft's alleged monopoly could ever have. The plunge the stock market took can be related, in many respects, to the governments lawsuit against Microsoft. Millions of stock holders suffered damages when stocks they held plunged in value because of the perceived threat to the technology sector of the stock market. It wasn't just Microsoft stock holders either, many technology stocks were affected by this lawsuit.

Microsoft operates in one of the most competitive and dog-eat-dog businesses ever know to man. It has to constantly be inventing and researching and developing new and innovative ways to help consumers. The fact that Windows was put in many computers was a plus to help standardize a new , and to many people, baffling industry that changed the way the world goes about its everyday tasks. It made the learning field much more level and less confusing, there by familizing many millions of people with a brand new industry.

The public will not be served by prolonging this lawsuit. It stifles the positive energy of this nation that can be used in much more productive ways.

Please for the good of all concerned, let's get this settled and move on.

Thank you,
Linda Pershall
PO Box 1922
Wenatchee, WA 98807

MTC-00008519

From: Rick Fontana
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:32pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Lets get our economy moving again I support Microsoft and theire ability to create new jobs and opportunity through their technology.

MTC-00008520

From: JaneM112@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I hope that the government allows Microsoft the additional four months to prepare their case. As a computer instructor, I think Microsoft has given the consumer the easiest way to use a computer with Windows. My students who use Windows become self-sufficient much more quickly than those who use other programs. The bundled features and products which all work the same way, make learning simple and quick. The legal arguments from other companies are self-serving, ignoring the good of the consumer.

Jane Mason

MTC-00008521

From: Tim Semple
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:39pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

You know where the real monopoly resides? At the American Bar Association, with its legions of parasitic, bloodsucking lawyers ensuring that the taxpayer-funded legal system is responsive to their self-centered whims. Why don't you Dept. of Justice people go after monopolists like that piece of trash David Boie (or whatever his name is - i.e. the shithead who did Al Gore's dirty work in Florida, and who a dim bulb in the DOJ decided would be the perfect lead counsel to unfairly slander and malign Microsoft while being paid with my tax dollars). The courts have been subverted so that the Spences, Baileys, Cochrans etc. etc. can plunder filthy lucre from people who actually work for an honest living.

But all the lawyers in the Justice Dept. are blinded by their allegiance to the American Bar Association (monkey see—monkey do) and walk in lockstep to its every whim. The ABA—now that's a monopoly that is screwing over the American public and someone ought to do something about.

Did you know that the post office stopped issuing stamps with lawyers on them? No one could figure out which side they should spit on. Sincerely yours, someone who is disgusted with the DOJ's meddling in the internal affairs of that American success story known as Microsoft,

Tim Semple
North Pomfret, Vt.

MTC-00008522

From: JIMW2348@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough !! It's past time to put this issue to rest. It appears that big money is buying AG's from some states. There can't be any satisfaction in the justice system being a part to their game. A decision was made and accepted by the majority. Majority rules, declare the Microsoft case closed.

Thank You,
Jim Worsham

MTC-00008523

From: Bill (038) Lou
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Ystueta Construction
106 Patrick Henry Lane
Madison, Alabama 35758
January 3, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I write this letter to show my support for the settlement that was reached between Microsoft and the Department of Justice. The antitrust dispute lasted for three years, and it is now finally over. America can move on to improving its economy.

The settlement is offers a fair resolution to the settlement that will benefit all parties involved. The terms not only call for Microsoft to restructure certain aspects of their licensing and marketing, but call for them to disclose information about certain Windows interfaces. This not only allows other computer manufacturers access to various Windows features, but also makes it easier for them to install non-Microsoft software. This agreement can only help promote the competitive market, and can only help our IT Sector grow as a whole.

Microsoft has been distracted from its mission by litigation for long enough. I support the settlement, and I support letting Microsoft get back to being the IT industry leader that it can be.

Sincerely,
William Ystueta

MTC-00008524

From: PEGGY
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Leave Microsoft alone, Please!!!!

MTC-00008525

From: cheryllreed
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a life-long resident, registered and regular voter, taxpayer, and business owner in the state of Ohio, one of the plaintiffs in this case, I strongly urge that the proposed settlement be made final and that this lawsuit is brought to a long overdue end. I have communicated my strong objection to this suit to Betty Montgomery, Ohio's Attorney General, numerous times since this all began. In my opinion, this lawsuit was NEVER in the public interest. I believe the recession we are now in was directly caused by our government's intrusion in intellectual property rights and an industry for which they have no understanding.

As a small business owner, I have watched as other businesses in my community have either been driven out of business completely or seen their businesses severely damaged by this economic situation. To do anything less than settle this case by making the proposed agreement official is nothing less than economic treason.

Microsoft software has revolutionized the way we do business and established the United States as the world leader in technology. It's time to let them go back to doing what they do best.

Cheryll Reed
1231 Richland St.
Maumee, Oh 43537

MTC-00008526

From: Bobbie Bamford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:45pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As an American citizen and taxpayer, I would like to have you settle immediately with Microsoft. NO MORE LITIGATION IS NECESSARY...Please quit spending my hard earned tax dollars on this and get your priorities straight. Like: terrorists, drug smuggling and users who are making our country weak as they have blown their brains on drugs, murderers and rapists.

This is supposed to be the Land of Opportunity. I feel Bill Gates is only exercising his rights.

Sincerely,
Bobbie Bamford
Shelton, WA

MTC-00008527

From: Campbell McCarthy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:45pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
To: Those Concerned

This is just my personal opinion, but I find it upsetting that the states and the Federal Government's Justice Division can sue a company for being successful. To win, to succeed, to have a good product, to overcome competition, and to make money is what business is all about. By very definition of the word "business" this means a group of people joined together to present a product or service for the intention of making money. Placing restrictions on Microsoft operations is anti business and unamerican.

Campbell J. McCarthy
2199 Astor St. (Apt.# 202)
Orange Park, FL. 32073-5601
tel. (904) 541-0060

MTC-00008528

From: Ruth Seelye
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 10:51pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I have found other companies, similar to Microsoft, to be as competitive as they. In fact, my new computer was installed with Netscape, which I did not want, and it crowded out everything else.

Finally,

I found a way to delete it Microsoft has been innovative in a way which our country must encourage to stay ahead in this changing world. This litigation saps funds and restricts on-going research and development. Please, let this case be settled, so that Microsoft can get back to doing what they do best—creating, innovating, and enriching our lives.

Sincerely,
res@olypen.com

MTC-00008529

From: NOSLEGOF@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:04pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
Msdmes/Gentlemen:

As a retired local judge I find the vendetta waged against Microsoft, essentially by competitors unable to effectively compete in the marketplace, a terribly sad commentary on contemporary business and social standards. Our Founding Fathers would be aghast at the persistent energy-consuming intrusion into a firm which while certainly has been "raking it in" has also contributed mightily to the welfare of consumers and our country generally. The Microsoft saga has not been a Teddy Roosevelt Trust-Busting replication. Instead it has been an incidious mischievous intrusion by a well-meaning, democratic government into trying to poison the incentives for creativity.....the very thing that has made this wonderful country so great. Ask yourselves....."Would not other countries be overjoyed to have a Microsoft in their midst?"

I urge you, please, to terminate this foolishness practiced against Microsoft and direct your energies in areas that will truly will afford benefit to our citizens.

Thank you.

Robert G. Fogelson, Taylortown Road,
Montville, NJ 07045 973-334-4427
CC:MSFIN@microsoft.com@inetgw

MTC-00008530

From: S.A. Hepps
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:07pm
Subject: Enough already! Stop the continuing greedy legal babble. The American people Enough already! Stop the continuing greedy legal babble. The American people are sick and tired of this stupid lawsuit!

MTC-00008531

From: dino
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:14pm
Subject: On the settlement

MTC-00008532

From: Richard H Freel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:18pm
Subject: MICROSOFT Settlement
Four years is long enough! Too long in fact!! All the suits against MicroSoft should be thrown out. MS has done more for the computer revolution and the national economy than anyone who is complaining about them.

Let them get back to business!

MTC-00008533

From: Jeanette
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:19pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

why can't this be over & done with so microsoft can get on with the business at hand i think it's gone on long enough & let microsoft do what it does very well 'that is create bigger & better programs.

Have a great day or night !!!!!!!

MTC-00008534

From: Kelly V.B.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing to express my concern for the consumers, businesses and for Microsoft. I feel that it is high time for this persecution of Microsoft to come to a resolution. I feel that Microsoft is an outstanding example of what an entrepreneur can achieve in these United States of America. Microsoft has help to move this country into a wonderful new era.

I am pleased to hear that a fair resolution is on the negotiation table. For the sake of the consumers and for others who would like to improve our way of life, allow Microsoft the freedom to keep pushing ahead without further fear of persecution.

Thank you,
Kelly Van Blokland
1362 NW Front Avenue
Portland, Oregon 97204

MTC-00008535

From: Herbert Hurd
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:22pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTELMENT
I WISH I COULD BUILD A BETTER
MOUSE TRAP. SO DOES THE OPPOSITION!

MTC-00008536

From: Ann Jackson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
I don't know what we'd do without Microsoft products. Please stop the litigation and leave them free to innovate. I think the government is making a huge mistake and the court should stop for several reasons, one being unemployment. Let the people get back to work. Mr. Gates has given millions to education and other causes. Why break Microsoft up?

Sincerely,
Annie Jackson

MTC-00008538

From: Kathleen Johnson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:47pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Lets get this settled with Microsoft. It is important to consumers and to our economy. I find it hard to believe this was ever about protecting the consumer. This consumer has been hurt and the economy of our nation has been hurt. Microsoft should be applauded for it's economic growth of the American economy.

Sincerely,
Kathleen E. Johnson

MTC-00008539

From: MARCENE HENDRICKSON
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:48pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer and user of Microsoft I am satisfied with the settlement made with the Justice Department.

Please do not pursue any further.

MTC-00008540

From: Anna Jeannet
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:51pm
Subject: SETTLE !!!

To Whom this May Concern,

I personally think the WHOLE attack on Microsoft has been unfair and unjust. They are an excellent company, have excellent products—and they certainly do not force anyone to be their customers. After all, isn't opportunity what our country all about? Should excellence be allowed to be destroyed by the jealous and reduced to mediocrity?

This whole ridiculous situation has gone on too long. And the attorneys have probably made out like bandits as usual.

SETTLE WITHOUT FURTHER DELAY—
-and turn yourselves to important worldly issues. Further, I feel that Microsoft should be re-imbursed its legal fees by its attackers.

Sincerely,
Anna Jeannet

MTC-00008541

From: Domingues, Tony
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

The recent decisions have been fair, though I believe that it shouldn't have started in the first place.

I have seen Microsoft improve the quality of the operation System and offering what the consumer wants. This problem with other companies like Sun and other companies should try and make better software.

So what if Microsoft makes Internet Explorer as part of the operation System, at least they are offering it in the package and not making the user having to search for a downloadable copy of it. Like Netscape's version 6 browser which was outright Pathetic and slow, but Microsoft produced Internet explorer version 5.5 and 6 that followed and it was great as a standard browser. With XP for example they offered the ability to watch DVD's, in the past you would have to purchase some software just to watch DVD movies. In the End we have to face it, it is their operation System; they should be able to do what they want with it, people should be concentrating in Improving and competing instead of whining when their product is already a failure.

Other companies should take example of Intel and AMD, years ago everyone also thought the Intel was the evil Monopoly Empire, AMD and other companies also whinged, but look today, Intel is no longer the main Stream. What happened in this example was the AMD competed and also produced a superior product going against Intel's chain.

I think that it should all end now and everyone should just move on and concentrate on the real problems facing the country, instead of Bitching on small issues. Remember that Microsoft is pumping Money into the American Economy, which currently almost faced a recession. I just hop at the end of the day everyone could just move on instead of whinging.

Regards
Tony Domingues

MTC-00008542

From: craig butler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 11:58pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

It is time for the federal government to step aside and allow one of our country's most dynamic companies of the 20th/21st century to get back on track and move forward. Too much time and money has been wasted over the past few years. I am hopeful the settlement is finalized.

Thank you.
Craig Butler
Danville, KY

MTC-00008543

From: The Shaw's
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:01am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
DOJ,

Please don't spend any more of my money (Tax dollars) on litigation against microsoft. Take the deal and lets get the economy moving again.

Jason Shaw

MTC-00008544

From: Richard Cote
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is my judgment that the whole Microsoft fiasco has gone on for far too long. While the proposed settlement may not be satisfactory to everyone, it has one distinct advantage. It will put an end to this ill advised litigation which I believe has played a large role in the downtrend in our markets, and especially in the technology sector. What is it about hard fought competition that seems to grate on certain members of the community?

While Microsoft may be far from perfect, as I know from experience with all of the various iterations of Windows, it has opened the world of computing to the world, and always at what I would consider to be a reasonable price. It's time to get this behind us and let the world of business and industry get back on track. Please end this litigation and accept the proposed settlement.

Anything less will be an invitation to a further deterioration of our economy, and more possible damage to Microsoft, one of the bulwarks of our technological superiority in the world.

I write this as a retired lawyer and business executive who has never been involved with Microsoft except as a customer and stock holder. But then, I own more stock in Sun Microsystems, so I am not prejudiced in either direction, except to say that as a result of this ill advised adventure, I'm on the losing end of both stocks.

Sincerely yours,
Richard P. Cote
2008 Calle Candela
Fullerton, CA 92833
714-871-3841

MTC-00008545

From: mark
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:15am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement Case

Summary: Microsoft is not the predator. It has used violence against no one. It is the victim. Leave the peaceful Microsoft Corporation alone and apply your smears and name-calling to some one who deserves it: those damn terrorists who brought down the WTC. This would truly be a historic act of justice. ***

Here are my views on the Microsoft case: Some years ago in 1999, I turned on my television to witness the frightening spectacle of one of Janet Reno's henchman giggling like a terrorist who had just blown up an American embassy. The source of his pleasure-and my displeasure-was his apparent "victory" against a giant "predator" that had "hurt" competitors and "exploited" consumers. Who was this "predator"?

An anarchist who tried to overthrow the Puerto Rican government? A "pro-lifer" who firebombed an abortion clinic? A "murderer" wanted in sixteen states?

No, the so-called "predator" was American businessman Bill Gates and the Microsoft Corporation, creator of the world's best-selling personal computer operating system: Microsoft Windows.

Is Microsoft a "predator" as the Department of Justice insinuates? A predator is someone like Adolph Hitler who kills people in concentration camps, or a member of the mafia who hunts down a neighborhood businessman for not obeying his wishes. A predator is someone who initiates the use of physical force. Microsoft has pointed a gun at no one. Clearly, a far stronger case for predatory acts can be made against the Department of Justice—who seeks to violate Microsoft's rights by taking control over its property—than for the make-believe "predatory" acts Microsoft is accused of.

Is Microsoft a "monopoly"? Not in the proper, derogatory, traditional sense of the term. Unlike the old AT&T Bell monopoly, or today's U.S Post Office monopoly, Microsoft did not gain its market share by having the government outlaw its competitors: Microsoft earned its position in the free-market. All real monopolies are the result of the government giving a business a "monopoly"—exclusive control of a given market by outlawing the entry of competitors. Free competition is not some

Marxist, egalitarian, "perfect" ideal where all competitors end up with an equal market share of a given industry. Whether in sports, or in business, the whole point of competition is to beat your competitors-even to the point of having them going out of business. Bigness should not be confused with monopolistic; size is not a criterion of wrongdoing; success is not a crime.

Did Microsoft halt "innovation"?

Innovation is the process of discovering a better way to do things. No private business can stop other companies from innovating except by out-innovating them, or by buying them out (in the which case the buyer would want the acquired company to innovate even more). The only way to halt innovation is by the threat of physical force, which is a legal power that only governments possess.

Did Microsoft "twist the arms" of its competitors? This sloppy metaphor is a vicious lie. Only the government has the legal power to twist-and even break-arms. The only "twisting" Microsoft engaged in was the legitimate practice of setting the terms of sale for its property. By what stretch of the imagination, does the Department of Justice conflate "arm-twisting" with Microsoft's refusal to license its products to vendors who do not accept its terms? This is not coercion because if a vendor refuses Microsoft's offer and walks away (and he is free to), the vendor will be no worse off than if he did not deal with Microsoft in the first place. For a real example of "arm-twisting" see what happens when you refuse to hand over half your income to the IRS this April.

Did Microsoft "hurt" competitors like Netscape by giving away a free Internet browser with its Windows operating system (when Netscape wanted to charge you $30)? No more so, then when McDonald's bundles its meat patties with a McDonald's bun does it hurt all the bread makers. Such actions may frustrate their competitors wishes, but their rights are left untouched.

Did Microsoft violate the rules of competition? It is the application of the political principle of individual rights to the economic realm of production and trade that gives rise to the rules of free-competition. To determine whether Microsoft violated the rules of competition; therefore, one has to determine whether Microsoft violated anyone's rights. Clearly, Microsoft did not violate the rights (life, liberty, and property) of anyone.

Yet, in the name of "protecting" competition, it is these inalienable rights that the antitrust process ignores in favor of such subjective considerations as the "public interest" (which fails to include the interests of the millions of members of the public who do not side with the Department of Justice), the "consumer interest" (which the Department of Justice has awarded itself the title of official spokesperson for), and "relevant markets" (the government defines the relevant market small enough so that Microsoft becomes a monopoly, even though Microsoft comprises less than 4% of the computer industry). Such "protection" is tantamount to helping a man to see by thrusting burning coals into his eyes.

By allowing judges to sidestep the issue of rights in favor of considerations, such as the "public interest," the antitrust laws effectively grant government the power to violate Microsoft's rights, i.e. the power to take over and control Microsoft's property against use it against Microsoft's interests. Thanks to the antitrust laws once a judge has arbitrarily classified a business as a "monopoly", the government is given free rein to: plunder of vast sums of money from Microsoft's bank account (through triple fines for so-called "damages"); replace Bill Gates with a government "overseer" who will make the important strategic decisions at Microsoft; force Microsoft to advertise and distribute its competitor's products; compel Microsoft to give up its "trade secrets" and intellectual property to those who condemn it. From start to finish the entire antitrust process is no more than a process of sacrificing successful American businesses—such as Microsoft, ALCOA, US Steel, Standard Oil—on the guillotine of egalitarianism to appease envious competitors. Or, to quote Alan Greenspan, who upon a complete examination of the theory and history of the antitrust laws wrote that ".the effective purpose, the hidden intent, and the actual practice of the antitrust laws in the United States have led to the condemnation of the productive and efficient members of our society because they are productive and efficient."

The truth of the matter is that Microsoft is not the predator; Microsoft is the victim. The real predators are the bureaucrats in the Department of Justice when acting according to the antitrust laws, second-rate competitors-like Sun, Novell, and Netscape—who seek to profit from the government's actions (what do they think will happen when the government under the antitrust laws deems them "too successful" in their "relevant market"?), and the anti-capitalist intellectuals who support them. Businessmen like Bill Gates are the one group of minorities that best symbolize the American way of life: that of a free, rational, moral society.

Leave the peaceful Microsoft Corporation alone and apply your smears and name-calling to some one who deserves it: those damn terrorists who brought down the WTC. This would truly be a historic act of justice

Regards,
Mark Da Cunha
Publisher
<http://www.CapitalismMagazine.com/>

MTC-00008546

From: DEasyone@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I am amore than a little tired of the antics that have been going on regarding the Microsoft litigation. I doubt the suit brought against them has saved me a dime on software. I know it has cost me about $70,000 in the price of my Microsoft stock. I am 72 years old and I do not need that kind of help. I have been using computers since the TI 44A was considered the latest deck top PC for the home. I have never had to buy anything I did not wish to nor been stopped from buying what I wanted because of Microsoft's marketing. I have tried other operating systems and found them lacking in what I wanted to do. I have since come back to Microsoft because for me they have a better system. Never because I was forced.

I use AOL as a Internet because I have liked it. If I change it will be because I try something else and like it better.

As I see it the people who brought the suit, did it for there own monitory gain and not for the benefit of the public consumer.

It is about time this suit is brought to a close so that things can get back to normal.

Of course the lawyers would like to drag it on for ever. That is how they get there pockets full.

David J.Eason
225 Newport Drive
Palm Springs California
92264

MTC-00008547

From: Susan Smith
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 9:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I don't see how Microsoft can possibly be called a monopoly. Anyone can use any software they choose.

Microsoft just built the best that is available. I used to use Netscape.....I don't any more but no one twisted my arm. I think this entire scheme is ridiculous and a slam for the entrepreneurial spirit. Why don't you go after the post office, cable company, garbage companies or phone companies? The post office is obviously a monopoly (government operated) and each of the other companies has their own territory in which to operate.....no one else is allowed.

Susan Smith

MTC-00008549

From: EJBrofka@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:18am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Regarding the proposed settlement in this case, I feel very strongly that it should go forward as is.

The reasons that this suit was initially filed were poor from the onset. There was a lot of political influence exerted by the previous administration in bowing to some major contributors who just happened to be in competition with Microsoft. Now, after a more enlightened review by the current administration of the previous legal processes that took place, a settlement has been proposed and accepted by Microsoft DOJ. There remains, however, an intense degree of partisan political pressure by Attorneys General of certain states to try to get into Microsoft's pockets. This, in my humble opinion, is the true reason why those states are not agreeing with the settlement. I would like to go on record as stating that I think that Microsoft has been the single most effective driving force in the "computer revolution" of late twentieth century. It, by virtue of its programs and technology, has put the power of personal computing into the hands of the people in a simple, straightforward and eminently usable fashion. Microsoft products, most importantly Windows and Internet Explorer, have enabled the general populace to partake in and to become part of the greatest information flow that this world had ever seen.

I have, from the very inception of the DOJ suit, felt that the suit was unfair, that it was ill-conceived, and that it was totally unnecessary. Microsoft has done nothing wrong in its actions. They are a good business and have acted aggressively to sell, to enhance and to protect their excellent products. Microsoft has been successful because of those efforts and its products. No one has been or even now is forced to use them. I think that the proprietary information that has been developed by Microsoft for its operation systems should remain just that: proprietary. Those competitors who have "suffered" have done so because of the inadequacies of their competing systems and programs. The truth of the matter is that they need to give the consumer/PC user a better product if they wish to succeed. That's the basis of business success in this country.

On the other hand, the greatest business foibles have occurred wherever and whenever the government has gotten involved in business, productivity and efficiency, areas in which it has no history of proficiency. One just needs to look at some of the government regulations that have been imposed upon business under the mistaken guise of "helping the consumer." A good (and appropriate) example is the "new and improved" water-saving toilet promulgated and forced into use by the previous administration—you know, the ones that use one-third less water, but that you have to flush three times to have them work properly. Amazing! Al Gore and Ms. Browner have earned a very special place in history for that one.

Let this settlement go forward as agreed and approved. Enough is enough. I am a consumer who has NOT been hurt in any way by Microsoft. As a matter of fact, I have been helped to an immense degree, and I personally feel that Microsoft should be honored, not sued.

Edward J. Brofka
2103 Norman Road
Marion, IL 62959

MTC-00008550

From: swingingclub
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:20am
Subject: Microsoft settlement is just and fair
Dear Counsel:

I am please to hear that Microsoft, Inc. has agreed to reach a settlement with the US Justice Department. I do not feel it is in either parties interest to have protracted litigation in this anti-trust lawsuit. As we all know full well that litigation means time and expense of resources for all parties involved and no one wins and hard feelings are the end product.

At the beginning, and it is still my belief that Microsoft did not violate any anti-trust laws. Microsoft is a highly competitive company in its industry similar to Wal-mart. There is no law that prohibits a company from being competitive. When the matter is evaluated on the basis of economic of scales, the dynamics does favor Microsoft because of its unlimited intellectual resources to create and develop new technologies into the foreseeable future.

Microsoft should not be hindered by other companies who do not have the means to compete. Further, it has been wrongfully argued that Microsoft has prohibited other entities from competing in the computer industry by anti-competitive tactics. Most of the arguments are based on hypothesis which do not take into consideration the dynamics of economics. It can be safely argued that the companies who object to the settlement are less competitive than Microsoft. Those companies do not and will not ever have the resources that Microsoft has obtained through its creative skills.

Factually, each company that has opposed the settlement (Gateway, Inc.) is functioning on a less than favorable financial tread. Gateway has erroneously argued that the settlement will cause harm to the organization because the donation of computers to schools will cut into their business profits. Factually, Gateway financial problems started long before this proposed settlement was conceived.

Someone need to review Gateway's financial sheet. In the financial community, Gateway has not met its profit projections of the last three quarters of last year. Its biggest rival is Dell Computer which is the reason why Gateway is having financial difficulty.

The US Department of Justice should look at the economic impact that a lawsuit against Microsoft will have on the US economy. It will not be favorable. The nine or so state attorney generals that oppose the settlement should also take note of the fact that a lawsuit against Microsoft will most certainly impact the US economy negatively. I will argue that to oppose the proposed settlement is nothing less than a self-serving posture which amounts to greed. It appears that those states are seeking specific money compensation. This suit is unlike a tobacco law suits where human life was taken because of a defective product.

Microsoft has agreed in principle to stop practices which would cause other companies harm in competition. In addition, Microsoft has agreed to assist other organizations in competition. The states that opposed the settlement have not taken into consideration the good will and philanthropic generosity of the Gates Foundation which has given millions of dollars in charitable donations. I would propose that in the event those states who continue to pursue the course of opposing the fair and just settlement of Microsoft has agreed to enter into with the US Justice Department should be cut off from any form of grants or philanthropic gifts by the Gates Foundation and Microsoft.

I would suggest to the Honorable Court to accept the settlement agreement that the US Justice Department and Microsoft, Inc. have entered into on the basis that the settlement is fair and just for America. Protracted litigation should be avoided by any means necessary because it will be a waste of valuable resources.

Respectfully submitted,
Thomas P. Johnson, III

MTC-00008551

From: Gary Dawson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:21am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please let Microsoft alone. The special interest groups are served enough. Let Microsoft continue to give us a good product at a fair price. The marketplace can decide if the Microsoft is doing the right thing.

GDawson

MTC-00008552

From: Paul Kessler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:22am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement, as now agreed to between Microsoft and the Justice Department, should be approved. Microsoft has been persecuted by its competitors. Microsoft's conduct has been beneficial to the consumer. It's products are superior to those of it's competitors and they are using every means at their disposal to hurt Microsoft.

Paul T. Kessler, Jr.
11651 Hidden Valley Rd.
Carmel Valley, CA 93924

MTC-00008553

From: Roy Schweiker
To: Microsoft ATR,attorney. general@po.state.ct.us@inet...
Date: 1/4/02 12:25am
Subject: proposed Microsoft $1 billion payment

Gentlemen:

I am distressed that the government is prepared to accept Microsoft's offer to supply $1 billion in kind to poor schools as partial settlement. By guaranteeing Microsoft $1 billion in business at whatever price it sets, you are perpetuating exactly the sort of monopoly you are trying to end.

Instead, make Microsoft give the schools $1 billion in cash and require that they issue vendor-neutral proposals for bids, which would probably allow the schools to acquire double the computing power. Alternatively, require Microsoft to provide $1 billion in products valued at actual manufacturing cost, such as $6 for a pack of CD-ROMs and $1 for a site license. That way every school and every household in the country would get a free site license with media for Windows and Office. Maybe that is a fair settlement after all. Ro y Schweiker, Concord NH

roy.schweiker@juno.com
CC:roy.schweiker@juno.com@inetgw,aweber@cmp.com@inetg...

MTC-00008554

From: Lucio DiGiovanni
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:29am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I cannot understand why Microsoft is getting most of what it wanted out of this settlement. It seems as though Microsoft is getting off easy, since George W Bush has taken office. From reading the final judgement, How can this judgement be considered fair when Apple Computer and Netscape Communications, Inc have both been adversely affected by the actions of Microsoft. What corrective action can be made after more than 10 years of destructive monopolistic activity?

I believe that consumers have been hurt by not being allowed to decide what browser they could use. I am affected EVERY DAY because I cannot use Netscape at work because my Company has 'standardized' on IE. I have two browsers loaded on my computer (Netscape and IE) at work because there are certain internal websites that have specifically been modified to work with IE only.

What kind of standard is in IE if it has web content that allows a user to access a URL such as "I:\directory\file". This works OK with IE but does not work on Netscape because it IS NOT A URL by HTML standards approved by the Internet Engineering Task Force (IETF). Netscape complains about this error but since most people (Because they were forced to use IE) have no problem with this 'URL' access, it is not considered a problem and people are then confused about what a URL is and continue to make non standard changes to web sites that only work with a NON-Standard IE.

Sincerely frustrated,
Lucio DiGiovanni

MTC-00008555

From: DMiller909@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:28am
Subject: (no subject)

During the past several years I have followed the government/Microsoft case. The competitors of Microsoft applied their pressure and, in my opinion, the situation turned from legal to a political situation.

The Attorney Generals, representing their respective states and constituents (competitors of Microsoft) have set forth the claim that the consumer has been hurt by the activities of Microsoft. Yet, I, as a consumer, would love to know what damage has been caused to me so that I would be able to compare it to the financial damage caused by the shadows this case has cast over the financial market. The AG's pursue their ultimate desire which, in my opinion, would ultimately satisfy the companies they have in their respective States while the investors and the market continue being the victim. Moreover, the economy of our nation has diminished in proportion to the overall effect that the market has suffered.

My wife and I have made investments in Microsoft, Aol, Sun, Cisco etc., hoping to build a future financial support for our Grand-children when it would be needed for their college education. There is no doubt in my mind that numerous other parents and grand-parents have invested with the same thought in mind. And, as long as the uncertainty overshadows the market the multitude of persons invested in the technology stocks will continue suffering the financial loss that the case continues to create by causing ongoing legal demands, by the AG's, that surpass the final determination of the federal government. The federal government and several States have reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft. Why therefor should the marketplace and the consumers be held hostage to the will of competitors and the remaining attorney generals who insist upon additional legal demands. Neither the consumers nor the overall economy needs further uncertainty. It is time to put this matter to rest.

Very truly yours,
Daniel Miller

MTC-00008556

From: RShelton5@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:31am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Justice Department:

Leave Mr. Gates and his company alone. He has committed no crime; he deserves our praise and gratitude for his work. He has a moral right to his work and his money. Antitrust laws are immoral and design to crush the creative and honest. Cease your attacks on him and his company.

Sincerely,
Ray Shelton
Glendale, CA

MTC-00008557

From: Jack Carroll
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:34 am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Public Comment by John A. Carroll

This comment is on the proposed settlement in U.S. vs. Microsoft, and on the Remedial Proposals by State of New York et al vs. Microsoft.

THE OPEN SOURCE SOFTWARE INTEREST My interest in the outcome of this case is a consequence of my participation in the open source software community. I'm a long-time user and advocate of the Linux/GNU family of operating systems and related open source applications; also, I'm a stockholder in Red Hat, Inc., a commercial distributor of open source software. Antitrust legislation and litigation concerns not only the direct parties in the case, but the public interest as well. Obviously, the interests of the open source community form a subset of the public interest, because that community is part of the public. However, open source software and its development are related to the interests of the general public in a much closer way. Open source programming is fundamentally about freedom. This body of software is developed largely by end users, for the benefit of end users. Most open source projects encourage anyone to contribute improvements. Also, anyone is at liberty to start a new project and build on the existing body of open software. The most common licenses encourage wide distribution of the fruits of this open-ended collaboration. The nature of the open source community makes it a powerful force against monopolism. It is possibly the only body today able to offer the public serious alternatives to Microsoft operating systems and office productivity applications, and thus effectively counteract Microsoft's unrelenting campaign to preserve and extend its monopoly. In certain parts of the world a growing user base has already begun to abandon Microsoft products in favor of open source replacements. Because of the diversity of this community, it can have no single representative able to speak for all. It is not a business, though it includes businesses. It's not a private club, though it includes a great number of local users' groups. Its most productive components, the "projects", usually don't have even that amount of organization; they're geographically dispersed teams of volunteer programmers sharing source code over the internet, who prefer to give their attention to the programs they have a need for, rather than and unwanted apparatus of officers and treasuries. University research programs and undergraduate programming classes are involved, and many of the customs and practices derive from the open traditions of academic research. A great deal has been accomplished by unaffiliated individuals. Thus, different members of this community will contribute different perspectives to this public issue. DEFECTS OF THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AND REMEDIAL PROPOSALS The remedies in the proposed settlement are written around "ISVs, IHVs, IAPs, ICPs, and OEMs"—all business entities (section I). Developers and suppliers of open source software are neither mentioned nor contemplated. Indeed, section J paragraph 2 speaks of "reasonable business needs" and "authenticity and viability of its business".

"ISV" is counter-intuitively defined to be a supplier of a software product that runs on a Windows Operating System product -thereby excluding a supplier of a software product that runs on a non-Microsoft operating system, or a supplier of a non-Microsoft operating system. The information to be disclosed to non-Microsoft entities includes APIs, protocols, and documentation for middleware (section D). It does not include user data file formats used by applications. The language of section I could reasonably be interpreted to assert intellectual property rights to any information which is not specifically required to be disclosed; that could be used to restrict the analysis and documentation by outsiders of an application's external behavior, or the use of information they have already compiled by behavioral analysis. That would have profound implications; in effect, it would manipulate the Court into restoring and strengthening an application monopoly which the open source community has already broken. These are not accidental oversights. These provisions are carefully crafted to exclude open source software developers from access to the technical information necessary to make their creations interoperable with Microsoft systems and application software.

Several open source operating systems have fully demonstrated their readiness for the most demanding commercial service. Open source office productivity applications have matured to a point where their relative merits compared to Microsoft equivalents are as much a matter of opinion and taste as objective fact. Star Office / Open Office, in particular, has achieved a high degree of interoperability with Microsoft Office file formats.

Now the struggle between Microsoft and the open source community is converging on offering end users the freedom to migrate their existing document and data files from proprietary Microsoft formats to next-generation open-standard replacements. This migration process relies heavily on "filters", which are utility programs that convert one file format to another. Historically, open source projects have analyzed sample document files to deduce their formatting, so that filters can be written. Once these filters exist, end users can migrate to a different application package at will without losing their investment in their data. Equally, users of non-Microsoft applications can put their work into formats that Microsoft applications can read and edit. Microsoft's most important weapon to obstruct end-user defection and prevent the emergence of a level playing field is the obscurity of the file formats used by its office applications. If they can continually change their file formats to break compatibility, then deny access to the revised format information by a combination of secrecy and legal measures, they can erect high barriers against migration to non-Microsoft applications, or exchanging document files with users of non-Microsoft applications and operating systems. This is a powerful anticompetitive tactic.

Why agree to share information with certain businesses, but not with open source developers? Because Microsoft has a long history of success in buying out or smothering commercial suppliers of any product that endangers its monopoly position—it has every reason to be confident of its ability to continue the same proven strategy. Those methods don't work against open source developers. These developers aren't carrying the weight of a business, so they don't need revenue—therefore there's no way to cut off their resources. Legal harassment is impractical, because they're scattered through hundreds of jurisdictions with radically different legal systems, some of which are promoting open source software as a matter of national security policy. Their code is released under licenses that make monopolization virtually impossible. Their distribution costs are negligible. Their archives are duplicated and backed up all around the world. And because anybody with a computer and a modem can participate at will, their numbers, productivity, and code quality are far beyond any business's ability to match.

Section B applies only to "Covered OEMs", which are defined to be only the 20 largest-volume OEMs. This leaves Microsoft considerable room to impose discriminatory terms and rates on all its other customers, and thus penalize any behavior it wants to discourage. Smaller OEMs are the ones most likely to respond to end users' requirements and preferences—such as offering customers a choice of Microsoft, non-Microsoft, dual-boot, or no pre-installed software. Section C says nothing about adjusting royalties when Microsoft middleware is replaced by non-Microsoft middleware, or simply deleted.

New York et al's Remedial Proposals offer important improvements. Their section B paragraph 2-ii contains the important phrase "actual volume of total shipments of the licensed products", meaning that Microsoft is paid only for Microsoft products shipped, and not the total number of computers shipped by the OEM including those on which Microsoft products are not installed. This is a critical issue to the open source community, since it removes an economic barrier to offering a choice of software to the OEM's customers—and to offering machines without software to those who prefer to do their own installations or boot from the local network. They do not, however, propose to provide open source developers with the same external interface information as business entities, nor do they include application file formats among the information to be disclosed except indirectly by interpretation of a definition (section C paragraph 4). Also, in their provisions for interoperability, they discuss middleware but not applications; this effectively protects only suppliers of software that runs on Microsoft operating systems.

They do propose to force Microsoft to open-source Internet Explorer. Other open source users and developers may disagree with me about this, but I don't believe that would be useful at this late date. Open source versions of Netscape and its successor Mozilla are already the dominant browsers on open source operating systems. Nearly four years of work have been invested in bringing the original commercial source code up to the standards of open source projects, so that substantive progress can now be made. Most of the commercially-produced Netscape code had to be discarded and rewritten from scratch. It's unlikely that a development team could be assembled that would be willing to undertake similar remedial work on Internet Explorer. In general, open source developers would have little interest in looking at Microsoft source code. It's the external behavior that's important for interoperability, not the internal design.

They propose to make the porting of Microsoft Office to some non-Microsoft operating systems mandatory. This is interesting, in that it could become a stepping stone for Microsoft users to abandon Windows first and Office later, rather than attempting both changes at once. Several years ago most of the open source community would have been interested in porting Office, but the work on replacements is far advanced now. It's of interest that the latest version of the only non-Microsoft OS which runs Office now is Mac-OS X, which is actually a commercial Unix operating system underneath the Macintosh user interface. Thus, this version of Office uses Unix APIs. Most non-Microsoft operating systems with any significant popularity today are derived from Unix (FreeBSD, OpenBSD, Solaris, HP-UX, AIX, Linux, GNU Hurd, SCO Unix); thus, it would be relatively easy to write the Mac-OS source code according to recognized Unix portability standards, so that it would compile on any Unix platform. However, the language of the proposal is so vague on what the target operating systems would be, that Microsoft could choose BeOS, OS/2, and Plan 9, thus frustrating the intent.

Section L of the Remedial Proposals is of great importance to open source software. Open source software achieves much of the interoperability among its components and applications by adherence to published formal standards. Interoperability between Microsoft and non-Microsoft systems and applications is essential to creating a level playing field. Thus, requiring Microsoft to be truthful in its claims to standards compliance promotes competition and user choice. It is also important that definitions of "standard" and "de facto standard" are provided, since Microsoft has a history of misusing these terms for deceptive marketing purposes.

PROPOSED REMEDIES

1. In section D, "shall disclose to..." should be changed to "shall publish". This would place all software developers on an equal footing, and make crucial interoperability information available to open-source developers working without the financial support of a business. In the same section "APIs and related Documentation" should read "APIs, file formats, communication protocols, and related Documentation"; and "or Microsoft applications to store and communicate user data" should added following "Microsoft Middleware to interoperate with a Windoww Operating Systems Product". This makes explicit the requirement to publish application file formats and network protocols. From the view-point of the open source community, enforcing these two requirements is the central issue of the whole case, and the key to breaking the monopoly once and for all. The requirement to disclose application file formats is implied in the Remedial Proposals' definition of "API", but leaving it less than airtight invites tactical litigation and delay. The burden of any such litigation would probably fall on the State Attorneys-General, because nobody in the open source community has the financial resources to take on Microsoft in court.

2. The Remedial Proposals forbid Microsoft from using agreements or retaliation to discourage OEMs from installing non-Microsoft operating systems alongside Windows and allowing the user to control which system is booted. Microsoft should also be prohibited from taking technical measures against multi-booting. It wouldn't be difficult to modify Windows to malfunction in the presence of a non-Microsoft boot loader, intentionally corrupt or overwrite the boot loader, or fail after partition re-sizing.

REFERENCES

On the history and nature of open source software: "The Cathedral and the Bazaar" by Eric S. Raymond, <http://www.tuxedo.org/esr/writings/cathedral-bazaar> On the licensing of free and open source software: the General Public License ("GPL") by Richard M. Stallman, <http://www.fsf.org/licenses/licenses.html#TOCGPL> On the place of business within the open source community, "Under the Radar" by Robert Young and Wendy Rohm, <http://www.redhat.com/radar.html>

John A. Carroll
77 Musket Dr.
Nashua, N.H. 03062-1442

MTC-00008558

From: Margaret Baecker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Renata B. Hesse
Antitrust Division
U.S. Department of Justice
601 D Street NW
Suite 120
Washington, DC 20530-0001
Dear Ms. Hesse:

I am writing in support of the proposed settlement agreement with Microsoft that would provide technology funds, computers and software to schools in low-income communities. The State of Wisconsin would benefit from the technology funds. Our state falls below the national average in the percentage of 4th-8th grade students in schools that have computers available in all classrooms. In addition, about one half of Wisconsin Education Association Council members feel that they have adequate training to operate computers and software in their schools. Less than half of these teachers feel that they get technology training, provided by their schools, to integrate technology into curriculum. The additional funding for teacher training in technology would be beneficial for smaller school districts, such as mine, which are feeling the effects of decreased state funding to meet operating expenses. In many cases, there is only limited revenue to provide technology training. Needless to say, computer and telecommunication technologies are important educational tools in our schools. Computer literacy is an educational goal in our schools, providing students with technology skills that are needed to meet the learning requirements for future jobs. No student or teacher should be denied the opportunity to become computer-literate. The proposed Microsoft Settlement is most positive, and certainly would benefit students, teachers, and schools that need technology funding the most.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Margaret Baecker
Independence Public School
23786 Indee Blvd.
Independence, WI 54747

MTC-00008559

From: jim.puckett@idcchina.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:55am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Ladies, Gentlemen:

I am writing to support the settlement of the Microsoft case as it stands today. While I cannot even agree with the pursuit of the case in the first case, regardless, it has occurred. First and foremost, Microsoft is not a monopoly.

Microsoft has created the ability for the average person to use the personal computer. Prior to Microsoft's comprehensive programs for work, together with their operating systems, the use of the personal computer was a perilous and cumbersome time.

I have been a user of the personal computer from the early 1980's. At that time, with DOS as the standard, loading a new program was an arduous task not to mention the "risk" you had in merely turning off your computer incorrectly. Missteps in either of these operations could have easily rendered your PC hopelessly "crashed". At that time, an expensive "consultant" was the only resolution to recovery of your PC tool.

Microsoft changed that through its integrated systems. Apple did not do it. Oracle did not do it. IBM did not do it. Microsoft did it. Their system is not perfect. Their "capture" of the market is not perfect. However, they have done nothing that any other visionary company could not have done. This witch hunt of a legal proceeding is an atrocity and a fierce challenge to the way America has become what it is—the place where innovation is rewarded, and a better mousetrap universally purchased and used by the average citizen. The expert mouse catcher, such as my cat George, will never be interested in the tool that is available to us average users.

Finish this proceeding at the earliest time. Settle this case now. Let Microsoft and the American inventor and visionary proceed with the next great idea that will fuel the American and world economy to new and greater heights.

Thank you.

James E. Puckett
707 Alondra NW
Albuquerque, NM 87114
puckettje@aol.com
505 897 1040

MTC-00008560

From: Alan Grose
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:46am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the settlement that has been reached is fair and equitable and should be approved.

MTC-00008561

From: Robert H. Fleck
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:47am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Ladies and Gentlemen.....

Please settle with Microsoft. The proposed settlement is fair. This whole case has been going on for far too long. The industry has changed so much since the case was brought to trial that it is no longer important.

Settle and be done with it.....

MTC-00008562

From: Susan Fuller
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:59am
Subject: settlement

I am glad the suits were filed. Microsoft was getting out of line. They should not be allowed to dictate how other companies run their business. I feel the settlement was enough to ask Microsoft to pay, and that unless they get way out of line again, they should be left to do their thing, without further penalty. Microsoft is very important to the US economy, and is trying to be a better corporate citizen, as I see it. I believe they have "learned their lesson". Their products are truly getting better, and I buy them happily now, not begrudgingly, like I did in the past, because there was no choice.

MTC-00008563

From: Evangeline Burtch-Farrell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:58am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Will You PLEASE leave Microsoft alone to do what it does best (innovate and create for all of us) and move on to some REAL issues of injustice. Enough already.

E. Burtch-Farrell

MTC-00008564

From: N. Hagan
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle the Microsoft case, as soon as possible. It is an ugly remnant of the last (corrupt) DoJ and one that need not continue. The states who oppose it need to be overruled. There is no value to the market, to the economy or to Microsoft's erstwhile competitors in continuing. Microsoft's so-called competitors (and the real impetus behind this suit) will fail no matter how many advantages they are given. Don't use anti-trust law to reward inferior companies with overpriced products that the consumer has long ago rejected, of their own accord.

Innovation is alive and well in this industry. Open Source projects, IBM, Apple, Netscape all are still here and they prosper. Microsoft never stifled innovation, it stopped inferior overpriced companies (Like SUNW) from preying on less sophisticated consumers. How? By giving them *choice. End the insanity now.

MTC-00008565

From: Dave Steele
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:20am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is my opinion that the Tunney Act, and resulting Microsoft Settlement, should be completed as soon as possible. It has always been my view that Microsoft has been persecuted for the heinous crime of being ahead of it's time—nothing more. Their ability to outthink and move faster than the competition, and the resulting financial gains, are all they're guilty of. Microsoft has generously agreed to settle, so let's settle and be done with this dirty business.

Dave Steele
P.O. Box 103
Tryon, OK 74875
918 374-2682

MTC-00008566

From: PGMUCCI@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:21am
Subject: SETTLEMENT

COMPANIES THAT STRIVE TO BECOME SUCCESSFUL IN SUPPLYING A PRODUCT THAT PEOPLE WANT SHOULD BE REWARDED AND NOT DRAGGED THROUGH COURT BECAUSE THE COMPETITION CANNOT KEEP UP.
PGMUCCI@AOL.COM

MTC-00008567

From: ddp2000@tds.net
To: microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
Date: 1/4/02 1:26am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please end the lawsuits against MSFT. Everyone benefits from the great software innovations made at low cost to the consumer. All great businesses have high barriers to entry by competition... that is good not bad.

MTC-00008568

From: Donsmckee@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:27am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

All charges against Microsoft should be dropped. They have provided goods and services which consumers have voluntarily purchased. No monopoly can exist in a voluntary, free market.

Don McKee
3165 Sierra Dust Court
Sparks, NV. 89436

MTC-00008569

From: Bill Lesnjak
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:37am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Friends,
The proposed settlement is appropriate, fair, and beneficial to all concerned, particularly to the American public of which I write as a member of.

Microsoft's contributions to our society have dwarfed many of others; please, let's settle this matter and go on to the future!

Will Lesnjak,
S-4067 Chicken Hollow Rd.,
Hillsboro, WI 54634
billlesnjak@yahoo.com

MTC-00008570

From: Marc Alexander Toppel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:38am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Reader,
I do not know who is reading this, but I hope you to be a rational, freedom loving person—someone who's main goal in life is to retain justice in a world that has become devoid of it. It is with this said that I must describe the reasons why the Microsoft Antitrust Case is nothing but wrong for various reasons.

I know the main purpose of antitrust laws. They are pragmatic at best. They hope to make things better for the whole society. However, we live in a country that was founded on principles of justice, blind of how it might affect others. If habeus corpus was stricken from our constitution, I'm sure the judicial system would be alot more streamlined, but would it be just? If we took away people's inborn right to speak freely, the government would no longer have to deal with opposing viewpoints and more things could be accomplished, but is it right? A dictator could come in and implement a system with which every aspect of our lives were managed for the good of society, yet dosen't that vanquish our right to make our own decisions in life, bad or good? For everything that you do, think not of what the practical implications may be, please think of what is right.

With that knowledge in mind, I must proclaim to you that anti-trust actions fall short of practical. I myself do not have the economics no-how to explain this to you, but I have come across countless essays documenting the benefits of a laissez-faire world. I will leave such things to the more qualified experts. I do, however, stand with the faculties to defend Microsoft morally. They created their products. Consumers decided they liked them. Companies began to recognize this so THEY DECIDED to enter contracts with Microsoft to use their products. Competitors volunteered to compete against Microsoft, yet some failed either because they created inferior products or they lacked the long term planning necessary to establish brand recognition and reliability. If you'll notice, everything here was done VOLUNTARILY. No one forced anyone to do anything. Customers were free to buy or not buy products. Companies were free to sign or not sign contracts. Competitors were free to create better or worse products.

Do not mess up this free society and force Microsoft to adhere to your beliefs, for if you do, we become one step closer to a totalitarian regime. However, If you drop the case and subsequently remove antitrust laws from the books, we stay that much closer to the place that our fore fathers envisioned so long ago.

Thank you for your time,
Marc Toppel, age 18
mtoppel@mail.utexas.edu
936-441-6575
10 Baron's Place
Conroe, Texas 77304

MTC-00008571

From: Orrilla Blanpied
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:38am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Sirs, we wish to preserve the rights of Microsoft to innovate, continue research and development and protect their rights to the development of their original ideas.

Microsoft has contributed revolutionary technology for the huge growth and developemnt of our country !! Protect it !!

O.Blanpied oblanpie@netzero.net

MTC-00008572

From: Dick (038) Bev
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:47am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I believe this has gone on long enough and most of the lawyers can retire now with this prolonged lawsuit. It is my opinion that the lawsuit be settled once and for all and let the innovative spirit of this product continue. Our economy in the pacific northwest needs this company and the jobs they provide and this country needs more Bill Gates and less lawsuits that have tied up this country long enough.

Beverly Davidson, Taxpayer.

MTC-00008573

From: JBPsyD333@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:47am
Subject: microsoft settlement

I fully support the settlement as reached and believe it to be in everyone's best interests, as both a stockholder and a user of microsoft products.

Dr. Judi Bloom Hauswirth and Dennis Hauswirth

MTC-00008574

From: Joe Testerman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:20 am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement offer proposed in the DOJ v. Microsoft case is more than reasonable and this litigation should finally be brought to a conclusion. I am very concerned that special interest groups continue their agenda of pushing for the break-up of one of America's largest companies. I find this type of agenda unacceptable and way beyond reason.

Please accept the current settlement proposal and put a stop to this long overrun issue. It's time for America to get back to business and to continue our focus of competing in the new global economy. Thank you for your time and courtesy in this regard.

Sincerely,
Joseph L. Testerman, II
13208 Myford Road #343
Tustin, CA 92782
(714) 832-5851

MTC-00008575

From: Sophie Fox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft Settlement has now been decided and must be allowed to go forward.

The States, especially California, which have chosen to proceed with their suits are just grandstanding. The money they propose to use in this pursuit could be better used to help house and feed the homeless, provide better mental health services, repair roads, etc., rather than being thrown down a rat hole.

It is time that our public officials stop their waste of our money—give up the vendetta against Microsoft—and be prepared to be accountable!

S. Fox

MTC-00008576

From: Halle Doucoupolis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:31am
Subject: microsoft settlement

This is to let you DOJ folks know that as one of the general public I think your behavior towards microsoft is just shameful. The great american dream has absolutely no meaning anymore if you people keep this farce of a lawsuit going. Where in the world does it say a person can't realize their dream, become the richest person in the whole wide world and still be happy? What makes you people think that you are right by trying to tell this person he can't keep the secrets of his success SECRET? That he HAS to remake HIS company to suit someone else just because that other company wants to dig around in his company business. It's not fair, right or American. If this is the way you people treat success it's no wonder the majority of the third world hates our guts. It's no wonder the little guy (like me) can never get ahead. After all what do we have to look forward to?

Maryalice Anderson, A.A.S.; paralegal; LPN
Halle Doucoupolis, A.A.S.; paralegal; LPN
Amanda Gates
Ameenah Rasheed
DBA:
4Black Women With Voices/Point Inc.

MTC-00008577

From: (u)nasturtium
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:32pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern,

I strongly believe that it would not be in the public interest to pursue the current anti-trust case against Microsoft Corporation any further, but rather accept the Revised Final Judgement (dated 6th November 2001). I believe it is a waste of public funds, especially in light of the September 11 tragedy, to spend more on this already tough yet fair judgement.

The Revised Final Judgement, Section IVa, 2a states "Access during normal office hours to inspect any and all source code, books, ledgers, accounts, correspondence, memoranda and other documents and records in the possession, custody, or control of Microsoft, which may have counsel present, regarding any matters contained in this Final Judgment." These powers will inevitably be misused in ways to benefit competitors eg disclosure of source code of Windows Platform software, product direction etc. I dutifully suggest this clause be removed in the public interest. Section III, "Prohibited Conduct", extensively covers actions Microsoft may not take against OEMs (defined as "an original equipment manufacturer of Personal Computers that is a licensee of a Windows Operating System Product"). This, I believe is an unnecessary and unfair power. OEM software is sold at a lower price to OEMs, and ultimately consumers. OEM software is released at the discretion of Microsoft (in line with academic and other subsidised versions) and Microsoft should be able to choose its condition of sale, as it will be of economic benefit to consumers. Therefore, it is clear that Microsoft is already bound sufficiently and further actions will result in negative effects for purchasers of OEM software.

Thankyou for your time and consideration.

Please direct any comments to —nasturtium@bigpond.com

MTC-00008578

From: Vincent Avona
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:36am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I am pleased to see that a fair settlement has been reached between the Federal and State governments. I trust we will no longer have to continue waste our tax money and government time on further litigation. It should have never started to begin with. Good luck Microsoft. "Let's Roll"

PS How about putting on the market more software compatible with Mac OS!

MTC-00008579

From: MortEfron@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:38am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough already. The government has spent millions of taxpayer's money on a ridiculous case against Microsoft and caused the company to spend millions more to defend, which ultimately will cost the consumer in higher prices to cover this litigation cost! Somehow, over the years, the prices of computers have come down due to competition and are now affordable by almost everyone. I don't see how any consumer is being hurt.

Stop this silly witch hunt which is simply costing all of us in the long run. Consumers are actually being harmed more by the cost of the litigation than by anything done by Microsoft. I believe the government is stifling progress. It is time to stop.

Morton L. Efron

MTC-00008580

From: E.J. Eiteljorge
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it May Concern:

I'd like to take just a moment to express my opinion on the Microsoft persecution. I absolutely, 100%, completely, thoroughly believe that the DOJ's pursuit of Microsoft is totally responsible for the "tech stock meltdown" of the last roughly two years. The amount of wealth lost by the average American investor, of which I am one, dwarfs even that of Mr Gates, the intended target.

As such, I believe that a hasty settlement coupled with a sincere apology directed to Microsoft, its stockholders and to the average American investor is certainly in order.

Terrance J. Eiteljorge
Heidelberg Hospital
CMR 442, Box 990
APO AE 09042

MTC-00008581

From: David Winarsky
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:49am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

To whom it may concern:

This lawsuit against a great American company is ridiculous. The first lawsuit against the Bells did have merit, but in the end the gov broke up the bells and now you have had service.

I work for a Major retailer in the U.S. and sell both Microsoft products and product from their competition, and I have to say that the Microsoft Corp. goes all out and improves peoples lives, by making their technology easy and affordable to use.

These lawsuits need to cease and we, as a nation need to come together and pull this nation together.

Thank you,
David Winarsky
david3668@hotmail.com
Boca Raton, Florida

MTC-00008582

From: Steve S. Scherping
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing you because I am extremely concerned about the current state of the settlement concerning the Federal Government's case against Microsoft's antitrust practices. I feel that harsher penalties should take place. Take as an example, the recent offering by Microsoft as a settlement for the private antitrust cases brought against them. Not only do I believe this offer allows them to continue their monopoly since they will be imposing more of the software, operating systems, and hardware onto users, it also is quite meager since the potential value is $1.1 billion, when they readily have $36 billion in readily available capital. In this case, being a monopoly,

Microsoft also controls the value of its products so again it is able to shorthand those involved in the settlement. I understand that this does not directly relate to your case, but it is deeply troubling that a company that is supposed to be punished, in the end will probably come out the winner again. I am not a rogue citizen that has a vendetta against Microsoft. Rather, I am an experienced system administrator that utilizes Microsoft products on a daily basis. In a university setting we are forced into pricing schemes and meager product offerings from Microsoft since our students are not capable of using other offerings since they consistently use proprietary technology and also force developers and manufacturers into sole platform support scenarios. Microsoft continues to test its corporate boundaries by attempting to force users into using their products. They also continue to alter known standards into their own proprietary technology. Please continue your efforts to halt the illegal business practices of Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Steve S. Scherping
Steve S. Scherping
Business: U of MN
Communications Technician
CLA Language Center
51 Folwell Hall
9 Pleasant St SE
Minneapolis, MN 55455
Ph. 612-626-0013
Gen. Ph. 612-624-6811
Email: scher037@umn.edu
Home: 810 Thornton St. SE, Apt. 1004
Minneapolis, MN 55414
scher037@umn.edu
<http://umn.edu/home/scher037>
<http://www.ssstech.net>
Steve's PGP Public Key may be found at http://www.umn.edu/lookup?SET=

INSTITUTION=
UMNTC&UID=scher037&show=pgp=1

MTC-00008583

From: Vagabonds2@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To the Department of Justice,

The Federal Government and nine states along with Microsoft Corporation have agreed to terms of a settlement. Shouldn't we honor that? With the current turmoil in our country, let us ask, "What serves our nation best, both socially and economically?" It seems to me that upholding the proposed and agreed upon settlement is in the best interest of our country and people. What is really to be gained by dragging this case on for months or years. So if you value any input from thoughts of an ordinary citizen of our country, "Let's move on!" Nine states and The Department of Justice and Microsoft have agreed to this proposed settlement. As a teacher, our students know that in a democracy, the majority of votes makes the decision. Aren't we still going by those rules? Let's move on!

Thank you for taking the time to read my letter,

Gary Fine

MTC-00008584

From: SSTARJUDY@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 3:07am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

3056 Rue D'Orleans
 Apartment #138
 San Diego, California 92110
 January 2, 2002
 Attorney General John Ashcroft
 US Department of Justice
 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW.,
 Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I wanted to take this opportunity to thank you for the settlement that you and your colleagues at the Department of Justice have worked so hard to negotiate in the Microsoft antitrust dispute.

The settlement is good for the technology industry and good for the economy, both of which have taken a serious beating as a result of this unfortunate three-year long legal battle between the two parties. Anytime a settlement is reached, and extremely costly and distracting litigation can be avoided, it is a good thing.

It seems that politics is the motivating factor behind this case and that Microsoft's adversaries will stop at nothing to derail and destroy Microsoft. These groups and individuals do not seem to realize or care that they are hurting the entire U.S. economy in the process.

The settlement ends Microsoft's status as a "monopoly". Since this was the goal of the government in the first place and it has clearly been met, Microsoft should be left alone and allowed to move forward. It is time that our premier software company gets back to innovating rather than litigating. Thank you for the work that you have done on this settlement and for ensuring that no further legal action will be taken against this American company.

Sincerely,
 Judy Ames

MTC-00008585

From: CWest51134@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 3:29am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

MICROSOFT ATR@USDOJ.GOV,

The government should be more informed about the whole Microsoft spectrum and not let politics interfere with any decisions it makes to improve the existence of Microsoft in the entire community of the computer world. Microsoft has a wonderful product in all the versions of Windows and other products in provides to it's customers but there is definitely a cloud of greed hovering over the company's operation. One would think that the sales of their products would produce enough revenue that the tech support would be provided to it's clientele at no charge as many other very successful companies do. Actually for Microsoft to charge for tech support could be interpreted as monopolistic. Once the user goes into Microsoft products it's very difficult to drop Windows and seek a replacement elsewhere.

The exit option is not readily provided to leave a program whenever one wants to. Then there is all the subliminal advertising that is annoying. The criticism could go on and on but there definitely should be some oversight by some honest, fully knowledgeable and not political authority to give guidance to all computer industry related companies.

Not tell a man how to run his company but when you create so many billionaires off the backs of your customers who actually support you with their sweat and blood is unconscionable. The revenue is not apportioned properly in Microsoft so the blame is at the top, the authority of the company. It is my hope as a long time Microsoft user that the above remarks be seriously taken when it comes time to finalize the settlement.

Sincerely,
 Charles West
 cwest51134@aol.com
 CC:kazdwa@webtv.net@inetgw

MTC-00008586

From: Dorothy G Randrup
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 4:04am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen: Please close this case, as a settlement has been agreed upon. It is my strong desire to have Microsoft proceed with the great work they have begun in the past few years.

Hoping for your cooperation, Sincerely,
 Dorothy G. Randrup 3728 E. Balch Ave.
 Fresno, CA 93702-2804

MTC-00008587

From: Steve Glass
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 4:05am
 Subject: gov. bogus lawsuit

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The justice dept. had no business trying to corner the Microsoft Corp. in an illegal, totally bogus, politically motivated class action lawsuit. Because Bill Gates has more brains than any of his competitors is certainly no reason for his competitors to stage a legal frenzy against him. This lawsuit shows the ignorance (and jealousy) of many democratic politicians and Clinton. Heres the best advice you're going to get from the AMERICAN PEOPLE : Drop the lawsuit, apologize to Bill Gates, pay him back for all expenses and then, GROW UP.

Stephen R. Glaze
 Box 1196, Clearlake Oaks, Ca. 95423

MTC-00008588

From: ROBERT REMINGTON
 To: Microsoft
 ATR,remington@webtv.net@inetgw
 Date: 1/4/02 4:25am
 Subject: USPS' Heidi Game

NBC preempted an Oakland Raiders / NY Jets game years ago during a close contest for the network televised family classic, Heidi. The sports world has never quite forgiven NBC for this gaffe, reminding the football fans of the network's "gatekeeper" decision at the time. Heidi French, Wells Fargo's Orange County based HR manager hired me and was responsible for my work assignments during my career at Wells Fargo.

Several times I attempted to relocate back to the Bay Area or Los Angeles with Wells Fargo, due to the continuing family attacks and corporate hazings / assaults in Irvine. I was constantly denied a transfer, due to political and Norwest Financial / Wells Fargo merger consolidations, and the fact that Wells Fargo wanted all of my family's money and one of their selections as my "mate".

Apparently, the written request for my postal delivery hold at the Aliso Viejo / Laguna Niguel, California Post Office is once again creatively ignored. I have received three pieces of mail today after repeated requests for postal service hold, due to mail tampering. My mail was delivered to my home for two weeks after my written request was presented to the Laguna Niguel Post Office after I discovered mail tampering with my State Of California checks. I time the check delivery through California's automated system that details the date the check was mailed to me.

For one week, my mail was held for pickup at the Aliso Viejo Postal Center (a carrier's processing facility and not a full service post office). After one week, my mail delivery was resumed without my permission, along with other family mail to 62 Trofello in Aliso Viejo, CA.

On Wednesday, January 2, 2002, I contacted a carrier supervisor at the AV Postal Center who found the California check and held it for my pickup later in the day. The supervisor confirmed my request for mail hold yesterday. Today, 01/03/02, I received three pieces of red / pink color coded mail ... the first, a pink envelope from Geico insurance services, the second, an unsolicited Seasons Greetings from an unknown Japanese company named Strawberry Corporation that went public in Japan in October 2001, and an unsolicited red / white colored promotion for Homes And Gardens Magazines courtesy of Spiegel Corporation.

Obviously someone is spending big bucks to pay off government workers and others during the big money struggles of the Microsoft Anti-Trust trial and related royalty issues I have detailed in previous memos. The USPS can hold my mail just like anyone else! Several additional PAC comics yesterday and today detail the conspiracies. The "Crankshaft" comic spins around a fictional Ohio family and a school bus driving "grandfather" character, Crankshaft, a parody on my father. In the late 1960s my father spearheaded a school bus program in suburban Illinois with major opposition from church/school members. Crankshaft yelled at his daughter for having a cold (she was sneezing in the comic) and running around in "socking" feet. The abuse of the English language is a feature of "Crankshaft". Today the blond haired kid was featured in a jazz band with Crankshaft and family in the audience.

"Crankshaft", the grouchy one, complained about the "Tune"! Knowing my father's agenda and drive to place me in another music performance role (which will never occur) these Ohio crazed authors drew a foreplanned comic thinking I would go back to NBC Burbank and the Tonight Show again this week after the New Year's Eve live show. Actually, after the intentional anthrax?/flu/viral/bacterial poisoning on New Year's Day

(I could feel the immediate effects of the bio attack during my workout at the Sporting Club on Tuesday evening) I decided to "set up" the perpetrators once again, to flush out the game for the "kill".

Several times at Tonight Show tapings during December 2001 I was seated near the keyboard artist and jazz guitar bandleader, Kevin Eubanks. I enjoy any seat in NBC studio 3, and I am especially pleased to hear the music up close & personal. This band is first class! I visited three Nike retail stores, two corporate owned showcases, and ran 5 miles with the Beverly Hills NikeTown Running Club on Thursday 01/03/02, finishing my workout at 24 Fitness Sporting Club Irvine. I am still about eight pounds of accumulated fat away from my previous dimensions.

This addition of weight was NOT, I repeat, NOT from overeating ... intentional family food poisoning / university hushed experiments / subversive governmental people using my tuned athletic body as a platform for their Nazi-like human experiments! Just when my weight returns to about 160#, the "ideal weight for me" and the weight I maintained for years in the Bay Area & San Diego, others spike my food with poisons that block digestion & normal waste passage, causing fat deposits. I have overheard and read several features that explain the invasive and totally non consenting experiments as protein / carcinoma related, as my father's and mother's family has a history of cancers.

My intentions are not to secure a performing musical opportunity at the Tonight Show or other venue at this time. As I have stated in a previous memo to the DOJ, I have attended the Tonight Show and others at NBC Burbank for professional, Los Angeles based public relations. I wanted the Hollywood and Burbank media troops, everyday workers like myself, as well as Hollywood's "moguls" and my competitors to see me in person, not as the Family Ties "Alex" in the blue sportcoat, but as a human that was subjected to some of the most sadistic plots, who triumphed over adversity, government subversion, and millions of dollars of negative PR.

I have been pleased to have worked successfully with over four unique security forces in front and inside NBC Burbank, as well as many of the private and governmental security staff at the Crystal Cathedral, Chicago Stadium, and Qualcomm (Jack Murphy) Stadium in San Diego. Folks, we have to have immediate closure on this long overdue royalty issue, it's really in the billions of dollars, and all of the other related issues from Family Ties, Stephen Spielberg's SKG team, Universal, McDonald's Corporation, Jack-In-The-Box, Nissan, Disney / Touchstone Pictures, IBM, Microsoft, and others. The issue can be resolved real easily, and by authorities through government directed wire transfers and seizures of fraudulently acquired assets.

Transfer my CASH to me NOW! LET ME KNOW THAT I HAVE MY ASSETS AND THEIR LOCATIONS. I will decide how to invest these assets with the guidance of professional investment firms. I do not sponsor anyone's investment of my assets without my consent.

THIS IS MY MONEY!

Thank you for your consideration.
Robert Remington

MTC-00008589

From: Ron Garton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 4:32am
Subject: May it Please the Court
Renata—

The settlement outlined is wholly inadequate. It stipulates behavioral remedies going forward, but addresses no punitive damages whatsoever for Microsoft's continuing illegal actions since the 1995 consent decree. Why? In addition, the terminology 'middleware' is used in such a vague manner, as to render the agreement virtually unenforceable. Microsoft's clear violation(s) of the Sherman Anti-trust law are no less significant than the Teapot Dome scandal of the 1800's in U.S. history.

Clearly, there can be no question as to Microsoft's guilt, and the government's desire to 'close the book' on this action; based in part on publicized statements that indicated it was 'in the best interest of the country and the technology sector', is nothing more than partisan politics. Frankly, to use the events of 9/11 and other current events occurring around the world as a substantive 'reason' to end this action makes me ill to my stomach.

I wonder, if the government compiled a list of 'industry standards' bodies that have been formed over the last 20 years, and analyzed Microsoft's commitment to those, what they would find? As a contributing member to several of those organizations, I can speak from experience, Microsoft only contributed to Standards Bodies (that would've produced cheaper, more compatible software that would run on any operating system, regardless of hardware ...) when it saw an opportunity to influence peddle it's proprietary view of software and operating systems. IN ALMOST EVERY CASE WHERE A STANDARDS BODY MOVED TO CREATE A TRULY MULTI-NATIONAL, MULTI-PLATFORM INTEROPERABLE SET OF SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT STANDARDS, EITHER MICROSOFT VOWED TO CREATE THEIR OWN STANDARD OR DETERMINED WAYS IN WHICH THEY COULD USE THEIR "FUD" STRATEGY (Fear, Uncertainty and Doubt) to undermine the effort. In essence, their actions, as noted in the Consent decree of 1995, were in direct violation of the Sherman Anti-trust Law. How then, do we determine as a country, through our 'duly' elected officials, that those activities haven't harmed consumers, sufficient to warrant some form of punitive damages? While the rest of the technology industry was attempting to create the '110V' standard connectivity for software, Microsoft was publicly proclaiming that it ALONE had the power to dictate what standard the rest of the country (and the world) would use for connecting software between computers, operating systems and all manner of digital devices?

Did this fact escape the DOJ in their reasoning process? In my view, the ONLY recourse is to :

1. Break the company into (2) or more distinct operating companies, and require that all Microsoft Office tools source code be auctioned to a top 20 international s/w company, for the express purpose of porting it to alternate operating systems.

2. In addition, all source code for the Internet Explorer Browser needs to go the same route.

3. All Microsoft Operating System interfaces (API's) and source code must be placed in the public domain.

4. Future Operating System enhancements must pass muster with an Industry Consortium, comprised of a cross-section of senior leaders in the IT industry, not just so-called 'Microsoft enemies'

5. Marketing/Sales activities should be monitored by a 'DOJ' oversight committee, similar in concept to the proposed "governance" body.

6. Microsoft should not be allowed to 'buy' or 'invest' in early stage technology companies until a pre-determined 'moratorium' period has expired, based on the execution date of the amended agreement.

The basic principles of these sanctions will yield significant benefits immediately in 'stimulating' innovation in the technology sector, by forcing more competition and providing investors, consumers and early stage startup companies COMPLETE confidence that the technology that they build/buy, will ultimately be compatible with ANY Web Browser and/or operating system. Companies can then be FREE to compete on the basis of WHO they sell to, WHAT clearly distinguishes their product from the competition with the confidence that they won't suffer repercussions from MS.

Has it gone without notice that the rest of the computing world (specifically, Europe and Asia) have similar views of Microsoft's exclusionary practices?

If Mr. Gates wants to run his business in this country, and remain a citizen of this country, perhaps he should consider the protection he receives from our laws ... laws that he has knowingly violated. If he can't manage his company by those laws, then we should gladly hand him his pink slip, and send him, his company and anyone who works for him, on their merry way to whatever country would like their tax dollars. My sense of it is, this country is much bigger than just Microsoft, and aspires to a higher level of ethics and standards, than those practiced by Mr. Gate's staff. We will do just fine as a country and/or an industry with or without Microsoft and their tax dollars and jobs.

I've been following this case, and this company, for many years. I'm a 25 year veteran of the Computer industry, and I think it time that we as a country (and as a Justice Department), finally stood up to Microsoft and deliver the judgment that has been long overdue. A concerned, informed Technology citizen.

MTC-00008590

From: Robin Mockett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To whom it may concern:

I am informed that I can comment on the Microsoft settlement by sending an e-mail to your address.

My comment is that the lesser 'punishments' now being imposed on Microsoft are less unjust than the previously-attempted split-up of the company. However, they are still unjust because Microsoft has done nothing wrong and does not deserve any punishment whatsoever.

I am not a Microsoft employee or even very knowledgeable about computers, beyond being able to send e-mail messages (for which I am grateful to Bill Gates and inventors like him), but if I knew more I could probably offer specific technical reasons why punishing his company will hurt the economy and slow the rate of increase in everyone's living standards.

Instead, I will make a simple moral claim that antitrust laws as such are inherently unjust, as explained by Alan Greenspan in essays in Ayn Rand's book, —Capitalism: The Unknown Ideal—. Antitrust laws in any form constitute a tyrannical element within the government, because (1) they impose punishment on people simply for being productive, and (2) they impose punishment in a manner which cannot be predicted in advance, or which depends on subjective interpretations by judges or government prosecutors. Consequently, the decisions of productive businessmen are controlled by the personal opinions of government agents, rather than objectively written statutes. This makes some of the businessmen produce less because their decisions are blocked, others because they are afraid of unanticipated penalties, and others because they choose to make less effort in such a climate. More importantly, it demeans leaders who deserve gratitude from the rest of us.

Yours sincerely,
Robin Mockett, Ph.D.

MTC-00008591

From: Dexter Anderson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:34am
Subject: Fw: Microsoft Settlement
2002-01-04

I am repeating this message in order to ensure you have it for inclusion in the public record.

Dexter Anderson
From: Dexter Anderson
To: Microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov
Cc: Anderson, Dexter
Sent: 2001-12-12 12:25
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
2001-12-12

Comments on the Microsoft Settlement

1. The action against Microsoft should never have been launched during the last Administration, and the sooner it is wound up, without damage to this quintessentially American company, the better.

2. We sometimes seem to have a death wish. As in the AT&T dismemberment of 1983/1984, we have in Microsoft a company that is admired throughout the world, yet some seem to derive a perverse satisfaction from seeing whether they can smash it up.

3. It is one thing to go after a company on antitrust grounds if it threatens to corner the market on a physical resource such as oil or silver. But intellectual property is infinitely expandable. If Microsoft does not keep investing better intellectual mousetraps, or if the buying public believes it is overcharging, it will quickly lose ground to competitors. The competitive system is self-correcting. There is no need for government to step in. There is need for government not to step in.

4. Microsoft's competitors should fight it in the marketplace, not in the courtroom. It's shameful enough for the CEO of a competing company to come whining to the Department of Justice when he fails to obtain the results he desires in the marketplace; it is downright disgusting to see him crossing the ocean to denounce his countrymen from Microsoft before officials of the European Communities.

5. The bundling charge took first place for absurdity. One may as well tell a car manufacturer not to include tires, or a radio, with his product.

6. The States should have no role in in the Microsoft matter or in similar matters involving companies that are clearly national in character.. The Constitution gives the regulation of interstate commerce to the U.S. Congress. The threat to companies of hostile action (sometimes, as in this case, politically motivated) by regulatory authorities of 50 states unnecessarily raises the cost of goods and services and harms U.S. competitiveness.

Thank you for considering my views.
Dexter Anderson
29 Sherwood Drive
Westerly, Rhode Island 02891-3701
andersondexter@home.com

MTC-00008592

From: Jcarnick@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Dept. of Justice,

The Clinton Administration's Justice Dept. started an attack on Microsoft and continued it largely because Microsoft failed to pay off the Democratic Party. The Democratic Party is 1,000 x more corrupt and dangerous than Microsoft.

Drop the persecution of Bill Gates. Look into former Clinton Administration and current Democratic operatives.

John Carnick

MTC-00008593

From: Neil H. Kennedy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This settlement is too much punishment for Microsoft. This is a world of competition, and because of it we have the software and hardware that we do today.

Perhaps Microsoft has used some less than perfect marketing methods, but what is clear is that they do provide reasonably priced excellent software. To make them split their software applications would hurt the consumer.

I urge you to complete the agreed upon settlement and don't deter Microsoft from continuing to produce the software we all use every day.

MTC-00008595

From: zevy yanovich

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:44am
Subject: Settlement

As a tax payer I believe the attack on Microsoft was instigated by competitors like Sun, Oracle, AOL, and IBM and not by consumers like me. We have enjoyed the benefit of great software products and innovations for our PCs that would have never been possible with multiple operating system standards.

I truly believe the settlement agreed upon the DOJ and Microsoft is a fair one and will let Microsoft to continue to innovate in a way that benefits consumers in the US and worldwide.

MTC-00008596

From: Mark Clifton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wanted to send you my thoughts and comments regarding the Microsoft settlement. I think it is fair and reasonable and should stand as is...it is time to move on and get this economy back on track. Continuing to focus on this case has no value and just creates more uncertainty and unrest. It's time for politics to move aside and let's get this country going again.

MTC-00008597

From: Lee Sherrell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:01 am

To whom this may concern:

Or to whomever may really give a shit about what the little guy thinks.

Over the past year or so that this trial has been going on. I have been periodically watching just what was going on. In some cases, I would have to catch up on certain issues. After reviewing most of the events that have been forced upon the American public throughout the whole trial process. I have analyzed many of the things that have been changing throughout the US and it has put me into a state of fear. Not fear for my life or bodily harm, instead it is a fear of the little guys financial futures. Let's face it! The computer age is here to stay, and in order for the people of this country are to ever move forward in their lives, in a financial capacity, we are no, we must have computer abilities and be to move forward in the world of computing.

Before this thing with OUR government suing Microsoft for being unfair in some of their practices of doing business. The god damned, selfish, greedy, son-a-bitches that were approached by and paid off by the other competitors and some that were not competitors just the heads of billion-dollar corporations that disliked the way that Bill Gates made his fortune. The ones who did not work to make their fortunes, rather inherited them. The elite "Good-OL'-Boys" club. Now I know what I am saying from this point on will be looked at as though I am a nut! All I have to say about that is, PROVE ME WRONG!!

Most intelligent people know of, or have heard of, or personally know of the very thing that I am speaking of. Most the elite "Good-OL'-Boys" club either know or sat down and figured out a plan to demolish the DOT COMS of America. They knew that most of them were on shaky ground with means to their financial stability. Knowing full well that all they had to do was shake the ground under the DOT COMS and they would crumble. Hell I could see that. Several years ago, I had even mentioned to a friend of mine that was in charge of operations within a DOT COM company that his company had better stick a little more of their money into the more stable investments out there or they were going to collapse. I told him that "you can't balance a bowling ball on a stick forever, something has to go.

This is only the first part a very large puzzle. Now you take and put that part of the large puzzle down and no one sees a picture. So, you move on to the other parts of the picture. The part of the picture is a large part, but not the main part. The main part is in a simple question. WHY? Why did the US government's so called "Justice Department" go after a relatively medium size company (In the eyes of the multi-billion dollar companies.) instead of the other larger multi-billion dollar companies out there that are doing exactly what the "Justice Department" is claiming that Microsoft was in the middle of? There are quite a huge number of them out there. Take for instance the oil companies, any one of them will do. Price gouging the consumers, creating a FALSE oil crisis in order to generate overly abundant profits for a product that is technically given to them by the government. The property that is acquired by the oil companies are sold to the companies for a very, very ridiculously low price. (I know for a fact, because I tried, that the government will not sell me or my friends large government-owned tracts of land for the price that the oil companies paid!) One fine note of interest is that most of these purchases and "gifts" of properties (land) were released to the oil companies during Republican Administrations. Stop and think whom was in office when our "so-called" oil shortage happened in the '70's. Look and see that in the 80's all of the land that changed hands and the countries that were developed by the US tax dollars. Check out just what companies did then and do now either control or have controlling interest in most of the oil rich countries. Take a look at just what is happening now with our present admin in charge. There has been a fight for decades to keep the oil companies out of the Alaskan Wilderness. The oil companies had a relatively small parcel of land up there, but during the Regan and Bush (The older Bush) admins the oil companies kept on building their huge damned pipeline.

Now this Bush admin suddenly came up with the statement that it's for a stronger America and said that he does not care what is thought about it, that the agencies that have been fighting legally to keep the oil companies out of the pristine wilderness areas are all wrong. Then had congress quickly pass a bill allowing the oil companies in there, knowing that it will take years to fight it in the courts. By then it will be too late. The oil up there WILL be produced! I guess it's no big surprise, after all he's an oil man from an oil state as well as his dad. It makes you wonder why the huge oil companies are not being looked at very close. Hhmmm I wonder?

Another group of huge multi-billion dollar (in some cases multi-trillion dollar) companies that have not been looked at are the Pharmaceutical companies. They have clearly and absolutely done all of the things that Microsoft is charged with and then some. Stopping research on non-chemical oriented drugs such as plants that they could not control the patents on or keep other companies from developing. Buying off the FDA to keep other smaller Pharmaceutical companies from developing drugs that would and did work but could not get the FDA to pass the drugs for consumer use until the larger companies could buy off the smaller companies and control the patent. They would then take those newly patented drugs and shelf them until exorbitant profits could be pulled out of the products.

They have developed drugs that are bad for the consumers and promoted them as safe and developing other drugs to compensate for the damage the other drugs had created, when the whole time they had shelved or thrown out drugs that were more effective and safer for the consumer but were more costly to make or the products used to make the drugs can not be controlled by the Pharmaceutical companies. A very good example of this is in the cancer medicines. One in particular, the medicine used in Chemotherapy, RAT POISON! There is several medicines outside the US which have been developed and has been tested and has been working on thousands of patients for years with tremendous results. In most of the cases the results are far, far better. These medicines will not be let into the US to help save the American consumers from the other medicines out there because the Pharmaceutically controlled FDA will not let them pass the "so called" stringent testing the FDA requires and thus keeping them out of the country. If that can not be seen as restricting trade and stifling competition and controlling the marketplace then the English language had better get a new dictionary started, 'cause we are going to have to learn a brand new language.

I have not even been able to hit the Iceberg let alone see what's underneath it! This trumped up, half-baked, jerk-off charges that out fucking government representatives have thrown out to the American public and have expelled millions of dollars of our hard earned tax dollars, given to a bunch of has-been over-the-hill pretend lawyers whom if you were to ask them directly if they even had a mild clue of just what the American public really wanted or needed, you know the answer would be "Duh!"

They need to take a long, hard look at the other companies out there that are doing the complaining against Microsoft. Oh my god what do you think they would find! Most of those companies are really into the bad stuff that they are accusing Microsoft of. But that will never happen, as we all know. IBM is one of the accusers. If the truth could ever be known they are just trying to get back at Gates for making them look like a bunch of dopes. Gates is not considered one of the "Good Ol' Boys", IBM is.

The government needs to stop all of the bullshit they are doing to Microsoft. Just finish with the "hand-slap" and move onto the other companies out there that are REALLY working against the American consumer, that are REALLY grossly committing consumer trade issues, that are REALLY and truly not doing the American consumer and the country as a whole. If you were to put all of the charges that are brought up against Microsoft and multiply them by fifty that figure would only be a portion of the charges that could be brought against the other companies that I have previously spoke of.

If the government is going to really work for the American consumers then they need to drop the crap with Microsoft and look at those other companies. They would be doing such an extreme service for American that it would take decades after it was all over to actually figure out just what was done and find out just how great of a country the US had become. Well I think that it will turn out to be just a pipe dream. The people in charge of this whole mess are Republicans and when they listen they can not heard words, they only hear the shuffling sound that money makes. The thought of actual justice will never come about. With everyone that is in the majority in our government has a new phrase written above the scratched out version that was on the United States Constitution. It now read, "By the people for the people, as long as they are rich ... etc. etc."

Written by

MTC-00008598

From: Wetherhold, Kent W.
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 7:07am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This fraudulent antitrust lawsuit against Microsoft must come to a close immediately. This is nothing more than a leftover Clinton administration attack upon one of America's greatest entrepreneurs. Please do what is right and put an end this atrocity.

Sincerely,

Kent Wetherhold +

MTC-00008599

From: Randy Neal
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I want this settled and put behind us. Microsoft is a good company and what you have done has hurt our country's economy!

I agree that a monopoly is bad but you haven't proven where any consumer has been hurt. I think this whole action was dictated by companies who can't compete on their own product's merit.

Thanks,

Randy Neal

MTC-00008600

From: LuigiShort@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:17am
Subject: Microsoft Lawsuit

Dept. of Justice:

Dear Sirs:

I would like to voice my opinion on the current ongoing case against Microsoft. It seems that the case goes on and on, driven by companies and their lobbyists that are more interested in deriving an income from the suit rather than buckling down, working hard and becoming a true competitor. Also some States see a ruling against Microsoft as a cash cow and help keep the case ongoing to try and reap benefits for themselves with no concern for the effect it has on both the U.S. economy and the State of Washington. The people who keep this case going never seem to bring up all the good that Microsoft, Gates and many employees do for education and charitable needs in this country plus the tax revenues derived for the U.S. and Washington.

WOULD YOU PLEASE BRING THIS TO AN END!!!!

THANKYOU.

Al Short
Bainbridge Is. WA

MTC-00008601

From: Ralph C. Whaley
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:44am
Subject: US vs. Microsoft

The right to property is an inalienable right. Microsoft Corporation including it's owners, the shareholders, have the absolute right to the property created in the context of the company. The right to property includes the absolute right to determine the conditions of sale and use of that property. Property rights include setting any price for any product at any time to any prospective buyer with any conditions of use of the product the seller sets. The prospective buyer is free to accept or reject the terms of sale and suffers no violations of his own rights when confronted with the seller's conditions.

The anti-trust laws impose rules of use and sale of property under threat of government force. The government's responsibility is the protection of rights not their violation. These laws are violations of property rights and should be repealed.

Ralph C. Whaley MD
460 S. 5th St.
Barron, WI 54812-1509
Phone: 715-537-3614

MTC-00008602

From: Tom.DaSilva@gidi.it@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:49am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Gentlemen,

For inclusion in the public record: Microsoft has gained its position through free trade but, the competition has resorted to government intervention. All that the government does it does by force. All the government has it has taken by force. "The simpering rotter who whines that he sees no difference between the power of the dollar and the power of the whip ought to learn the difference on his hide"—Ayn Rand. Antitrust creates not a level playing field but a crime scene. The department of Justice owes Microsoft a conspicuous apology post haste.

Respectfully,
Thomas da Silva

MTC-00008603

From: hglee@hglee.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:53am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am of the opinion that the so-called "trial" of Microsoft is an abomination in a country that represents itself to be founded on the principles of individual rights. Microsoft has done more to advance the personal computer age than any other ten companies combined. The premise that Microsoft achieved these great heights through "coercion" is farcical. Take a look around the market today, and you will find that the majority of products are designed for the Microsoft platform because the company is successful, not because they were compelled to at the point of a gun—only the imperial federal government possesses that particular methodology.

If you are truly concerned with public comment and the "public interest," then as a member of the public I employ you to leave well enough alone. There is no calculating the harm that you have already done this company (and how much this has "cost the American consumer"). Back off now, and let Microsoft's productive genius go unmolested unless and until it commits a bona fide crime of some sort.

Please keep in mind that the only legitimate function for a government is to protect its citizens from force or fraud; Microsoft has committed neither. If you want to truly pursue a prosecution that will be a "victory for consumers everywhere," then close this matter and let Microsoft continue to improve the lives of countless individuals—programmers, stockholders, innovators, businessmen, and especially consumers.

If the DoJ is truly interested in "settling" this case properly, I submit that the only proper way to do that is to quit the prosecution, to apologize profusely and publicly, and to pay restitution for the unnecessary for waste of this company's time over the last two years. Only then can the DoJ begin to earn the title of "Department of Justice."

H.G. Lee,
Atlanta, GA

MTC-00008604

From: Jeffrey C. Graber
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

DOJ: I feel very strongly that the DOJ should settle the Microsoft case as it's currently proposes. It is fair for both sides.

Jeff Graber

MTC-00008605

From: JESSIE AURON
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:06am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I believe that the settlement is fair to all parties concerned and that the dragging out of this case must be considered unfair to the majority of parties concerned. Microsoft has acted in an honorable manner. Please act quickly to end this.

What is a weed? A plant whose virtues have not yet been discovered.

MTC-00008606

From: Drlik, Scott
To: 'Microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 8:11am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to implement the settlement reached in the Microsoft case. Further litigation would be counterproductive. Already, millions of dollars have been spent to reach a decision that has been deemed acceptable by millions of individuals.

As a user of the technology being judged, I was readily able to choose between providers. In fact, I am of the opinion that the lawsuit lacked initial merit. Those millions of dollars spent on this case could very well have been allocated to more needy causes; e.g., education, homelessness, poverty.

Respectfully submitted,
Francis Scott Drlik

MTC-00008607

From: Andrew Sisolak
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/3/02 2:44pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

IT IS EXTREMELY IMPORTANT THAT ALL OF THE LITIGATION AGAINST MICROSOFT RE MONOPOLY/UNFAIR TRADE ISSUES BE TERMINATED IMMEDIATELY. THE ENTIRE PURSUIT OF MICROSOFT WAS A MASSIVE WASTE OF TAXPAYER MONEY, BENEFITTING ONLY ITS COMPETITORS AND THOSE INDIVIDUALS TRYING TO MAKE A NAME FOR THEMSELVES. THE MOTIVES OF ANYONE WHO WANTS TO CONTINUE THIS ABUSE OF THE COURT SYSTEM IS BEYOND SUSPECT.

I HOPE THAT THE VOTING PUBLIC REMEMBERS THOSE INDIVIDUALS ADVOCATING THIS LITIGATION AND KEEPS THEM FROM ANY ELECTED OFFICE.

MTC-00008608

From: Rollin45@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:16am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a long time PC user, and resident of Utah (one of the states whining about the settlement) I would just like to say that Novell at one time dominated the networking/desktop environment. The main reason they lost this position is their lack of focus and concentration , not some alleged "unfair" tactics on the part of Microsoft.

The local politicians and power structure see this trial as a way to show their "dedication" in defending their constituents. The fact that the local "bull got gored" does not constitute unfair business practice. If Novell had paid attention to the market place, and made their core product better it would still be number one in terms of market share. Microsoft is a relentless competitor, and one must pay attention to the game if one wishes to win.

best regards
steve mackelprang west jordan, utah

MTC-00008609

From: Steven Henderson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:22am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think that the gov't (Justice Department) should leave Microsoft alone. The employees of Microsoft should be free to innovate and sell their innovations on the free market. It is a basic requirement of man that he needs to be free. I don't see how the gov't should treat the individuals that make up Microsoft any different than anybody else. The Justice Department should try cracking down on computer piracy. That is the gov't should be going after the criminals those that initiate the use of physical force in it's different forms. The bottom line is that Microsoft has a right to earn as big of a profit as it can. Microsoft should be set free.

Steven Henderson
Van Buren, Michigan

MTC-00008610

From: Gary Olson
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 8:30am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I personally feel the Microsoft settlement is fair. I think the States that are not agreeing to it are looking for some easy money and are not really interested in fair competition. I think that other companies could and will invent software that is better than Microsoft's and when they do there will be a market for it. People will use the software that is best for their home or business situation.

Thank You.
Gary Olson
S78 W26750 Hillview Drive
Mukwonago, WI 53149

MTC-00008611

From: Seven
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:51am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please keep me informed. I am very concerned about the health of the software industry should an inappropriate settlement with Microsoft be reached.

Morley Chalmers
for the 7 Office team
Seven@7Office.com
416/926-9296

MTC-00008612

From: David E Provencher
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:09am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen:

It is my opinion that the settlement that was agreed upon should be accepted, and this case closed. This has gone on long enough.....

David E Provencher

MTC-00008613

From: PABrittain@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:11am
Subject: Re: Attorney General John Ashcroft Letter

To whom it may concern,

You may forward the letter to Microsoft that has my name on it. I agree strongly with your letter.

Pat Brittain

MTC-00008614

From: N. Kydonieus
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think that this is another instance of the US government penalizing the best in men to prop up the lesser men that cannot compete effectively. To do this the US government has to initiate force which is a destructive activity. The American and the global economy has been paying for this travesty of injustice. In order to leave the caves of barbarism and enter civilized existence, we have to ban the initiation of force, not institutionalize it.

MTC-00008615

From: Ron Unangst
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have been a user of Microsoft products for years and have always been satisfied with their products. I urge you to settle this and let the this country get on with the business at hand. Overall I am very upset with the governments handling of the Microsoft case in the first place. Look around, what about the merger with Warner and AOL? Microsoft and Intel have done more to take this country forward with the PC than anyone. Enough is enough. Settle and move onward. The only ones complaining now are MS competitors.....

Tunney Act
Roland Z. Unangst

MTC-00008616

From: Macksplace@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:37am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen:

It appears to us that the Justice Department is coming very near to destroying one of our greatest American companies. Microsoft should be left entirely free to invent and innovate to the limits of their capabilities. They should not be forced to share their proprietary information with their competitors. Our recession started with the opening of the "Let's get Microsoft." governmental mind set and action. In athletics we do not force the lead runner or team to slow down or score less for their competitor's benefit!

For your information, we own Microsoft, Sun Microsystems, Dell, Oracle, Texas Instruments, AOL and Gateway stock. We urge you to discontinue and put an end to this lawsuit in a timely fashion for the sake not only of most American consumers, but for the economic welfare of our country as well.

Sincerely,
Alexander M. Thomson and Florence W. Thomson (Mrs. Alexander M. Thomson)

MTC-00008617

From: Creech, Robert
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 9:46am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

For years now various envious business leaders have been trying to convince government that Microsoft and Bill Gates are deamons. I know that Scott McNealy and Larry Ellison and Steve Case are more charismatic and come across as nice guys but, in my opinion, they are simply vary hard nosed and egotistical business men. The reason that Microsoft has cornered the market on operating systems has to do with great marketing more than it does nasty business practices. Everyone knows that Apple had a better system so why didn't they prevail? I'll tell you why—lousy marketing. The same exact thing happened when the VHS standard beat out the Beta standard for VCR's. Beta was much better but they lost out. And the other key reason that Microsoft has done so well is because they established sorely needed STANDARDS.

Any company that establishes needed standards will have an advantage. Even though IBM had a very competitive operating system, nobody was interested. Why? Partly because IBM was out of style at that time. But also because the last thing we need in business is another complicated piece of software to integrate—who needs it?

How can you hammer away at Microsoft when any number of other companies enjoy a huge market share in their product line? Please, let's move on to things that are really important to people. I would love to see the AG in Massachusetts spend his efforts making sure that the executives at Polaroid do not squander my pension fund—something that thousands of us desperately need to stay healthy. This AG is really using his office to run for Governor—just like the previous AG did. Microsoft has done the country and the world a huge service and should not be raked over the coals for being better at the software business and their rivals.

Bob Creech
Applications Systems Manager
TAC Worldwide Companies
(617) 969-3100 x294
rcreech@1tac.com

MTC-00008618

From: EVERGPH@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:43am
Subject: microsoft

I don't think further litigation is necessary. I didn't feel the government should have gotten involved in this situation to begin with. The only ones benefiting from all this litigation are the attorneys as usual.

j roth

MTC-00008619

From: Paula Rabel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:46am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please just settle this case. We have never agreed with it to begin with and would like the litigation to be settled now.

Sincerely,
Bob & Paula Rabel

MTC-00008620

From: jereeves
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:48am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We believe Microsoft's benefits to consumers far outweigh any costs. We urge you to please settle this case as soon as possible.

Jerry & Corinne Reeves

12277 Arrow Point Drive NE
Bainbridge Island WA 98110
jereeves@msn.com

MTC-00008621

From: geekfest
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:53am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's unbelievable that after Microsoft has been found guilty in two courts the Department of Justice would accept a settlement agreement that was earlier presented and rejected. This case sets a terrible precedent. Microsoft has been convicted and the Department of Justice has decided to let Microsoft determine its own punishment. I'm not aware of any other case in which the guilty party was permitted to write its own settlement agreement.

This approach to resolution generates more problems than it solves. Where is the incentive to obey the law? Microsoft gets to keep its illegally acquired gains. Its competitor's position in the market has been destroyed. It has been found guilty in two courts and will now walk away in better business position than it was before it broke the law. Based on this pattern will Microsoft choose to break the law in the future? Will other corporations do the same? The precedent established by this settlement agreement will not only reward Microsoft for deciding to break the law, it will penalize those companies that choose to obey it, and encourage other companies faced with similar competitive problems to ignore the law in the formulation of their solutions. The consumer will be harmed in the future simply because the threat of future litigation by the government will be meaningless. Microsoft has already been through litigation, been found guilty, and has been allowed to keep everything they acquired by violating the law.

Without punitive damages that make violation of the law an ineffective approach to solving business competitive problems corporations will use illegal methods. The laws intended to protect the market and consumers will get pushed aside by illegally maintained monopolies. Any settlement at the least must have punitive monetary damages that remove any monetary gain achieved by choosing to violate the law. In addition any settlement of a corporation convicted of illegally maintaining its monopoly must include either structural changes in the corporation that prohibit future violations, or a consent agreement that has significant predetermined fines and penalties that can be applied by government regulators (or in this case the oversight committee). The fines and penalties must be large enough to effectively stop illegal behavior before the behavior can damage the marketplace and consumers and they must be applied quickly enough to stop damage to the marketplace and consumers. If Microsoft feels the committee assessment is inappropriate let it go to court to get its money back. Since Microsoft is a repeat offender (they violated their original consent agreement and have been convicted of illegally maintaining their monopoly) it's not unreasonable to defend against the possibility that they may continue to exhibit illegal behavior in the future.

Since any agreement will have different possible interpretations the only effective agreement will be one in which the oversight committee has enforcement powers. It will force Microsoft to either argue their interpretation of the agreement with the committee chosen to represent the public interest or return to court for a formal determination. The proposed consent agreement does nothing to discourage illegal behavior by Microsoft and sets a precedent that will harm consumers and the market in the future. I urge the court to reject this proposed settlement as inadequate protection for consumers and force a more punitive settlement or conclusion to this case that will send a clear message that laws that prevent the illegal maintenance of a monopoly will be strictly enforced. If the court fails to send this message then the laws may as well be repealed for all the good they will do.

Thank you for reviewing this comment.

Sincerely,
John K. Stevens
P.O. Box 634
Bath, OH
(330) 701-6458

MTC-00008622

From: ABCOB7@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:00am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This is to express my views on the subject settlement.

Go with the Court of Appeals ruling. This case should not be dragged out any longer.

Arthur W. Jacob
7860 Palmer Rd.
Reynoldsburg, Ohio 43068

MTC-00008624

From: Leslie Ishimi
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:03am
Subject: Thanks for asking.

Haven't been following the settlement closely. But Thanks for asking. Haven't been following the settlement closely. But generally I think Bill, Microsoft, and the American public got screwed by somebody who doesn't get the big picture. What you've done has changed the world, daily, for the better, for the last how-many years. Somebody ought to be sucking your toe cheese and saying thank you minute-by-minute. Sorry for the setbacks. They are inevitable when you do something well. And with even a small understanding of reality I have come to accept that even if you're able to clear one don't-get-it person out of the way, there's always another right behind. So tread undaunted as best you can—you are STILL performing an incredibly valuable service to the planet as you chart an extremely difficult journey for all of us. The way we earn a living will continue to change which affects the global economy which, unfortunately, still runs the world. I'm sure as the world shakes out the wrinkles we will all face more circumstances we don't know what to do with at first, but we made it before and we'll just keep working our way through the development of our minds and instincts.

Oh, and remember the words on Henry Miller's tombstone: I outlasted the bastards! lol

MTC-00008625

From: Frank and Miriam Brown
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:03am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen:

I feel it is in the public interest, considering the aftermath of September 11th, to reach a speedy conclusion to the Microsoft case. Prolonged litigation would only benefit the lawyers, a few wealthy competitors and special interest groups, and serve to stifle innovation.

Sincerely,
Frank J. Brown

MTC-00008626

From: Presswalla@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is my strong view that the current settlement be accepted so that the industry can go forward without being ensnared further in litigation.

Hoshang Presswalla, P.E., S.E.
President
P.E., Inc.

MTC-00008627

From: batson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:13am
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust 'Comment'
Greetings:
What is the closing date to file a COMMENT?
Regarde,
Marguarite
CC:batson@ris.net@inetgw

MTC-00008628

From: Mho8@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:11am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir:
Please settle this matter soon so the economy can move forward.
Michael Ho
mho8@aol.com

MTC-00008629

From: Frank and Miriam Brown
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:
I feel that settlement of the Microsoft case is in the public interest. Prolonging this litigation, particularly in the midst of uncertain economic times, would benefit only lawyers and a few wealthy competitors, and serve to stifle innovation. This case has dragged out long enough.

Yours truly,
Miriam E. Brown

MTC-00008630

From: Cindy(038)Keith Hansen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:15am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I am writing to express my support of the proposed Microsoft settlement. I think the case never should have been brought in the first place, and in has gone on for too long. Microsoft has made many concessions in this proposed settlement that I believe are very fair and address the concerns brought during the court battle.

Please don't let Microsoft's competitors continue to use the U.S. government in their battle to destroy Microsoft.

Thanks for your attention.
 Cynthia A. Hansen
 P.O. Box 146
 Snohomish, WA 98291
 CC:keithcindy

MTC-00008632

From: Mike Ward
 To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/4/02 10:20am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I represent a computer technology training company, and it is our business to remain on the leading edge of information technology (IT) to provide necessary IT education to America's corporations. Part of my job is to stay abreast of the rapid changes that take place in the IT industry every day, so that we can be assured we're offering instruction in the latest and most widely-used software packages.

By any measure, Microsoft is a leader in the software industry. But from my experience with Microsoft as a company, they earn that leadership position every day as fierce competitors and extremely good innovators that constantly seek out the needs and feedback of their customers. Their research and development budget is nearly $8 billion per year, and I believe, second to none. That investment alone shows their commitment to technical innovations that benefit us all.

As I mentioned, I come across industry information on a daily basis that confirms that competition is alive and well for Microsoft products. Two obvious examples are the proliferation of open-source Linux and Sun's consideration to freely distribute their StarOffice suite. And yet, consumers continue to pay for Microsoft's products because they are superior at meeting the needs of the market majority.

Please put an end to the litigation, and let the software industry seek its own level of healthy competition.

Mike Ward
 VP, Technology Services
 ONLINE CONSULTING, INC.—
 LEADING EDUCATION TO IT SKILLS
 WILMINGTON & PHILADELPHIA
 Phone: (302) 658-3018, ext.134
 Web : <<http://www.onlc.com/>> <http://www.onlc.com>
 Email : <<mailto:mike@onlc.com>> mike@onlc.com

MTC-00008633

From: James Ashberry
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 10:21am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft settlement does nothing except expand Microsoft's monopoly into the education market where Apple and others still have significant claim. By allowing Microsoft to infiltrate these markets through donations, whilst seeming on the surface to be a good will gesture, is nothing but a mass infestation of Windows based machines into the education sector.

In addition, the figure Microsoft have claimed it will spend will be greatly smaller, as software's retail value is far higher than the actual financial impact it will have on Microsoft. Microsoft should be made to donate the cash to the education agencies within the United States, and the cash should be used at the discretion of the schools and areas involved. This way schools will benefit, have freedom of choice, and Microsoft is made to pay. Allowing Microsoft's proposed settlement to go through is not only folly, but will make a mockery of the US and the US justice system.

James Ashberry
 Internet Developer United Kingdom
 jdashberry@mac.com

MTC-00008634

From: jfeege@valdeseweavers.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 10:11am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 To: Dept. of Justice

We would like to express our viewpoint on the Microsoft case. We believe that the settlement reached with the Federal Government and the nine states was a reasonable settlement and that it is not in the best interest of the United States economy to prolong the litigation. The settlement reached is in the best interest of all concerned and should be imposed on the remaining states that did not accept the settlement. In short—lets put an end to the endless and counterproductive litigation and allow the free enterprise market to function.

Sincerely,
 Joe Feege
 154 S. Center St.
 Hickory, NC 28602

MTC-00008635

From: JACK ROWE
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 10:19am
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

I believe that the suit against Microsoft was harmful to the US economy in far greater proportion to any benefit to the public (as opposed to Microsoft's competitors) that was realized. That's not even considering the taxpayer funds spent. It's time to end it and get on to other things. Get the settlement completed now, and see that all parties, and potential parties are included.

Dr. Jack D. Rowe

MTC-00008636

From: GDPESQ@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 10:27am
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

The difficulties associated with young or nascent but exploding businesses, particularly in the field of communications where there continues an ever changing, expanding marketplace of interrelated products and services such that no "snapshot" of a "market" can sustain the test of short duration, cannot be over-estimated. And attempting to put a noose of control around a growth that will not be contained, even in a constructive way, may be more of a restraint of trade than a protection of the consumer, even competition. We need to enable the establishment of a stable market, before we seek so drastically to control its abuse, something only the marketplace can do, assisted by the normal policing for fraud and the like. For, if we don't, we will only short-circuit the progress in progress as evidenced by the growing pains brought on by new discovery and development. Desk-top operating platforms have been outgrown by the introduction and proliferation of wireless and digital technologies which now enable a portion of the desktop to be carried with an individual, no matter what his or her interest is, thereby making the market for desk-tops something hardly exclusive, which says a great deal about operating systems, the only apparent monopoly Microsoft had, and certainly, by developments since, no longer has. Look at what happened to Compact in view of the Dell approach. Given the path of technology, if its progress is not squeezed by regulatory cut off, the Microsoft advantage will be lost if it does not continue to address innovation and improvement of which its competitors are quick to take advantage. Any solution harming Microsoft's ability to provide better products and services to the communicative consumer, even at the expense of the competition, is no foul so long as the market remains as diverse as it is with the players as plentiful as they are at numerous levels which prevents the monopoly of only a segment, if indeed even that can be defined right now.

Be careful that you don't short-circuit our prosperity in your endeavor to protect a "competition" which may have already succumbed to technological innovation. If the settlement can be read to agree with the foregoing, we think it a good agreement.

A victim of the abuse of competition

MTC-00008638

From: Dwayne Jennings
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/4/02 10:36am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 To Whom it May Concern:

My perception is that the settlement between the United States Department of Justice and nine states is in the public interest. The settlement seems reasonable and fair to all parties. More litigation to satisfy some of Microsoft's wealthy competitors is not in the public interest.

Sincerely,
 Dwayne Jennings
 5105 Briarwood Cove
 Milan, TN 38358

MTC-00008639

From: GRADY Tim
 To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/4/02 10:33am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern,
 After reading on the proposed legal settlement with Microsoft, I believe the proposed settlement fails to achieve the necessary goals of a proper remedy: halting the illegal conduct, promoting competition in this industry, and depriving Microsoft of its illegal gains.

Microsoft was proven to have broken the law, which makes them criminals. They should be treated as such. My career is in information technology and I have witnessed first hand what damage a company like Microsoft, allowed to perform business as it had, can do to stifle innovation and creativity that benefit us all.

I would like to suggest creating remedies that will be clear, lasting and permanent. Microsoft should not be given wormholes to get past any actions taken against them and I don't believe that Microsoft giving away billions of dollars in software to underprivileged schools is a good idea as that reinforces some of it's tactics that are practiced today.

Respectfully,
Timothy M. Grady

MTC-00008640

From: Rons
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:43am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Your Honor,
If Ma Bell was still the only phone company, would we have phone innovations like caller ID or cellular and pay only 5 cents a minute? If Microsoft was just another software company, think what innovations in software we might be using today.

Microsoft does not innovate they dictate. Microsoft is a tyrannical monopoly that runs roughshod over the computer industry. Microsoft has shown contempt towards potential competitors and disregard for the rulings of the US Department of Justice.

Microsoft needs a timeout until they learn to play well with others.

Ron Schultz ? President Space Port User Group
408 Sundown Ave.
Alamogordo, NM 88310

MTC-00008641

From: Harvey J Chiat
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please make every effort to settle the Microsoft case per the comprehensive agreement reached between Microsoft and federal government. It is in the best interest of the internet users that the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling should stand and the case should be closed. I am in complete disagreement with the stand taken by the Minnesota Attorney General and the Attorneys General of the eight other states that oppose the settlement reached.

Harvey Chiat
3812 Drew Ave S
Minneapolis MN 55410
h.chiat@juno.com

MTC-00008642

From: ROBERT FELSBURG
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:02am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Let's settle with micosoft and stop wasting time.

MTC-00008643

From: Wayne Brady
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:05am
Subject: I feel like microsoft has more than paid the price . I wish the USA would settle it !

I feel like microsoft has more than paid the price . I wish the USA would settle it !

MTC-00008644

From: Jay Davis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:07am
Subject: Lawsuit

I am a Professional Engineer and I use the full slate of Microsoft products at work and at home. I enjoy using their products and I used Internet Explorer. I like the ability to use products that work well together. I have been using PC's since 1984 and know how "lock ups" cause problems by conflicts. I have never had problems with Microsoft products, just other applications that typically caused the conflicts.

I do not believe in the US government suing Microsoft. The problems with our stock market began with the announcement of the first suit. I would prefer that the states and the government drop the lawsuits.

The average person in the lawsuit gets nothing back, the attorneys get all the money. Please drop the action against Microsoft.

Jay Davis
210 E. Weber Circle
Lake Charles, LA 70611
hkhunter@msn.com

MTC-00008645

From: Jereza
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to register my comments in favor of the proposed settlement. I have read through terms of the settlement and feel it is fair resolution of the dispute, and provides sufficient ongoing monitoring of Microsoft practices in the future. I realize that there are competitive interests to whom no settlement would ever be satisfactory, as long Microsoft continues to be in business at all, and we must take this into account when listening to these opposition voices. I ask that the settlement be accepted, because it is in the best public interest to do so.

Thank you,
Sincerely,
Julie Kirk

MTC-00008646

From: David Hicks
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:10am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The government's case against Microsoft, well-intentioned as it may have been, has been hurting the American economy for far too long. The issues the case intended to address are already moot. (Laws intended to prevent excesses a century or more ago are not working in the current economic environment.)

While Microsoft may have gone too far in trying to protect its interests, the market itself is self-correcting. It is also too self-interested to allow Mr. Gates and company to impose his will on millions of users who may or may not choose to use Microsoft's products.

The only way Microsoft can stay ahead in this highly competitive environment is by developing excellent products. At this point the government is impeding Microsoft in this effort by draining so much of Microsoft's resources to fighting the legal battle. In this case, if the government would just allow the market to function, everybody would benefit.

Sincerely,
David Hicks

MTC-00008647

From: Glenda Hill
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:19am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs and Madams:

I feel as little as possible damage should be done to Microsoft. I work at a software company and we program for Windows. Our developers are able to product top quality software because they are working in this one venue rather than for multiple operating systems. We need fewer tools for development and are able to offer great affordability because of our ability to focus on Windows.

Microsoft has been portrayed as the "bad guy" when they simply were more effective than their competitors in a free market system. I can't begin to estimate the money that has been saved by the American consumer as a result of Microsoft's success.

Please do not punish this remarkable company and it's shareholders any more than has already been done.

Their competitors hope only to accomplish using the courts what they could not in the free market.

Thank you for your consideration.
Glenda K. Hill
Greeley, CO

MTC-00008648

From: Deanna Wells
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wish to pass along my comments on the proposed settlement with Microsoft Inc. I have worked with one computer system or another for the past 20+ years and have found Microsoft to be user friendly and first class in product quality. To continue legal action beyond the current settlement proposal is an abuse of the judicial system by parties wishing to inflict major damage to a capital enterprise. History has shown the damage inflicted to IBM seriously curtailed their ability to bring new and innovative products to the marketplace during the years of litigation by the government. IBM too was a first class and quality product prior to and after the long term litigation by DOJ. I realize the circumstances are different, and today is not the same business environment as the 60s and 70s. But once a decision is rendered and settlement fair and equitable, resolution in a speedy and decisive manner is best for everyone involved.

Let's finish the job and go one with other business. Beating a dead horse wastes tax payers money and abuses our judicial system. MS was caught wrongdoing. Come to a settlement that can be found agreeable for all parties and let life continue on.

MTC-00008649

From: R J Burns
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:32am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would hope that this is the end to this antitrust suit for all parties concerned. I feel that a lot of time and a lot of the taxpayers money has been spent unwisely supporting this antitrust suit to begin with. I also feel that the Clinton Administration brought this suit only to repay favors to other corporations since their products didn't measure up to what we the public want, so this was their way of trying slow Microsoft Corporation so they could regain some market share.

I also feel the Clinton Administration has hurt not only Microsoft Corporation but the public at large for the tax revenues lost just to bring this suit, and anyone that has a 401k account has been affected.

In closing I would like to comment on the nine states in this suit. I don't see that they should be even considered in this antisuit.

Sincerely yours
Robert Burns

MTC-00008650

From: Eldon Erickson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:33am
Subject: court settlement

Microsoft has kept its products at a reasonable price from the very beginning. Their products have been very useful to the home user. As usual the court system drags things out endlessly. Leave them alone to do their thing.

Eldon Erickson
650 SW Lookout Drive
Corvallis, OR 97333

MTC-00008651

From: Duncan D McGregor
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It seems to me that this case has been settled in court. Microsoft has been penalized and that should be enough. This company has made the use of computers available to almost anyone for a very reasonable software cost. I strongly recommend that this case be settled on the basis of the courts findings.

Duncan D. McGregor
313 Curtis Road
Chesterfield, SC 29709

MTC-00008652

From: Rjdar12@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:43am
Subject: Continued law suits

Lets continue with the free enterprise system in our USA. Finish up with this agreed on settlement with Microsoft.

Ralph Darnell, 1013 Sudan Dr.,
Corpus Cristi, TX.

MTC-00008653

From: charles stengel
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 11:43am
Subject: microsoft settlement
Isn't it about time you settle with microsoft on the basis established by the courts. lawyers keep coming up with new ways to make a buck for themselves.
C.A. Stengel.

MTC-00008654

From: messmedia@loop.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:51am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft should be left alone. Microsoft has not forced anyone to do anything. Microsoft offers a product. One may buy it or not buy it. If not, other computers (Apple, for example) and operating systems (OSX and Linux, among others) are available. Even if one buys Microsoft, one can install browsers other than IE, such as Opera, iCab, and Mozilla.

There is no problem from Microsoft. The problem is envy. Those who would deny Microsoft its success, should examine their own premises.

The principle is: Are force, threats of force, or fraud being used by Microsoft? These are the only means available to violate our rights against our wills. I see no evidence of tort or crime.
Get over it.

MTC-00008655

From: SMOJEV@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ Officials:
Please settle the lawsuit as negotiated with Microsoft. We, the people, are tired of all the litigation that goes on in this country. The DOJ and the Attorneys General in the various states should set an example — and not a "litigious" example. Enough all ready, you made a point and now lets get on with what makes this country great = free enterprise! We need to move more quickly into the tech age and continuous litigation against or within the tech industry is counter productive to a strong, vibrant economy.

Yours truly, John E. Vallance
PO Box 1100
Santa Monica, CA 90406-1100

MTC-00008656

From: Jim Crumley
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:54am
Subject: M.S. SUIT

The DOJ suit against Microsoft triggered a multi-trillion dollar meltdown of our economy. Doing far more damage than bin Laden. DROP THIS SUIT NOW AND HELP RESTORE AMERICA
Jim Crumley
610-558-5811

MTC-00008657

From: CLAASSEN@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:57am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I understand that the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. I believe that the settlement is reasonable and fair to all parties involved.

Ben Claassen
SCGI
504 486-2317

MTC-00008658

From: RLifsey357
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:59am
Subject: Lawsuit

Dear DOJ:
This lawsuit was ludicrous from the start, essentially a money grab by Microsoft want-to-be companies, and trial attorneys. I have experienced and can never foresee any hardship caused by Microsoft by being a pioneer in the technology field. Hence, the adage, "No good deed in this country goes unpunished".

I furthermore consider the settlement under consideration more than generous from the accused parties.

Thank you for consideration.
Sincerely,
Richard Lifsey
Metairie, LA

MTC-00008659

From: Les Troy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:03pm
Subject: settlement

The "settlement" is unfair to Microsoft, but I am a practical man and I don't think Microsoft is likely to get a fair deal. Any further litigation can only hurt the consumer, the economy, our free enterprise system and thousands of microsoft shareholders. The only ones who can gain are the billionaire executives of companies who don't want to compete in the marketplace on the basis of merit and service to the consumer.

MTC-00008660

From: james.good
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it may concern:
I was asked to voice my opinion of this fool hardy law suit of Microsoft. I think my first sentence tells you. Companies should be allowed to compete in the market place, and not be tied by zealous lawyers and government officials who have no business interfering. The main cause of this suit to my understanding was the bundling of Microsoft Internet Explorer. Well, I have 2 systems with Windows 95 and 98, and both have Explorer on them. I loaded Netscape on both because I like it's operations better. So, where did Microsoft force me to purchase and use their product over Netscape? To me, both were free and in one system part of my package when purchased.

I think that the settlement should be finished, Microsoft should be left to provide the products and services they are known for and the lawyers and government should remain out of the business loop unless true illegal business practices are used.

Regards,
Jim Good
Colchester, CT
Microsoft Share Holder

MTC-00008661

From: Mona Chicks
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the settlement between Microsoft and the DOJ and several states is fair, not only to the parties involved but to the consumers who should be given the ability to choose the best software to fit their individual needs.

Mona Chicks
davenmona@msn.com
14015 NE 87th Street, Redmond, WA
98052
(425) 702-9695

MTC-00008662

From: Judibird1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please get this over with. The Clinton and Gore Era started this. I am a Consumer and on the Internet ONLY BECAUSE OF MICROSOFT. No one has done more for the technology and our country plus the consumers than Microsoft. Our Stock Market needs MSFT stability. Please get off our only good Stock that make the world turn. Tell Microsoft you are sorry and pay his Lawyer Bills. The Courts should beg forgiveness and the States Attorney Generals that went against our only Gross National Product. I hope every State that continues to try and get money from Microsoft gets paid back. Remember the golden Rule.

MTC-00008663

From: Jon M. Griffith, Assistant Principal
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi,
I am writing in regards to the Microsoft Settlement. It has come to my attention that you are considering where to focus the funds from the settlement. I would like to briefly explain where I would hope you would direct some of the settlement.

Currently, I am the Assistant Principal/ Transportation Director/Athletic Director but before this recent job change I was District Computer Coordinator. With that job, I can honestly say the funding for technology was scarce. The School District of Spooner is a medium size school district in rural Northwest Wisconsin. The majority of the supporting community is either retired or around the poverty level. Unlike larger communities such as Madison or Milwaukee, Spooner and the surrounding smaller towns are not able to tap into our local industries for help. Most of the businesses are geared towards tourism (such as bars, restaurants and small grocery stores).

In fact the 3rd largest employer in Spooner is our local grocery store. With this background, I would hope that any aid that you could funnel towards rural areas would greatly be appreciated. To compete with schools from larger communities we need to have similar resources. Grants and scholarships are basically our only option. Asking our voters for help is very depressing (we failed our last 5 referendums these past 10 years). The funding would help us upgrade, build infrastructure and maintain the technology that we do have.

I can give you many examples, but my point is to ask for you to support technology funding for rural areas such as Spooner, Wisconsin. Any support would greatly be appreciated.

Thank You!
Jon Griffith

MTC-00008664

From: Dean and Urs Ratti
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:31pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

As long-time consumers of Microsoft products, our desire is to see the Microsoft lawsuit settled NOW. It appears that those entities which are delaying the settlement are doing so for political reasons only, to the detriment of the consuming public and in turn, the overall economy. As harsh as the Court of Appeals ruling is, let it stand, and let us be done with the continual litigation.

Dean and Ursula Ratti

MTC-00008665

From: Jim Cornwell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:08pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
BEING A BUSINESS OWNER I WAS APPALLED WHEN THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, SPURRED ON BY THE COMPANY'S COMPETITORS, ATTACKED ONE OF THE MOST SUCCESSFUL BUSINESSES THAT HAS GROWN IN OUR COUNTRY IN RECENT YEARS. IT WAS A RELIEF WHEN THE POLITICAL LANDSCAPE CHANGED IN THE WHITE HOUSE AND THIS WITCH HUNT WAS BROUGHT TO AN ABRUPT CONCLUSION. REGARDLESS OF WHAT THE "SETTLEMENT" TERMS ARE, THE IMPORTANT POINT IS THAT THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAS STEPPED ASIDE IN ORDER TO LET AMERICA'S CAPITALIST FREE MARKET WORK. DO NOT LET THESE SPECIAL INTERESTS DELAY THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE SETTLEMENT.

THANK YOU FOR RESOLVING THIS MESS AS SOON AS CLINTON WAS DEPOSED.

YOURS,
JAMES CORNWELL

MTC-00008666

From: John Phillips
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:51am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. I agree that settlement is good for the industry and the American economy.

Thank-You
John Phillips

MTC-00008667

From: donescher
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:38pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Further prolonging the Microsoft litigation is a drag on the U.S. economy and on American industry in general. We believe the proposed settlement is fair to the parties and just as importantly, the American consumer. A continuation would appear to be counter productive in these dangerous economic times.

Shirley & Don Escher

MTC-00008668

From: WaltJoy212@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:40pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough already. The non agreeing states case must be dismissed so that we can go on with the rebuilding of the economy of New York and the Country. The issue is greed and how the government can try to ruin the greatest success story in the history of mankind. By delaying the settlement of the contribution of massive computer help to the schools that need help the most, we delay the help to another year of students.

I hope that we can count on the Federal Government to do the right thing and end this mess.

Walter Steckman
2 Tudor City Place 10HS
New York, New York 10017
Waltjoy212@aol.com

MTC-00008669

From: is
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:45pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am happy with this settlement.
Thanks,
Igor Spivak

MTC-00008670

From: Tony Palumbo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:50 pm
Subject: Excellent Comments

[Text body exceeds maximum size of message body (8192 bytes). It has been converted to attachment.]

I'm forwarding this article (and it's link) as I feel it portrays the Microsoft settlement for what it really is (nothing more than a cleverly disguised scam)

Yes, the article is long, but should still be read
<http://www.macobserver.com/news/2002/20020103/kheit—msantitrust.shtml>

Microsoft: Of Kids & Con Men by John Kheit
Of Kids and Con Men

Microsoft seems to be trying to use kids and education to lull everyone into believing them. The hope seems to be that maybe no one will question that Microsoft's proposed settlement allows it to extend its monopoly product leverage into the educational market. It also seems that Microsoft would like everyone to believe that promising to be good monopolists under an honor system is a reasonable solution to anticompetitive practices. Perhaps next they'll suggest convicted drug dealers should be allowed to pay their debts to society by giving free crack to our kids, assuming of course they promise to not run other dealers out of the market. Give me a break.

Microsoft Settlement Jibber Jabber

The laudable goal of helping our kids with a proposed settlement that Microsoft wants to direct at schools may well be a cue that we're being suckered. Recently, Steve Jobs, the ever effervescent technology leader and CEO of both Apple and Pixar, chimed in with a chorus of other commentators to pooh-pooh on Microsoft's scandalous proposal to settle for its crime of being a naughty monopoly. Microsoft's proposal to settle a class-action, civil, antitrust lawsuit with various states and private parties could have it paying $1.6 billion to schools, mostly by way of Microsoft software, as a settlement for its past misdeeds. Mr. Jobs claimed to be "baffled" by the proposal.

Some legislators have this nasty habit of packaging together nonsensical laws for rhetorical and/or other less-than-righteous reasons. It's interesting to note that our government doesn't see any hypocrisy in its normal operations employing tying and other trust-like activities for leveraging power to force the acceptance of questionable laws while not allowing industry to do the same with products. I expect that one day soon a bright legislator will draft a bill that declares his home address to be tax free zone, provides himself with billions in disaster relief, declares himself emperor of the world, and adds a law saying "you should be nice to kids." This bright legislator will do this for the same reason others have done it, to mask his true intentions. The hope in this sort of scheme seems to be that everyone will be too ashamed to vote down a bill that says "you should be nice to kids" for fear of rhetorical backlash. The fear of being criticized for voting against a bill that says "you should be nice to kids" can make people and legislators alike do stupid things like adopt laws that are otherwise illegitimate.

So why am I harping on the flimflam tactics of con men, terrorists and politicians alike (please, I know I'm being redundant) in an article about Microsoft? Because a scam may be afoot. The reason for Mr. Jobs' and others' apparent consternation is if Microsoft gives its software to schools, it will incur no real penalty. Commentators state that approximately $840 million of the settlement will come by way of Microsoft software, which would actually cost Microsoft approximately a paltry $1 million. That's because making copies of its own software is essentially free for Microsoft. Furthermore, Apple and others fear that dumping that much Microsoft software into schools will shore up Microsoft's market position in the educational sector, where up until this point Microsoft has not managed to clearly dominate. Many commentators and Mr. Jobs have suggested Microsoft give the schools the entire settlement in cash. Of course, there is some degree of jibber jabber over the amount of cash that Microsoft should give to the educational sector, however, it seems that no one dares question the choice of market itself. That's crazy.

Only Microsoft Is Paying Attention to Relevant Markets

The fact that Microsoft chose the educational market, alone, should be a red flag to any practicing antitrust attorney. Most antitrust attorneys know that market definition at trial is largely determinative of the outcome. "Because market power is often inferred from market share, market definition generally determines the result of the case." Eastman Kodak Co. v. Image Technical Services, Inc., 504 U.S. 451, 469 n.15 (1992) (citing Robert Pitofsky, New Definitions of Relevant Market and the Assault on Antitrust, 90 Colum. L. Rev. 1805, 1806-13 (1990)). For example, if Microsoft's marketplace were considered to be all software made anywhere for any processor, it would only hold a small percentage of that market. That's because most of the world's software is not made by Microsoft. For example, there is a lot of software in calculators, microwaves, cars, airplanes, missiles, telephones, mainframes, televisions, etc. Thus, if a court decided that the relevant market was all software, then it would have been very likely that Microsoft would not have been found to be a monopoly. On the other hand, if the relevant market was said to be Intel compatible personal computers, then Microsoft easily would be deemed a monopoly. You've probably heard this before, but it is important to note that it is not illegal, per se, to be a monopoly. However, once you are found to be a monopoly, it is illegal to abuse your monopoly power in anticompetitive ways. 15 U.S.C.A. Sect. 2; U. S. v. Grinnell Corp., 86 S.Ct. 1698 (1966); Intergraph Corp. v. Intel Corp., 195 F.3d 1346, 1353 (Fed. Cir. 1999). Regardless, depending on how the market is defined, one can pretty much predict if an accused company will be found to be a monopoly.

Microsoft's Solution Ignores the Victims

With this background, it is interesting that Microsoft would focus on a market where it is not currently dominant rather than giving the damages to parties that have been more directly injured by its anticompetitive practices. Its main victims, supposedly, were other software companies stunted or driven out of business (anyone remember Stackercor?) and consumers that have been overcharged.

Consumers Overcharged

Some analysts posit that Microsoft overcharged individual consumers by as much as $150 on products over the years. Many consumers were fleeced and forced to pay Microsoft a license fee for Windows when buying a computer even when they didn't want to run Windows or even when they already had a valid license for Windows. Microsoft evinced its recompense to the consumer by raising prices on Windows XP significantly.

Obvious Solutions Ignored

Certainly, there seem to be easy remedies that actually address and would affect Microsoft's monopoly power while providing compensation to both groups of victims. With regard to consumers, potential solutions may include: offering money to those that can show they were forced to buy unwanted Windows licenses, giving money back to OEMs (so they can lower prices on their non-Microsoft products), or giving cash to consumer groups to monitor any heavy handed tactics in the future. With regard to the software industry, individual companies that can show damages should be compensated, e.g., Netscape, or at the very least settlement money should go to the Small Business Administration (or non-government analogues) for them to help software start-ups, which would promote more competition.

The most obvious places to send any settlement money would be to these victims. Otherwise the injured parties will have no redress for the damages wrought by Microsoft. Microsoft's current proposal is a little bit like offering to give money to a for-profit orphanage run by Microsoft as a punishment for having robbed a bank. Sure, some orphans may benefit (and probably will be trained to be future bank tellers), but Microsoft still keeps most of the money and the bank gets nothing. Of course, paying damages to the software industry would likely result in greater competition by infusing capital into a sector that certainly can use it. Furthermore, paying money to an independent watchdog consumer group would tend to prevent Microsoft from freely using its monopoly power in anticompetitive ways. I'm sure Microsoft had very conscious reasons for choosing the particular market of education and ignoring the two groups most directly affected by its anticompetitive actions, and I leave it to the reader to decide for themselves what those reasons were.

Counterproposals Make for Bad Law and Will Further Reduce Competition That's why it's so fascinating to me that with market determination being so central and critical in the world of antitrust that no one is questioning the choice of market for the settlement. I don't know of any parents that wouldn't at least question a proposed punishment for their children's wrong doings, if they were even liberal enough to allow their children to propose their own punishments in the first place. Regardless, the main counterproposals from commentators seem merely to concentrate on Microsoft settling with a full cash payment instead of supplementing the settlement with Microsoft software. The states' proposal basically would force Microsoft to license its source code and keep producing Microsoft Office for the Apple Macintosh and maybe Linux. Such suggestions seem to take one step forward and two steps back.

The step in the right direction is that Microsoft pay damages in cash. Last time I checked, this was still the United States of America and the official currency was a green-back and not a license for Windows. The step backward is that the state governments are considering requesting that Microsoft actually widen its Monopoly by having Microsoft enter new markets, either itself or through licensing, that it currently does not dominate, e.g., Linux. The states basically want Microsoft to open up its source code in return for licensing fees. Great! Now the states are basically making Microsoft's code essential. We've seen that even with supposedly open standards such as Java, HTML, etc. that individual companies are capable of steering and using those systems to proprietary effect.

One unpropitious scenario that may result from such a forced licensing system is that

Microsoft technology would now become even more dominant. A significant collection of software developers on the Linux platform could be adversely affected by Microsoft bulldozing in with its Office suite; this would allow Microsoft to use Office as leverage to subvert the platform as it has often been accused of doing with the Macintosh platform. Where do you think most people (or at least most corporations) will buy their version of Office, Microsoft or some secondary licensee? And even if you buy from a secondary licensee, Microsoft still makes money on licensing fees as per the states' proposal because Microsoft would be entitled to receive a reasonable royalty for its intellectual property. It's as if the states are trying to help Microsoft spread its wares even further with this solution.

I cannot recall any settlement in antitrust history where a solution to a monopoly was to further expand existing and/or potential markets with the monopolist's products. The law seems to require quite the contrary. 15 U.S.C.A. Sect. 2. Yet at every turn, counterproposals seem to actually expand the adoption and/or reach of Microsoft's products. Microsoft suggests donating software, which would further saturate the educational market. The states suggest entry into alternative markets from which Microsoft will benefit by way of increased licensing revenues. Even merely giving cash to schools for purchasing software (as suggested by some commentators) will tend only to strengthen Microsoft because it will continue to benefit from its monopoly position. Buying Market Share Witness its Xbox game console. Microsoft's Xbox retails for $299, but it is rumored to lose about $125 on every unit it sells. So, perhaps, it is not surprising that Microsoft is willing to spend money on capturing more of the education market.

Microsoft Gets Everything It Gives

For example, even if Microsoft gives cash to the schools, Apple, likely, still will get screwed. Assuming Microsoft gives the schools $1 billion for computers and software, Microsoft will still win market share and its actual costs will remain low. Why? The schools will hand most of Microsoft's money right back to it to buy software, and the government will also end up kicking some money back to Microsoft. Even if half the schools buy Macintosh computers (which is roughly Apple's market share in the educational market), the schools will still buy Microsoft Office. Microsoft Office costs a lot more than a license for plain old Windows. And let's face it, if Microsoft ever kills Office on the Macintosh, it will have terrible consequences for the platform; and if someone were to speculate what a nasty monopolist would do when given a chance, then one might speculate that such a nasty monopolist would kill Mac office, which would force the remaining 4% of the computing world over to Windows. The point being, one way or the other, a large portion of any cash settlement will come back to Microsoft by way of software purchases, and Microsoft will still be able to leverage its products unfairly across markets. Furthermore, Microsoft will be able to write off the $1 billion settlement as a loss and recoup from around one third from the government. I.R.C. Sect. 162(g); Tax Reg. Sect. 1.162-22. In the end, a cash settlement still will cost Microsoft relatively little while at the same time it still will increase its market dominance, and the reason why remains the same. They are a monopoly.

Just Because You Used To, Doesn't Mean You Still Can

A little example may be in order. If you are Acme Inc. with 1% of the PC market and wish to bundle your screen saver with your PCs, no problem. The government might even hold you up as a "go getter" in the sense that you are trying to compete to win market share. However, if Acme starts to win more and more market share and later owns 99% of the market, then giving its screen saver away for free might be considered to be dumping, tying, predatory pricing, and/or the like illegal activity because it is now a monopoly. So there are some things, i.e., the very kinds of things, that are encouraged in a competitive and open market that become illegal once you attain the status of a monopoly. Wolfson v. Artisans Say. Bank, 428 F.Supp. 1315, 1321 (D.Del. 1977).

Nothing the government is currently proposing is designed to change that fundamental reality. Apparently the only arguments that proponents of the proposed settlement provide is that at least a cash settlement would cause Microsoft to lose some money. However, that seems to miss a great irony of why Microsoft is supposedly being punished in the first place. As any M.B.A. will tell you, Microsoft, as with any other corporation, wants to own every market to maximize returns for its investors. Owning the education market would help Microsoft shore up its current dominance by getting young people "hooked" on its products. By getting kids hooked early, they are less likely to try other systems because the cost of learning a new system is not insubstantial. Furthermore, Microsoft certainly shows it is willing to invest money to gain market share.

Thus, such a settlement, arguably, can be viewed as just a cost of doing business to garner market share. The irony is that a monopolist is not allowed to give products away or sell them at a loss.

Xbox Errata

With the government practically abetting a convicted monopolist in anticompetitive practices on its core products, there seems little likelihood that there will be an investigation into Microsoft's Xbox pricing and other tactics used to enter and buy out the gaming market; tactics that arguably may violate other antitrust laws. Of course that didn't stop me from buying one as it is the most incredible gaming platform I've ever seen (particularly with Halo, the formally independent producers of which have been bought out by Microsoft), but I digress.

Such predatory pricing and/or dumping tactics are normally illegal for a convicted monopolist. U.S.v. Columbia Steel Co., 334 U.S. 495, 530 (1948); Western Concrete Structures Co., Inc. v. Mitsui & Co. (U.S.A.), Inc., 760 F.2d 1013, 1018 (9th Cir. 1985). Thus, it is currently illegal for Microsoft to give its software to the educational market for free or at a price below its costs because they have been found to be a monopoly. However, if the government agrees to Microsoft's proposed settlement with the states, then the government will at the very least be providing Microsoft with an exception to this rule, or at worst be a collaborator in illegal predatory pricing and dumping. It is not even clear if DoJ may allow the states to settle with Microsoft when the settlement terms, arguably, further require breaking the antitrust laws. Setting up an end-game as beautiful as this certainly deserves adulation in the annals of business history. The lawyers at Microsoft must be dancing jigs of joy all day long at the thought that the government may actually require the company to increase its software penetration in various markets and in some cases be allowed to use tactics that otherwise would be illegal.

Microsoft's proposed settlement, which is ostensibly a punishment for anticompetitive monopolistic practices, is refreshing in its outright obnoxiousness. They deserve kudos for selling their proposal without anyone questioning the fundamentals. Microsoft has managed to frame the settlement so that people are not questioning how, where, and/or why it should be punished, but boiled things down to only a question of how much it should pay.

Kids Are Irrelevant

I suppose people are afraid to question giving money and resources to the schools "for the kids." And don't get me wrong, I'm all for improving education in the United States. In this case, however, the kids simply don't deserve this money. That is because the greatest harm befell the public at large and countless innovative software companies (their creditors, employees, investors, etc.), which were driven out of business, stunted from pursuing markets for fear of oblivion, and/or never materialized because Microsoft's presence and practices were too ominous an obstacle. Those are the people that were primarily smashed and/or pushed around by Microsoft as mentioned throughout its antitrust trial. If any one industry was wronged and deserves recompense, it is the software industry as a whole (excluding Microsoft of course). Yet no one is even considering directing damages to the software industry when it was the clear victim. This is shameful; the kids are not more deserving here. And if you think I'm being a big meany, please refrain from being a big ole hypocrite and don't bitch if (heaven forbid) your home is burned down, and then the arsonist decides it would be better to give money for rebuilding your home "to the kids." Regardless of where the money should ultimately go, it's amazing the choice of where it should go has not been the subject of much, if any, debate or dispute.

Government Bargain

The government, save for a few states, certainly doesn't seem to have questioned anything all that much. The DoJ's perspective seems to be "we've told Bill he's been naughty, and he promised he'd be good." Microsoft has promised to be a good monopoly, however, Microsoft's outright cheap (offering to expend a few million in actual costs while claiming it's worth $1.6 billion while knowing the states are likely to collect over $14+ billion if the case goes through trial is at the very least thrifty) and duplicitous proposed settlement, its structure, and the chosen market should be evidence itself as to how solemnly it regards its obligation to be a good monopoly. Generally, it is questionable if it is even possible to be a good monopoly. Supposedly a good monopoly is one that doesn't engage in "anticompetitive" practices (IP right holders and their government sanctioned monopolies withstanding, which is a topic for another day). Wolfson, 428 F.Supp. 1321; Intel, 195 F.3d 1346. That seems to imply that Microsoft should then engage in competitive practices. Yet, that's what Microsoft has been doing all along, i.e., competing like crazy, and why it's in trouble now. Or perhaps the government would like Microsoft not to be competitive so that the rest of the industry will be able to compete with an artificially handicapped monopoly? Neither solution seems to result in a truly competitive market. The only solution proposed, so far, that would result in a situation where Microsoft and the rest of the industry could all truly compete is where Microsoft's hold over the industry is broken.

Break-up Complimentary

Microsoft's brilliant business practices have made it a dominant force. Bill Gates and company truly deserve a great deal of praise for demonstrating incredible business and political acumen. I'm not trying to be sarcastic and my praise is genuine when I say that Bill Gates is the best businessman ever to walk the earth. Truly the highest compliment the government and President Bush could pay Mr. Gates would be to regard him as one of the greatest American success stories of all time. Mr. Gates should be in an elite cadre of moguls who won at playing the American dream. Just like J.D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil, Bill Gate's Microsoft needs to be broken up. Yet the DoJ, after winning the antitrust case against Microsoft, has gone from promoting a break-up as a remedy to shunning it for a settlement with the apparently coincidental arrival of the Bush administration. Why settle a case on poor terms now? To be sure, there are reasons to settle after winning a case, but these usually revolve around the strength and cost of an appeal. The government claims it has a solid case on appeal, and the cost of an appeal is irrelevant (relative to the ramifications of a poor settlement) to both Microsoft and the DoJ. So, once again, why settle a case on such unfavorable terms after winning on the merits!?

You don't have to be much of a conspiracy theorist to surmise that the Bush administration's inexplicably chummy perception of Microsoft has influenced the DoJ's about-face and acceptance of a Microsoft settlement. Certainly, the DoJ seems to have some interesting interpretations of what a just punishment is for a convicted monopoly that has driven away and/or killed off some of the world's most creative competitors by means other than merit.

Leveraging Honor Unwise with Monopolists

The break-up solution at least addresses the unfair leverage Microsoft uses across markets by exploiting its Internet browser (Internet Explorer), operating system (Windows) and application suite (Office) line of products. The proposed settlement of giving money to schools will do nothing to reduce the inter-market leverage that Microsoft enjoys. In fact, giving the schools money for software and training will likely only increase the dependency those schools have on Microsoft's products. Furthermore, the DoJ settlement relies on Microsoft being "good" and somehow tempering its extremely competitive nature. Perhaps the DoJ should spread this new punishment policy to convicted serial murderers and set them free assuring us that they promised to be good in the future. No real argument seems to have been given as to why anyone can expect Microsoft to suddenly become and remain a good monopoly when it has thus far been incapable. However, history provides an argument to the contrary. Moguls are competitive. Successful companies are competitive. The very nature and manner of competing that was at one time legal, encouraged and the cause of their successes (e.g., lowering prices, building market share, driving lesser competitors out of business) have (in many instances) become illegal practices once they were found to be monopolies. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey v. U.S., 221 U.S. 1 (1911); Wolfson, 428 F.Supp. 1321; Intel, 195 F.3d 1346. As such, moguls and their successful companies are more likely to continue their practices simply from inertia. Certainly, Microsoft's latest acts seem indicative of anticompetitive recidivism: dropping Java from Windows XP will not help SUN; selling Xboxes at a loss seems to leverage its financial power derived from one market to move into another; disabling non-Microsoft web browsers from accessing MSN demonstrates that even if Microsoft makes its proprietary source code variations to HTML open, it still likely will induce users to stick with Microsoft branded browsers rather than being hassled and jostled from services during the lag time it will take for licensees to implement any new proprietary "features" to obtain parity with the official Microsoft version; and using heavy handed licensing tactics in its Software Assurance Program (SAP—make up your own jokes) has garnered wide criticism for forcing a licensing strategy to make users upgrade more frequently than desired.

If history serves as any lesson, a competitive mogul like Bill Gates will not become less competitive until he's declared an official winner and has no choice but to stop competing. There seems to be only one way to be declared a winner in the U.S. and that's through break-up as enjoyed by J.D. Rockefeller and Standard Oil. Standard Oil, 221 U.S. 1. There is no reason to believe that Bill Gates and Microsoft will stop employing anticompetitive tactics until they are forced to stop competing with the full force of monopoly power. Anything less than a forced break-up will leave Bill Gates and Microsoft with the status of being mere contenders not important, successful, or dangerous enough to warrant a government break-up. It's doubtful Bill Gates could be satisfied with such a runners-up title. Thus, the government should provide Mr. Gates and Microsoft with the closure they deserve and declare them winners officially. In a certain sense, I believe Mr. Gates would be able to enjoy his victory having fought the good fight. If not, he can try to become the first person in the U.S. to have two of his companies broken up by the government.

I will not rehash why Microsoft's proposal for (please place tongue in cheek) "justice" (please release tongue now—thank you) is akin to sentencing a serial murderer to work as an executioner at a prison and trying to pass it off as a "community service." As long as Microsoft is allowed to exist as a monopoly, it will be nearly impossible to punish it in any meaningful way so as to provide disincentive from abusing its power.

MTC-00008671

From: JP0555@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Department of Justice is not acting in the best interest of this country to pursue an antitrust accusation against the Microsoft Corporation. Microsoft is not a monopoly. They are an independent competitive corporation that has provided innovative and beneficial products and services to the businesses and consumers of American and the world.

Why does the DOJ think profit means corruption? Microsoft is simply our American system of business working in its finest form.

For the DOJ to listed to a handful of Microsoft competitors and their claim that they have been restricted from operation in a free marketplace is just irresponsible. We have a free marketplace and it is the responsibility of the DOJ to keep it that way, by allowing Microsoft, and other corporations like it to continue operating and exploring and creating new and exciting products and services, without interference or restriction from the Department of Justice.

Keep America Free! Keep our way of life and our way of American commerce unencumbered by useless and destructive litigation. Don't let the whining complaints of the few hurt the productivity and opportunity of the many.

Jay Mathews
10418 Sedgebrook Dr.
Riverview, FL 33569

MTC-00008672

From: DONALD WRAY
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:53pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I AM NOT AN ARDENT MICROSOFT FAN
* * * BUT LET'S GET THIS THING SETTLED. IT SEEMS TO ME THAT THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT IS REASONABLE. WHY SHOULD THE STATES ATTEMPT TO HOLD THIS UP. IT SEEMS TO ME THAT THE COMPETITORS
OF MICROSOFT THAT WERE SO OPPOSED TO MICROSOFT HAVE DONE VERY WELL FOR THEMSELVES...SUCH AS AOL. THE ECONOMY, ESPECIALLY THE TECH
STOCKS HAVE ALREADY TAKEN A BEATING. LETS MOVE AHEAD INSTEAD OF STILL TRYING TO KILL THE GOOSE

THAT LAID THE GOLDEN EGG. IN SPITE OF EVERYTHING, MICROSOFT OF THE PAST YEARS, HAS DONE MORE FOR THE TECH ECONOMY THAN ANY OTHER COMPANY. SETTLE NOW.

Donald W. Wray
450 Treasure Island Cswy. Apt #207
Treasure Island, Florida 33706
dwwrayti@msn.com

MTC-00008673

From: Barbara J Cline
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

3621 Oakwood Drive
Bettendorf, IA 52722
January 4, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I would like to offer my views on the antitrust lawsuit that has been going on between Microsoft and the federal government. I have been reading about this case in the Wall Street Journal, and it is one that I have never understood or agreed with. I support your decision to settle.

The case has had no positive effects, and the negative effects have been many. Schools are being hurt, the stock market has been affected, and the economy has dwindled as a result of the technology industry being hindered during the past three years while this case has gone on. In addition, the whole idea of the case is wrong in that it is stepping on the development of ideas, and this is a poor message for the government to be sending. Our economy is really struggling at the moment, and the government should be trying to find ways to stimulate it rather than ways to keep it down. Settling with Microsoft was a step in the right direction.

Thank you for your support.
Sincerely,
Charles Cline
cc: Sen. Charles Grassley

MTC-00008674

From: DUANE
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I understand that a decision will be made in the near future regarding penalties that will be assessed against Microsoft. During my working career I spent 30 years in engineering and management at Boeing.

We used IBM and Microsoft software to run our computers for all kinds of design, analysis and marketing activities. I am convinced that Microsoft provided the best software for many of our applications but we did use software from other companies for specific applications.

I urge you not to break up the company or force them to release code to other companies. If they are required to release source code it would be no different than Boeing being required to release the software they use to design their airplanes and spacecraft. Microsoft has invested a large share of their profits to develop new software and expand the capabilities of existing software programs. They do not pay dividends to their stockholders, they put it back into research and development. It would not be fair to give companies software code that they could have developed themselves were they inclined to invest their profits in research and development. Microsoft did not become the largest software company by taking advantage of other companies, they became the largest because they had a great management team with a strong vision of what people wanted to do with personal computers.

I sincerely hope that your decision will take into consideration the millions of personal computer users who have benefitted from the investments Microsoft has made in their software programs. Software for our computers will become much more expensive and less robust if Microsoft is required to release source code for Windows and other software programs.

Anyone can make a difference,
Everyone should try !!
Duane Edmonds
duanee@wavecom.net
307-754-9396

MTC-00008675

From: Winslade, Winston
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 12:54pm
Subject: MS Settlement

I would like to express that this case should be settled today so that MS can move forward in providing low cost innovative solutions to the public. An engineer by schooling and involved in an industry that produced computer systems for mission critical control in the process industry, I know the pain suffered by users that were stuck (necessarily so because of no standards) with proprietary operating systems. It was not until MS introduce a more robust OS that could be used for industry that this industry started to move towards standards. This at a cost in the multi-millions of dollars to industrial users.

The point is, without MS consumers would have experienced this same costly dilemma. That fact we have plug and play and an unlimited selection of application software that can be installed by even the novice user, is attributed to MS's leadership in the industry.

Quite frankly, the consumer has never been hurt by any of MS practices. In fact, the consumers has low cost software and OS' because of MS. This case should never have been heard in the first place.

The opinions expressed here are that of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of my employer.

MTC-00008676

From: HIROLLERIG@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 12:54pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Why does the Government always try to brake down a company for getting big and making a profit. Isn't that the American Wau. LEAVE Microsoft alone.

MTC-00008677

From: elizabeth jones
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 12:56pm
Subject: microsoft settlement
Leave Microsoft alone! Hurray for Bill Gates.
E. Jones, MD

MTC-00008678

From: Cris Von Wald
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My view is that I fully support the proposed DOJ settlement. It is time to move on and does no one any good to continue to draw this process out.
cvonwald

MTC-00008679

From: andy greenwood
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please finalize the agreement with Microsoft as it stands and let's get on with business. It's a competitive world, let's let it stay that way. Microsoft is one of the world's great innovators. Let their competitors "compete" with new and better products if they don't like the way things are.
Andy Greenwood

MTC-00008680

From: Dr. Manton Gibbs
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Legal Settlement

The settlement between the US Justice Department and nine states seems fair and just. Given the downturn in the economy, there is a pressing need to settle the litigation. Customers and taxpayers should and will benefit. Global competition should keep all players on their best in providing low cost and quality service and products. This settlement does not mean the end of monitoring. Global competitors, customers and government can bring complaints at any time and place.

Manton C. Gibbs, Ph.D.
Associate Director of the American Society for Competitiveness.

MTC-00008681

From: Andy or Gail Hatle
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:08pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

It is damn well time to get off the back of Microsoft. If we, the consumers aren't happy with it, we can stop using it. We are not slaves to Bill Gates. How much have we wasted on useless persecution of a software producer, and how much had we spent going after bin Laden before Sept. 11, 2001? Let's get our priorities straight and consider the good of the country instead of following the path of Bill Clinton trying to repay his campaign contributors. We need real leadership instead of playing stupid political games.

Sincerely,
Andy Hatle
hatle@earthlink.net

MTC-00008682

From: Dave Tomesch
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:07pm

Subject: RE: Microsoft Settlement

Dear To Whom it May Concern;

I have been using Microsoft Software for several years with great enthusiasm. I like their software and the support I get from buying their products. I do not feel they have a Monopoly in any way compared to Bell or Hydro or Oil Or Gas or the Lumber Industry. I am certain that there are many Hackers, Malicious programmers that are Jealous of Microsofts Success and therefore only a monetary discount on products or services is required to settle any further waste of TAXPAYERS money on this CASE! PS I have used Atari products in the Past with 1000's spent on them with little or no help from the company! They definetly had a monopoly on their products in the 70's and 80's along with Apple and you did not see any lawsuits then!!!. If you really wanna know what most consumers think, they think Unix and Internet programming companies are jealous of Microsofts successes and several Democrates took advantage of Taxpayers dollars to push a Insufficient evidence case against microsoft compared to reality. Reality is Oracle has or had a monopoly on Internet Servers (WHERE's THEIR MONOPOLY CASE???, You can use their own commercials on TV against them(we have 100% of the Marketplace on servers was their slogan!) The list could go on and on so I hope the Justice Department ends this case soon, give Microsoft a slap on the wrist along with Oracle, Sun Microsystems etc and get on with Consumer Products from all the US and Canadian Companies. Setup a department for Monopolies in any field of US. Commerce) Because in Reality Microsoft could move to Canada and what CASE would you have then? US. Laws do not work in Canada or we wouldn't have BELL CANADA or PetroCan ETC, and their are many more real big monopolies around the WORLD! (GOLD Companies ETC So putting the computer Industry in perspective!!!!!! if the key, I owned an atari 400, 800, x1800, 1200, Atari ST, Atari STE, Apple, IBM Computers etc. etc. You can see Microsoft came out on top but maybe the future some other company might do better so let the industry continue and Maybe those new Tablet PCs made by other companes might be the next big thing who knows!!!.

Sorry for the long PS but the Justice department should really be looking into why Oracle shares went from 25 dollars to 130 while Clinton was in office and back down again! There is a real monopoly of servers there and get with reality. I dont own a microsoft Monitor(its a clone) I don't own a Microsoft printer its from HP, I dont own a Microsft scanner its from IBM, I don't own a Microsoft Hard drive its from Western Digital, all my software is 80% owned by other companies, Disney, 3D0, etc, 15% is microsoft Kids games or Operating systems, SO IN REALITY there is NO MONOPOLY HERE!!!!

SO WHERE IS THE MONOPOLY CASE IN MY HOUSE????? NO WHERE!! ITS NON EXISTENT!!!

Dave Tomesch

(You can quote me if you like!)

MTC-00008683

From: Dave Rice

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:07pm

Subject: DOJ:

DOJ:

Please stop the witch hunt of Microsoft being orchestrated by its competitors and their agent polititions. The whole issue revolves around the preposterous definition of the "relevant market".

David L. Rice

MTC-00008684

From: RC Fullerton

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:10pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Department of Justice

This lawsuit with Microsoft as defendent has gone on too long and now that there is a chance for a settlement, the action for settlement should be taken by the Court. RC Fullerton Canyon Lake, Texas

MTC-00008685

From: BKhynes@cs.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:09pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Civil Servants,

The agreed upon Microsoft Settlement is just and the government needs to move on. This lawsuit has done nothing to help consumers from day one (Microsoft's products have always been fairly priced) and was initiated to protect competitors that could not compete with Microsoft. Agreed, Microsoft is a tough competitor but the reasons that it has succeeded are not do to monopolistic activities but to a new business vision on how to survive in a fast moving technology world. They pour more profits back into research and have the lowest paid management team in the industry. They operate the company like a graduate school where the rewards are stock options versus degrees. Their workers are highly motivated.

Sincerely yours,

Robert J. Hynes

MTC-00008686

From: Frank Danaher

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:18pm

Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear sir

Please be advised that I think the settlement agreement with Microsoft is fair and the litigation should be ended as soon as possible.

We have seen how the asbestos, tobacco, cigarette, breast implant and pharaceutical litigations have caused the demise of many fine companies. For the sake of the country we do not need excessive and oppressive litigation that will serve to protract the recession and bring about the demise of many fine companies.

Would like to suggest that you take proactive measures to discourage lawsuits at all levels. Finalizing the MicroSoft Settlement would be a fine start.

Thank you

Frank Danaher

MTC-00008687

From: john j boyle

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:22pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please do not delay the settlement further.

It is not in the best interest of the nation or consumers to drag this on any longer.

Sincerely,

Marsha E. Boyle

Florida

MTC-00008688

From: Scott Brooks

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:25pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

As a satisfied customer of Microsoft for over a decade, and as a dis-interested third party, I'd like to comment that the entire DOJ action against Microsoft disgusts me. Microsoft has, in the past, done much more public good than evil, at least from my viewpoint. Before Microsoft, interactivity between software applications was practically non-existent, and competitive products couldn't use each other's data. With Microsoft's so-called monopoly, my productivity has increased dramatically because I can now integrate one application's data into another application very easily. As far as I'm concerned, Microsoft should be allowed to continue operating as they have been until they actually cause harm to me or the American public. The only entities they've hurt are their competitors, and that's the way capitalism is supposed to work

* * *

Regards,

Scott Brooks

1519 Chardonnay Dr.

Harker Heights, TX 76548

MTC-00008689

From: Jim Baskin

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 1:28pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have not seen consumers hurt by Microsoft's action, and I have not seen it proven in court. It has been disappointing to have our government fight against what I think is a great company, seemingly expressing the views of Microsoft competitors in court (not consumer views). As a citizen and taxpayer I ask that you end this litigation as soon as possible. The current Microsoft offer is a HUGE benefit to the nation.

Thanks,

Jim Baskin

Senior Consultant—MCS Microsoft

Telecom Practice

Phone (425) 705-3749 Pager 800-895-6003

"You can stomp the grapes twice as fast, but that doesn't create a 20 year Tawny Port in 10 years."

MTC-00008690

From: Saddiq, Tareq

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'

Date: 1/4/02 1:33pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Mr. Ashcroft,

I am writing this letter to lend my support to the settlement reached between Microsoft and the Department of Justice. This lawsuit is just a way for competitors of Microsoft to feel good about their lack of success and block any further achievements of Microsoft. Even though I believe this suit should not have been brought about, it is better to resolve this issue and move ahead, rather than spending another three years in court.

Microsoft has earned its success along the way. It has provided its consumers with quality care and service, which has tremendously helped in its worldwide accomplishments. Microsoft opponents have suggested terms that appear to stifle trade, such as uniform licensing price agreements. Even so, Microsoft has acknowledged the terms so that it can move on. This waste of American tax dollars is pointless. To stop this from continuing any further, all action that is taking place at the federal level be brought to an end.

Sincerely,
Tareq Saddiq,
Senior Network Architect, Phone: (608) 278-7888 or (608) 225-8741
CC: 'Tammy.Baldwin(a)mail.house.gov'

MTC-00008691

From: Steve Miller
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:34 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Steve Miller (sw miller@hotmail.com)
From the outset I disagreed with the Government's prosecution of Microsoft. The success of any operating system platform is determined by those of use who write software for it. For years nearly eight million developers have written software for the Windows platform. Since so many developers have chosen to write for Windows the consumer had more applications from which to choose. Allowing the consumer to pick what they felt was fight for them.

Microsoft Windows has been far more open and allowed consumers more choice than other operating systems. Other operating system vendors give you what they think you should have rather than listening to the consumer and providing the features important to the consumer. Since, the settlement is in place I think it should stand. While I continue to think that it is unnecessary it is better than the attempts to break up Microsoft. I think the break up attempt was a contributing factor to the soft economic conditions we are now in since our economy is technology driven. Any further attempts to limit Microsoft will only hurt the economy more and punish those eight million developers who have chosen to make their living using Microsoft technologies.

Thank you,
Steve Miller
425 Kemper Drive North
Madison, TN 37115
(615) 612-1919
sw miller@hotmail.com
Steve Miller (sw miller@hotmail.com)

MTC-00008692

From: PacHome@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement January 4, 2002
I believe that the Department of Justice should settle the Microsoft case. The agreement reached by the federal government and nine states with Microsoft addresses the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling.

Further litigation is unnecessary, and harmful for the American spirit.

Sincerely,
Valerie Hines
PacHome@aol.com

MTC-00008693

From: Mehran Behdjat
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:39pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
DOJ

I believe that the most recent settlement between DOJ and Microsoft is fair and equitable and no more litigation is necessary. Continuation of litigation against Microsoft is detrimental to the fragile U.S. economy and will hurt the technology and innovation as a whole.

Sincerely,
Mehran Behdjat

MTC-00008694

From: david faibish
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:40pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement—CASH ONLY!

The penalty paid by microsoft should NOT be an in-kind contribution (of software, hardware, or services).

Recipients should be free to choose who and what they buy with the proceeds of any settlement.

Especially in the education marketplace which is one of the few where microsoft faces real competition (ie Apple); a "forced" gift that is platform-specific undermines not enhances the very competition which is the goal of the penalty in the first place!

regards:dlf

MTC-00008695

From: Chris Cleary
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:40pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

People are envious of the success of large companies and individuals such as Microsoft and Bill Gates, respectively. This should not cloud the vision of the Department of Justice. Do not break up Microsoft.

Leave the company alone, solve real crime, and go about you business.

Breaking up any company that has been made large and prosperous from people voting with their wallets is socialism. There are no barriers that Microsoft competitors have to surmount that have not been surmounted before. They need more creativity as they lack ideas. Microsoft's competition has not been outlawed as with the U.S. Postal Service and First Class mail; it is merely uncreative.

Leave Microsoft alone and go after the real criminals.

Chris Cleary Fairfield, Ohio

MTC-00008696

From: DENNIS BROWN
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,
Microsoft continues to abuse its' customers, the general public, and the laws of commerce in our great nation. Their arrogance is most apparent in the way in which they have launched the latest version of their operating system and its' integrated software. Microsoft has flaunted the very settlement and suggestions of the DOJ and the prior trial judge. The new version of the operating system is even more anti-competitive! Please reconsider, on behalf of the American people, your settlement offer.

Dennis Brown
dbrown@Kaneland.org
Kaneland High School
Maple Park, IL

MTC-00008697

From: James T. Murphy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:44pm
Subject: microsoft settlement
Please approve the settlement and let all parties move on with business.
J.murphy

MTC-00008698

From: Kirk
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Department of Justice, With the settlement of the Microsoft case nearing the point where the District Court will rule whether or not this settlement is in the best interest of the consumer public, I wish to urge that it is.

The proposed settlement with the DOJ and 9 states is tough, fair and appropriate. As a consumer, I have never felt that I was harmed in any way by Microsoft's business tactics. I believe that standardization is actually the consumer's best friend, assuming that the quality of the standard is upheld. I believe that Microsoft works very hard and invests millions, or even billions of dollars to ensure that their products are the best.

As an investor, I have lost significant amounts of personal wealth in the past 18+ months, partly due to the economic downturn, but also in large part because of the case against Microsoft, which drove the price of Microsoft stock, and the stock of nearly every other company down. I have always maintained that the pressure on Microsoft stock, which is so widely held in private accounts as well as institutional funds, has had a large role in eroding our economy during the past couple of years.

As a taxpayer, I feel that more than enough has been spent on this case. In the interest of the taxpaying public, I think it is time this case were settled and put to rest for good. I wish the other 9 states attorney generals who have not agreed to this settlement would also put aside political aspirations and act on behalf of the public as well, and join in this settlement agreement. Private interest groups who oppose this settlement do not have the majority of public interest at heart- for them it is a personal vendetta.

Suffice it to say that as a consumer, and investor, a taxpayer and as an American, I feel this settlement is appropriate and necessary so that we all might get on with our lives and with the business of strengthening the American economy. In order to do this, one key step is to put this case to rest. Please include my sentiments as part of the public record for the District Court to review.

God Bless America.
Sincerely,
Kirk Werner
Duvall, Washington

MTC-00008699

From: Maiale@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

One thing more: a lot of this complaint by Microsoft competitors to the Government is because they cannot compete in price and performance. Therefore we believe Microsoft has been punished for being efficient. The country does not need this sort of action by the Government. It stifles business innovation and loses jobs. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Maiale 941-597-5864. 672 92nd Avenue, North, Naples FL 34108

MTC-00008700

From: Pete Detskey (ELN)
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:47pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing to oppose the anti-trust settlement that has been proposed with Microsoft. I write as both a small business owner and as a consumer of Microsoft software products.

Capitalism works only when competition exists. Justice must be served in regards to the anti-competitive behavior of Microsoft. The proposed settlement does not guarantee competition for new companies; it does not promote benefits to consumers.

One flaw with the proposed settlement is that it leaves open too many loopholes on what code is not required to be made open to other business seeking to develop new products. It also seems to have a sunset provision on when the oversight committee will disband in several years. We need a permanent solution to the Microsoft monopoly problem.

The nine states that did not sign on to the agreement have a better plan on promoting competition. For example, they require that Microsoft Office products be ported to rival operating systems.

For consumers, consider the recent warning that the FBI issued regarding the security holes in the Win XP operating system. I think it is awful that the FBI has to issue consumer warnings—at taxpayer expense—because of Microsoft negligence. In a competitive environment, no company would release a software product with serious flaws; that action would risk going out of business. But in a monopoly, Microsoft has no fears and will bully everyone around as it sees fit.

Justice must be served on the anti-competitive behavior of Microsoft. The current settlement offer does not safeguard competition in the marketplace. It provides no benefits to consumers with flawed software products.

Justice is NOT served in the proposed settlement. I urge that an alternative settlement be proposed.

Sincerely,
Peter Z. Detskey
Tucson, Arizona
(520) 297-7289

MTC-00008701

From: Magnus Hammar Borsch
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Well, maybe this is totally unimportant for you. But I wanted to make myself heard. Since I am not an american citizen, I do not have any constitutional rights to express myself in this matter.

But this is as important to me as it is for any american. Microsoft is not an "american" corporation, it is an international corporation and most people working for Microsoft are NOT americans (some are as me, swede's. Not to mention all programers from India * * *).

Maybe you as americans, for once, should ask other nations what they think about Microsoft? And just maybe you should try to addept to others, instead of trying to change those who think different from you? Sooner or later your pride might be your fall, and that would truly be a sad end for a beautiful nation as yours.

Magnus Hammar

MTC-00008702

From: David G. Odom
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Judge in the above settlement case: I am a user of the OS/2 operating system from IBM. I have found this to be a technologically superior product over the operating systems offered by Microsoft, including their latest version, Windows XP. Unfortunately, OS/2 has been in decline for a number of years from what I believe to be unfair monopolistic marketing tactics of Microsoft. As a result, vendors of OS/2 related products have also diminished over the years. Contrary to arguments by Microsoft that their products encourage competition, I believe the opposite is true; that Microsoft's marketing practices actually discourages competition and stunts technological growth. To believe that Microsoft is anything BUT a monopoly in the micro-computer market, is nonsense. Looking at anyone's PCs or any companies micro-servers will tell you otherwise and the truth.

Consequently, I do not believe the Federal Government's proposed settlement with Microsoft, in its current form, is inadequate and that stricter measures be imposed on the company to prohibit such tactics from being used in the future. I believe the proposed settlement fails to achieve the necessary goals of a proper remedy: halting Microsoft's illegal conduct, promoting competition in the industry, and depriving Microsoft of its illegal gains.

I would be happy to discuss those controls if you need input from the "regular public" that has to suffer through the Microsoft monopoly environment.

Sincerely,
David G. Odom
Tucson, AZ

MTC-00008703

From: JHWallis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 1:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Continue the trend away from the anti-business/anti-capitalist tenor left behind by the previous administration. The settlement is sufficient.

MTC-00008704

From: Nathan Vick
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,
I would like to add my voice in favour of breaking Microsoft into an Operating System business and an Applications business. I think that is the only effective way to get Microsoft make windows more extensible for third parties, more standards-compliant (without embrace-and-extend) and more thoroughly documented. I think breaking them up is the only effective way to accomplish these goals because it is the only way that produces and fast-acting economic incentive.

Nathan
nvick@capcollege.bc.ca
Nathan Vick
Programmer/Analyst
Capilano College

MTC-00008705

From: PCCorral
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

For many of us who are in the PC industry we have know all along that this lawsuit was motivated, funded and perpetuated by Sun Microsystems, Oracle, the Sansoni legal eagles and other Microsoft competitors. Though there was some merit to the complaints about Microsoft's OEM pricing policies, those practices have been discontinued and remedied.

The one who is really being hurt by the continuation of this case is the consumer. Microsoft's competitors don't want Microsoft to be able to add free new features to its software. But it's the consumer who would be hurt by this. It is time for this case to be settled. Do ever consumer out there a favor and settle it!

MTC-00008706

From: RGoodwill@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:05pm
Subject: (no subject)

Drop the suit. It is a waste of money
REGoodwill Jr

MTC-00008707

From: ETZZY@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:10pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Department of justices I am writing to you concerning the Microsoft settlement. I think the settlement is fair to all, and any future litigation will only hurt the consumer. I am disabled and on a limited income, (in some ways we all are, on limited income that is) and Microsoft has help me buy some products I might not otherwise be able to afford. I do own some Microsoft stock, which if the company was left alone the little bit I have invested will help my income someday. thank you for this opportunity to share with you.

Ed etzwiler

MTC-00008708

From: MILLWOOD@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the current proposed DOJ settlement. Let's not get tangled in further litigation. Thanks

MTC-00008709

From: Brooks, Steve
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 2:17pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft Settlement is reasonable and fair to all parties involved.

Steven J. Brooks

Senior Systems Analyst, D.B.A.

ADP COBRA Services, Inc

wk. (770)-619-7200 ext. 1342

cell. (770)-367-1759

MTC-00008710

From: jack timmons
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a computer professional for over 20 years, I'm shocked that the US government is still trying to sue Microsoft. Microsoft has contributed more to this country than all the other computer companies combined. Instead of a well deserved award, you are punishing them, obviously on behalf of their competitors in Utah (Novell), California (Sun/Oracle) and New York (IBM/AOL).

Stop trying to kill the goose that continues to lay golden eggs!

Shame on you for supporting their competitors in such a painfully biased and unfair way!!! It's incredibly obvious what a hack job this is.

Jack Timmons

Seattle, Washington

MTC-00008711

From: Mister Thorne
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

Could you please advise as to the deadline for the public to submit comments on the Proposed Final Judgement? Is it Sunday, 6 Jan 2002 which is 60 days after the 6 Nov 2001 posting of the Judgement? Is it Tuesday, 15 Jan 2002 which is 60 days after the 15 Nov 2001 posting of the Competitive Impact Statment?

Thank you.

Mister Thorne

MTC-00008713

From: Robert Westerberg
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Let's stop wasting taxpayers' money and making life difficult for one of the great companies of the technological age whose continued existence is of paramount importance for the economy of the United States and the progress of global freedom. Bill and Paul took a chance way back when, in the true spirit of American entrepreneurship, when computers were the toys of academia. Now Microsoft is being punished because they have been successful beyond anyone's dreams or imagination.

Yes, I have a vested interest in Microsoft. It is the heart of our retirement plan. Stop jerking Mr. Gates around just because some whiners didn't take risks when the Internet Age was in its infancy. That is the real reason there is only one truly capable operating system for computers in the world today.

Affirmative action is of the past—be it for people or corporations. Countless millions have been spent for lawyers in this matter so far. This should not become another AT & T attorney welfare scam.

Hands off Microsoft!

Robert Westerberg, faithful shareholder since 1998.

MTC-00008714

From: Dillon Dale Civ OC-ALC/LGPA
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 2:30pm
Subject: Comment on settlement

Dear sir or madam

Please be advised that I do not agree with the current settlement as proposed by the Dept of Justice.

In summary, what I see is this, Microsoft owns the only trainstation, that is the OS. It knows where it layed the tracks and how the tracks operate, (internal workings of OS) this gives them a HUGE advantage on software development. No one else knows this as well as Microsoft and it protects and uses this knowledge to it's sole advantage.

I am by trade an accountant. I have dabbled in computer systems for years, learning to program in various programming languages. I can remember Microsofts first set of side products that had direct impact on me.

QuickBasic was the applications name, it was a wonderful product and it was all due to competition with Borland and the great programs that they had. (Borland lost a lot of ground when Microsoft switched from DOS to Windows version 95. Borland no longer makes a Basic programming language.)

I can remember the big switch when Microsoft introduced it's Windows operating system and it's suite of Office products. Suddenly the things that I knew the most lotus, peachal, supercal etc... spreadsheets disappeared from the store shelves. Everyone had to learn a new interface, you couldn't share spreadsheets because of all the things Microsoft did to make it hard to switch from their product to other products. (This was no doubt by design and still is by design.) Microsoft now totally dominates the market when it comes to spreadsheets, but they still lag behind some of the original spreadsheets ability.

Where our office went from lotus and supercal we acquired more work, not less, MS Excel created more keystrokes for us and a decrease in productivity. The macro ability was greatly reduced and it created for us a very large problem, we had to basically carry two spreadsheets. One DOS based from ages ago and the other Windows related (MS Excel). In short we still have not upgraded the majority of our spreadsheets because Excel does not do as good of job.

In our office we use programs that where written in Basic or GWbasic many years ago. This ability and language was provided by Microsoft or IBM with the purchase of an OS many years ago. Microsoft no longer provides this type of program with the purchase of the OS, I admit I do find it strange that they will add an internet browser for free, but won't keep a language that was a standard feature of the OS for years and years. I am currently writing Java based programs to replace the programs written in Basic or GWbasic many years ago. If Microsoft is allowed to drive Java out of business or goes to big lengths to make sure it does not work with it's system then nothing I can do will replace those programs that we do business with now. I do not have the money to buy the solution from Microsoft. If you pay close attention to the Government you will find that a lot of Government facilities are now stuck with the older version of Internet Explorer (version 5.5 service pack 2), because a lot of Government pages are written to work with Java. The newer version of IE (version 6) will not work with Java. Why would Microsoft do this? Is it now the most efficient product when viewing the web? How much will the Government have to spend to correct these problems? Or will the Government be stuck using Windows 5.5 with service pack 2 until MS decides it won't want to support it any longer? If they give it away as part of the OS package, then it shouldn't be a tool used to destroy the business of others. It should be made to work with other things out there.

To me it is just like buying an OS for a computer that says it is designed for use in any IBM compatible PC, but it won't work with Seagate Hard Drives because our company owns Western Digital. BTW it's about the only OS available as it has driven every other OS out of the market, used it's OS to capture market share it does not deserve, because of unfair competition and it's insider knowledge on the OS. How does it benefit the public? We have seen that the courts ruled it was a monopoly.

Now it's up to you the DOJ to fix the tracks so that other trains can run in and out of that trainstation without being derailed, your settlement leaves a lot to be desired and actually rewards Microsoft, does not force them to retreat from the practices that have hurt so many in the past and cripples innovation.

Dale Dillon

MTC-00008715

From: Michael
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:39pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sirs and Madams:

It has come to my attention that nine misdirected states are attempting to thwart the Department of Justice's proposed settlement with Microsoft. After reading the proposed remedies, I have concluded that these are fair and beneficial to the consumer in the long run. In the short run, it will serve to employ hundreds of lawyers to determine what courses of action are acceptable for the company to pursue.

When the nine states continue to whine about these remedies not being enough, they are truly letting their ignorance, lack of understanding of the market, and greed show through. As an example: Apple makes the only "crash proof" desktop computer on the market. Apple has a 100% market share for that market. Apple refuses to allow other vendors to manufacture compatible "crash proof" hardware. This Apple monopoly locks out any and all competitors, raises the market price of Apple hardware, reduces the market share of "crash proof" systems, and hence due to that minimal market size, discourages developers from creating competing products for the Apple platform. Each of these steps TRULY harms consumers. Were it not for these foolish policies, Apple would be a true competitor to Microsoft compatible computers today.

In the days of the USSR (command & control) where only the government made automobiles, were they the best buys in the country for a good reason? Yes, it was due to their being the only automobile available to the few that could afford them. If the dissenting states were truly worried about consumers and competition, they would be working through the DOJ to force Apple to open their market. The fact they are not simply demonstrates their ulterior motives.

The last 2 large anti-trust cases in U.S. history (AT & T, and IBM) had the unintended and ugly effect of turning these two symbols of American technology into bumbling giants void of any current serious innovation. Please look at the meaningless shell that is now AT & T before you decide to drag this case on further.

Best regards,

Michael Patrick Chaffey, OCP, CPA
17516 NE 138th St.
Redmond, WA 98052

DISCLOSURE NOTE: I own less than 1000 shares of Microsoft stock, and have used the company's software products for over 10 years.

MTC-00008717

From: john himes
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:46pm
Subject: microsoft

Please let the microsoft settlement stand and let our economy recover. This recession started the day Judge Jackson tried to break up microsoft. It was a stupid move then and remains the same today.

Thank you
John E. Himes
102 Melvin Ave.
Catonsville Md.
21228

MTC-00008718

From: Lynn B. Boman Jr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear United States Department of Justice,
I am writing you today to express my feelings in regards to the settlement reached between Microsoft and the Department of Justice on November 2nd. I am anxious to see this dispute resolved, so I oppose further action against Microsoft. This settlement is fair, contains provisions that foster competition, and is good for the technology industry. Microsoft has pledged to share more information with other companies and give consumers more choices. Under this agreement, Microsoft must design future versions of Windows to make it easier to install non-Microsoft software and must disclose information about certain internal interfaces in Windows.

The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Thank you for your time,
Lynn B Boman Jr.

MTC-00008719

From: Chris Long
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 2:57pm
Subject: microsoft problem
hi there:

I was told that I could send an email to you, offering up my 2 cents worth on the microsoft fiasco—I believe that this company's business practices are beyond irresponsible—I would go so far as to say that their pure greed has put them in a position wherein one of their biggest goals is to squash any and all competition—which I think is a sorry state of affairs at best. with the situation as it stands now we have a STUPIDLY HUGE percentage of the computer software being controlled by one company: microsoft. apple remains the only real competition. the LOSERS are consumers like myself—who KNOWS where we might be today if microsoft had acted legally over these past years?

Since microsoft has already been found guilty of multiple antitrust law violations, my opinion is that they should receive an extremely harsh penalty indeed; as severe as possible within the limits of the law. what I've read of the current situation (a fair bit) only shows the government willing to settle for a light 'slap on the wrist'.

Let's have some JUSTICE!!!

Thanks for listening,
Chris long

MTC-00008720

From: DallasFlwr@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:00pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
TO DOJ,

IT IS TIME TO SETTLE THE MICROSOFT CASE. THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT BROUGHT FORTH BY THE DOJ AND NINE STATES SEEMS MORE THAN ENOUGH. I HAVE HAD A HARD TIME UNDERSTANDING HOW THE CONSUMER HAS BEEN HARMED. DID WE PAY TOO MUCH FOR MICROSOFT PRODUCTS? REPORTS IN THE MEDIA STATE WE MAY HAVE OVERPAID 20 TO 30 DOLLARS FOR WINDOWS. IF IT'S AN ISSUE OF THIS AMOUNT, PERHAPS THE INDIVIDUAL HAS MORE PROBLEMS THAN OWNING A COMPUTER. THE CONSUMER IS ME. THIS

LITIGATION WILL NOT HELP ME IN ANY WAY. I DID NOT ASK FOR IT AND I DON'T WANT IT.

LET'S BE HONEST, THIS IS ABOUT MICROSOFT'S COMPETITION ALWAYS LAGGING BEHIND THE CURVE. ALL THEY NEED TO DO IS BUILD A BETTER MOUSE TRAP. THIS CASE HAS HURT OUR ECONOMY AND INVESTORS. IF IT DOESN'T END NOW, I'M GOING TO BLAME SOME PEOPLE AND NOT BUY THEIR PRODUCTS...NOT VOTE FOR THEM ETC. WHO'S GOVERNMENT IS THIS ANYWAY? IF WE DON'T STOP THIS CASE NOW, PERHAPS THE DOOR WILL OPEN FURTHER FOR AN OVERSEAS COMPETITOR..THINK AIRBUS !

GIL HODGES , REGISTERED VOTER.

MTC-00008721

From: Robert Steffy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dears Sirs:

I support the comprehensive agreement reached with the U.S. Government and Microsoft Corp.. I think the agreement is fair and will finally end this costly and non-productive litigation. Please consider my opinion as you make your decision on this matter.

Sincerely;
Robert M. Steffy,
Holtwood, Pa

MTC-00008722

From: Dan Van Fleet
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I've been involved in the computer industry from before Microsoft became a widely known company. I remember the 640K capability of DOS, being what seemed like more than we would ever need, I admired and respected Microsoft at that point. My how times have changed.

Today, I find Microsoft's actions to be horrid. I feel much like a young child in Chicago when he finds out that nice man down the street is actually a mob boss. The child asks his mother, "That man, he kills people?", his mother responds yes he does. The child, afraid, still smiles when the man says hi, he takes a bit of candy when offered, so to not upset the boss. Microsoft is that boss, ISV's and users are the children.

Through my daily dealings with Microsoft software, I've felt Microsoft was unfairly using it's power to force it's products on the public. That has now been proven in court, the proposed settlement is not a solution. Microsoft has already ignored a similar solution, and lied about it through demonstrations in court. Don't let them do it again.

Further, please do not let the actions of 9/11 cause you to go easy on Microsoft, that would be a travesty of justice. Microsoft is currently using those events to attain their goals, don't let them do it. It is a pity that Judge Jackson, so horrified by the testimony, spoke out of turn, don't let Microsoft take advantage of his mistake.

Sincerely,

Dan Van Fleet
IT Director
Dayton, Ohio

MTC-00008723

From: Hanaleisrf@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:14pm
Subject: Stop the idiocy of litigating against innovation

Please stop spending my tax dollars to litigate against Microsoft.

MTC-00008724

From: Philip Robbins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Department of Justice:

Please settle the Microsoft case with all states and let us, as the President said, get on with our lives. We, at this critical time in our country, do not need one more thing to drag down our economy.

Thank you for considering my comments.
Philip J, Robbins
36 Rock Hill Lane
Fort Thomas, KY 41075

MTC-00008725

From: Dkmar1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:20pm
Subject: Settlement

The Microsoft case should be settled as soon as possible.
D.K. Martin dkmar@aol.com

MTC-00008726

From: DavidatEH@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Sirs,

This letter is written in support of the Microsoft Settlement with the hope that the already negotiated agreement will be finalized so that all parties will be bound by it and therefore complete the agreement forthwith. It is important that Microsoft competitors and some misguided states attorneys general are forced to comply with the already negotiated settlement and finish this protracted bloodletting at once.

Respectfully,
David C. Mactye, M.D.,
PO Box 50, West Bloomfield, NY 14618
716-370-0361

MTC-00008727

From: Dennis Gignac
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I would like to let you know that I have been following this case since the very beginning and have written to the Wisconsin State DOJ a number of times expressing my opinion on the subject. I find it very satisfying that now that there appears to be an end to this mess it is very close to my original opinion. Anyway, I am completely in favor of the current settlement arrangement and I feel strongly that Microsoft has not harmed me in anyway with their actions in the past. I will agree that Microsoft has taken a hard line with computer companies and although I see no real anti-trust I will concede that the USDOJ most likely knows that laws much better than I do. I will say that my opinion is that Microsoft has done more to protect the software industry and end users with the stance they have taken then damage they may have done to competitors.

Anyway, I am strongly in favor of the settlement and it is time allow Microsoft to get on with their work of adding more features into their operating systems at will.

Thank you
Dennis Gignac
Brookfield, WI

MTC-00008728

From: TwoVirgos@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:27pm
Subject: Opinion

We are in favor of the settlement worked out with Microsoft.

Marlene & Alan Feinstein

MTC-00008729

From: Rollie Schmidt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern at U.S. Dept. Of Justice,

I have worked in the computer industry for nearly 28 years. I have seen many things come and go since the early-to-mid 70's. One of the most ridiculous things I have witnessed it this incessant hounding of Microsoft. Why? They are successful. Get over it. Why are they successful? They build good products for which the public willingly exchanges value in the form of legal tender. Again, gladly in the manner in which they (the public and businesses) do so.

Have you ever gone to an Office Depot or Staples or whatever store and seen anyone pushing people into the aisle with MSFT products? Any in hammer locks being forced to buy MSFT products while the Apple side of the aisle (or usually completely different aisle for Apple since there needs to be a whole aisle just for MSFT binaries) is nearly vacant? So you have choice, you have a free market, you have people voting by the millions with their checkbooks for MSFT products. I have used Sun Microsystems machines, which I consider better than most Intel-based machines for many tasks. I can and will use them when needed. The Sun Solaris operating system is excellent. In many cases better than Windows2000 or any other OS. There are a number of great applications. If there were not why would SUNW be a multi-billion dollar commercial success? I have Linux at my disposal on my Intel-based systems as well. I can run that and have. It's good for a lot of things. It has applications too. People run them. In many cases they are even free. You get what you pay for. That's why I have CHOSEN to buy Microsoft products for all my family's home needs. It's why I use them on my business laptop as well. They work and they work very well.

Why not consider this and stop wasting my and other taxpayers' money by hounding

MSFT any further? Jealousy of their success is just some warped commercial form of class envy. Let someone else step up and do a better job than Microsoft and they market will take care of itself. Please get closure on this Microsoft litigation and free them to focus on doing their fair share, which they likely are more than willing to do, and channel their valuable resources into helping to get the economy into high gear again. Hounding Microsoft any further is wasteful of taxpayer resources, wasteful of Microsoft and Microsoft shareholder resources and just generally bad for everyone.

Thanks much,
Roland Schmidt
Auburn, CA 95602

MTC-00008730

From: Aaron Freed
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:34pm
Subject: Microsoft

I am a systems administrator and have been for 15 years. I have held an MCSE since 1999.

I have been working with Microsoft products since Dos 2.11, and since Windows 3.0. I have worked with all versions of Windows NT starting with version 3.50 and up through the current version of Windows XP.

I have spent many, many hours with Microsoft products, learning them, supporting them, trouble-shooting them.

I have been involved with Linux (RedHat) on a serious level since Version 7.1 (on a less serious level, since Version 6.2).

With Microsoft, when there is a problem, I find that the solution is about 70% trying to figure out what the right menu option or button is to select to elicit a dialog that allows me to change the desired settings. 20% of the time is spent trying to find away around Microsoft's attempts to prevent me from "doing something dangerous, that might harm my software". And 10% of the time, I am actually resolving the problem.

The key to troubleshooting Microsoft problems seems to be in rote memorization of menu-options, dialogs and buttons needed to change a desired setting.

The key, with Linux, is usually a matter of editing a script or possibly recoding some software or component, which generally requires not only an understanding of why the problem happened, but also how the "fix" for it works—or at least knowing that you have access to the source code and other documentation that will help you to understand how the fix works, why it works, and how the program being fixed works.

In short, it is something like the difference between knowing how to go to the store and purchase a loaf of cake, versus knowing how to actually make a cake from scratch (with documented and usually fairly clearly explained instructions).

Microsoft is a closed system, a "black box", if you will. You generally put in your data and you get a result, but you really don't know how that result is generated. And when that result is not what is expected or desired, your recourses for figuring out why are quite limited, because you aren't allowed inside the "black box".

Linux, on the other hand, is an open system. Like Microsoft, you put in your data and get a result out. However, if the result is not what is desired, or expected, you have the option of taking apart the "black box" and tinkering with its internal workings to make it work the way you want it to.

Microsoft charges you for the privilege of using their software—their marketing effort focused primarily on emphasizing the claim that MS is easy to use and that "if you know one program, you pretty much know them all."

Linux makes no such claim. Nor are you ever charged for it. However, with a little know-how and a willingness to learn and try to understand, what you give up in a generic, standardized interface, you more than make up for in terms of control of your system and your data. And, surprisingly, it is not very difficult to customize your system to make it just as 'generically easy to use' as Windows. (Frequently even more so.)

Now, Microsoft wants to offer us the ".Net" option, where we completely surrender control of our system to them in the form of paying a monthly or yearly subscription fee to "rent" their software. Ostensibly, this alleviates the need for upgrades, maintenance, and troubleshooting on the part of the end-user. In truth, it removes the "ownership" of the user's data from him, because, should the user decide not to renew this "subscription" to Microsoft's ".Net" service, they will find that they can no longer access their data because it is stored in formats understood only by Microsoft.Net programs.

Not only are we being asked to surrender control of our computers to Microsoft, we are being asked to surrender control of our personal data. And, on top of that, we are being required to pay Microsoft a monthly fee for the privilege!

Slavery is one thing. Asking the slaves to pay for the privilege of being enthralled to a master who hardly has their best interests at heart is just plain stupid.

I choose not to be part of this.

I choose an operating system that does not require daily reboots just to keep running properly.

I choose not to spend hours of my time trying to navigate through installation routines that have been made Byzantine in their complexity—in order to protect Microsoft's software license.

I choose not to use an operating system and software applications that were designed with the assumption that I not only don't know what I am doing, but also that I am too stupid to learn.

I choose not to be required to call Microsoft and inform them of every significant change I make to my hardware.

I choose not to be an unwitting "beta test site" for products that have not been properly quality controlled because it was deemed more important to rush the product out the door in order to make a few extra sales.

I choose Linux.

I choose FREEDOM.

With Linux, when there is a problem, I find Aaron Freedcyclopes@mediaone.net netadmin-voicesignal.comafreed@voicesignal.com

"The truth is out there... But I have no idea who left it there, nor why."

MTC-00008731

From: ereomnscom
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:37pm
Subject: Dear Sir,

Dear Sir,

It is very important that the case is settled once and for all. I don't think Microsoft did anything wrong. This Country was build on free enterprize and the freedom to inovate products and to have a patent on the products they they invent. No one can just come along and try to get in on the product to make money..

That is wrong.

Liz Reo

506 S. Owen

Mt. Prospect, Illinois 60056

ereomnscom@email.msn.com

847 398 6151

MTC-00008732

From: dgsfox@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The is a bought prosecution...And a shame to our country.

MTC-00008733

From: Flipboggs@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the Microsoft settlement is fair. That company is a national treasure. There is no question that without the technology that they delivered to us, I and many others would not be as computer capable as we are now.

Phil Boggs

MTC-00008734

From: Roger Reece
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing to express my support of the November 2, 2001 settlement between the US Department of Justice and Microsoft. The last thing the country needs is our benevolent government spending additional time and resources pursuing Microsoft that ultimately benefits competitors who are using the legal system in stead of superior products to defeat Microsoft in the market place. There are more important issues for the government to address. Our economy is on a down slope, unemployment is on the rise, public health and related legacy environmental issues need to be acted on, and money laundering is requiting greater amounts of manpower with its increasing threat as food for ciminal endeavors.

The US should stay focused on the events of the recent past and wake up to the fact that petty legal means to chip away at Microsoft's hard-won success benefits none but a few. Common knowledge is that international criminals have us in their crosshairs; what rights have Microsoft so violated to deserve such scrutiny? Microsoft, if anything, is at the forefront helping individuals and the country realize our potential through leading edge technology, philanthropy and enterprise also benefiting Microsoft's employees, vendors and end-users that span the country and the globe.

Under the terms of the settlement, Microsoft has accepted to undergo major changes in the way they conduct business. It includes the following: Granting new rights to computer manufactures to configure their systems to access various Windows features as they see fit.

Microsoft must design future versions of Windows to make it easier to install non-Microsoft software.

The DOJ will create an ongoing technical oversight committee. It will have access to various Microsoft trade secrets and intellectual property—a painful right to ownership for any company to give up.

Finally, the settlement negates the rights of no one as competitors can still sue Microsoft if they feel Microsoft isn't complying with these terms. Please settle these legal actions under the current agreed terms and redirect your energies to the slim that is out to distroy America.

MTC-00008735

From: John Peter
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 3:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Friends:

I am writing to support the Microsoft settlement. I am a 4th grade teacher and a building computer contact in our district. Our school, along with others would welcome any and all help for our technology program. Because of budget cuts, our entire computer budget relies solely on our state TEACH grant which amounts to about $40,000. The inservice portion of our budget is gone, and almost no training takes place. Hardware and software budgets are about one fourth of 3 years ago. Please settle this agreement and help us and other schools.

Thank you for your consideration.

Have a GREAT DAY!

John Peter

Spooner Elementary School

1821 Scribner

Spooner, WI 54801

(715) 635-2174 ext. 1227

(715) 635-7984 FAX

Every Child Deserves a GREAT School!

CC:BarthL@WEAC.org@inetgw

MTC-00008736

From: tnjb123
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 4:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough is enough! Let's get on with the Microsoft settlement. In the interest of the economy and all parties concerned, pandering to crybaby competitors and special interest groups needs to stop. It is in all citizen's interest to stop the litigation.

Respectfully,

Thomas J. Barbercheck

321 Mary Drive

New Albany, IN 47150

MTC-00008737

From: Lawto@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 4:03pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think you all would be well advised to drop this case forthwith.

Larry Townsend

MTC-00008738

From: PontoR@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 4:10pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

We understand that the District Court is accepting public comment regarding the Microsoft Settlement. It is in this regard that we submit the following. We strongly believe that the settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. We further believe that this entire action over nearly four years, has been motivated and sustained not by consumer interest or demand, but has been due to the aggressive efforts of a few special interests, primarily Microsoft's competitors. The spinoff effect of this activity has negatively impacted the American economy and has not been of benefit to consumers.

We urge that the District Court accepts this settlement. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation on this matter, that may benefit only a few competitors, while further damaging consumers.

Sincerely,

Mr. & Mrs. Roger W. Ponto

8611 NE 26th Place

Bellevue WA 98004

Phone: 452.453.1979

Fax: 425.453.2595

E-mail: pontor@aol.com

MTC-00008739

From: Tony Domit

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 4:16pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer and engineer who has worked in the computer industry for over 35 years, I support and encourage Microsoft to continue innovating in the world of high tech. As a consumer, I am delighted with the price, performance, and ease of use they provide with their software. This is particularly the case when comparing their current offerings to those available ten years ago and earlier.

My understanding is that DOJ's antitrust responsibilities are to protect the consumer. I, and nearly every user of Microsoft products I have ever spoken with are delighted with their products. I don't believe it is DOJ's responsibilities to level the competitive playing field nor do I buy the allegations that Microsoft's practices have stifled competition at the expense of the consumer.

I believe the DOJ's current proposed remedies are more than adequate to punish Microsoft for their intense competitive practices and would like to see an end put to all the ?lawyering? particularly by many of the state attorney generals.

Sincerely,

Tony Domit

MTC-00008740

From: Mohammad Nawaz

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 4:17pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The DOJ settlement with Microsoft is in the right direction. I do agree with the settlement and hope to get this thing over soon.

Regards,

Mohammad Nawaz

779 Wood Ave

Edison, NJ—08820

MTC-00008741

From: Mike Thibodeau

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 4:23pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Our economy is always thriving in proportion to how Free it is. Please keep your Hands Off!! Microsoft has improved the standard of living for everyone in the US, more than anyone ever cares to acknowledge. But more important is the principle—this is supposed to be a Free Market!

Thanks,

Mike Thibodeau

Derry NH 03038

603-234-7411

Mike Thibodeau

mthibodeau@mediaone.net

<http://people.ne.mediaone.net/mthibodeau>

MTC-00008742

From: Perry

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 4:31pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Attn: Dept. of Justice

The Tunney settlement of the Microsoft debacle is fair and equitable. It doesn't destroy any one or any business. It evens the playing field as far as laws are concerned. Let the detractors create their own platform. Lets get on with the economy and business. By the way, if you want to stifle someones business do it to the Chinese. Fair Trade Status for them is a joke.

Perry Arnold

Chandler, AZ

MTC-00008743

From: Dwdiet@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 4:39pm

Subject: Settle with Microsoft

Close out this case in favor of Microsoft 100%. Let the market place prevail. Let free enterprise ring.

MTC-00008745

From: Jane D. Alley

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 4:55pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle this case as soon as possible without further litigation.

MTC-00008746

From: Ken Landon

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 5:02pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As a consumer of Microsoft's and other companies' software products, I would like to comment on the proposed Microsoft settlement.

I was saddened and dismayed that the Department of Justice chose to prosecute Microsoft in the first place. I find Microsoft's products to be extremely valuable in both my career and my home use. The company has earned its dominant position in the market. It is every American's right—including the people who own and operate Microsoft—to be left free to "sink or swim" in the marketplace. And it is my right as a citizen of the United States to be allowed to patronize Microsoft without the interference of court-imposed antitrust restrictions on the company.

I respectfully urge the Department of Justice to drop all charges against Microsoft. Microsoft is a great American company that should be left free to operate without any antitrust restrictions.

Sincerely,

Kenneth Landon

200 Clinton Street

Brooklyn, NY 11201

718-694-0226

MTC-00008747

From: VINCENT PENZO

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 5:04pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

My only comment on the settlement is—there shouldn't be any. In fact, there shouldn't have been any prosecution to begin with. The government was created to protect people's rights, not tell productive businessmen how to run their companies. Bill Gates has every right to produce and sell his products on his own terms—with those who wish to do business with him. Anyone who doesn't like it can try to build a better mouse-trap. Enough whining from lesser-able competitors! As for consumers—remember when PC's cost $10,000? Leave Bill alone!

The DOJ should have spent those millions of dollars all through '90s on something important—like tracking down the Islamic fundamentalist's money laundering schemes.

Let's put the 'Justice' back in the 'DOJ'!

Sincerely,

Vincent Penzo

Everett, MA

vpenzo@rcn.com

MTC-00008748

From: GARFOOT, ROGER D

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 5:06pm

Subject: Opposition to Microsoft Anti-trust Settlement

I do not believe the DOJ negotiated settlement will protect any group (consumer, manufacturer, software developer) from Microsoft's ability to extend their existing monopolies in desktop operating systems and office productivity suites into new areas such as server operating systems, internet infrastructure and middleware. Microsoft's control of the API's for the monopoly supported operating system (OS) allows them to tie new products (middleware, frameworks, etc.) into the OS in ways that other developers can not match. Once its in the OS, competing products don't stand much chance. It is far from a level competitive playing field when developing software products that compete with Microsoft. A prime example is Microsoft's lack of support for Java in Windows XP.

Microsoft found room to include all their language runtimes, middleware, partner applications, etc. in Windows XP but claims including a Java JVM would make the OS too large. Come on, as delivered by Microsoft Windows XP is already approximately 1.5 GB. The Java JVM is only about 5 MB.

Microsoft also made it much more difficult to add plug-ins into Windows XP and Internet Explorer (IE) which discourages use of competing technologies. Java has always been a threat to requiring everyone to run Windows OS and has been attacked by Microsoft in much the same way as Microsoft attacked Netscape. When Microsoft could not embrace, extend and extinguish Java, they blocked improvements and developed their own Java clone.

Microsoft is an abusive monopolist in the same way in which Standard Oil was an abusive monopolist. The proposal by the nine states not agreeing to this settlement is much more likely to prevent additional abuses.

As an IT professional, I know that the biggest reasons Microsoft is able to maintain their monopoly in corporate desktop OS's is the integration of desktop Windows and Windows servers, Microsoft Outlook integration with Exchange and the lack of availability of Microsoft Office on platforms such as Linux and UNIX. The proposed DOJ settlement will do nothing to rectify this situation and allow increased consumer/corporate choice in desktop OS's

Roger D. Garfoot
Computer Applications Engineer
T&D Computing—Application Development
Omaha Public Power District
444 S. 16th St. Mall
(Mailstop: 6W/EP3)
Omaha, NE 68102-2247
Phone: (402) 636-3175
Fax: (402) 636-3947
Email: rgarfoot@oppd.com

MTC-00008751

From: william scott
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,
It seems to me that the Microsoft settlement is sufficient and adequate. Plus enough tax money has been expended trying to stifle a successful company.

Sincerely,
W.I. Scott

MTC-00008752

From: Bob Coleman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:21pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen:

I applaud your efforts to settle the Microsoft issue. My opinion on the entire matter is that failed competitors used the US justice system to enhance their business position to the detriment of consumers and to the detriment of the information industry.

We needed a cheap, stable, common system which Microsoft provided. The initial suit was unwarranted. The proposed settlement by the DOJ and MS is much more punitive to MS than what I consider fair, but if it brings this issue to closure, I can see its merits.

MTC-00008753

From: FRANK MACK
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This matter has dragged on far too long and I urge the settlement go forward with no further delay.

MTC-00008754

From: arnebBronton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Dear General Aschcroft:
Freedom comes in many forms, freedom of speech, freedom of worship, however, this great Country used to have freedom to innovate, create and develop processes that benefited all of mankind, the developer as well as the general public worldwide. Unfortunately, the Justice Department, under former President Clinton, attacked Microsoft, a company that revolutionized the industrial world. What used to take days can now be accomplished in minutes. Such innovation of course, also enhanced the company's share value which benefited all of its shareholders, those visible and those not so visible in 401K's, IRA's, pension plans, etc. Unfortunately, when the Government continues its attacks on companies such as Microsoft and the like, the desire to create and invest becomes stifled. Just look to Europe when governments controlled development.

I know we have a now have a President who looks to the future and wants to encourage further development. I am sorry to say that I feel we still have a number of narrow minded people in the Justice Department and with nine State's Attorneys who have the mind set of if I have 6 they are entitled to 3 whether they have invested in risk, market, innovation or not. This type of thinking should have been abolished with the fall of the Berlin Wall as it has no longer a place in a free society.

I respectfully solicit your assistance in ridding our Country of these frivolous lawsuits that is harming companies, and millions of hardworking taxpayers, investors and retirees.

Sincerely,
Anne Bronton
4724 Oak Leaf Drive
Naples, FL 34119
CC:fin@mobilizationoffice.com@inetgw

MTC-00008755

From: John R. Simmons
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:35pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To those having challenges:
How long must this go on? As a private user of Microsoft operating systems since DOS originated, for me 1975?? Microsoft has been most cooperative in solving any challenges that I have had. Just because they have been successful in developing good systems and continuing to do so, why must government keep anyone from doing so?

This computer is my 4th computer with each having Microsoft's operating systems. Currently have Windows XP. It is about time we stop interfering in the lives of corporations and individuals who are intuitive to getting ahead of the crowds.
Deacon John

MTC-00008756

From: William Stone
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I was pleased with the Nov 2nd settlement agreement in the Microsoft antitrust suit . . . the settlement seems reasonable and well thought-out . . . it requires significant changes in how Microsoft develops and markets its products.

I believe that revisiting the settlement and/or further litigation will have a negative impact on our economy, slowing its recovery and is basically a last ditch effort by Microsoft's competitors to further curtail the company's operations.....with the troubled condition of our economy and budgets, it does not make sense to spend more time and money on a settled lawsuit.

William Stone
82 River Dr.
Appleton, WI 54915

MTC-00008757

From: Pat Tormey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:45pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I'm a software developer who's small business depends heavily on Microsoft products.

I would like the DOJ to settle this matter as quickly as possible.

In a capitalist economy the people "vote" with their wallets and the people have already voted in favor of Microsoft. We Like them! They are good for business. Small businesses depend on the affordable tools provided by Microsoft. If we didn't, then we would buy our tools from the other guy.

The DOJ is not protecting the consumer they are only shielding other large businesses from the free market.

Thanks to the DOJ's efforts to "help", we now have serious instability in the economy. The DOJ's efforts have severely damaged millions of retirement plans and pushed thousands of small businesses out of existence. AND STILL Sun Micro Systems reports "Net loss for the first quarter was $158 million" and Netscape can't even GIVE AWAY its Internet browser. Let's face it, these guys cannot compete even with the DOJ's thumb on the scales of justice.

DOJ, please settle this action as soon as you can. Your efforts to "help" the consumer are killing us off.

Pat Tormey PE
www.FourSquare.com

MTC-00008758

From: Ron Rouse
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:36pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

No more litigation, enough is enough.

MTC-00008759

From: joseph a santillo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:48pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to applaud the settlement which was reached. As a consumer, I believe that the settlement will provide benefits to me. Further, I think that the economy in general will benefit.

Sincerely,
Joe Santillo,
Gouldsboro, PA.

MTC-00008760

From: Judy Ponto
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:57pm
Subject: freedom

Our freedom in the USA does guarantee our right to free speech and to enterprise. This should also include innovation and mfst has strived for innovation through their products.

Judy Ponto
jodbob@nwinfo.net

MTC-00008761

From: Judy Ponto
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Americans have always had a freedom of speech. Msft has used innovation to the nth degree for their customers. Please listen to our plea for continued innovation without government control.

Judy Ponto
jodbob@nwinfo.net

MTC-00008762

From: tjok@pocketmail.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 5:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a private citizen and a small investor, I believe that Microsoft has already paid a high price for alledged wrong doing. I believe that Microsoft is only being victimized by its success in the marketplace.

Any further action against Microsoft is totally unfair.

MTC-00008763

From: Emfman@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:03pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

please leave microsoft alone!!!! they produce a product that millions use at a bargian price. this attact has hurt the economy and dirupted thier pursiut of future products.

guy e estes stockholder
thank you.

MTC-00008764

From: jwhsm@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:06pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I believe that the settlement is fair and good for the U.S.A. Lets get on with the other important issues in our country.

j.w. moore

6967 gates rd
gates mills, ohio 44040

MTC-00008765

From: USER9679@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:12pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I am against any prosecution against Microsoft. The PC as it is today is the result of this company. All the inovations have been made by them and I for one am very glad to be a part of this company. Think again

MTC-00008766

From: Pat (038) Jim Ferguson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please settle this settlement once and for all. The government will only be acting in the people's interest if this problem is stopped. Can't lawyers find something better to do with their time?

Pat Ferguson

MTC-00008767

From: Hugh Roberts
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To all Anti-Trust, Anti-Microsoft supporters:

What you are doing to Microsoft is worse than what bin Laden did to the Twin Towers. Your target is obviously the same as his: US Capitalism. Drop all further action against Microsoft and go back into your AntiTrust caves. Rejoice in the totally evil and irrational damage you've already inflicted on the US economy and Microsoft. You and the Taliban can celebrate together.

Hugh Roberts
3636 New Karleen Road
Hephzibah, GA 30815

MTC-00008768

From: Gary P. Beck
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:17pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please back off this company. They are operating in a free market society.

Thank you.
Gary Beck

MTC-00008769

From: Fred Oberkamp
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement??

To Whom it May Concern:
After review of the alleged "Microsoft Settlement", I am simply amazed. I have been in management and management consulting in the Information Technologies industry for over 25 years and this settlement is about as close to a whitewash as anything I have ever seen.

Microsoft has been "licking its chops" for the education market for years and you are willing to give it to them with this settlement. Schools are the training ground for young minds. What our children learn in school will be carried out into the business world with them. You are giving Microsoft the absolute and undisputed authority to monopolize this market with their "free" give away. I cannot wait to see Microsoft's advertising campaign in about a year when they can legitimately claim that they have been "selected" by 100% of the schools in the country as their Operating System of choice, thanks to your settlement. This does not even consider that most of the refurbished equipment that Microsoft has proposed to give to the schools will probably not be compatible with its newer Operating Systems. Schools being as tight with budgets as they are known to be will probably spend a fortune upgrading the equipment rather than just get rid of it like they should.

You are also opening up all of our schools to hackers with this settlement. This is due to the well-documented (and possibly as of yet unfound) security "holes" in the current Microsoft Operating Systems. Just what this country needs is to have our school systems spending millions of dollars to fight electronic invasions. Has anyone considered how devastating that could be to this country?

Furthermore, Microsoft continues to gobble up small software companies that would have been their competition. At this time, that can only be blamed on the greed of the owners of those companies and Microsoft's total disregard for any previous agreement they may have had to cease their predatory practices with the Department of Justice.

It is my personal opinion and that of many others I have spoken with, that we, the American taxpayers and citizens, have been sold down the river with this proposed settlement. If this process is allowed to continue, this settlement will only serve to make it appear to the normal citizen that enough money can buy its own justice. That may seem like a rather harsh statement, but companies like AT&T have gone through far more serious penalties than this proposed settlement even comes close to and they have survived quite well.

Thank you for your time,
F.J. Oberkamp

MTC-00008770

From:
john.rosengarten@pacebus.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement Public

Comment

May it please the court:

I am a systems professional and actually install, configure, maintain and support the products made by Microsoft and other software publishers. I work for a transit agency and am not a supporter of either side in this case (Microsoft or its rivals: Sun-AOL/Netscape-Oracle-Linux-Apple.) My mission is to keep real users working productively, to manage change and maximize my agency's investments in technology so as to give the taxpayers the best results for every dollar spent on computers and software. I have worked in help desk, LAN security and now Internet Administration for my agency. I have no personal interest in this case and am not affiliated with either camp (MS vs ABM, where ABM=Anyone But Microsoft.)

In short, I understand the delicate balance between software design and real-world usability. While those in the legal profession are increasingly knowledgeable about computer systems, there are some details that must seem capricious and arbitrary. Also, some of the arguments between Microsoft and those in the computer industry who oppose Microsoft have distorted some of the real facts about:

1. the relationship between the operating system and bundled applications
2. availability of API entry points and usage information in the operating system that can be used by programs
3. the benefit of providing internal source code from Microsoft's products
4. the use of monopoly power by Microsoft to stifle its competitors Let me offer some observations about these four issues (I will keep it short, but will gladly provide additional information if asked by the court.)

1. It benefits the consumer when a free application is included. This should be encouraged and Microsoft should not be seen as predatory by bundling Internet Explorer, Messenger, Media Player, Movie Maker or any other software. However, Microsoft should make it easier for users to NOT use their software, or to change their minds. Creating software that is deliberately unstable to make a competitor look bad by making their applications fail is predatory and should be discouraged. These two aspects are connected: if they want to give you a free web browser, fine, but they should allow you to uninstall it, use another product and never sabotage a user's work to gain competitive advantage.

2. An Operating System must have clearly defined entry and exit points for all supported services: connectivity, fax, applications, chat, sound, video, interprocess communication and transparent error messages all rely on system calls and other API resources. To withhold any known API information is anti-competitive. If the systems division writes a "special" interface to optimize an application division program, that is anti-competitive. Any API information available to Microsoft's programmers should be documented publicly (and well!) to benefit the public.

3. Computers that crash can cause loss and even harm. Allowing programming errors (bugs) to remain, or withholding information about the underlying operating system idiosyncrasies from the general public should be penalized. Computers are increasingly used to maintain and monitor critical processes. Someday, even life support systems might rely on Windows internals for stability and correct processing. Opening the source code to all major components would allow peer review and improvement of the whole system.

4. Microsoft's business practices are consistent with American industry, however because of the sheer power that one sole vendor possesses in this market, Microsoft's dictating terms to manufacturers (no discount means a manufacturer suffers a disadvantage that usually puts them out of business) is very bad for consumers. All licenses should be full licenses, no product should be abandoned so Microsoft can sell a newer version. There should be Home and Professional versions, and all Home licenses should be very cheaply (<$20) upgradeable to the current version. Professional versions should be about $50 to upgrade to the current version. Microsoft should not place limitations, stipulations or other coercive mechanisms to force users to buy a new version. If Microsoft is making a free version of an application available to users of the latest OS version, there should also be a comparable program for older systems at the same cost.

Proposed Remedy: The present monopoly can only be remedied by having two companies like Microsoft. One for home, one for business. Microsoft Home: Windows XP Home, MSN, MSNBC, Microsoft games, The Zone, Works, Money, Educational and Entertainment software. Also all hardware mice, game devices, keyboard, etc. Microsoft Business Windows XP Pro, XP Server, Advanced Server, IIS, SQL, Languages, Office Applications (Word, Excel, Powerpoint, Access, Publisher), embedded applications, handheld PCs.

Both companies should offer a one-time upgrade to any user surrendering a Windows license, users must provide name and address and perform some product activation to connect the upgrade to the user. The license should be transferable to new systems owned by the same user. The upgrades should cover the costs to Microsoft but not become a profit center. This remedies the millions of Americans who paid for a working operating system and are still waiting. Both companies would have to specify and coordinate the future of Windows API and services, this information would be public to encourage competitors to Windows. If ever Windows fell to less than 50 percent of market share of new computer sales, this provision would be removed for every subsequent year that Windows constituted less than 50 percent of the market for operating systems.

Both companies would be enjoined from and penalized for anti-competitive behavior, including limiting user rights to compare and publicize any Microsoft product, manipulating manufacturers' rights to install or not install any software, and to sell systems with no operating system at all if they choose. Also, Microsoft must refrain from blatantly lying about competitors as they recently did to Novell. "Fear, Uncertainty and Doubt" are bad for the consumer, bad for the marketplace and ultimately bad for America.

All Operating System API's, including handling of multimedia, files, data and/or network connections must be publicly documented. Sufficient penalty should exist to insure conformance. No Microsoft product should be designed to fail if not used with Microsoft products or products from Microsoft's business partners, present or future. In other words, all programs should have an equal chance of operating properly, and deliberate interference with programs or connections not provided by Microsoft or its partners should constitute a punishable offense.

In summary, let me say that while the law may seem to make this a case between Microsoft and the Department of Justice, it must be remembered that the whole purpose of antimonopoly law is to protect the consumer and the American marketplace. Any solution that leaves Microsoft richer for its use of manipulative licensing, unscrupulous practices, outright rigging of product comparisons or other blatant falsehoods to prevent marketplace competition is unacceptable. Microsoft charged home users to buy Windows 3.0, then again for 3.1, then again for 95 and 98 and 98 SE, then again for ME. I paid for "Windows" six times (eight if you consider that I also bought Windows 386 and Windows for Workgroups.) I paid each time like I was buying a perfected product but never got an OS that did not crash. This is like buying a TV that does not work, waiting for a fix and being told you have to pay for the SAME TV all over again . . . six, seven, eight times!

Business users have also been taken to the cleaners by Microsoft's marketing muscles. I am sure others have noted that Microsoft's EULA promises nothing from Microsoft other than media that is readable, yet requires you to give up all kinds of unrelated rights (like the stipulation that you can not use Windows to compile a list of Windows bugs, mistakes, criticisms of the product or performance comparisons!)

Thank you for this opportunity to offer my opinion,

John Rosengarten
Internet Administrator
MIS Internet Services Pace Suburban Bus Service desk 847 228-2348
fax 847 228-3596
john.rosengarten@pacebus.com

MTC-00008771

From: Brian Ward
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I believe it's time to end the litigation in this matter. A settlement is on the table. For the sake of the economy put this matter to rest.

Brian Ward

MTC-00008772

From: Roberto A.Perez—CARGAMERICAS
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:35pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I THINK THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE SHOULD LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONE AND LET THEM GROW EVEN FURTHER SO THAT NOT ONLY USA BUT THE WHOLE WORLD CAN TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THEIR PROGRESS. I CAN NOT UNDERSTAND THAT BEING GOOD AND SUCCESSFUL SHOULD BE PENALIZED BUT INSTEAD REWARDED SINCE WITHOUT THE MICROSOFT WINDOWS SYSTEM WE ALL WOULD BE YEARS BEHIND IN TECHNOLOGY.

I DO NOT RECEIVE ANY MONEY FROM MICROSOFT BUT I AM A BUSINESSMAN AND I HATE TO SEE MY POSSIBILITIES CUT BECAUSE I HAVE BEEN WORKING HARD AND THEREFORE MY SUCCESS SHOULD BE LIMITED TO THE GOVERNMENT DECISIONS. OF COURSE

THERE ARE OTHER COMPANIES THAT WANT MICROSOFT PENALIZED SIMPLY BECAUSE THEY HAVE NOT HAD THE TECHNOLOGY OR THE KNOW HOW TO DO WHAT MICROSOFT DID. MY ANSWER TO THAT IS: TOUGH LUCK FOR THEM AND THEY SHOULD STRIVE TO BE EVEN BETTER THAN MICROSOFT RATHER THAN LOOKING FOR THE GOVERNMENT TO DO THEIR JOB IN CUTTING THEIR SUCCESS.

VERY TRULY YOURS,
ROBERTO A. PEREZ
10106 S.W. 93RD. PLACE
MIAMI, FLA. 33176

MTC-00008773

From: John Travitzky
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:35pm
Subject: <no subject>

From: John James Travitzky
59727 Drexel Road
Yucca Valley, CA 92284
To: Renata Hesse, Trial Attorney,
Suite 1200, Antitrust Division,
Department of Justice,
601 D Street NW,
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Ms. Hesse;

I am writing this letter in protest of the proposed Microsoft vs. U.S. settlement. I believe that allowing Microsoft to "donate" software/hardware at retail cost is giving them an unfair advantage in the Educational fields. The outcome would most likely be that Microsoft writes off full retail values on any "donations", therefore inflating value of the collection of debt from them. This would be a disservice to both the public, and the government.

The point of "free technical support" is the same as above in reasoning. The "cost" of Microsoft technical support is almost exclusively a maintenance issue, rather than a support issue. What I mean is, When using Windows machines, you almost always have to rely on others to keep your machine running. I have personally done many "repairs" that were nothing more than transferring a couple of letters mistyped in commands, or, in other cases, downloading a driver from an internet source. Other computers historically have needed far less maintenance, tech support, or repairs. The hourly wage charged by Microsoft for "tech support" or repairs could be inflated, therefore giving them another "out" in having to pay the full penalty.

I am extremely concerned with the proposal's "patriotic" overtones... that they (Microsoft) have utilized in the settlement. Microsoft is one of the worlds largest companies, and they are now "offering" to supply our poorest and most undereducated schools with their computers, software, and tech support. While this, in light of our immense needs in the educational fields is a great thing, it is not really an offer, but simply a way to "write off" expenditures that are grossly inflated, pay off the penalty of this crime, and make the company look more humanitarian than they really are. They have been building libraries, offering "free software", and hardware within the educational community since their inception, and still, they are not a leader in this highly competitive market. This brings on my next point.

By allowing Microsoft to "donate" to the educational community in lieu of payment for their crime, you are in essence, forgiving their debt, and allowing them to further their grasp in a field that has been held by their long time business competitor, Apple Computer, Inc. As a 17 year user of both Window based and MacOS based computers, I find it hard to believe this proposed settlement is plausible or legal.

It negates the penalty of the convicted, allows them a further reach into the pockets of their competitor, and, does so at the consumers expense.

By accepting the Microsoft proposal, you would take revenues from one of the most innovative companies in the computer industry. Apple Computers, Inc. They are known and respected in both the educational and business fields as a forerunner... one to look at, and emulate. Windows itself is an emulation, or, to be more precise, a copy of the Mac Graphic user interface. The reason Apple is known as forerunners is because they "look beyond the box". Apple is known for going to great expense for their research and development. Many competitors in the Windows community openly (and proudly) copy the applications, interface design, or characteristics unique to Apple or Mac Computers. . Apple will not be able to continue its innovative and respected history without sales, and, as you know, Apple sells large amounts of computers in the educational market. they are number one in sales for 16 of 17 years in this field. By allowing Microsoft a 1 billion dollar foothold into this field, you are announcing the downfall of a great computer company.

Thank you for allowing me to share my personal feelings on this matter. Please do NOT allow Microsoft to flood our educational market with outdated systems. Do not allow them to "pay" the public back by granting overcharged tech support. Do not allow them to take highly needed sales from their competitors in lieu of debt repayment. Do not grant them leadership in a field that has never been theirs in computing history, at the public's expense. Lastly, and most importantly, do not insult Justice by saying that granting Microsoft these unfair advantages, that they will have paid for their crime.

Respectfully,
John James Travitzky

MTC-00008774

From: HOWMAR
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am concerned about the Tunney Act which is before the District Court for settlement. It appears to me that the settlement agreed to by Microsoft is adequate. It is beyond me why lawyers and weak competitors have so much influence as to affect how a great company, that has done so much to advance the computer and internet, operates. If you will notice the current economic situation and the attack on Microsoft corresponds. The settlement should be completed and this should be put behind us so the economy will move forward.

I live in one of the states that has not signed on to the settlement and I can tell you that this is only because of the idiot that serves as our Attorney General and does not reflect the opinion of the people of West Virginia.

Thanks for your consideration
Howard Mays
103 Riverview Lane
Beckley, WV 25801
howmar@inetone.net

MTC-00008775

From: David J. Loomis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:47pm
Subject: USAGLoomis—David—1023—0102
46 Cranberry Road
North Attleboro, Massachusetts 02760
January 4, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Attorney General Ashcroft:

I am writing to let you know that I was pleased with the actions of your department in reaching a settlement agreement that the states can accept. The settlement is fair and reasonable. Through the agreement, Microsoft will be a more responsible industry leader and can maintain its competitive ability.

I am an avid user of Microsoft products and services, and feel that its innovation has allowed our country to take a lead in the world technology market. I agree that the competition should be protected, but this does not change the fact that Microsoft has achieved success because of the dependability and usefulness of its products. Microsoft will share critical information about the internal workings of Windows; that is enough protection of the competition.

The agreement is mutually beneficial for Microsoft and the competition. As far as I am concerned, I feel it was an overall success. Thank you for your efforts, and taking the time to read this letter.

Sincerely,
David Loomis

MTC-00008776

From: b—c—dahlberg@msn.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

In my opinion, the entire Microsoft issue is about money and another way for the law profession to "feather their nest". It has nothing to do with antitrust, monopolies or protecting the "John Q Public". Microsoft does NOT have monopoly on anything. There are several other operating system options available for which the end user can use the browser he or she prefers. As a matter of fact, he or she can use the browser of choice with Windows!

I use Microsoft products on a regular basis. It is my choice to use these products because, as a developer, my customer base also uses Microsoft products and in order for my products to function on my customers equipment, I must produce software that will work on their equipment. If the customer base used Unix, Apple, or O/S 2, I would probably go that route.

Every dollar Microsoft spends to protect itself from frivolous litigation means that I am going to have to spend more for products I use. As with taxes, corporations do not pay for the cost of litigation—their customers do! The only winners going this route are those folks with “Esquire” after their names.

Please end this as soon as possible. “Trickle Down Economics” goes both ways, you know!

Sincerely,
Robert L. Dahlberg
Carol E. Dahlberg
145 W Midway Blvd
Broomfield, CO 80020

MTC-00008777

From: BOBTULL@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs & Ladies:

I feel that Microsoft has been unduly charged in this matter. It is my best interest and the USA's that they be allowed to do business as they have in the past. I am Window's user and think that my economic well being is at stake if you punish them to aid others. They must all compete for us consumers, just like all businesses do, let them do just that. Bob Tull

Robert E. Tull
214 Hollow Road
LINCOLNTON, NC 28092, USA
email: bobtull@aol.com

MTC-00008778

From: Wynne Garlow
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:59pm
Subject: ... and justice for all

Since when is justice served by punishing the person/company who can do it better? This “lowering of the bar” makes as much sense as flying in an airplane let out to the lowest bidder. If all those self-serving competitors of Microsoft want more business let them invent it, develop it, prove it, manufacture it, and provide it to the market. Right now, the multitude is so pleased with Microsoft's efforts that they wait in line to buy and mark their calendars with proposed release dates for the latest “good stuff” from Microsoft.

Get with the program!!!
—Wynne Garlow
—dimsum2000@earthlink.net

MTC-00008779

From: Nellanana@ao1.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 6:58pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft is marked for destruction. over the last 225 years our government has progressively become more of a destroyer than a protector of rights.

Whether the issue involves a whole industry, a single company, or a single individual, the fundamental principle is the same. Either people possess the right to their own life (which includes the right to trade freely with other men) or, they do not. Increasingly, the government's answer has been that they do not.

The Justice Department's apologists claim that the assault on Microsoft (and on hundreds of other companies now facing antitrust suits) is necessary to encourage innovation. But how can achievement in any field be fostered by attacking and penalizing the achievers? Would anyone accept the principles behind the antitrust laws as the best rule for running one's own company? The principle that one should fire or demote the most successful workers in order to make room for the undistinguished ones?

Would anyone want this to be the standard used by his employer when it comes to judging his own work?

Most people would respond to such a plan with outrage. They would recognize it as a destructive injustice, as an assault on ability and achievement. Because Microsoft has been more successful than its competitors, prosecutors are seeking to impose special restrictions on the production and marketing of its products. Microsoft's competitors won't face these restrictions.

Microsoft must be FORCED (in the words of competitor Jim Barksdale) to “play by a different set of rules.” It is likely that these restrictions will be administered by a federal judge, who will have the authority to block Bill Gates's future business decisions if he decrees that they are “anti-competitive.” Finally, many of Microsoft's competitors have argued that, because Microsoft's Windows operating system is used by so many people, it is an “essential” product and must be handed over to a separate, government-regulated company that will administer it for the “public good.” In other words, because Microsoft has been too successful, it must be hobbled, regulated, and... expropriated.

Is Microsoft a “monopoly” Not in the proper, derogatory, traditional sense of the term.

Unlike the old AT&T Bell monopoly, or today's U.S Post Office monopoly, Microsoft did not gain its market share by having the government outlaw its competitors: Microsoft earned its position in the free-market. By being so efficient, Microsoft has earned a dominant spot in the market, but this does not mean the company has “monopoly power.” Did Microsoft “twist the arms” of its competitors? This sloppy metaphor is a vicious lie. Only the government has the legal power to twist (and even break) arms. The only “twisting” Microsoft engaged in was the legitimate practice of setting the terms of sale for its property. Today the world's wealthiest man, Bill Gates was once an unknown college drop-out with big talent, a big ego, and big ideas, but a fairly small bankroll: the Geek David facing the Goliath IBM.

But in time, the capitol markets recognized the talent and potential in Gates (in his ideas, his products, and his company). The capital markets are a crucial means by which new entrants with good ideas and products grow bigger. Creators like Gates are the fountainheads of human achievement, but they can not and do not create in a vacuum. Workers, suppliers and customers may not match their talents, but they're important to their commercial success.

Has it been forgotten that Microsoft created the products that made the market in question possible? Has it been forgotten that Microsoft owns the goods it produces? The right to private property means the right to hold it, to alter it, to exchange it, that is, to control it. Is a firm guilty of controlling its own property? It is under antitrust. To prosecute a firm for the right to its own property is to obliterate the right to property as such. If laggards like (disgruntled rival) Netscape truly had a superior, commercially viable array of products, capital would have rushed to its door. That capital did not is no fault of Microsoft and no sign of coercion.

Capitalist competition, despite all the derisive descriptions given it by critics (such as “vicious/cut-throat”), is in fact voluntary and peaceful.

Indeed, it entails a significant degree of cooperation and coordination (among producers, suppliers -and- customers). This does not mean self-sacrifice; capitalist competition is certainly vigorous. It is no tea party; nor should it be. It's a competition of wits and abilities, not a battle of fists or weapons.

By what stretch of the imagination does the Department of Justice conflate “arm-twisting” with Microsoft's refusal to license its products to vendors who do not accept its terms? This is not coercion because:

If a vendor refuses Microsoft's offer and walks away (as he is free to do), the vendor will be no worse off than if he did not deal with Microsoft in the first place. Did Microsoft “hurt” competitors like Netscape by giving away a free Internet browser with its Windows operating system (when Netscape wanted to charge you $30)? No more so, then when McDonald's bundles its meat patties with a McDonald's bun does it hurt all the bread makers. Such actions may frustrate their competitors' wishes, but their rights are left untouched.

Did Microsoft violate the rules of competition? It is the application of the political principle of individual Rights-to-the-Economic-Realm of production (and trade) that gives rise to the rules of free-competition. To determine whether Microsoft violated the rules of competition; therefore, one has to determine whether Microsoft violated anyone's rights. Clearly, Microsoft did not violate the rights (life, liberty, and property) of anyone.

By allowing judges to sidestep the issue of rights in favor of considerations, such as the “public interest”, the antitrust laws effectively grant government the power to violate Microsoft's rights, i.e. the power to take over and control Microsoft's property and use it against Microsoft's interests.

Thanks to the antitrust laws once a judge has arbitrarily classified a business as a “monopoly”, the government is given free rein to:

—PLUNDER of vast sums of money from Microsoft's bank account (through triple fines for so-called “damages”);

—REPLACE Bill Gates with a government “overseer” who will make the important strategic decisions at Microsoft;

—FORCE Microsoft to advertise and distribute its competitor's products;

—COMPEL Microsoft to give up its “trade secrets” and intellectual property to those who condemn it.

From start to finish, the entire antitrust process is no more than a process of sacrificing and cannibalizing successful American businesses (such as Microsoft, ALCOA, US Steel, Standard Oil) on the guillotine of egalitarianism to appease envious competitors. Or, to quote Alan Greenspan, who (upon a complete examination of the theory and history of the antitrust laws) wrote: “the effective purpose, the hidden intent, -and- the actual practice of the antitrust laws in the United States have led to the condemnation of the productive and efficient members of our society BECAUSE they are productive and efficient.”

KEY ISSUE

Key issue in Microsoft antitrust case is not “consumer welfare” or “innovation” but individual rights. The growing economy has been the result of the simple fact that until now, the government has stayed out of the way of high tech. The creators recognize that wealth is created, not seized.

Did Microsoft halt “innovation”? (the process of discovering a better way to do things)? No private business can stop other companies from innovating except by out-innovating them. Harm to consumers has nothing to do with the purpose of antitrust. One of the government’s main complaints was that Microsoft was providing free copies of its Internet browser. (Only someone working for the government could conclude that free products are bad for consumers). Antitrust case law is replete with examples of companies being punished (not for any alleged harm) but simply for having the acumen to remain successful in their industries. The antitrust laws are intended only to punish “power”. But since economic power is earned on the free market, this means that the purpose of antitrust is to punish successful business practices. Given this legal context, Microsoft was doomed before it even set foot in the courtroom. Applying the underlying anti-success principle of antitrust, the ruling against Microsoft was... without finding ANY harm at all!

The reason that Microsoft is an extremely successful company? Gates is a unique combination of technological genius and businessman, reminiscent of earlier American giants like Thomas Edison. Thus, it was irrelevant how hard Microsoft’s attorneys worked, or how much intellectual vigor they brought to their legal briefs and courtroom arguments.

These things were irrelevant because NO army of lawyers could hide a single, essential fact (the only fact necessary for applying the antitrust laws): Microsoft succeeds at what it does. The punishment doled out for success is paralysis. Judge Jackson’s absurd conclusion? Microsoft must not be permitted to capitalize upon its well-earned success. Because it has created values, it must now... relinquish them. The Microsoft case is (at its heart) an attempt to impose socialist central planning on the computer industry. And worse, to do so in an anarchic, ad-hoc manner, one federal court ruling at a time. Contrary to the statist theories of the demand-side Keynesian economists (who are quoted daily by the media), it is corporate investment that strengthens America (through the creation of jobs and wealth), NOT spending by the government.

Production drives consumption, not vice versa.

Yet corporate America is derided as “big business” or “the wealthiest 1%”, (make that: the most productive 1%). And some members of Congress would rather fund their “entitlements” on the backs of the most productive group in our nation. It is immoral to penalize corporations -and- the wealthy (the productive) with higher taxes and then redistribute their property (which they earned and others did not) to those who didn’t create it just because “the wealthy” can afford it” (and, therefore, are less equal under the law. Economic power is the power to create and produce. Political power is the power to coerce and punish. Economic power entails intellectual achievement. Political power entails physical aggrandizement.

Economic power involves voluntary trade to mutual advantage, trade with whomever you choose to deal and with whoever chooses to deal with you. Unlike political power, which entails fear and punishment, economic power means the offering of incentives and rewards. Economic power is the power of a dollar (how many you earn and how many you can spend determines the extent of your “power”). Political power involves involuntary subjugation to the state, which has sole discretion over the use of force.

In a free society, government may ONLY use its power in retaliation against those who initiate force or fraud.

Unless it seeks tyranny, no government may use such power to itself initiate force or fraud against innocent parties. To the extent it does, it acts as a robber or a gang. But far worse: a robber or gang with no higher, legal authority above, controlling it. Economic power is wholly innocent of any hint of the initiation of force (or even of retaliatory force). Productive giants such as Carnegie, Ford and Gates don’t just have less power than politicians or pose less danger than tyrants. They have NO political power at all and present no danger whatsoever.

Political power, at root, is the power of a gun, of the police, the military, the taxman, and the jailer. If you flout the law (whether a just law or an anti-trust law) you must submit. But no one “must” submit to a business proposition.

Not even from... Bill Gates.

Capitalism (the social system based on the principle of individual rights), is not merely the “practical”, but the only moral system in history.

No politico-economic system has ever proved its value so eloquently or has benefitted mankind so greatly. And none has ever been attacked so savagely, viciously, and blindly. The flood of misinformation, misrepresentation, distortion, and outright falsehood is a terrible injustice. If they want to break Microsoft, let THEM come in with the guns and do it themselves; let THEM figure out how to do it.

The Microsoft antitrust suit is a case of politicians destroying one of America’s most successful companies just to satisfy the demands of its rivals. What an obscene travesty! Microsoft, a leading producer using voluntary cooperation is derided as a coercive thug.

Meanwhile its puny rivals (puny because they couldn’t sell their inferior products) are permitted to wield actual coercive power, with the full backing of the world’s most powerful government, worse, from that government’s “Justice” Department.

N. White

MTC-00008781

From: Bob Lindinger

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 7:07pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To: Department of Justice

re. United States v. Microsoft Settlement

On November 6, 2001, the United States and Microsoft tentatively agreed to the entry of a revised proposed Final Judgment to resolve the United States’ civil antitrust case against Microsoft. Per my rights under the Tunney Act, I am writing to express my opinion that the Microsoft antitrust case should be settled as quickly as possible, rather than litigated further. I am very pleased with the proposed settlement; it is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved.

I am a consumer that uses many Microsoft products, including their Windows operating system. I have never felt “harmed” by Microsoft, on the contrary, I believe that their business practice is based on a virtuous, positive feed-back, business cycle based on very low price points leading to very high sales volume. This business model ideally suits the consumer who benefits from low prices.

Microsoft has always designed software for mass consumption. Bill Gates realized early on, that if he could design software suitable for a mass market, he could sell it at very low prices and make profits based on large unit sales. Excess profits could be reinvested in innovation and R&D to improve the software and make it more attractive to consumers and businesses. Hence, the positive feedback cycle.

That is why Windows has been such a huge success. Windows is excellent software priced very reasonably. Each version becomes more user-friendly and powerful, with new features to make it easier to browse the Internet, work with digital photographs, digital music, etc.

I believe there can be no monopoly in software. If Microsoft fails to continually improve Windows, a competitor will eventually emerge that offers a better operating system at a lower price. Already we are seeing the emergence of an alternative operating system offered for “free” by Linux. This is gaining wide acceptance in some business circles and, if Microsoft were to stop improving Windows, it would only be a matter of time before Linux or some other alternative from Sun, IBM, Apple, Sony, Computer Associates, SAP (the German software giant), or many other competitors, would start taking market share from Microsoft.

I do not dispute that Microsoft, right now, has a “monopoly” for desktop personal computer operating systems. However, Microsoft earned it by constantly innovating and keeping prices low. Other competitors have demonstrated that they can compete with Microsoft. Netscape was not inhibited from developing its browser, that threatened Microsoft's position. Sun Microsystems has developed its Java language and is promoting it aggressively.

I believe the saying that high tech is a contact sport that should only be played in the marketplace, not in the courts.

Microsoft's competitors are the one's pushing for further litigation, not consumers or businesses that use Microsoft products.

The competitors would have us believe that no one can compete with the mighty Microsoft. I guess they don't remember all those prime-time TV commercials a few years ago for OS/2, that dandy little operating system from a wee little start-up called International Business Machines (IBM). But guess what? Nobody bought OS/2, because it was expensive and not as good as Windows.

Lindows.com is preparing to launch early next year an operating system that can run both Linux and Windows applications on a PC, or run as a second operating system on a Windows machine. The point: to offer an alternative to Windows, to eliminate the frustrations that Lindows.com's CEO, Robertson, says accompany installation and use of the Linux operating system, and to let Windows users run Linux programs without having to jettison Windows. If that's not different enough, he'll sell the Lindows operating system for just $99, primarily in digital format, and with flexible licensing.

Clearly, Microsoft must continuously innovate to fend off competition. Those labeling Microsoft a monopolist just do not understand how quickly a "monopoly" can vanish in the world of high technology. Our country would be served well if the antitrust case against Microsoft is settled as quickly as possible. It will be good for our high tech industry, and be in the best interest of consumers' supposedly the intended beneficiaries of any antitrust litigation.

Finally, on a personal note, I think Scott McNealy is the biggest crybaby the business world has ever seen. I also think Larry Ellison should get a life and stop worrying about his relative net worth compared to that of Bill Gates. Neither of these high tech CEOs have Bill Gate's vision for providing software to empower the masses and they both are trying to use the courts to gain a competitive advantage. In the words of our President, George W. Bush, let's innovate, not litigate.

Sincerely,
Robert J. Lindinger
Schenectady, NY
CC:Halpy,Big Al,Anne,BamBam,Barry,Big Ed,Damian Thoma...

MTC-00008782

From: Cre8ivNov8@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough is enough. I agree with Microsoft and it's platform users. If the system works and I bought it by choice over all of the other platforms out there why is this settlement still up in the air. I am entitled to buy the best I can find and it is in my power to use or not to use all of the functions in this system. Settle this and stop throwing my money at the lawyers.

John R. Cox

MTC-00008783

From: Patricia Duchene
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:09pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I think its time we moved on the settlement identified by the Justice department is more than fair for the Federal Government and the States. I resent a few states holding large companies hostage because of their own interests and at the expense of the remaining States and American people. Its your responsibility to see that a minority group does not gain advantage at the expense of the majority. Make them settle or walk away with what they really deserve nothing.

Have a great day
P Duchene

MTC-00008784

From: Margaret Rosser Durso
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
USDOJ:

The proposed settlement with Microsoft is very fair and I am outraged that the 9 states are continuing legal action. This is a wonderful company that has made a major contribution to this country and to all consumers.

Please do all possible to settle with Microsoft as recently proposed. This will be good for the economy, the stock market and for all consumers...

Respectfully,
Margaret Durso

MTC-00008785

From: robert garner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:28pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

It's time to settle this matter. Further action is detrimental to the economy and the consumer. An all out effort is needed to get the economy growing again.

Thanks,
R.E. Garner

MTC-00008786

From: Uncle Dimi
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:47pm
Subject: Re: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,
I reside in San Diego and I primarily use my computer for personal home use. I just wanted to send this e-mail to express my opinion that it is time to let this suit against Microsoft come to an end. If indeed this proceeding was begun on the behalf of consumers like me, then consider this CA consumer satisfied. The settlement may not be perfect, but assuming enforcement authorities remain vigilant, I think it's worth taking the risk that Microsoft will behave.

I recently purchased a new Dell laptop and couldn't help but notice the preinstalled shortcuts on my desktop that directed me to Dell associated programs and services. If Dell can do this, then why is it wrong for Microsoft to incorporate programs and services in their operating system? I'm an average consumer, but I understand that whenever I enter a store or a desktop environment I will be subjected to promotional displays and crossmarketing efforts. Sometimes I may be seduced by these efforts, other times I will ignore them and search for a more satisfactory product or service. The choice is ultimately mine, and regardless of Microsoft's or other tech companies' efforts to direct my choices, the internet still provides unfettered access to an amazingly large and varied "department store" so to speak.

So, I'll wind it up by saying that if this settlement is sufficient to keep Microsoft feeling like the spotlight is always on them, which I think it is, then let's move on. Frankly, I'm getting tired of hearing about this suit. In the overall scheme of things, I may feel annoyed by some of Microsoft's activities and products, but I definitely do not feel gouged or ripped off by them. When it comes down to it, I most likely would not have adopted the use of a computer years ago if Windows had not made it so easy by unifying or monopolizing, if you will, the software world.

Do I want more choice? Probably. Do I want interoperability? Most definitely yes. Do I think I will suddenly get these things by continued efforts to deliver Microsoft's head on a platter. Not really. So I respectfully request that you make this settlement work and let's move on.

Thank you,
Dimitri C. Demopoulos

MTC-00008787

From: root@wt6.usdoj.gov@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:49pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen,

I have been a computer programmer for most of my adult life, and I have seen many operating systems come and go; but I have never seen an environment so restrictive for innovation and competition as the one currently created by Microsoft. It is true that most of the work that I do is based on Windows systems of one kind or another, but it is equally true that most of my clients would benefit greatly if other avenues were available to them on a non-restrictive basis. Please notice that I do not say on a non-competitive basis. Microsoft has managed to negotiate contracts with hardware manufacturers and software developers alike which tend to suppress competitive products—and in many cases more able and far less expensive products.

I encourage you, as a part if this settlement, to not allow Microsoft to strongarm developers so that their products are preferentially available only to Windows users. If a developer has good economic reasons to develop only for Windows, that is one thing, but if the same developer refuses or is not allowed to develop for other environments purely because of financial or public relations threats from Microsoft, it is quite another thing, indeed.

Please pay attention to the evidence presented by the prosecutors in this trial and equitable and effective controls on the most clear monopoly of our time.

Larry S. Cadle

MTC-00008788

From: Santos, Charles
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/4/02 7:50 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To: Renata B. Hesse
Antitrust Division
U.S. Department of Justice
601 D Street NW
Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20530-0001

Under the Tunney Act, I wish to comment on the Microsoft Settlement's inadequacy in improving the competitive environment in the software industry. Some serious shortcomings relate to:

1) Middleware

The current language in Section H.3 states "Microsoft Middleware Product would be invoked solely for use in interoperating with a server maintained by Microsoft (outside the context of general Web browsing)" does nothing to limit the company's ability to tie customers and restrict competition in non-Web-based networked services under .NET, as they fall "outside the context of general Web browsing". Microsoft has already begun abusing its desktop monopoly to tie customers into .NET revenue streams and set up a new monopoly over the network.

Part 2 of the same section states "that designated Non-Microsoft Middleware Product fails to implement a reasonable technical requirement..." essentially gives Microsoft a veto over any competitor's product. They can simply claim it doesn't meet their "technical requirements."

2) Interoperability

Under the definition of terms, "Communications Protocol" means the set of rules for information exchange to accomplish predefined tasks between a Windows Operating System Product on a client computer and Windows 2000 Server or products marketed as its successors running on a server computer and connected via a local area network or a wide area network." This definition explicitly excludes the SMB/CIFS (Samba) protocol and all of the Microsoft RPC calls needed by any SMB/CIFS server to adequately interoperate with Windows 2000. Microsoft could claim these protocols are used by Windows 2000 server for remote administration and as such would not be required to be disclosed. The Samba team have written this up explicitly here: <<http://linuxtoday.com/news-story.php3?ltsn=2001-11-06-005-20-OP-MS>> "><http://linuxtoday.com/news-story.php3?ltsn=2001-11-06-005-20-OP-MS>

3) General veto on interoperability

In section J., the document specifically protects Microsoft from having to "document, disclose or license to third parties: (a) portions of APIs or Documentation or portions or layers of Communications Protocols the disclosure of which would compromise the security of anti-piracy, anti-virus, software licensing, digital rights management, encryption or authentication systems, including without limitation, keys, authorization tokens or enforcement criteria" Since the .NET architecture being bundled into Windows essentially builds "anti-piracy, anti-virus, software licensing, digital rights management, and authentication systems" into all levels of the operating system, ANY API, documentation, or communication layer can fall into this category. This means that Microsoft never has to disclose any API by claiming it's part of a security or authorization system, giving them a complete veto over ALL disclosure.

4) Veto against Open Source

Substantial amounts of the software that runs the Internet is "Open Source", which means it's developed on a non-commercial basis by nonprofit groups and volunteers. Examples include Apache, GNU/Linux, Samba, etc. Under section J.2.c., Microsoft does not need to make ANY API available to groups that fail to meet "reasonable, objective standards established by Microsoft for certifying the authenticity and viability of its business." This explicitly gives them a veto over sharing any information with open source development projects as they are usually undertaken on a not-for-profit basis (and therefore would not be considered authentic, or viable businesses).

These concerns can be met in the following ways:

1) Middleware: Extend middleware interoperability with a Microsoft server to ALL contexts (both within general Web browsing as well as other networked services such as are those being included under .NET).

2) Interoperability: Require full disclosure of ALL protocols between client and Microsoft server (including remote administration calls)

3) General veto on interoperability: Require Microsoft to disclose APIs relating to "anti-piracy, anti-virus, software licensing, digital rights management, encryption, or authentication systems" to all.

4) Veto against Open Source: Forbid Microsoft from discriminating between for-profit and nonprofit groups in API disclosure.

Sincerely,
Charles Santos

MTC-00008789

From: ANGLMARIAH@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 7:53 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Get this class action out of the courts. Clinton is gone, why carry on with this. Now we have to contend with all these terrorists being tried in Federal Courts. Make way for them, Leave Bill Gates alone. Get on with your life

MTC-00008790

From: craiggua
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:02 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I read through the Revised Proposed Final Judgement and Competitive Impact Statement.

In the the Revised Proposed Final Judgement, Section III "Prohibited Conduct" should thoroughly prohibit Microsoft from engaging in these business practices. Also, the "Compliance and Enforcement Procedures" which includes the Technical Committee, should provide enough insight into Microsoft's compliance to the final judgement.

The Revised Proposed Final Judgement also seems to provide a reasonable balance. Consumers receive a widely used operating system platform (i.e: Windows) that an OEM can freely include any number of Microsoft and non-Microsoft applications. It will also allow Microsoft to continue to provide consumers with an innovative operating system and applications in the future.

I encourage you to accept the Revised Proposed Final Judgement.

Thank you,
Craig Guarraci

MTC-00008791

From: Doc
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:13 p m
Subject: It's called...

It is called capitalism. And in it's purest form there is a demand, Microsoft meets it and in return: money, power, etc. I am sorry for the competition being behind the curve to the point of helplessness. So be it!

That is life. And many people experience that in far more painful ways everyday. Now, attempting to somehow mangle Microsoft's position via government "intervention" suggest we live in some Orwellian home of the free, land of the brave. So in this beautiful Republic (that we call Democratic) land of existence I leave the following: It is so very pleasant to see the "perceived" economic elite get porked and pissed (without so much as a...hug) by someone of higher economic status than they! Uncle Sammy, please help poor pitiful pampered me!! Ah, those beautiful sounds of children playing; they only squeal when life, on those rare occasions, doesn't go there way.

Take care (and don't forget to write),
Preston Alan Rouse Citizen

MTC-00008792

From: Christie Sharpe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:13 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is my opinion as a computer user that this settlement is a good and necessary end to this case. Schools will benefit which is never a bad thing. Please consider all the positives of bringing this case to an end.

MTC-00008793

From: BGF57@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:27 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,

A just and viable settlement has been reached. Enough with this supreme waste of resources litigating this matter. Expend the gov't time and our money on real violations.

Brian Grimm

MTC-00008794

From: Don Conrard
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:34 pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Madam or Sir
I would like to add my voice to those urging the court to accept the proposed settlement between Microsoft and the Federal government in the anti-trust case. With the U.S. under attack by terrorists and our economy in a downturn, a settlement would help to restore confidence in the technology sector when it is needed most. I am concerned that the continuation of this case and the uncertainty it generates will have a very negative effect on any economic recovery. It is time to end this case, which was largely brought by failed competitors of Microsoft. It would be good for the country, good for the economy, good for consumers and benefit the Seattle area. Don Conrard 12021 N.E. 67th. St. Kirkland, WA 98033

MTC-00008795

From: DarStwrt@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:37 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
We support the Microsoft Settlement and want to just move on.
The Stewart Family

MTC-00008796

From: Cheryl A. Shapiro
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:45 pm
In my opinion, this settlement is fair an equitable to all parties involved.
Sincerely,
Cheryl A. Shapiro

MTC-00008797

From: Rachel LeVasseur
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:47 pm
Subject: Microsoft
— Rachel LeVasseur
— rachel11@earthlink.net
The time is past due to settle the Microsoft case. This ongoing case is not good for the economy, and we don't need the government interfering with private business because a few private interest are jealous!!!!

MTC-00008798

From: Jamie Rife
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 8:49 pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
The settlement is fair. It should not have dragged on this long. To say one company has a monopoly in this highly technical world is impossible.

MTC-00008799

From: MButler621@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:03 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
I feel that the Justice proposal regarding Microsoft is fair and just. I encourage you to accept it as the final solution. R. M. Butler, M.D.

MTC-00008800

From: William Cook
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:08 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Justices

As a Consumer I have been using Microsoft's systems for what seems like forever and have never been forced into purchasing, accepting or being stuck with anything that I did not want, there were always alternative programs and systems available to me as a free consumer if I so chose to do so. As a Small Business Owner and user of Microsoft products and systems that have been made available to me, I found these programs and systems to be less expensive and more user friendly than other non Microsoft programs and systems. My business relies heavily on the cost savings that the Microsoft systems have afforded me and don't understand why Myself and thousands of other small business owners should be penalized to satisfy the desires of a Microsoft Competitor. I feel that it is time to accept the terms set and get on with the job of building the economy back to a point that produces jobs and revenue for the country.

Thank You for Your Time
Bill Cook
Cook Consulting

MTC-00008801

From: Seth Alford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:24 pm
Subject: microsoft settlement insufficient
The proposed DOJ settlement with Microsoft is insufficient. It doesn't punish Microsoft for its past mis-deeds, and in some ways allows them to extend their monopoly further, by allowing them to give their software to poorer schools across the nation.

The proposal by the remaining 9 states who are opposed to the DOJ settlement, written by Sullivan and Kuney of Williams & Connolly LLP, Greene of the California's AG office, and Davis of the West Virginia's AG office, addresses Microsoft's anti-trust violations and offers appropriate remedies.

I read this proposal at <http://www.naag.org/features/microsoft/ms-remedy-filing.pdf> The Sullivan et al. proposed remedy should be applied to Microsoft. That remedy will result in better competition and benefit for consumers.

Sincerely,
Seth D. Alford
sethal@yahoo.com
—Seth Alford
sethal@yahoo.com
CC:sethal@yahoo.com@inetgw

MTC-00008802

From: Raymond Vath
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:30 pm
Subject: microsoft settlement
It has been four years since Microsoft's competitors (not customers) began the attack on Microsoft. It is clear we customers have benefited from the excellence of Microsoft's products and at very low prices. If the competitors could come up with superior products, we would beat a path to their door. The Department of Justice has negotiated an agreement with Microsoft that should be accepted. If others want to continue to harass the company, let them do it in their own trial, with their own funds, not my tax money.

Raymond E. Vath, MD

MTC-00008803

From: Judy & Marko
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:34 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To whom it may concern,
It is about time that the case against Microsoft be closed and settled. Our economic recovery requires that innovative and prosperous companies be allowed to function without unnecessary litigation.
Sincerely,
Mark Monette

MTC-00008804

From: Diana Burton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:35 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
We feel that subject settlement is fair and that should not be further litigated.
Jack Burton
Granbury TX
Diana Burton
Granbury TX

MTC-00008805

From: C. gus St. John
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:42 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Is it coincidence that the current downturn in the economy began when the Clinton/Reno "Justice" Dept began the attack on Microsoft? I have no particular love for Microsoft or Bill Gates, but what is the alternative for Windows? Windows is a God-awful kludge but the alternative, which is a manageable kludge, is used on only about five percent of the worlds computers. Apple is better but the changeover would cost more than Bill Gates has.
Regards,
C. Gus St. John 6449 Elmer Hill Road
Rome, NY 13440
cgsjin@borg.com

MTC-00008806

From: CReylek@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:49 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
to the Dept of Justice; this will define my position on the Microsoft settlement.
I believe that Microsoft is being unfairly punished for acting in the best interest of the business, its shareholders and the public. The accusations of monopolistic business practices have largely come from it's competitors and those with business interests who would best be served if Microsoft were much less successful, as well as those whose political interests would be served by damaging the corporation. There is also a segment of the US population who are opposed to the capitalistic ethic and those who are very successful. The very existence of Microsoft's operating system has created the potential for our economy and the world to finally benefit from the power of computing.
Prior to the Microsoft operating system and ancillary software related to it, there was NO compatibility among hardware, software, peripheral equipment, and communication systems. IBM, Unisys, NCR, le Machines Bull, RCA, ATT, ITT, and the entire universe of others world-wide, demanded that their own parochial architecture be maintained. By Microsoft creating this "de facto" standard the entire world information arena has been opened to a universal ability to share, communicate, compute, and manipulate information in a way that prior to this standard would have been impossible.

I am astounded that the minds of this political system fail to recognize the subterfuge planned by the anti-microsoft proponents to return us to the neanderthal stonage of incompatibility. The entire computing user universe must have compatibility to continue to exist in our current environment. To require Microsoft to provide interfaceability standards to the user/competitor population is reasonable. To force them to reveal corporate trade secrets is to participate in criminal homicide of successful capitalism by government. What's next, nationalization of our strongest, healthiest corporate entities?

Microsoft is one of the only technology companies which has survived the recent recession. It is because of the inherent value of it's products and services. Please do not commit economic suicide for all of us with unreasonable punishment for crimes not comitted, but cast up by those in the market place who are unable to compete successfully in that market.

Chip Reylek
421 Criswell Drive
Boiling Springs, PA 17007, USA
717.258.5378

MTC-00008807

From: Walabea@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:51 pm
Subject: Microfsoft settlement

I am very much opposed to the government attempting to destroy a wonderful company like Microsoft. It sees as though every time a company manages to grow large on it's own, our government feels it has a duty to destroy it. Take for instance the "Bell System Telephone Company." It was one of the most admired company on the face of the earth, and then our government got in the act and ever since it has become a disaster. There is a saying to which I subscribe. "I love my country, it's the government that I am afraid of." Nothing could be more truthful.

I say "LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONE!"
Richard Morgan
Federal Way, Washington

MTC-00008809

From: sandra d shimkus
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:00 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I as a concerned citizen would hope that the settlement between the DOJ and Microsoft will finally be settled. Enough time and money has been spent on this subject.

Thank You.
Stanley J. Shimkus
27031-59th. AV. NE.
Arlington, WA. 98223
shimsand@juno.com

MTC-00008810

From: Al Wedekind
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 9:54 pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Litigation of the subject has gone on long enough. In fact I think it should never have started!

MTC-00008811

From: JSReisman@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:07 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Gentlemen, my wife and I believe that the proposed settlement if fair and just to not only to Microsoft, but to this Country. Microsoft has been a pillar of this economy over the past years, let this company help us out now.

Marcia & Joseph Reisman,
Brooklyn, NY

MTC-00008812

From: Tcarpentie@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:10 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement To the

Department of Justice:

I am in full agreement that the proposed settlement between Microsoft and the Dept. Of Justice and nine states be ratified and settled. This litigation must be settled, so that both Microsoft and consumers can go forward.

Theresa C. Gernhard

MTC-00008813

From: Jsldhl@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:12 pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

We think the present settlement should not be further litigated by the nine disgruntled states. If Ford puts a better generator in its cars, General Motors has no right to call "foul" and go to court. The reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling should be the end of the line.

Joseph and Doris Levine

MTC-00008814

From: avedisusa@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:19 pm
Subject: Please accept the settlement and let us move forward

Please accept the settlement and let us move forward with life!

MTC-00008815

From: Krinka1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:21 pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I say congratulations to the Court and to Microsoft for settling this. I think free enterprise must continue.

Krinka1@aol.com

MTC-00008816

From: Steven Gniazdowski
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:21 pm
Subject: Microsoft

Hello. My name is Steven Gniazdowski. I am a college student majoring in Computer Systems Engineering. I have used, and will continue to use Microsoft and non-Microsoft products.

Microsoft does put out a quality product. However, just due to the fact that they happen to be the software giant they are does not mean they are allowed to break anti-trust laws. Settling with Microsoft is only surrendering.

Microsoft has committed a crime and should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. I feel that the Department of Justice should continue to prosecute Microsoft. Thank you for your time.

Steven Gniazdowski

MTC-00008817

From: bill conlen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:22 pm
DOJ,

I will be happy to see the MS antitrust case end with the approval of the negotiated settlement. I think the settlement, if enforced, will correct the abuses of MS. The case represents a drag on the economy and on technological inovation. It is time to conclude it.

Bill Conlen
Tacoma WA

MTC-00008818

From: Kenneth McGarvey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

If the certain far eastern countries computer industry had succeeded in their attempts at setting the standard in not only computer language/software and also the computers themselves, in the mid 1980s, then the price we all would have to pay for computers and the ancillary equipment would be much higher.

Also the effects on the U.S.A. balance of payments would have been catastrophic. I am speaking with no particular interest to pursue, in that I am a British subject and as such am speaking out for what I believe is the benefit of most of the computer using public. If the proposed break up of Microsoft goes ahead, it will mean higher charges for all of us that use computers, it is only because of the scale of the Microsoft operation that prices can be held so low and that the company can offer what is genuine free software.

Microsoft are not a monopoly and in fact there are many other competing software companies in the market place all offering varying products compatible to and some times superior to Microsoft's. What few in the courts realize is in the mid 1980s around six or seven of the far eastern electronic companies banded together to try and formulate a standard system that as stated above, would then have dominated the whole of the worlds computer industry. If they had succeeded then IBM, Apple, Sun Systems, Java and all the other great US and none Pacific Rim computer makers and software houses would not be in existence today, or if they where they would be mere fractions of the companies they are. So please think on these points when making your decision on the future of Microsoft. I state once again that it is only by being good at what they do, added to the scale of their enterprise, that enables Microsoft to offer reasonable products at prices the general public can afford. We would all be a lot less comfortable in technical terms if Microsoft had not gained an early lead in computer technology. Again I ask you to bear in mind the fact that Microsoft has earned Billions of dollars for you country, do not kill the hen that has laid the golden eggs for yourselves if you do you risk the threat of all previous great civilizations.

Think of the Greeks, Romans and even ancient Egyptians do not kill what is good not always right but am sure Microsoft does attempt to get it right most times. So should your legislature and rule for the keeping of Microsoft intact as it is. And long my it go from strength to strength.

Ken McGarvey 04.01.02

My phone number 44 1642550833

MTC-00008819

From: Pat Fox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As an American consumer, I would like to encourage all parties involved to ACCEPT the proposed settlement between the DOJ, the 9 states, and Microsoft. The settlement seems to be a FAIR COMPROMISE, and it is important for the country and the economy to get this case behind us. Furthermore, I would encourage the judge in the case to compel the non-settling states to join the agreed upon settlement as well.

Sincerely,
Patrick J. Fox
7808 79th Ave SE
Mercer Island, WA 98040

MTC-00008820

From: Avedis Garavanian
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:25pm
Subject: Please settle and keep innovation ALIVE!

Please settle and keep innovation ALIVE!

MTC-00008821

From: Spbucj@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:31pm
Subject: (no subject)

I think that just because Microsoft is big and successful it has become a target. This company has done more to develop the computer industry than anyone else. Other companies, Sun Microsystems, Oracle, Enron, Lucent, Apple, etc. etc. have been able to compete and be successful too. Leave Microsoft alone and let it put money into research and development, not lawyers pockets. Instead of being jealous and resentful of Microsoft, try buying some stock in it. (I did) I'm a little guy and this lawsuit would be hurting me too. I don't know all the details, but my vote is to please leave this company alone. Enough is enough.

MTC-00008822

From: Bill Eckerich
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/4/02 10:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As ordinary citizens, we feel the current settlement terms are fair, just and send the right message to Microsoft.

Unfortunately, a few people and corporations, for various reasons, are seeking to prolong the proceedings under the guise that the settlement is not fair. We see their reasons much differently. As for the various Attorneys General, we see only a political motive designed toward re-election or a hunger for higher office.

As for the competitors, they found themselves unable to compete and are trying to make up for their lack of ability in this way.

We are particularly chagrined over the stance taken by Senator Hatch. Although he is taking this position to try to gain advantage for one of his constituents, he should be mindful of the economic loss created by the delay and costs for the total economy, as well as the fairness.

Thank you for your consideration of our position.

William and Joyce Eckerich

MTC-00008823

From: LMD1418@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Leave Microsoft alone already! They have made concessions to the cry babies both to their competitors and with the state legislators. Let's grow up and stop crying sour grapes that Microsoft and Bill Gates have produced better software than their peers and that the consume wins. Were it not for Microsoft, this would be typed on an old electric typewriter on onion skin paper and stuffed in an envelope sent postage paid through the mail and probably given the US Post office would never be delivered anyway thus stopping the consumers, public, and voters by the way from expressing their opinions under the first amendment, which by the way you can find using Microsoft explorer the defamed browser. Thanks again Bill (Gates not Clinton) for all the great work. Keep it up and keep the US moving forward!

MTC-00008824

From: Bo Yates
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is about time that this circus comes to an end. We now have more urgent problems as a nation. Get it over with already!!!!

MTC-00008825

From: Shirley Sidis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement:

Dear DOJ,

In regard to the Microsoft Litigation which has been going on for almost four years, both my wife and I feel that its about time that both sides settle this case and get on with our daily lives. This case has really hurt the economy, for the sake of our country and the economy it should be settled now.

Sincerely,
Sam and Shirley Sidis

MTC-00008826

From: Larry Putnam
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer, I just want to let you know that I feel that it is imperative that the action taken to settle the suit against Microsoft be adhered to as has been put down by the District Court of Appeals. This needs to come to a close so that Microsoft can get back to the business of doing what they do best and the Justice Department can spend its time on more important matters to our country.

Sincerely,
Larry D. Putnam
Chattanooga, Tn 37412

MTC-00008827

From: Robert(u)Jann
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer I am concerned that the remedy for the Microsoft anti-trust case will be worse than any harm Microsoft may have caused.

Specifically, I think we all had better phone service before the break-up of AT&T. Now I am diluged with phone companies offering low rates and then once I have changed carriers jacking up the price. I preferred to have my phone service lumped into one seamless bundle, because in the end it is more efficient than the mess we have right now.

I am afraid the same thing will happen with the remedy for Microsoft. I prefer a software package that includes features by one software company because INTEGRATION is do important to software. The more chefs there are the greater the probability for soup bugs and finger pointing.

I think Microsoft is offering a valuable service to the public by offering integrated software solutions.

SYS
Robert—Jann@msn

MTC-00008828

From: david milton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 10:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the settlement is good for everyone. lets get this over so we can make the next big leap in tech and pull this country out of this recession.

Thanks
David Milton,
5728 meadowhaven Dr,
Plano, TX 75093

MTC-00008829

From: HJDennis@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:00pm
Subject: (no subject)

As a private citizen, I would like to urge the DOJ to quit working against private business and let free enterprise seek it's own level.

Hal Dennis

MTC-00008830

From: MSpalding@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Good Morning,

Please consider dropping all further action against Microsoft. The free market produced the computer revolution and the tremendous gains to the standard of living of most Americans. Please do nothing to interfere with the free working of the market. And especially stay out of computers and software.

Thanks for your consideration,
Mike Spalding

MTC-00008831

From: Bob Boysen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Education Market Settlement

As a Microsoft Windows XP user and a Macintosh OS X user, and although I enjoy running both operating systems, I think it is a mistake to allow an anti-trust settlement against Microsoft Corp with the result being additional free Windows based computers in our nation's schools. This certainly is a slap in the face of Apple Computer Co who has for years worked tirelessly with the schools to provide educational equipment. If the one of the main concerns in the suit against Microsoft was due to a "perceived" monopolistic endeavor on their part, the solution, in my opinion, is not to provide them with an even greater field of play for their product. This would certainly stifle competition which I believe is the Department's exact opposite position in this matter. If the schools choose PCs with the Windows operating system—so be it.

If they prefer Apple Computer's operating system—so be it. Let the United States Government NOT be a party against open market competition.

Thank you.
Bob Boysen
Las Vegas, Nevada

MTC-00008832

From: Wilsh@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To whom it may concern:

I wish to express my opinion on the DOJ s trial and settlement. The settlement reached by Microsoft and the DOJ appear to me to be the best compromise to a case that has not hurt the consumer but has hurt "the completion". For the nine States to continue to use the Courts to extend the case beyond the limits prescribed by the Appeals court is in my opinion a grave waste of the taxpayers hard earned money. And a waste of the court's time and energy for the private gains of the companies located in or adjacent to the States not happy with the DOJ Settlement. Please do everything you can to Stop the Litigation of Microsoft and allow them and America to get on with innovations for the next generation of products that revolutionize the USA and the World.

Wilson S Hamilton
Pres.
L and W SERVICES

ISSAQUAH, WA
wilsh@att.net
CC:ptclean@yahoo.com@inetgw

MTC-00008833

From: Joel Davis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a computer professional and avid computer user it is obvious to me that Microsoft has been a blessing for many years. The overall quality and consistency of their products make my professional and personal life much easier. The LAST thing in the world I need is lot's of operating systems and web browsers and communications protocols to have to investigate, learn and then choose between. It is my opinion that Microsoft has become as important to the market place as they have, in essence, because they make good products that everyone is basically satisfied using.

The proposal to break Microsoft apart terrified me. What effects would that have had on my business and my personal affairs? It was frightening to consider!

The revised settlement is, in my opinion, still unwarranted but, in the spirit of "getting on" with things I would support executing the current settlement without further delay.

Joel E. Davis
PO Box 6118
Hillsborough, NJ 08844

MTC-00008834

From: Wilbur Goodwin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/4/02 11:45pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
To: The US Department of Justice

I am writing to you today to express my opinions in regard to the Microsoft debate in accordance with US law, i.e., the Tunney Act, which requires a public comment period that expires on January 28, 2002. I fully support Microsoft and am anxious to see this protracted three-year dispute between Microsoft and the US Federal Government resolved once and for all. Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the US Federal Government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the US Court of Appeals ruling. I support the settlement that was reached on November 2, 2001, and sincerely hope that there will be no further action taken against Microsoft at the Federal level.

This settlement is tough, but reasonable, equitable and fair to all parties involved. It has been reached after extensive negotiations, and it allows Microsoft to continue designing and marketing its innovative software, while benefiting the technology industry as a whole. Under this agreement, Microsoft must disclose information about certain internal interfaces in Windows to competing companies. Microsoft has pledged to carry out all provisions of this agreement, and the government has created a technical oversight committee to insure Microsoft compliance. While I personally am strongly opposed to any company being legally forced to disclose its company sensitive or proprietary information, I firmly believe that consumers overwhelmingly agree that this settlement is the best alternative for them, the industry and the American economy, under the circumstances.

Unfortunately, a few "special interests" are attempting to use this review period to derail the proposed settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation. In my opinion, if Microsoft's competitors had expended more time, energy and financial resources in acquiring, nurturing and maintaining a strong technical base of innovative skills, and less on litigation, they wouldn't have had to resort to such costly legal tactics in the first place. If they can't compete on their own volition, then maybe they shouldn't be in the business!

In closing, I want to reiterate that I strongly believe that this settlement, as opposed to more needless and costly litigation, is in the best interest of, and will benefit, the consumers, the industry and the American economy. Furthermore, I urge you to get on with the process at hand by upholding this agreement, so that Microsoft can prudently devote its invaluable resources to continued innovation rather than further protracted litigation. I will anxiously await your decision. I have the utmost confidence that you will make the only decision that is in the best interest of everyone concerned.

Sincerely,
Wilbur Goodwin (Retired)
Columbia, SC

TC-00008835

From: ChloeCKM@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:30am
Subject: court settlement

the settlement reducing the amount of liability in the court of appeals ruling is reasonable to all parties involved including Microsoft and the American economy. please stop special interests from derailing this settlement. thank you for your attention,

Sincerely
Chloe Murdock

MTC-00008836

From: tom sheller
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:33am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear Sirs: I am communicating to support the current proposed settlement with Microsoft, I firmly believe that the evidence supports the freedom of enterprise, and I firmly believe that no good would come from any sanctions on the part of Microsoft the concessions that they have agreed too are fair and beneficial to the general populace. Please do not allow special interest groups to degrade the just decision that has already been proposed by the dept. of justice.

Thank you,
Tom Sheller

MTC-00008837

From: DCBosworth@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:46am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Done, mailed 1/5/02.
Dave Bosworth

MTC-00008838

From: mardi
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
mb (765)973-8376 Let the settlement go forward so we all can move on with our work and the fine minds can be creative instead of wasting time on this matter.

MTC-00008839

From: Thayne Erickson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:03am
Subject: For Microsoft

I posted this in the Apple Discussion forum after another user post a link to this e-mail address urging everyone to write you against Microsoft: I think the one Jaun posted was a waste of time. How is hurting MS going to help me? I'm against this whole going after MS on principle. It's just wrong. Who's next? Apple? Sun? Last time I checked Sun OS only runs on Sun hardware, sure they put Netscape on it but who cares? What have they done that is so wrong???? Bundle their software on their OS? Big deal. I never wanted Netscape anyway and if I did I could easily download and install it.

Let it be decided by the consumer. If you don't like it don't buy it. We're proof they don't have a monopoly on the market, aren't we? This is no place for the government, they need to be concerned about protecting us from criminals and terrorists, not Bill Gates!!!

Thayne Erickson
Mac User

MTC-00008840

From: modulan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:20am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please close this case as fast as possible since: There are zillions of real problems confronting our country which demand better use of taxpayer bucks—and believe me I am paying a bunch—hopefully not squandered on a showcase for high profile lawyers.

Regarding legal rationale, I excerpt from the published text:

Precedent requires that: the balancing of competing social and political interests affected by a proposed antitrust consent decree must be left, in the first instance, to the discretion of the Attorney General. The court's role in protecting the public interest is one of insuring that the government has not breached its duty to the public in consenting to the decree. The court is required to determine not whether a particular decree is the one that will best serve society, but whether the settlement is "within the reaches of the public interest."

I think enough time has passed for the DOJ to conclude the case. One would have to be an imbecile to believe that Microsoft's competitors haven't pushed the case for their stockholders not the public's benefit—the whole case is leaving a bad taste for the fairness of the American legal system. Quite simply, how much of the Microsoft cash can I get by gambling with lawyers in court.

As for Microsoft's mistakes, the proposed settlement gives a lot more than anyone would have envisioned would really arise based on the original complaints.

Folks, the DOJ and its facilities should not be a set for this expensive soap opera—for heaven's sake, someone—just someone just pound down the gavel and stop the legal opera of the century.

On the humorous side, if you folks can't close it out, just send the case to Judge Judy! John D O'Meara Sr.

MTC-00008841

From: RLoveless@fwenc.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:29am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft has been found guilty of using illegal tactics to maintain a monopoly. This is a very serious offense, especially when put into the context of intentionally violating not its first, but its second consent decree. Further evidence that they have not and will not reform their behavior is the fact that they not one, but twice presented fraudulent testimony in Federal Court.

The citizens of the US (and the world) deserve protection from further illegal Microsoft activities. I do not believe the current settlement is sufficient deterrence. I propose:

That Microsoft be REQUIRED to disseminate 95% of its current cash reserves to its stock holders.

This reserve is estimated to be in excess of $20 Billion. There are approximately 1 Billion shares, so this is $20/share. No stockholder is harmed by this; it may, in fact, stimulate the economy which would be useful at this time.

This will leave Microsoft with no debt and $1 Billion in cash reserves. Certainly this is still a strong financial position for any company. The effect with regard to Microsoft tactics will be to reduce (but not eliminate) the ability of Microsoft to purchase (or threaten to purchase) companies that are competing against it. This Microsoft method has been well documented in the various journal and newspapers in the technology field.

Thank you for your consideration.

CC:attorney.general@po.state.ct.us@inetgw

MTC-00008842

From: Frank Disparted
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:48am
Subject: MS SETTLEMENT

Microsoft is a great company and should be left alone, so it can direct its energies to making new and better products. I think the issue with Microsoft is like shooting your self in the foot. This is one company that has brought prosperity to our country. As a user of MS products, they are great, work well, and are dependable. That's more than I can say of our government.

MTC-00008843

From: Stephen Jacob
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:52am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Greetings!

Please settle this now!

We, the people want to go on without more litigation, lawyers fees and constraints!

Our economy has taken enough of a beating and Microsoft has been a whipping post! Let's drop it and move on, please!

Thanks for your time and interest.

Sincerely,

Stephen

Stephen Jacob

email: svj@stephenjacob.com

MTC-00008844

From: Maya Opavska
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 2:01am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Justice Department,

I'm a long-time computer user and a concerned citizen writing to express my concern over the prolonged case against Microsoft. The comprehensive agreement that the federal government and the nine states reached with Microsoft is reasonable and fair to all parties involved. This settlement is good for consumers, it's good for the industry, and it's good for the American economy. Please add my voice to the choir of people asking to finally put an end to this matter in the interest of all of us!

Sincerely,

Maya Opavska (mayao@earthlink.net)

MTC-00008845

From: SAMUEL MEDRANO
To: Microsoft ATR,lew@mises.org@inetgw
Date: 1/5/02 2:12am

Persuant to the Tunney Act the following is my opinion as a concerned member of the public in reference to United States vs. Microsoft and its proposed settlement. This lawsuit should never have seen the light of day nor given the attention it had received. It's just consideration should have been as a public example of nuisance lawsuits brought about by inefficient and unworthy, but powerful economic interests as well as sanctimonious politicians seeking greater political power.

Serious study of economics would have revealed that true monopolies exist only where the instruments of political power are used to insulate and protect an area of industry from the brutal and fickle forces of a free market whose only sovereign is the consuming public. A clear example of a true and lasting is the first class delivery monopoly granted to the US Postal Service. (Mises and Rothbard)

Microsoft holds a majority of the market share of operating systems not by state edict but by that brutal and fickle sovereign's choice know as the public. Politicians love speaking out against business "monopolies" but never bring to the discussion the state's monopolies or their personal monopoly in their respective office. They see it as a sign of praise and "a mandate" whenever they manage to gather more than a majority in election polls or public opinion polls.

By including the Internet Explorer with new PCs Microsoft was employing a legitimate business decision calculation by offering more and more for its consumers. Microsoft is as eager to capture a majority marketshare for internet browsers as its competitors. That is the nature of the free market and the American way. May the fair winner in this never ending struggle be praised. We the sovereign will determine how long we will let this or that supplier will be a majority marketshare winner.

It is unfortunate that our current political and legal system has brought this justly favored company to the point that it has and in the process interfered with the sovereign's task of making rational economic calculations as to the company that serves us better with the most desirable products and services.

While unnecessary it is better for the public's interest that the current lawsuit be brought to a rapid settlement as has been proposed rather than follow the ludicrous and unjust actions sought by the competing and powerful politicoeconomic interests that seek to so call protect us from ourselves or those that serve us by our own encouragement.

Respectfully,
Samuel Medrano. MD

Bibliography:

Mises, Ludwig von—Human Action 1949
Rothbard, Murray N.—Man, Economy and the State

For more on economics in general the Ludwig von Mises Institution is literally the best place on earth to begin and maintain a serious study on the subject.

MTC-00008846

From: WFSSTEVENS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 2:48am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time for big government—at the federal level or the state level—to get out of the business of holding back the Microsoft Corporation from providing competitive products at an attractive pricing level.

Hence, I request the settlement under review be approved and all legation of any sort be stopped.

William F Stevens
wfsstevens@aol.com

MTC-00008847

From: Joel Bramlitt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 2:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I'd like to express my opinion regarding the Microsoft antitrust lawsuit. I am a citizen who makes his living by supporting Microsoft products. I was very alarmed when I first heard about this lawsuit, because I feared it could possibly affect my livelihood. I have followed it very closely, and was very relieved when I heard a settlement had finally been reached. Now, I am concerned again. The nine states that did not agree with the settlement are jeopardizing the whole deal for what appear to be less than honorable reasons.

The way I understand it, the heart of the antitrust laws are intended to protect the consumer. From what I've read and heard, Microsoft's competitors seem to be the true beneficiaries of the proposed "alternate settlement". Is it a coincidence that they are mostly headquartered in the holdout states? I think not. To me this clearly political maneuvering on the part of the aforementioned competitors. They are angry at Microsoft, and instead of creating superior products to compete in the marketplace, they want to cripple Microsoft in the courts. The way I see it, if the nine other states and especially the U.S. Government agree on a remedy, that's what it should be. The holdout states obviously have agendas that have nothing to do with what's best for the consumer.

I, along with everyone I talk to feel this has gone on long enough. Our country is in a very different type of crisis right now. One that vastly overshadows this particular case. I hope the court will consider this, and put an end to the vengeful tactics of Microsoft's competitors. We cannot continue to punish success, and reward mediocrity.

Thank you for your time.
Joel Stephen Bramlitt

MTC-00008848

From: K Dyer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:07am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen:

My government spent more money prosecuting Microsoft during the Clinton presidency than it spent on anti-terror programs. It spent more on prosecuting Microsoft than it spent equipping our military to conduct a two theater operation. It spent more prosecuting Microsoft than it did on increased research for an AIDS solution.

My counsel to you is simple: STOP IT! I'm mad at you and I vote. And I'll vote against anyone who does not support and vote for an immediate end and settlement to this foolishness.

Don't forget about me, it's my money that pays the bills and I'm not going to forget about you.

William K. Dyer
cxturbo@juno.com

MTC-00008849

From: John Preston
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:23am
Subject: DOJ wants to hear from you on MS settlement

I feel that the government should settle in favor of Microsoft. Actually I think the matter should have never come to court. All this crap about the browser being packaged with the OS is nonsense. I use Windows 98 on my home computer and have both Internet Explorer and NetScape on the same computer.

I can choose to use either one. Its up to me. I have said this before. Try to buy a new car from any car dealer with an engine or other parts from a different dealer and see what you get. Its going to be a big nothing that's what. Why? Because business is not done that way. Try to buy a new car without an engine.

They will probably sell it to you but guess what? It will cost a lot more money because of all the special handling that will be required to get it to you.

This whole thing is just the result of some people who weren't in the right place at the right time or didn't make the right decision.

Throw it out of court. Stop wasting my tax dollars on it and lets get on with life.

John Preston

MTC-00008850

From: Alan Feldman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 5:10am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Let this lawsuit go! Let the settlement stand. It is a tough settlement, but fair, and Microsoft is already implementing parts of it.

I, as a consumer and industry partner (software developer for a 3rd party), was very upset to see this lawsuit at all. Right from the get-go it only seemed to help competitors not consumers. Microsoft has continually improved their software and kept prices fair. They have created an industry that I am proud to be a part of. Leave Microsoft alone!

With this settlement Microsoft is already giving in to things they would've never agreed to (and shouldn't), but they have agreed, and are implementing it. And Microsoft's competitor's should be happy about that.

But from now on they should compete in the MARKET PLACE not the courts. And let the CONSUMER decide what is best. They are not so stupid as this lawsuit has made them out to be... they can spot good software when they see it.

Thank you.

Alan Feldman
753 Bellows Way, Apt.# 204
Newport News, VA 23602
757-833-3470

MTC-00008851

From: Leon van Schie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 6:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,

I am shocked by the recent news regarding the Microsoft settlement. Instead of punishing Microsoft for their monopoly strategy you are giving them a green light to basically kick Apple Computer out of the education market by donating an astronomical amount of money in Microsoft products to this industry, thus giving Microsoft a go ahead to continue to do business as usual. I'm sorry but this goes beyond my comprehension. You are playing Microsoft's cards by making them an offer like this.

To my humble opinion they should be punished not by putting more of their product into the market, especially such a sensitive market like education, but by giving them a punishment that's appropriate. If you want Microsoft to donate zillions of dollars, let them do that to a neutral institution like food for 3rd world countries or something in that order.

What impression do you give Microsoft (and others like them) here? If you monopolize the market by unfair means of business we will reward you by allowing you to do more business and even kill some competition on the way?! By putting more Microsoft products out there you are giving companies like Apple Computer absolutely no chance what so ever to sell their product in the education industry, hence they start to monopolize that industry as well.

A concerned Dutch citizen.

With kind regards,
Leon van Schie,
Bervoetsbos 189
2134 PP Hoofddorp
The Netherlands

MTC-00008852

From: Jay Greenfield
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 6:51am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The states contesting the settlement are working at the behest of AOL, Oracle and Sun. They want to constrain Microsoft not because it will help the consumer but because it will help their bottom lines.

Microsoft has not always been an engine of innovation. And its business practices have been too aggressive. Nevertheless, today Microsoft with its .NET initiative and the uses it is putting XML to in the service of this initiative has become a real engine of innovation driving Oracle towards XML, Sun into an embrace of web services and making AOL uneasy. This is a good competitive situation. Weakening Microsoft significantly would strengthen AOL. AOL is not an engine of innovation. Imagine no Microsoft and just an alliance between Sun, Oracle and AOL. One doesn't have to be a genius to put together a website using Visual Basic and a Windows 2000 Server. Java programming and Oracle administration are much more demanding and expensive.

We need a strong Microsoft to compete with the AOL/Oracle/Sun alliance.

MTC-00008853

From: CKest@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Lets move on and financially rape some other evil corporation with deep pockets. What shows the attackers of Microsoft for what they are, despicable whoring thieves, when Microsoft said that they would in essence, give up their code (the original request) by providing FREE software/ computers to schools, it still was not enough—nothing will ever be enough. Have some political balls, now that that embarrassment—Reno is gone, and move and do something important for once in a decade.

Yours truly,
Russell Kestler

MTC-00008854

From: LBritt2314@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:09am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

THIS CASE NEEDS TO BE SETTLED WITHOUT ANY FURTHER LITIGATION. I HAVE TALKED WITH A NUMBER OF PEOPLE AND I HAVE YET TO FIND ONE INDIVIDUAL THAT BELIEVE THAT THIS CASE SHOULD BE CONTINUED. WE BELIEVE THAT A SETTLEMENT WILL BE GOOD FOR THE CONSUMERS. I AM INVOLVED IN COMPUTERS, I WANT TO SEE THIS CASE SETTLED ASAP. WE ARE

INVLOVED IN SOME VERY DIFFICULT TIMES AT THIS DATE AND WE DON'T NEED TO FURTHER DESTROY OUR ECONOMY BY FURTHER CONTINUING THIS CASE.

I HOPE THAT SOMEONE TAKE THE TIME TO READ THIS E-MAIL.

LARRY L. BRITAIN,
CPA,CFP,CLU,ChFC,CCIM

MTC-00008855

From: Jeff Oberst
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:17am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear U.S. Dept. of Justice,
I think the proposed settlement with Microsoft Corp. is fair for customers of Microsoft, its competitors and the general public. I believe this case has dragged on too long it should be promptly brought to a close.

Sincerely,
Jeff Oberst

MTC-00008856

From: MUNNEKE3@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 7:15am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I want to go on record as one who believes that settlement of the Microsoft case is paramount to healing much of the economic trevails that we face as a nation and indeed, the world. No more litigation, please, to serve the selfish interests of competitors and stifle innovation within the industry. This freedom is still what makes America a great and shining beacon to the rest of the world.

This entire trumped up charade should have never happened in the first place. Now that we are back to reality with the current administration, let us not belabor a moot point. Let us move forward and support a thriving desire to innovate, putting people to work, assisting the public interest in attaining useful tools for the tech world that moves us forward. Let go of Microsoft and stop the strangulation! Now!

MTC-00008857

From: DParr1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:42am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough money and time has been spent on this. The government needs to conclude this case with the settlement agreed upon by both parties. Further prolonging this case is not in the best interests of the consumer. Finish it...

MTC-00008858

From: Bill Fulmer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:51am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the Microsoft settlement is fair and equitable for all concerned.

MTC-00008859

From: Llanddr@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:56am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Justice Department,
Not all Americans regard Microsoft as an "evil empire." Many citizens appreciate the initiative, brilliance and hard work of Mr.

Gates and company. Further, they do not regard Microsoft as a criminal enterprise, but rather as a heroic one. It is not my intention to change your mind on the specific charges you have leveled at Microsoft, although it would be great if you did reconsider. Anti-trust law is notoriously vague and non-objective. My intention is to ask you, please, as a citizen, voter and tax payer to leave the case as is, and to not support any worse sanctions against this company. Further, if there is any opportunity to reduce current sanctions or proposed sanctions against Microsoft, I urge you to take these opportunities. In essence, I believe Microsoft has been punished enough. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Sincerely,
Joseph McHugh
Malden, Massachusetts

MTC-00008860

From: John Sweeney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the proposed Microsoft settlement.

John Sweeney
Lansdale PA

MTC-00008861

From: FRED SIMMONS
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:08am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
MICROSOFT HAS DONE MORE FOR THE TECHNOLOGY INDUSTRY AND OUR ECONOMY THAN ANY OTHER. THEY ARE AN INDUSTRY LEADER AND HAVE CREATED MORE OPPORTUNITY FOR MORE PEOPLE THAN MANY BEFORE THEM. IT AMAZES ME THAT MY GOVERNMENT HAS TAKEN ISSUE WITH MICROSOFT. WHO IS REALLY BENEFITING FROM CONTINUED LITIGATION? MAYBE IT IS TIME FOR INDIVIDUALS LIKE MYSELF TO BEGIN ASKING WHO AND WHY? I HAVE SENT COMMUNICATIONS TO MY STATE REPRESENTATIVES AND SENATORS. I WILL EXERCISE MY RIGHT TO JUDGE THEIR ACTIONS COME NEXT ELECTION DAY!

IT IS TIME TO STOP THIS LITIGATION. I REQUEST MY VOICE BE COUNTED IN FAVOR OF SETTLEMENT. NOW!

REGARDS,
FRED SIMMONS
293 WILSON BUTTE ROAD
GREAT FALLS, MONTANA 59405

MTC-00008862

From: E.L. Pietrowski
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:18am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As the usual cry by the Clinton gang was "s Time to move on" that time has been reached in the Microsoft case.

No one will become a winner if this settlement continues to drag on and on. As I see the settlement before the court neither side is really happy with the settlement. To me that indicates the settlement is as fair as it will get. It is time to turn our efforts to something constructive and stop wasting tax payer money on something that does not have a right answer.

E.L. Pietrowski

MTC-00008863

From: Herb Cilley
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:24am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Dear People,
since 1933 I have been in business, one way or another. I believe Microsoft has developed the system of E-mail and should be allowed to profit from it.... It is my hope that You will rule in favor of them, for what it is worth. Drug companies and others patent their discoveries or inventions, and profit from it for a period of time. Thanks for reading this.

Herbert L. Cilley
60 Middle Road—#319-B
Dover, NH 03820-4146
nhloonranger@yahoo.com
(603) 749-5904

MTC-00008864

From: Brett McDonald
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 12/31/01 10:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support the settlement.
Brett McDonald
38602 Lancaster Drive
Farmington Hills, MI 48331
Owner
BFM Software

MTC-00008865

From: SFoxRun1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:32am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I want to add my voice to the comments the Court may consider in reviewing the proposed settlement between the Justice Department and several of the State plaintiffs and Microsoft. First, it should be clear that consumers have overwhelmingly selected Microsoft products over others. It is disdainful of the public to assume that this preference is not knowing or intended. Second, it should be equally clear from the public whining that many of Microsoft's competitors (and there are many, a testament to the strong competitive environment in this industry), that this litigation has been used as a substitute for competition by the providers of less desirable products (the many published interviews with Scott McNealy of Sun Microsystems, for example, are a testament to this, as is the relative performance of the competitors in the stock market). Third, it is transparent that the unreasonable and intransigent position taken by the nonsettling parties, Connecticut Attorney General Blumenthal being a prime example, as reported in the national press in various out of court statements by Mr. Blumenthal and others, is primarily motivated by politics, not economics or law. This case has been used to bash the success and innovation of Microsoft (a fat target because of its superiority) by those seeking a populist platform for their political ambitions. I urge the Court not to allow those whose motives have nothing to do with fair and open competition to hold back American technological competitiveness in the world market (note that when the shoe is on the other foot, as in the case of opponent America Online, no interference with its own instant messaging system is allowed).

The notion of natural monopoly due to superior insight and innovation should not be frustrated by "wannabees" who are merely jealous of Microsoft's success or by politicians playing the fundraising and campaign rhetoric games—Mr. Blumenthal can set national antitrust policy if he is ever the Attorney General of the United States (or President). This case has done its public service in reaching a just and fair settlement which the Justice Department and a significant portion of the complaining States have freely negotiated for the benefit of the consuming public. It is time to get on with the next generation of technology and leave this case for the historical landmark it is. There can be no doubt that by the time the trial court has finished with this matter the entire context of the technology which it addresses will have changed without regard to legal principles as is only natural, for, to quote Abraham Lincoln, "... we have added the fuel of interest to the fire of genius." I urge the Court to sustain the settlement, as proposed.

Steven A. Diaz, 3022 Fox Den Lane,
Oakton, VA 22124.

MTC-00008866

From: Avperrella@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:40am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think settlement still too hard on Microsoft! Government should get off the backs of companies that get a lions share of the market because they are good at what they do—go after the real law breakers!

MTC-00008867

From: Delpha Wagner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:50am
Subject: Microsoft

313 N Mississippi Street
Blue Grass, IA 52726-9731
January 5, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice, 950
Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001
Dear Mr. Ashcroft,

I am writing you to express my feelings on the Microsoft settlement issue. I believe the settlement that was reached with Microsoft is thorough and sufficient. Please continue to support it.

I am a strong supporter of Microsoft, and I think that it has done quite a bit to help our economy. I want this case to be settled so that the people at the company may continue going on about their business and inventing superior products that will continue to improve the industry. My hope is that once this case is over the benefits that Microsoft, its competitors, and consumers will see will help improve our economy in these hard times. After all, Microsoft has bent over backwards to accommodate the millions of fans of Netscape, AOL, and other software-related companies, including non-retaliatory agreements against software companies that develop products that compete with Microsoft.

This settlement is a step in the right direction. Thank you for settling with Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Delpha Wagner

MTC-00008868

From: Leslie Duncan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:52am
Subject: settlement

1414 Arlene Street,
Redlands, CA 92374.
January 5, 2002,

Dear Department of Justice, Senate,
Congress and The States of Our Union,

This letter confirms my total agreement to settle the lawsuits against Microsoft. As a U.S. Citizen and consumer who regularly purchases numerous Microsoft products, I can attest that Microsoft has dealt fairly with me by their pricing and business practices. I have never been forced to purchase their products through any kind of illegal business practices. As a result I find that any and all accusations made against this company on my behalf as a consumer very frivolous and false. Therefore I humbly request that the Justice Department and the United States Senate, Congress and the States of our union, proceed with all speed in the interest of our economy and Constitution to settle any and all lawsuits that arise from the alleged false accusations.

Sincerely,
Leslie A.I. Duncan

MTC-00008869

From: PHIL BASHAM
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:53am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen:
It is past time to end the pursuit of Microsoft. A settlement must be reached quickly. This was a lawsuit that never should have happened. Microsoft has served its customers well and in the process has brought computer use technology to the present high state. I for one have no inclination to use other products and find the software offered by Microsoft to fit my needs exactly.

Thank you,
Phil Basham
9787 Cypress Point Cir
Lone Tree, CO 80124-3105
303 799-1074
303 799-0613 data
303 885-9809 cell
pnzbash@msn.com

MTC-00008870

From: Bettyhu
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We were so pleased when the first settlement was made. It is hard to imagine how the States could have been hurt. It seems to us they are just being greedy.

Our country needs Microsoft to be able to continue to improve its products. Please reject the States suits.

MTC-00008871

From: WynLsk@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the settlement was fair, and it's time to leave them alone. My tax dollars can be spent on something better, like investigating Janet Reno. She is a crook, and has got away with a lot. She spent eight years covering up for Bill Clinton. I waited eight years for justice and I don't see it yet. Do you ever plan on looking into her obstruction of the truth.

Wayne

CC:WynLsk@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00008872

From: Dick H.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:10am
Subject: microsoft settlement

please recognize that it is everyone's best interest to get this settled now. let's do it !!

MTC-00008873

From: Ralph Rebandt Sr
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:29am
Subject: SETTLE QUICKLY

The longer it takes to settle this—it will continue to hurt the economy. Microsoft is in the right.

Ralph Rebandt

MTC-00008874

From: Marion Behlert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:32am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Wind up the Microsoft case! The lawyers are the only ones winning. Get it finished! If Ashcroft has something to do w/it, I'm sure it will be fair.

Marion Behlert

5926 Price Rd.

Milford, OH 45150

MTC-00008875

From: Jiri Bures
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a concerned consumer and citizen I overwhelmingly agree that a settlement in the Microsoft case is good and fair to all parties involved including the industry and American economy.

From: George Bures, geobu@mymail.cz

MTC-00008876

From: Jay Burch
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the DOJ has not represented the interests of the American consumer in the DOJ's pursuit of Microsoft. Therefore, any agreement that Microsoft finds acceptable is fine with me. The motivation of the DOJ is what needs to be questioned here; not the practices of Microsoft.

Jay Burch

MTC-00008877

From: Lelachance@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:14pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Dear Sirs,

As a concerned citizen I strongly believe this case has dragged on long enough and should be settled immediately. The settlement accepted by other States is just and fair and should be acceptable to all! Time to stop messing around and move on!!!!

Leo and Joan LaChance

MTC-00008878

From: Charlotte Venner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

This is a good settlement. It is not in the public interest to delay this any further. We need certainty in the marketplace. Also, I believe that technology has moved beyond the issues in the case. It needs to be closed.

Thank you, Charlotte Venner

Charlotte M. Venner, Esq.

VENNERADR

MEDIATION AND ARBITRATION

One Sansome St., 20th Floor

San Francisco, CA 94104

Phone: (415) 733-7858

Fax: (415) 388-1036

E-Mail: venneradr@msn.com

Web Site: www.venneradr.com

MTC-00008879

From: Allen L Plitt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs, Please put a quick end to this case. I think a lot of people are sick and tired of hearing the competitors of Microsoft dictate to our government what to do to hurt this corporation just so they may more quickly gain more of the pie. If they cannot beat Microsoft with a better product, then they should not be allowed to beat Microsoft (period). How next will it be possible to get subsidization from our government.

MTC-00008880

From: Dan Rohr
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello Department of Justice,

It is my understanding that the DOJ is accepting public comment on the case against Micro-Soft. I have, for years, been annoyed about the injustice that MS has had to bear:

* They create products that have been used by the public and government to attack them—people use Word to write documents used in court to prosecute MS, people use MS's versions of email and Internet Explorer to send messages promoting the destruction of MS; I'm sure you can think of more examples.

* They are largely instrumental in the proliferation of cheaper and cheaper, yet more powerful home/business computers. And yet, they are attacked for harming the public.

As the fictional Howard Roark pointed out in his defense, in Ayn Rand's The Fountain Head, long ago, someone discovered fire, and he was probably burned at the stake by his contemporaries that benefited from that very discovery. We haven't come very far, sacrificing great men for the satisfaction of the mob; or have we?

The corrupt Clinton administration devoted, and diverted, great resources toward the torture and destruction of the popular boogie-man, Bill Gates, while ignoring the paramount responsibility of defending the country from violent attack. I have been encouraged by the Bush administrations apparent change in course against MS. I urge you to open the jaws and let them free. The West's greatest country, with its technology and her heroes that create it, have enough enemies (foreign and internal) without the DOJ going after it too.

Best regards,

Dan Rohr

2304 Gross Point Lane

Wildwood, MO 63011

MTC-00008881

From: Jim Engler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:27pm
Subject: MICROSOFT Settlement

I wanted to take a moment to tell you that as a 3 year employee of Microsoft's Federal division and 24 year officer and tactical jet pilot in the United States Navy, that I understand integrity very well, and have seen Microsoft always act with integrity and always go well beyond what's expected of a company always trying to do the right thing for its customers.

Please seriously consider ending this political abuse of arguably one of the most important companies in the United States. Microsoft can significantly help lead this country out of recession if it's given the chance. Thank you! Jim

James Engler

Federal Defense Agencies Manager (DOD/USAF)

Wk: (980) 776-9809

Cell: (704) 277-5758

“You have not only the right to be an individual, you have an obligation to be one”—Eleanor Roosevelt

CC:Jim Engler

MTC-00008882

From: Lawrence MacDonald
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Litigation

It is time to settle this case on a federal & statewide basis. The proposed settlement seems fair & should be implemented.

The nation has more important things to do than to continue this contentious litigation.

Lawrence E. MacDonald

Crossville, TN.

MTC-00008883

From: Jim Oliver
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am concerned about the lengthy court battles of the government vs. Microsoft. I believe it is in the best interest of the economy and the future of technology that this be settled immediately.

Our economy is still very fragile and we need a boost. An immediate settlement of the Microsoft case would be that boost. Microsoft, as a company, has done more for technology in the last 15 years than any other company. Let's put the company back to work, take this distraction away from them, and see what they can do for us over the next 15 years. Thank you for your attention.

Jim Oliver
Colby, KS

MTC-00008884

From: William Bennett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:53pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

Many thanks for the fair Microsoft settlement. It is good to have closure so that the country can go forward to solve the present economic downturn without the distraction of the politics associated with the Microsoft settlement. Hopefully the interests who wish to keep this settlement open interminably will be thwarted and the country move ahead economically.

Yours sincerely,
William B. Bennett

MTC-00008885

From: Don Rahl
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 12:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please complete this settlement as outlined in the present proposal. I believe it is time to get on with business. It seems to me that Microsoft is a vital part of our national economy and should continue to add it's part to our national product totals. Let's wind up the settlement and stop the sidetracking of Government resources at Justice so they can concentrate on more important activities.

Sincerely,
Don Rahl
107 Blencowe Court
Folsom CA 95630

MTC-00008886

From: Mike Shreve
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please proceed with the settlement of the Microsoft case. Despite the hype, ALL software prices have decreased where Microsoft products are offered.

As far as being a monopoly, Apple, Sun, and Oracle have monopolies in their fields, AND charge higher prices.

Microsofts only real impropriety has been controlling manufacturer and distributor sales of their product. They've agreed to stop doing that. END OF STORY.

Mike Shreve
727-539-6498

MTC-00008887

From: John H. Gardner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust Settlement

Dear Sirs;

I am writing in support of the Microsoft Settlement agreement the Federal Government and nine states have endorsed. I believe this settlement is in the public interest. It is time to put this litigation to rest and move on. It is certainly important for technology companies to have the freedom to innovate.

Thank you.
John H. Gardner
560 S. Belvedere Blvd.
Memphis, TN 38104

MTC-00008888

From: web blank
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:16pm
Subject: e-atm integer mint budget case 01245

the money is mine not microsoft the worlds and i have the freedom of my business and govt to by the banking titles and copyright title to do such the monetary decree and desision i want is that it is mine for the first offer and the year 2002.

signed RICHARD JOHN FRANK AND I HAVE NOT POBOX AND NO ADDRESS
EXCEPT THE GENERAL DELIVERY
OLYMPIA WA 98501 RESPOND IF NECESSARY

THANK YOU ..

MTC-00008889

From: sparky
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Dear Sir;

Please stop the ongoing litigation and bring closure for the sake of our public and country.

I personally admire the direction of Microsoft and it's innovations which enhances our growth in the technology and software leadership. Our country needs to unite in these times to move ahead and continue to show the world of our advancement to society as a whole.

Sam Green
West Bloomfield, Mi

MTC-00008890

From: AANDJMARVAN
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer, I have always felt that I had the freedom to choose whatever I wanted, whenever I wanted it, and, to a certain extent, however I wanted it. I strongly believe that Microsoft is a victim of it's own success. Some people, the majority of them being Microsoft's competitor's, complain that Microsoft's success was a result of foul play. That is totally untrue. Microsoft is a leader in it's field because of a vision, hard work to implement the vision, and innovation to remain a competitive force.

These are not acts of crime or foul play, these are acts of the American dream. Let's not penalize successful, hard working people, let us simply allow them to thrive. Government intervention, in order to level the playing field, has almost always historically resulted in hurting the people the government was trying to protect, the consumer. Do we so quickly forget how Microsoft has contributed to the explosion of the computer industry, and do we also forget how many jobs they have created not only at Microsoft but also at a plethora of other companies that started up as a result of their success? This whole case is a big let down and a real slap in the face to Microsoft and aspiring Americans who want to live out the American dream to it's full potential. Don't forget, Microsoft isn't just Bill Gates, it's a corporation with many employees and many business owners in the form of shareholders. Please be very careful and very wise in considering this settlement. People are being hurt because this case is costing a great deal of money in tax revenue and in company revenue. Who is really winning here if tax paying consumers are dumping money into this case over many years? The obvious answer is that no one is. All of us are losing money in one form or another. Please resolve this matter as soon as possible so everyone can get on with business and put this senseless debate behind us. I appreciate your attention to my concerns.

Have a great new year.
Anthony F. Marvan

MTC-00008891

From: Kenneth Hopping
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:33pm
Subject: Comment on Proposed Settlement

The proposed settlement does not impose any substantive penalty on Microsoft for its past monopolistic behavior. It also does not implement any real corrective actions other than promises by Microsoft to be less evil in the future. The entire package has the appearance of a political buyout with DoJ becoming little more than employees of Microsoft. I urge the rejection of this travesty of justice. The public is in no way served by the anemic measures proposed and in fact will be irreparably harmed by what is, in effect, a government certification of Microsoft as a legal monopoly.

Kenneth Hopping
4117 145th Ave. NE
Bellevue, WA. 98007

MTC-00008892

From: Marvin Francis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:33pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I believe that Microsoft has been harrassed enough. For the good of the economy, please let the present settlement stand. Any further litigation will only hurt the company and have an adverse effect on the hopefully recovering economy.

Sincerely
Marvin H. Francis.

MTC-00008893

From: JINTAG@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:34pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear Sirs,

I believe it is about time that this case is finaly put to rest. The public interest is being served with the appellate courts decision.

Thank you for your attention in this matter.
Sincerly,
John Intagliata

MTC-00008894

From: Jean Valleroy
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 1:29pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please do delay this settlement. Everyone has worked very hard and diligently for a long time. There will never be a time when everyone is content. The DOJ can use its time and energy more effectively for other concerns of Americans. Get on with it!

MTC-00008895

From: Matthias Schonder
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 1:45pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Ladies and Gentlemen, some friends informed me, that you are "listening to the voices of non-Microsoft users" which makes me very happy as it shows that you really care about users.

My friends showed me a sample of a good writing to you and I think it is so good that I just copied and pasted it. This is not because I'm lazy or something it is very close to my statement and as my english is poor it think this is the best way.

But I also want you to know, that Microsoft "one-OS-boot"-license is one of the factors why Be, Inc. failed and is now history.

Thank you very much for taking time reading this.

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed: MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code licence or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

BeHappy
 Matthias "LoCal" Schonder
 BeDev#: E-18032
<http://www.schonder.com/matthias.schonder>

MTC-00008896

From: Dave C. Hill
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 1:50pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Here's another copy of a recent internal e-mail, Good OP Monopolistic/Anti-Trust Violating Microsoft, sent out to it's people urging them to, again, use whatever means they can think of to "Crush" the competition.

The U.S. Government has the "Obligation" to properly punish this company because of it's court conviction on "Anti-Trust" violations. Don't let these people off! They've already driven many companies with great products and ideas out of business. They've already stolen many technologies invented by other companies, changed them to be "Proprietary" to Microsoft, and marketed them as their own ideas to further their economic/technological stranglehold on the world.

Prosecute them, don't strike deals!
 From: Brian Valentine
 Sent: Wed 12/26/2001 7:14 PM
 To: WW Sales, Marketing & Services Group
 Subject: Me again—Linux updates

Microsoft Confidential—Do not print, copy or forward this email and do not share this email with anyone outside the company. For internal use only!

Now that the whole world knows we are taking Linux seriously based on the leak of my last email... Wait—stop there -since when did they think we weren't taking them serious?!? Did they think we are not going to build the best products possible? Did they think we were going to just be fat, dumb and happy and not continue to win business? Did they think we were going to forget about taking care of our customers??? NO!

Who do they think we are? We have the best d*mn sales force in the world backed by the best engineers in the world—of course we will take any non-Windows OS serious. The thing about the leak that made me mad was not that we would legitimize Linux, etc. it's good in some places, we are better, and it's not very good in other places and we are much better, but they are a competitor and we will compete. What made me mad was that my friends—some of you and some of our customer's names where in that email and then available for all to see on the web.

That made me mad. I want you selling and supporting our products—not having to take random calls, emails, etc from the press and others and I know what our customers share with us is in confidence that we will keep it internal. I have no problem any random Linux person sending me hate mail, junk mail, adding my email address to every list server out there, you name it—that comes with the job, but I don't want my friends to have to deal with the same junk.

Ok, Ok, enough of that. On to some new things we are doing for you around Linux. Linux is out there in some of your accounts and you may not know it. The ground up nature of how Linux is introduced into our accounts means that we need to modify our traditional approaches of finding out about Linux in our customer base. We have to be more hands on and dig deeper in your accounts!

Many Linux projects in CAS and Depth accounts happen below the IT Manager/BDM level. It's crucial that you get out there with your TSP/SE/MCS folks and do actual walkthroughs in your accounts. Ask open ended questions; find out what they're evaluating for both key projects as well as smaller, more tactical projects. Ask about the 'connector' pieces—you'll potentially find Linux in these areas. This is a great way to not only find out about Linux, but also other IT projects that may include Novell, Sun, Oracle, and other competitors! If you are struggling with how to do this, then do the simple exercise of walking through you accounts data centers and when you see a Sun or IBM machine, ask what it's used for, if you see some strange servers you don't what they are doing—ask what is running on them and take notes. I would like to challenge each of you to have these conversations with your customer as soon as you can. Oh—and you can bet anyplace IBM is talking to your accounts, they are saying Linux and switching to higher end non-pc systems. With the current economic times we are living in, just about every customer is looking into how they can get rid of those over-priced, legacy Unix systems and ride the PC economics wave. We need to be there when they are making these decisions and prove to them the Windows platform is the best platform for them across any aspect of their business. I want you to know just how seriously we're taking Linux here in Redmond. We're investing major efforts in creating easier processes and resources for you.

I. To start, we have expanded the in-field Linux Competitive Champ program and renamed it "Linux Insiders" Like the other TSP Champs programs, it has been changed to use the new TSP role-based database and will be ready to roll out with its new name at the Envision event in January. It is up to each regional TSP manager to select or assign each member; therefore, anyone wishing to become an Insider should see their manager to be signed up. Much like the support "communities" that define the Linux experience, the FCS team will strive to build a community to cooperate in winning business against Linux. By building a virtual team of field staff and corporate resources, we will enable the field to have one place to go for communication and competitive information. The Linux Insiders will have access to a centralized web site where personnel can request help, route issues, and share best practices that the entire field can leverage. This site, a restricted sub-set of the <http://infoweb/linux> site, will be accessible by all "Insiders," for items such as SLT reviews, web-casts, notes from conference calls and other sensitive information. If you have questions about the Insiders program, please email Kelly File of the FCS team at <mailto:kellyfi>.

II. Second, I'd like to announce the new Linux/UNIX escalation process that is being headed up by IMS Enterprise & Partner Group VPJ Charles Stevens' organization. Here's how it works: a. First, make sure you check out the latest additions to the Web sites: <http://infoweb/linux> and <http://infoweb/sundown>.

b. If you can't find what you need there, involve your local expert: the district Linux or Sun Insider (TSPs with Linux and/or Sun competitive responsibilities). These Insiders have the expertise and the resources to help you win. You can find your local Insider on the web sites.

c. If you still need help for Global, Strategic and Major accounts, the Linux/Sun Insiders (or your GM) can escalate the issue to the new corporate Linux/Unix Escalation Team. Let me emphasize that you need to work with your local Insider or your GM because they have direct access to this escalation team. The team is committed to provide an initial response within one working day. These guys have in-depth UNIX industry backgrounds and have been winning against UNIX and Linux. The product development organization will be working closely with this team to make sure you have all the resources you need.

III. Finally, we're working hard to debunk the myths around Linux. We're approaching this in waves.

a. The first wave will attack the perception that Linux is free. To that effect, we'll have an independent analysis commissioned by DH Brown looking at a very popular topic these days—server consolidation. If you're not seeing this yet, you probably will. IBM is proposing to use Mainframes running many virtual instances of Linux as a low cost server consolidation scenario for file and print, messaging, and database activities. The DH Brown report will be customer ready and will help your customer understand just how competitive Microsoft is in this arena.

b. The second wave will be a full blown cost analysis comparison case study between Linux and Windows in a variety of usage scenarios (web, file and print, etc.) done independently by the analysts for us. ETA for this tool is in May and it will be a great tool to help you sell the value of Windows solutions over Linux. If you have any questions on this study, please email the mailto: ??nxteam alias.

You can expect us to turn up the volume on winning against Linux, as well as IBM. There is some great cross team work between PMG, SMG, and CMG marketing groups to ensure we're addressing your needs and believe me, that feedback goes directly to me and the senior leadership team so we can build better products to help you win against Linux!

Thanks,
Brian

Microsoft Confidential—Do not print, copy or forward this email and do not share this email with anyone outside the company. For internal use only!

PS: I used to run Exchange—so if you think I am not tracking this message, think again. Don't forward it! And if you have forward rules that have forwarded this message, then perhaps you should think again about forwarding internal email with those rules. I want to give you folks all the information I can in a very open way. If we continue to have bad apples or careless people out there, I will not be able to help you by sending this kind of information!

"Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe to assure the survival and the success of liberty."

.... John Fitzgerald Kennedy—1/20/61
Dave Hill <dchilll@qwest.net>:-)

MTC-00008897

From: Bonnie L. Irwin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 2:05pm
Subject: Opinion on Agreement
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:
The Department of Justice and Microsoft recently reached an agreement after a long battle over antitrust practices. This agreement was equitable; both sides getting something each wanted. I was relieved to see the final chapter of a case that had costs millions of dollars and untold hours.

Now it appears Microsoft will have to share coding information with its competitors, and allow companies to promote its competitors' products unhindered. It is time to move on. We have spent enough time and money on this case. Microsoft is a solid, profitable, well-managed company, unlike some airline companies I know. As a grateful long-time user of Microsoft products, I find it ironic that those who seek to hinder innovation are often those folks whose secretaries have to print out their email.

Why is it that Congress bails out ill-managed companies, but yet goes after well-managed companies?

We need to let the terms of the settlement take hold and allow our IT sector to move forward.

Sincerely,
Bonnie Irwin
Bonnie L. Irwin
IRWIN MANUFACTURING
266 Highway 128
Wilson, WI 54027
phone: (715) 772-3120
e-mail: bonnie@irwinman.com
CC:fin@mobilizationoffice.com@inetgw

MTC-00008898

From: cynthia
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 2:10pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
TO whom it may concern, I sincerely hope the microsoft settlement is final and we can get on with business.
Let innovation continue.
CYNTHIA THOMAS
ATLANTA GEORGIA

MTC-00008899

From: Curtis Rey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 2:16pm
Subject: Competitive Impact Statement
I am writing to your team to voice some concerns I have about the proposed settlement in the Microsoft v D.O.J. case. I understand that you have, more than likely, received countless communiques regarding this issue. However, I feel compelled to write to you in regards to possible, if not probable, negative outcomes of the present state of the proposed settlement.

Mr. Cringley did an interesting analysis of the MS Settlement that I thought of particular interest to the Open Source community, and to the Department of Justice' team. But his opinions are not pertinent to just the Open Source community, but also relate to commercial and public interest regarding the competitive business and market arena.

"The remedies in the Proposed Final Judgement specifically protect companies in commerce—organizations in business for profit. On the surface, that makes sense because Microsoft was found guilty of monopolistic activities against "competing" commercial software vendors like Netscape, and other commercial vendors—computer vendors like Compaq, for example . . . But Microsoft's greatest single threat on the operating system front comes from Linux—a non-commercial product—and it faces a growing threat on the applications front from Open Source and freeware applications. . . .Section III(J)(2) contains some very strong language against not-for-profits.

Specifically, the language says that it need not describe nor license API, Documentation, or Communications Protocols affecting authentication and authorization to companies that don't meet Microsoft's criteria as a business: "... (c) meets reasonable, objective standards established by Microsoft for certifying the authenticity and viability of its business, ..." So much for SAMBA and other Open Source projects that use Microsoft calls" (as in protocol and API calls). "The settlement gives Microsoft the right to effectively kill these products. Section III(D) takes this disturbing trend even further. It deals with disclosure of information regarding the APIs for incorporating non-Microsoft "middleware." . . . Yet, when we look in the footnotes at the legal definitions for these outfits, we find the definitions specify commercial concerns only. "

"The biggest competitor to Microsoft Internet Information Server is Apache, which comes from the Apache Foundation, a not-for-profit. Apache practically rules the Net, along with Sendmail, and Perl, both of which also come from non-profits. Yet not-for-profit organizations have no rights at all under the proposed settlement. It is as though they don't even exist."

My concerns, and the concerns of many others are that "... the government is shut out, too. NASA, the national laboratories, the military, the National Institute of Standards and Technology—even the Department of Justice itself—have no rights."

To be specific. Such companies as Sun, Oracle, not to mention IBM stand to loss greatly. I would like to remind the ATR-team that IBM alone has invested over $1 billion in open source developments and products. Granted it is not the function of the D.O.J. to secure the profitability of private industry. However, correct me please if I am mistaken, but the purpose of the case was to curtail the illegitimate business practices of Microsoft and to afford a more level and competitive environment for private industry and business. Also, the cases underlying function was to further provide an equitable market place for the consumer.

I fail to see how it is expected that Microsoft will "meet reasonable, objective standards established by Microsoft for certifying the authenticity and viability of its business, ..." I believe a independent standard should be the criteria under which Microsoft may "certifying the authenticity and viability of its business [products and services]." This is because, having been found unanimously guilty of being a monopoly and all the aspects of the aforementioned, it is incumbent upon Microsoft to continue, in part or in whole, to conduct its' business as it did prior to any adjudication of guilt, penalty, or constraints.

Microsoft products, such as "Office", have become a quasi-standard simply by its' ubiquity in the market place. And furthermore, Microsoft's ubiquity in the market place has been deemed to have been established by leveraging its' monopoly position in combination with unfair, and now deemed by "fact of law", illegal business practices. Hence, if such products and their underlying technology (in the form of source code, API's, protocols, etc..) has become the aforementioned "quasi-standard" does it not seem reasonable and prudent to formalize said standard and allow governance of this standard to be done by a consortium of independent agencies. And that the underlying technology involved in this standard be made open, insofar as to afford competing business and developers (commercial or research based) the opportunities to provide the consumers and businesses relying on these product with greater choice, stability, "security" and flexibility of products to choose from and implement.

I strongly urge the ATR-team handling the Microsoft case and settlement to redirect their efforts in refining the conditions, stipulations, and mandates of the agreement in order to provide a more suitable framework for the use and development of information technology and computing products and markets. I fear that in its' present form the proposed settlement will only further entrench Microsoft's position in the market place. And it will lead to further and costly litigation in the future.

Thank You.

Respectfully,

Curtis Rey R.N. B.S.N.

MTC-00008900

From: FABEYBABY@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 2:11pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern

I would like it known that I feel this issue should be settled as soon as possible. I believe that it is hurting the economy greatly and is a waste of tax payer dollars. Money that could be used in many other places where it is greatly needed. This is and has been one of the biggest scandals in the history of business. For the good of all people in the United States of America please settle this so Microsoft can get on with business. Business that helps our Nation stay on top.

Sincerely,

Shirley J. Fabian

MTC-00008901

From: Thomas Grayson

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 2:15pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

Please send the special interest parties back to where they came from, accept the settlement, and let Microsoft's competitors compete in the marketplace instead of the courtroom.

Sincerely,

Tom Grayson

MTC-00008902

From: Gadiant2PB@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 2:17pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

2165 W George Washington Boulevard

Davenport, Iowa 52804

January 5, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft

US Department of Justice

950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW

Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I have never agreed with the government's decision to sue Microsoft, and that is why I support the government's decision to settle this case. I am relieved to see this three-year long dispute resolved.

Microsoft needs to be allowed to go back to its own business without having to worry about court costs, and strategies to keep the products that they themselves invented. The company has already agreed to share information and help other companies compete, and this is more than enough to warrant the government ending litigation. By settling we can now see positive effects on our economy and technology industry. If other companies are concerned about Microsoft obeying the settlement, a technical review committee will make sure that Microsoft does.

Thank you for settling with Microsoft and allowing this company to devote its resources to more productive activities instead of litigation. Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,

Patrick Gadiant

CC:Gadiant2PB@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00008903

From: Donald A McMahon

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 2:31pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it May Concern:

I believe the current settlement agreement between Microsoft and the U.S. Justice Dept. is fair and just for the American consumer and Microsoft Company. I believe one of the main objectives of the U.S. Justice Dept. is to review policy of any company or persons doing business in the United States with the purpose to protect the American consumer against unfair trade or fraud. The current settlement with its required set conditions for the Microsoft Company meets the above objectives. Any revision as requested by those States and/or Company not in agreement would send the balance of the scale to one side, thus causing an unfair condition to the American consumer.

Sincerely,

Donald A. McMahon

MTC-00008904

From: Merlin DuVall

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 2:40pm

Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear Sir/Ms,

This message is probably one that would be agreed with by the majority of business owners world wide.

The user ability of a computer and software is all important in the daily survival of small and large businesses.

The compatibility of the programs in MS Office is all important, and is not duplicated elsewhere although they are getting better. That is competition at it's best.

The problem of hackers and viruses today would be magnified greatly is the windows information was made available for industry use.

Although the legal process is primarily concerned with domestic monopolies I would like to make the point that the world market is getting smaller fast, and even the events September 11th illustrate how we cannot help but look beyond the boundaries of the USA when considering what the ramifications are decision made here.

Foreign computer hard ware and soft ware manufactures are going to benefit most by any information that is made non proprietary by the court decisions.

Keeping technology in this country should be the primary concern. The settlement must take these points into consideration and not just the complaints of computer companies in this country that have put their ladders against the wrong wall as far as illustrating that they cannot operate their businesses without gaining ms proprietary information. Thank you in advance for considering my opinion.

Merlin D. DuVall CEO

The MERLIN Process

MTC-00008905

From: Mike Ervin

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 2:48pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In regards to the settlement I am unsure if this is supposed to be a letter of agreement to the settlement or a forum to complain about the way microsoft has integrated its software. But from my point of view I would like to air a complaint about the way microsoft has integrated its mail client "Outlook" with its instant messenger product. The Instant messenger is launched everytime I launch Outlook and I consider this to be a possible security problem and a resource hog. I have written to microsoft and they have informed me that thier is no way to separate them.

Please let me know if other avenues are available or if I have done this properly, thank you

Mike Ervin

MTC-00008906

From: Eric Rodriguez

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 2:46pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Usually I take a passive approach, but recent MICROSOFT ACTIONS ARE OUT OF ETHICAL LINES. I'm not sure if you've heard but MS is now advertising that you better have MS licenses or face steep fines and/or jail time. I'm not pro-SUN or pro-MS. I am for individuals and business to be rewarded fairly for intellectual and business properties, but I think all of these companies have scum bag business practices. In fact because I work as a net admin in a Cisco/Sun/MS shop and have been working on upgrades I've recently had to deal with Sun no prime no vaseline fu$% - Ng. In the Sun case the company went in search of needed upgrades. What MS is basically doing is saying that they are going to come to your place of business and force you to upgrade to their latest software platforms. Of course MS are not directly saying that. Their taking the moral stance of appointing themselves as the software Gestapo who claims every company is using MS software illegally. The company I currently work for is a softwares company and believes highly that all software developed for business initiatives should be paid for. If they didn't they wouldn't be in business. I've been working in the technology field for over ten years with the last six directly involved in information systems. I have worked for many companies within that period of time and I have yet to work for one company that did not make it top priority to have software licenses for all software in use by the company. What MS is doing is wrong and even though it is NOT in the public's best interest it is supported by our government.

Should we allow one company to force their software on the entire computing community? The government thinks so because they have sponsored Microsoft's business practices, which have made it so other companies can not compete with Microsoft desktop office and Internet software, which in turn will make these forced Microsoft upgrades policies possible. Maybe the government should allow every company in the world to come to your home or place of business to force you to show them receipts for every item that you have in your possession. If you don't have a receipt for the item in your possession than the manufacturing company can confiscate any and all items and can willfully impose a fine unless you buy the companies latest product. Looks like the government loves this idea...

CC:microsoftcomments@doj.ca.gov@inetgw

MTC-00008907

From: Ty Vore
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:19pm
Subject: I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the mar

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed: MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code licence or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS in the past.

It has to carry a competitive impact statement, explaining how MS damaged Be and the BeOS with its tactics. It should also say that the current "remedy" the DOJ is suggesting is far too weak and that it doesn't carry all areas.

I truly believe that competition in computer operating systems is a good thing. Watching the number of computers constantly being attacked by hackers makes me believe that more diversity means more security.

Ty S. Vore

MTC-00008908

From: jim (sparky)
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

James E. Cliff Jr.
11808 Liming-Van Thompson Road
Hamersville, Ohio 45130
January 5, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Attorney General Ashcroft:

The settlement offered by the Department of Justice, and accepted by Microsoft, to settle the antitrust case seems to be about all that can be hoped for in today's political climate.

My personal preference would have been for the government to stay out of the mix altogether. After three plus years and untold millions it is time to end this case.

I have a great deal of trepidation anytime I see government mixing in subjects that can only cause technological stagnation and higher costs in the long term.

I am in support of the decision of the Department of Justice to settle this case. Please, end this case now.

Sincerely,
James E. Cliff Jr.

MTC-00008909

From: Bigtalk02@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To the U.S.Gov't:

Please "get off the back of Bill Gates". Because of Bill Gates and the "Windows" operating system, he has made available to the common man and senior citizens in particular, the wonders of the internet and computers in generals. He has provided many jobs for many people and is blessing to America. That is what America is—most anybody can succeed is they work hard and have a little sense.

Those who are complaining don't really care about the rest of us—they only care that someone else is making more money than them and are jealous they didn't create windows first.

Thank you.

MTC-00008910

From: Virginia Vietz

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 7:11am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion a settlement between all parties would be in the best interest of everyone, Microsoft, the DOJ and most of all the consumers. Please don't drag this out any longer.

Virginia Vietz
4680 Wornath Rd.
Missoula, MT 59804

MTC-00008911

From: lcueroni(a)gate.net
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs: As a computer user, and a concerned US citizen, I am delighted that the Microsoft case is near settlement. In my opinion a final settlement in favor of Microsoft is overdue. A favorable settlement would allow Microsoft to return fully to the business of developing more beneficial software and operating systems in the computer industry, and would certainly have a positive and stimulating effect on the US economy. I am fairly familiar with the nearly four year litigation against Microsoft, and at no time have I felt that there was a viable anti-trust case against them. Discussions with my computer literate, and non computer literate friends, overwhelmingly agree that a settlement is good for them, the industry, and the US economy. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Respectfully,
Lee A. Cueroni,
Commander, USN (ret.) God Bless

America.

CC:lee cueroni,MSFIN@Microsoft.com@inetgw

MTC-00008912

From: yergan john
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wish to express my opinion concerning the pending microsoft case. The proposed settlement between microsoft and doj is more than fair to consumers. The best thing for consumers is to let microsoft move on, providing consumers worldwide with the kind of software it has been producing for years.

Microsoft competitors need to compete on their own, not with the aid of even more government intervention.

Microsoft is the best thing that has happened to the US economy in the last quarter century. It is time for everyone to move on. The already proposed remedies are more than sufficient. People like Larry Ellison and Scott McNeely have no interest in fairness. All they care about is winning. The state attorney generals who are not accepting of the doj settlement are responding to biased interests.

John Yergan

MTC-00008913

From: Rodger Small
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that Microsoft is displaying monopolistically in the marketplace. The fact there is no alternative PC operating system widely used is simple recognition of that behavior. Another indication of monopolistic behavior is no price competition in the marketplace. Win98se has been around $90 retail even with the advent of two successive operating systems and one year later.

Microsoft has removed all competitors and has no need to be price competitive. I feel a fine of $10 billion would not be excessive. The fact that Microsoft has four times that much short term cash available means something is lacking on the competitive side of things, and also on the DOJ side of things watching the marketplace too.

Microsoft makes good products, but they are too proud of their products.

Thanks.

Rodger Small

MTC-00008914

From: Linda Mattox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

As a longtime user of Microsoft products, I am very disturbed by the intransigence of special interests in resisting the proposed settlement. The continued unwillingness of some to accept a reasonable settlement is a drain on resources that could well be spent on other matters. The seemingly endless churning of matters is only good for the attorneys and the super-egos who can't seem to let go. It is time to move on.

Linda Mattox
2591 Perkins Lane West
Seattle, WA 98199
(206)283-9216

MTC-00008915

From: ARone10171@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,

In accordance with the recently passed Tunney Act, this e-mail is a public comment on the Microsoft settlement. As an American citizen, I believe that prolonging the litigation against the Microsoft Corporation is not conducive to our country's economic wellbeing. I would like to see a settlement reached quickly and decisively. Such a speedy resolution is in the best interests of the public. Thank you for your time and consideration of public opinion.

Sincerely,
Allison K. Rone

MTC-00008916

From: tupler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:40pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Enough is enough!

Get off the back of MSFT and get back protecting the country. This whole suit was a pathetic attempt by the liberal, intrusive, Clinton-ites to stifle business and free markets. MSFT is NOT a monopoly, has NOT hurt consumers, and HAS wasted enough $$ (along with the DOJ wasting enough of MY tax dollars). If you dont like MSFT products, dont use them!! There really are other alternatives!!

MY DEMANDS AS A US CITIZEN AND TAX PAYER: PLEASE END THIS NONSENSE NOW!!!

Regards,
Marc Tupler
Santa Fe, NM

MTC-00008917

From: Charles Karney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
From: Charles Karney
702 Prospect Ave.
Princeton, NJ 08540-4037
E-mail: charles@karney.com (not for publication)

To: Renata B. Hesse
Antitrust Division
U.S. Department of Justice
601 D Street NW
Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20530-0001
E-mail: microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov
Date: January 5, 2002
Re: Proposed Settlement in United States vs Microsoft

I have used computers professionally for the past 30 years. Currently I am employed by Sarnoff Corporation, Princeton, NJ. In this position, I have, for the past two years, coordinated the research computing needs of a start-up company, Locus Discovery, Inc. Locus Discovery uses novel computational techniques to design small-molecule drugs, and at the core of this method is software running on a 2000-processor computer cluster running the Linux operating system.

Linux has provided an incredible opportunities to deploy massive computing resources in an extremely cost-effective manner. This has resulted in great opportunities for America's small companies to realize innovative technologies.

In this context, I find that the proposed settlement in the United States vs Microsoft to be too narrowly drawn and to allow Microsoft too many opportunities to interpret the settlement to its advantage and to the detriment of the consumer.

The proposed settlement governs the market in desktop PCs running the Windows operating system. In most companies, this computing environment coexists with other platforms: Windows and non-Windows servers, desktop systems running other operating systems, handheld computing devices, etc. With the settlement of this case, the U.S. has an opportunity to foster as wide a range of choice as possible in all these areas of computing and to prevent Microsoft from extending its illegally maintained monopoly. This will allow U.S. companies choose the best tools for a particular job enhancing the overall competitiveness of the U.S. economy.

I believe that there is a straightforward way for the U.S. to ensure this while allowing Microsoft the continued "freedom to innovate":

Microsoft should be required to publish technical specifications for all its network protocols, all its data formats, and all its application programming interfaces. The specifications should be sufficiently detailed to allow others to offer competing implementations and Microsoft should explicitly allow such implementations, providing, if necessary, royalty-free licenses to permit this.

Let me provide two examples:

(1) Microsoft should publish the specifications of the file formats using by its "Microsoft Office" suite. This will enable other office suites to read and write files in a compatible way. These office suites will likely be available on non-Windows platforms, and this will mean that consumer will not be forced to purchase a Windows platform merely because of the need to read documents produced by Microsoft Office. A consumer may still choose to use Microsoft Office (because he perceives that it provides to the best way to produce his documents) and he may choose to use Windows because of his perception of its benefits. However, he will now have a choice. This will be at no cost to Microsoft's flexibility to create good software. On the contrary, it will offer an incentive to Microsoft to improve the implementation of its office suite since it will now need to compete against comparable compatible products.

(2) Microsoft created a protocol called "Server Message Block" to permit files and printers to be shared between Windows systems. There is a free implementation of this protocol called Samba which allows the sharing to take place between Windows and non-Windows platform. This offers a clear benefit to consumers. Unfortunately, the Samba implementation is hampered by the need to "reverse engineer" the details of the protocol. Microsoft should remove this impediment by publishing the protocol and specifications of additional protocols, e.g., for user authentication.

Some of the restrictions in the proposed settlement are overly restrictive and should be removed. Two such examples are: (1) The proposed settlement limits the provision of information to companies which Microsoft considers to be bona fide businesses. This restriction would exclude the "Open Source" community which is responsible for Samba and Linux. Microsoft should make the information available to all, e.g., by publishing it on a publicly available web site, and the needed royalty-free licenses should permit implementations by anyone.

(2) The proposed settlement also allows Microsoft to avoid disclosure of information which would "compromise security". Unfortunately, this provision is open to abuse by Microsoft. Good security protocols can be (and are) published in full without compromising their security. This provision creates a perverse incentive to Microsoft to craft poor security protocols which rely on "security through obscurity", a rightly derided mechanism for computer security. By requiring the publication this information, the U.S. would be stimulating innovation in the entire computer industry. The situation would be similar to two other periods where the establishment of computing standards lead to explosive growth: the creation of the PC market by the publication of the hardware standards for PCs, and the creation of the world wide web by the publication of standards for HTML and the underlying networking protocols.

I urge the U.S. to reject the proposed settlement and to create one which will have a clear benefit to the consumer.

MTC-00008918

From: Anonymous
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 3:56pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have read through the settlement and agree. It seems fair without being destructive to Microsoft and outlines fair business practices and treatment of competitors, OEM's, etc. I would not have agreed with splitting the company or forcing it to release it's code, which would be unfairly advantageous to Microsoft's competitors.

I also think the settlement will help Microsoft's products and other software products to work better together, enabling computer software technology to advance at a faster pace, which, of course, is advantageous to consumers.

MTC-00008919

From: Repairman Jack
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Greetings,

The current Microsoft settlement is inadequate punishment for a company that leverage brute force and illegal tactics to gain control of 95% of the computer market with an inferior product. The notion that making Microsoft give away computers does nothing to punish them, it only allows them to market their products to an ever younger and impressionable consumers. Such a settlement only rewards this company and gives it free marketing rights inside schools.

I am part of a worldwide network of computer users that is working on getting and alternative operating system into the market place. Free competition is the backbone of the American way of life. Having a choice of what I will purchase and what I will use is my right as an American. By leveraging their market dominance against hardware manufacturers and other computer software makers, Microsoft controls the computer market. This much is known. There is no question of Microsoft's guilt. Now that they have been found guilty, they want to settle and get off with a slap on the wrist, even a reward for their crimes.

Microsoft should pay for what they have done, and the damage they have inflicted on computer users and companies that have suffered as a result of Microsoft's crimes. The DOJ should FORCE Microsoft to "play fairly" with other companies. A fair and just ruling against Microsoft should address the following issues:

*MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers and other software makers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code licence or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users. The control MS has exerted it akin to forcing everyone to use their brand of pen and paper, and making it incompatible with every other type of pen and paper available. This puts our private information into a box that can only be opened with a MS-brand key.

*The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that programs like WINE can be successfully ported to other OS. Almost every computer program written now can only be run on MS windows. Microsoft controls our data.

*The MS file system needs to be opened, so that users of programs other than Windows can access their data.

*The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to allow the option of a loading and/or booting an alternative operating system.

*This ruling must carry a competitive impact statement, explaining how MS damaged Be Inc. and other companies with its tactics. It should also say that the current "remedy" the DOJ is suggesting is far too weak and that it doesn't carry all areas.

Only by addressing this issues will Microsoft be truly held accountable for their actions.

Microsoft must be made to understand that they must run their business in a manner consistent with the laws of our country, and that if they want to continue to do business here, they must respect the right of consumers to NOT use MS products if they so choose.

Thank you for your time,
Nathan Babcock
St. Louis, MO

MTC-00008920

From: Tom Kirk
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement and Free Trade

I agree with the settlement reached to allow Microsoft the 'right of freedom to innovate' and not have their hands tied in markets due to interest groups and government interference. It is the right decision for an open and free market and for consumers world wide.

On another note, I want to comment on the US government's sanctions (through countervail and anti-dumping actions) on Canadian softwood lumber industry. Rich interest groups in the US (with the US government support) are trying to place ARTIFICIAL economic barriers on Canadian softwood lumber entering the US. Lumber that is required for the housing in the US. This practice raises the cost of housing in the US and keeps Americans out of the housing market.

If the US truly believes in free and open markets (a comment that Americans make all the time), then interest groups should not be able to put barriers on products needed by the US. The US and Canada are the largest traders in the world and the sanctions imposed on the Canadian softwood industry is a slap in the face of a country that supports the United States of America. In my mind, the softwood lumber issue should be settled once and for all—a product that is part of the free and open market between Canada and the US.

Tom Kirk
CC:MSFIN@Microsoft.com@inetgw

MTC-00008921

From: Pokey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion the Dept. of Justice case was a case where Microsoft's competition and the greedy lawyers used the tort system in an unwarranted attack on Microsoft. The only thing they accomplished was to temporarily destroy the technology industry and thus help precipitate the recession which this country is still in.

I believe the Justice Dept. case settlement was fair and that the 9 states still proceeding against Microsoft are just more of the same legal greed for money and fame, and that the sooner their case is dropped, the sooner this country and the economy will benefit.

MTC-00008922

From: Pokey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion the Dept. of Justice case was a case where Microsoft's competition and the greedy lawyers used the tort system in an unwarranted attack on Microsoft. The only thing they accomplished was to temporarily destroy the technology industry and thus help precipitate the recession which this country is still in.

I believe the Justice Dept. case settlement was fair and that the 9 states still proceeding against Microsoft are just more of the same legal greed for money and fame, and that the sooner their case is dropped, the sooner this country and the economy will benefit.

Marvin Weisbard
Tucson, AZ

MTC-00008923

From: W2EARS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:14pm
Subject: Microsoft suit

Please accept the government settlement and do not involve anything further with the states.

Thank You
Roger E. Wehrs M.D.

MTC-00008924

From: RosemaryL@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the proposed settlement is fair to all concerned and should be ratified. The Tunney Act should be passed. The economy does not need the government fighting one of our most successful corporations. I urge you to settle with Microsoft, and let all companies compete and continue the innovations which propelled our economy for so long.

Thank you,
Rosemary Loven
Bishop, CA

MTC-00008925

From: Doug Singer
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/5/02 4:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to put this behind us, the citizens do not need government prosecuting companies because a few competitors feel they are unable to compete in the marketplace. Most of the states still pushing for a court date are doing so because they have a vested interest in one of the competitors of Microsoft. I as a consumer feel Microsoft has offered to me the products I want and need, at a competitive price. I would like to see my tax dollars at work helping to rebuild the economy, not trying to tear down a strong part of the economy. Enough is enough, please settle this now so we can move on!

Douglas C. Singer, MBA CIC
Hall-Conway-Jackson, Inc.
Insurance Brokers
206-527-2444

MTC-00008926

From: Jim Bode
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In regards to the proposed settlement, I am for it. Please do not give in to Microsoft's competitors and end up drawing this frivolous lawsuit out any longer. It is in the best interest of the consumer and the United States of America in general for this lawsuit to be settled.

Sincerely,
James J. Bode

MTC-00008927

From: Judy (038) Kevin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My husband and I wholeheartedly support the settlement toward Microsoft. Too many companies in our country have been derailed because of deregulation. Microsoft is an innovative, aggressive leader in the world of cyber technology. Continue to let this company blossom and create ways for all citizens to benefit from the headway that is already in place. Do not take the wind from beneath its sails!!!

MTC-00008928

From: Burd, Noreen (ING)
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/5/02 4:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

January 7, 2002

Renata Hesse
Trial Attorney
Antitrust Division, Department of Justice
601 D Street NW, Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20530
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
VIA EMAIL

Dear Attorney Hesse:

It is my understanding that the Department of Justice is now accepting public comment on the Microsoft settlement. I write in support of the proposal.

As our nation's economy continues to slow, many consumers are out of work and businesses must do more with less. I am concerned that if we continue to pursue the government's case against Microsoft, further tying the hands of technology, we will make it less and less attractive for investment in this industry. We cannot afford to have this happen. We need to encourage investment in order to spur an upturn in the economy.

I believe it is time for the government to stop spending taxpayer's dollars on this case and allow both the judicial system and Microsoft to get back to work on more pressing matters. During this time of recession and national insecurity, the government's efforts could be better spent prosecuting criminals that truly endanger the American people and their economy rather than Microsoft.

I am certain that the regulations put forth in the decision will ease the government's concerns about a Microsoft monopoly and should allow Microsoft's competitors and consumers themselves some additional benefits. However further regulations and/or restrictions may result in inferior, expensive products and complicated internet access.

Continued litigation against Microsoft at this time would be unnecessary and ultimately harmful to the American people.

Sincerely,
Noreen Burd
39 Blackwater Road
Penacook, NH 03303

MTC-00008929

From: Wagner Investments
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please be advised that I agree with the proposed settlement. The case has nothing to do with protecting the consumer, and is strictly driven by competitors who can or could not compete. In the age of a global economy the US need as many powerful and large companies as possible. Look at the mess telecom is in due to the break up of AT&T.

Ronald E Wagner
Barbara F. Wagner

MTC-00008930

From: Trg129@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

My vote goes to settle the Microsoft case as proposed. Further litigation is costly, time consuming, anti-big business, and does not represent our democratic society.

Thank you.
Terry R. Glass

MTC-00008931

From: YBHW@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

For gosh sakes, get off Microsoft's back. Microsoft's competitors are and have been trying to use antitrust to do what they couldn't do in the market place. Maybe Microsoft does dominate the operating system market. But how did they get there—by having the best product. Does the government penalize free enterprise? Looks that way.

Approve the settlement and let Microsoft get on with their business.

Boyd Wilkes
13911 Aspen Cove Drive
Houston, Texas 77077-1521

MTC-00008932

From: Paul Tholfson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I'd like to see this suit settled as quickly as possible. I don't understand the entire logic behind it. I have repeatedly read that the purpose of anti-trust legislation is to protect the consumer public. Yet all the objections to the settlement proposal seem to be based on protecting the competitors of Microsoft, at the expense of the consumer.

I've been a CPA for thirty years. During this time our firm has gone through the entire range of business software, beginning with Wordstar word processor, Visicalc spreadsheet, DBase-2 database, as well as the CPM and Apple operating systems. We made a number of costly migrations along the way, including Wordperfect, Lotus 123, R-Base, and Harvard Graphics. Eventually, and for the past six years, we have settled on all Microsoft software: Word, Excel, Access, PowerPoint and Windows operating system.

The point is that we did this for three very good reasons, and without any coercion:

- 1.. The MS products, while initially inferior to their predecessor rivals, gradually improved and overcame them.
- 2.. As more and more of our clients and other people with whom we do business apparently made the same choices, it became easier and easier for us to share files, send e-mail, etc.. It's hard to imagine how we made it in the days when there were at least half a dozen different and incompatible word processors, spreadsheets and databases available. In fact, the one relevant area which MS doesn't dominate is accounting software. Here, we're still faced with having to deal with over a dozen different packages, to the detriment of our clients.

3.. The cost of the software is negligible when measured against the utility and ability to improve our own efficiency.

Some of the demands I see being made by the plaintiffs and their witnesses seem absurd. The compatibility benefits resulting from Microsoft's dominance in office software is an obvious advantage to all users. To return to the relative chaos of multiple operating systems, and word processing and other office software in the hope of creating what some university economists see as a theoretically beneficial competitive environment, makes as much sense as requiring each telephone company to use its own incompatible communication system, or each railroad to select its own rail gauge.

This case should be settled as expeditiously as possible. If the US and Microsoft have come to an agreeable settlement, the Court should accept it and not prolong this case any further.

Paul Tholfson
2626 South Park Drive
Bellingham, WA 98225-2524
360-734-9343
ptholfson@netos.com

MTC-00008933

From: James Bach
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my humble opinion, the settlement with Microsoft is fair and equitable. Give it a rest, and let MS get back to supplying the products that people want to buy and use!

Of course, I don't think the DOJ should have been picking-on Microsoft in the first place it is just another example of the sore losers of the country (Netscape, Lotus, Oracle, etc.) whining and complaining about not being able to compete and needing the government to come-in an "level the playing field" like affirmative action. Again, another case of someone having a dream, working hard, making a product (or products) that people want to buy/use, and then being punished because they were TOO successful. Certainly a lesson (to NOT work hard for fear of being persecuted by those who don't/can't) I do NOT want to teach my kids.

Did Microsoft strong-arm OEM suppliers to install his operating system and web-browser on their newly-sold systems? Yes. Did he FORCE them to do it? No. They DID have options and alternatives. They could have offered other operating systems, or even NO operating system. They could have charged a bit more per system to sell it with JUST Windows and NOT Internet Explorer. There was nothing that Microsoft did that prevented computer makers from selling systems configured how they (or the buying public) wanted them. There is nothing in Windows that prevents users from installing other office suite or web-browsers. I've been using Netscape for years and years. Netscape and IE both co-exist quite nicely.

I've built my own systems from scratch, and I could (and did) put ANY operating system, office suite, and/or browser on them that I wanted. I chose Windows because it is easy to use, and ALL of the software in the world (that I want to use) runs on Windows. I chose Internet Explorer for web-browsing because of some of it's better features/capabilities. I chose Netscape for e-mail because of some of it's better features/capabilities (and because there are fewer viruses and hacks against it), instead of MS Outlook. Yes, I use MS Office (Word and Excel) at home, but I could have bought Lotus or WordPerfect. I chose Office because that's what I use at work, and I do NOT want to learn two different packages. But, that was MY choice. Nobody put a gun against my head. I could have installed LINUX or OS2, but then I'd only be able to run about 5% of software I desire.

The computing world is better-off because of Microsoft, precisely BECAUSE of the benefits that a centralized, core, standards-based OpSys can provide. At work I'm forced to use a UNIX workstation.

Unfortunately, UNIX is not UNIX is not UNIX; it is different from platform (machine) to machine. In the UNIX workstation world you are FORCED to use the UNIX (and the related "Window Manager") that is shipped by the hardware maker. I have an HP machine, so I have to use Hewlett Packards' (gag me with a fork!) version of UNIX and "Desktop Environment". The software engineer who sits across from me uses a Sun workstation, and has to use Solaris (luck him!). Because there is no "core" or "standards setting" entity in the UNIX world, UNIX applications suck when it comes to consistent look/feel, modus operandi, and data-exchange between applications. Copy and Paste of formatted data??? What is THAT??? Doesn't exist on UNIX. All you can copy/paste is raw ASCII text. Jeez, thanx. Because Microsoft dictates how the Windows environment works, on ALL platforms that run it, the vast majority of PC applications look/feel/act/behave the same (or VERY similar). Because Microsoft dictates how the Windows environment works, virtually ALL applications can copy/paste formatted text and tabular or image data back/forth between themselves. I hate the "Tower of Babel" that exists in UNIXland so much (as do my fellow engineers in my company) that we've been pushing our IT folks for years to throw-away UNIX in favor of WindowsNT. Our dream is starting to come true.

Engineering management, who PAYS for the computers in our department, finally told the IT folks to buy Windows2000 machines, and to exchange our UNIX software licenses for NT licenses. UNIX has been around longer than Microsoft, and UNIX IS more stable (crash-proof) than Windows .-.-. however, because there is no centralized core of "standards setters", it has never, and never will, become as user-friendly and easy-to-use as Windows. I don't mind having to reboot my system every once in a while if while I'm using it I'm much more productive than the rock-solid, stable system!

James C. (Jim) Bach Westfield, IN Ham Radio: WY9F

MTC-00008934

From: Joyce
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:51pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please DO NOT let a few special interest people create more problems for Microsoft AND the American consumer. We DO NOT need more litigation in this case. Let the settlement take affect as stated. This country has enough economic problems. We do not need to cater to special interest people who care only about themselves and not America as a whole.

Thank You.
Sincerely,
Joyce P. Johnson
5031 Regalo Dr.
Pensacola, FL 32526-1602

MTC-00008935

From: GaardeGang@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 4:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Leave Microsoft alone. They have a great product, great customer support, and have done wrong. They are good business people, and deserve whatever fortune they have gained.

Gaardegang@aol.com

MTC-00008936

From: The Dews
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 5:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Robert Dew
5564 Ribbon Rose Drive
Jacksonville, Florida 32258

January 5, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

Competition is the driving force behind a free market capitalist society. Without competition the entire system is unworkable. I believe that the antitrust lawsuit filed against Microsoft almost seriously threatened to hinder competition within the information technology market. I was relieved when a settlement was finally reached in November.

The agreement drafted in November is quite positive. Some of the beneficial terms in the settlement are; the settlement provides for the increase in competition among software companies by prohibiting Microsoft from entering into any agreements with third parties that would restrict the third party to distributing exclusively Microsoft software, the settlement further lends to an increase in competition by requiring Microsoft to share interface capabilities with other competitor software companies.

Clearly, this settlement promotes competition, and competition is good. By not overly restricting Microsoft or the information technology market, this settlement is going to be beneficial for the economy. No changes need to be made. I urge you to keep the settlement in its current form.

Sincerely,
Robert Dew
CC:fin@mobilizationoffice.com@inetgw

MTC-00008937

From: Mauijpn@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 5:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Settle the case as now the court has ruled. Microsoft has been subject to too much hassle from competitors and their representatives. James P. Nieuwkirk.

Email at <mauijpn@aol.com

MTC-00008939

From: DanRoloff@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 5:12pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
To Justice Dept.,

I want to encourage the government to settle the lawsuit with Microsoft as soon as possible. Please except the Tunney agreement. Thank You.

Dan Roloff
945 Hillandale Dr. E.
Port Orchard, WA 98366
Danroloff@AOL.com

MTC-00008940

From: PAUL KIRTON
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 5:11pm
Subject: Microsoft case pending

Microsoft has done more good than harm. Ease up on them and allow a great company to operate as they have agreed too.

Paul A. Kirton
Managing Director
Kirton & Associates

MTC-00008941

From: Jcdomingue@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 5:26pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

First let me state that the trial which led to a requirement to break Microsoft into some number of companies to be an absolute travesty of Justice. I do not see Microsoft to be any more of a monopoly than IBM was in the late 1960's and 1970's as regards to mainframes. Were any actions ever taken against IBM? Whatever happened to UNIVAC, XEROX, and a myriad of other mainframe builders? I consider myself a data processing professional, and not only do I agree with the proposed settlement, but I would be in favor of dropping all charges against Microsoft. If you believe Microsoft is a monopoly how do you explain the successes of Apple OS and LINUX.

Jules C. Domingue

MTC-00008942

From: DEELEN123@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 5:31pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I know of nothing Microsoft has done wrong. Please just leave them alone and get on with the next case. I hate your waste of our tax money like this. How can our next innovator stand a chance in such an atmosphere?

Len Rutledge

MTC-00008943

From: FlyingNuts
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 5:43pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom it may concern,

I have watched the wonderful things Microsoft has done for our Industry, our Government and our lives over the last 20 years. Were it not for Microsoft's inovative products we would still be in the dark ages in home and business computing.

The objective of any business is to beat their competitors. However you overlook the merger of Netscape and AOL, and the merger of Time Warner and AOL. You let the oil companies merge and monopolize our resources.

Stop the insanity and leave microsoft alone. You have cost the Country "billions", and bankrupted the small investors in your "take down of the microsoft and tech companies."

It's time to set aside this case and let wounds heal. Let Microsoft advance us into the new century!

Douglas Harper

MTC-00008944

From: JOY BROWN
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 5:51pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Department of Justice,

We feel the proposed settlement for Microsoft and the states is as just as can be expected and would like to see it proceed to a conclusion. To try to make the settlement tougher or prolong it more would not be in the best interest of the economy or the consumers. Sincerely,

Joy R. Brown
 Lila M. Brown
 1526 Thomas St. SW
 Olympia, WA 98502

MTC-00008945

From: GEORGE PORZUC
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 6:03pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 5951 Price Road
 Milford, Ohio 45150
 January 5, 2002
 Attorney General John Ashcroft
 US Department of Justice
 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
 Washington, DC 20530

Dear Attorney General Ashcroft:

I am writing to express my opinion and to thank you for settling the Microsoft suit. It is a step in the right direction. I believe that the settlement is more than adequate. It forces Microsoft to share proprietary information that will allow other companies the more easily implant their software on the Windows operating system. The settlement will also create a technical oversight committee that will ensure Microsoft behaves properly for the duration of the settlement. The government should take no further action on this matter.

This suit has had a very negative impact on the marketplace and me personally. We are in midst of a recession—in my case a depression. Now is the time to rebuild our economy by supporting American businesses. We should reward those who contribute to our economy. After all, our nation was built on principles of free enterprise, and since I have been out of work since July, I want to get back to being a contributing member of society.

Thank you for resolving this issue. I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this matter.

Sincerely,
 George A. Porzuc

MTC-00008946

From: Alan Simkatis
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 6:06pm
 Subject: Settlement

To whom it may concern,

My husband and I both feel strongly that this suit against Microsoft has been going on long enough. It is not in the good of the country for us to be hanging our own out to dry. It is time to settle this suit, and see if we can't help ourselves to help our economy, in the process. Please, settle now!

Sincerely,
 Anne & Alan Simkatis

MTC-00008947

From: Joseph Wang
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 6:24pm
 Subject: Settlement for microsoft

Dear Person:

I do think it is for the everage americian citizens interest to settle the case with Microsoft inc. God bless American

Joseph Wang

MTC-00008948

From: Martin Caron

To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 6:21pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

1.. MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code licence or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

2.. The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

3.. The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

4.. The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with

HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS in the past.

In other word, i want microsoft to have right only "inside" their software but allow all API, audi/video codec, file format etc... to be public. They can keep the source to themself i don't care (i don't want their buggy software anyway) but all programing hook and protocol should be public and available under a NDA if it pose security problems.

Martin Caron, hurted: shareholder, consumer, hobbyist, programmer, student by Microsoft practice.

MTC-00008949

From: JBareuther@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 6:23pm
 Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

I'm totally against any further legal action against Microsoft. This action has been perpetrated by lawyers and liberals that want to destroy our vibrant market economy.

This action will not benefit the consumer nor the economy. I strongly urge the court to bring to a close this damaging and wasteful fraud on our legal and economic systems.

MTC-00008950

From: Herb Himmelfarb
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/5/02 6:23pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement Sirs,

Mrs. Himmelfarb and I believe the proposed settlement fails to achieve the necessary goals of a proper remedy: halting the illegal conduct of Microsoft, promoting competition in this industry, and depriving Microsoft of its illegal gains. Perhaps we are just whistling in the dark, what with there being a Republican, therefore business oriented, administration in the White House. However, we do believe that Justice should triumph over naked greed.

In a case of this magnitude, what is best for our country as a whole should prevail over what has become convenient. It is our hope that Justice will succeed.

Cynthia P. Himmelfarb
Herbert S. Himmelfarb
615 19th Street NE
Salem, OR 97301-2713
(503) 375-2934
himby@open.org

MTC-00008951

From: OWENSJOWENS@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 6:26pm
Subject: microsoft settlement
I agree with the settlement.
Joyce Owens

MTC-00008952

From: kathy baker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 6:26pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
PLEASE END THIS CASE WITH THE SETTLEMENT IN FAVOR OF MICROSOFT!!!
PLEASE!!!!
Thank You,
Kathy Baker

MTC-00008954

From: Jerry Kreps
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 6:31pm
Subject: Respect for law will disappear
One outstanding result of this sham settlement will be that it will legalize Microsoft's illegal behavior, which will lead common citizens to conclude that the law is merely an inconvenience that can be ignored, if not circumvented.

Even after the conviction was upheld in circuit court, the DOJ seems bent on grasping defeat from the jaws of victory by agreeing to this sham settlement.

Will Microsoft be punished for their previous crimes or the crimes cited in this conviction? NO!

No punishment is proposed. Microsoft gets to keep their ill gotten gain, while lessor criminals pay grievously in fines, penalties and prison time. This is injustice defined! Apparently wealth now puts one above the law. All it takes is enough cash to buy high powered attorneys and grease politicians.

Will Microsoft be restrained from continuing their illegal behavior? NO!

In fact, this sham settlement LEGITIMIZES Microsoft's anti-competitive behavior toward the only segment of the software market that has been even slightly successful competing against it, the Open Source segment. The sham settlement give Microsoft the right to determine, by its own definitions, what is a business and what it not. No superior intelligence is required to realize what Microsoft will do with that power. Why would the DOJ agree to such a stipulation? The whole purpose of the litigation was to break the monopolistic business practices and level the playing field for ALL players. Now the DOJ is helping Microsoft to jack up Microsoft's end of the field to unreachable heights, ensuring their illegal dominance. It is as if the Feds began brewing beer to GIVE to Al Capone's speak easyies, and destroy his competition, as punishment for Capone's illegal manufacture and distribution of alcohol. Or, as if the Feds not only gave the Mafia a free pass on extortion, racketeering, prostitution, and the numbers, but gave a blind eye and tacit approval to 'hits' on their competition.

Does the settlement contain any power of restraint or enforcement? NO! Microsoft gets to pick one monitor and have a say in the second. That effectively splits the monitors decision process and renders them powerless to make critical support decisions. How effective would the war in Afghanistan be if half of President's War Council were Taliban? The 'teeth' merely extends the toothless settlement two more years. Two more years of nothing is still nothing. This one condition alone proves that the settlement is a "FIX", as sham.

The net result of the phoney settlement is that the American Citizens will no longer support the law in jury rooms across the country. Why should they convict lesser criminals when the bigger ones walk free with DOJ HELP? They will see the DOJ not as helpers of the helpless, but as aiding and abetting lawlessness. This settlement, if upheld, will prove to the American people that the DOJ is really DOJ Inc. and it reduce the American legal system to the status of 3rd world kangaroo courts run by and for corporations and politicians for their own greedy purposes. Recent political payoffs, such as the DMCA, and court decisions which make Microsoft's EULA a one-way document (they can sue the consumer, but the consumer can sue them for breach of contract) have already disgraced the judicial branch.

The forced resolution toward this sham settlement to alleviate the grief and economic woes of the nation is laughable. Microsoft has already pillaged our economy for billions and billions of profits made possible only by illegal monopolistic behavior. This settlement will merely put the country at the mercy of even more outrageous economic extortions. Even now Microsoft is proposing unbelievable licensing fee structures that would be impossible if the consumer had access to an alternate choice. But, since the OEM agreements with Microsoft, along with their secret side agreements, prevents the OEMs from even putting alternate operating system on their PCs in dual boot mode, or even putting icons to other software on their Windows desktops, other browsers, operating systems and software have no easy access to public markets.

So, how does it feel to be a pawn? Maybe Watts will give you an idea of what happens to a country when a citizenry loses respect for the law because it offers no redress for grievances. Or even worse, Argentina. The most favorable reason for supporting this agreement would be if one held stocks, options and retirement funds mainly in Microsoft. But then, this would be a conflict of interest wouldn't it?

For your even suggesting such a despicable settlement I am not so respectfully,

Jerry Kreps
521 West Garber Avenue
Lincoln, NE 68521

MTC-00008955

From: Daniel C King
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 6:47pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Daniel C. King
5531 Burnham Court
Fort Myers, Florida 33903
January 5, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

My name is Daniel King and the purpose of this letter is to express my concern about the Microsoft Antitrust lawsuit. I understand that a settlement on this case has been reached and that public opinion is being taken into account in the final decision. I hope to see this settlement reach a conclusion as three years of legal action is quite adequate.

In this case, it seems difficult not to mention the AT&T issue. Like AT&T, Microsoft is a very successful business and it is disconcerting to see that these days, success is punished rather than rewarded. I would like to see this case settled in a timely fashion. Microsoft has agreed to respect the terms of the settlement as well as fair competition and has even already taken action to release a new version of Windows that will be more amenable to working with other companies' software.

It is obvious that Microsoft is more than willing to abide by the rules of fair competition and I believe that this settlement is in the best interest of the public. I appreciate your interest in the public opinion.

Sincerely,
Daniel King
CC:fin@mobilizationoffice.com@inetgw

MTC-00008956

From: RFC-822=Derek—Stevens/Intalco/
Primary@intalco.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 7:22pm
Subject: MICROSOFT CASE

DEAR SIRs:

WE ARE WRITING ON BEHALF OF THE MICROSOFT CORP. WE BELIEVE IT IS HIGH TIME THIS THING GOT SETTLED AND PUT BEHIND US. WE THINK OUR ECONOMY AND OUR COUNTRY HAS SUFFERED ENOUGH THROUGH THE LAST 3-4 YEARS, NOT TO MENTION THE PLAINTIFFS. WE THINK THE SETTLEMENT IS A FAIR ONE FOR ALL INVOLVED, THANK YOU FOR YOUR TIME.

SINCERELY,
DEREK G. & LATRICIA J. STEVENS

MTC-00008957

From: William Upham
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/2/02 1:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I believe the proposed settlement agreement between the Department of Justice and Microsoft is in best interest of both the public and the high-tech industry.

This lawsuit has dragged on far too long and needs to be settled soon before still further damage is caused to the U.S. economy and consumers.

With the country now on a war footing, the last thing it needs is the ongoing uncertainty regarding the outcome of this lawsuit. It is in everyone's best interest to settle this case and settle it soon.

Bill Upham
Americas Channel Communications
T/L 542-1205, (972) 280-1205
FAX: 542-1980, (972) 280-1980
upham@us.ibm.com

MTC-00008958

From: John Renk
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 7:50pm
Subject: Leave Microsoft alone and let the economy be on with it. Microsoft never let Leave Microsoft alone and let the economy be on with it. Microsoft never let me down and gives me updates when I need them. You will never get that from another software company.

The government went after Microsoft because they did not donate enough to the Democratic Party.
johnner@att.net

MTC-00008959

From: Francesca Ball
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 7:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To whom it may concern:

In a world where there is the AOL/Time-Warner monstrosity, it is quite beyond me how someone like Microsoft could be considered to practice unfair business practices. I have worked with Netscape on my computer, and frankly, it takes over, worse than Explorer ever did. My ex-husband downloaded AOL for his computer. Just AOL... And got in the deal the automatic usage of Netscape. It took several clicks of a mouse and a couple of deep searches just to turn off Netscape. Frankly, it's quite easy to switch 'off' Explorer. And, Microsoft doesn't monopolize the 'instant messaging' craze. It disturbed me greatly when AOL purchased ICQ... And barely even announced it to the world.

In this world, the United States... Microsoft is playing as fair a ball as the AOL/Netscape/Sun group of companies that made the attempt to gang up on the best programs on the planet.

Just my two cents
A concerned US Military Member
Francesca Ball
Misawa AB, Japan

MTC-00008960

From: Orlene McCarthy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 7:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please Please for the good of the country settle this dispute once and forever This is the best company in the world and you are trying to destroy it WHY? The economy started downward the minute this happened it is so sad what has happened. They have created more jobs and made the technical industry.

What are the younger generation thinking work hard and if you do well the govt. gets involved and try's to destroy you. You should be backing them in any way possible not trying to destroy them.

Live, Love, Laugh

MTC-00008961

From: Allan Corrin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:01pm
Subject: d.o.j. settlement
TO THE D.O.J.

THE SETTLEMENT OF THE MICROSOFT CASE WITH THE DOJ NEEDS TO BE FINALIZED . THOSE STATES THAT ARE KEEPING

THIS CASE OPEN ARE NOT ACTING FOR THE PEOPLES INTREST. I REQUEST IT BE FINLIZED

ALLAN A. CORRIN REEDLEY CA.

MTC-00008962

From: Ken Dacey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sirs,

I believe the Microsoft settlement is fair and in the best interests of all parties involved. Taxpayer money should not be spent in any further proceedings. Allow the remedies to set in and the market and consumers will do the rest. It's time to stop catering to Microsoft's competitors.

Thank you,
Ken Dacey

MTC-00008963

From: gope mirchandani
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:12pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

The very fact DOJ has setteled the case putting the necessary and fair penallities,my views may appear superfluos.However reiteration by general public should only convince the authorities that any further changes will delay the settlement,adversely affecting the sinking economy and interests of pubic at large.

In the free economy, local, state and federal governments must do what benefits the mijority.

gope mirchandani

MTC-00008964

From: MatrixDLJ@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:16pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The proposed settlement of the Microsoft litigation is O.K., albeit unnecessary in the first place. We urge approval; avoid wasting resources on further litigation.

Doug & Jan Jonas

MTC-00008965

From: Mabarreiro@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:25pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
DEAR SIRS:

I AM NOT A STOCKHOLDER OF MS I AM AN INMIGRANT-ENTERPRENEUR PLEASE LEAVE MS ALONE AND LET THE MARKET RULE MAKE MONEY OUT OF MICROSOFT THROUGH THEIR EVER-INCREASING PAYROLL TAX, OR PROFIT-TAXES, NOT THROUGH BACKWARD UN-AMERICAN PENALTIES.

MARCELO BARREIRO

MTC-00008966

From: Barm644@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am in favor of the microsoft settlement and allow them to continue with their good products and let the economy flourish. Microsoft is a great company and have done wonderful thing for the technology industry.

MTC-00008967

From: Felicity Marsh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement is in the interest of the general public for several reasons:

1. The whole dispute has been about political interference at the behest of companies who needed to use politics when they failed in the market place.

2. Much of this dispute is an effort to prevent Microsoft's best product coming to market as competitors know the significance of what is taking place and fear they cannot keep up.

3. The public is feeling the consequences of this maneuvering of the market and is certainly not benefiting.

4. Microsoft has not used its supposed monopoly to hike prices and has kept its products reasonably priced.

5. microsoft works with most companies to get their products working well together , it is generally in Microsoft's interest to have many products working well together as that inevitably means more users total.

6. Microsoft has given access to education and information and communications that would be out of reach of the vast majority of the public worldwide. It may not have invented all the current technology but it has brought it to market and given the public access at a very reasonable price.

7. to have a multi layer system with different companies trying to destroy competitors by preventing the intermixing of products would cause confusion with less savvy computer users, a waste of much money by people buying products that are quickly obsolete, or do not work with some other products, so interrupting the flow of information.

8. The economy is in no shape to continue with a dispute which holds up the range of new products which depend on Microsoft's operating system to be of use, the sale of which will help rev up the economy.

9. The Microsoft products are aimed at making life easy for the consumer. It is to the consumers benefit to have features added to the operating system which are easy to access without 'having' to go out and seek other products. More experienced users have plenty of scope for using other products on the operating system, and those other companies are themselves vigorous competitors, some of whom endeavor to cause difficulty in using Microsoft products

10. Microsoft products will obviously fit well together as they are designed to, and this is good for the many consumers who are not so computer savvy and able to seek other options.

11. Other products such as Real Networks music and video products are easily downloadable and work well for anyone who chooses to use that in preference to Microsoft's products. In fact many sites including Britain's BBC front page and news uses Real networks as its default media and I have not been able to choose to use Microsoft's media to view BBC videos, so much for choice for the consumer, I see no objection raised to this and similar bias against Microsoft.

12. America generally has gained from Microsoft's vision. it would behoove the economy to not interrupt that vision. it has not seen much of a challenge from within the states and the last thing you want is a foreign challenger taking the lead, as this economy could then lose its world lead as others have in the past when they became complacent or squabbled among themselves!

member of the public felicity marsh

MTC-00008968

From: R.C.
To: Microsoft ATR,piu@doj.ca.gov
@inetgw,attorney.gener...
Date: 1/5/02 8:36pm
Subject: Re: Microsoft Monopoly

I have been using personal computers for 14 years and have seen Microsoft outmaneuver its opponents in the marketplace. I have seen the use of Fear, Uncertainty and Doubt by Microsoft to excellent advantage. The finding of the court in the settlement were common knowledge 6/7 years ago and much commented on in the computer magazines, at least until Microsoft got control.

I urge you all to hold firm against the bully from Redmond and to pursue the monopoly until it is no more.

Thank you.
R.C. Johnston
7674 Rotherton Way
Sacramento CA 95823

MTC-00008969

From: Tom Salvador
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen,

I am not a legal authority. I cannot say what is and what is not a monopoly. What I do know, however, is that Microsoft purchased the legal rights to the "wheel." This is not their fault.

A lot of businesses went along for the ride and profited. Some businesses did not and they are the ones who believe Microsoft is wrong.

The public of which I am a member, also profited. Because of Microsoft, we could easily exchange data.

We did not have five different operating systems. We all spoke the same language. As DOS was upgraded and later Windows, the charges were minimal. Twenty dollars, thirty dollars at the most, sometimes less. Windows a little more, but not out of the range of the buyer. Did the competition want them to give out the upgrades at no charge? Their products were certainly not free!

Did Microsoft violate any laws or did they practice tough business procedures? I don't know.

Did they cross over the line and hurt the public. I don't think so. It is my understanding that our system of justice is to protect the citizens and not to help one business over the other.

MTC-00008970

From: Arlene Marie Levy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Tunny Act settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved.

A few special interests are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Don't let these special interests defeat the public interest. Stick with the settlement.

MTC-00008971

From: Peter357@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 8:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

stop wasting time negotiating and start litigating!

MTC-00008972

From: Ralph Hahn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

After reading and reviewing the proposed settlement of the Microsoft case, I feel that sufficient hearing have been held.

Those organizations that are pursuing further litigations are greedy and have no just cause for purposed injuries.

I feel the comprehensive agreement reached by the Federal Government and the nine States is fair and should be settled and concluded on that bases.

Ralph and Estella Hahn

MTC-00008974

From: Del
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I would like to say it is time to stop flogging the dead horse.

End this disruption of free enterprise, don't continue to pacify the whiners.

Enough is enough!

D. M. Townley

MTC-00008975

From: bleimeister
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:33pm
Subject: Microsoft

Enough is enough, as an American Tax Payer its high time to settle with Microsoft ! Microsoft products have helped more individual citizens, small businesses and developers of new businesses than any other software company.

With Microsoft's "User Friendly" software [the best available] countless millions of Americans enjoy and personally benefit from the resources available from their computers and their corresponding access to the internet.

Microsoft has brought a "new world" to a vast number of Americans. We must allow them to continue to invent and bring new beneficial products to market.

Our Country is now at war and we can no longer afford to seek frivolous, politically induced, judicial remedies for manufacturers of inferior products. Let the disgruntled competitors produce something better—and let the market place [the everyday buyers and users] make the ultimate decision as to which product will help them the most.

Thank you,
W.C. Bleimeister
Hilton Head Island
South Carolina

MTC-00008976

From: Kyle Waters
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The current settlement is too little too late. Please make Microsoft open up their proprietary formats for their office suits and hold them responsible to past and current rulings by putting in place observers who can comment directly to the public and the press not just a federal judge or committee. It is us the citizens of this country who brought the lawsuit against Microsoft through our state governments. The observer should report to us.

Kyle Waters
Utah

MTC-00008977

From: Joseph Alcott
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:43pm
Subject: govt protection?

This is always a way of generating political capital to finance campaigns and to line legal pockets of legal lobbyists.

May your blessings be eternal.
Joseph (Senior) Alcott

MTC-00008978

From: Michael Graham
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:58pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Please end the litigation against Microsoft—the settlement that has been agreed to is in the public interest.

Michael Graham, Ph.D.
235 Pinetree Lane
Richland, WA 99352

MTC-00008979

From: Willis S Lemmon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 9:59pm
Subject: prolonged litigation

Prolonged litigation is a nice word for the lawyers involved. I doubt that it will help any taxpayers who eventually pay their fees. Microsoft is an innovator supplying US with benefits much too valuable for chastisements by "government employees".

MTC-00008980

From: Robert Daniel Smith
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:00pm
Subject: MS Settlement Issue—PLEASE resolve and settle as soon as possible!

Greetings,

In accordance with the pending DOJ litigation matters under review, please be advised that I wholeheartedly feel that it is in the best interest of the general public, the US economy (including the world economy as well), and private industry also that the US DOJ expedite a swift and effective settlement of this current litigation with Microsoft as soon as possible.

In fact, I feel that this lingering cloud that the DOJ has had over this matter has had one very detrimental effect on our economy, and should be resolved a.s.a.p.

Your consideration of this appeal is very appreciated.

Sincerely,

R. Daniel Smith,
rsmith47@hotmail.com

MTC-00008981

From: Dennis Myers
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:17pm
Subject: Judgement of Microsoft

I am writing this e-mail due to a sense of duty and alarm. I feel it is my duty as an American and internet user to express my grave concern that the DOJ has given up in a battle that was needed to be fought to the maximum. I express my alarm that a company such as Microsoft could be allowed to continue to operate a damaging monopoly under the guise of "just being competitive". I will make two points in this comment: 1. Microsoft is a monopoly in the most damning sense. 2. They must be brought under control.

Microsoft has been in a position to place their internet browser on every desk top computer sold with windows OS. No choice it's there. They have also obviously required that if a Computer manufacturer or reseller places Windows OS on the computer then no other operating system can be on that computer at the time of sale. I have no proof of this as in a copy of a contract but the DOJ should if they have done their homework. This requirement would lead to a breach of contract if broken and most small computer makers would not have the resources or energy to fight MS.

Microsoft professes to embrace the XML open source protocol, and yet they embed it in HTML so that only a Microsoft browser can properly read it? Microsoft must be brought under control to allow the internet, computing in general and the world to progress as it should without being shackled by a proprietary system that only the "corporate programmers" are allowed access to and the privilege of improvement. Their are other systems out there, UNIX, Linux, OS/2, and MacIntosh systems that are just as good but don't even stand a chance of competing if MS is allowed to continue with their practices.

I am obviously not a lawyer nor in a computer related field, but I am very concerned that the U.S. will not reign in the MS Monopoly as has been done to other monopolies in the past. Please do not let the slap on the wrist, that it appears Microsoft will get, stand.

Respectfully,
Dennis Myers

Citizen of the United States of America

MTC-00008982

From: Gerald Adcock
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 10:48pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In the interests of all concerned and the American economy this lawsuit should be settled now. Special interest groups AND the justice department have cost the American economy enough. Through the years Microsoft has risen from a fledgling company to a dominant force in our economy. This has been accomplished through good old American free market competition and Microsoft has put out a product that left the competition behind. To punish a company and long with it the economy and small and large investors alike is un-American.

Jerry Adcock,
Orange Park, FL
Full Moon

MTC-00008983

From: Oberkosten@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a former Seattle resident and admirer and mother of a former Microsoft intern and mother in law of a Microsoft worker, I am very concerned about the government involvement in a successful company. If it is the competitors that are unhappy with the legal settlement, why is this not finished with?

Competitors are always trying to get ahead of the game and are envious of success. The government got involved in the telephone company and look where they are now. Let Microsoft be innovative and don't "cramp their style".

Julia Peterson

MTC-00008984

From: JLCORTESE@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:16pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern, I have reviewed the planned settlement of the Microsoft case and find it reasonable and fair. I speak in favor of continuing as planned.

Thank you.
Dr. Jack Cortese.
Corpus Christi, TX.

MTC-00008985

From: AToll1211@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:27pm
Subject: RE: MICROSOFT

LEAVE THEM ALONE. GET OUT OF THEIR WAY. THIS IS AMERICA'S GREATEST COMPANY WHAT IS THE GOVERNMENT DOING TO IT'S BEST AND MOST PRODUCTIVE? SENDING A MESSAGE THAT IF YOU GET TOO GOOD WE'LL PUNISH YOU. IT'S ANTI-AMERICAN.

AGAIN LEAVE THIS COMPANY ALONE! AND FOR THAT MATTER—ALL COMPANIES.

MTC-00008986

From: RLopez9153@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/5/02 11:28pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please do not delay any more on settling this case. It is too costly to the economy.

Thanks

MTC-00008987

From: Mike and Sandy Wenberg
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

I just wanted to express my satisfaction with the settlement that the DOJ has worked out with the Microsoft Corporation. I think the remedies are fair and do an equitable job of penalizing the company without tilting the scale too much in favor of its competitors. Frankly, I've been concerned that the DOJ has been acting too much on the behalf of Microsoft competitors, who through mistakes of their own, found themselves at a competitive disadvantage, and not the American consumer. The settlement that has been worked out has alleviated that concern. Now it's time to settle this and let these companies get back to competing.

Sincerely yours,
Michael C. Wenberg
1160 Magnolia Dr.
Walla Walla, WA 99360

MTC-00008988

From: Eric A Nordin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:51pm
Subject: United States v Microsoft

The problem here is that a universal operating system is not necessarily a bad thing. Government interference in the market place is not necessarily a good thing either. It is not uncommon for the heavy hand of governmental power to actually bring about an undesirable outcome, though good was intended. If the Windows operating system is so bad, then why does the government express no confidence in the ability of the market place to spawn a remedy? Linux is an alternative to Windows and enjoys growing acceptance as well as ongoing development. The government also seems to ignore the fact that personal computers can be set up to use multiple operating systems. So what is the problem? The charge against Microsoft which characterizes the integral nature of Internet Explorer as somehow illegal completely fails to recognize an important fact; every time a browser is launched a user chooses to click on an icon. My computer has icons for three different internet browsers and I am free to select whichever one I choose. To say Microsoft has a monopoly because their browser cannot be removed is simply ridiculous.

Another absurdity in these proceedings is that nowhere does the government explore the benefits consumers reap from an integral browser. This case is a total waste of taxpayer money and should be dropped altogether. It is an embarrassment to our country to have conducted this trial in the first place. Such a suit is yet another hallmark of a truly misguided and ignorant administration. The current administration would do well to get as much distance as possible from the prosecution of this case. It is not something to be bragged about or pointed to as an example of responsible discharge of public duty.

Eric Nordin
17191 Langford Blvd.
Prior Lake, MN 55372
952-447-2785

MTC-00008989

From: Nina Snyder
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 11:59pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I understand that the Department of Justice is receiving comments from the public about the Microsoft settlement. I believe that the settlement, though hard on Microsoft, is more than fair to their opponents. Finally putting an end to this issue will be good for consumers like myself who greatly benefit from the creative design of Microsoft's products. I also believe it would be injurious to our national economy if legal action were to resume against Microsoft. Hopefully, this will not happen.

Sincerely,
Agatha N. Snyder
435 Crossbeam Circle E.
Casselberry, FL 32707
nina@cfl.rr.com <mailto:nina@cfl.rr.com>

MTC-00008990

From: Dariusz Jarzynski
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:03am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a Microsoft software user, and a citizen of this great country, I support the US government and Microsoft efforts to settle the current lawsuit to the benefit of the consumer. I strongly support this settlement which allows the best and most innovative corporations to continue to develop the best software programs as a result of their creativity, their consumer-oriented research and their willingness to contribute to develop a more efficient work environment.

Darek Jarzynski
Issaquah, WA

MTC-00008991

From: Rick Girdner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Mr. Ashcroft,
Please do whatever is necessary to end this Microsoft fiasco. The time and energy could well be spent in other areas.

Thank you,
Rick Girdner

MTC-00008992

From: Charles Coon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:09am
Subject: An End to the Microsoft Case

It is time to end the seemingly never-ending legal actions against Microsoft. The initial legal action by the Department of Justice accelerated the technology downturn, eventually resulting in our current recession. The settlement in place now is more than adequate, and the economic recovery depends on a quick termination of the unjustified continuing actions by some states.

Thanks,
Charles Coon

MTC-00008993

From: Susan Sheridan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I don't believe that anti-trust laws are constitutional. The government should not be involved in economics. Please repeal the Sherman Antitrust laws.

Susan Sheridan

MTC-00008994

From: ACORNK@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:21am
Subject: Please Allow Microsoft to Operate Without Penalties

Capitalist America is supposed to boost Capitalism, not destroy it. Many of us profit when Microsoft profits. Employees, customers, investors all benefit. This action should not have been taken to advance the competitors who instigated it. Settle it now and let Microsoft and its beneficiaries get on with their business.

Pat and Fred Carlson, 766 Calle Pecos,
Thousand Oaks, ca 91360.
acornk@aol.com

MTC-00008995

From: Fabiano Moya
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:24am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Att. To Whom it May Concern
As many others Alternative Operational Systems that have been hurt by the monopolistic policies of MicroSoft. We received the request from the headers of various projects to manifest ourselves and let our minds be known, so here it is, agreeing to the last ii and jj to the requests being made by many users all over the world.

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

*MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code license or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

*The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

*The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

*The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS in the past.

MTC-00008996

From: Stu Adler
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/6/02 1:26am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough is enough! Microsoft provides excellent product support at no charge, while their competitors don't even know what the term means. Microsoft has EARNED their position by savvy marketing, customer support and reasonable prices. The agreement with the DOJ was fair. What the states want is the destruction of Microsoft so that their home town losers can form a new monopoly of high priced products with lousy service. This is NOT in the best interest of the community of users!

Stu Adler
14914 Mayall St.
Mission Hills, CA 91345

MTC-00008997

From: Jack O'Leery
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:45am
Subject: settlement

B.Gates, et al:
MSFT uber alles!! Don't give up the ship. The whole US is sick and tired of the DOJ hammering MSFT with no real objective other than to inflate the egos of its zealot lawyers. All the best, and happy new year!! OPHTH1, an admirer.

MTC-00008998

From: Ben
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 2:15am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a Microsoft "Consumer", as well as a Microsoft shareholder in my IRA. I am retired and a Social Security recipient. And I guess that this is my only opportunity to say what I think re the DOJ vs. Microsoft settlement. So here it is.

If Netscape, Sun Microsystems, et al, think that they have been "screwed", how about me? As I recall, Netscape joined with AOL in a deal that paid Netscape appx. four billion dollars. Now isn't that a sad story! But I had Microsoft stock in my IRA for my retirement days (I am now 73 years of age), and I lost 50% of my retirement fund within days of the time that Judge Jackson, extremely biased against Microsoft by anybody's standards, decided to rule that the company that has done more for the U.S. economy than any other in recent history should be split apart. My retirement funds, along with those of thousands of others, were lost apparently because Microsoft's competitors opted to pressure Congress (Orrin Hatch, for one) and the Department of Justice to make their businesses successful, rather than to achieve comparable success through their own brain power and effort.

I owned my own small business and no Attorney General, lawyers or courts helped me. My company provided good products and good service. And when I installed a Microsoft system (that makes me a "Consumer") I did not feel cheated. I was happy with the product I purchased and am still happy with the equipment I still use at home in my retirement years. But my retirement prospects are not nearly such a pretty sight due to this litigation that is going on and on and on.

The proposed settlement appears to be a good one for all concerned. My congratulations to both the Department of Justice and Microsoft for that. But what right do those still opposing the settlement have to harm me further for their own selfish interests? Let them get to work, just as I did (on a smaller basis, of course), and make it on their own merits instead of sponging off of someone else's intelligence and hard work.

In this time of national stress this country and all of us need all of the incentive our economy and our stock market can get. Our President is right! Our economy needs a stimulus—and it won't come by cow-towing to limited selfish interests by such as those refusing to accept the proposed settlement and vowing to pursue further litigation. Let's get on with what's best for our country, our elderly (myself and my wife included), and all others with retirement programs of all ages, our military men and women, and those who are just plain happy with their Microsoft products.

Enough of this particular hassling and litigation. Bill and Melinda Gates have set an outstanding example by donating over a billion dollars of their personal income (undoubtedly mostly from Microsoft profits) to very worthy charities throughout the world. How rewarding it would be if some of these litigation-happy competitors would do likewise with even a small fraction of the big bucks they are contributing to big-name trial lawyers!!

God Bless America.
Respectfully Submitted,
S. Ben Riva
Bellevue, Washington .

MTC-00008999

From: COLLINSF3@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 2:19am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would just like to say that Microsoft should not be broken up by any means. It's not the jurisdiction of our government to define competition as total equality. It would be punishing people who have worked hard to create a product that people like and buy. The government does not have the right to say who prospers or define one's earnings. Now that Explorer is free it forces Netscape to be original, provide the consumer with something new that Explorer does not allow. It forces other people to create, to strive. You do not punish Gates for being successful. Apple computer still has a wonderful product which they sell. The government suppressing individuals ability to create is everything the framers of our constitution would go against. Gates has the right to his property. This is the equivalent of if I owned large amounts of land so I could sell it at lower prices hurting real estate companies, so the government took my land. That says that my property is not mine, but rather everything I own is up to the discretion of the state to take. We do not live in a socialist government, and I fear that this decision would be another attempt for the government to define our lives as a collective regime to help one another. Look the government cannot violate ones property rights. If this decision goes through then that says that the government can control ones property which is strait communist no doubt.

There's no violation of the law unless Microsoft hurts the rights of another. The constitution says we as individuals have the right in the pursuit of happiness. That does not mean happiness is guaranteed to the individual. Neither does it mean the state has the right to define the level of happiness we're allowed. Please please please do not break up Microsoft.

MTC-00009000

From: The Talleys
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 2:52am
Subject: microsoft settlement
I agree with the terms of the settlement.

MTC-00009001

From: fred@seahawk.localdomain@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:30am
Subject: Comment on proposed settlement

Microsoft continues to misbehave. I have become aware of additional problems with the company that were not even addressed in the initial complaint. Specifically I have become employed in Korea and it seems that the Korean keyboards are designed to only switch to Korean if used under the Windows operating system. Such behavior is proof that the company will do anything it feels it can get away with while others are not looking.

Please open your eyes to reality! Do you really want Microsoft software running on your systems? You'll permit them to sabotage the government through their own software and operating systems if you don't watch out! It seems also that somehow the hidden hand of Microsoft is at work with various sites on the web, getting them to switch from Real Player which is cross-platform compatible to Windows media player for streaming media files which require the user to connect through Windows, despite the fact that numerous Unix web browsers exist.

You've got to force them to reveal source code to ALL who require it to create applications to work with Microsoft-generated files (WMA, AVI, etc), and not just to companies that operate for profit but open-source developers as well, many of whom do what they do in order to build up credentials to be hired as experienced programmers. (Or do you want to continue to import H1-Bs?)

Sincerely,
Frederick L Artiss

MTC-00009002

From: Jwelsch
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 4:04am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

You're wasting time and money. Microsoft has advanced civilization and the "sharks" are looking for a pay day. You're attempting to punish genius and reward those who refuse or can't recognize it.

JWelsch
CC: 'Microsoft'

MTC-00009003

From: Linda Paul
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 4:21am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

Please, please for the good of this country and our economy, let's accept the Microsoft settlement and stop further litigation. This should have never happened in the first place. Our economy needs a strong microsoft. This settlement is in the best interest of us all. NO MORE LITIGATION.

THANK YOU,
Linda Paul

P.S. I am not even a PC user—I prefer Macs. See, we all do have free choice. No one twists anyone's arm to buy or use just one companies goods.

MTC-00009004

From: ARTISTLSH@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:09am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Lets settle this case as decided and move on!! Laurie Snow Hein

MTC-00009005

From: Michael Korbekian
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/5/02 1:56pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to settle the Microsoft case and move on with business. Microsoft has been innovative in providing consumers with the products they desire. A few non competitive companies want to hold Microsoft responsible for giving consumers what they want. In light of the tragic events and the slowdown in the U.S. economy, its time to settle this case and move on to more important things.

MTC-00009006

From: scottmc
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:34am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel the current settlement will not go far enough. There needs to be made a level playing field where other Operating Systems will get a fair chance at being preloaded on PCs from the OEMs. I worked for Zenith Data Systems from 1989 to 1996 when they shut the plant down. I saw Microsoft Products being installed on almost every PC going through the factory. I was told that even WHEN we installed another OS such as Novell on servers, that Zenith was having to pay Microsoft a fee based on the number of PCs sold with or WITHOUT Microsoft software on them!! What BS! Now here is a good chance to make Microsoft and the OEMs out there for that matter, allow PCs to be preloaded with BeOS (perhaps from Palm Inc or BeUnited's group), Linux, Novell, or one of the many others who could step up. Gobe has released an office suite which is very comparable to Microsoft's Office product, but I fear that it won't get a chance due to Microsoft power to control the OEMs and the PC world in general. Please do something to change all this.

Scottmc
Scott McCreary
2389 McBride Lane Apt 82
Santa Rosa CA 95403

MTC-00009007

From: CaptainHealey@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:20am

Subject: TUNNEY ACT

IT IS TIME FOR THE GOVERNMENT TO STOP PERSECUTING MICROSOFT. WHY DOES THE GOVERNMENT WANT TO STOP INOVATION AND INGENUITY? BILL GATES AND HIS ASSOCIATES HAVE CONTRIBUTED MORE TO THE WELFARE THAN ALL OF CONGRESS PUT TOGETHER. THERE IS NO MONOPOLY— JUST GOOD BUSINESS DONE IN THE AMERICAN WAY. I RESENT HAVING MY TAX MONEY SPENT IN THIS MANNER. GET OFF MICROSOFT'S CASE. CONGRESS SHOULD BE INVESTIGATED FOR GIVING 1.6 MILLION DOLLARS TO PEOPLE IN NEW YORK WHO LOST SOMEONE IN THE ATTACK ON 9/11. STOP THE PERSECUTION OF MICROSOFT NOW. LET IT GO NO FURTHER. MARTIN L. HEALEY

MTC-00009008

From: jody yanovich
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:50am
Subject: MS vs DOJ Settlement

I beleive the settlement that you have reached with Microsoft is fair and the courts should accept it as the best option for all parties involved including the 9 state AG that are still holding out. There is no question that the remaining 9 state AGs are continuing this litigation for the best interest of Microsoft's competitors and not to benefit consumers. Please ask the court to accept your settlement as the best option for consumers like myself, the economy, and the company.

Thanks

MTC-00009009

From: Bill Dunn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:53am
Subject: Microsoft settlement 5 Bayberry Drive Amherst, NH 03031-2513 January 2, 2002 Attorney General John Ashcroft US Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Mr. Ashcroft, I am writing you this brief letter to urge you, the Justice Department, and the federal government as a whole to suspend any further deliberations on the Microsoft antitrust case, adopt the proposed settlement and lay this long suffering to rest. The settlement fairly addresses the major complaints of Microsoft's competitors. Computer manufacturers will have rights to configure Windows in order to promote non- Microsoft software programs. The company will design future Windows versions in a manner to make it easy for software developers to promote use of non-Microsoft software. These and many accommodations will surely open up the IT field to greater competition and innovation.

I simply think it's time to allow Microsoft to get back to work. Please continue to support your department's settlement plan, and don't let the special interests sway you toward another round of selfish negotiation and opportunistic exploitation of a large company.

Sincerely,
William Dunn
wdunn@xtddl.com

CC:fin@mobilizationoffice.com@inetgw

MTC-00009010

From: Tomkare@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement reached with Microsoft, while it represents an unnecessary and dangerous incursion into the marketplace, is much more fair than the actions that could have been taken. I use Microsoft's products and respect that company's competence in its field. Therefore, my wife and I are very much in favor of the current settlement (the Tunney Act) and wish to see it completed and gotten out of the way so this company and others like it can get on with business.

Thomas D. and Karen K. Gensler
412 Sunset Bay Rd
Hot Springs, AR 71913

MTC-00009011

From: Randy Marcoline
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:08am
Subject: The Microsoft Settlement Is EGREGIOUS and GISGRACEFUL to the Citizens of America!!!!!!!

You all should hang your heads in disgrace. You are a DISGRACE to the justice system!!! on you!!!!!!!

Signed,
A Law Abiding American Businessman.

MTC-00009012

From: LBIFAN@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:10am
Subject: (no subject)
enough already.....you are hurting the economy with this consumers are not hurt....just lousy companies that don't make better products.microsoft has made the computer Easier to use. enough already

MTC-00009013

From: Rob Judd
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:42am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I'll keep this brief, since I'm sure you're getting lots of mail. Microsoft's handling of competing products has destroyed my business, which was developing software for BeOS (the Be Operating System). Be, Inc found they could no longer market their product in the opressive environment set up by the monolith of the industry and turned up its toes last year. While many of us are trying to revive the BeOS, our real projects fall further behind.

If Bill Gates and his cohorts manage to weasel their way out of this case, I'll be very disappointed. All right, there's no point having power unless one can abuse it to some degree, but this has gone too far, too long and hurt too many. I should note that both myself and an associate in another electronics business have also been hurt by Microsoft's voracious acquisition of high-tech hardware companies, including those in the chip manufacturing and audio areas.

Rob Judd
Judd Electronics
Melbourne, Australia

MTC-00009014

From: Rich Riffle
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:47am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please do what you can to ensure that the Microsoft litigation settlement continues on schedule. Now that there is an agreement in place, let it be finalized. Further delays won't benefit consumers like me.

Thanks.
Rich Riffle

MTC-00009015

From: Jim Hassan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:53am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I feel that the time has come to end all of the litigation. An end-user such as myself is not benefiting at all from this suit! The only winners in all of this are the lawyers who will reap millions. Why is the DOJ wasting our taxpayer money on something as ridiculous as this? All of this has absolutely no impact or benefit to end users! So end it now and start doing something of importance.

MTC-00009016

From: C. Gamester
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen:

The following briefly summarizes my opinions and conclusions concerning the Microsoft anti-trust case(s), from my perspective as a consumer, shareholder and patriotic American. I believe they are shared by many others like me. It is time to end the legal war on Microsoft for the following reasons:

1. The attack on Microsoft by the Reno/Klein DOJ was misguided from the start. American anti-trust laws are meant to protect consumers, not businesses losing in open market competition. Consumers benefit when business seek to "level their competitors" not when governments seek to "level the playing-field." Protect the businesses and you get Europe.

2. I believe the attack on Microsoft was motivated to a significant degree by issues of political contributions and personal career aspirations. Microsoft failed to lobby government entities on the same scale as its competitors. Some politicians collaborated with Microsoft's competitors, who they considered constituents. I believe others saw Microsoft's balance sheet as a "giant honey pot" and wanted to "wet their beak." I believe some State Attorneys General sought to further their personal careers via the publicity that came with pursuing a lawsuit against Microsoft.

3. The results to date have been profoundly damaging to the U.S. economy and millions of savers and investors. The financial losses in the retirement accounts of millions of workers and retirees, while incalculable, must far, far outweigh any possible benefits to consumers in general. How have consumers benefited at all?

Just stop it!
Charles Gamester

Mesa, Arizona

MTC-00009017

From: lee innocent
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:47am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am definately in favor of the settlement. It is a fair one and we need to get on with the business of rebuilding our economy, of which Microsoft is a big part.

Sincerely,
Lee Innocent
Suffern, New York

MTC-00009018

From: Bob Olsen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:09am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

TWIMC,
It is my opinion that the Microsoft Settlement should be settled as proposed by the DOJ. Further litigation by special interests, that only weight the competitive discussions in the favor of those entities that have inferior products, must be stopped. Let us, the users of these products be the judge (in the free market) of which products best suit our needs and pocketbook. DO NOT PROLONG litigation any further and stop the stifling of innovation.

Martin R. Olsen
Heavy Computer User
49 Stratford Place
New City, NY 10956-4666

MTC-00009019

From: Albert Lowe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:14am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement To Whom it may Concern at the US Dept. of Justice: Re: Microsoft Settlement

While I think the final judgement is fair, I also think that this lawsuit should have NEVER been brought against Microsoft in the first place. Especially considering the bias of the prosecuting attorney and the presiding judge in the original case.

It was quite obvious that the prosecutor was out to get Microsoft from the very beginning. That is not the job of a prosecutor. His job is to seek justice, whether criminal or civil. The type of justice the original prosecutor was seeking was criminal in HIS intent. His intent was obviously to destroy Microsoft.

While I'm sure that something needed to be done so that Microsoft did not unfairly punish OEM's, I think it could have been worked out in a less expensive manner to U.S. Taxpayers. This lawsuit will ultimately cost the consumer in increased prices for Microsoft product to cover the expense of the trial, and to US taxpayers for the government's cost. As a US taxpayer, I am upset, angry and appalled at the U.S. Government's total disregard for my fiscal well being. But I guess I should be used to it by now. For at least 80 years, the Federal government doesn't really care about the individual Citizen, only the country as a whole.

But when you diminish me, as an individual, do you not diminish the whole? Settle the case as is, and find different ways to attack my wallet. And For Your Information, I am not now, nor have I ever been an employee of Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Albert Lowe (Out of work PC Tech)
4400 Edgar Rd. Trlr 29
Leslie, MI 49251
517-589-6962

MTC-00009020

From: Lyle F Neff
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:23am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is time to move on and put this Microsoft litigation behind us. The self serving States Attorney General have spent enough taxpayers money for their own glorification. Accept the settlement, end the litigation, and let us return the business of business. This litigation, started by the Clinton administration, has been a disaster to the economy of the country.

Thank you for your consideration.
Lyle F. Neff

MTC-00009021

From: Bobby Schulman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:31am
Subject: Comment on the Settlement with Microsoft

I have followed the government action against the Microsoft Corporation since it began. When the settlement was finally reached, I was surprised and quite pleased with the method by which the matter was concluded.

This settlement which benefits school children is a wonderful idea. Further, I believe it's a thoughtful and very positive way to penalize an offender. We Americans recognize that there are very few priorities more important that our children's future. The penalty while costly to Microsoft, becomes a very rich blessing for the children ... wrapped inside of a valuable lesson about our laws. I salute those of you in the Department of Justice who helped to craft this settlement. Please continue your fine and creative work.

Robert Schulman
4425 NW 65th Ave.
Lauderhill, FL 33319

MTC-00009022

From: M. Cassidy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:51am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

To Whom It May Concern: We believe the Microsoft settlement is fair and should not be further drawn out with more litigation by the Government and special interest groups at the expense of American Taxpayers.

J and M Cassidy
Marilyn Cassidy
780 Brentwood Point
Naples, Florida 34110-7910

MTC-00009023

From: Jerry Kreps
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:53am
Subject: Internet will become Microsoft's pesonal property

An additional comment:

The Internet became practical when a CERN researcher developed the HTTP protocol and put it into the public domain. Had he patented it instead, the HTTP protocol would have joined the numerous other networking protocols that languished. The others were languishing because they were controlled by patents. Folks were not interested in paying a fee to be able to use a network that they already owned by virtue of the taxes they paid which allowed our government to develop the precursor to the internet.

HOWEVER, THE INTERNET IS STILL NOT SAFE FROM CAPTURE by greedy corporations that have no respect for the law, i.e., Microsoft. Protecting a protocol, so-called 'intellectual property', as apposed to a tangible invention, with patents will absolutely kill it dead, as the numerous but unused networking protocols prove. A patented protocol gives the holder of the protocol absolute power of monopoly over the users/adopters of that protocol backed by the law. The patent holder can charge whatever he likes and can blackmail or put anybody using it out business if he likes—you can't reverse engineer it and you can't code around it. Very few companies will willingly choose such an option.

It was this patenting madness, motivated by greed, which stifled the development of the Unix operating system, and it's desktop, the CDE. These events allowed a new software company, which relied heavily on OPEN SOURCE software made available to the public domain by the Regents of the University of California, to take advantage of the greed gridlock and develop a product called 'Windows'. Even today, Microsoft borrows heavily from the Open Source community, without returning anything of value, to extend the functionality of its software at little expense to itself. With clever marketing, aided by illegal contracts and business practices, Microsoft was able to develop something the Unix companies couldn't, a monopoly. In the early days, purchasers of Windows could move their copy of Windows from an old machine, which they were selling or discarding, to their new machine. Or, if they had two machines they could use a single copy of Windows on both machines. Or, they could sell the PC and the Windows on it, to another person. Or, they could give the PC and Windows to a charity. When Microsoft became secure in its monopoly position it changed the lease to FORCE users to purchase a NEW copy of Windows if they bought a new machine. or purchased a used one.

They forced OEM's to sell a copy of Windows with each PC they sold, EVEN IF THE CUSTOMER DIDN'T WANT IT, a blatant violation of the Sherman—Clayton Anti-Trust act, and one so obvious it is amazing that the DOJ never bothered to enforce the Act against Microsoft, but chose a lame 'bundling' issue instead. HAD THE DOJ DONE ITS JOB the monopoly would not have existed and consumers would have had other Operating System options which would have allowed them to avoid the "Microsoft Tax".

The only company that can benefit from software patents is one which already has a monopoly eg. Microsoft. In this case a protocol such as .Net can be forced onto users, developers and deployers by virtue of Microsoft's desktop monopoly, and this monopoly can be extended to servers and Internet by using software patents to exercise monopoly control over everyone who talks to any desktop, include Linux KDE desktops, all servers and the Internet itself. This is Microsoft's big plan for the future.

This sham settlement will assure the success of Bill Gate's 'dream', which will become our nightmare. The Internet will be divided into two camps, one controlled by Microsoft, and the other controlled by tyrannical governments. The hard part will be trying to tell the difference. Doubt this? Then consider that in a blatant attempt to control and/or manipulate the political climate Microsoft has unilaterally removed certain politically incorrect words from the Microsoft Office Dictionary. Or, consider that Microsoft released an 'upgrade' to Internet Explorer (their browser) which automatically rewrote web pages on the fly, inserting Microsoft URLs and ad banners, without the permission of the site creators. You are a third party and have a site selling a software application that competes with one of Microsoft's software products. When visitors display your website ads for Microsoft's product appear on/over your own product on your own site. Such is the power of a monopoly. What's next? Releasing an 'upgrade' to Microsoft Money that certain stocks from being added to a portfolio? Controlling online political discussions or contents of emails?

Communist governments control their citizens directly by decree. Fascist governments control the cartels which control the citizens. The difference is cosmetic. Your sham settlement will allow an uncontrolled cartel, Microsoft, to control public discourse and commerce on the Internet by giving ownership of the Internet to Microsoft, lock, stock and barrel, via its ".NET" protocols.

Jerry Kreps

MTC-00009024

From: H Tavassolie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:01am
Subject: Microsoft settlement.

As an American citizen I would like to settle this prolong and somewhat unfair litigation that has been proven of harming the public interest. Microsoft innovations has created enormous public benefit, and facilitated our life. I give you an example, I purchased Microsoft word, but my computer didn't have enough memory, after a month, I had a chance to return it, the store said "We usually do not accept this late soft weir return, but because of Microsoft policy we will accept it". The price was near $400.00.

Therefore, I urge you and ask you to please settle this unfair to public litigation as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

MTC-00009025

From: GFoye@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:05am
Subject: microsoft settlement-from citizen
Issue of microsoft/government lawsuit: 01-05-02

As a tax paying citizen I feel the time is overdue to settle the microsoft vs government lawsuit issue. I cannot comprehend the reality of the suit regarding so-called microsoft monopoly when monopolies of far greater caliber are being perpetrated by giant industries that will have a far more significant and sinister impact on people of the world. What about the creation of monopolies formed by union of various components of the medical system, pharmaceutical and petroleum giants and energy companies? What efforts are being made to control them?

Personally, if I never had a computer I could live without it. My life would not be affected! But, my life is being effected right now, and more so in the near future by cost and availability of pretroleum products, energy sources and worst of all, horrific increase in cost of medical services and medications. These industries, through costly lobbying, control the political system of the U.S. which is not in the best interest of people like me—the people who pay the bills.

Gerald Foye
9857 Old Ridge Road
Spring Valley, CA 91977
GFoye@AOL.com
619-465-2094

MTC-00009026

From: Steve Robinson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Department of Justice,
I feel that the settlement with Microsoft is a very fair one. There will be many individuals and companies that will write to the contrary but I think that there are many things influencing them other than what is fair. Microsoft has been a major force in our economy in the past and if given the chance may contribute in pulling us out of this down turn.

Thank you,
Steve Robinson
srrobi1@pacbell.net
4958 Monaco Drive
Pleasanton, CA 94566

MTC-00009027

From: Russell Caldwell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:17am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

To whom it may concern:
I'm not happy with the settlement you made with Microsoft. It seems like you are allowing them to do the same business practices that brought on the litigation in the first place. Please do not allow them to squash the competition the way they have in the past.

Thanks.
Russel Caldwell

MTC-00009028

From: Ted Leeuwesteijn
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/6/02 11:17am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear DOJ,

"I am part of a worldwide network of business that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed: MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code license or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too. The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions. The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS and lots of others in the past.

Personally to my business MS has endorsed to get me to be a OEM dealer providing i won't sell other or at least load up other OSes onto my systems. So theorectly i would not be able to serve my clients wishes to the fullest just because MS won't allow me to. Well in my opinion it's up to the client to decide which services and tools they like to use and not the ones MS want me to upload on a PC. There are several cases known about simulair issues, i name a few Hitachi has encountered it as wel as compaq.

Now if i buy a car at a certen dealer, the manufacturer may advize in the brand and type of fuel i will be charging it but in the end it's certainly my choice which one to choose from as long as the fuel complies to their recommendations and technological specs.

And then not to mention that they are distributing unsafe and unstable software and so to speak a less superior product than many others o know and have used. They knowingly abuse this so called features to rule the world on a certen market.

If a car company do such a thing(GoodYear) they get the largest trouble at their adress but it seems that MS can get away with anything in that area. I like to refer to a few articles which may have escaped your attention and i like you to study them.

<http://www.byte.com/documents/s=1115/byt20010824s0001/>
<http://usvms.gpo.gov/findfact.html>
<http://www.theregister.co.uk/content/4/22670.html>
<http://www.theregister.co.uk/content/archive/21410.html>
<http://www.theregister.co.uk/content/4/21347.html>
<http://www.kuro5hin.org/story/2001/10/23/13219/110> and some information about beos
<http://www.gcn.com/vol19-no23/reviews/2637-1.html>
With the kindest regards and respect, Ted Leeuwesteijn

managing director
BeOS oem dealer for the Netherlands & Europe.

MTC-00009029

From: Owie Jaggi
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:19am
Subject: microsoft

If microsoft is charged then so should AOL
I believe microsoft has been unduly charged. I have tried to use aol programs while subscribed to microsoft; they either would not work or they screwed up my MS programs. I believe this was intentional on the part of aol. On the other hand MS has given away more free software programs to the public than any other provider; especially aol. People who have a little knowledge of cp.s choose MS because they know it is a much better product with with better service; while aol has a clientel of mostly people who have very little or no knowledge of computers. But then it pays to advertise (which aol does a lot of) which MS does little of ;like on public tv. When aol users gain a little knowledge about CP,s they usually switch to MICROSOFT. I for one wished there was some way to keep aol products completley off of my CP; but for some reason aol seems to show up in my software every now and then and I have to delete it.

MTC-00009030

From: CAROCK2@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:36am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

No further litigation is necessary. Settle the case. Settlement is the best thing for American consumers
Respectfully
An American voter and taxpayer
C.A. Rockefeller

MTC-00009031

From: Frank Byrd
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:47am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

Please support an expeditious close to the folly of the Microsoft case, which has made a mockery of the spirit and proper application of US anti-trust laws.

It is harmful enough that competitors who are losing their battles in the free market are increasingly attempting to manipulate the DOJ to their advantage. Now state politicians, who have such obvious agendas, have made this an even more ludicrous circus. The DOJ serves so many noble purposes in this country. Artificially "managing" our economy should not be one of them.

Respectfully,
Frank Byrd, CFA
212-697-2886
Midtown Capital Partners
565 5th Avenue, 11th Floor
New York, NY 10017

MTC-00009033

From: WILENSD@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:04pm
Subject: Public interest

LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONE. THEY DIDN'T DO ANYTHING WRONG. THE ANTITRUST LAWS ARE NON-OBJECTIVE. ALL THEY'RE FOR IS GIVING ENVIOUS COMPETITORS TRUMPED UP GROUNDS TO GO AFTER THE BEST AND BRIGHTEST. IF YOU DON'T COLLABORATE WITH YOUR COMPETITION UNDER ANTI-TRUST, YOU'RE "GUILTY" OF "CUTTHROAT COMPETITION". IF YOU DO COLLABORATE WITH YOUR COMPETITION UNDER ANTI-TRUST, YOU'RE "GUILTY" OF "PRICE-FIXING". THE ANTITRUST LAWS GET YOU COMING AND GOING AND ARE A FRAUD!!! REPEAL ANTITRUST!!!!!!

MTC-00009034

From: luckinh nguyen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:05pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Please leave Microsoft alone to do its business. The U.S.A. and the whole world need a leader in software business. We sure don't want to have to learn 100 different ways to use our computer just because U.S.J.D wants to have 100 strong companies.

Without Microsoft and Intel companies, the U.S. which has been way behind the Japanese in the 80%, would never have a chance to go back to be the world leader again since the 90's. I don't understand why we want to weaken our own strength to give the Europeans and the Japanese a new chance to get ahead (example Boeing vs Airbus in airplane business, and the Toyota vs Ford in car business).

My opinion is if the U.S. government will not support Microsoft (or any of the industry leader), it should not constrain it either. The United States of America is strong and will be a strong country because its citizens and corporates are allowed to have the freedom to think and to act. GOD BLESS AMERICA FOREVER. An Immigrant from Vietnam Ken Nguyen e-mail address: Luckinhn@hotmail.com

MTC-00009035

From: htd1
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:08pm
Subject: Microsof Settlement

Gentlemen:
Please proceed with finalizing settlement agreed upon between DOJ, States and Microsoft.

George Gundersen

MTC-00009036

From: Timemach55@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:16pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer, I use windows-98, AOL for Internet access and the yahoo search engine. That combo works for me. I own a lot of tech stocks and like the freedom we have to get out and make the next "widget." I support the Microsoft settlement, and look forward to the next innovation in technology wherever it comes from.

Let all of us get back to the business of living our lives and paying to many taxes.
Christina Staib
Carmel, CA

MTC-00009037

From: LW
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:22pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement
Gentlemen:

I believe the Microsoft settlement should be finalized as presented to the Dept. Of Justice. The case has gone on too long, it is not clear to me that the company has done anything criminal, and it is time to end the costly litigation.

Sincerely,
Les Weinberg

MTC-00009038

From: Insurwhiz@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:28pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I applaud all parties to the litigation for settling the Microsoft case. It is best for the Country, for our economy and for the technology sector of our economy. I am happy that the Department of Justice, Microsoft and the States have arrived at this settlement. It gives me a great deal of confidence for our economy in 2000 and the years beyond.

George Staib

MTC-00009039

From: WoodRuss@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft case has gone on far too long and needs to be settled soon without negatively impacting Microsoft. Breaking up the company is a bad idea and should not be pursued nor should protracted legal action. Get this behind us with a process to insure review and monitoring of their actions so that they don't take undue advantage of their past success.

You have spent far too much of my money (tax dollars) on this case and I hope you go after the real bad guys.

Sincerely,
Russ Wood
1211 224th PL NE
Samammish, WA 98074
425-868-7200

MTC-00009040

From: TACBOYER@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 12:35pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Ref: Public Input

Lets settle the issue now! It has gone on long enough, the point has been made and we need to move on to more critical things.

The settlement is one of the lowest items on my personal radar and we have things to attend to that are so much more critical that I consider any further delay of this settlement to be malfeasance of office on the part of the DOJ.

Signed,
Thomas Boyer
TACBOYER@AOL.com

MTC-00009041

From: Joe K
To: Microsoft ATR

(older versions OR the new XP version released last Fall) offers more flexibility, choice of using other products with it, etc., than any of the following that I use:

1. My utilities. ANY of them.
2. My healthcare benefits, including choice of a physician.
3. My America Online account (a member for six years).
4. My local and long distance telephone carrier.

And consider this: I can add products to my PC, made by someone other than Microsoft, and do it easily, ONLY because Microsoft has brought standardization to the industry. They brought the concept of "Plug and Play" to the PC world, which means: Buy someone else's products and Microsoft software actually assists your computer to make sure it works, by identifying the drivers needed and making all the interconnections necessary to connect it to your monitor, printer, scanner or other peripherals!

Do that with any of the items listed above. Try to "plug and play" a different electricity company this month because you are tired of using the one you currently have. And then plug another one in if that one doesn't suit you after a day of using it. Or try that with your health plan. Or the physician you just used, and wish to use another one for your visit next week. Good luck trying.

The point is, their software is theirs and in the opinion of most PC-literate people out there, they have already gone out of their way to accommodate other companies by allowing virtually any software to be used in conjunction with it.

So the next argument is that even though it is possible to do, it might be too difficult to use another software product with it? Well let me tell you this...if you have just basic PC skills, it is not that hard to substitute another product for the ones that come with the Microsoft software packages. But let's just assume that it takes a little effort to figure out how to do it... If you had the option to do that with your health plan or your utilities would you take the time to learn how to do it? You can bet your bottom dollar that you would.

Now consider this: Millions of PC-literate people out there DO know how to do this switch in products, but like me, they do not. Because they don't want to.

That brings me back to my original comment: once you experiment with the other products out there, you come back to the Microsoft ones because they are the best. Why do you think their products are used by virtually everyone out there? Because they were FORCED to use them? Heaven knows that I have every capability of purchasing the Lotus/WordPerfect suite of office software for work or at home, but I wouldn't because I like the Microsoft Office package better. And I could change my browser today to be Netscape's... but I won't because I like the Internet Explorer.

It is time that the politicians quit making issues where there aren't issues.

The focus on trying to find problems with Microsoft should be left in the past with the inept administration that started it. We should be thankful that this country is being led today by people with true honor and dignity, who are bringing us together, united in the quest for Freedom. And that means the freedom to choose the Microsoft products, because they are superior to others, even if every single PC owner in the world does so and the Microsoft products become synonymous with "Kleenex" or "Xerox." After all, those companies MADE the markets that they still compete in. Perhaps through other informed PC users out there, we can tell the Senator Schumers and the lawyers representing Microsoft's competitors to get with it and leave Microsoft alone. Microsoft has done more good for this country, by bringing productivity enhancements to the business world, and more information via PCs/PC software advancements to people in their homes, than most of our politicians could ever hope to do in their lifetime.

Sincerely,
Alan House
4858 Dublin Drive
North Royalton, OH 44133
CC:Houseman40@aol.com@inetgw

MTC-00009048

From: Mary L. Snyder
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:20pm
Subject: Microsoft—Settlement?
Sirs:

ANY indictment of Microsoft under such an abomination as "The Anti-Trust Law" is a criminal act, as much as imposed on colonial America by the British which precipitated the American Revolution. As there should be NO INDICTMENT, there can then be NO SETTLEMENT, therefore it should be a NON-ISSUE. To REPEAL "The Anti-Trust Law" is the only action to be taken at this time. Any so-called "Settlement" toward Microsoft by our United States government is punishing the GOOD for BEING the GOOD!

Because a business is more profitable in its field than any other is because it earned it. No government can call itself JUST by intruding on this business! Because other businesses cry like the babies they are, the government should pay them NO attention. Let them compete as they can through their own intelligence with their own new ideas. NO one is telling them not to do this. "The Anti-Trust Law" it's hurting consumers by inhibiting progress in designing BETTER products—yes, BETTER even than Microsoft. Bill Gates has said that he has to keep updating, inventing new products etc., as he knows that at any time he could be topped by someone else, and THAT'S the ONLY RIGHT anyone else has.

THINK your best premises, and quit badgering those who make life better for each and every one of us—Microsoft competitors included!

Mary Lou Snyder
mlobjst@sprintmail.com

MTC-00009049

From: douglasleifeste
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:29pm
Subject: microsoft settlement
To Whom U.S Government, GET OFF THE BACK OF MICROSOFT
CORP. YOU HAVE DONE ENOUGH TO

HURT ALL THE SMALL INVESTERS, AND STIFFLE FREE ENTERPRISE IN THIS FINE COUNTRY.

DOUGLAS LEIFESTE
1214 VINE AVE
SUNNYSIDE WASH

MTC-00009050

From: hairdoc
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:31pm
Subject: Settlement with Microsoft Computer should be accepted.

I do now and always have felt that the DOJ's and various state attorneys suits against Microsoft Corp. are the result of the prejudiced views of elected officials from states where Microsoft's competition reside. This constitutes what I and everyone I speak to considers an injustice perpetrated against Microsoft Corp. As you know millions of our tax dollars have already been wasted in an attempt to wrongfully punish this company. I and most Americans who used P.C's. before the advent of Windows hold Microsoft in the highest regard. I am proud of it's performance in dominating it's field because in doing so it took us out of the realm of cryptic DOS code and into the future of computing. Lets face it, the driving force behind any great advancement has always been profit. By punishing Microsoft for doing exactly what any other large corporation or small businessman would do in it's place sends a bad signal to those of us who have the nerve to gamble in the high stakes world of business. By the way what would the trade deficit have been last quarter if Microsoft did not sell software worldwide?

Please stop this nonsense and accept this settlement that is already much larger than the so-called (but in my mind fabricated) harm done to the ?public? Let this great American company thrive and grow.

Thank you for considering my position.
Stephen F. Dasaro

MTC-00009051

From: LAWRENCE SHER
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:32pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

There is no need to prolong the litigation against the Microsoft Corporation. It was an ill-conceived action to begin with and sends the wrong message to highly innovative companies that advance technology and our economy and provide continued world leadership for the United States. The DOJ needs to be able to sort out the whining of Microsoft's competitors vs. real potential damage from one of the most successful technology innovators the country has seen. Let's get on with it.

Lawrence Sher
14028 wind mountain Rd
Albuquerque NM 87112

MTC-00009052

From: Douglas Lipton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 1:45pm
Subject: Microsoft

Gentlemen: Right now in January 2002 the last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors of Microsoft and stifles the enormous potential for innovation that Microsoft has always led the way on.

Douglas Lipton
doughlipton@earthlink.net

MTC-00009053

From: JDinsfrien@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 2:16pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Enough already. Let the settlement proceed. It may not be perfect, but it's adequate. Close the deal and let's move on.
Jack Dinsfriend

MTC-00009054

From: DBen341144@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 2:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe the entire matter has been a witch hunt and that Microsoft has been unfairly targeted because it did it's job better than it's competition. As a consumer, I never minded that Internet Explorer has come loaded in all of my computers... and guess what? I've never used it! The governments meddling in private industry has cost millions and millions of dollars, and saddled Microsoft with a tremendous burden that will ultimately be passed on to consumers. How has the public interest really been served?

The reduced liability settlement is as fair as can be expected after so much time and resources spent. As a citizen and consumer, I believe enough is enough. If Microsoft has actually committed a violation of anti-trust statutes, they have well paid a sufficient penalty. I urge all parties to this matter to act quickly to bring this unfortunate experience to a close.

MTC-00009055

From: mahria day
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 2:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs or Madam,
I am writing to let the judge know of my views regarding the Department of Justice's settlement regarding the Microsoft case. I have submitted several emails to various Attorney Generals regarding the Microsoft case. I am glad that some Attorney Generals have decided not to join the settlement reached between the U.S. Department of Justice and Microsoft. And I also concur that the proposed settlement fails to achieve the necessary goals of a proper remedy: halting the illegal conduct, promoting competition, and depriving Microsoft of its illegal gains. I am writing to let the judge to know of my views regarding the Department of Justice's settlement.

Sincerely,
Mahria Day

MTC-00009056

From: NEWISLER@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 2:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Secretary Ashcroft:
I firmly believe the Microsoft case should be closed without further hardship or penalty to Microsoft. Microsoft is only guilty of being an aggressive competitor and a successful business organization. Aggressive competition is nothing new. I face it everyday in my business. Aggressive competition is quite American. It is encouraged in schools, sports, games and, yes, in business. Success comes only through hard work, creativity, innovation and market acceptance. Market acceptance is key and the federal government should not punish businesses with products that are accepted by consumers. I am hopeful the Microsoft Settlement will come to a rapid disposition with no further penalty to Microsoft.

Thank you.
Sincerely,
Norman E. Wisler

MTC-00009057

From: B. Hanford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:10pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I have purchased and used every version of Microsoft Windows. I currently own and use Microsoft Office and several other lesser Microsoft programs. I have never felt that I was charged too much for any of these products. To the contrary, I feel I'm being charged far too much by the government's continued prosecution of the Microsoft Anti-Trust case. I never felt there was a valid case to begin with, but be that as it may, I now feel you have reached the a point of diminishing returns. Please accept the current settlement and stop waisting my tax money.

BH...

MTC-00009058

From: Matthew Harding, P.E
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:01 pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement Mr. Ascroft, thank you for your consideration. Matt Harding Matthew L. Harding 1428 S, Lindenwood Drive Olathe, Kansas 66062 January 5, 2002 Attorney General John Ashcroft US Department of Justice 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW Washington, DC 20530

Dear Attorney General Ashcroft:

I am writing you today, to express my support for the recent antitrust settlement between the Department of Justice and Microsoft. I feel the stipulations of the recent settlement are sufficient and that no further actions be taken against Microsoft. Currently, Microsoft has agreed to many stipulations some of which I feel to be too drastic. However, due to the fact that Microsoft agreed to comply is reason enough to let this matter stand where it is. This settlement was reached after extensive negotiations with a court appointed mediator. Microsoft has agreed to compromise much more than I would have if I were in their shoes. The sharing of codes and more software information will be given to competitors, thus creating more opportunities for other companies and providing the consumer with even more choices.

After three long years of court battles, Microsoft and the Government have settled the antitrust suit. Now more than ever our economy needs to allow this settlement to end here. Money and other resources need to be spent on more important issues currently facing our nation. Please, let's allow Microsoft to focus on innovation, rather than litigation.

Sincerely,
Matthew Harding

MTC-00009059

From: Ronald M. North
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:05pm
Subject: For years I have supported Microsoft as a user and as a believer in the

For years I have supported Microsoft as a user and as a believer in the integrity of the private sector. After December 3rd, 2001, when Microsoft forced me to adopt their "Hotmail" and "Passport" garbage in order to get email I have been using for decades I have changed my outlook. This change was a disaster for me and many others whose Microsoft loaded computers crashed, were unable to access any internet service and were insulted by Microsoft's incompetent technicians (so incompetent they all refused to give their names "for security"). I now and for a long time in the future urge the Justice Department to prosecute Microsoft to the limits and them some until they realize their responsibilities to their customers and to the larger good of the economy. Their irresponsible behavior in putting out and forcing all customers to adopt this disastrous "downgrade" in MSN service, which for me resulted in 3 weeks of no service, $800 to fix my crashed computer, a large business loss due to Microsoft management's arrogance and incompetence should not go unresolved. Even today I and others I know are unable to efficiently use non-microsoft utilities to conduct our business.

Thanks.
S Ronald M. North,
165 Rocky Branch Road,
Athens GA 30605.
(706)548-2675

MTC-00009060

From: Michael O'Flaherty
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:05pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Mr. Ashcroft,
As an independent software developer in the software industry who utilizes both Microsoft software as well as software from other competitors of Microsoft's, I wanted to send you a message telling you that I feel that your handling of the Microsoft Antitrust case and the settlement you and your department arrived at is very good. I am alarmed that there are 9 states that appear to be holding out for a more severe punishment, and I can tell you I feel any further delay or change to this settlement can only hurt the economy at this point. The business climate is already fragile (though improving), and it is vital that a company such as Microsoft's be allowed to move on. We need stability in this field at this point—allowing this case to go further can only hurt this economy.

I encourage you to end this if possible, and focus your attention where we really need it—the fight on terrorism (where I feel you are doing a superb job!)

God bless you!

Michael O'Flaherty
eInvasion, Inc.
8580 Deer Meadow Blvd.
Streetsboro, OH 44241

MTC-00009061

From: William Franklin
To: Microsoft ATR, Jim Bunning, Mitch
McConnel, president...
Date: 1/6/02 1:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

After careful review of the proposed settlement I judge it to be fair to all parties and especially the public.

Bill Franklin,
4 Westview Drive,
Madisonville, KY 42431
(270) 825-8719

MTC-00009062

From: GEAUXLDEN@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:23pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Gentlemen:
It is time to end the prosecution (persecution) of MICROSOFT CORPORATION. Is the next step to require MCDONALDS to sell WENDY'S french fries? Get real, the cost of computers has come down ... computer literacy is at an all time high, the computer you are receiving this message on probably has a MICROSOFT operating system. What it boils down to is that while Washington spends it's every waking hour figuring out how to keep things status quo— MICROSOFT has become successful by giving the average citizen a tool to change his or her life—at a reasonable cost.

We should be thankful for the contributions of this great company instead of trying to find ways to penalize them for their success. You owe Bill Gates and Company a big public apology for the harassment.

Mike Winski
103 Sundance Pass
Lafayette, LA 70508

MTC-00009063

From: Joel Krist
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To the Department of Justice,
Please uphold the proposed settlement agreed to by the federal government, Microsoft, and the nine states. The proposed settlement is in the best interest of consumers. The states who continue to oppose the settlement are doing so simply to protect the interests of the businesses located within their borders. They are not truly concerned with what's in the "public interest, as the Tunney Act requires. Microsoft's competitors claim that Microsoft's business practices have stifled innovation and reduced choices for consumers yet they have failed to show that consumers have been harmed. While it's true that the technology agendas offered by Microsoft's competitors face a fierce challenge, sometimes leading to their failure, it's important to remember that the failure of a technology or platform by itself does not necessarily mean consumers lose. Not all technologies or platforms should succeed and it is the marketplace and the consumer who should decide the winners and losers. The proposed settlement offers tough, reasonable remedies while at the same time it avoids destroying the freedom of Microsoft, and its competitors, to innovate.

Sincerely,
Joel Krist

MTC-00009064

From: Dorscarjon@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 3:51pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My wife, Carole G. Dorsey, and I (John W. Dorsey) would like to voice our support for the provisions of the Tunney Act during the public comment period. We feel that this settlement is tough but reasonable and fair to all parties involved.

MTC-00009065

From: Jack Gardner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:16pm
Subject: Microsoft is right!

Microsoft is wholly in the right, and the Justice Department is wholly in the wrong. Microsoft benefits the nation, the government regulations of business harm the nation. But that is not the justification for Microsoft's right to exercise its own judgement in producing and marketing its products. The justification is the same as for my right to live my own life by my judgement. Them that don't like me can leave me alone. Success in a free market legal system is not an act of aggression—it is a badge of honor.

Jack Gardner
11212 Hidden Bluff Dr.
Austin, TX 78754

MTC-00009066

From: Edward B. Riggio
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 4:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To: US DOJ

It is time to finalize the Microsoft Settlement. Lets not prolong this expensive Microsoft settlement any further. The actions agreed to by Microsoft, Justice Department and nine states including New York where I live, are fair and good for consumers. The other plaintiffs are just trying to gain a competitive edge by delaying the settlement. We need to get on with strengthening the economy and one way to do this is to finalize the Microsoft Settlement by February 1, 2002.

Respectively,
Ed Riggio
Woodstock, NY 12498

MTC-00009067

From: Joan and Dick Hinman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 4:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Settle Now. Do not drag this on any longer as it should have never been done in the first place.

J. Hinman

MTC-00009068

From: Michael J. Hutchinson
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 4:44pm

Subject: Microsoft settlement
Please approve the settlement.

MTC-00009069

From: Surge02@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 4:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Bennett Fisher
Johns Hopkins University
1/6/02

Microsoft Settlement

Bill Gates is one of the greatest business leaders in the history of our capitalist country. He helped Microsoft gain monopolistic power by using great business tactics and had the power to use anticompetitive acts to preserve it. In United States v. Microsoft, remedies are needed in order to lessen Microsoft's control and increase competition. The remedies that the government proposed are solid, but still allow Microsoft to act anticompetitively. Noticing this lack of enforcement, Microsoft jumped on the government's proposal. They even offered to donate equipment and programs to needy schools in order to cover up their excitement and show some remorse. The only effective solution in this case is to have Microsoft license their technology to competitors. This will avoid further problems and make consumers better off.

By producing a Windows operating system that is cheaper, more prevalent, and has more capabilities and potential than any other operating system yet developed, Microsoft was able to capture an incredible amount of the market share. More specifically, Microsoft controlled an impressive 95% of the market. The court hearings and proceedings stemmed not from the fact that they had this power, but from their actions taken in order to maintain and preserve it. More important than the anticompetitive acts themselves is the realization that this type of market structure alone produces power in that it creates natural barriers of entry. These natural barriers result from the preferences of developers to work for an operating system with a strong consumer base.

It is well known that Microsoft is a monopoly and controls enough market power to effectively be considered one. Therefore, that is not an issue that needs to be discussed. The reason it is mentioned is that the more of the market that Microsoft controls, the more power they have to dictate prices or exclude competition. In other words, they have the ability to engage in anticompetitive acts in order to maintain their power. As a direct result, the government's main objective in proposing remedies was to lessen Microsoft's control over the market and allow other software makers to compete. More specifically, they wanted to discourage Microsoft from developing software that other companies had already developed for the Windows operating system and they wanted to stop Microsoft from forcing dealings through exclusionary acts. The remedies proposed by the government were not done so in order to knock Microsoft completely out of the market. With the hope of giving all software developers a fair chance, the government's proposal has good core ideas, but lacks execution. One of the proposals assures that competitor manufacturers and software vendors remain free to offer and support non-Microsoft software without the fear of punishment by Microsoft. In other words, they can bundle Netscape and other non-associated explorers to the Windows operating system. By giving competitors the freedom to choose which software is built in, they control how the technology evolves. The government's proposal also states that Microsoft is not permitted to retaliate against software or hardware vendors that are developing, using, distributing, permitting, or supporting any software that competes with Microsoft. But, because of the wording in these proposals, Microsoft can bypass this. For example, they can retaliate against developers or vendors that are not competitors. In addition, what constitutes retaliation? If Microsoft produces a program for windows that has already been designed to work with windows, is that considered retaliation?

Even the three person technical committee established to prevent these problems is useless here because the power is based on their personal interpretation of the decree. As a result, the decree does nothing to establish a more efficient or direct way to control Microsoft. It appears to almost rely on the good faith of Bill Gates and Microsoft; the same brilliant and cunning CEO that helped his company become the powerhouse in the industry and will do anything to ensure that it stays there.

The government was correct in its intentions, but the language in which the proposal was written does nothing to alleviate Microsoft's grasp of market. In fact, this slap on the wrist by the government and the generous donations by Microsoft to needy education systems only help make its future more promising. The supposedly altruistic donations by Microsoft are in response to consumer class-action lawsuits. But, by donating refurbished equipment to poor school systems, Microsoft will enhance its competitive advantage in schools while doing little to meet their true extensive needs. Apple further argued that this would extend Microsoft's monopoly power, the problem that prompted the lawsuits in the first place.

Because of the nature of the subject, technology, control over the industry has a history of changing hands. Microsoft was an exception. They were able to maintain their power through natural barriers of entry and exclusionary acts. Although they have already been found guilty of this and their future actions will be watched closely, the damage is already done. Software companies prefer to produce programs for an operating system like Windows that is already established. Gate's timing was impeccable and as a result Microsoft will reap the benefits far into the future. As it is commonplace in this industry for any one company to have the majority of control at any given time, why not just let Microsoft enjoy its time at the top? First off and most importantly, the actions by Microsoft made consumers worse off. Secondly, there is a utilitarian way to handle this situation that will make everyone better off. Finally, the way in which they maintained this power is illegal.

Because of the government's inability to enforce the remedies, harsher remedies are needed in order to restore competition. A mandatory licensing of Microsoft's operating system technology would prove an ideal solution to this problem. More specifically, competitors such as Novel or IBM can bid and obtain a license from Microsoft. Using Microsoft's technology, they could add to and create a completely new system. For example, IBM could market Windows XP under their own trade name by obtaining a license and paying maybe 5% to Microsoft. This license fee needs to be set ahead of time so that there are no allegations of discriminatory actions. By doing this, Microsoft could remain at the top, but it now gives other companies a chance to survive and compete. As companies use Microsoft's technology they will gain support and Microsoft's market share will decrease. Since control over the market is directly related to the ability to control prices or exclude competition, Microsoft will not be able to engage in anticompetitive acts. As Microsoft's power over the market decreases, they will gain the additional license fee for the use of its operating system. The natural barriers of entry will subside as other companies begin to gain popularity and consumers and producers spread out.

This idea has a few very beneficial effects. First, it avoids a potential breakup by Microsoft. There is no need to break up the company's assets and destroy the very thing that makes Microsoft so unique. Although the proposed breakup of Microsoft would allow for more competition, a licensing agreement has the same effects without the disruptions. In other words, it levels the playing field without the costs. Second, Microsoft's software producers and engineers are not restricted from continuing to make new programs. Therefore, as Microsoft continues to develop new systems, other companies will use this to develop their own and both will excel. Overall, everyone is better off and consumers will see an increase in the quality of products available.

So why is this a better idea than the one proposed by the government? First, it addresses and eliminates the main problem, Microsoft's hold on the market for all Intel-compatible PC operating systems. In addition, there is no vague language in which Mr. Gates could cleverly bypass. Finally, there is no need for a committee or donations or any of the other things that make this case more complicated than it needs to be.

The only issue that could be brought against this idea is the possibility that another company could design a more productive operating system. Companies would then compete fiercely for that top spot. This is analogous to the video game industry in which every couple of years Nintendo, Sony, and few other major manufacturers release their respective systems within a couple of weeks of each other. This competition pushes them to produce better products and therefore enhances the well being of the consumers. This is exactly the goal of the licensing agreement with Microsoft.

While Microsoft has already settled this case with the Justice Department, its problems are not over. Or are they? Microsoft is still under investigation by the European Commission for failing to disclose information to its competitors concerning operating systems for personal computers and servers and that it engaged in the discriminatory licensing of its technology. All of these problems would be taken care of if the government would adopt an overall licensing agreement. This would allow all information to be available for a fee and charge the same prices to everyone. As has been shown, the current remedies proposed for Microsoft are not efficient and will not end the long-standing problem. If the government considers the possibility of a licensing agreement they would realize that this is a much better solution.

MTC-0000970

From: George J Jorgenson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 4:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-Trust Comments
Dear US Justice Department,

I do not believe the remedies reported in the news are going to have the slightest impact on Microsoft's predatory marketing practices, and subsequent illegal abuse of monopoly power. Take, for one small example, the case that started it all: internet browsers. Since the time the case freed, Microsoft bundled their browser for free, and essentially drove all other browsers out of the market. They claim they have a right to do this, and that they are only serving consumer needs.

But their most recent versions—including ALL browsers shipped with the new Windows XP—have made a significant change: they no longer support industry-standard third-party browser plug-ins for presenting specialized content, such as movies, sound, animation, and virtual reality. This means that third-party content providers, such as Real Audio, Macromedia Flash, Adobe PDF, and Apple QuickTime—just to name a few of the larger players—no longer function under Microsoft's browsers using the standard installation procedure. Instead, they must provide special installations that go through an additional layer of software—Active X—that Microsoft's own content provisioning software does not go through. This means that ordinary consumers will have to struggle needlessly to install third-party content provisioning software, but perhaps more importantly, if they do actually get through that struggle, the third-party plug-ins will run more slowly and with less capability than will Microsoft's own content provisioning software.

This also means that some 90% of new computers sold cannot properly access my web site, which has Apple QuickTime content, whereas 90% of pre-Windows XP computers could. With this move, done right under your collective noses while you negotiated a cushy "hand slap" settlement, Microsoft not only successfully extended their operating system monopoly into the internet browser market, but now they have extended their browser monopoly into the content provider marketplace! They have broken the law once, and while being penalized, have broken it again.

Take heed of my prediction: now that Microsoft controls content provisioning, content will come next. Within three years, the average consumer with an "out of the box" computer will be unable to view any content that Microsoft has not provided. With all due respect, the Ashcroft Justice Department is asleep at the wheel on this one. Quit meddling with "states' rights" Oregon and California, and concentrate on appropriately punishing large, multi-national companies who are already convicted of breaking laws.

Sincerely,
George Jorgenson
A Concerned Citizen

MTC-00009071

From: Bob Harkness
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir:

Please include this in public comment regarding the Microsoft antitrust settlement. I have worked developing software for 30 years so I have seen monopolistic pricing at work in the information technology industry. From a consumer's point of view, Microsoft provides a good value and definitely is not practicing monopolistic pricing. Oracle is a good comparison because they have been one of the loudest complainers about Microsoft, and their database product is directly comparable to Microsoft's SQL Server. The total cost of ownership on a per seat basis is much less for the Microsoft product. Oracle's database caters to the mid to high-end market. Microsoft's SQL Server will work effectively for small to upper mid market applications. Consumers have been well served by the competition.

On the other hand, Microsoft is an overly aggressive competitor. I consider some of their business practices unethical at best and obviously illegal in some cases. I don't want to see Microsoft run everyone else out of the business. But, I don't want the government to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. Bottom line: I think the agreement that the federal government and Microsoft has reached is as good as we can expect. The sooner this is resolved the better it will be for the economy.

Bob Harkness
9221 NE 24th St.
Bellevue, WA 98004
425-450-9340

MTC-00009072

From: Eileen J. Palumbo
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:04pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

ENOUGH WITH THIS WAR ON MICROSOFT! I FEEL THIS MICROSOFT HAS DONE A GREAT SERVICE TO OUR COUNTRY AND DOESN'T DESERVE THE TREATMENT IT IS GETTING FROM OUR JUSTICE DEPARTMENT. OUR COURTS SHOULD NOT BE MANIPULATED BY JEALOUS COMPETITORS.

THIS COUNTRY HAS A LOT MORE TO WORRY ABOUT AT THIS TIME. OUR

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT SHOULD BE CONCENTRATING ALL THEIR EFFORTS ON CATCHING AND PROSECUTING TERRORISTS INSTEAD OF TEARING APART ONE OF OUR MOST PRESTIGIOUS COMPANYS.

EILEEN AND ARTHUR PALUMBO
159 NORTH GRANT AVENUE
COLONIA, NJ 07067

MTC-00009073

From: Sean OToole
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
TO: US Dept of Justice.

As a concerned citizen and tax payer I urge you to put the Microsoft case to rest. It may have been a nice idea for the Federal Government and State Governments to sue Microsoft when the economy was soaring and the states saw dollar signs...those days are gone. I understand that a few high level government officials are looking for private sector jobs and like to make a name for themselves while they have the unlimited budget of the taxpayer. If we continue to allow a few lawyers seek name recognition at the expense of the corporation we will destroy our free economy. The governments job should be to protect the greater public interest and allow Americans to pursue their own happiness. It has been made very clear in this case that Microsoft has not damaged the consumer or the public's interest. I appreciate all our government does. Americans truly are fortunate to live here and I am grateful for the Department of Justice and the people who serve there.

In this matter I think we should let the free market solve the competitive issues.

Thank you.
SEAN OTOOLE

MTC-00009074

From: rushspedden@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:20pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please do not delay the implementation of the Microsoft settlement which is in the best interests of our economy. Also I urge the federal officials to use whatever efforts they can muster to convince the remaining rouge states to accept the settlement.

H. Rush Spedden

MTC-00009075

From: Mary E Jouver
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:39pm
Subject: We have more important issues at hand.

Leave Microsoft the way it is and We have more important issues at hand. Leave Microsoft the way it is and let us get on to rebuild our country. Microsoft has done a tremendous job of helping to built the technological ability of the USA and it continues to do so.

Mary Jouver
17821 90th Ave E.
Puyallup WA 98375

MTC-00009076

From: CHARYL L PEFFER
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/6/02 5:40pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement is fair, lets get on with improving our country and quiet fighting between each other, we all need to work together, all companys, not just Microsoft..
CHARYL PEFFER

MTC-00009077

From: SHED
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 5:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Vs. DOJ
To: microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov
From: Shed@accesscomm.ca

I am part of the BeOS community trying to get the BeVOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

- (a) No penalty for OEM's retailing computers with non-Microsoft operating systems
 - (b) Possible incentives provided by Microsoft or government subsidies paid from the Microsoft settlement to software publishers (with proof to claims of damage from the unfair business practices used by Microsoft) developing for small or "Alternative" operating systems or the furthering of small or "Alternative" operating systems hindered by the unfair business tactics used by Microsoft
 - (c) The Microsoft Software development division made to develop for all relevant "Alternative" operating systems. I.E. Games, Productive suits, Internet browsers & other core Microsoft services & software brought to the "Alternative" market
 - (d) Specific awareness campaign for small or "Alternative" operating systems damaged by the unfair business practices used by Microsoft funded from monetary fines from the Microsoft vs. DOJ settlement
- As in points (b) & (d) there must be an awareness raised in the public eye that there are alternatives in this market & a message to software publishers & developers that there are other platforms with viable profit capabilities if they bring their product to market on these small or "Alternative" operating systems I thank you for your time & would greatly appreciate recognition for the damage done by unfair business practices used by Microsoft & in restoring a level playing field for growth & prosperity in the computer operating system & software market.
SHED
(BeOS community member)

MTC-00009078

From: a(u)bfrench
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:16pm
Subject: comment on MS settlement

I think the case has gone on long enough and should be settled. As an ordinary average citizen and novice computer user, I have to wonder if this case was more about using the courts to help Microsoft competitors put Microsoft out of business than of justice. If it weren't for Microsoft products designed the way they are, I would not be able to use a computer. Microsoft is a great American company which contributes to the economic health of the USA.

Arlene French

MTC-00009079

From: arthur anderson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Litigation

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am writing you today to express my opinion in regards to the Microsoft settlement issue. I feel this settlement is fair and reasonable, and I am pleased to see it resolved. The settlement they came up with was arrived at after extensive negotiations with a court-appointed mediator. It hands out new rights to computer manufacturers to configure systems with access to various Windows features. It also requires Windows to make it easier to install non-Microsoft software, and to disclose information about certain internal interfaces in Windows. This settlement is a step towards improving our economy. Thank you for making the right decision.

Sincerely,

Arthur W. Anderson
30 NE Sunrise Drive
Waukee, IA 50263
andersaw@msn.com

MTC-00009080

From: Rhonda Christensen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:45pm
Subject: U.S. vs Microsoft

As a university educator and researcher I have, over the past few years, been more than annoyed by the persistence of Microsoft to force the use of Internet Explorer. Even files that were not created in a browser suddenly "become" Explorer files when emailed to colleagues and will only open in Explorer. A great deal of my time has been wasted due to their unethical methods of forcing people to use their products.

I ask that you consider the future of the use of the Internet which is becoming ubiquitous. We should be able to choose the browser we prefer to use rather than being forced to use one that Microsoft has selected. I teach on both the Mac and Windows platform. Most of my headaches come from the Windows network. If I have a choice, I always choose Mac. Don't take away our choices.

Rhonda Christensen
Rhonda W. Christensen, Ph.D.
University of North Texas
Email: rhondac@tenet.edu
http://courseweb.tac.unt.edu/rhondac
CC:rhondac@usdoj.gov@inetgw

MTC-00009081

From: Greg Heuer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:49pm
Subject: Fair Consideration of the Microsoft Offer

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having operated computers since the 1980s, and having experienced the benefits first hand, I urge you to give serious consideration to the self serving remedy proposed by MS, i.e. the wholesale distribution of MS hardware and software to our nation's youth. The national trade association for which I work is a prime example of advantages of an open shop approach to computer and office automation solutions.

We operate BOTH MS and Macintosh platforms side-by-side without difficulty. This empowers our creative team to use the platform best suited to the task, most usually Macintosh. I strongly recommend an even handed and equitable remedy which serves as a REAL penalty to the MS way of doing business while offering the benefits of computer learning to our youth. The Macintosh is the computer of choice for the future.

Greg Heuer, Director
Member Services AWI
Architectural Woodwork Institute
PO Box 291
Nellysford, Virginia 22958
gheuer@awinet.org
http://www.awinet.org

MTC-00009082

From: RFLYGUY@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:54pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Why is it that at social gatherings that don't have employees from MS competitors, one never really hears people talking about how badly MS is screwing us? Why aren't people of computer age rioting in the streets as they've done at WTO meetings complaining of the screwing and overpricing they're suffering from MS? You hear more complaints about what the telephone companies are doing than what MS has done.

Isn't the US a democracy? There are a few companies without the skills of MS who are dictating Govt. Policy towards the Tech Industry as well as 9 AG's from states housing MS competitors who are making mountains out of specs of dust. Without MS's contribution to the computer industry how would the Govt. and private industry and the Armed Forces function? Like perhaps Bolivia? If taken to a vote, how many people would really want govt. aid in fighting such a tyrant? One-tenth of a tenth of 1% the population? Is MS an angel, hell no! Is GE, EXXON, GM, Boeing or the Post Office? Try breaking them up and living without them.

Stop this silliness and also job security for the AG's of the remaining Nine "holdout" States and settle this waste of tax payers dollars right now in MS's favor. Innovation has been put on hold and billions of dollars lost due to this law suit. Stop this law suit now and accept MS's settlement offers and find some other area to fight.....like the medical industry and their competitive pricing policies. Big discounts to the insurance companies and none to the person without insurance. (I'm thankful for the discounts but it doesn't add up). This law suit is about on the same level as the impeachment proceedings against Clinton. They were/are both a joke, and I'm a Republican.

Robin Poole
18998 Marine View Circle
Seattle, Washington
aka rflyguy@aol.com

MTC-00009083

From: E Miller
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/6/02 6:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In all honesty I'm sorry this whole situation transpired to begin with. The leaps and bounds that Microsoft has made for the entire computer industry I don't believe would of happened without them. The windows OS changed the world.

I believe the settlement is too severe and I hope they can still operate at just leap and bounds under it.

Ellen Miller

MTC-00009084

From: ANTHONY J DURAN
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Prosecute and punish lawbreakers to the fullest extent of the law. How is it giving the Microsoft corporation inroads into the only market they do not totally dominate is to be construed somehow as punishment? Renegotiate this JOKE of a settlement.

It's that simple. Microsoft has, will, and plans to in the future continue crossing the legal limits of acceptable behavior and activity with respect to laws controlling business and commerce. Please add my names to the list of those who feel the USDOJ settlement is completely unsatisfactory and inadequate in relation to the crimes committed by Microsoft.

Feel free to contact me about these matters and or confirm/authenticate this e-mail.

Yours truly,
Anthony J. Duran
214 e dayton
fresno,ca 93704

MTC-00009085

From: Andrew Bachmann
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 6:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam,

I'm writing in regards to the Microsoft Settlement. I have been watching the case over the years. As a computer consumer it has been sad to watch Microsoft continue to use it's influence to force hardware sellers to bundle their products with new computers. In particular, their use of the bootloader clause to force out other alternatives for me, such as the BeOS operating system.

As you may or may not be aware, recently Be, Inc., has been in process of dissolving after selling their intellectual property to Palm, Inc. The constraints that Microsoft has placed on the hardware sellers such as Dell, Compaq, etc. made it so that I couldn't buy a new computer with BeOS installed. Instead I could only buy a machine with Windows on it.

Now that Palm owns the BeOS there are many of us trying to encourage them to keep providing it and developing it. However, as Be, Inc., was effectively shutdown by Microsoft's tactics, it is not very appealing for Palm to try to continue with the BeOS under the present conditions. So, when I get my new machine I will not be able to get a new version of BeOS for it. Also because of this the software makers who have made software for BeOS in the past are no longer continuing. So I have no software choice for my operating system.

I have heard that Microsoft is trying to make a settlement where they provide computers to schools. All these computers are to be installed with Microsoft software. It seems to me that this is not a penalty at all, but rather a way for Microsoft to insinuate usage of Microsoft into the youth. Because the students would only be exposed to Microsoft software they would not have knowledge of alternatives that might exist, and those alternatives would die away.

I think a more appropriate remedy would be for Microsoft to pay reparations to Be, Inc., and Be, Inc., shareholders. Also if they provide computers to schools, these computers should not be installed with Microsoft software. They should be provided with BeOS or some other operating system installed. And of course they have to allow for computer manufacturers to provide these options to consumers like myself. Then when I buy a computer I can have the choice of another operating system, which can be more stable and faster than Windows. Since the beginning of this case I have been glad to see the Justice Department acting in the interests of the computing consumers. Please continue to press for a just remedy to Microsoft's crimes against the consumer.

Thanks for your time.

Andrew Bachmann

MTC-00009086

From: DAVCARL@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:11pm
Subject: MS Settlement

Let get on with our lives. I would encourage all states to settle their cases with Microsoft and quit spending taxpayer money on their own "t more for the consumer." The consumer will not see any of the money directly anyway, so who cares. If they don't want to settle, take their current Microsoft OS away from them and let them find some other operating system instead. I don not understand their thinking, whom do they think they are helping? The public or themselves?

Thanks for listening.

Carld

MTC-00009087

From: MrrAloha@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:13pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I feel the decision regarding this settlement is fair and just. It is about time we move on and stop wasting taxpayers monies.

Iliia Patlidzanov

MTC-00009088

From: Jim (038) Wanda Dahl
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Department of Justice
Washington, DC

Dear Sirs:

We are writing in support of the proposed settlement of the Microsoft legal case. We are aware that the appellate court has deemed Microsoft to be a monopoly. It seems to us that if this is true, it is because their competitors were unable to compete in the marketplace as the Microsoft products were superior, so that they dropped out of the competition, leaving Microsoft "only man left standing", ergo, a "monopoly".

It is also our understanding that a monopolist should be punished if it has harmed consumers. We have purchased many of Microsoft's software products, and have been delighted and amazed by the features they contain, and certainly do not feel we have been overcharged for any of them. We recently purchased a new computer, in part because we wanted to upgrade to the new Windows XP product, which has indeed been a major improvement over our previous Windows 98 software.

Rather than being prosecuted in the courts, to some considerable extent on the behest of their bested competitors, we feel Microsoft should be acclaimed for its contribution to the facilitation of the development of the worldwide net by developing products which by their wide acceptance have provided a common "language" for use between computer users, rather than a "babel-like" situation which could have evolved if many competing "languages" were equally prevalent. Perhaps Microsoft should receive a Nobel prize in some category. In any event, we feel Microsoft should be punished as little as possible.

Sincerely,

James R. Dahl

Wanda K. Dahl

MTC-00009089

From: Joseph Pellitteri
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:19pm
Subject: Resolve this settlement

Resolve the Microsoft situation NOW. Four years is to long even for the Federal Gov. Lets get on with life. The economy needs a jump start.

Talk to you later.

Joe

MTC-00009091

From: Manfred Smith
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:25pm
Subject: Hands Off

I respectfully submit that the real injustice is the persecution of business under the Anti-trust "laws" that are so convoluted that no business man is safe from their use by any petty government official that has a political agenda or statist ideology.

Hands off Microsoft! Hands off Business!

Manfred Smith

The Learning Community ? TLCN.org

Maryland Home Education Assn. ?

MHEA.com

Columbia, MD 21045

410-730-0073

"There is no safety for honest men except by believing all possible evil of evil men."

Edmund Burke

Remember September 11 !

MTC-00009092

From: PenDensham@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I work in the entertainment industry as both an employer and a creator. I and my partners have been responsible for producing the Television Anthology Science Fiction series, "The Outer Limits" for seven seasons. Therefore, I have lived full time as a "Futurist", creating and delivering morality tales frequently using technology and human nature. On both sides of the camera.

It is quite clear to me that mankind is involved in the most extraordinary tsunami of change. Technology, in almost every field of life and commerce, is evolving faster than any individual can knowledgeably fathom... It is rather unnerving to consider that none of us can know where man is going. We can clone, compute, bio-change, write with atoms... slow down the speed of light and soon assemble the very building blocks of matter to make new atomic forms. What does this have to do with Microsoft?

The one unswerving guide to our survival as a specie has to be morality. A human compass in a vast storm of change. Only morality... justice, the balance of ethics above greed and power will navigate us through the unknown in years to come. Simply put... when we allow one law breaker who has assembled a massive technological power grip on the global market through illegal and immoral means to get away with a less than equal punishment. (Which, as a follower of computer technology, I feel the DOJ settlement does.) You may open Pandora's box.

We say to those that follow in new technologies... prey on us. We don't have the will to stand up to you. Microsoft has transgressed. Make them pay the price... do not send a signal that mankind no longer values itself, and is fair game to any who amass power through technology. As they surely will in the future and the consequences may be far more awful.

Very sincerely, very concerned.

Pen Densham

Father, Husband... Human.

CC:wklein.atmain@atg.state.ut.us@inetgw

MTC-00009093

From: Peggy Fitzgerald
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:33pm
Subject: Microsoft case

Hello—I think the Microsoft judgement was fair, and I do not believe it is in the best interests of the American public to spend more time trying this case. The landscape of the computing industry moves too quickly and the issues surrounding the original case are no longer valid.

MTC-00009094

From: Bobby Sadin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

An open letter to the Department of Justice regarding the ongoing Microsoft anti-trust case:

To Whom It May Concern,

I have followed the Microsoft vs. the US Government anti-trust case since it's inception, and hope you will do everything in your power to bring it to a swift conclusion. The value of Microsoft to this country cannot simply be viewed as one did the steel or telephony industries in the past. They were local engines for growth in the US economy. Today Microsoft, along with IBM, Intel, and a small handful of other technology companies, have become the centers for a uniquely global intellectual economy which leads the world in everything from personal computing, to satellite communications. They are the global engines of the information economy. And they are the envy of the world.

Crippling any of these companies, as the DOJ, and several State's Attorneys Generals have tried to do on behalf of Microsoft's most vocal competitors, is the moral equivalent of shutting down the most successful US steel producer at the height of WWII. With the events of September 11th, a faltering economy (yes, we're in a recession!), and soaring unemployment in this country, the US Government needs to ensure the best and brightest companies are able to grow and flourish, not attack them.

In the face of an uncertain future for all of us due to international terrorism, we need to encourage growth in our technology infrastructure, and our economy—which means ending the prosecution of what is arguably the most successful technology provider in the world, Microsoft.

In a rapidly changing world where the US economy is increasingly challenged by Europe's and Asia's in areas like airline building, telephony, steel, and in growing measure, compute software, I ask you, members of our government—my government—to resolve the Microsoft case so they can back to what they do best, creating great software that people love to use.

Thank you for your attention, and God Bless America!

Sincerely,
Robert G. Sadin
15923 Manion Way NE
Duvall, WA 98019

MTC-00009095

From: Aubrey Brewster
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:48pm
Subject: (no subject)

I think the microsoft settlement is Fair let it stand.

Thanks Aubrey Brewster

MTC-00009096

From: Satchmoz
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 7:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success as long as microsoft continues its monopoly. Microsoft contually only supports their standards opting not to use any existing standards within the PC industry, instead they push their own formats as the only option on the Windows OS. They literally sell and inferior product compard to many other OS, but can destroy there competetion through sheer business power, due to the size of their monopoly. BeOS is just one of many casulties. IBM was hurt many years ago when they tried to create an operating system to compete with windows known as OS/2. All of their business practices are designed to elliminate competition. The proposed "penalty" on microsoft is nowhere near strong enough. Nor will breaking up the company help. Most people in the technical world i have spoken to agree that many things need to be done to stop the damage microsoft is causing to free enterprise. This includes but is not limited to:

- open Office file formats
- open Win32 APIs
- make dual-booting other OS's (such as BeOS) mandatory on OEM licenses.

MTC-00009097

From: Joe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Hi,

I am an avid Be OS* user. I have also used every version of Microsoft Windows starting with version 3.0. I would like to offer some suggestions as to what should be done with Microsoft.

First, it is important that Microsoft be forced to release all of their APIs, such as DirectX, so that compatible system can be made that will allow Windows-based games and programs to run on other platforms.

Second, I believe it would be in the best interest of everyone if restrictions were extended for more than 5 measly years. Five years will not be long enough to allow comparable competing operating systems to develop and reach market.

Third, disallowing Microsoft to enter any mergers for the next 5 to 10 years would prevent them from hiding their monopolistic nature behind seemingly innocent agreements.

Finally, Microsoft must not be allowed to integrate ANY application with any of their operating system products. It is denying the consumer freedom of choice while using their computers, because they are unable to easily remove the integrated software. Also,, a point that must be made is that integrated software just adds more code that will add more bugs and degrade the value of the product, regardless of how helpfull Microsoft will put it off to be.

In conclusion, I hope that y'all will find my suggestions helpfull. Being a computer technician and avid alt-OS (non MS operating systems) user, I feel that I should do all that I can to aid the legal actions against Microsoft.

* Be OS was created by the soon-to-be defunct Be, INC. Their destruction is obviously at the hands of Microsoft. Be, INC had deals in the works with various computer makers to ship Be OS in a dual-boot setup with all/most/some of their machines. Microsoft's previous agreements with these companies forbade them from allowing anything other than Windows to boot the machine, meaning that not even a boot-menu would be allowed. *

-Joseph D. Groover, JR
looncraz@hotmail.com

MTC-00009098

From: DonnaY1069@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:04pm
Subject: Microsoft punishment?

Dear Sirs:

I am a retired educator and do not feel that having Microsoft give copies of its software to schools is a punishment. Since they have been found guilty, they should suffer not profit from their wrongdoing. Please listen to the public before making a final ruling.

Donna Yarborough
340 N. Suber Rd.
Greer, SC 29651
864-877-9362

MTC-00009099

From: michael(u)14110
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:06pm
Subject: partasan mess

A herd of lawers making a bundle of money at the expense of our countrys future. The Clinton era is over, lets get real folks. Back off, and let our businesses be successful. We don't have many left in this country.

I am beyond disgust.
Michael F Clark
Washington State

MTC-00009100

From: Brian McDevitt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:16pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,
I was unable to find information on the penalties, so I am relying on newspaper articles that I have written in the past.

I am happy that the DOJ and Microsoft are settling the case and moving on. As a user, I expect easy to use and reliable software; software that works together. Breaking up Microsoft or imposing other draconian measures would just help competitors, not users.

As part of the penalty phase, do not allow Microsoft to give out free or reduced cost software to the education market or any other market that another OS has a strong market share. I can't think of a penalty that would benefit Microsoft greater. Require Microsoft to discount upgrade products to "current" users, not a market that Apple or another company competes in nicely.

I use a MS OS, MS applications, and am a small Microsoft stockholder.

Sincerely,
Brian T. McDevitt brian.mcdevitt@mindspring.com
1846 Bangor Lane
Elk Grove Village, IL 60007

MTC-00009101

From: Robert Ardill
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:29pm
Subject: Microsoft maintaining monopoly position

I would like to add comment to the Microsoft case . Microsoft's settlement proposal of free distribution of computers and software to schools etc, is an obvious situation of further maintaining the monopoly, which is the direct opposite effect to the original decision.

I understand that Microsoft Corporation was found guilty at trial of having maintained an illegal operating system monopoly and of having illegally tied its Internet Explorer to its monopoly operating system. When Microsoft appealed, the appellate court threw out the guilty verdict as pertains to the browser but said yes, Microsoft did in fact illegally maintain an operating system monopoly. (The word "maintain" is critical here. It is not illegal to have an operating system monopoly, but it is illegal to do anything to keep that monopoly—to maintain it.)

This proposed settlement, would grant Microsoft its operating system monopoly—indeed, contains wording such that it would no longer be illegal for Microsoft to maintain that monopoly—while saying that if Microsoft wants to, it can make it easier for people to write Windows applications, but it's by no means required to do so. In short, the settlement is ill-advised and does not maintain the law at all. To truly enhance competition in the US and in the world markets, (that other computer operating systems marketers including Microsoft export to), the comments following are helpful.

"The most successful competitors in recent years in product markets in which Microsoft holds a true or de facto monopoly (eg, personal computer operating systems, Internet browsers, and office productivity software) have arisen from the open source software community, and it is of extreme importance that any settlement protect and enhance this community's ability to produce products that provide end-users with viable choices.

In addition, I believe that maintaining the monopoly of one main operating system, like Microsoft, (US and worldwide) will make it easier for terrorist activity, rather than a diversified market of operating systems worldwide.

Cheers
Robert
Robert Ardill

MTC-00009102

From: Tim O'Hare
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 8:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi,

Even though I reside in Australia I am deeply concerned about the effects of the Microsoft settlement currently taking place.

I am concerned that our choice is been severely limited by Microsoft and it's anti-competitive behaviour. Two examples of this are the current X-Box product being sold by Microsoft and the current .Net proposition being put forward by Microsoft. They have the ability to throw massive resources at whatever stands in their way, as shown by when they were threatened by Netscape and the Navigator Browser. It is becoming clear that they will have a major impact in the gaming console market and if their dream comes true, all online commerce will be effected by .Net. I can only see this path developing and evolving—will we all be driving cars made by Microsoft in the future?

I am not an anti-Microsoft zealot, the company has unified the computer industry over the last two decades and provided a means for many people to access a computer who could not have done so otherwise. I use their products everyday.

I just wish for some regulation to provide efficient and stimulating competition.

Instead of braking the company up (I think this isn't going to happen now?) or some other method of paring Microsoft down, my suggestions would be to make the external interfaces of their software open and allow anyone to write software which can connect to Microsoft software. This is analogous to a third party muffler manufacturer having the dimensions so that they can connect their muffler to a Ford engine. This way Microsoft can still make the Office suite and if it is still the best product available, they will make profits from it but if another product is better then this means Microsoft cannot cut them out of the market by changing the format of the files.

Some of the things I would like to see be made open and documented are their file system, the Office suite file layout and API and the Win32 API.

The other thing I see necessary is to make sure OEM's can pre-configure computers to have a dual boot option or to load any operating system without significant penalty. This makes sure that Microsoft allows OEM's to put other operating systems on computers besides Windows.

If Microsoft continues to make the best product and the one most closely aligned to what the user wants, then they should have nothing to fear.

Regards,
Tim O'Hare Software Engineer
timo@platypus.net
Platypus Technology Australia Pty Ltd
Level 4, 1 Atchison Street
St Leonards NSW 2065
Ph: +61 2 8436 8500
Direct: +61 2 8436 8517
Fax: +61 2 8436 8501
www.platypus.net

MTC-00009103

From: jim kuska
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:19pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I believe the settlement that has been agreed to by a number of the states is what should be followed by all the states still trying to modify the settlement. It is time to put a stop to more litigation. To continue to litigate just wastes time and money for all concerned parties.

Lets put this case behind us and let us move forward.

James J. Kuska
1096 Randall Flat Road
Moscow, Idaho 83843

MTC-00009104

From: FalcD@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:20pm
Subject: Leave Microsoft alone already!

Hello,

I think its time the Government moves onto other issues of much greater importance. Leave Microsoft alone. Its a great company. They run a great business and the cost of software has never been so inexpensive not to mention as powerful.

History has shown that every time the government breaks up a great company it falls apart. The railroads in this country are mess. Try to get a proposal to move freight it takes weeks and even longer once the freight moves. Breaking up AT&T. What a mess.

I now get multiple phone bills and the cost has never been higher and in the near future, its a shame to say that there probably won't be an AT&T. Please don't do us anymore favors. Let Microsoft continue as the Microsoft it is.

If our Justice Department needs work maybe they should be looking into Enron and what effect they had on manipulating the market and driving up prices a year ago. Also, investigate why the management of the company was selling their stock while being on TV contending the stock was undervalued.

Microsoft is only helping and protecting the consumers and all their shareholder.

Sincerely,
D.J.F.

MTC-00009105

From: C Eguia
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:18pm
Subject: Continued Microsoft violations?

It appears that Microsoft is continuing to ignore the spirit of the ruling by the judicial branch.

Isn't the Microsoft XP operating system just another rush to get business & private customers more dependant on MS with their Passport & .Net technology that is already making private information available to local crackers and those abroad due to the numerous bugs in the MS software*. Users would also be required to checkin with MS systematically when hardware devices are added or changed on a computer? (It is expected that it would also be needed whenever a person had to reformat their harddrive.) This continual interaction with the monopoly would also provide the company with hardware (and software) data without the user's knowledge and this information could be made available to advertisers for a price as well.

It appears that the DOJ is providing Microsoft with the capability to extend it monopoly by not adding their recent inroads into the audio, video & photography player software market by including their own software in their operating system and making them the default players. Also, by not providing the code to competitors, Microsoft makes it more difficult for them to provide more compatible and secure software. Even with this handicap, competing software is typically better and more bug-proof than Microsoft's.

Is Microsoft still being allowed to change the various standards on the internet with Internet Explorer (XML) functions so they can further extend their monopoly? Is MS being allowed to make their internet portal the default in Internet Explorer thus allowing them to make more money on advertising?

I have read that the proposed ruling, as a punishment, allows Microsoft to provide their software (and their OLD hardware) to the schools and facilitates them to extend their monopoly in the educational market. Is this true? If so, doesn't that make our government a party to the monopolistic practices that MS continues to practice? Would requiring them to provide the money for software (and new hardware without an operating system) to the schools be a better solution and punishment?

The next thing to review is the contracts Microsoft has with PC vendors. I've tried to buy a computer with various companies without a MS operating system (OS) and they refuse to reduce the cost of the software from the price of the PC or to even send the PC without an OS. It has been rumored that MS would refund the money if the OS software was returned with the shrinkwrap intact but that refunds seldom occurred.

Thank you, Candelario Eguia
Palmdale, CA 93551

Reference: "*Microsoft's direct connection to the customer"

Once, the software group's MSN was a news and information website. Now it is much more than that, writes Fiona Harvey

Published: December 30 2001 17:54 ✓ Last Updated: December 30 2001 22:03

MTC-00009106

From: DrShelleyG@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please allow Microsoft the maximum opportunity to innovate new products without hindrance. Don't kill the goose that laid the golden egg for the US economy in the 1990s. Do you think we need two Enron's? The US government could use Microsoft's help on many fronts. Work together as a team. Do us (US) proud.

MTC-00009107

From: Jerry Martin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:29pm
Subject: i have faxed this letter to ashcroft and thurmond and to msft

21 Edgewater Alley
Isle of Palms, South Carolina 29451
January 5, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am writing to voice my opinion concerning the Microsoft antitrust case that was recently settled with a strong and binding settlement. I urge you to please stop any further Federal government intervention beyond this settlement. There have already been settlements reached between various states and Microsoft, all of which involved mediators and a great deal of negotiation. The settlement forces Microsoft to document and disclose for use by its competitors various interfaces that are internal to Windows' operating system products—a first in an antitrust settlement. Microsoft has agreed not to retaliate against software or hardware developers who develop or promote software that competes with Windows or that runs on software that competes with Windows.

I am retired, but have previously been involved in "big business." I see the hardships Microsoft is facing on the side of a businessman and an everyday computer user. It seems to me that this drawn-out lawsuit has become a victim of politics and money lust. Microsoft has contributed much to this country, creating jobs, bringing technology and donating a great deal of products to schools and other charities.

Don't allow our economy to drift further into recession. Please allow Microsoft to get back on their feet again.

Sincerely,
Jerry Martin
cc: Senator Strom Thurmond

MTC-00009108

From: RGrub@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:36pm
Subject: settlement

as a user of microsoft products I am in agreement that the settlement should be approved so that we can put this episode behind us and go forward with normal business.

RGrub@aol.com (R.Grubin)

MTC-00009109

From: Mahlon Tate
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 9:51pm
Subject: Comment on Microsoft settlement

As a person who works in a school district, i resent the implication that Microsoft's "volunteering" to donate equipment and software to needy schools is a step toward resolving the suit against Microsoft. Schools are so desperate for any kind of technology in many cases that they would be happy to have the workstations and software; however, the point is slowing down a monster of a company's monopoly, not helping schools. The very act of donating the equipment and software further entrenches Microsoft technology in schools, as well as helping to build a future consumer base. It isn't too big a reach to liken this to the tobacco industry's shameless attempts to addict as many young people to cigarettes as possible.

Not that it matters, but as a Mac user, this has gone on so long that I am sick of it. Big money wins every time. To say otherwise, unless you break this company up and force it to open source it's code, as the Mac has done with system X, is to ask for a monopoly to grow rather than to reduce it. People want a choice, rather than being forced to use a product that is bug prone, security weak, and over priced.

Mahlon Tate
Instructional Technology Specialist
3150 McCart, Suite 16
Fort Worth, TX 76110
Office phone: 817-207-6796
Fax: 817-922-6967
Email: mtate@ftworth.isd.tenet.edu

MTC-00009110

From: Sylvia J Trepp
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the settlement for Microsoft is in the public interest. Please consider this in your decision. Special interests should not be allowed to derail the settlement and prolong the litigation.

Sincerely, Sylvia Trepp
515 Lake St. S., # 301

Kirkland, WA 98033

MTC-00009111

From: Tony
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Request that the lawsuit against Microsoft be ended without delay. In view of the facts that anti-trust law is non-objective and is used against business men and women in a gangster type environment, we request that this activity end now. We do not want government dictating what we can not include in our software. We want the free economy to decide.

Anthony A. Nelson
25862 Jasper Rd. Suite 43
Barstow, CA 92311-7204
PayPal: avidavenue@earthlink.net

MTC-00009112

From: Paul J Denuel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:37pm
Subject: misomes

We need to continue the direction mandated by the courts to save free enterprise. pj

MTC-00009113

From: Jenny (038) Andy Firth
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the proposed Microsoft settlement is good for me & the industry.

Regards,
Jenny Firth

MTC-00009114

From: CHERYLBUR@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:39pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I think that it should be put to rest. This should be settled once and for all. I also don't think that Microsoft should be broken up. I am a stockholder and wish the company to remain successful in the years to come and I think we should be focusing on more important things right now; like national security.

MTC-00009115

From: RICHARD BEDOLLA
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 10:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I fully support the subject matter. Let's support the general public by showing the true colors of our leadership. God Bless America.

Richard Bedolla

MTC-00009117

From: D. Sauntry
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello.

I'm writing to express my approval for the Microsoft Settlement. I understand that I am within the public comment period, and I would like to register my view that the settlement is within the public interest. Microsoft has worked hard to reduce the price of software. Years ago, single applications would cost hundreds of dollars. Windows now includes some of that functionality for free in the Operating System, in a way that makes it much easier to use. The competition, such as Oracle, Sun, and Apple, continue to sell competing solutions at much higher prices. They would very much like to see Microsoft artificially held back in order to benefit their ill-conceived marketing strategies.

The settlement provides significant relief for the behavior that Microsoft has been found guilty. It should be approved. Any further action would go beyond the findings and work to significantly disadvantage Microsoft in the future market—and obviously advantage the above competitors. I fear that the end result of any further action will be higher prices paid by consumers.

In short, the settlement is in the public interest.

Thank you,
David Sauntry

MTC-00009118

From: CTHMAH@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:23pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a taxpayer and citizen, I strongly urge you to bring the Microsoft case to closure and implement the proposed settlement as quickly as possible. All parties have looked at the facts in excruciating detail, and fair minds agree that the settlement is reasonable. Further expenditure of time and money is pointless, and can only result in jockeying for position, not in better understanding and decision making.

Sincerely, Curtis T. Hill

MTC-00009119

From: Jim Burke
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:28pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To the DOJ

Please stop rewarding the few special interests in the category of Apple Computer, Sun, Time Warner, Oracle, (Netscape and AOL). I am not a fan of Microsoft but they do provide a system that can benefit us all and keep prices low. There are too many financial reasons against the issue continuing the lawsuit against Microsoft. I realize that many Americans have jobs with MSFT and they cannot be laid off in this economic time. Also may I mention THE HUGE INTERNATIONAL TRADE that MSFT does in other countries—that would be lost and therefore the balance of trade would further go away from OUR favor.

Stop helping our enemies. No NAPHTHA (that benefits Cuba) No DOJ suit (that helps lose jobs that are needed now. STOP special interest—if they have a BETTER PRODUCT line than MSFT let them show it and sell it—the market always drifts to the best product.

MTC-00009120

From: Julie Casso
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:41pm
Subject: DOJ/Microsoft Settlement

As taxpayer in Great Falls, Virginia, I would like to forward some comments about the Microsoft settlement that your Department is now working on. My view is the case needs to be promptly settled. The U.S. government taking on a major successful company and an economic engine of the past decade did little but send technology stocks into a fearful spiral downward. Laissez Faire is the approach the government should take, unless their is a true monopoly (i.e. no other companies providing the product or service), which does not exist in this case. My opinion: settle the case and spend the time on issues with more merit.

Sincerely submitted,
Julie Casso

MTC-00009121

From: mtman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:53pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

It is this families opinion that this entire fiasco is out of line. It is to the great detriment to even remotely consider any further action other than the basic settlement. MS is the industry standard and those companies like AOL are a pack of cry babies that can not or do not wish to compete. We feel that Microsoft has given us the very best product that our money can buy. We implore the department to settle right now and end this nonsense!

Mr. & Mrs. Richard F. Hill

MTC-00009122

From: Jeffery Budzynski
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear sirs,

I am a member of the BeOS Operating System community. This Operating System can very well survive in the computer market place, if we, as users of a global computer network enviroment, can have a mandatory dual-boot option, along with open file formats that Microsoft has been controlling.

Thank you,
Jeff Budzynski

MTC-00009123

From: Joseph Roni
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:04am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Department of Justice:

We understand that a few special interest groups are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement of the Microsoft case and to prolong the litigation even in the midst of these uncertain economic times. As a private citizen my wife and I object to continuing this litigation. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation which benefits only a few wealthy competitors who cannot compete with their own innovation.

Please don't let these special interest groups defeat the public interest.

My wife and I are retired and our invested retirement worth has declined significantly since this litigation was initiated and it seemed to us that it was one of the leading causes for the rapid decline of the NASDAQ stocks and the stock market in general.

Let's settle this thing now for the good of the consumer, the industry and the American economy.

Regards,
Joseph and Virginia Roni
Federal Way, Washington

MTC-00009124

From: george kajda
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Please settle with Microsoft. It's in the public best interest.
george kajda
707 westwood north dr.
magnolia, tx 77354

MTC-00009125

From: Scott Barton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:20am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Leave Microsoft alone! The whole antitrust trial is nothing more than the "losers" in the market using legal tactics instead of innovation, and does NOTHING to help consumers. How can the inclusion of a free Web browser be harmful to consumers? After all, they're free to replace it should they decide to.

I see all of this as a waste of my taxes, and I strongly resent it. There should be no settlement at all, but if there has to be one then let it be the current one proposed to by the DOJ and agreed to by Microsoft. Let's get on with it... I haven't been harmed at all. If not for Microsoft, I doubt that personal computing would be nearly affordable as it is today.

Scott Barton
Redmond, Washington.

MTC-00009126

From: Mike McCune
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/6/02 11:07pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I've waited until late so that I can fully digest and understand the settlement. I work in the computer field, so getting a settlement that allows competition without harming the computer industry is very important to me. I won't rehash the current settlement proposal since that has been done endlessly by now. I will only say that it has so many exceptions and exclusions that it would be unenforceable. We must not make the same mistake we made with the 1995 consent decree. The final settlement must be both simple and enforceable.

There only needs to be two simple conditions that need to be enforced:

1) Microsoft must give everyone full and timely access to all interfaces, data formats, protocols and APIs. Full and timely is defined by the oversite committee, not Microsoft.

2) Microsoft must give the exact same licensing terms to all customers. It must also disclose the terms publicly. This will prevent Microsoft from using its monopoly to reward or punish customers and vendors. There must be real and enforceable punishment if Microsoft breaks these terms. If they break the first condition, let everyone have access the the offending programs source code. That would allow others to figure out the interfaces, data formats, protocols and APIs for themselves. Breaking the second condition would result in a fine. The fine would need to be big enough to be a deterrent. Microsoft has a large cash reserve and if the fine is too small, they may decide to pay rather than obey.

Please let me know how I can view all the public comments and how I can find out the final terms of the settlement.

Sincerely,
Mike McCune
Chicago, Illinois

MTC-00009128

From: Michael S. Scherotter
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 12:15am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I am writing to voice my concern with proposed remedies to the Microsoft antitrust decision. One of the ways in which Microsoft has prevented other OS companies from establishing any marketshare is by prohibiting multi-boot configurations on OEM machines. Companies like HP, Compaq, Sony, Micron, or any other manufacturer cannot install a Microsoft OS along with a non-Microsoft OS because it will void their contract with Microsoft. A user must install a boot loader which will allow other operating systems to boot instead of their Microsoft OS. BeOS and Linux are operating systems that require a user-installed boot loader. One of the reasons that they cannot compete successfully with Microsoft is that the hardware manufacturer cannot install the boot loader and the alternative operating systems even if the user is willing to pay for it.

These alternative operating systems provide a market that is not being addressed by Microsoft:

BeOS is a robust multimedia platform
Linux is an open-source platform

As a remedy for Microsoft's antitrust behavior, I suggest that Microsoft should not be allowed to make any contracts prohibiting alternative boot loaders and operating systems installed by OEMs. In addition I suggest that the settlement prohibit Microsoft to make agreements with hardware manufacturers that insure that hardware will only work on Microsoft Operating Systems.

Michael S. Scherotter mss@tartus.com
407 Scenic Avenue
San Anselmo, CA 94960

MTC-00009129

From: Mike Zadar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:25am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Madams and Sirs,

I have used the Be Operating System (BeOS) for several years now and am abhorred by my government. BeOS users and the general public have struggled for years and every step of the way for an alternative to Microsoft.

Their monopoly has been unhealthy to computer industry and to technology in general. BeOS is an innovative robust operating system squelched by Microsoft through their exclusive boot loader agreements with all the large computer manufacturers. Why my government has allowed this monopolist tactic to continue is a disgrace.

Microsoft record speaks volumes, and now BeOS was forced to sell all its assets to Palm to pay its creditors. Is this truly in the best interest of the American Public. Should our government allow another JP Morgan or is Mr. Gates made another back room deal with the Department of Justice?

Be Inc. and all the user of BeOS deserve justice. I have read the Settlement agreement from beginning to end, it an insult and a travesty. I don't want my children to learn about computers through the eyes of Mr. Gates and his twisted Windows. It make me sick to think our government agreed to that nonsense. Please reconsider the best interest of the American Public, Microsoft is clearly not in the picture. The computer industry needs access to or open Office file formats, Win32 APIs, and make dual-boot options mandatory.

If not for this generation think of our kids, please.

Respectfully,

MTC-00009130

From: Ethan P. Wieting
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:38am
Subject: Microsoft

I believe that what has been accomplished is fair and equitable. The only people standing for further litigation are Microsoft's competitors.

Ethan P Wieting

MTC-00009131

From: Jim Sexton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

It is time to move on!!! It is a very good thing to have this settlement behind us, well almost. Let us not lose sight of the fact that if there had not been a Microsoft to set the technology standards in this country, we would not be the leader in technology for the world. Technology people always think their mousetrap is better than the other guy's. Well, so what, if Microsoft had not forced the standards that exist today, we wouldn't be able to buy a computer for $900 that is more powerful than Big Blue's mainframes in the 80's. Think about it, would be able to do the things we take for granted today, without the PC. We should just standup and thank Microsoft for being a company in the United States of America and not somewhere overseas.

A very pleased consumer. Let's tell all the whiners to shut up and get to work. If they don't like what Microsoft has done for the consumer, why don't they invent a better mousetrap that I will buy, instead of Microsoft's. So far, they haven't done anything but whine and cry.

Jim Sexton

MTC-00009132

From: Dan D.

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:45am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Lets get on with this settlement, any more legal action is going to benefit very few people, and certainly not the majority of the American people.

Thanks for listening to me.

Sincerely,
Dan Darling

MTC-00009133

From: Mike Inman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I strongly support settling this case.

Microsoft has been on its heels for too long. It is hurting the whole tech sector of our economy.

MTC-00009134

From: RKLiechner@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I seldom become involved in matters that do not directly affect me, but believe this antitrust case deserves me to do so. Let's settle and get this issue put to bed. The case should never have reached this point, so now that a settlement has been agreed upon, let's get it done. Don't let a few states or competitors located within those states drag this case before more courts.

Thanks.

Richard K. Leichner
1377 Loch Haven Drive
Hayden Lake, Idaho 83835

MTC-00009135

From: Jane BrightPreferred Customer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:44am
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
GET OFF OF MICROSOFTS BACK
KEITH & JANE BRIGHT

MTC-00009136

From: darenw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:46am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am aware that the DOJ is seeking input from the public regarding the Microsoft Settlement. About two months ago I bought a new notebook computer. It came with Windows XP. I asked the salesman if it could run BeOS or Linux, which I strongly prefer. Especially, I asked him if the manufacturer's or retailer's warranties and service plans would remain in full force, or if changing operating systems would void part or all of these warranties. I had the impression that the salesman didn't know anything about these "alternative" operating systems, or what effect they'd have on the warranties offered.

I bought the machine anyway, because I did my homework already, and knew it could run Linux. Luckily, it also runs BeOS just fine as long as one special setting is made upon bootup. It runs faster than similar computers that have Windows XP loaded, and is very close in speed to Linux, given the same hardware.

Everywhere I go, everyone know about windows, and everyone complains about windows. The few people who are not technical experts and have seen BeOS like it, and wonder why it isn't better known. The fact the Be Inc. has closed does not reduce my preference for it, or slow down the production of software from those who also prefer it.

What I'd like to see as a result of the Microsoft Settlement is that I can walk into a retailer that carries computers, and see BeOS running demo software, or to walk into a cyber-cafe and see that their computers are running Linux or FreeBSD to offer web surfing and other services. People should no longer think Computer = Windows = unreliable, but know that there are choices and be free from the effects of FUD (Fear Uncertainty and Doubt) planted in the public forum by Microsoft and its allies. Also, no manufacturer, VAR or retailer should feel any pressure to offer only Windows, or have any constraints however indirect from Microsoft, as to what operating system may be pre-installed or user-installed.

Thank you for your attention.

Daren Scot Wilson
darenw@pipeline.com
(970) 226-2276

MTC-00009137

From: Joy muzhuthettu
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:52am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The Justice Dept. must take initiative to resolve the Case immediately. The Dept. must go with the majority of the States decision. Not with the 9 states vested interests.

The majority of the American consumers want to settle the problem. This is good for the economy. It is more effective than further interest rates cuts.

Joy
A U.S. citizen.

MTC-00009138

From: Steve Barnes
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 2:50am
Subject: Public Comment

I have watched Microsoft for years and they are anticompetitive and monopolistic. Unregulated capitalism is not always in the public interest. The proposed remedy is insufficient.

Steve Barnes
75682 Wicks Road
Dorena, OR 97434

MTC-00009139

From: SlateInc@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 2:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear DOJ,

I believe that it's in the best interest of American consumers (and indeed of the US economy) for the DOJ to quickly resolve it's issues with Microsoft. I think that there never really was a case against Microsoft that warranted any kind of major penalties.

Thank you.
Larry Delaney
Consumer and small business owner

MTC-00009140

From: Matamata22@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a consumer, I urge you to speedily conclude this case so Microsoft can move forward and apply their resources to technology. I would rather see my taxpayer $ spent on more productive pursuits.

Amy Liu

MTC-00009141

From: Krishna Murty M S
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:12am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Respected Sir/Madam,

I sincerely feel that the row between DOJ and Microsoft has taken a long time. In this mean time, MS (Microsoft) has undergone enormous strain both from the industry and internally. They have applied themselves for what ever they have promised for. They will do the same with the sanctions or settlement terms mentioned by the DOJ and 9 states. I wish the court respects the settlement and puts an end to this rather long and tiresome battle of MS and DOJ. I would also request the concerned to take initiative into persuading/obliging the 9 other states into respecting the settlement.

This legal battle against the so-called monopoly has long taken the shape of grudge and vengeance. With due respect to the concerns of everyone involved, I firmly believe that MS is in its grounds when it does not give its source code to public. I wish to state an analogy. Though you respect your neighbours and are very friendly with them, you do not end up giving lock and keys of your house to them. Unless of course you are absolutely confident of their friendship. Now, applying the same analogy, any of the self proclaimed sufferers of the monopolistic behaviour of MS are far from being friendly. I wouldnt give my keys to any of them. Microsoft respects the legal verdict and the jurisdiction and has taken/started to take steps in doing so. I only wish the legal battle ends here. Its good for the concerned parties and good for American and world economy.

Regards,
Krishna Murty M S India.

MTC-00009142

From: Schurbert@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:38am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Justice Department Representative:

I am writing to voice my support to the settlement of the litigation against Microsoft. The software industry (despite the allegations against Microsoft) is amongst the most fluid and competitive in the world. The application of dated antitrust law to this competitive marketplace is a dangerous government intervention into a functioning market.

Thank you for your consideration.
Sincerely,
Steve Albert
Partner, Grant Thornton, LLP
Cincinnati, Ohio

MTC-00009143

From: Victor Lengquist
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:43am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues as these aren't addressed: open Office file formats, Win32 APIs, make dual-boot options mandatory, etc..."

MTC-00009144

From: Joseph Boykin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing as a citizen of Massachusetts and the United States of America in regards to the proposed settlement with Microsoft. A number of states have already decided not to join the proposed settlement between the Department of Justice and Microsoft. I believe theirs is a wise move as the proposed settlement is grossly unfair to the American public.

As a "computer professional" I am very familiar with the industry and Microsoft and firmly believe that the proposed settlement is unfair to numerous corporations that have attempted to develop competing products, consumers who have used or even those that have not used Microsoft products. The settlement does nothing to stop these actions and worse, give Microsoft a wedge to drive itself into the one market, education, that it has been unsuccessful at winning against Apple Computer.

I hope that a more fair and equitable agreement can be reached in regards to this matter. I urge you to reconsider this settlement proposal.

Yours truly,
Joseph Boykin
7 Hampton Road
Natick, MA 01760

MTC-00009145

From: Chuck Donovan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear sirs:

As a longtime computer user and as a consumer of Microsoft and other computer software products I ask that you stop all action against Microsoft and allow them to get back to work unimpeded by the government.

Charles E. Donovan

MTC-00009146

From: Bill Fisk
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:25am
Subject: microsoft settlement

An example of the current 'problem' of Microsoft's monopoly in the OS and office productivity software markets is the ubiquitous '.doc' file. This one proprietary file format I believe is one of the cornerstones of Microsoft's OS/productivity suite monopoly. Many people I know in the academic and business communities regularly purchase updated versions of Microsoft Windows and Microsoft Office for the sole reason that their correspondents send them .doc files as e-mail attachments. The options for importing these files into 3rd party applications are many; however, having personally tried a number of such programs, I can say that many work well some of the time, none work well all of the time. The continuing cycle of forced upgrades to maintain compatibility with correspondents lies at the heart of Microsoft's monopoly.

As a solution to this kind of problem, I believe that Microsoft should be compelled to disclose the specifications of the file formats used by its products to anyone who sends or receives files in such formats and requests the information.

Bill Fisk, Ph.D., Professor Educational Foundations Coordinator
Co-Director of PT3 Project Jericho <http://itcenter2.clemson.edu/jericho>
404-B Tillman Hall
Clemson University
Clemson, SC 29634-0715
864-656-5119 (fax 864-656-1322)

MTC-00009147

From: EddieELR@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:35am
Subject: (no subject)

I feel that a fair settlement should be reached within a justifiable period and avoid the prolongation by further litigation which hampers an active productive pace.

MTC-00009148

From: Fortdale@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:37am
Subject: (no subject)

To whom it may concern, re: Microsoft Settlement Please accept Microsoft's terms and conclude this case. We should have used our resources to pursue the foreign countries that pirate our software, games, music, movies and technology in general. We are fortunate that MS has not relocated his business to another country as I would have done if I were

Mr. Gates.

We have lost our manufacturing sector. Protect the "information society" assets we have left. We should have allocated our E Business and personal computer technologies worldwide as OPEC does oil. Dale Flanigan 440-975-1111

MTC-00009149

From: Raymond Deschenes
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 8:46am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

This whole thing has dragged on long enough. I am sure it had substantial impact on the whole stock market last year. The proposed settlement seems more than fair to me. I think Microsoft has bent over backward on this. Let them get back to business, PLEASE!

Ray Deschenes
Marvin & Palmer Associates, Inc.
1201 N. Market Street—Suite 2300
Wilmington, DE 19801
(302) 573-3570

MTC-00009150

From: howardnancy Adelman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:53am
Subject: Microsoft "Offenses"

Microsoft may have a "monopoly" on their DOS, but I do not at all feel that they have exerted this "monopoly" to the detriment of consumers by high prices and other "crimes" they are accused of. Rather, they have brought standardization and fair prices for excellent software. I feel that the lawsuit against them is bogus and brought on by their competitors (some monopoly!) who cannot compete against them in the marketplace.

Howard Adelman, M.D.

MTC-00009151

From: Kurt Grimm
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:53am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Make a settlement now. Put this to rest. Get on with life.

/*Kurt Hermann Grimm /*Systems Analyst II
/*Yale University, School of Medicine
/*Pathology—BB50
/*T:203.785.5154
/*P:203.766.9687
/*F:203.785.2403
/*e:Kurt.Grimm@Yale.Edu

MTC-00009152

From: Bill Robinson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement!

Greetings Judge Kollar-Kotally,

There comes a time at least once in everyone's life when a monumental decision is thrust upon them. A "moment of truth," if you will. A decision between right and wrong ... truth and justice or dishonesty and injustice. You, Judge, have the burden of such a decision right now. I can only imagine what it must be like to have your "moment of truth" involve so many economic, political, technological and human implications. I pray that you make the wise and honorable decision that all ethical business people hope you will make: That is, to reject the Proposed Final Judgment (PFJ) that Microsoft is so eagerly and greedily seeking and do what you can to force the right remedies to be exacted upon Microsoft, so as to level the playing field.

Having written columns for major technology, business and investment magazines for the last two years, while appearing on CNN, SKY News, PBS and Bloomberg TV, I speak with a tad more authority than most casual observers. Microsoft violated, and continues to violate, every reasonable and ethical business value and concept ... there is literally nothing to which they will not stoop. A few examples:

It is pretty well known that Microsoft's internal strategy has always been the "Three E's." One might hope that this scheme is some warm and fuzzy, people-oriented plan for business success, perhaps Ethics, Empathy and Employees ... and one would be dead wrong! The three E's stand for: Embrace, Extend and Extinguish. The way Microsoft has employed this devious strategy time and time again is: First, Microsoft embraces a much smaller competitor in whose technology they see some potential, or threat to one of their myriad of businesses; second, Microsoft extends the competing technology to work best with their Window proprietary platform; and, finally, Microsoft extinguishes the competitor. This is precisely the sequence of events Microsoft used against Netscape a few years ago. Just ask Jim Barksdale. In my estimation, there is absolutely no place in business for this kind of evil intention or dastardly operational scheming.

I personally know tech CEOs who have received the now infamous phone nastigrams from Microsoft CEO Steve Ballmer. During these calls, Ballmer threatens the CEO's business, employees, income and subsequently, families, if they won't do whatever it is in particular that he wants them to do. The only parallel I can draw between this kind of behavior is one of how organized crime operates when they try to enter an industry through threats, extortion and protection rackets. I hope Rudy Guliani becomes the US Attorney General someday, as he knows how to prosecute these types of criminals very effectively and he would find it amazingly easy, I believe, to bring Ballmer, et. al. up on serious RICO charges.

The ways that Microsoft deals with its partners is nefarious. Only interested in the benefit any particular relationship brings to themselves, they have made a consistent habit of pressuring smaller partners, who of course want to work closely with Microsoft, into unreasonable concessions, ill advised contributions and poor decisions with regard to affording Microsoft an unfair competitive advantage. If you dig a bit, you will find that even Microsoft's closest henchmen such as Compaq, Dell and others, internally despise Microsoft and wish for it to get its comeuppance.

Microsoft has gotten a lot of mileage out of the fallacious claim that they are innovators of technology, or that in some silly way they stimulate innovation and competition in the marketplace. This could not be further from the truth. From the very inception of Microsoft, where Bill Gates paid $80,000 to a small Washington state software company to obtain what would eventually become the MS-DOS, or Windows operating system and allow Microsoft to completely and unfairly dominate the software business, Microsoft has not innovated much of anything. Let's see, they bought their monopoly from the company who innovated the operating system, stole the "look and feel" from Apple Computer and forced it down the throats of IBM and virtually every other computer OEM (Original Equipment Manufacturer) and that of business, consumer and personal users worldwide. Nice. Nice way to build a business. Then, they either stole or bought virtually every application they then used to bludgeon other software and application developers into oblivion. Ask any non-Microsoft software or application developer (this should be easy, as the vast majority of these technology people are not employed by Microsoft, and hence are anti-Microsoft), whether their innovative work has been slowed, hampered or stymied by Microsoft in one way or another, and the answer will always be "yes."

The sheer temerity that it takes for Microsoft to claim that somehow innovation in technology will suffer if they are held accountable for their crimes is absurd and astonishing. Fact is, I cannot think of, and Microsoft cannot with a straight face proffer anything of real substance that it has directly and completely invented. Innovation, would not as Microsoft says, suffer, but explode with unleashed energy which until then was suppressed by Microsoft's total domination of the software industry along with their unfair and anti-competitive business practices.

In summation, as I aggressively stated in a CNN interview some five years ago, "Microsoft undeniably violates every anti-trust law every written. There can be no argument made that Microsoft should be left intact and allowed to bully, harass and control other software and technology companies, given the US Supreme Court's decisions to break up Standard Oil in 1911, severely limit IBM in 1954 and break up AT&T in 1973. It is just not possible. Microsoft dominates their business sector to a greater extent than John D. Rockefeller or AT&T ever did. If the US government saw fit to split these businesses, then Microsoft should receive this treatment and more. More aggressive penalties will have to be created so that the damaged parties can be recompensed, so that future competition and innovation will be secured and so that Gates and Ballmer will never again resort to these kinds of business operations which even Machievelli would have found distasteful." Please make the right decision, Judge ... during this, your "moment of truth." God Bless America!

All the Best, Bill
William R. Robinson
Chief Marketing Strategist
Relentless Marketing
"Relentlessly Getting Results"
UK Tel.: +44 (0) 1608 664-200 Fax: 664-400
UK cell phone: +44 (0) 7970 479-130
Toll-free U.S. voice-mail: +1 877 763-1200
E-Mail: bill@relentlessmarketing.com
On the Web: www.relentlessmarketing.com
*Columnist for Upside Magazine
(www.upside.com), Marketing Magazine
(www.marketing.haymarket.com), Business 2.0 (www.business2.com),
Fortune Small Business (www.fsb.com),
Cisco System's iQ Magazine
(www.cisco.com), Tornado-Insider
(www.tornado-insider.com) and United Airline's Hemispheres Magazine
(www.hemispheresmagazine.com)

MTC-00009153

From: Richard M. Salsman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:12am
Subject: Drop the case
My "public comment:"

The case against Microsoft should be dropped, because it's an assault on the firm's property rights. Indeed, the antitrust laws themselves should be abolished, as an unjust taking under the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

For more, see attached.
Richard M. Salsman, CFA
President & Chief Market Strategist
InterMarket Forecasting, Inc.
162 Sidney Street
Cambridge, MA 02139
Phone: 617-252-3483
Fax: 617-252-7461
Web site: www.intermarketforecasting.com
InterMarket Forecasting, Inc. is an investment research and forecasting firm that quantifies market price indicators to guide the asset allocation decisions and trading strategies of pension plans, asset managers, financial institutions and hedge funds.

MTC-00009154

From: Josh Sparks
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 9:26am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom it May Concern,

I would like to briefly express my opinion in favoring an end to the litigation against Microsoft and in having a settlement finally reached. Doing this will help ensure a quick end to the devastating blow this lawsuit has inflicted upon our economy and the citizens of the United States.

Respectfully,
Josh Sparks, MSS
NewData Strategies www.newdata.com
Consulting* Hosting* Education*
Ph# (972)735-0001x149
Ph# 1-800-258-6628
Fax (972)735-8008
Email jsparks@newdata.com

MTC-00009155

From: swiftyprinting@mac.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:44am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I do not think this settlement is fair. Forcing Microsoft to "give away" its software as punishment is not punishment at all. The actual cost to Microsoft is minimal. However the benefits are fantastic, they get a leg up on the competition by getting their product in front of the public and children. Children are then taught to use Microsoft products and they are now their customer. A great deal for Microsoft. The punishment should be for a cash settlement or force Microsoft to purchase competitors products for the schools.

Charles Pappas
20 grand View Road
Arlington, MA 02476
781-643-3253

MTC-00009156

From: James W. Bushee
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:53am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen:

I was pleased by the announcement of the proposed Microsoft settlement. I credit that to the wisdom of the leadership at the Department of Justice and know that it took a lot of thought and extensive work. Although the proposed settlement wasn't as permissive as Microsoft would have liked, it wasn't as onerous as sought by Microsoft's competitors. I congratulate you and truly believe it was in the best interest of the public.

I want to go on record in support of the settlement. I just hope we, as a Nation/our government, can move on now to address real-time problems. It is unfortunate Microsoft's competitors are so intent on making lawyers rich by seeking to continue litigating.

J. W. Bushee

MTC-00009157

From: Stan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:52am
Subject: Microsoft
Stanley Kneppar
8109 Hibiscus Circle
Tamarac, FL 33321
January 7, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice, 950
Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

This letter is to express my support for the settlement in the Microsoft case. This is a balanced agreement, painstakingly negotiated with a court appointed mediator. Microsoft will have to make some critical concessions, while being allowed to use the technology that has made it the gold standard for computer innovation.

I am convinced that Microsoft's success comes from the simplicity and superiority of its product. I briefly used the Netscape Navigator before switching to the Microsoft Internet Explorer, and I found the latter to be very preferable. The company does not deserve to be punished with litigation just for being a success. I anticipate that as Microsoft is forced to open up its codes for Windows to improve interoperability, we will see the competition and Microsoft improve such software as browsers and media players. In turn, that is good for consumers.

I sincerely hope the District Court Judge deems the settlement to be in the public's best interest.

Sincerely,
Stanley Kneppar
cc: Representative Robert Wexler

MTC-00009158

From: Connie and Tom Forster
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern: January 7, 2002

The Microsoft litigation has gone on long enough. The people at Microsoft are not saints, but neither are their competitors.

*Most of the states that are still pursuing the litigation have budget problems of their own, so their motives are mixed to say the least.

*Many of the class action trial lawyers feel that getting money and software products to some schools is a better idea than spending it covering legal fees. I've bought Microsoft products for years. How large a check am I likely to get in the mail if a class action lawsuit were to prevail?

*Finally a word about Microsoft's theme about being free to innovate. I recently upgraded to Windows XP, and have been quite pleased at the number of new and improved features that this operating system contains, everything from a good web browser, to an improved backup and a firewall that really works. Plus literally dozens of additional features. Certainly most consumers don't want to have to buy each of these features separately, and then keep them updated. Microsoft does ensure that its office products work well with its operating system. But the settlement which it reached with the Justice Department will make it very difficult to Microsoft to interfere with the development and marketing of good competitive products.

I hope that in when the District Court decides this issue, it will accept the proposed settlement. What I fear most is not Microsoft, but rather excessive regulation of the software and technology industries.

Sincerely,
Tom Forster

MTC-00009159

From: Dallas Lawrence
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 9:59am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Judge Kollar-Kotally,

I write to respectfully file my personal objections to the proposed settlement now laid before the Court in Microsoft v. US. As a native of California's "Silicon Valley" I have had the opportunity to witness the many negative results of Microsoft's monopolistic and predatory practices first hand and am greatly concerned with what now appears to be a complete abandonment of the previous Court findings in this case. After years of legal wrangling, millions of tax dollars spent and unanimous findings of the U.S. Court of Appeals, it would no doubt now be a travesty of justice for the Court to mete out anything but a balanced judgment against Microsoft, seeking full redress for the findings of the Court of Appeals.

I am quite confident that Your Honor will receive thousands of letters expressing the many technical flaws of the proposed settlement, in far better language than I could possibly hope to offer in this brief appeal. Therefore, I will focus this letter on one overriding concern not adequately addressed in the proposed settlement:

The proposed final judgment does not appear to provide for an effective enforcement mechanism for the minimal restrictions it does provide for. If there is one thing we have learned from dozens of previously failed "watchdog" programs, both home and abroad, it is that, if there is no adequate and independent enforcement mechanism in place to enforce the agreement, there is no incentive for the penalized party to abide by the findings. Providing for an inspection panel with a 2/3rds majority, either directly appointed or approved of by the party under inspection, opens the entire process to severe criticism at the least and complete ineffectiveness at the worst.

If the Court is to agree with the unanimous findings of the U.S. Court of Appeals, Microsoft's guilt is no longer a matter for debate. The Court must now decide that the United States Government is both serious in meting out punishment for past illegal practices and equally dedicated to curbing future abuses under the law.

I respectfully submit to the Court that the proposed final judgment does neither.

Respectfully,
Dallas B. Lawrence
1601 Argonne Place, NW #517
Washington, DC 20009

MTC-00009160

From: James Doc Greene
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:03am
Subject: microsoft settlement

Please accept the microsoft settlement. This lawsuit has already destroyed the retirement income of thousands of people. It should have never been brought in the first place. Please do not continue to harm the american public with this lawsuit.
Doc

MTC-00009161

From: steve skinner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:06am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

The companies that should be facing criticism are Sun and Oracle. Oracle has done everything they can to become a monopoly and since Informix has been bought they no longer face competing with superior technology. Sun is much worst. They are the ultimate hypocrites. They claim JAVA as the open standard and don't give it to standards. Sun also is the group that stopped the OSF initiative for a Unix standard.

Why hasn't Oracle been sued as a monopolistic company? Why is Sun allowed to castigate Microsoft for practices that it strives to achieve?

MTC-00009162

From: Jonathan Tarbox
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 10:10am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs;

I was deeply involved with the BeOS operating system at one time and would greatly love to get back into the swing of things with it. However, since Be, Inc. is no more and Palm is hesitant about licensing out the BeOS source code to the BeUnited project (www.beunited.org), I thought I'd voice my opinion.

The main thing that prevented BeOS, or any non-Microsoft operating system, from being shipped on any mainstream OEM computers was the MS licensing preventing OEM companies from being able to install other operating system. There should be no bonus or penalty to an OEM for not installing or installing another operating system on a shipping PC. From what I knew of the deal, an OEM company would loose out on bonuses that Microsoft would award thier OEM purchasers if they installed other operating systems on thier shipping PCs.

And because of the lack of OEM support, hardware manufacturers would often not write drivers for thier hardware for the BeOS. This greatly hurt the momentum of the BeOS to a point that the owners of Be, Inc. had to shift focus to Internet Appliance devices instead of PCs. This also didn't pan out and the IP of Be, Inc. was sold to Palm recently. Personally, I believe the settlement should prevent MS from using licensing or monetary bonuses to sway OEMs into using only MS products on thier PCs. It should also remove limitation of not allowing any other operating system to dual boot with any MS operating system.

Thanks,
Jonathan Tarbox

MTC-00009163

From: Larryhlcl@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:27am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir:

When this Midrosoft mess began, I could not believe our Government was prosecuting an American Company which has done so much to advance our society (both personal and business). Now that the initial phase of the Salem process (prosecution) has been completed and we no longer have an administration which requires constant diversions, I believe it is time to stop this procecutation and address other issues in which the DOJ is so effective. e.g. crime (dirty and white), Enron insider trading which is affecting literally millions, illegal drug trafficking, etc.

The Microsoft case has, no doubt, financially enhanced the "legal" segment economy and the economies of some states which are desperate for revenues. I only hope that the revenues (benefits) generated for these entities is as beneficial and far reaching as those which would have affected the shareholders of Microsoft and the business community as a whole. I believe this entire process of prosecuting Microsoft is unfair to the general public and business alike. However, if Microsoft is willing to accept a settlement as negotiated with the DOJ, I believe it is in the best interest of all to close this matter and get on with more significant national interest. I like our most recent governmental attitude. Lets Roll.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this matter.

Larry Clark
15903 Redwood Pl
Houston, TX 77079

MTC-00009164

From: Comly, Jr, A. R.
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 10:31am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen;

It is time to close this litigation and move on. I respectfully encourage that all parties accept the settlement proposed by the Tunney Act.

Sincerely,
Albert R. Comly

MTC-00009165

From: John Limmer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:33am
Subject: Antitrust settlement
Dept. of Justice;

As a computer technology person in an independent school, I cannot accept the wisdom of allowing Microsoft to provide free software as compensation for their antitrust transgressions. This would simply allow Microsoft to invade an area they do not currently dominate. Once started down the Microsoft road, schools will not be able to change course, it would simply be more and more Microsoft products. Assess a financial penalty, then if you wish to help schools, give them money, not Microsoft products.

John Limmer
Newark Academy
91 South Orange Ave.
Livingston, New Jersey 07039

MTC-00009166

From: DTSORR@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:36am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I am writing to you as a consumer interested in computers and software and the innovation that provides better products for us. My husband and I are both in favor of the settlement the government has made with Microsoft. Please put an end to this litigation.

MTC-00009167

From: FISHERLT@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:41am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please let this settlement be done and over with. The US Government has spent so much of our taxpayers dollars to go after a company who is being penalized for being successful and it's competitors are crying the blues because they are behind the 8-ball. They are putting money into the pockets of Liberals to battle Microsoft in the courtroom and not on the consumer product field and it hasn't worked. Microsoft has continued to bring out new products and prosper financially despite the Antitrust lawsuit against them showing their resilience. If the Department of Justice wants a true monopoly to go after, look back to proposed legislation from the fall of 1999 from Senator Tim Johnson from South Dakota, I think, about companies in the meat processing business owning livestock. Some states have adopted laws to try to slow down companies like Smithfield Foods. They continue to destroy a segment of the food chain and this Government does nothing about it. They are the largest pork processor in the US and the largest pork producer in the US. They continue to grow by buying up the competition in their market and totally control the market price of pork in this nation. They also continue to grow by acquiring producer farms through a practice they used during the market lows of the late 1990s of ledger buying. They took over Murphy Farms that way, and they were the single largest pork producer in this country.

Microsoft having market superiority does not hurt consumers, ask consumers of their products what they think about them bringing new products to the market, and if their bring competitive products, who benefits? The consumer! If Smithfield Foods continues to roll like an avalanche over the pork production business without any regard period, who loses? The consumer just for starters! Pork producers as well, the meat processing business, and the government. Please take a look at this Goliath company and it's business practices. I live in North Carolina and in the last 10 years have seen this company single-handedly destroy the pork production business in the states of North and South Carolina and Georgia. There are NO competitive packers in the areas and every time there has been any rumors of some other company coming to the Southeast, Smithfield Foods immediately jumps on the situation with both feet and squelches any possibility of competition in this area. They bought every competitor in the area as well as some in the Midwest and have shut them down. This situation is worthy of a look if any person within the Department of Justice is truly concerned for the well being of the citizens of the United States of America. Thank you! Robert A. Fisher

MTC-00009168

From: Kirk Nason
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:55am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's time to move on, please don't waste my tax dollars by tying up technology in the legal system. Let the software companies compete on their capabilities, not through lawyers. Microsoft has done more for computing than any another software company. When my 6 year old can be productive for homework on Windows and Office, this is a testament to the abilities MS brings to society.

My family has not been "harmed" by pricing by Microsoft. I continue to derive greater and great value from the integration MS has achieved in their software products. There are more important things for you to be concentrating on, like terrorism, security, education and how bad our immigration and power problems are. This is where we are getting ripped off. Even though I achieved the 20% discount for power all summer (do to conservation, buying florescent lighting, etc), my bill is radically higher than a year ago.

Fix the real problems

Regards,
Kirk J. Nason
714/842-8051
kirk.nason@hotmail.com

MTC-0009169

From: Pete Kline
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:02am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am very much in favor of the Microsoft Settlement. This case has been a witch hunt, pursuing a company that has done more to drive consumer pricing down than any government agency ever thought of.

Lets get it over with and behind us.
J. Peter Kline
214-378-4823

MTC-0009170

From: Sid Sidner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:12am
7 December 2002
Renata Hesse, Trial Attorney
Suite 1200, Antitrust Division
Department of Justice
601 D Street NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Ms. Hesse:

I wish to comment on the proposed penalties in the Microsoft vs. Department of Justice case. I have been a computer software engineer for over 30 years. I use all of Microsofts products and have developed sophisticated banking and electronic payment applications that are sold worldwide, designed to using Microsoft Windows server operating system and associated database and Web software. I also have extensive experience with Unix and IBM mainframes. I lived through the era of the IBM monopoly on computer systems, when I watched innovation in hardware, software, and systems grind to nearly a standstill. I have watched with dismay the same process starting to occur again, courtesy of Microsoft. Microsoft has been found to maintain monopolistic practices. What is at issue is what remediation can be obtained for this past practice and what can be done to prevent damage in the future.

The very future of computer technology is at stake here. The United States is the world leader in computer technology and much of our prosperity of the last ten years is based on this. Even in the area of biology and medical research, computers are becoming critical to further advances in genomics and diagnostic equipment. Based on my technology and business experience, the following three remedies seem simple, practical and effective:

The bundling of Microsoft software with personal computers should be terminated, and replaced with realistic pricing of this software as an extra-cost option, allowing third-party operating systems (like Linux) and applications (like Lotus SmartSuite) to compete; Microsoft must publish the file formats used by its software with each release of the software, similar to the way they publish application programming interfaces (APIs), allowing third-party applications the ability to interoperate with Microsoft applications; Likewise, computer-to-computer networking protocols must be published when software is released, again to allow non-Microsoft systems to interact with Microsoft systems.

None of these remedies are burdensome or expensive to Microsoft.

Please reconsider the proposed settlement to include these remedies.

Thank you,
Sid Sidner
PO Box 335, Fort Calhoun, NE 68023-0335
ssidner@yahoo.com (402) 850-7092

MTC-0009171

From: HerbGraves@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:13am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please add my voice to those strongly supporting the final settlement of the Microsoft case. The world is better off today, by far, as a result of the genius and freedom to innovate of Microsoft employees and management.

H.C. Graves

MTC-0009172

From: Walter Brown
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 11:05am

Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

The attached letter expresses my concerns regarding further action against Microsoft. Thank you for your consideration.

John W. Brown
3082 Greenwood Road
Rock Hill, South Carolina 29730
January 5, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

The purpose of this letter is to implore you to agree to the terms of the settlement that was reached between the Department of Justice and Microsoft. The settlement was reached after three years of extensive litigation and negotiations. To press this issue any further would be a complete waste of time and money. The agreement calls for Microsoft to grant computer makers broad new rights to configure its operating system. They will then be able to promote non-Microsoft software programs that compete with the Microsoft programs included within Windows. Computer makers will now be free to remove the means by which consumers access various features of Windows, and can replace access to those features with access to non-Microsoft software.

I have worked in the communications industry all my life, and have seen first-hand how innovative products have a positive effect on everyone. It is the same in the Information Technology industry, and I feel that if there is someone smart enough to provide a product that is far better than any other product, there is absolutely no reason why we should make them share the intricate design information with competitors. The government needs to keep their hands off private businesses, thereby allowing businesses to prosper and create more jobs. This will help our economy get out of its recession

Please agree to the terms of the settlement that was reached between Microsoft and the Department of Justice, and do not take any further action against Microsoft at the federal level.

Sincerely,
John Brown
cc: Senator Strom Thurmond

MTC-0009173

From: Richard McIntosh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:25am
Subject: SETTLEMENT

DEAR DOJ,
PLEASE JUST LEAVE MICROSOFT ALONE. THEY ARE THE INVENTORS AND CREATORS THAT GOT US THIS FAR IN TECHNOLOGY. I USED TO BE A "MAC" FAN, ADVOCATE UNTIL I LEARNED WHAT A PC WAS, I WOULD NEVER GO BACK TO A MAC. STIFLING THEIR R AND D WILL ONLY HOLD BACK TECHNOLOGY. YOU SHOULD BE ENCOURAGING THEM NOT ALLOWING OTHERS, (COMPANY'S) TO BENEFIT FROM THEIR TIME, ENERGY, AND CREATIVITY.

IF OTHER COMPANIES WANT CERTAIN TYPES OF DESKTOPS OR SOFTWARE, LET

MICROSOFT LOAD IT AT THE FACTORY SO THAT PURCHASER FEELS IMPORTANT. MICROSOFT DIDN'T START OUT AS A MONOPOLY, NEITHER DID FORD, CHEVROLET, CHRYSLER ETC. THEY ALL HAVE CERTAIN RADIOS, AND ENGINES AND WHEELS (FIRESTONE). ANYBODY HEARD OF THEM? IF ANYONE DOES NOT LIKE MICROSOFT WARE, BUY A MAC. A CRASH (COMPUTER CRASH) A WEEK WILL KEEP THEM BUSY.

THANKS FOR READING, MAC
TEACHER, CREEKSIDE H.S.

MTC-0009174

From: Eric Candell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:22am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wanted to submit my approval of your recent action to settle with Microsoft on their anti-trust case. In reading through the settlement, it appears that you have gotten some significant concessions that ought to help to ensure that you can continue to protect consumers. At the same time, you have come to a conclusion that will finally cease the costly litigation that makes no sense to me and other taxpayers.

I have never felt that Microsoft has tried to profit from me without providing me an excellent set of products in which they continue to innovate (Windows XP shows this quite clearly). They produce the most reliable products of any I install on my computer. And, they stand behind their products in a way that makes the user feel like an important part of their equation for the decisions they make.

With your proposed settlement, I have confidence that they will not get out of control but can still continue to do the things that I'm so grateful they can do.

Thanks for looking out for us-both in questioning Microsoft and in seeking closure in this case.

Eric Candell

MTC-0009175

From: Coqui2468@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:26am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

2743 Moorsfield Lane
Jacksonville, FL 32225
January 7, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
USDOJ, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am writing this letter today to make you aware of my feelings about the settlement that was reached between Microsoft and the Department of Justice. After three protracted years of trials, both sides came to an agreement on the antitrust suit, and I fully support the settlement.

The time has come for the United States to put that mess behind us, and turn our attention to more pressing issues. Microsoft had more restrictions than they deserved, such as disclosure of intellectual property concerning the Windows operating system, but the settlement is fair enough to both sides, and the government will create an independent review committee to make sure that Microsoft is holding up its end of the bargain. Microsoft has done so many good things for the technology industry, has provided jobs to thousands of individuals, and donated millions of dollars to charities and schools. Why punish a company that has been so beneficial to America?

I appreciate your time in accepting my opinion, and wish you the best.

Sincerely,
Patricia Cappiello

MTC-0009176

From: Randy Black
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 11:26am
Subject: Get off Microsoft's case

Please stop this unnecessary litigation against Microsoft. You are wasting taxpayer dollars, your time and are attempting to bankrupt a great company.

Sincerely,
Randy Black

MTC-0009177

From: Emesser1@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:28am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The government needs to settle this suit against Microsoft and allow Bill Gates to concentrate on his business instead of fighting off the government. It is a disgrace when a man builds his business and then is penalized and persecuted by his government for doing a good job and this is what has been done to Bill Gates. He should just be left alone to handle his company.

MTC-0009178

From: TShreve333@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please accept the settlement and move on. Why help Microsoft competitors. The country needs a settlement. Don't make a few lawyers rich.

Ted Shreve

MTC-0009179

From: Curtis, Iva, 127WG, 6180
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 11:39am
Subject: Microsoft

In regards to Microsoft's suit. I honestly feel that Microsoft did nothing wrong, nor did they try to Monopolize PC's by placing their Browser on Desktop's. I just think that if someone comes up with an idea first, that they should be allowed to go with it. If Microsoft is smart and quick enough to beat others at doing this, why should they be punished.

Well, this has been going on for such a long time and now comes the time to deal out the punishment and Microsoft has to pay up. The current settlement given is, I think, fair and Microsoft should be left alone to go forward in the name of technology.

This is my opinion.
Curtis

MTC-0009180

From: reulrich@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 11:36am
Subject: upcoming court action
Hello,

As a technology professional retired...I think we should get off Microsoft and be thankful we have them in the USA. I have been in the computer business since before Microsoft had the operating system of choice. They can get a bit heavy at times and we should keep a watch on them to police the industry but a vendetta on behalf of their competition should not be an option.

Bob Ulrich . . . retired University of California, Davis

MTC-00009181

From: Mitch Malouf
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:34am
Subject: Law suit

It seems that Microsoft is trying to be fair in this case but the government, federal and state, want to punish Microsoft for innovation. I some of the anti trust arguments, but government should stay out of business. Allow the free market to work, otherwise it will get political and destroy any business climate we now have in place.

The lawyers are the only people benefitting from this case. The consumer will pay eventually.

MTC-00009182

From: John Giovannini
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
ENOUGH ALREADY!!!!

Focus you attention on terrorists, both the kind that do physical harm and the kind that do cyber harm with their e-mailed viruses that disrupt work just because they can.

John Giovannini

MTC-00009183

From: SK8MANDAN@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:53am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,

As a software developer and consultant who has worked for an anti-Microsoft company, I seriously believe that Microsoft's competitors will stop at nothing to defeat the company. The proposed settlement is a step in the right direction and the only thing holding back the last nine states is a powerful lobby that has been unable to defeat Microsoft in the marketplace. If Microsoft products were really that bad, no one would buy them. There are several documented pieces of software where Microsoft has filed (MS Bob for example) and no level of marketing or dominance will let a bad product win the marketplace. The question that must be applied is—"Is this good for consumers?" and I have to tell you to open your eyes and see that consumers like convenience features like having a calculator or simple word processor bundled with an operating system. I don't think Microsoft is without flaws, but don't tie there hands at the expense of my benefit.

Please urge the nine states to settle, for consumers, for developers, for the industry and for our country.

Thank you

Daniel Fernandez
sk8mandan@aol.com

MTC-00009184

From: Dolan, Aline
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 11:54am
Subject: It's the Law! Under DoD you can ONLY buy Microsoft. We've mandated their monopoly!

I'm scared of Microsoft as a company. I'm not scared of many things in life, but they scare me. Maybe it's irrational, but I don't think so. I have watched over the years as they've misrepresented one thing and another. I told a friend, who is a Microsoft Certified Engineer, that I used Linux for my home desktop system, not being able to afford Microsoft, and he was amazed that I could use a 'command line interface' as "You're not a programmer!" It turns out he was told in his MS certification class that Linux was a command line OS understandable only by programmers. FOAD, which equates to Fear, Uncertainty, and Doubt is the program that Microsoft has launched against any competitor, without an iota of truth, but what can a little guy do against them?

Now they have .Net, and I see a future where no one but Microsoft customers will be able to access the Internet in the US. Right now, I often have to come to work to view a web site as it's been written in MS FrontPage. Many web sites written with FrontPage 4.0 are unviewable to any browser not running on a Microsoft Platform, as FrontPage does not follow the W3C standards when creating a web site. Why should they bother to write a web page composer program which runs in any other browser? That defeats their purpose.

MS was bundling FrontPage with their office suites, which means their customers won't look for another web composer. Since these people are not web designers, they don't understand the reason FrontPage is a damaged product. It looks fine in their Internet Explorer, so it must be a great page right? I try to do research for a paper for my class, and I can't read 25% of the web sites I hit. When .Net becomes the norm, I'll have to learn French or German in order to surf the web anymore. For an example of what Microsoft has done to the world as a whole, just look around your offices. The Department of Defense will allow no other operating system to be used, because they're stuck in the proprietary upgrade loop. Many other Government offices have the same mandate. The US Government puts millions of dollars per year into MS's pocket, because they were conned early on and now they think they're stuck. The decision makers are getting advice from NT engineers who are desperate to save their jobs, and tell lies like 'Linux is a command line interface users won't be able to understand.' Or maybe, like my friend, they just don't know they're lying.

I work as an NT admin for the Navy. In just the last six months, my command has spent over $20,000 for products which are available without additional cost under Red Hat's Linux distribution. To date, the software on servers and machines at this tiny dental command has cost close to $65,000. Under RedHat Linux, it would have been under $10,000 for everything (or you could just by pass RedHat and download it all for free). It's nuts that we're forced to do this.

I wish I had time to make this more compelling, but I'm on my lunch break at work now. Ironically, the web site where I found your address is a mess in my browser at home, as it was written in FrontPage. I'm sure it's out there on a page I could read, but I'm too busy to go looking. As a side note, I can read less than one half of the Government web sites on the web, as most of them were created in Frontpage, or deliberately written to work only in Internet Explorer. I work for the Naval Dental Center, but at home I can't access my eMail or get updates or notices, because I don't use Microsoft at home, and I don't think it's right that I should have to pay over $5,000 to replace all of my current software with Microsoft software. I'm a taxpayer too. Don't I have the right to view pages made with tax dollars? Oh well, that's another rant altogether.

Aline (Ali) Dolan
Naval Dental Center Southeast
Box 74
Jacksonville, FL 32212-0074
(904) 542-3546 ext 176
DSN Prefix 942
<http://ndcse.med.navy.mil>

MTC-00009186

From: chester c fong
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Department. of Justice
Re: Microsoft Settlement

As a private citizen, this case should be closed and left as is. It has cost quite a bit of money to work on this case both from the government (representing the people), the taxpayers who pay the government to perform, and the Microsoft Co. who are the defendants of this case.

The settlement brought forth by the lower courts is a fair one. It costs Microsoft Company to pay for its transgressions of the law and the Plaintiffs should be happy. The public (taxpayers) are sick and tired of this case dragging over the past two years.

This case has been deemed fair by the courts, let it be. In the interests of justice for everyone concerned it is closed.

Private Citizen, Chester fong 801 Franklin St.
Oakland, Ca 94607

MTC-00009187

From: RICHARD AMBROW
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:09pm
Subject: Microsoft should be given the freedom to innovate.

Dear DOJ,

I support Microsoft and their freedom to innovate. I believe the Microsoft case should be settled. The settlement will be good for the American people and the American economy.

thanks. . . .
Richard Ambrow

MTC-00009189

From: Robert I. Parker

To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:15pm
 Subject: SETTLEMENT
 please add my voice & vote for the finalization of the agreed to settlement.
 Robert I Parker

MTC-00009190

From: david owens
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:15pm
 Subject: trial
 we have wasted enough resources of the taxpayers on this farce of a trial. There has not been any proof that I have been harmed by Microsoft. This is a scam by the liberal dicksuckers from the clinton administration-
 Janet Reno (gag)- to placate
 Sun and Oracle, big donators to clinton and other appeasers. Enough already. Get a life and rip Enron a new asshole.

MTC-00009191

From: Jack Frew
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:19pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 I believe the settlement under consideration is in the public interest

MTC-00009192

From: Washburn, Nelson (GEAE)
 To: 'microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/7/02 12:28pm
 Subject: microsoft case
 SOUNDS LIKE SOUR GRAPES FROM THE COMPETITION. LEAD, FOLLOW OR GET OUT OF THE WAY.
 NELSON

MTC-00009193

From: bweidler
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:33pm
 Subject: anti trust action end federal suit. it should never have been filed!!!!!

MTC-00009194

From: DLYNNGOSNELL@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:40pm
 Subject: MS SETTLEMENT
 RE: THE MS / DOJ SUIT SHOULD BE ENDED ASAP. THIS , I BELIEVE WAS THE MAJOR CAUSE OF THE DOWN TURN IN THE STOCK MKTS AND ILL CONCIIEVED
 BY THE CLINTON ADM. THE SOONER
 THIS DARK CLOUD IS REMOVED FROM OVER THE THE TECH INDUSTRIES THE SOONER THE MKTS WILL RETURN TO A STABLE AND PROFITABLE BASES. COME ON LETS END THIS WITCH HUNT AND MOVE FWD. TRYING TO SAVE FACE IS COSTING THIS COUNTRY TRILLIONS IN REV AND HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF JOBS. REGARDS: D GOSNELL PRESIDENT
 DLG FIANCIAL INC.

MTC-00009195

From: Wayne (038) Mabel Rives
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:40pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 In December 1996, I purchased my first computer, monitor and printer at a cost of $1350. In November 2001, I purchase a new computer, monitor, printer and premium speaker system for $750. I realize we are in a recession, however, prices have been steadily going down during this period. I fail to see how anyone can say that Microsoft has hurt the consumer. Next, the Justice Department and 45 states have accepted the Microsoft settlement as fair and reasonable.

 I do not understand how the seven states could possibly think that the consumer or the states have been hurt and therefore should be rewarded in a suit against Microsoft. I believe the suit against Microsoft should be dismissed. Business needs to get on without this cloud of uncertainty. Wayne W. Rives

MTC-00009196

From: JEAN NEAL
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:41pm
 Subject: To Whom It May Concern:
 To Whom It May Concern:
 I want to stress how important this settlement with Microsoft means to me as a consumer and as a Tax Payer. I want to continue to benefit from Microsoft's innnovations. I do not want any more of my tax dollars spent to fight the competitors inability to be as creative. Microsoft has agreed to modify future business practices. Do not penalize a company who has the comsumers best interests at heart. Do not reward competitors who have grown bigger and better because of the competition. Do not force us to keep spending our hard earned money litigating.

Sincerely yours
 Jean Y. Neal

MTC-00009197

From: Lois
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:47pm
 Subject: Answer to Request
 Yes, Yes—The Government should have thrown that stuff away and quit torching Microsoft .

MTC-00009198

From: J.C. Bowman
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 12:48pm
 Subject: Comments on Microsoft Case/Letter
 January 7, 2002
 Department of Justice:
 In today's economically down-turned climate, I encourage you to conclude the erroneous case against Microsoft. I also ask that you make this letter part of the official court record. Congressional analysts are predicting an expected $11.3 billion shortfall in state education budgets in fiscal year 2002.
 Private gifts could be vital in this dilemma.
 But indiscriminate acceptance of contributions could have catastrophic consequences, and some philanthropic efforts may actually be wasted or cause inadvertently harm. As a result of more than 100 class action lawsuits alleging Microsoft overcharged consumers,

Microsoft has proposed a 5-year program and education settlement. This agreement with private class action attorneys in which Microsoft will direct over $1 billion in software, computer equipment, technology training and support to thousands of schools serving America's most disadvantaged children. It can be correctly argued that lack of technology is not the major problem faced by disadvantaged children. Chester Finn appropriately maintains that the most successful schools that succeed with low-income pupils generally do not surround them with electronics. Instead, he writes in the Wall Street Journal: "they engage knowledgeable and committed teachers to deliver a powerful, coherent, curriculum built on high standards of skills and knowledge." It is true disadvantaged children may not necessary benefit. I would certainly suggest that both public and private schools be considered in this agreement. I would also advocate that low-income, high performing schools be given greater priority in this proposal. However, the settlement agreement could be a shift with tremendous potential for low-income and minority children.

Technology in the wrong hands could divert children from academic pursuits.
 However, technology in the right hands could easily narrow the achievement gap.
 Therefore the risks clearly outweigh the potential for harm. By targeting disadvantaged children, Microsoft's investment could transform the cycle of poverty, as well as empower many of these children.

Two innovative private urban schools in our state: Inner-City Academy and Bethlehem Academy for Boys in Chattanooga are using technology effectively to raise student achievement. Technology is a key ingredient in their successful program, but no more than excellent instruction, excellent textbooks and supplementary library books. The Bethlehem Academy for Boys has successfully incorporated parent involvement in their school using computer training. Will Microsoft raise its market share in schools and deepen their dependency on their products? Possibly. Yet nothing prevents other Silicon Valley billionaires injecting their vast fortunes into the equation. Apple, AOL Time Warner, Linux, Netscape, Oracle and Sun Micosystems are free to make contributions anytime. In my estimation any donation helps the tech industry in general, and is vital to our economic future.
 Governmental activism put us in this position; do we want more governmental activism to prevent this potential assistance?
 The answer is a resounding no. Conventional liberalism of the past must grasp an understanding of civil society and its inherent freedom, as well as seek to rejuvenate admiration for limited government and free-market economy. The values of entrepreneurial capitalism grease the wheels of democracy and we must attach importance to the social and cultural norms that make it possible. As my dad used to say "no dream comes true until you get up and go to work."
 Many students are motivated and enjoy using technology in their education experience.
 Microsoft has enriched the education experience for many children and our work environments are now more productive. It is also plausible that acceptance of this agreement will allow schools to focus on other areas of need without taking resources away from other academic programs. Granted donations must be considered in coordination with the overall strategic plan and academic needs of individual schools. Partnering with a company such as Microsoft and use of technology certainly has the potential to enhance student performance. Microsoft has a history of corporate philanthropy both in America and Internationally. Their generosity and technology has helped schools and other organizations improve effectiveness and save needed capital, in fact well over $6 billion in charitable or corporate contributions were used here in Tennessee for FY 2000. This court case needs immediate closure so we can begin to make dreams come true for children and teachers in the state of Tennessee.

Respectfully Submitted,
J. C. Bowman, Ph.D
Tennessee Institute for Public Policy
1808 West End Avenue, Suite 1214
Nashville, TN 37203
Telephone: 615-327-3120
FAX: 615-327-3126
<http://www.TNPolicy.org>
Bowman@TNPolicy.org

MTC-00009199

From: Mark Ratto
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:53pm
Subject: They just keep lying...

To whom it may concern,
If you want to find out more lies that Microsoft keeps spinning you can look at the following site. You would think that they would have learned their lesson, but no. They just can't try and make a superior product. They want to own everything in the Computer Technology. They want to have all of the Networking business so bad that they lie about out product, which they know is much better than theirs.

www.whytheylie.com
Thanks,
Mark
Thank You!

MTC-00009200

From: hcg11426@webtv.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:53pm
Subject: Innovation

Everytime litigation is mentioned the stock market and the economy is affected. The comprehensive agreement, already agreed upon, is really a rough one. If further penalties are agreed upon, I can't imagine what will happen to the economy, which I think is coming back. The government gives large amounts of money to big business and to Columbia [which get into the hands of the wrong people] Let Microsoft have the freedom to innovate and not let the special interest groups defeat us

Make us proud of you,
Helen Gildea

MTC-00009201

From: anndean
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:55pm
Subject: Microsoft

I feel this is unjust if all these states are against Microsoft he should have more time. I feel the whole case is unjust a monopoly?? Why Wal-Mart's sell food. drugs and now internet service! His product is the best.

Case closed.
Ann Reed
10 Dover Lane
Hendersonville, NC 28739

MTC-00009202

From: Shane Fausett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:51pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a computer user that hates using windows. However I feel that I am forced to do so. Because of Microsofts market position alternative operating systems don't stand a chance. I feel that the biggest abuse that Microsoft has been guilty of is that they restrict the boot loader on OEM computers. Making it next to impossible to buy a non-windows PC.

Thank you
Shane Fausett

MTC-00009203

From: David C. Crandall
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 12:42pm
Subject: Microsoft

Dear Sirs,
As a computer consultant, I have watched a large portion of the anti-trust case. In my opinion, the original suit did not go nearly far enough in exposing the depths of the anti-trust violations. The issue of collusion with hardware manufacturers in making hardware that was usable only with Microsoft products should have been extensively pursued.

Also, the issue of Microsoft's 'cooperation' with standards committee's for establishing standards for internet browsers, java (Sun Microsystems copyright, yet public domain), networking protocol committees, e-mail standards committees and so forth should have been prosecuted. The participation with Microsoft in these committees is not for the general public good, but is with the express intention and effect of turning 'public standards' into proprietary standards whereby Microsoft further locks out competition.

A split of Microsoft Corporation into at least two entities is a minimal remedy. Their continued monopoly in both the software and operating system arenas is not healthy for even the short term. Microsoft has become so large, that competition with them in either arena is a farce.

Sincerely,
David C. Crandall
481 Rose Garden
McKinney, Texas 75070
972-346-2249
dcc@topher.net

MTC-00009204

From: Meyers, Rich
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:06pm

Microsoft is the most arrogant company in America. They monopolize and crush any competition unfairly. They need to be broken into three parts.

MTC-00009205

From: ROSE BUTKOVICH
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:07pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

PLEASE ACCEPT COURT OF APPEALS RULING!

MTC-00009206

From: avs
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:10pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear Sirs,
I am glad that the DOJ is trying to resolve the Microsoft case. I believe that the uncertainty surrounding Microsoft has and continues to hurt the economy. I believe the quicker this is settled and business can go back to "business", the better for all.

Thank you for your consideration.
Alan Spigelman

MTC-00009207

From: Matt Verran
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear US DOJ,
I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed, especially since Microsoft declared BeOS as a competing Operating System:

1) MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code license or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

2) The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

3) The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

4) The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS in the past.

I would suggest that this is the minimum settlement, as financial settlement will merely be paying to maintain the status unfairly achieved so far. The damage to Be Inc, and their new owners Palm Inc, has been substantial to the point of inability to operate and compete effectively.

Regards,
Matt Verran

MTC-00009208

From: Curt Sahakian
To: Microsoft ATR, attorney. general@state.ct.us @ inet ...

Date: 1/7/02 1:15pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The proposed settlement will not accomplished any valid correction or even punishment of Microsoft.

The proposed contribution of software product to schools is a benefit.... it further's MS's Monopoly power by getting an early commitment from children to their operating system.

Please accept the RedHat proposal to distribute their software for free and instead require MS to contribute hardware not software. The rest of the settlement is such a disgusting sellout by the DOJ to Microsoft its hard for me to even comment on it. Please demand more of Microsoft.

Thanks
Curt Sahakian
847/676-2774

MTC-00009209

From: Thepomme@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:15pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

gentlemen: i am not an antitrust lawyer, i know nothing about antitrust laws and i only followed the legal proceedings in general terms. on the other hand, i don't consider myself stupid either. despite the judge's findings, i find it difficult to understand what microsoft did wrong—they negotiated hard. what is wrong with that—I don't understand why hard negotiating is illegal. the main evidence against microsoft was from their competitors—what do you expect the competitors to say?? the bottom line is now that the court has rendered its decision, and doj appears interested in settlement, lets end this litigation as fast as possible. in this era of business difficulties, microsoft appears to be one of the few that is not laying off employees—they are making a profit—they are paying their taxes. its time to end this as fast as possible. the federal government has proposed a fair settlement the "holdouts" have no credibility—I suspect they all have ulterior motives beyond the best interests of the consumer—like competitors being located in those states, etc.. incidentally, was there ever any proof (other than speculation from competitors) that the consumer was hurt by anything microsoft did. it looks like the consumer got the best product for the cheapest possible price. what's wrong with that?? isn't the government supposed to take care of the consumers most importantly rather than the interests of the competitors?? Incidentally and in the interest of full disclosure, I own 800 shares of microsoft.-thank you—rvp

MTC-00009211

From: DUTCHMAN79@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:22pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear Sir or Madam,
Please record my opinion to not punish Microsoft for its success. It seems to me that some states are trying to help their revenue shortfalls by going after a company that has a strong financial sheet in the name of fairness. Let Microsoft do what it does best and allow it to serve as an example for the way a business should be.

Thank you for your consideration.
Sincerely,
Peter Brown

MTC-00009212

From: Josef Lowder
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:24pm
Subject: The Microsoft bully

The Microsoft problem can be summed up in one simple statement:

Microsoft should be allowed to run their business any way they want to ... as long as they allow others to run their businesses any way they want to. The problem with Microsoft is that they force themselves on the world to a ridiculous extent. They bully their way along in everything they do. They are predatory toward anything that is in any way competitive or potentially competitive toward them. Computers and their operation are so crucially important to virtually everyone today that it is a crime for anyone to try to dominate how things have to be done on computers. That is what Microsoft does. They do everything possible to force users into using Microsoft products. Even though I am "forced" to use a Microsoft operating system on two of my four computers, I do everything that I possibly can to try to minimize the extent to which I have to use anything Microsoft. But it is frustrating when Microsoft intentionally designs their basic operating system so that only Microsoft-based and Microsoft-dependent applications will run on their operating system and will run only on their operating system. Others are making a valiant effort to try to find ways around the problem, but Microsoft continues to bully their way along so that those without comparable resources can never adequately overcome all of the intrusiveness that Microsoft imposes upon the world. It is a travesty of incomprehensible proportions, and we can only hope and pray that the anti-trust suit will bring some relief to this untenable intrusion into our freedoms.

Joe Lowder
7514 E. Lompoc Avenue
Mesa, Arizona 85208
joe@actionline.com
480-325-5055

MTC-00009213

From: Bill Reilly
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:24pm

Please know there are plenty of us out here, who believe the government should be out of this case as soon as possible.

Thanks
Bill Reilly

MTC-00009214

From: Ian C. Crooks
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please protect the consumers from the Microsoft tyranny. BeOS was squashed because of Microsoft's heavy handed OEM contracts, forcing PC makers from bundling others OS's with the PC.

Allow consumers to make the choice of what they want to use as an OS not Microsoft.

Ian C. Crooks, E.I.T.
Operations Engineer
Pennsylvania-American Water Company
114 E. Lincoln Highway
Coatesville, PA 19320
610-384-4405 ext:112
610-380-8532 fax
IanCrooks@pawc.com

MTC-00009215

From: Bob Hannah
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:34pm
Subject: Microsoft case

I would like to thank you for pursuing the Microsoft case. I for one, find it difficult being a webmaster, never mind a software developer, with Microsoft having the power to set standards by just "reinventing the wheel" without any thought to industry as a whole. Please consider additional remedies.

Bob Hannah

MTC-00009216

From: Kirchofer, Richard A
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 1:40pm

Dear Sirs:

Sour grapes, Microsoft has done more to make computers useful to the common man than all the other companies put together. The trial is over, let's move forward on important issues like getting broadband into every home and business. I don't use all Microsoft products I do have a choice. However I do not have a choice for the phone lines coming to my house. Bellsouth is a monopoly in my neighborhood with no intension of providing hardware capable of supporting DSL or even a 56K modem. We live in a dynamic world; let's focus on the issues that limit our progress and productivity and that hasn't been Microsoft for a long time!

Sincerely
Richard Kirchofer

MTC-00009217

From: Rocky C. Burrous
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Attorney General John Ashcroft
U.S. Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

The treatment that Microsoft has received from the government is undeserved, and it is time that it ends. Luckily, a resolution has been reached; with its adoption, the years of litigation can once and for all be resolved. The resolution to which I refer is the one reached in November after years of hard fought legal battles. The terms of this settlement are ones that are beneficial to all the people involved and still keep competition within this market. The terms include a groundbreaking provision that requires Microsoft to disclose crucial interfacing information to computer manufacturers. It further stipulates that Microsoft cannot retaliate against computer makers who do not promote their software or promote a competitor's software instead. This is a resolution that preserves the spirit of a free market and still offers protection for the little guy. Well, folks, it doesn't get any better than this. More litigation could only complicate the issue, and it could only waste more time and resources. Therefore, the last thing we need is more litigation. I implore you to let the current agreement be the end of this situation. The resolution truly is the best that can be done.

Sincerely,
Rocky Burrous

MTC-00009218

From: RRP52@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 1:59pm
Subject: MICROSOFT

I think it is a waste of our (taxpayers) money what is going on it is just the states trying to make money. let the people decide if they want to use Microsoft or not not a bunch of crybabies (competitors) who can't do it on their own Rufus Richey

MTC-00009219

From: Janet Leih
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 2:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have never understood why the government was going after Microsoft in the first place. Because I have been in computer programming for and operations for 45 years, it seems idiot to me. It was the only stupid thing Janet Reno did while attorney general (I wish I could say I had only done one stupid thing in my life). Before Microsoft wrote it's Windows system and MS DOS, IBM was basically the only show in town. There were a few other computer manufacturers, but IBM had the lion's share of the market.

The way Microsoft wrote the Windows system, they let any company write software that runs under Windows, and may have been responsible for the greatest economic surge in our history. What did Apple do? Everything that runs on an Apple Computer is proprietary. Nobody but Apple can write programs for their system. Thousands, if not hundreds of thousands of small companies owe their existence to Microsoft's decision to allow anyone run their software under Windows. If Bill Gate gets wealthy by being inclusive rather than exclusive, that just proves that democracy works to everyone's benefit.

Before Windows, computers were huge, expensive, and were only owned by large businesses and wealthy people. After Windows, computers became small, inexpensive and everyone from millionaires to school kids own them.

Microsoft has "bundled" many programs with its system previously. I have "notepad", "wordpad", "paintbrush" and "games" and a "sound recorder" to mention a few "accessories" bundled with my system. Internet Explorer was just another accessory that Microsoft was giving with its system to enhance the product for the consumer. The fact that it was being given free makes it hard for me to understand why the government is saying that this is bad for the consumer.

I think it was bad for Netscape. Maybe it was bad for some other businesses. But the consumer certainly wasn't in any danger of being scammed because they were being given something free. That is frankly a bunch of crap.

Janet Leih
P. O. Box 164
Canton, SD 57013-0164
(605) 987-5070

MTC-00009220

From: Jason Withrow
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 2:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft has done a great deal for this country. It has propelled us to the forefront of the technological age. It has stiffened the economy by creating many well paying jobs, which are a by-product of the great many technological innovations they have introduced, and it has created a standard for which the internet was able to flourish. Before Microsoft, networks could barely speak to each other, with every subnet running it's own proprietary network kernel. Now, we have a TCP/IP standard, introduced and largely developed by Microsoft.

Let's stop and think where this country would be if it hadn't been for the endeavors of Microsoft. If you think we would be in a better place; history says you are mistaken.

The computing industry has had roughly 20 years to build a better user-friendly, operating system. UNIX, BSD, AIX, and Linux all have been around longer than Windows and have all failed to achieve the success that Windows has.

Not because of anti-competitive practices, but because Microsoft has a better product that is easy for people to use. How have they hurt the consumer? I can remember paying $500 for a copy of Lotus' Office suite and a similar price for Corel's before Microsoft introduced MS Office.

Linux, which has less than a sixth of the features of Windows, sells for only $20 less.

This is a Capitalistic Republic; the objective of a business is to over-come your competition, not to help them.

An anti-Microsoft decision in this case will be devastating to the economy and to the U.S.'s role of technological innovations. The only one's that would benefit from an anti-MS decision is Microsoft competitors and state governments that are always looking for a way to collect more money.

As a consultant that has worked on projects for the state of Massachusetts, I find it hard to believe that the government of this commonwealth knows what is good for the industry. Also, in correspondence with my state Attorney General Reilly, he certainly has had some very unprofessional replies, which seems to imply that he has taken this effort personally. The letter I received from his office in reply to an inquiry I sent about the MS case was nothing more than an angry juvenile rant that reeked of cynicism and offered no legitimate arguments other than hearsay.

An Anti-MS Judgment will set a very bad precedence; it will send the message that competitors are policing the market, not consumers. And that the company that spends the most money lobbying the government will come out the winner in the end. Instead of the company that spends the most time and effort on developing a quality product. None of the Microsoft competitors in this case have a product that even comes close to the features and ease of use of Microsoft products. In closing I would just like to say that during these times of uncertainty, we should be standing strong behind our ideals and the tools and vehicles of them. Microsoft is one of the best examples of this Republic's Capitalism, and it should be an encouragement of hope and Patriotism for all American's.

Sincerely,
Jason J. Withrow
D8 Al Pace Drive
North Attleboro, MA 02760
508-643-0316
jwithrow@mediaone.net

MTC-00009221

From: Tom and/or Susan Moore
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 2:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My message to the Attorney Generals of the nine hold-out states concerns their winning of a major victory against Microsoft and their refusal to let go when the fighting should stop.

There comes a time after many years of argument that settlement should be made, not only as common sense, but as a matter of business. Our economic concerns are not merely local, but national, and more importantly, global. Our position concerning the freedom to innovate involves national and international prestige, and it is in our "public interest" to remain the foremost nation on earth. Hampering one company can stifle innovation among all our computer companies, and at any time we must remain unified in our effort to provide the best that there is.

Sincerely,
Susan Church Moore

MTC-00009222

From: Dr. Hartmut Reh
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 2:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs,

I think that it is necessary to remedy the situation that has been brought on BeOS due to MS's strongarm tactics. I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed, for example: open Office file formats, Win32 APIs, make dual-boot options mandatory. Furtheron it must be possible to sell PCs with pre-installed BeOS.

Best regards
Dr. Hartmut Reh

MTC-00009223

From: kevin murphy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 2:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir/Madame:

I think it is time to settle and move on. Microsoft is willing to make the necessary changes to keep the industry competitive. The other nine states are looking for the next tobacco type settlement and this case just isn't the same. That would be excessive and unwarranted. (It smells of political agendas.) Unlike the Antitrust of Standard Oil early in the last century, we don't have to keep buying Microsoft products. With Gasoline we have to buy it every week and an anti-trust settlement of Standard Oil was warranted to protect us from price gouging. I don't feel that Microsoft could gouge us since I never have to buy another Microsoft product as long as I live if I don't want to.

Let's wrap this one up and spend money on something else. I feel protected from Microsoft already.

MTC-00009224

From:

mgiblin@providentmutual.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:08pm

Subject: Let it rest

I think you have wasted enough time and money on this case. Fine Bill and Microsoft heavily and move on. Our country is built on the strong surviving and not hand holding the companies that can't play in the big leagues. Maybe Netscape should have just looked at their business model and watched the finances closer. I do not think the Netscape guy did bad for himself since AOL purchased them. AOL is another company that is a monopoly who put Comuserve and Protogy basically out of business. Why don't we look into that case? What about ComCast purchasing AT&T broadband to be the largest ISP provider. Do you think that is in my favor? Lets focus on real issues like economy, homelessness and joblessness. Let Microsoft make the money they want because they provide jobs to more people than the government can understand.

MTC-00009225

From: MEDIAPEDIA@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:19pm

Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear USDOJ and Judge Kollar-Kotelly
I AM AGAINST THE SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT . IT IS AN INEFFECTIVE SLAP ON THE WRIST! I expect to see the USDOJ attorneys who drafted this sellout of the USA, working for Microsoft or it's law firms in the future.

This is a shameful scandal that will take its place in our government's history along with the Teapot Dome Scandal and the Watergate coverup.

I am a citizen of the USA. I have a degree in Film and Television from NYU and a Masters Degree in Interactive Technology in Education from Harvard. I also am President of a multimedia company.

MICROSOFT IS ALREADY WORKING TO LEVERAGE IT'S MONOPOLY IN OPERATING SYSTEMS AND EXTEND IT'S ANTICOMPETITIVE, PREDATORY TACTICS AND CREATE FURTHER MONOPOLIES IN COMPUTER SOFTWARE AND GAMES, INTERNET ACCESS AND CONTENT, VIDEOGAME SOFTWARE AND HARDWARE, COPY PROTECTION TECHNOLOGY AND UNDISCLOSED FUTURE TECHNOLOGIES

As a consumer, a technology professional and a small business owner: I HAVE PERSONALLY EXPERIENCED THAT MICROSOFT IS A THREAT TO THE SPIRIT, FREEDOM AND ECONOMIC FUTURE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA; IF IT'S CONSISTENTLY(COURT PROVEN) MONOPOLISTIC,ILLEGAL, IMMORAL, ANTICOMPETITIVE, PREDATORY TACTICS AND ACTS ARE NOT STOPPED!

To add insult to injury, Microsoft exhibited it's arrogant disregard and disrespect for the citizen consumers, laws and courts of the USA by lying in depositions and court testimony and fraudulently misrepresenting facts in courtroom demonstrations in the recent trial.

Clearly the citizens and governments of Seven States have the courage to hold out for Justice. DO THE RIGHT THING, AMERICA IS WATCHING!

THANK YOU,
William J. Roberts
34 Byron Rd, Natick, MA
1-508-650-0015
mediapedia@aol.com

MTC-00009226

From: Jason Bennett

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:19pm

Subject: Public Commentary

Dear Sirs,

This letter is to express my support for the comments made in a previous email sent by:

Ganesh Prasad
sashi@easy.com.au
Dated January 1st, 2002.

You can find a copy of this letter/email on the web, here: <http://linuxtoday.com/news-story.php3?tsn=2002-01-02-002-20-OP-MS> I am an experienced Network Engineer (MCSE) specializing in Network Security. Ganesh Prasad's statements in his letter to the DOJ reflects my own feelings about what needs to be done for justice to be adequately satisfied. If you have not already done so, please take the time to read Ganesh's letter to the DOJ.

Jason Bennett—Network Engineer
Rural/Metro Corporation—Network Services

Office: (480) 606-3490

MTC-00009228

From: JREW600891@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:28pm

Subject: drop the case this is ridiculous there are going to be other problems the case is destined to thrown out

MTC-00009229

From: Mbstab@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:28pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please bring an end to this ordeal. The settlement appears fair, although I believe Microsoft has been treated unfairly from the start. But I'll let that pass for the sake of this settlement.

Sincerely,
Mark Bodenstab
West Chester, PA

MTC-00009230

From: Randy

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:31pm

Subject: DEAR SIRS,

DEAR SIRS,

AS I CONTINUE TO READ ABOUT THE ONGOING " ANTI-TRUST " CASE AGAINST MICROSOFT I FIND MYSELF WONDERING THE SAME OLD QUESTION," WHO ACUALLY COMPLAINED " ????

I DO NOT NOW, NOR HAVE I EVER BELIEVED THAT IT WAS THE "CONSUMER ", THAT FILED THESE COMPLAINTS. IS'NT IT THE CONSUMER THAT YOU CLAIM TO BE PROTECTING ???? AFTERALL,IF WE WERE NOT COMPLETELY SATISFIED WITH MICROSOFT PRODUCTS I DONT IMAGINE THAT WE WOULD PURCHASE SAID PRODUCTS. SO NOW TELL ME,WHO IS IT AGAIN,,THAT IS BEING HURT..

RANDY WHITE
IDAHO FALLS,IDAHO

MTC-00009231

From: Mike Pritchard

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:32pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion... the DOJ should back off a little. I think the DOJ investigation is being driven by competitors of Microsoft. I also think Microsoft's competitors are jealous because they have been unable to duplicate Microsoft's success.

Do you remember what it was like to work with computers in the 70's and 80's??? Proprietary computers running proprietary software. Hardware and software costs were outrageous and maintenance cost weren't much better. Software programs were not standardized and they didn't always play nice with each other. The philosophy of big computer companies seemed to be, "Do it our way or don't do it". Trying to get different computer to work together was very frustrating (if not impossible).

Microsoft could have played by the same rules as everybody else (in the computer industry). Instead, today we have standards and tightly integrated tools for developing and running software.

I do not think Microsoft is a Monopoly. They do not own the hardware and software (unlike Apple and IBM), and there are many operating systems to choose from. You can run several types of UNIX, Macintosh, OS2, etc... Most people choose MSWindows. It is quite nice to have many tools integrated into the MS operating system.

Because of its size it may be a good idea to keep an eye on Microsoft, but in my opinion they should get a commendation for what they have accomplished. Microsoft has made my job easier and more productive.

Michael A Pritchard
Access Development
Director of IS, CIO
SLC, Ut

MTC-00009232

From: paul e jensen

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 2:39pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the Microsoft case should be settled in accordance with the reduced liability finding of the Court of Appeals. As a consumer, I agree that the settlement is good for all of us and the Government should not spend any more money with further litigation. If you wish to receive any more detailed comments from me, send your request to my email address.

Paul Jensen
CC:MSFIN@Microsoft.com@inetgw

MTC-00009233

From: Clay Bullwinkel
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 2:42pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 United States Department of Justice
 Dear Madams and Sirs:

Thank you for conducting and managing this call for input. No doubt you receive thousands of emails and letters with little or no new input, and in some cases crank content. Yet you must sift through all of them. I myself have encouraged and led on-line debate in the information technology industry on the Microsoft case. I hope here to offer you a few information points which probably will be unique and useful. I have an M.B.A. degree from Stanford and have held executive positions in the information technology industry with Hewlett Packard, 3Com, and now my own company E.W. Bridge LLC.

In a nutshell, Microsoft has broken the law with their overzealous channel control tactics. You folks can forcefully and effectively can deal with that. It should stop there. To have considered anything further in their activities as subject to legal scrutiny has been the concoction of their competitors, and, most frighteningly, outsiders in government, media and others who wish to seize influence and control in the PC industry. As you should be already aware, the overwhelming majority of software engineers favor a quick end to the Microsoft case with minimal intrusion of the federal government into Microsoft's affairs. If you look at any on line forum for the general programmer community, e.g. not specifically Apple or Palm people, you will find this to be the case. They especially do not want government dictating what should or should not be in a software product. Generally speaking, these people are the most knowledgeable about their industry. Their voice has to carry weight. They understand the benefits and threats from Microsoft better than any general businessman or politician. They, as well as myself, understand that the failure of Microsoft's competitors—Sun, Netscape (AOL), IBM, Apple, Palm, Borland, Novell, WordPerfect, Corel, etc. etc.- has been primarily due to mismanagement in these companies, and in some cases Microsoft's economies of scale, and not to illegal behavior by Microsoft. All of these companies have been plagued by lazy management lacking care and diligence for their future. Most executives, such as myself, understand that ruthless distribution tactics sometimes exhibited by Microsoft are part of every Business 101 course and practiced by all corporations in all industries, including by the companies named above. Please remember to monitor and utilize on-line forums for software engineers as a good source of input. Regarding the "outsiders" mentioned above, I could hardly be more alarmed.

If Mr. Gore had won the election, his DOJ would have continued to try to take control of Microsoft and allocate its pieces to cronies. The media largely avoided mentioning that the written remedy by Mr. Jackson included installation of on-site overseers (commissars) within the pieces of Microsoft, without restriction on their authority. Mr. Gates would have been prevented from founding a new company with employees from Microsoft. This was a necessary measure because most of Microsoft's software engineers would seek to work for him. I have done business for 18 years in the formerly communist countries of Europe and the old U.S.S.R., and I am well read on their history. It does not take a rocket scientist to see that those in and outside the Department of Justice who were driving the excessive prosecution in the Microsoft case had Bolshevik intent, with courts replacing guns. I would bet that if you looked into their backgrounds, for example, Mr. Klein, you would find parents or grandparents with Soviet sympathies. In terms of threat to American society and culture, Al-Qaida is but a drop compared to that kind of bucket of trouble. In the mid-90's I met a DOJ attorney who questioned me about a company with which I dealt which had fairly obviously set prices with a competitor causing a few billion dollars in overcharges to customers. I said yes, I knew about it, and was even present when one of their key executives bragged about it. He told me a few days later to tell me to forget about what he asked me and not to repeat what I had said. I asked him why. He said that his bosses told him that the company was not to be a target, that it had untouchable status. So these are the people and methods which brought us the Microsoft case. I wish your Mr. Charles James well in his current "housecleaning" of personnel and procedures. May it last beyond the current administration, and be resistant to political tendencies of whatever party is in the White House.

Sincerely,
 Clay A. Bullwinkel
 President
 E.W. Bridge LLC
 70 Bear Gulch Drive
 Portola Valley, California 94028 USA
 tel. (650) 851-7421 fax (650) 851-0956 clay@ewbridge.com
 <mailto:clay@ewbridge.com>

MTC-00009234

From: BIIJII@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 2:46pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement
 Please settle the Microsoft case. It is good for me, the industry, and the American economy.
 Ann Bobrow

MTC-00009235

From: Xavier Gu(00E9)rin
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 2:46pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Hi!
 I'm a french BeOS developer, and I've decided to write this e-mail in trying to be the most honest I could never be. Microsoft used to have some commercial technics punished by the antitrust law. It's not a fable, but those technics are so hidid that they could appears like fables. MS have encouraged the piracy (not in a visible manner, but I'll never believe that an entreprise able to develop an OS couldn't do better software protection), and in this way MS killed his enemies. In fact, around 90's, someone who would buy an office suite was able to buy many different kind of suite (like lotus, corel). The question was althought : "Hmmm, MS Office is really expensive.... I prefer buy Lotus Note". Now, this question is totally different! "Hmmm, MS Office is too expensive... No matter! I will burn it". You follow?

It's with this sort of technics that Microsoft win the OS and Offices suite market, and it's whith this sort of technics that Micro$oft killed our beloved BeOS.

Thank you for your attention, and do the justice like the USA is knowed pretend to do it : in the better way.

Friendly,
 Xavier Guirin.

MTC-00009236

From: Rick Connell
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 2:50pm

I am an average citizen. Not affiliated with Microsoft in any way. I feel that this whole anti-trust lawsuit is stupid. In our efforts to have a level playing field we have doomed those that would excel. Is it accurate that in our country it is alright to try and to succeed mildly, but not to compete? We as a nation have taken a thought or a notion and, as usual, distorted and perverted it to an embarrassing degree in order to perpetuate what we at one time thought was right. So now this noble notion is a bloody sledgehammer robbing from us what is truly rare. A company that can operate dept free. That contributes to our economy, instead of drains it...how sad.

Rick Connell
 San Angelo, Texas

MTC-00009237

From: Doug Gorman
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 2:53pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

...a few special interests are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

dg

MTC-00009238

From: Sharon Corboy
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 2:58pm
 Subject: microsoft settlement

I find it difficult for state attorney generals carrying on a political war against Microsoft. this case should be settled and now. each one of these a.g. have a political motive. to further there on futures. if they want to carry on they should do so at there on expense. please get on with the job of a quick settlement Thomas corboy 3921 forest beach n.w. gig harbor wash.

MTC-00009239

From: Cameron Taylor
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 3:04pm
 Subject: Help

Microsoft has done more good for the nations economy than all government employees and officers combined. Microsoft should be praised not published or investigated for its accomplishments and valuable products it has created for consumers.

Cameron Taylor
Executive Director
NFTPAP
1-800-375-2453
1-801-374-1287 fax
2230 N. University Pkwy Bldg 5
Provo, UT 84604

MTC-00009240

From: John Weis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:08pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

It's about time to get this settled and stop interfering with the capitalistic version of voting with your feet.

If Microsoft were not the consumers choice they would not be the success that they are. Stop harassment now let the consumer decide.

MTC-00009241

From: MizDotty@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:12pm
Subject: Settlement is called for

Gentlemen:

It is important to the economy to get this thing settled. I feel that Microsoft has been harassed enough and only because some people are jealous of its huge success. I do not see how marketing one's product can be unfair in the first place. I am sure no one had a gun held to their head! But prolonging this very unfair affair hurts everyone from the consumer to the employees, not only of Microsoft, but other companies as well. I feel personally, that this case should never have happened in the first place.

Dorothy A. O'Flaherty Enumclaw, Wa.

MTC-00009242

From: Humphrey, Robert J
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 3:10pm
Subject: Another MA Bell

Seems like every time someone builds a better mouse trap the government steps in to take it away or makes them re-design it. Bill Gates simply built a product that became so good that no one wanted what the other guys were offering. And the other guys started crying.

Bill Gates has returned far more to society than he every took away.

MTC-00009243

From: Max
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:17pm
Subject: Microsoft

Dear DOJ:

A dilute remedy to the case (as initially proposed) goes beyond erosion of our justice system. Microsoft is imparting a continuous flow of damage on Information Technology—damage that has already impacted individuals like you and me.

Their history shows clearly that any "Go Forth and Sin No More" resolution will be laughed at within the Company. Moreover, any resolution that requires a new Federal Agency to monitor their behavior will place a new burden on the Taxpayer.

Is the Taxpayer the rightful bearer of this burden ?

Max Gratzl Engineer

MTC-00009244

From: Pierce, Ben
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 3:22pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear sirs/madams,

I have been following the Microsoft case for some time now. It has come to my attention that the Department of Justice has reached a settlement with Microsoft. After reading excerpts of this settlement I have come to the conclusion that this settlement is severely insufficient. As was found by the Courts, and upheld in the appellate court, Microsoft is guilty of illegally maintaining a monopoly. A guilty verdict suggests that there would be a punishment for Microsoft that would try to curb its ability to commit this crime in the future. The settlement that was proposed does not do this. In fact, this settlement may encourage Microsoft to commit further illegal actions in order to create a more profitable corporation.

Microsoft has a history of unethical business practices. I find it absurd that I am unable to purchase a PC from most mainstream manufacturer's without purchasing Microsoft Software. Not only is it impossible to purchase a computer without Microsoft Windows, but most computers are required to come with several other programs whose genre Microsoft has used its monopoly to push its way into as well, including: Microsoft Office, Microsoft Internet Explorer, Microsoft Net meeting, and Microsoft Media Player.

It is clear to see that in spite of the ruling of illegality, Microsoft is unwilling to curb its appetite for using its operating system to gain footing in many other facets of the software industry. In closing, I ask this court to throw out the settlement reached by Microsoft and the Department of Justice. I also ask the Court to let the Department of Justice know that any settlement that does not let Microsoft know that it will no longer be acceptable to maintain its illegal and unethical practices will be unacceptable.

Thank you for your time and attention,
Benjamin Pierce

MTC-00009245

From: Dewey W. Taylor
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:24pm
Subject: American Company

One truly American Company with roots of building the computer industry and providing a standard for the world should not be discredited by those who feel they were cheated a part of the pie. The truth is they did not have the products to compete.

Dt

MTC-00009246

From: Heidi Blumenthal

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'

Date: 1/7/02 3:23pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

<<microsoft doj comments lthd.doc>>

January 7, 2002

Renata B. Hesse

Antitrust Division

U.S. Department of Justice

601 D Street NW

Suite 1200

Washington, DC 20530-0001

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Ms. Hesse:

The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry.

It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

Upwards of 60% of Americans thought the federal government should not have broken up Microsoft. If the case is finally over, companies like Microsoft can get back into the business of innovating and creating better products for consumers, and not wasting valuable resources on litigation.

Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to consumers. With government out of the business of stifling progress and tying the hands of corporations, consumers—rather than bureaucrats and judges—will once again pick the winners and losers on Wall Street. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products and technologies.

I work closely with economic leaders and grassroots taxpayer activists across this nation and I must point out that these free-market activists and leaders are virtually unanimous in their criticism of this trial.

Conservatives do not believe the government should be writing software, or picking the winners and losers in this industry. They understand that this effort to regulate the software industry is bad for the economy and the free market. These tactics are an anathema to business executives who understand free and fair competition is what drives companies to create better products and keeps America in the forefront of the digital economy.

Thank you for this opportunity to share my views, and those of over 60,000 taxpaying activists.

Onward,

Grover G. Norquist

MTC-00009247

From: alexandw@tklaw.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The settlement is a good for everyone except those seeking to obtain more benefit for themselves than for consumers at large.

Since you are asking for opinions, I believe Microsoft is largely a victim of overzealous prosecution and a biased trial Judge. The only ones hurt by the settlement are the few state attorney generals who have not settled for personal reasons (political gain) and Microsoft's competitors who, incidentally, conduct themselves the same as Microsoft.

The Appeals Court should have given Microsoft a new trial. As a citizen the whole case shocked and troubled me. If I owned or operated a company and was accused of wrongdoing, I would expect, at a minimum, a fair and impartial trial and opportunity to prepare my case. Microsoft was given less than 6 months to prepare for trial, limited in its witnesses (although the trial judge said he would "consider" any reasonable request) and was the victim of some seriously questionable evidentiary and procedural rulings at trial. Even car accident defendants get a more equitable trial and more opportunity to prepare in a state court action than Microsoft received in this Federal Court action involving billions of dollars and thousands of people. Why the trial Judge was biased against Microsoft will forever be a mystery but from his statements in and out of court the bias was obvious.

Any wrongdoings (if any) by Microsoft are adequately addressed by settlement.

The country and its consumers will benefit from this settlement. I urge the parties and the court to pursue settlement of the remaining claims on similar terms.

MTC-00009248

From: Louella
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:35pm
Subject: RE: TUNNEY ACT

My personal feelings in regards to the Microsoft settlement, is that enough is enough!! The settlement that has been made is agreeable to most and that should be sufficient.

I, for one, am sick and tired of my tax dollars being squandered on merry little trifles while people in the U.S. are homeless & hungry. We pay taxes & then are supposed to help these causes with our donations!! Leave well enough alone!! Put our tax dollars to work for us constructively & STOP spending your time & our money trying to tear down!!!!

Just remember, we not only pay taxes.....WE VOTE!! With the new awareness in America today, the government better hold on tight when it comes time for the next election!!!! You have spent millions so far getting to the settlement you now have w/ Microsoft, leave it alone.....it should be a done deal!!

Sincerely,
Louella B. Williams

MTC-00009250

From: james arnstein
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:40pm
Subject: 9 States vs Microsoft AntiTrust Case
Dear Sir,

I think the demands that the 9 states are attempting to place on Microsoft as punishment for their "anti trust" practices are ludicrous. The hidden corporate motives of various Microsoft competitors, all trying to disrupt and destroy Microsoft's market positions, are the real culprits. Let the consumer dictate what they want in the market place and not the attorney generals from the 9 states trying to break up the business practices of Microsoft.

Thank you,
James Arnstein

MTC-00009251

From: Kinsella, Mary
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 3:53pm
Subject: Microsoft

Gentlemen: Bill Gates and his Microsoft team have revolutionized computer use. This is no small thing. Nothing in our world is the same thanks to the ease of use of the Microsoft products. I'm not saying there weren't any other important players because there were, however, in my view Microsoft was the absolute catalyst for it all, the information highway, the information age, the whole ball of wax. Rather than penalizing them over nitpicky stuff, we should really be giving Gates and his cohorts some kind of award. Bill Gates and Microsoft have changed the way we work, the way we live. Another plus which hasn't yet been acknowledged or reached fruition is that there are innumerable people who previously couldn't even type, didn't know a keyboard from a calculator, who are now clicking away, traveling the information highway, finding useful information, planning their life events, and without intending to becoming proficient at keyboarding and absorbing way more information than they realize. Their life skills and possibly job skills are improving due to the prolific distribution and reasonable pricing of Microsoft products, not to mention the 'free' added in products like Microsoft Internet Explorer and Microsoft Photo Editor. I've never heard one real (from the horses mouth) story about Microsoft people being coercive in fact I've heard just the opposite. It's my humble opinion that the law and the DOJ is being manipulated by Microsoft's enemies who will use you as a cat's paw to destroy the man, Bill Gates, who may be the greatest mind of our time. Many years ago a poet said he had seen the best minds of his generation destroyed by madness. I'd have to say I see the best mind of my generation being destroyed by jealousy and concerted legal malice. Please note that this is my personal opinion only, and not necessarily the opinion of my employer. May God's own wisdom aid you in making your decisions in this matter.

Sincerely,
Mary T. Kinsella
22 Rockhill Street
Foxboro, MA 02035

MTC-00009252

From: Robert Pretlow, M.D.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sir/Madam:

I am a pediatrician, and I manage two humanitarian health websites for children, one for bedwetting at <http://www.wetbusters.com>, and one for overweight children at <http://www.blubberbusters.com>. Approximately 60,000 children per month use the two sites. There are an estimated 7 million children with bedwetting in the U.S. and 15 million overweight children. These websites allow children affected with bedwetting or obesity to learn about their problem and to anonymously interact, via chat rooms, with other children affected with the same problem. There are social stigmas attached to these conditions, and chat rooms allow the children to interact in a way not possible in face-to-face life.

Both of these sites use Java software (Sun Microsystems) for educational applications and for chat rooms. Again, chat rooms are highly valued by children with socially stigmatized conditions because of the anonymity of chat rooms. There is no other chat room software comparable to Java. Java also allows monitoring of the chat rooms to insure child safety. Previous versions of Microsoft Windows have included Java, but Microsoft Corporation has now decided to no longer include Java with their new version, Windows XP. Therefore, to use our chat rooms and educational areas, children with Windows XP computers must now first download Java, a process that is complicated and time consuming (15-20 minutes with a 56K modem). Moreover, with typical 56K dialup access, the connection may be interrupted before the download is completed.

Below is an email from a 12-year-old boy with bedwetting (who uses the wetbusters site):

Subject: hi
Date: Thu, 1 Nov 2001 20:08:30 EST
From: RobThGmHHH@aol.com
To: chatrooms@wetbusters.com

i have the new windows XP and i can't get in the room it say i don't have a java browser. what do i do.

Tony

Subsequent emails from this child indicate that neither he nor his family is unable to understand how to download Java:

no i did not down loda it because it did not ask me if i want to down load the java browser.

Tony

mom and dad had to get a computer guy to put a java browser on my computer. the computer guy loaded netscape so i could have a java browser on my windows XP.

Tony

Children using America Online with Windows XP do not receive a screen message that they must download Java. Moreover, if they are able to download Java, they are no longer able to use Java applications in AOL's browser environment. They must now use Microsoft Internet Explorer or install Netscape Navigator.

I have also been in the process of creating an interactive website for children with asthma, of whom there are 20 million children in the U.S., and who have the same social isolation issues as children with obesity and bedwetting. I have, however, currently abandoned the children's asthma site because of the Windows XP Java issue. I feel that Microsoft's decision to no longer include Java in the Windows operating system constitutes a significant hardship for thousands of users. Even though I have been a substantial Microsoft stockholder since its initial public offering, I feel that the lack of Java inclusion in Windows XP places an unfair barrier for users of chat rooms and other Java applications.

Because Microsoft is allowed to have a monopoly on the PC operating system, I feel that Microsoft has a responsibility to not abandon consumers. Microsoft should therefore be required to include Java with the Windows operating system.

Thank you for your time and consideration of the above matter.

Yours truly,

Robert A. Pretlow, MD, FAAP
eHealth International, Inc.
5406-K Lake Washington Blvd. N.E.
Kirkland, WA 98033
phone: 425-827-3719

MTC-00009253

From: Henry Sharp
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:55pm
Subject: proposed settlement

I am disappointed that our government has not proceeded with serious action against Microsoft's anti-trust suit. Microsoft continues to flout the government and run their monopolistic practices and the justice department is doing nothing to stop them.

Harriet Sharp
1165 Harbor Hills Drive
Santa Barbara, CA 93109

MTC-00009254

From: Sr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have designed industrial instruments and other products since 1970. As an independent consultant, it is necessary for my work to be installed and read by my customers' systems. So, I struggle to stay in business because I cannot afford the continual drain on my time and physical energy that results from Microsoft's periodic Operating Systems woes and planned product obsolescence. At the same time, I cannot provide reports and data to my clients unless I continue to remain up to date with my Microsoft software.

For the record, I started using Microsoft when it was Windows 3.1. I have changed to the next version reluctantly, and only at the point in time when Microsoft refused to continue its support of the prior product. That migration path wound through Windows 3.10, 3.10a, Windows 95, NT3.51, and NT4.0. I stare into the near future with dread: Windows XP is not for me, but I don't know what else I may be able to do. At each change, Microsoft collects more money. With each version, I spend no less than 100 hours getting my equipment to work again, sometimes finding that a printer (or other device) is no longer "supported" by Microsoft's latest product and must be replaced.

Mr. Gates is a pioneer. His company has found a method by which he can deliver a product that isn't finished yet, charge more for it than it will ever be worth, and have his quality assurance testing conducted by paying customers. The only partial success I have enjoyed is that I have avoided using Internet Explorer or Microsoft Outlook. Even without all those security problems (read, design defects), other Microsoft products have consumed far too much of my time and patience.

The existing settlement seems to me a bald faced sellout. I would like to see my government (Federal as well as State) do more than cower uncertainly before such a large political contributor . . . who also happens to have been guilty of breaking the law. I would sincerely hope that we may find a restored balance in our priorities: it is an old principle of law that one who abuses the law should not benefit from that abuse. I would love to see that attitude regain its earlier vitality.

David E. Myer, Sr.
Vice President
Crow Feather Ent., Inc.
Innovation & Intellectual Property

MTC-00009255

From: Mader, John
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 3:55pm
Subject: Anti-Trust Settlement

To whom it may concern
I feel that if the present settlement is allowed to stand (Microsoft allowed to continue shipping their applications bundled with their operating system) the consumer will have to pay the cost of mitigation. With the clout that the operating system gives Microsoft they will be able to move into any lucrative software market after other firms develop those markets. This pattern is very evident (i.e. Java, Palm, Sun). Eventually most of the other players will be pushed out of the market, and Microsoft will be successful in creating a barrier to the software market. This loss of competition will not serve the interest of the American people. I ask the court to break Microsoft into 2 or more companies.

John Mader
10228 Gatemont Circle
Elk Grove Ca. 95624

MTC-00009256

From: john was
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:02pm
Subject: stop it already

Please stop this travesty of justice. Enough is enough of this capitalism hating antitrust law suit. I myself am not wealthy and probably wont ever be but I dont begrudge someone who has the where with all to achieve what microsoft has done. Show some common scence and put and end to this garbage once and for all.

MTC-00009257

From: PollyPops9@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:01pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
LET'S SETTLE THIS STUPID ATTACK ON MICROSOFT NOW.

MTC-00009258

From: Bill Turner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:02pm
Subject: comments on microsoft judgement
[Text body exceeds maximum size of message body (8192 bytes). It has been converted to attachment.]

CC: Dennis Powell, Steve Coe, Tony Charoen, Laurence Hunt...
Gentlemen:

First, I'd like to thank you for allowing this period of "public comment" on the Microsoft Anti-Trust Settlement. I have taken the liberty of cc'ing a few of my closest friends scattered "hither and yon" around the globe as well as a "Linux Columnist" because I think this really is an International, as well as very important, issue that should not be restricted to the views of a few people, or to "Americans Only." I suppose an appropriate beginning would be to talk a bit about my qualifications. First and foremost I am not an attorney. I am a "computer professional" with over 20 years of experience of all kinds in the "computer industry" and have worked on equipment ranging from mainframe computers (using punched cards as input and output) to stand-alone and networked PC's. I have a BBA in Computer Information Systems (Cum Laude) from National University in San Diego, CA from 1985. And an AS in Data Processing from San Diego City College. Since the fall of 1980 when I began classes at San Diego City College I have worked on many different types of hardware, and used many different Operating Systems. Back in the early 80's the world of the PC was still a "wild and wooly" kind of place. Many OS's and computer hardware philosophies existed to provide an environment where the end user had an incredible amount of choice. I have, as a computer professional, essentially "grown up" along with the PC. I have watched the hardware side of things advance rapidly from the "turbo" PC XT clone of my first system (10 MHz!), 640KB RAM (which according to Bill Gates at the time 'should be enough for anybody') and no hard drive at all to the situation today where a 1 GHz processor and 128MB of RAM (and a 20GB hard drive) is considered routine. I have watched as the business world embraced PC technology with open arms. To make them "more productive" and to cut costs (as compared to mainframes). I have watched while the PC was "standardized" to be a "Microsoft-Only" machine in so far as the OS and most applications suites are concerned. I have seen, for more than two decades now, the kind of company Microsoft is, and the kind of business practices that they consider to be "acceptable" I find to be so abhorrent I will do almost anything to avoid putting money into their pockets. Unfortunately, as a "computer professional," I find myself, more often than I'd like to think about, in the situation of having to recommend and then support Microsoft products because of the almost universal perception that "the Microsoft Way is the Only Way" and most companies will not even consider anything else. Even now.

There have been "alternatives" to Microsoft products all along. Back in the days of MS DOS there were products such as CP/M, 4DOS, and DR-DOS. But one thing Microsoft has always been a master at. Marketing.

They managed to convince the PC makers to include the MS DOS OS with every new system sold. Once PC's started being sold with hard drives installed it was even easier to do this as Microsoft went to the companies (politely at first, the strong-arm stuff came later) and managed to get them to sign "exclusive" agreements with Microsoft.

These "exclusive" agreements meant that NO competitors OS software (or applications software for that matter) could be installed on any system sold. And of course, you could not sell a PC with NO OS installed.

According to Microsoft this was to "stop piracy" but in reality it was a ploy to make Microsoft, Bill Gates, Paul Allen, and all the rest of them so filthy RICH that it is more than obscene. How "powerful" is Microsoft? Consider the case of OS/2 and IBM for an answer to that. IBM is hardly what one could consider a "small company" and easily pushed around by anybody. According to documents published already from the DOJ's Microsoft Anti-Trust Trial even a company the size of IBM was "forced" to sign "exclusive agreements" with Microsoft to include a copy of Windows 95 with every PC sold, or not have a "license" to sell Windows 95 at all. If a company the size of IBM has "no choice" then the rest of the software and computer industry is pretty well screwed isn't it?

Today, Microsoft has a lot of very real competition. This is as it should be. For server and other "back office" applications Linux is "kicking tail" and that's only going to improve. However, if the U.S. Government "gives in" to Microsoft on this Anti-Trust Settlement, and you need to understand that the view "from the street" is that you are doing EXACTLY that very thing, then Microsoft is going to go on, just as before, and absolutely NOTHING will have been gained from the long, and expensive, anti-trust trial.

Red Hat Linux <<http://www.redhat.com>> has offered to take the proposal that Microsoft provide it's OS and apps software to the "14,000 poorest U.S. School Districts" one better. They have offered to take the money that would have been spent for the Microsoft OS and apps software, and use that to invest in more hardware for the schools instead.

The money can be used to provide a rather substantial increase in the number of computers provided to the school districts. Red Hat has agreed to "provide Open Source solutions" which include Red Hat Linux and any applications needed (perhaps the Star Office suite—a "worthy replacement" for MS Office in every way) and this will be something that is not going to require going back in a few years to "upgrade" all of those systems because the OS and applications software licenses will have expired.

Open Source is about Freedom. Freedom of Choice in just about everything. Linux is an excellent and probably the best known example of this. The Linux Kernel is "hacked" (coded) by people all over the world. It all flows through a small group of people (including Linus Torvalds, the creator) who ensure that there is "control" over what gets put in, what doesn't, and to ensure a central place to keep track of what bugs yet need squashing.

With Linux, you can run at the command line, or under X Windows (a graphical environment or GUI). If you run X Windows you then have a plethora of "environments" to choose from and run. GNOME or KDE (both quite legitimate competitors to the MS Windows environment) or perhaps a "light weight" Window Manager such as IceWM (my personal favorite) or the well-regarded Enlightenment Window Manager.

The point is that with Linux, and with Open Source, you get a tremendous amount of choice "built-in" and it has always been there. With Microsoft the only "choice" you get is to open your wallet, when they tell you to, and to pay them what they tell you to, or to not use their products. If everyone else is using their products this can be "a bit of a problem" to put it politely. There are other issues as well. One of the things keeping Linux from being even more widely accepted than it already is has to do with the fact that when the consumer goes to buy a PC it is REQUIRED—still—to have a Microsoft OS on it. The consumer is not told how much of the cost of the system is due to the OS. The consumer is not told that they have any choice in the matter at all.

This needs to be changed, dramatically. Ideally when a consumer walks into a computer store he would be shown "that system in the window" advertized for $499 and then it would go something like this:

Salesman: OK sir, we need to discuss how you'd like your system setup. What OS would you like?

Customer: What do you have available? What's the cost? What's included?

Salesman: We have Windows XP, Red Hat Linux, or you can get the system with no OS at all and install whatever you'd like when you get home.

If you want Windows XP that would add $150 to the price for the "home" version, and $250 for the "professional" version. We can install it for you free. You won't get a CD. And that includes no "office" or "development" software. If you want to add that we can discuss your needs so I help you with that. Also, you will have to go to Microsoft to get your OS "activated" after it's installed. You have 30 days to do that or it stops working.

If you want Red Hat Linux (the Deluxe Boxed set) it will add about $80 to the price. Red Hat Linux comes with 6 CD's containing the OS, the Source Code for that, and a host of applications software of all types. We can also install that for you for free.

Also, you need to know that, by default, the system has a "win-modem" installed. What that means is that it will only work with a version of the Windows OS. If you want a "real" modem that will work with any OS then we have an internal 56K modem for $50 and an external for $120.

Customer: I never realized before how expensive it was to have Windows! What's the deal with this modem that won't work with anything else? That doesn't sound right to me. How hard is it to use Linux? Do you have classes for that?

Salesman: Yes sir, it can be kind of expensive to run Windows. The "win-modem" is a cheap modem that uses "software" to do part of the job "hardware" used to do routinely. It uses about 15% of the system resources to do that on average. It is much cheaper though at only $25 instead of $50 for the internal modem.

Linux can be kind of difficult to learn at first. But yes sir, we do have classes in Linux. We can also discuss what your needs are going to be and we can do all the installation and almost all the setup of it here in the store for you. Just like Windows.

Once it's installed and properly configured Linux is really no more difficult to run than Windows is. I think you'll find many things to like about Linux once you give it a try.

So what would you like to do sir?

Customer: I think I'll take the Red Hat Linux, installed, and the external modem as well. And I'd like to talk about getting some of those classes you mentioned.

Salesman: Yes Sir! I think you'll be happy with the choice you've made. Let's talk about getting you scheduled for some of those Linux user classes. Would evening or on the weekend better suit your schedule?

In an ideal world, this is what would happen. I've used Red Hat Linux as an example only. Could just as well be SuSE, Debian, Slackware or Mandrake Linux. Or something from another OS maker. BeOS. FreeBSD. or a host of others.

I think that if Microsoft is "punished" by putting their OS and applications software into the 14,000 poorest school districts in America then they are not actually being punished at all. The school districts are now pawns in a ploy to get Microsoft on every school desktop in America. If Red Hat Linux is taken up on their offer to substitute Open Source applications and OS software there is going to be, of necessity, an absolutely vital long-term benefit to this nation, and the world, that no one seems to realize. The students are going to be exposed at an early age to the "Open Source Attitude" and that is something worthwhile in my opinion.

Also, if you go to Linuxdot.Org <<http://www.linuxdot.org>> you'll find a couple of columns I've written. One of them, on "OS Arrogance" I think it is, has a link to an article where a description of the School System of Mexico choosing to use "Open Source" and how that has gone so far. Personally, I think that if "Open Source" and Linux is "good enough" for the schools in Mexico then it is surely "good enough" for the Public Schools in the United States as well. In a world where "the net" is almost everywhere, it is important that this "punishment" of Microsoft be seen in the larger context that it is actually a part of. The World Community. Not just the United States. For something of this magnitude "national borders" are irrelevant. Left unsaid until now is the absolutely horrific "security" aspects of just about any Microsoft OS or application you'd care to name. To call the quality of Microsoft's products "shoddy" is about as accurate as describing "gang rape" as "an amusing Saturday evening diversion". Microsoft released Windows 2000 to the world with a list of "known bugs" that totaled over 67,000. This is what they "knew about" and released anyway. Microsoft doesn't really care about security. All they care about is money.

Want proof? Do like I did. Subscribe to a few internet mailing lists on security issues (like the one from CERT) and you will find again and again "exploits" against Microsoft products. Microsoft products keep the "anti-virus" makers in business all by themselves.

Microsoft, even when someone takes the time and trouble to describe to them EXACTLY what the exploit is, how to use it, and (in many cases) how to "plug the hole" simply can not be bothered to even respond to the person letting them know. Let alone actually taking the time and trouble to work on making "security" holes disappear in their products. In the Linux world of course things are different. Linux, like any other OS or application, has it's own set of problems. Linux though, since it's "Open Source" has a huge advantage. Anyone that wishes to can take the source, fix a bug they found, and submit that back to the "Linux Community" at large almost instantly.

In practical terms this means that when an "exploit" is discovered in Linux there is a "fix" available for it in a matter of only a couple of days. Many times, it's available in a matter of hours. Word is put out on where to get it, and how to install it. Almost before most people even knew that there was "a problem" it has already been fixed.

Microsoft, on the other hand, quite routinely takes weeks or months to "fix" whatever security hole we are talking about. If they do so at all. Many of the people that write viruses to "attack" Windows do so because Microsoft has quite routinely ignored these problems in the past. If you have a "known exploit" that has been around for months and you know that Microsoft is not about to take one minute of their time, or spend one dollar of their money, fixing something like that then it becomes ridiculously easy to have something like the "Melissa" Virus spreading like wildfire all over the world.

If Microsoft is forced to compete on an equal basis with everyone else then Microsoft is going down the tubes, in a hurry, because Microsoft has never in it's life tried to compete on an equal footing with anyone and wouldn't have the slightest idea how to go about doing that. "Freedom of Choice" is one of the Open Source Credo's. Unspoken or not. Let's make it the "rule of law" so far as Microsoft is concerned as well please. I'd like to close with a short bit about "standards." Both the "real" and the "Microsoft" variety. "Real" standards of course are just that. Standards that a majority of knowledgeable people from around the world have agreed on "yes, this is how this will work" and everyone knows that this is how things will work.

"Microsoft" standards are standards because Microsoft says so. Microsoft is an "old pro" at taking "real" standards, like XML, and "improving" it. Microsoft's idea of an "improvement" however usually is along the lines of "it only works with Microsoft products" now. I recently read a bit of news where the Opera web browser was not able to connect to a portion of the MSN.com site unless it was configured to tell the server it was "Internet Explorer." Opera allows you to "tweak" many things. Including how to present itself to the web server. So long as "I.E." was selected Opera users could access anyplace on the site. When it was telling the server that it was, in fact, Opera, a cryptic message about "upgrading your browser" and quite specifically mentioning I.E. was displayed instead.

Microsoft claims that it was "an accident" and it was soon enough fixed. But it does much to show what the thinking of Microsoft is as regards the Internet, and standards for the Internet. I believe that Microsoft should be forced to adhere to standards that are really standards. I also believe that they should be forced to not only document their Windows API calls, but also to document their file formats. In particular their "*.doc" format. This is something that changes all the time. Also, Microsoft should be forced to document all the "improvements" they've made to "standards" such as XML, and other Internet related "standards" that they have "improved." As a company Microsoft wouldn't know "innovation" if it came up and bit them. All they know is how to take ideas someone else had, put it in a pretty wrapper, declare it to be the result of "years of research and development work" and then expect people to pay whatever they decide to charge.

We need to put a stop to this. If not for Microsoft and their decidedly "anti-competitive" nature the computing industry could be years ahead of where we are now. You have the power, and the opportunity, to make historic changes that will not only affect us, but indeed will affect most of the world in one fashion or another.

Please do not "roll over" for Microsoft. No matter how much money, or how many lawyers they throw at you. Let's see "justice" actually be just that for a change.

Thank you.

MTC-00009259

From: Don Bogart
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 3:50pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
Software Marketing Center, LLC
4149 Winfield Road
Columbus, Ohio 43220
January 7, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Attorney General Ashcroft:

I believe that it was a tremendously important and beneficial decision for the Department of Justice to have settled the case against Microsoft. Having spent the past twenty years in the software business, I can attest to the positive impact that Microsoft and other innovative companies have had in contributing to the remarkable productivity gains which helped to generate a robust national economy for many years. Without this leadership and technological advantage, our country would be far less able to succeed in an increasingly competitive global marketplace.

I think that the current settlement is fair to both sides. I was happy to learn that The State of Ohio is ready to settle the case. Further litigation and congressional hearings would benefit no one but Microsoft's competitors. I support the settlement, and hope to see it finalized soon.

Sincerely,
Donald Bogart
President
Software Marketing Center, LLC

MTC-00009260

From: Eberhard Hafermalz
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:05pm
Subject: Settlement with MicroSoft
Dear Sir/Madam

Following a request by Helmar Rudolph who is part of the BeUnited Team and with whom a DOJ person has talked on January 4, 2002, I would like to submit my views on what is necessary to remedy the damage done to the market for PC operating systems (OS) by MicroSoft.

I am not a developer but a user of the BeOS, an alternative operating system widely acclaimed for its potential as a desktop OS. I would like to stress that the BeOS never has taken off as a widely used OS on the PC market. Not because it does not have the potential; there is publicly available numerous evidence to the contrary. The BeOS has died because computer makers were not allowed to pre-install this OS on their systems instead of or even alongside a MicroSoft OS, thus precluding a broad distribution. It is a known fact that computer makers declined the offer of Be, Inc., the maker of BeOS, to ship their machines with the BeOS pre-installed because this would invoke the respective punitive clauses in the licensing agreement they had with MicroSoft.

Further, when installing a MicroSoft OS onto a computer already equipped with the BeOS (or any other OS), the MicroSoft OS wipes the so-called bootblock, resulting in the computer only booting into the MicroSoft OS afterwards. As is well known, MicroSoft OSs are prone to get unusable after a short period of time, requiring extensive maintenance which more often than not is easiest done by re-installing the whole system. This obviously invokes the bootblock problem every time a re-install is conducted.

These two issues alone make it almost impossible for the average computer user to (a) acquire a non-MicroSoft OS running computer, and (b) maintain a dual-boot system where one of the OSs is a MicroSoft one. The remedy for issue (a) would be to disallow MicroSoft in clear terms the use of any contractual clauses in their licensing agreements that restrict the decision of the computer maker on what OS, if any, to ship with the computer they manufacture.

The remedy for issue (b) is to disallow MicroSoft the overwriting of the bootblock when Windows (or another MicroSoftware) is installed. This is technically possible by giving the user the choice which systems to boot into. Resolving issue (b) is in fact complementary to issue (a) for the reasons explained above; otherwise MicroSoft would be allowed to abuse their dominant market position by simply accomplishing at a later point in time what they have been denied at the manufacturer's stage: killing the competing OS on the same computer.

In light of the MicroSoft strategy of the past, the above is not the only remedy I think necessary because it would only create a level playing field. MicroSoft would be allowed to maintain the fruit of their previous unfair competition practice. Thus it appears unjustified to require MicroSoft to cede proprietary information in areas where it has acquired a de-facto monopoly by way of utilizing advantages from their unfair competitive behavior. Most importantly, this includes the "office" part of the company's business. Microsoft Office is the standard because Office was pressed onto the consumer as "part of Windows", which—as well as the Internet Explorer—it is not. Microsoft thus utilized the practice described above to eliminate any competitor in this software segment.

In order for rival makers of office software to compete they need the information required to create translators, software add-ons ("plug-ins" in Windows-speak) that allow the competing software to import from and export files to Microsoft Office (and other) formats. I would like to point out that in order to accomplish this it is not required that Microsoft open their source code of Windows, Microsoft Office, or any other software.

Moreover, I would like to bring to your attention that it is not only Windows, and Microsoft software running on Windows, that needs to be included in a settlement. Microsoft is already showing the same patterns of behavior as before in the market for handheld computers. Also they are obviously trying to delay any remedial action against the Windows monopoly in the desktop computer market until Windows is no longer their main product line. Any settlement that is to create and ensure a level playing field in the longer term not only needs to remove the Windows monopoly but at the same time include any future OS or, indeed, software Microsoft might sell, be it ".Net" software, Windows CE/Stinger, or any other product.

Finally, please revise your stance on the issue of Microsoft's "giving away freely" computers, software, and service for these to schools. This is no remedy but an opportunity. It will create a new market for the company. These days Microsoft's power to abuse their position stems from the very fact that for most people the term "computer" automatically means "Windows", i.e. Microsoft. Letting Microsoft "make good" for their abusive behavior by opening one of the few places where competing OS maker Apple still holds a better than insignificant market share would mean, as we say in Germany, to try to expel the devil with the Beelzebub.

The fate of innovation is at stake. Innovation cannot come from a company that has been holding the monopoly for almost ten years now. There is much better, much more innovative software out there than Microsoft one but it will never have a chance.

Unless Microsoft is forced to give it that chance.

Thank you for your attention.
Faithfully yours
Eberhard Hafermalz

MTC-00009261

From: Accounting
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 4:03pm
Subject: Microsoft
I support the microsoft settlement

MTC-00009262

From: Accounting

To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 4:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support the Microsoft Settlement. Stop wasting taxpayers money. Microsoft has done more for computer technology than any other company in the world. Leave them alone.

MTC-00009263

From: Sara Peters
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think it is time to settle the Microsoft case and let them get on with their business. This has gone on too long. I hope to read where a settlement has been reached and then that will be the end of this case.

Sincerely,
Sara Peters

MTC-00009264

From: Jason W Stiles
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I am currently participating in worldwide network, orchestrated through beunited.org, that is working toward bringing BeOS or the equivalent back into the market place. There is however little hope for success of any alternative operating systems making headway on x86 (Intel) architecture if the following issues are not addressed:

- Open Office Suite file formats
- Win32 APIs
- Boot sector control through restrictive licensing

- Dual boot availability with predominant platforms

It is commonly accepted among Operating System enthusiasts that BeOS was one of the most advanced, most promising, and at the same time most doomed operating system because of the inability to work with vendors to get the product to market. This was truly the demise of BeOS. Any settlement that allows any company to restrict what OS'es may or may not be installed by 3rd party hardware vendors and computer manufacturers would be simply forcing the fate of Be Inc and BeOS onto the next company that attempts to innovate in the OS marketplace. Further more, I think appropriate punishment of Microsoft should not come in the form of donations of hardware and software to schools, but rather it should include funding of Operating System research and development in the educational sector and no profit organizations. By taking advantage of and empowering the bright young minds our in country's high education institutions you would be fostering the same scenarios that led to the creation of Mosaic and the Netscape Browser and we all recognize how that changed the world.

Thank you,
Jason Stiles
Associate Consultant
CRM Alliance Services
stilesja@us.ibm.com
cell phone # 270-303-8322
home phone # 270-563-2403 v-mail # 804-327-4854

MTC-00009265

From: RYDER385@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:15pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Further litigation should be denied for the following: —The Dept. of Justice reached a verdict and compensation agreed to by the party majorities. —To allow further litigation one has to only question the motives and rationale of the remaining few. —To pursue further litigation casts serious doubts on the credibility of the Dept. of Justice process and abilities of its hard working personnel.

MTC-00009266

From: Muller, Thomas
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 4:34pm
Subject: Penalties

I can't believe that you caved to the Microsoft monopoly and are allowing them to continue to rip the people off. They are overcharging the consumer for their operating system. They are subjecting us to operating systems that are full of defects, security flaws, and they are not being "innovative" as they claim to be. I hope the states that defected from your settlement are successful in braking the company up into at least two separate companies.

Thomas P. Muller—Project Engineer
TMuller@acfindustries.com
636.940.5281

MTC-00009267

From: Wweinzierl@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:25pm
Subject: (no subject)

Gentlemen,

As a business leader I personally feel we have taken up enough of the public time and capital in pursuing MS to the ends of the earth. The remaining state attorneys general must feel a need for job preservation (i.e. reelection) by endeavoring to keep this case in the public domain unendingly. Please in the interest of all concerned, particularly the consumer, put this to rest asap.

Sincerely,
Bill Weinzierl

MTC-00009268

From: Berger
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:31pm
Subject: change is needed

I think it is time to end Bill Clinton era anti-trust law abuse. Let's get on so the free enterprise system can produce jobs and financial assistance to the American people.

MTC-00009269

From: Kevin Brown
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:33pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

BlankThe purpose of this email is to communicate my complete dissatisfaction with the ongoing anti-trust case against Microsoft. While I have my complaints against Microsoft and its products, it seems inconceivable to me that the company would be litigated against for being a monopoly. This is simply ludicrous, in my opinion. In fact, I believe this case has done tremendous harm to those in our community who take the risks and innovate. The outcome of this case applies to everyone, not just Microsoft.

I don't know whether Bill Gates contributed to Bill Clinton's campaign or not, but it seems clear to me that this misuse of governmental power is abusive and harmful to the public and it is my strongest position that the case should be ended now with an apology issued to Microsoft for all the harm it has caused and another apology to the public for the waste of taxpayer dollars used to litigate this case. This applies to the states that continue to litigate as well.

Kevin Brown

MTC-00009270

From: Fran (038) Gene
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:36pm
Subject: MICROSOFT LAWSUIT ?

I think you should let them off at this point—just look at all the good they have done — I couldn't have a computer if it wasn't for Microsoft ??

Virginia

Ralph Anderson
rea@preferred.com

MTC-00009271

From: Scott McLaughlin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-Trust

You have failed to prove your case. Drop it and stop wasting our money.

Success is not a crime.

Scott McLaughlin
President
MultiMedia Dental Systems, Inc. www.multimediantal.org
877-770-8514

MTC-00009272

From: Guthrie Chamberlain
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust case

I am writing today to voice my opinion on the Microsoft Antitrust case. As an owner of a business that is part of the IT industry I feel this case has been dragging on for too long and it has hurt not only Microsoft, but also the entire IT industry. The government has no rights meddling in the affairs of independent business unless it is truly hurting consumers through unfair practices. This is certainly not the case with Microsoft who has facilitated computing technology to benefit the majority of the world's population. Productivity and creativity has been stifled and it is now showing in the marketplace. Our economy has grown so much in the past two decades, due mainly to Microsoft and other key companies providing innovative products to the general consumer.

I have firsthand experience dealing with Microsoft, as I work as a Systems Integrator, creating and installing networks. Their products have made our business run, as well as the majority of our clients. As Microsoft experienced problems due to these lawsuits, so have we and it has affected the entire economy. I feel part of the recession that we are now experiencing is due to these lawsuits. I ask that you please take the public's concern into consideration and help put an end to the lawsuits. Additionally, I hope that remaining nine states can come to quick settlements, without further scrutiny from the government.

Sincerely,

H. Guthrie Chamberlain, III
501 Chamberlain Drive
Marietta, OH 45750
Guthrie Chamberlain
President
Eagle Technologies Group, Inc.
guthrie.chamberlain@eaglesgi.com www.eaglesgi.com
740.373.9729 x101

MTC-00009273

From: DBHepp@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern,

The settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

Please don't let special interests groups defeat the public interest.

Best regards,
Don Hepperle
Phone: 541-548-3354
Mailto: dbhepp@aol.com

MTC-00009274

From: MAXF4T@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:59pm
Subject: public comments on MS case

Dear Justice Department,

I have been following the government's misguided lawsuit against Microsoft. I have been a Microsoft user ever since I started using computers and I don't like the way the government has been attacking them.

In the first place, I like the way Microsoft bundles software. I think it's a big headache to purchase everything separately and then try to figure out what will work with what. Microsoft already does that for me; they perform all of the compatibility computations and work out most of the bugs before the product ever gets to me. I call that "good service." That's why I purchase Microsoft products.

In the second place, I have rarely (if ever) had a problem adding programs to my Microsoft operating system. I realize that there is a learning curve with new software and it may take me a while to figure it out; but that is not Microsoft's problem, nor is it the government's problem. Using Microsoft's operating system has NOT prevented me from using competitor's products. As I observe this case, I feel that any remedy that the Federal government proposes will probably cause me a big headache. It is not the government's job to work against the best interests of its citizens ... including me. This case should have been dropped a long time ago. In reality, it was nothing more than a witch-hunt proposed by President Clinton when he discovered that he couldn't shake-down Bill Gates for campaign contributions. In conclusion, I strongly urge you to drop this case totally.

God Bless America.
Respectfully submitted,
Max Effort
21609 Cedar, St. Clair Shores, MI 48081
Phone: 586-779-2028
email: maxf4t@aol.com

MTC-00009275

From: Alhstorz@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:00pm
Subject: Lawsuit
Gentlemen:

I want to take this opportunity to say that I support Microsoft in this lawsuit brought by the federal government. This is in direct conflict to everything Americans hold dear. Our freedoms have been encroached upon too long and it is time for this nonsense to end.

Thank you very much.

Hilma Storz
739 Edgebrook
Houston, TX 77034
alhstorz@aol.com

MTC-00009276

From: Eleanor McCabe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:04pm
Subject: Stop the antitrust suit

It is time to stop the waste in continuing the antitrust suit against Microsoft. It is not needed with all the more important cases for the Justice Department to bring to trial.

MTC-00009277

From: Glenn and Wanda Trapp
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:04pm
Subject: Microsoft

I want to end the Clinton-era Anti-trust.

The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to consumers. With government out of the business of stifling progress and tying the hands of corporations, consumers—rather than bureaucrats and judges—will once again pick the winners and losers on Wall Street. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products and technologies.

Sincerely,
Wanda Trapp
Rt. 4, Box 327
McAlester, Ok 74501
gandwtrapp@myexcel.com

MTC-00009278

From: Michael P Parker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:05pm
Subject: Federal Gov't Settlement..

The settlement is a fair one and all States should accept it as being a reasonable solution to a very complex problem... We ought to squash further litigation and get on with the job of growing American Technology...Let Microsoft get back to work!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Michael P Parker
Retired IBM Exec
Avid user of PC software

MTC-00009279

From: bobhague
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:08pm
Subject: Microsoft fiasco
Sirs/Ms:

It's time to end this travesty of justice. Bill Gates has done more for this country and the economy than William Jefferson did to it, yet Honest Bill got off scot free while you waste time and money persecuting a true American. It's time to go after the real criminals, Clinton-Clinton, Gore and Reno.

Get on with it!
Sincerely,
Robert E. Hague
261 Lafayette Drive
Roseville, Ca.

MTC-00009280

From: Larry Reich
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 4:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I urge that this be done and over with, I support the Microsoft Settlement, Lawrence A. Reich 2445 Airport Rd. Eastman Ga. 31023

MTC-00009281

From: annie m. lane
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:07pm
Subject: microsoft

i don't like bill gates, he is a dem. but i don't know what he did to them but LEAVE THEM ALONE. this has all been politacol. so drop it, annie lane, carthage, ms. 39051

MTC-00009282

From: theholdings@mindspring.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:08pm
Subject: RE; MICROSOFT

I AM WRITING TO ASK YOU TO PLEASE END THE CLINTON-era ANTI-TRUST LAW ABUSE AGAINST MICROSOFT. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH ABUSE OF THIS FINE COMPANY THAT THAT SHOULD NOT HAVE HAD THIS ACTION BROUGHT IN THE FIRST PLACE.

SINCERELY,
HARRY HOLDING

MTC-00009283

From: gmewborn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:10pm

the govt and states and crying competitors need to get off this kick that microsoft is killing them. if they want to develop their own software operating system then go to it. everyone is jealous. microsoft should not stop others from doing there thing. I think a company can do whatever it wants to develop new products. you can buy or not buy. g.m.

MTC-00009284

From: Conley, David

To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/7/02 5:14pm
Subject: Microsoft case...
Gentlemen....

I think settling with Microsoft is a big mistake! They are, in fact, a monopoly...and should be divided into a systems company, an applications company...and an Internet company.

When I can't buy a new computer without having Microsoft's operating systems installed on it... thats NO choice!

Say NO to settlement!
David F. Conley
Citizens Communications
5600 Headquarters Dr., #A2014
Plano, Tx 75024
469-365-3467

MTC-00009285

From: Bud (038) Lyn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Ms. Hesse:

After perusing information provided the public regarding the Microsoft Settlement, and not being a "Wall Street Attorney", I wish to encourage the Court to be equitable and fair in its ultimate decision regarding the Microsoft case.

The Pacific Northwest, after September 11, has been feeling a domino effect from the tragedy that occurred in New York City. Our local NYSE and NSDQ stocks have suffered great losses, from which many will never recover. Granted, we are all in the same situation, but the State of Washington, on a daily basis, is losing high tech companies—just folding up, or consolidating out of state. Our unemployment rates are climbing rapidly with the loss of Boeing jobs, and frankly, the future for the State of Washington looks bleak.

A blow to Microsoft would simply add to the recession our state and country is finding itself in. As a citizen of the United States, I do not wish to see more businesses punished to the point of extinction. Mr. Gates has done, and will do wonderful things for education, world peace, and the welfare of children, worldwide, if given the opportunity under our free enterprise system. He has stepped down from a very lofty and important position in his company to cooperate in this matter. My greatest fear is that he will lose interest in the company he started, and not have an interest in promoting new and innovative ideas that will benefit everyone, worldwide. The states involved in this lawsuit are stamping their feet like children, refusing to be reasonable for the sake of everyone, to prove that they are mightier than Microsoft, its management, and Mr. Gates. These states and the rest of our United States will end up the losers. We all need to cooperate to reinstate a healthy economy, where business can thrive, thus allowing us to deal with important issues facing us in the future.

That future is now in jeopardy, and I wish to urge those who are charged with the decision in the Microsoft case, to take more than just the law into account. Real human beings, with families, mortgages to pay, children to educate, retirement to plan for, and a job to take pride in, is at stake.

This is not a chess game, but real life, and I pray that you will do what is right for all, not just a few

Thank you for listening to a citizen's opinion.

Best Regards,
Lyn Wessman
lyngwes@earthlink.net

MTC-00009286

From: John McClaughry
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:21pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft case is a long running embarrassment for Justice and damaging to the economy. The pending settlement is a reasonable conclusion. Please accept it, and tell the nine grandstanding AGs complaining about it to go chase some real criminals.

John McClaughry, Ethan Allen Institute, Concord VT
(I have no connection to Microsoft.)

MTC-00009287

From: Maher Saba
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Congratulations on signing the settlement with Microsoft. I hope all the states will follow suite. I am writing to offer my support and hope that the judge approves the settlement as soon as possible.

Thanks, Maher

MTC-00009288

From: Jean Galburt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please end the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse of Microsoft. Where would be all be technically if it were not for Bill Gates, his colleagues and his company. His programs & operating system's are wonderful.

Paula Jean Galburt

MTC-00009289

From: Frank Bankenbush
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:54pm
Subject: Micro-Soft settlement

Please end this foolishness.

Let the marketplace adjust itself.

Franklyn J. Bankenbush
11409 Washington Ave. #10,
Sturtevant, WI 53177
262-886-9249

MTC-00009290

From: Steve Wersan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:35pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The proposed Microsoft Settlement, whichever way it turns out, will be a legal and business history landmark that will be pointed to by legal historians and business, academic, and government leaders for years to come.

Antitrust laws were drafted precisely for the purpose of curbing and punishing the not-alleged-but-proven sorts of misbehavior committed by Microsoft. If the proposed, slap-on-the-wrist settlement is adopted, the conventional wisdom of the future will say that this decision amounted to a judicial repeal of the antitrust laws, and initiated an era in which antitrust enforcement became a lapdog for egregiously monopolistic and avaricious businesses.

Conversely, if the court rejects this pussycat settlement and moves toward the only logical and just consequence of these misbehaviors by ordering the breakup of Microsoft, it will be saying that this is still a country whose laws are fairly enforced and enforced all the time. It will also be said that this decision initiated an era in which the full power of the computer and the internet were liberated from the self-seeking domination of one company's restricted vision. "Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide ..."

Dr. Stephen J. Wersan
Ridgecrest, CA

MTC-00009291

From: pmckelvey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:36pm
Subject: String'em Up

Yesterday, I read in USA TODAY, that a VP at Microsoft had said that LUNIX was the next target. Microsoft keeps their code secret. I guess security by obscurity. LUNIX is out there for anyone to work on and improve. Even the National Security Agency has published code examples as ways to make a "LUNIX" system more secure. I expect Bill Gates to include the "Universal Plug and Play" in LUNIX, thus opening it up to the hackers. But the code will be proprietary so no one will know.

Of great concern to me is the requirement that to do any kind of business with Microsoft, you have to have a Microsoft "passport". As I have read in the papers, Microsoft had to shut the passport system down for 24 hours because it had been hacked into.

With the "I Love you" virus following the rising sun around the earth and catching people before they were expecting anything is not surprising. If there is one direct progenitor of something that is everywhere, such a spread can and will occur. We need different operating systems. How bad can it get.

The Irish potato famine was caused by a blight. All the potatoes in Ireland were descended from one potato plant of very good qualities. But when the blight hit, there were no natural barriers to stop the blight. According to the accounts of the times, people were actually dying in the streets as the blight did its work on what was genetically one plant. Potato Soup?

Patrick C. McKelvey PE
pmckelvey@zoomtown.com
3315 Ashwood Dr.
Cincinnati, OH 45213-2437
(o) 513-631-3486
(h) 513-631-1221
RA 11651752

P.S. Probably 20 years ago, AT&T's Bell Labs had a auto license plate created. White background with green lettering reading "UNIX—Live Free or Die".

MTC-00009292

From: Robert (q)Bob(q) Rood

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Department of Justice.

I have followed the litigation and settlement issues with Microsoft over the last few years. To begin with, I have been quite upset over the handling of the case by the previous justice, and was extremely pleased that he was basically replaced. I am equally pleased that you apparently have arrived at a settlement with Microsoft. I believe this settlement to be in the best interest of the consumer. I still believe that as a consumer I was never hurt to begin with. I also believe that it is too bad that our justice system allows self serving companies and States to drag this matter on. Many of the concerns are from a few with products that were inferior to begin with. To allow this to drag on will hurt the consumer and product innovation.

Please enter my request to end this case with the settlement between the DOJ and Microsoft.

Thank you.
Robert J. Rood, 907 346 1563

MTC-00009293

From: Mark Palmer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:39pm
Subject: Anti-trust Case

To whom it may concern,
I realize that many of you in the Bush administration are holdovers from the most corrupt administration to hold the office of President. I also realize that their probably remains a number of corrupt individuals who believe that all businesses should be sending large donations to the Democratic Party. (In addition to the foreign entities that bought legislation from Clinton) But, I request that you return the country to normalcy (ie Government not suing legal businesses because you want more cash to redistribute to the non-producers) That request includes any lawsuits against Microsoft, Gun Manufacturers, Tobacco Companies, Automobile Manufacturers.... All of this should cease immediately.

Mark Palmer &
Mark D. Palmer
CC Dickson CO
456 Lakeshore Parkway
Rock Hill, SC 29730
(803) 980-8000 Ext. 264

MTC-00009294

From: Bill Sherman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:38pm
Subject: Settlement is Fair
Sirs,

This settlement is fair to both parties. As usual the only people who made out were the attorneys. Thanks for your consideration,

Bill Sherman
Spill 911, Inc
800-474-5911
www.spill911.com
billsherman@spill911.com

MTC-00009295

From: ray—dubcak@tx.acer.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:44pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Leave Microsoft and our free enterprise system alone!

Let the consumers decide in the marketplace which companies are the winners and which ones are the losers. I resent your interference in thinking you know better than us who have been in the information technology business for years.

We are talking about a $99 operating system that nobody is forced to buy if they don't want it (the IRS takes much more than that away from me by the use of force and coercion and I don't get anything back in return). Consumers can always use the free operating system called Linux along with its free web browser. Any new features Microsoft puts into their operating system is purely for their own survival. Live and let live!

I thank Microsoft for driving down prices so that the common person can understand and afford technology. If you punish them, then you are no better than a communist dictatorship which desires to own and control all business! The shame of it all is that Microsoft's competitors refused to offer better products at lower prices and instead resorted to government coercion and force. What a sad day for American liberty!

If you are truly looking out for the consumers as you say you are then leave Microsoft alone! Answer this question—how many complaints have you heard from the consumers themselves (the very persons you claim to be protecting)?

MTC-00009296

From: Ben Allen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:
I am a computer user of both a Microsoft Operating System and a non-microsoft operating system that is trying to market itself as an alternative to the Windows line. So far, the operating system I favor (the BeOS) and others like it have had major roadblocks thrown in our faces due to Microsoft practices. The OS's I speak of run well with their own software, or with each other's software, but have had a very difficult, if not impossible task of working with the Microsoft systems, which the majority of computer users use.

If these other businesses are to be given the equal right to develop a product, Microsoft must be properly dealt with in this case. Microsoft's Office file formats cannot be used by non-microsoft software and the Windows installer will not let me boot into my non-Windows OS, so I cannot try to develop software for the Operating System of my own choice. Many other hinderances placed by Microsoft prevent legitimate software developers from writing! software that people can use. Thank you for your efforts to rectify the issues at hand. I am not alone, users world-wide share my appreciation for your efforts.

Sincerely,
Ben Allen
ben_allen@bemail.org

MTC-00009298

From: Syd (038) Ron Corbett

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:45pm
Subject: Microsoft

I think we should be more concerned with stimulating the economy and encouraging innovation in business than with shackling creativity and entrepreneurship. Penalizing achievement will simply drive our businesses and economy down. Leave Microsoft alone—that way it can add to the economy with jobs.

Sydney B. Corbett
231 SE 45th Terrace
Ocala, FL 34471

MTC-00009299

From: John T. Weisel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:45pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Let's put this one to rest, you've beat up on MS enough now, and we all got the message. Let's lay off now.

John T. Weisel
Sunriver, OR 97707
Voice: 541-593-8201
Fax: 541-593-7318
(jtweisel@teleport.com)

Mail: 20 High Oak Drive, Medford OR 97504

MTC-00009300

From: Brad Smith
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:50pm
Subject: Microsoft Case

To whom it may concern at the Justice Department,

I support the Microsoft settlement as been proposed.

This case needs to be put to rest and get on with more important issues.

Sincerely,
Brad Smith
bradvs@preferred.com
423.743.5765

MTC-00009301

From: Marc H. Berblinger
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 5:49pm
Subject: Microsoft

Stop wasting your time & our tax money on the Microsoft case.

Marc Berblinger
Registered voter
San Diego, CA.

MTC-00009302

From: Del / Sue Chase
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-trust.

Get it over with!! It's questionable it should have been an issue anyway.

MTC-00009303

From: Dick H.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:01pm
Subject: End the Clinton-Era Anti-Trust law abuse.

Enough is enough! We need to protect our brilliant entrepreneurs, not penalize them. Without these persons our employment opportunities go by the wayside.

It is time to end the Clinton-era abuses!

RJH

MTC-00009304

From: Gary Roush
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:03pm
Subject: anti-trust law abuse opinion

I want to state that I do NOT approve of what is going on with the States accusing Microsoft. Microsoft is merely trying to survive among the many rivalries and have already given a lot to the demands, more so than should be required. The rivalries and competitors as you can see are playing around with no ropes tied to them taking advantage of the opportunities to win unrighteously and unfairly, while Microsoft, of all the good they have done, have way too many ropes tied and this is unjust. Why penalize a company for being too good or for being too helpful? I want the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse to end and it should end now! Our tax money is being wasted by this type of trial.

Gary Roush
12712 7th Ave NW
Seattle, WA 98177

MTC-00009305

From: volner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:05pm
Subject: Anti-Trust

I think it time to end the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse against Microsoft. As a user of Windows I applaud Microsoft. There product are top of the line and I use them daily.

Billy Volner
3615 Pennsylvania Ave
Mims, FL 32754

MTC-00009306

From: Ethel Feyertag
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:06pm
Subject: Microsoft

Please stop this Microsoft case...how ridiculous. With all the real crime which took place in and around the White House, 1992-00 [never prosecuted], and that among some senators/congressmen, how can they keep this up. I do not want our tax money spent going after Microsoft, and further, I think they deserve an apology.

E. Feyertag

MTC-00009307

From: Joseph Shields
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

A few ywars ago now, i remember getting a CD free with an issue of PC Plus with a bootable demo of BeOS 4.5 on it. I instantly fell in love with the system, getting used to all the advantages it held over Windows, bemoaning only the lack of support for my (considerable) collection of Windows-only software and hardware.

I proceeded to buy BeOS 5 Professional about a year later, to help do my bit to support a fantastic piece of software.

However, I was most distressed to read online that the BeOS was officially dead. This is an extremely unfortunate state of affairs, and is solely down to strong-arm tactics carried out by the Microsoft Operating System monopoly.

There is a large community at work, all of whom would like to see a viable update or evolution of the BeOS back in the marketplace. However, there are a number of factors which place Microsoft in a position which simply cannot be challenged now that their monopoly is in place.

The Windows system itself is a closely guarded secret, and as it is unfair to expect software manufacturers to re-write a version of their software for every Operating System under the sun, the only alternative is for an Operating System to have built-in support for another. In this case, BeOS (or any one of a hundred other systems) could sensibly compete with the Windows monopoly if the core components of the source of Windows, the API-related functions (especially the DirectX API, the workhorse of Windows as a platform for playing videogames), were made available. Lack of competition is bad for the consumer and bad for the economy. And leads to expensive anti-trust cases against monopoly-holders. Nobody wins.

There is a small list of other potential issues:

The leading office suite software, Microsoft Office, is, without a doubt, currently the best on the market. This cannot be disputed. However, there is no sensible way for companies to try to make a shot at trying to better Office, as the specifications for the Office files (.doc, .xls, .ppt etcetera) are ANOTHER guarded secret, and a business cannot afford to use software which cannot read or write files compatible with what the company down the road uses. I have personally experienced issues caused already by Microsoft's unnecessary changing of the specifications so that anybody who uses a recent version of the Office software must go to great lengths (losing much formatting information in the process) to be able to send documents to people with older versions. If you have Office 97 and really want to exchange with colleagues, then you're looking at a 250 upgrade for the privilege. Take this scenario, and it gets a thousand times worse when files created in Word XP with any advanced formatting cannot be opened in a suite for a non-Microsoft-endorsed system such as Gobe Productive under BeOS. The file specifications for most formats (HTML for web pages, JPEG and GIF for images, ZIP for compressed files) have been open to everybody for years, and the businesses behind them have NOT suffered as a result. Making the Office formats mandatory is more than a good idea, it's a required action.

The final suggested action is not rooted in Microsoft's monopoly, it's rooted in them being bastards and wanting to take advantage of their monopoly: When a new PC is shipped, Microsoft licensing states that the reseller's licence is void if the system isn't a "clean" Windows system. i.e. if the Reseller installed on it, say Windows 2000 Professional AND Mandrake Linux 8.1, the company loses its right to sell Microsoft-equipped machines and Microsoft will never speak to them again. Much as I've ranted, Windows is currently a requirement of a system you intend to use around the home.

Windows has been designed, however, to stamp out any other operating systems it finds on your computer. If you have a working BeOS computer and install Windows XP, then it will remove your ability to run BeOS. The same applies for Linux, and any REALLY alternative system you could name—Windows changes the Master Boot Record to disallow the running of other Operating Systems. Every other non-Microsoft operating system in creation provides a “boot loader”, which provides a list of the Operating Systems available on a computer when you switch it on, and all the systems in the list will co-exist happily. If you install a non-Microsoft system AFTER Windows, then it will put Windows in its list and the system will still work just as well. However, Microsoft simply do not ALLOW systems to include a dual-boot facility, which could threaten Windows as the user's operating system of choice. I'm pretty sure this license still covers the installation of any Internet Browser software other than Microsoft Internet Explorer (such as Netscape), as again that could pose a risk to Microsoft.

Dual-booting is NOT hard to program. Only obstinance prevents it from existing (and being permitted) in Windows as default. This is a crucial issue which on its own could make Linux much more marketable (if not help BeOS if implemented in isolation).

Thank you for (hopefully) reading through my $0.02, and I hope the comments are helpful and are taken into account. I am NOT one of the pure anti-Microsoft fanatics you find. I'm a fan of superior products. I use my Microsoft mouse and Joypad as they're the best available. However, the strong arm tactics used by Microsoft for their Operating System and Office software is simply unfair.

Yours sincerely,

—Jo “directhex” Shields

MTC-00009308

From: Colleen Dunham
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:13pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement and 15 U.S.C.
16

Dear Madam or Sir:

I have just returned from a long Christmas holiday. While I was away, family, friends, and other people engaged me in conversation about the Microsoft case. My conversations were with people from many walks of life in many parts of the country. I was surprised that so many people wanted to talk about the case and surprised that people outside of Microsoft have such strong feelings about the issues. All expressed some degree of approval of the Microsoft settlement for themselves, for the hi-tech industry, and for the American economy. None wanted to see additional litigation or further delay.

Please consider my observation as the United States determines whether to settle this antitrust suit.

Yours,

Colleen Dunham

MTC-00009309

From: Tom Arlin Dean
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:13pm

Subject: re: STOP

The Microsoft trial has squandered millions of taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

I believe this single act of heresy perpetrated by Bill Clinton and his lacky, Janet Reno, may well have been the catalyst for the recession we have experienced since and are still experiencing now.

Tom Arlin Dean
22204 Pepper Road
Athens, AL 35613

MTC-00009310

From: enbcpa2
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:19pm
Subject: Microsoft case

Dear Sir or Madam at the Justice Dept.:

Microsoft has been a blessing bestowed to America, because that company's technology gave this country a great deal of productivity. The technological advances have been great and have been made available to everyone at a very low cost.

I think that the American people would be well served by ending the Clinton-era Antitrust law abuses.

Microsoft is good to our economy. These law suits are only good to the lawyers.

Edgar N. Baquero, CPA
1428 Heights Blvd.
Houston, TX 77008
Tel. (713) 869-5332
Fax. (713) 869-8385

MTC-00009311

From: Daniel Berger
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS operating system back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

- 1) open MS Office file formats
- 2) open Win32 APIs
- 3) mandatory dual-boot options (i.e. multiple operating systems per computer)

In addition, it is clear that Microsoft should be split into two parts—one for the operating system itself, and one for software (and any other non-operating system components). This will help reduce the advantage it's own software has on the MS Windows platform.

On top of that, a huge fine for it's illegal and unethical strongarm tactics.

Sincerely,

Daniel Berger
Plymouth, MN

MTC-00009312

From: Rick Dassow
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti Trust Case

Dear Justice Department,

As a consumer of software products, I would like to petition the Justice Department to break up Microsoft. I believe that Microsoft's monopolistic practices have severely limited the choices available to the end users. Additionally, I firmly believe that by tying the operating system and its software products together, Microsoft has not only limited consumer choice, but has also perpetuated the use of inferior software products in the marketplace. Without choices, the consumer is limited to using inferior software products, and does not benefit by natural innovation that comes about by companies competing in the marketplace. I would conservatively estimate that Microsoft has set the software development industry back 7-10 years.

I hope that when the final decision is made, consideration is given to not only Microsoft's competitors, but also to how this large monopoly has effectively stagnated the advancement of the industry as a whole.

Rick Dassow
Senior Vice President FOUR SEASONS SERVICE GROUP
303-367-1332

MTC-00009313

From: Dana Norton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:29pm
Subject: User opinion
Gentlemen:

As a user of the only available operating system, I am highly insulted by Microsoft's attitude. Windows is a monopoly because the software required for my appraisal business is simply not available for Apple or Linux. Not because Windows is a better environment, but because of Microsoft's predatory practices. I was employed by IBM in 1961, thus am familiar with the Consent Decree signed by that monopoly. While I was loyal to the company, I was also familiar with the heavy-handed tactics employed which artificially maintained that monopoly.

I see the same techniques employed by Microsoft. Every time a successful competing product appears,

Microsoft does one of four things:

1. Re-write the OS so that the offending program won't run, or;
2. Buys the offending company, generally killing it, or;
3. “Sells” a competing program at little or no cost, or;
4. Pressures it's large customer's (manufacturers) into not offering the offending program by predatory pricing or threats of actions which would put the manufacturer out of business.

If Justice had not acted forcefully with IBM, a personal computer today, including software would probably cost in the neighborhood of $35,000. Microsoft must be broken up into, at a minimum, an operating system company and an application software company. Additionally, the heavy-handed tactics employed by Microsoft, outlined above, should be vigorously punished.

Sincerely,
Dana L. Norton, IFA

MTC-00009314

From: John Hughes

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It's time to end the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse against Microsoft!

John Hughes
20811-D Bear Valley Road
Apple Valley, CA 92308

MTC-00009315

From: Kathy K.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:25pm
Subject: We Support Microsoft!

MTC-00009316

From: Robert Moran
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:28pm
Subject: Microsoft Trial

I support ending the Microsoft Trial. This a waste of tax payers (my money) money. This is about special interest groups and nothing more. The consumer is going to be the victim in anything but an ending of the Trial.

Robert Moran
9624 Kini Place
Diamondhead, Ms 39525

MTC-00009317

From: Jim Lasch
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:36pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

The government has no business trying to break up Microsoft. It's time that we got over the idea that if a company is big and successful it must be bad. Those Democratic Party ideas are no longer in power. Just get out of that business and let Microsoft alone. They got where they are through hard work and a lot of effort. The government should not penalize that.

James H. Lasch

MTC-00009318

From: SANFORD SHIFRIN
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:30pm
Subject: United States vs Microsoft

We have spent more time pursuing Microsoft than pursuing Osama Bin Laden. It is time to stop persecuting Microsoft and drop this case against a truly great American Company. They have done more to advance our economy than any other American company.

Sanford Shifrin
P.O. Box 5013,
Scottsdale, Az. 85261-5013
480-948-4676

MTC-00009319

From: Edward Middleton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:33pm
Subject: Anti-trust law abuse

MTC-00009320

From: Sean Klope
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

You've wasted enough of my taxes on this outrageous trial. Please approve this settlement and save us further loss of precious dollars. You wouldn't even be receiving this email if it hadn't been for Bill Gates. He has saved so many people, companies and government agencies so much money by increasing their productivity with Personal Computer's and you have the audacity to cite him for poor business practice. Talk about biting the hand that feeds you!

Sincerely,
Sean L. Klope
Director of CIS Operations
Manufacturing Company in El Cajon, CA

MTC-00009321

From: rossenter
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:40pm
Subject: Microsoft

Let us put this to bed, enough money has been wasted, all for nothing. I am almost 78 years old, computers are a great thing in my life, without Microsoft, I would have never learned how to use them. Bill Gates has done more for the nations around the world than any company I can think of plus all of the people that have jobs. Let this all go away and they will have more resources to develop new products for the USA and the world. Clinton is gone, so should the phony charges against Microsoft.

L H Ross
Tucson Az

MTC-00009322

From: CZackim
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:44pm
Subject: Let's make an end to the Anti-Trust Case

To whom it may concern:

Few company's have created the type of wealth that Microsoft has helped their employees accomplish. In addition they have provided ways for all types of people to earn income more easily then ever in the past. Let's make an end to all this nonsense and allow Microsoft to work without interference.

Sincerely,
Carole Zackim
River Vale, NJ

MTC-00009323

From: GARY STOLP
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:47pm

Please end this persecution of a successful industry that has done more to inform the world and this country than all the television and newspapers combined.

Sincerely,
Gary C Stolp
1218 Boston Street
Muskogee OK 74401

MTC-00009324

From: ROBERT REMINGTON
To: Microsoft
ATR,rremington@webv.net@inetgw
Date: 1/7/02 6:50pm
Subject: "Red Letter Day" Review

During the slo-motion chess moves of the Microsoft Anti-Trust Trial it is interesting to note a few of the "extraordinary events" in Orange County since the New Year, in order to gain an overall perspective of the "big board".

An LA Times chess column after New Years hinted at the "greatest, largest real estate chess game", beginning right now. Certainly COX Communications, Orange and San Diego counties are involved with major pension funds and investments behind the chessboard.

On a smaller scale, my sister & her husband, Bonnie & A1 Rex have placed their home for sale with a realtor and friend. My feelings are that their home, my brother Barry's home, and perhaps my cousin Robert Miller's home in suburban Chicago were purchased with funds illegally appropriated from me, using a variety of underhanded methods. My parents' visits to the IRS confirming sales of these homes leads me to believe that a court order has finally been enforced. My Friday "Knight" move, motoring the silver Celica chariot to Kinko's Irvine center signaled additional documents for the US v Microsoft litigation for those who followed. The subsequent road trip to LA's Westwood FBI office and a visit to the Los Angeles Federal Building were closely monitored by others loyal to Disney, Oracle, Apple Computer, and multinational affiliates. Castrol GTX was even kind enough to award me with a print ad in AOL/Time Warner's Sports Illustrated later on Friday evening, confirming it's OK to drive your car "hard", as long as you use their oil. The wonders of today's electronic/print advertising at lightspeed! My Wilshire 5-speed legal Celica sprint from the FBI offices in Westwood to the Federal Building in downtown LA in under 40 minutes during Friday's rush hour was definitely noteworthy.

Tony Tavares, President of Disney's Anaheim Sports knew he was finished at Disney/Anaheim Sports, resigning on Friday, about the time my documents were printed. Some of my recent writings had references to the PAC funding from Arrowhead Water Company & Disney, stalling my employment search & documents regarding antics at the Crystal Cathedral's concourse elevator, where I provide volunteer service on Sunday mornings. The Crystal Cathedral's music & creative teams use Macintosh computers for music scoring & multimedia creations. This team recently received new IMACs and other Macintosh computers, perhaps as part of a "grant". Some of the administration uses PCs running versions of Microsoft Windows. Email can be sent across the platform at the Garden Grove campus.

The volunteer security service I provide on Sunday's has really evolved into a political position. Most of the choir members meet at this area when forming for each procession (usually two each morning), musical and pulpit guests are escorted on the concourse level via the elevator nearby. As I have mentioned in an earlier memo, I have purchased a small 13" Sony TV in order to view the telecasts downstairs, and coordinate the security efforts with others. Each week at this service brings new challenges, mostly social skills answering guests questions, and providing friendly service to the staff. That's no problem. Other times, a few of the Crystal Cathedral's family members scheme a few events targeted to challenge me. Most events are harmless pranks, I just roll with the humor.

Yesterday, however, I believe additional pollen was placed in suspension on a table, perhaps through oil in a perfume, or sprayed on the Sony TV, exasperating my bronchitis/upper respiratory infection, challenging and overwhelming double 24 Hour Sudafed medication ingested before I arrived. My sinus and face could hardly stop from running, after the previous bronchitis had mostly cleared up. I know from educated biofeedback when an accelerant or another "piggyback" attack would occur from experience. Fortunately, my experience as a professional and athlete (just as the Crystal Cathedral members are) allows me to perform even with a fever & cold, as I never missed a live Blackhawks Hockey game during the three seasons I performed at the Chicago Stadium.

The Orange County Register had their Show section cover page with the title "Blackhawk Down", a double meaning for the editors. Fortunately, my conditioning allowed me to run 12 miles at Newport Beach the day before the Crystal Cathedral security gig. President George Bush and his family were vacationers in California and Oregon this weekend. "W" visited a predominantly Hispanic group of supporters in Ontario on Saturday morning. We had heard rumors that the Presidential family may visit the Crystal Cathedral, however their afternoon trip to Portland, Oregon on Saturday signaled a different agenda, perhaps to visit with some of the of the Nike, HP & Intel Beaverton Bunch, and to show support for this heavily Republican area.

Sony Pictures' "Blackhawk Down", like several of Hollywood's recent titles, "The Rat Race", "Ocean's Eleven, 12/07/01 'Are You In?'" and others have had a subliminal theme regarding foreplanned activities for me. While I was training for the LA Marathon with the Roadrunners in Venice Beach last August & September, "The Rat Race" began to appear on billboards throughout Hollywood, beginning in late September/October. One of the best "Amway" motivational tapes I heard was, "When You Know Why, You Can Endure How!" This philosophy is truly inspirational, with a success story from one of the hard working members of the INA group. A lot of people criticize the methods that "Amway" people use, in the media especially, however their perseverance is incredible, using group training as one key for success!

The Hollywood movie "moguls" continue to spend millions of dollars on schemes in order to stall my financial settlement. Most of these companies had been fuelling the subversion against me for years, for unknown reasons other than the Wirtz/Blackhawk connection I had many years ago. I have detailed some of the "forced labor" in the multi-decade plot to "clone" the replacement hockey musician, and the multinational million dollar plot to cover it up afterward. In 1977, the first edition of an advertising book for cable and broadcast television authored by San Diego State University Telecommunications Professor, Elizabeth Heighton, was released. The second edition, dedicated to "Bob & Dorothy, again!" was re-released in 1985-86, the years I attended SDSU's Telecommunications program. In other words, an eight year "overtime" forced labor period occurred because I first refused the Stadium opportunity in 1977. I received my BA from Northeastern Illinois University in 1979, and continued to perform live music and represent information technology products in the Chicago area until 1985.

Closing, with a few words about last week's "Red Letter Day" courtesy of local Aliso Viejo USPS workers and several large companies. Geico insurance, Spiegel Catalog, and I'm certain, the investment side of Wells Fargo in Orange County, CA conspired to send their "red letters" at one time, distributed by the Aliso Viejo USPS for delivery last week. That takes quite a bit of coordination folks, almost as much as a "grassy knoll/textbook depository" conspiracy.

I have appreciated the USDOJ confirmation that some Crest toothpaste has been spiked with a sedative in my parents home, stored in their bathroom. I used one of the new tubes a few months after my mother had purchased these "especially for me" for one application, wondering why the tubes had never been used. I could feel the sedative reaction to my day's performance. The Crest tubes have a "gold leaf" shape on the box, and a similar printing on the tube. I have never used the toothpaste after the first trial, knowing the "Muenchausen's Proxy Syndrome" and previous food packaging/intentional poisoning experience my family has. This Blackhawk was never downed by the anthrax attack. I only had a few easy days after the new year running at Newport Beach, Niketown & shopping visits in LA shopping & USDOJ document processing in between! My father had called one of his Chicago area sisters on Saturday. I overheard a part of the conversation that stated, "It's like the flu, when you're down for a few days!" My father hasn't been sick for over a month, and this conversation was most probably a confirmation of the anthrax or bio attack on me.

Thank you for listening,
Robert Remington

MTC-00009325

From: Dave Bowling
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,
I think that it is time to end the action against Microsoft. The settlement that is currently on the table is more than fair. I feel this entire process was a poor use of taxpayers dollars not unlike the waste involved with the impeachment of President Clinton. It is time to end an era of Anti-trust abuse. Please remove the deterrent to investors in the high-tech arena so that we can get the economy moving again.

Thank you,
David Bowling
212 Orlando Avenue
Normal, ILLinois 61761
dave.bowling@gte.net

MTC-00009326

From: Pat (038) Jim Dougherty
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:53pm

Subject: End the persecution

Please do what you can to end this fiasco. It has cost everyone enough and it is time to aid our economic recovery.

Thank You.

Jim A. Dougherty

MTC-00009327

From: Don Blume
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:52pm
Subject: Microsoft

Please drop the case. This was a vicious Clinton/Reno attack because Gates is successful. Don't frighten would-be entrepreneurs out of their dreams, and further damage our great Country.

Thanks,
Don Blume

MTC-00009328

From: Rose
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:54pm
Subject: anti-trust case

Leave Microsoft alone! Without them, people like me would not be able to do so much with our computers. Clinton created the decline in tech stocks with his assault on Microsoft. Only his buddy at Oracle did ok. I hope you listen to the many voices like mine and settle once and for all!

Rose Hutchinson

MTC-00009329

From: Frederick D Eggert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wish it known that we support the subject settlement!

MTC-00009330

From: Pat (038) Jim Dougherty
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 6:56pm
Subject: End the persecution

Please end the persecution of this company and lets get to work ending our recession.

Thank you,
Jim A. Dougherty

MTC-00009331

From: Bob Curtis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Gentlemen:

I am writing in support of the settlement reached between the Federal Government and nine states in the Microsoft case. I believe the settlement is in the public interest, and I am distressed that Microsoft's competitors and other special interest groups are continuing their efforts to prolong this litigation. I am a consumer and I use Microsoft products extensively. They are the main reason that I can use a computer in my personal life and business. Their products are reasonably priced and are superior to most of the others I have tried. During the comment period, I urge you to look at the benefits that Microsoft has brought to the industry and to our nation. Let the special interest groups turn to their own devices and spend their time and efforts on improving their products, the way that Microsoft has improved theirs over the years through innovation and dedication to their ideals in a highly competitive industry.

MTC-00009332

From: Keith Godfrey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:01pm
Subject: acknowledgement
Greetings,

I submitted a public comment last week and did not receive any confirmation. Should I expect something of the sort? Also, what is the deadline for filing comments relating to the case?

Thank you,
Keith Godfrey
Senior Software Engineer
Wolfetech Corporation

MTC-00009333

From: Mr. Don
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:10pm

Why are Microsoft's competitors allowed to influence the outcome of a court case? No matter what the outcome, they would say it's not enough (of course they would!). $1 Billion in computers to low income schools is bad? Apple isn't happy because that's their market—OK, then have Apple supply those schools with computers and software.

Has anyone looked at AOL/Time Warner lately—how about instant messaging, isn't this an FCC issue, yet I hear nothing about it. All I ever hear from AOL, Sun, Oracle, etc. is bad mouthing of Microsoft. If their product(s) were better we would be using them—period. And please don't tell me they can't compete, these guys OWNED the server market, but Microsoft built software to COMPETE with them. They didn't cry, they created & innovated. Don't tell me $100 Billion dollar Corporations can't compete.

Linux, Palm, and a myriad of other OS's exist, but I'm not going to use them if they don't do what I need and I need business ready applications. Windows is extremely rich in what it provides, and Office does everything anyone could possibly need. Word Perfect and Lotus didn't evolve fast enough, so how is that Microsoft's fault?

I would have had a problem if Microsoft stood still and didn't improve their products, but every one of their releases takes huge leaps forward. They hire some of the brightest minds in our country, and their "ex" employees have gone on to create untold numbers of jobs by starting other technology companies.

Microsoft continues to provide leadership and direction to an entire industry, and believe me not everyone hates this company, in fact many of us are big fans.

MTC-00009334

From: Patricia Birren-Wilsey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:13pm
Subject: Shameful Abuse of Microsoft

As a discriminating consumer, I would like to see an end to the Anti-Trust abuse in which Microsoft has so long been ensnared. We should applaud, rather than condemn, Microsoft, who has so steadfastly provided handsome compensation to so many, as a result of superb design, marketing and distribution. I say, leave Microsoft alone, so it more continue, without distraction of chastisement and penalty, to represent itself as a glowing illustration of American Capitalism!

Patricia Birren-Wilsey
Winnetka, California 91306
818-718-6390
CC:Jerome Birren,Kerry Penn,Daniel Licon

MTC-00009335

From: Emmet Rixford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:16pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
JUSTICE DEPT.

Please stop wasting my tax dollars on the Microsoft Case and interfering with Business & Investment.

Accept the settlement!
Emmet Rixford

MTC-00009336

From: Brenda Pope
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:34pm
Subject: No more Microsoft abuse!!!!!!!

Hello,
Please leave Microsoft alone. Don't continue the Clinton-era meddling where you don't belong. This is a country where you are supposed to have the freedom to succeed without government intervention!!!!

Thanks,
B. Pope

MTC-00009337

From: RichHarold@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:17pm
Subject: Law Abuse

We urge you to end the Clinton-era Anti-Trust law abuse.

Richard and Phyllis T Harold 205 E Florence Ave
Glenwood, IA 51534-1107

MTC-00009338

From: Allen Bossa
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:15pm
Subject: Microsoft

It's time for the government to quit harassing Microsoft. That company has done more to make computer use easy for everyone to master than anyone else. Stop wasting our tax money.

Allen Bossa
Brigham City, UT

MTC-00009339

From: Bill Mann
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:19pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Hello, I wish you and yours could settle the microsoft settlement as soon as able. Much good and saving of money will come of it!

Thank you,
William R. Mann Jr.
942 Viscaya Blvd
St. Augustine Fl. 32086

MTC-00009340

From: Dr. Chuka Okafor
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 7:21pm
Subject: Confidential Business Proposal
From the desk of:
DR. Lawrence Ubah,
Tel No: Your Intl. Access Code + 873-762-692484
Fax No: Your Intl. Access Code + 873-762-692485

Email: Lubahbt_01@eudoramail.com
Lagos, Nigeria.
ATTN: MANAGING DIRECTOR/CEO.
REQUEST FOR AN URGENT

CONFIDENTIAL BUSINESS RELATIONSHIP

After due deliberation with my colleagues, We have decided to forward to you this business proposal. We want a reliable person who could assist us in the transfer the sum of Twenty Million, Five Hundred Thousand United States Dollars ($20,500,000) to your account. This fund resulted from an over-invoiced bill from contracts awarded by us under the budget allocation to our Ministry. This bill has been approved for payment by the other concerned Ministries. The contract has since been executed, commissioned and the contractor was paid the actual cost of the contract. We are left with the balance US$20.5M as part of the over-invoiced amount which we have deliberated over estimated for our own use. But under our protocol division, we as civil servants are forbidden to operate or own foreign accounts. This is why we are soliciting your assistance in this manner and regard. As you may want to know, I am the Chief Accountant/Internal Auditor of the Contract Award Committee (CAC) of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (NNPC). This transaction is very much free from all sorts of RISKS and TROUBLE from my Government. We the N.N.P.C. Officials involved in this deal have put in many years in service to this Ministry. We have been exercising patience for this opportunity for so long and to most of us this is a life time opportunity we cannot afford to miss. You need not to worry about the responsibilities of transferring this fund into your account, because all the administrative step needed for the transfer of this fund into your designated bank account will be done by us. We have agreed to COMPENSATE you duly if agreement is reached by both of us and I and one of my colleagues involved in this deal will come to your country to arrange for our share, upon the confirmation from you that the money has been credited into your nominated bank account. Consequent upon your acceptance of this proposal, kindly confirm your interest by Telephone to me, through my Direct Tel No: 234-1-775-5558 and Fax No: 234-1-759-7416. Your indication by revert Telephone to me of your sincere and serious interest will enable me send you or brief you of the PROCEDURES FOR THIS TRANSACTION. If my line is busy, please be persistent enough and you will surely get through.

NOTE: In the event of your inability to handle this transaction please inform us so that we can look for another reliable person who can assist in this respect. It might surprise you why we choose you and trusted you for this transaction. Yes, we believe that good friends can be discovered and business like this can not be realized without mutual trust. This is why we have decided to trust you for this transaction. Be further informed that everyone's interest and security had been considered before you were contacted, so be rest assured and feel free to go into this transaction with us. But let Honesty, Trust and Confidentiality be our watchword throughout this transaction and your prompt reply will be highly appreciated. Thank you, and God bless.

Best Regards,
Dr. Chuka Okafor.

MTC-00009341

From: Mary Rasmussen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:22pm
Subject: Justice Dept. Suit

MTC-00009342

From: Peter Olsen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:24pm
Subject: Comments on the Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the proposed settlement is fundamentally flawed. I think that the settlement as now written will further entrench Microsoft's monopoly position and will not be in the public interest. I believe that Microsoft's exercise of its monopoly power has harmed me both personally and professionally. I believe that I am still being harmed.

1. I believe that Microsoft has used its monopoly power to charge me predatory prices. In particular, I believe Microsoft has used its monopoly power to implement business practices designed to drive competing products (such as DRDOS, among others) from the market so that it can set prices unilaterally.

2. I believe that Microsoft has supplemented these monopoly business practices with technical measures designed to reduce or eliminate my ability to use alternative products. In particular, I believe that Microsoft has used its monopoly in operating systems to prevent competition in its Office applications.

3. I believe that Microsoft has designed its products to make it difficult or impossible to recover my own data for my own use in any form other than that designed for use by its own products. In particular, Microsoft has refused to release the file formats in which my data is stored by its applications, thus preventing me from using other programs, even ones I design and build myself, to further process the data.

I do not believe that this settlement does anything to remedy the injuries Microsoft has done to me personally. I do not believe that the proposed settlement addresses my injuries in any way. I believe that any solution involving the provision of software or hardware to the public schools should:

1. allow local school authorities to purchase software and hardware from any source whatsoever, and

2. as a condition for the use of any Microsoft software, require Microsoft to publish without restriction the full technical specifications of any software it provides, including, but not limited to, all application programming interfaces and file formats.

I believe that this latter point is particularly important for any plan aimed at improving the public education. True education requires understanding. The goal of education is to prepare students to understand and cope with new circumstances. To do this, students must come to know the fundamental principles underlying software design and implementation, not just how to manipulate screen images. This type of knowledge is best imparted by providing students with actual examples of working programs and then allowing them to extend or expand them.

If Microsoft truly wishes to improve education, then Microsoft will provide the information about its application programming interfaces and file formats to make that improvement possible. If Microsoft does not do so, then I believe that it should exercise no control over how the money is to be spent. In particular, schools should be free to spend all of it on hardware and then choose free software, such as RedHat Linux, if they wish. I believe that this will be a much better solution.

Peter Olsen

MTC-00009344

From: George Skezas
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:27pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Dear Sir:

I strongly support the Microsoft settlement. I believe in strong competition and the waste of taxpayers money on this case is unacceptable. Please continue to pressue the states who have continued this battle against one our greatest companies.

Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,
George Skezas

MTC-00009345

From: jagelk469@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:31pm
Subject: Microsoft

It's time that our government stop playing the Clinton Era Corporation Bashing and shakedowns. It's also time for our Justice Department to stop wasting taxpayers money on pursuing Microsoft on behalf of their competitors.

Drop the Microsoft case.

Sincerely,
Two overtaxed taxpayers,
Mary and Jim Gede.

MTC-00009346

From: Geoff Miller
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:33pm
Subject: Stop

Enough is enough. Its time to end the Bill Clinton shakedown of Microsoft.

Geoff Miller

MTC-00009347

From: Andrejus Stavickis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

Dear Sir/Madam,

This message in response of the message from Microsoft, dated Wed 1/2/2002 12:20 PM, Subject: DOJ wants to hear from you on MS settlement.

I'd like to make a few short statements. From one point of view, it's looks like the MS must be punished for their monopoly, but from the other point of view, there are NO any harm to end-users. Looks like this is a battle just between gigants. And nothing more, except lobystic movements, are found in that case.

The monopoly can be reached in a few ways, one is when the government gives the monopoly rights to a company, another one when users just use only that service—this can be done in a 2 ways—there are just no competitors, the monopolist's product is so cheap, that there are no other competitors.

As far, as I know there are always a choice for users to install or not an operating system when they receive a new/OEM computer. And when I bought a computer they always asking me do I want Windows or Linux, or you can deal with the manufacturer what to install—even, if they have an agreement with MS, that—may—prevent them to install Linux on their system.

Last, but not least: The harm to American economy (and the Global economy itself) would be much more higher, than meaning results archieved with the more strict settlement. Just imagine—Microsoft will bankrupt within 6 months after settlement—how we will work on our pc's? Even Your pc will be left without any support. The whole state will loose a job, American Government will loose hundreds of billions in taxes. Or just imagine—The Microsoft will transfer it's main office to another country—it's excellent solution for destination, but for United States it's whould be a long and really deep recession. Microsoft even whould be able to just "buy" a small country.

Conclusion: I think, that there should be some limitations for Microsoft, but just keep in mind, that the "stick always has a two ends", if you will "bend the stick too much" the stick will broke—then there will be no way back. I believe, that you will come to right and fair settlement.

God, bless America.

MTC-00009348

From: Randall Jarrell
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

MTC-00009349

From: The Dixon's
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:40pm
Subject: Antitrust Case

I switched to Windows ME this year from MAC OS. The ME OS product is riddled with problems. I had hoped that the Win ME platform was as stable as Win 98 rel 2. It is not. Windows XP does not hold much promise either. PC World Magazine has had several articles concerning the bugs in XP. If any other manufacturer sold a product with as many defects as Microsoft, the would be sued out of existence or run out of the market place by poor sales. Internet Explorer 6.0 is full of security bugs.

There is little choice in certain business applications when it comes to an OS. The strong tie between Microsoft OS and networking and applications lends itself to monopolistic practices. For example—Where can I get MS Office XP for a Linux platform? Where can I get a MAC version of AutoCAD? There is not a strong effort for compatibility across OS platforms. Ask Jobs what it took to get a current MS Office Suite for MAC OSX.

Microsoft has a major PR problem. If my ME system worked well I would not be as upset. Microsoft dictates upgrades through compatibility and support issues. At work, we have 2 years on the Win 2000 OS before support ends and we are forced to upgrade. My 5 year old MAC did not give me as much trouble in five years as this system (ME) did in the first 5 minutes. If MS products worked I would have less complaints. The image of Microsoft is upgrade and it will resolve itself. I have a new computer with a half baked operating system. To fix it is time consuming as well as full of conflicting options on how to resolve it. I started with a DOS 2.1 PC. I am not a first timer. I went MAC to find a stable platform. When the system works it can be good.

Follow the release bugs on the systems and applications. Not impressive. Also not competitive.

Chuck Dixon
Parkville, MO 64152
email:sdixon@kc.rr.com

MTC-00009350

From: Patrick R. Lizot
To: Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
Date: 1/7/02 7:43pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

Please settle the Microsoft's case! We have to admit that they are the Best of the Best all around the world!

USA should be proud to have such a "computer-firm"! a hand-user.
Patrick R. Lizot
Senior Procurement Specialist
Central Operations Services
Ext 5746

MTC-00009351

From: Angelo Campanella
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:43pm
Subject: Microsoft Posture in the software reatik market.

I use software as a means to an end; engineering consulting. I used DOS (pre Windows) most successfully from 1985 to 1995, because it offered the widest choice of software to do a wide variety of important engineering support services.

These days, the widest variety of useful software (for engineering) is written for Windows. I don't mind this directly, but indirectly it is a HUGE nuisance because, unlike DOS, Windows is huge, taking up astronomical amounts of memory, and often very much slower for relatively the same tasks. The slowness truly comes from huge embellishments that few of us ever asked for such as multi-color, imagery (pictures and artwork not related to my work product), security, conversion of other software, etc.

The Internet has made this scene even more complicated. Microsoft, instead of continuing the philosophy of DOS (of being compatible and simple to use, has made extremely complex enhancements), and at the same time made it difficult to use other software items.

Microsoft, instead of making compatibility its theme, has instead promulgated exclusivity. To me this act is tantamount to causing a monopoly. If there were wide choices in the marketplace, Microsoft's attempts at such exclusivity (like pushing their "Explorer" in our face at every turn) would be avoided by we users, by simply not using Microsoft products.

But we cannot do that because of the breadth of the use of Windows systems. It borders on being a public utility. I can communicate with colleagues around the world, and exchange Windows documents easily. I know that that last statement flies in the face of my Microsoft Truculence theme, but in reality, both are true, and I should want also both of them to be right; not one right (worldwide commonality) and one wrong (domestic exclusivity and failure to enhance ease-of-use).

One thing that Microsoft MUST be FORCED to do is to offer on-the-telephone assistance to any and all of we software users 24 hours a day and seven days a week including holidays for a period of not less than FIVE years. Never mind trying to squeeze money out of Microsoft. Just get them to operate a large multiplicity of 800-lines "free" (in lieu of your settlement dollars) so that they really help us as a public service while they also "feel our pain" in using their software. This will be turn out to be a win-win situation, in my opinion.

This service is easy for your agents to police since any one of them and of their family members can call anytime during the year period to poll the ongoing utility proffered.

Angelo Campanella
"I have simply studied carefully whatever I've undertaken, and tried to hold a reserve that would carry me through."—Charles A. Lindbergh.

MTC-00009352

From: Michael J. Masquith
To: microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
Date: 1/7/02 7:45pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello,
I am part of a global network that is focused on getting the BeOS (or an equivalent, possibly open-source) back into the market place, but there is little hope of success if the following issues regarding Microsoft aren't addressed:

Open Office file formats. MS Office file formats are unfortunately simultaneously ubiquitous and proprietary. Because there is realistically no chance of them being superceded by any open standard, they need to be made non-proprietary. (probably by court order).

Win32 APIs must be documented and made available.

Dual-boot options should become mandatory. The single most damaging thing that MS has done was largely ignored (except by those whose businesses were destroyed). Their ability to force the major OEMs to only install Windows precluded any competition whatsoever in the Operating Systems market, precisely where BeOS attempted to compete. Not even the most microscopic vestige of these onerous strong-arm 'agreements' with the OEMs should be allowed to remain. Enormous, crippling penalties should be swiftly and irrevocably levied if it recurs.

Anti-trust measures must break down and stomp completely flat all barriers the monopolist erected against competition. BeOS, even in it's current weak condition could at least attempt to compete if the playing field were set level again.

Thank you.
Michael J. Masquith
Barkin' Beaver Studio,
Herndon, VA

MTC-00009353

From: Ken Howe
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:48pm
Subject: Justice

Dear Sirs;
It is my belief that we have had enough of Clintons slime and it is now time to get on with it.

As part of getting on with it, it seems to me that we should discontinue the persecution of a successful effort named microsoft and start fighting our way back to what America was founded on, Freedom to do, Freedom to be and Freedom to have.

Please stop using tax dollars pursuing someone who is good at what they do.
Sincerely
Ken Howe

MTC-00009354

From: Philip Casey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:49pm
Subject: Antitrust Case

Please end this case against Microsoft. This has been a waste of tax dollars and has kept more important matters from being heard in court. This country is based on capitalism and until this case, it has not been against the law to produce a product and sell it.

Thank you very much.
Sincerely,
Philip L. Casey

MTC-00009356

From: Gilles Desaulniers
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:56pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

Having been around since the beginning of the "micro computer industry" since I bought my first radio shack computer in 1977, I can comment that Microsoft controls everything and we now have no more choices.

The industry is dominated by them. the enthusiasm that created this industry is now gone and hopelessly forever linked to Microsoft tentacles that we can't shed no matter what we do. Their software needs upgrading every couple of years that demands more money from the consumer. They integrate every new innovation into their operating system and destroy the incentive to create new stuff.

Their bullying of the JAVA language the Sun Computers invented is a perfect example of hijacking innovation.

The zest and fervor surrounding the industry is slowly dying. I used to look forward to programming and trying new things and being part of an ever expanding industry. Now we sit on the sidelines and watch "Microsoft do their thing". Punishment should be very severe. A company like Microsoft that has endless resources also has numbers of tricks up its sleeves. The idea that they will just sit and behave is ludicrous.

The wealth accumulated by this company is directly related to its forceful actions. Some of it needs to be taken away.

I slimmed down version of windows would be very useful and any patents they hold with the operating system should be invalidated because of their actions.

I suspect that they will only continue to corner the industry and hold many companies hostage to their petty demands because they can. If only in subtle tones it is enough to make and small innovator capitulate to a giant like Microsoft that has unlimited legal help and dollars. No company would ever think of taking them on except maybe IBM and SUN. Everyone else is lost.

As I write this text on my WINDOWS computer and you receive it on your windows computer. . . . think about the choices we really have. NONE NONE. . . .

HELP us to reinvigorate this industry again and allow the genius that every single one of us can perhaps bring to this industry and let them benefit from the ideas and share in the wealth.

Thanks
Gilles Desaulniers
San Francisco
415-637-6415

MTC-00009357

From: MRW
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:53pm
Subject: settlement

Let Microsoft alone and let them continue to provide jobs for a lot of people.

Merle Weinman

MTC-00009358

From: Bill s.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:55pm
Subject: Microsoft

Dear Sir,

It is about time that you allow Bill Gates to do what he does best and that is to use the American System of Free Enterprise.

Bill Gates did not do anything wrong. 1) He came up with a product that is superior to anything else on the market; 2) Most of the intelligent manufacturers decided to use his products; and 3) people became adept at using his products and, regardless of what they say, are desirous of maintaining compatibility in their systems and continue to purchase Microsoft software.

Bill gates did it the correct way. It is about time that the U.S. Government gets off of his back and allows him to continue to provide the American public with the products (software) that he want.

How about the Justice Department really going after the "BAD GUYS" in our society and letting Bill Gates and Microsoft alone.

Thank you very much,
William J. Staskel
Janet Staskel

14 First Avenue
Central Islip, NY 11722-3010
(631) 234-6628

MTC-00009359

From: george mezori
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:58pm
Subject: more

Dear sir; Please stop this mud slinging on Microsoft. We are having enough problems with the stock market currently.

Stop the trials.

G. Mezori

MTC-00009360

From: Bob Patterson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 7:54pm
Subject: End

Please end the Clinton-era anti-trust law abuse. I support the Microsoft settlement.

Bob & Judy Patterson

MTC-00009361

From: Giles Constant
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:02pm
Subject: A small comment about Microsoft

Dear sir/madam,

It is impossible to buy a laptop computer in the UK without giving money to Microsoft. Really—I've tried. Even if I intend to use Linux on the machine, due to the OEM licensing restrictions (which the DOJ settlement has failed to effectively address), licensees are not allowed to provide me with the hardware without Windows. The EULA has a clause which says if you do not use the software, you can take it back to the vendor for a refund, but unfortunately, this is only applicable for the price of the entire laptop. This is (in my opinion) the most definitive example of the term "monopoly" I can possibly imagine. Although I speak from the UK, where the problem is likely to be addressed by the EU, I would hope that after the considerable expense involved in finding Microsoft guilty in this dispute, the USDOJ is capable of dishing out a resolution to the problem of Microsofts continuous attempts to gain control of every single aspect of computing from hardware to software to networking, at the expense of the people who actually work to make computers better for everyone.

If Microsoft's software were superior to (say) BeOS, which failed to survive as a consumer operating system due to the very licensing restrictions I object to, then I would be happy to use their software, but unfortunately, I only ever find myself FORCED to use it against my will, due to the viral nature of the company and its software.

Very disappointed.

Giles Constant

MTC-00009362

From: george mezori
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:02pm
Subject: support

We support the current Microsoft settlement. Please, please discontinue the court proceedings.

G. Mezori

MTC-00009363

From: Frank Meyers
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:02pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Sirs/Madams
I support the Microsoft settlement. Please add my comment to the public record.

Thank you
Frank Meyers Jr.

MTC-00009364

From: Dale Malott
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:06pm
Subject: Microsoft—Clinton Anti-Trust Law Abuse

Gentlemen: It is time to end yet another attempt by left wing liberals to fleece an American Company as Clinton's pay back to the lawyers for their contribution to his two disastrous administrations. Microsoft was built by imitative and hard work. If the companies that run to the Justice Department to complain about Microsoft had exhibited the talent and hard work, they would be in a position to compete.

Please end this Anti-trust Law Abuse now.
Thank you,
Dale Malott

MTC-00009365

From: Annette
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:10pm

Leave Microsoft alone PLEASE! Don't wreck it like AT&T was wrecked! Look at our phone system now!!!!!!

Annette Crane
Keystone Heights, Fla.

MTC-00009366

From: JAMES B. LINTON
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:11pm
Subject: Microsoft

Dear Sirs:

I think it is about time that we get on with business and leave microsoft alone. Bill Clinton is out of the White House now so we don't need any of his anti trust laws.

Thanks,
James B. Linton
204 S. Wise St.
Samson, Al 36477-1510

MTC-00009367

From: barbara ball
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:11pm
Subject: Anti-trust abuse

Will you please stop all this nonsense about Microsoft. The only people who have been hurt are those who put their money in for retirement and education for their children etc.

Please stop hurting myself and others who trust you to have common sense.

Do you not realize that the economic problems all started when Clinton decided again to hurt the people he was to protect? All our economic problems right now can be traced right back to that law suite.

Barbara Ball
La Crosse, WI 54603

MTC-00009368

From: The Galli's
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:13pm
 Subject: The "Case"

The nine States and the Dist. of Colombia would be much better off starting to tend to their own increasing economic woes and stop Beating the "Help the Consumer Drum" for a cause which was dubious from the onset.

Don't we have enough Economic Behemoths" gasping for air without putting another to the test? If I was Bill Gates I would move my Corporate Headquarters off shore in a show of Disgust"

A concerned citizen-consumer

MTC-00009369

From: barbara ball
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:17pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

This is supposed to be a free country, free enterprise, etc. This is an outrage companies should be allowed to do what they want and the people will decide whether or not they wish to support said company. The government has to get over the idea that we are children and need them to tell us how to spend our money and that we can and do make decisions all the time.

Barbara Ball
 La Crosse, WI 54603

MTC-00009370

From: David Hebert
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:19pm
 Subject: Please end the abuse!

To Whom it may concern,

It's time to move on and end the ridiculous law suit against Microsoft one and for all. Bill Gates has done great things for the Personal Computer world and the liberal elite can't stand it. It's time to quit spend taxpayer dollars in an attempt to ruin a company that has been key in economic growth in America.

Please stop the litigation's now.
 David Hebert
 Psalm 119:9-11

MTC-00009371

From: Frank Jett
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:23pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over.

I Support the Microsoft settlement.
 Sincerely
 Frank Q. Jett

MTC-00009372

From: Gorman Blanton
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:17pm
 Subject: Re: Antitrust Microsoft

Dear Sirs:

We have had enough of the Clinton era Anti trust against Microsoft. Please end this fiasco against the only American Company left in the United Sates. Stop all The Chinese Products that are flooding USA. there is the reason our economy has bottemed out and the reason is Bill Clinton SOLD OUT THE USA TO THE CHINESE!!!!!!

Gorman T Blanton

MTC-00009373

From: Seth Held
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:17pm
 Subject: Microsoft Antitrust Case

If Microsoft has broken the law, fine them and moniter them but don't make the consumer suffer by doing what you did to AT&T. Please . . . seth held

MTC-00009374

From: Judith Gersting
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:23pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is my belief that the Microsoft settlement should go forward so that this company can get back to its main business of developing software and that its competitors can also move forward and develop their own products. Too much time and money has been spent on this process, diverting energies and funds from a more useful purpose.

Dr. Judith Gersting,
 Chair Computer Science Department
 University of Hawaii at Hilo 200 W. Kawili St.
 Hilo, HI 96720

MTC-00009375

From: Maurice Knudsen
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:27pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs:

The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to consumers. With government out of the business of stifling progress and tying the hands of corporations, consumers—rather than bureaucrats and judges—will once again pick the winners and losers on Wall Street. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products and technologies.

Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

Please help to end this Clinton-era Anti-trust abuse!

Thanking you sincerely, I am
 Maurice J. Knudsen
 4428 Main Street

Elk Horn, IA 51531-2000

MTC-00009376

From: Richard Elfers
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:30pm
 Subject: microsoft settlement

Dear Sirs:

This message regards the Tunney Act. We urge settlement of the Microsoft case, with no further litigation.

Sincerely yours,
 Richard and Priscilla Elfers
 6823 Ripley Lane
 Renton, Wa. 98056

MTC-00009377

From: Patricia Burke
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:33pm

Please put an end to the anti-trust litigation against Microsoft. Why do we punish a company that comes up with working and workable ideas and puts its competition to shame?

Patricia J. Burke
 1427—100th St. S. W., Sp. 156
 Everett, WA 98204-1107
 (425) 355-5800

MTC-00009378

From: Jane Calvert
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:34pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement

Would you please end this "going after Microsoft" fiasco. No one forces anyone to do business with Microsoft or like their inventions. They obviously have many talented people in their organization that comes up with technology that people want to spend their money on and I can not see where they are putting anyone else out of business by underhanded schemes. Just save the taxpayers a lot of money and settle this thing once and for all. Let the young and inventive people of this country know that it is okay to go out on a limb and invent and invest in their own ideas.

Mr. and Mrs. Earnest L. Calvert
 Rt. 1 Box 699
 Camdenton, Mo. 65020
 janie@advertisnet.com

MTC-00009379

From: SMax283@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:35pm
 Subject: microsoft settlement

Department of Justice:

It is time to bring this most unfortunate chapter, the lawsuit against Microsoft, of our nations history to a close. I wholeheartedly support the settlement as drafted between the nine states and the Federal Government; and only wish to include the suggestion that time is a wasting!

John S. Hoke
 1146 Fairways
 Lebanon, TN 37087
 615-443-3633 (H)
 615-405-2954 (Cell)

MTC-00009380

From: Hunt4Him@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/7/02 8:35pm

Subject: End Government attack on Microsoft
To whom it may concern:

The Clinton Administration has past. Hopefully the multiple abuses of the Justice Department has past with them. Please end this travesty of justice against Microsoft. Being successful should not be a crime.

Steve Hunt
6429 Colchester RD
Fairfax Station, VA 22039

MTC-00009381

From: Mike (038) Sandra Bottorff
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:43pm
Subject: PLEASE!

PLEASE!
It is time to leave Microsoft and Bill Gates alone!

Stop the Clinton-ista type persecution!
Sandra Bottorff
12750 170th Avenue
LeRoy, Michigan 49655

MTC-00009382

From: Bruce Sparks
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:46pm
Subject: Microsoft

Drop the stupid persecution of a company that has excelled. It has become fashionable in America to penalize those that have done well, and reward those that can't make it on their own. Microsoft has done more than any other company to advance technology in America. No, I don't have any interest in Microsoft, (wish I had bought their stock years ago) other than a belief that excellence should be rewarded, not penalized.

MTC-00009383

From: William R Mattingly
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:53pm
Subject: End Anti-Trust Law Abuse

OK! Finally, the Clinton era is over (Thank GOD!) and now it's past time to end the unlawful disruption of business at Microsoft. Clinton and his anti business, anti-American antics have cost the taxpayer millions of dollars. Money which would have been better spent tracking these cowardly terrorists such as bin laden. Let's get back to better business please and end the charade.

MTC-00009384

From: Lou Placette
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:49pm
Subject: Microsoft anti-trust suit

I am appalled at the flagrant disregard Microsoft has for the laws of the U.S. The only benevolent monopoly that has been in the 20th century was AT&T which provided very low cost phone service to the nation. It was broken up and phone service has been less than adequate since.

Microsoft, on the other hand, forces inferior software on buyers of computers and willfully suppresses other providers from competing in a free market society. The cost is maintained at a high level because no competition is allowed.

The fact that no punishment or dissolution of the company has occurred so far, feeds the idea that judges can be bought off by Bill

Gates because he has the billions necessary to find anyone's price.

I urge you to uphold the welfare of the nation and dissolve the Microsoft monopoly so that other companies can compete in a fair market allowing consumers to have choices for their spending which stimulates the economy and provides jobs in technology.

Thank you for hearing my concerns,
Elsie B. Placette

MTC-00009385

From: RickValusek@webtv.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I hope the settlement as proposed can be accepted soon. I have never felt comfortable about this entire mess, but I believe the settlement is at least fair to most parties involved. I thank Microsoft every day for my access to the internet through the Microsoft network that powers WebTV. I want Microsoft to be able to get back to business doing what they do best, i.e. make competitive products, and let the free market decide who's product they want. I thank you for your time.

Sincerely yours,
Rick Valusek

MTC-00009386

From: William Bethel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:52pm
Subject: (no subject)

The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

William Bethel

MTC-00009387

From: F M Byford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:56pm
Subject: Support

I support the Microsoft settlement. Let's get it over with.

MTC-00009388

From: Pat2946@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:56pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Sirs:

The US court has come to an agreement with Microsoft. Please accept this agreement and let Microsoft get on with its business.

Murray Paterson
pat2946@aol.com

MTC-00009389

From: Cathleen Wedlake
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:57pm
Subject: RE: Message

Dear Microsoft

I want to end Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse.

Thank You!

Sincerely,
Cathleen Wedlake

MTC-00009391

From: Cheryl Caraglior
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:12pm
Subject: Reticulus lawsuit

It is time to end a reticulus witch hunt of Microsoft which Clinton began. Too much taxpayer monies have been wasted on this as is. Let consumers decide what is in their own best interest. Microsoft may have bundled its browser on Windows systems, but nothing prevented the public from installing whatever browser they chose to.

Sincerely,
Cheryl Caraglior

MTC-00009392

From: Kim Peterson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:02pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement Date : Jan 7, 2002 To : Department Of Justice From : William G Peterson Subject : Microsoft Settlement

I'm very satisfied with the settlement between Microsoft and US Department Of Justice. The following is the main reason. As a US citizen is my duty to try my best to provide any information that is good for our country.

I have read extensively material and document on this case and settlement including : "Complaint(5/18/1998)", "Stipulation(11/06/2001)", and "Competitive Impact Statement(11/15/2001)". Its a good thing you folks and JANET RENO weren't around at the turn of the last century. If you were I wouldn't be driving my FORD.

The Department Of Justice gave Microsoft very strong order, stronger than the competition complaint about. I'm very happy that Microsoft agreea to this final settlement.

Sincerely
William G Peterson

MTC-00009393

From: Lester Hopper Jr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 8:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Case

To The Justice Department,
I purchased windows95 with the IE4.0 together several years ago and did not mind a bit. Should a jury have any say so about this, the Law or laws used to incriminate this Nations leading contributor to our economy would be nullified. I am aware of Mr. Gates and what he did but many othe free downloads are available and were then. It is also fact that some of Microsofts competitors held contracts with the US and installed faulty servers and software. Clinton in my opinion is who we should be prosecuting for his treasonous acts of selling some of our most Secret Information to China while prosecuting Mr. Gates.

These facts could only be denied by LIARS!!!!!!!

Lester Hopper
6294 Southlake Drive
Hickory NC 28601

MTC-00009394

From: JJHeilman@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:04pm
Subject: Settlement

This lawsuit has done enough damage to the economy of this country. More than enough consideration has been given to the issues. Let's accept the judgement and move on.

Virginia Heilman

MTC-00009397

From: Ross Nooney
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:12pm
Subject: MICROSOFT TRIAL

When are we going to give up on prosecuting Microsoft for being such a good company. I own no stock, but hate to see my tax dollars being wasted. Oracle, Sun Systems, etc. . . . need to get on with their business. Prosecute terrorists, organized crime etc. . . ., but be done with Microsoft already!

MTC-00009398

From: andrew
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:15pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear sirs,
I, Joel Mann, support the Microsoft settlement.

MTC-00009399

From: Rudolph Hensley
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement (ENOUGH IS ENOUGH)

I support the Justice Department Microsoft settlement, as a consumer and taxpayer. Stop the financial waste of this legal maneuvers. Consider the roots of Microsoft, etc., etc., and the detriment to free enterprise.

Rudolph Hensley
912-876-6398
401 Club Drive
Hinesville, GA 31313

MTC-00009400

From: donna faye
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:14pm
Subject: Ending the Clinton-era
Please end the Clinton-era of Anti-trust.
Thanks

MTC-00009401

From: Norm
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:16pm
Subject: microsoft
I would like to see the action against Microsoft dropped. No punishment necessary.

MTC-00009402

From: Carol Wilkins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:07pm
Subject: Clinton-era Anti-trust law
The Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse was wrong, and I want to see it ended.
Sincerely,
Carol Wilkins

MTC-00009403

From: ROBERT MOELLER

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:21pm
Subject: Justice Department,
Justice Department,

It is my opinion that it is in the best interest of the United States to end Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse.

Microsoft got to where they are by hard work and American free enterprise. They should not be penalized for being an over achiever. They have a line of great products that greatly enhances American business and personal use of computers. For example: if a cow produces more milk the farmer does not reduce its amount of feed. No; he gives it more grain thus encourages it to produce more milk!

By penalizing Microsoft you are telling other businesses not to over produce least they face the same consequences thereby limiting economic growth.

Robert Moeller
4350 E. River Rd.
Mt. Pleasant, Mi. 48858
bmoeller@quixnet.net

MTC-00009404

From: bradley c francis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:29pm
Subject: microsoft

Leave Gates and his company alone, he has no more a monopoly then the power company, postal service, water company , This is free enterprise, supply and demand and if he supplies better so be it . . . just like the power co, the postal service and everyones water companies so I say leave him and his company alone and focus on real hurtful things like child abusers and predators.

MTC-00009405

From: Nicole Demas
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:32pm
Subject: Enough's enough
Microsoft has spent millions defending itself. When I think of the software applications that kind of money could have gone toward I find it insane. Let them do what they do best. The DOJ should concentrate on terrorists, organised crime families and all the undesirable elements who belong behind bars for life, not a company that can make our lives better, richer and more enjoyable.

MTC-00009406

From: Harold Cantley
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:36pm
Subject: settlement
I think you should leave Microsoft along, they have provided great service to the American Public. All the litigation cost lack business tax is passed on to the consumer, so the longer you keep them in court the more it coasts we the people so let stop.

Thanks
Harold Cantley

MTC-00009407

From: Service Plus—Jason Kozdra
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

I believe, with many others, that Microsoft has made agreements with hardware vendors, to develop their products so that they will not operate on "alternative operating systems", especially those that are Open-Source, such as Linux, and some which are not Open Source, but which are given away at no charge, such as BeOS's Personal Edition. It is nearly impossible to purchase a PC in the United States without some version of Microsoft Windows being included on it (OEM). The cost for this operating system is passed along to the end user, whether he or she uses Windows or not, even if that person purchases that PC with the intent to install an alternative operating system on it.

Many of these users, due to the aforementioned lack of support for alternative operating systems by hardware vendors, are forced to switch back to a Windows operating system, just so that their PC hardware will work.

There are plenty of developers out there who would develop drivers that would make vendor's hardware work in the alternative operating systems. It is not a lack of diligence that keeps these developers from creating drivers for the alternative operating system if they want to, it is the alleged agreements made between Microsoft and hardware vendors not to release the necessary information to these developers. This forces millions of users to "conform" to the Microsoft operating systems, strengthening the Microsoft Monopoly.

I do not believe that settlement discussion should proceed any further until any alleged agreements between Microsoft and hardware vendors is investigated.

Thank you,
Jason Daniel Kozdra
5893 Pine Top Road
Blairsville, GA 30512

MTC-00009408

From: Marc Trepppler (038) Angela Grupas
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

I think it is time to leave well enough alone. Microsoft is doing a great job for everyone concerned.

Without them we will have chaos with no clear standard and no usable interconnection between systems.

It is wonderful that they have the operating system and the applications that work together to provide true benefit for the user. Prior to MS back before DOS, PC's where little more than toys for nurds.

Everyone had a program that did very little and didn't work with anything else. Users had to learn every program from scratch. Even the most basic things like saving a file had to be re-learned because there was no standardization. LET Microsoft alone and QUITE SPENDING MY TAX DOLLARS ON A NON-ISSUE. If MS is so bad don't buy it. There are other choices—you can use Lenex, Apple, Sun, etc.

Use whatever you like. Buy whatever you like. MS is not monopolizing the industry they are just doing the best job for the consumer.

Marc Treppeler PE

MTC-00009409

From: Duffy, Bob W Mr USAMISSA

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'

Date: 1/7/02 9:29pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

CC: Duffy, Bob W Mr USAMISSA

To the DOJ:

1. I have always been opposed to the DOJ anti-trust case against Microsoft. Reference my previous comments in my letter to President Bush (below).

2. I have always been opposed to the actions of the 9 states that are seeking remedies above those which the majority of the states and the Federal Government agreed to in the initial settlement agreement.

3. I am adamantly opposed to any further escalation in the remedies imposed upon Microsoft via any means.

4. With respect to the 9 states that did not agree to the initial settlement: they represent a MINORITY faction considering . . . only 19 of 50 states joined the DOJ suite (Texas dropped out)—38% of the 50 states sued—62% of the states did NOT sue—only 9 states opposed the settlement . . . 18% of the 50 states—47% of the 19 states that remained a party to the DOJ suite—82% of the states either did not sue or were in agreement with the settlement. Conclusion: The DOJ and 82% of the 50 states favored the settlement . . . 18% of the states did not.

My position on this matter: The court should approve the settlement that the DOJ and 10 states have agreed to.

Sincerely,

Robert W. Duffy

7811 Pinebrook Dr

San Antonio, TX 78230-4810

My letter to President Bush:

Dear President Bush:

I am becoming increasingly displeased with the prolonged attack by the state and federal governments on the behalf of Microsoft competitors via the misguided antitrust suite initiated by the Clinton Administration. Not satisfied to remain within the scope of the current bogus allegations, the states are once again attempting to muddy the waters with complaints and allegations antitrust violation claims directed against the next generation of innovative products that are beneficial to the consumer . . . Windows XP and .net.

The only reason the antitrust case got past the district court level was because David Boise was able to befuddle a senile, computer illiterate district court judge who placed more emphasis on his personal biases than the hard facts relating to a rapidly changing technological revolution. His biggest complaint against Microsoft was the belligerent attitudes of the MS executives—they were justified in being belligerent solely on the basis that their valuable time was being wasted in court defending themselves against the Govt bullies and their state cronies and competitors (the same competitors who had to resort to Govt subsidized competition because they had already lost the battle in the open market place).

I have personally experienced the technology evolution. By profession I am classified as a computer specialist. My background includes programming and systems analysis and development—beginning in 1971. I have lived the transition from the mainframe to the desktop PC to the networked PC to the WEB/.com explosion. Anyone with similar experience can attest to the incompatibility nightmares of the early transition from centralized processing on the mainframe to the total chaos of incompatible hardware and software on the desktop linked by only the “sneaker net” of hand carried (or snail mailed) 360 KB 5¼ in floppy disks. There was no interoperability, compatibility or common operating standards. There were no standard networking environments, this is another story but one that has a good ending at least the Govt didn't try to legislate the innovation out of it as it is attempting to do to Microsoft.

Microsoft observed this inefficiency in the market place and listened to the anguish of the early PC users and developed a strategy that made things easier for the end user, the computer novice—the average consumer that did not want to have to become a techno guru to get something done. Microsoft transformed the PC into a tool that provided value to the consumer by enabling the consumer to be more productive via a user friendly environment—Hardware, Operating system and an interoperable suite of productivity oriented software. This constant focus on integration for the betterment of the end user experience is why Microsoft has evolved to being the 800 pound gorilla of the desktop, because the consumers did not want the “best mousetrap ever built”—they wanted one that was easy to set and could actually catch mice.

In my own personal evolution I have been exposed to almost all of Microsoft's competitors' products . . . Word Perfect, Lotus 123, notes, ccmail . . . Sun Solaris, Unix . . . Novell, Apple, IBM PC DOS, OS/2 . . . Harvard Graphics . . . Correll Draw . . . All good products but one almost had to become a PC techno-nerd-geek to get something done and God help you if you had to get one product to read something from a different product that had been sent to you via an email attachment, provided your email was compatible with the sender's email. These were the days when you had to have that young pimple faced smart aleck “go to guy” that knew the option, or setting, or the right format conversion, and what was most irritating is the fact he got the fix or the Utility program some somewhere that only the true nerd-geeks-who-didn't-have-life-outside-of-his (always a “he”—never a “she”)-pc knew about. In short, Microsoft's competitors were 100% focused on the best whiz banged techno solutions and products in a market that was evolving into a consumer commodity world—the consumer wanted something that was easy to use, did something of value, something that could be done again (repetitive) without taking notes, and something that did not break (reliable)—Microsoft listen to and satisfied the needs of the people who were out there, the consumers. Their competitors lost sight of this and have suffered the fate of many who, in the past, did not see the handwriting on the wall, how many buggy whip companies are left??? what about those Beta formatted VCR tapes, how many 8-Track tapes are there?

When Microsoft got the PC and the Work Stations hitting on all cylinders with Windows 3.x . . . Windows95 . . . they ported the same user-friendly operating system with the same GUI and “point and click” behavior to the Server platform . . . What a concept??? take something that everyone is already familiar with on the PC and stick with it . . . don't reinvent the wheel, don't try to razzle-dazzle people with new whiz bang OS, directory systems, commands and super cool behavior . . . stick with the KISS approach . . . Keep It Simple Stupid! This approach is why Microsoft is the dominant computer Software, internet and networking solutions provider in the world—it has nothing to do with anti-competitive behavior. As some who has professionally evolved along with Microsoft I'd like to share with you some interesting personal observations, early in the game when Microsoft was coming out with their 1st generation products intentionally designed to be simple and easy to use—these same competitors (and a few that aren't around any more) actually snickered and ridiculed Microsoft's feeble attempts at trying to compete with their hot shot best of class leading edge (bleeding edge??) technology . . . I have had sales reps tell me personally that Microsoft could not compete with their products, where did all the IBM OS/2 PCs go??? Has UNIX vi replaced MS editors, where did Netware go??? All of these products failed . . . not because they were inferior but because they did not focus on the needs of their markets, the changes in the market place—and most importantly, because of their hatred for Microsoft they purposely omitted Microsoft friendly interoperability features, at their peril.

Today we observe the US Justice department still engaged in a punitive action against a company that has succeeded in a market place seething with competitors who's primary objective was to crush Microsoft . . . all one has to find out who they were is read the list of the companies who testified on behalf of the Justice department. Most of the states involved are the home states of these same MS competitors. There is not a single individual, private company, local, state or Federal Govt agency that does not reap the benefits of Microsoft's innovative technology on a daily basis.

Now that we are in this WAR on Terrorism, I ask of my elected officials to observe just how similar the behavior of those against Microsoft is to that of the terrorists is to the global symbol of freedom, it seems that any one, any company, any nation that attains the pinnacle of success and become an icon of something good and successful becomes a target to those who have failed. I find it very disturbing that the Bush administration has not put a stop to the persecution of Microsoft that seemed to be the “Jihad” of the Clinton Justice department.

Given the situation we are in, the government should be appreciative of the fact that Microsoft has evolved as the PC and networking standard—one that the Govt can embrace and turn to for the propose of securing America's information highway . . . Microsoft has the technology and because it has become the de facto "standard" security strategies can easily be designed around this technology, rather than wasting valuable Microsoft resources in a protracted ill-advised anti-trust battle, the federal and state leadership should embrace Microsoft as a valued partner in the "War on Terrorism".

Sincerely,
Robert Duffy
7811 Pinebrook Dr
San Antonio, TX 78230-4810

MTC-00009410

From: R. G. Montgomery
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:40pm
Subject: Don't penalize success.

It is the view of the left, i.e., former President Clinton and former Atny Gen Reno, that suces is wrong. Such is the basis of the case against Microsoft.

Bill Gates, et al, built a "better mousetrap" and made money due to their superior product. This shouldn't be actionable. Whatever "monopolizing" was done, if it were in violation of law, is a minor matter. Deal with it as a minor matter. Shut out the individual states who are now trying to turn a profit from Microsoft's misfortune.

Please un-socialize and de-politicize the Justice Department.

Thank you very much,
R. G. Montgomery

MTC-00009411

From: trina hollander
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:42pm
Subject: comment

We support the Microsoft settlement. We want to see an end to the Clinton era anti-trust law abuse.

Sincerely,
Trina & John Hollander
Calhoun, KY

MTC-00009412

From: Brenda Ann
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:43pm
Subject: Re: Anti-trustlaw abuse
To Whom it May Concern,

Please end this Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse with the Microsoft case! It's such a waste of money, time and talent that could be spent on something that is truly illegal. In my view, this is a case of, class envy, and liberals promoting socialism. Very dangerous business.

Thank you,
Brenda Shumate
Marysville, Ca.

MTC-00009413

From: Patrick Lawrence
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:46pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi just wanted to write a quick email to voice my concern that something is done about Microsoft and there tactics so that we can have real choices for our operating system. I would at the very least like to see duel-boot options mandatory on all new computers so that other operating systems like Linux and BeOS have a chance in the future.

Thanks
Patrick Lawrence

MTC-00009414

From: MaryFK@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:53pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a concerned citizen I wish to express my frustration with the government's continuous pursuit of the Anti-Trust Case against Microsoft. I believe that the case should be settled and finalized. Too much money has already been spent trying this case. I would have rather seen the money spent on education.

It it my belief that Microsoft has enabled the general public to be able to use Personal Computers and has enhanced the industry with it's innovation. Stop spending our tax dollars on this case and spend it instead on bettering our education system.

Thank you for reading my comments.
Mary F. Kush

MTC-00009415

From: Gabriel Georgeff
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Law suit

Dear justice Department: Microsoft has stole,pirated, and crumbled companies with their literally stealing the work of many software developers. It also has a strangle hold on a large part of the hardware companies that threaten Microsoft. The Microsoft system is a drag on many users, due to the unreliability of Microsoft Windows crashing, hard to recover your computer to open, and run after multiple crashes. Having to call for help, that you are charged $34.00 per hour for over the phone assistance to get your lousy Microsoft Windows back up and running from their technicians. It is a said situation the way Microsoft has a strangle hold on computer users. Please free computer users to have a open source operating system (example Lynux), and open Microsoft's hold by having the coding all of their software. Their software to where you have no choice but to be in a stangle hold of MICROSOFT. It is a situation computer users deserve better in these United States of America.

SET US FREE, Please SET US FREE.

Gabriel T. Georgeff
1217 SW Morningside Drive
Blue Springs, MO 64015-4905

MTC-00009416

From: s(038)s
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:56pm
Subject: leave microsoft alone

MTC-00009417

From: Beri Bek
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:56pm
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust

I wish the government would just leave Microsoft alone. A monopoly does not exist. It would really help the economy if this case was dropped.

Beri B. Bek
Kentwood, MI
49508-6556

MTC-00009418

From: Pamela Schmidt
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:56pm
Subject: Ending Clinton Anti-trust abuse
To whom it may concern:

You have my full support to do what is just and lawful to correct any abuses allowed through the Clinton years. I know that you will know just what to do.

Sincerely yours,
Pamela J. Schmidt

MTC-00009419

From: Vivek Velso
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 9:56pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

A FINFlash Alert: The DOJ wants to hear from YOUDear DoJ Rep; I have observed the ongoing economic trend for the past years, and, I would like to offer my suggestions for sustaining growth in the high-speed digital age.

It gives me immense pleasure to write about Microsoft's approach in the industry, which is based on central theme of Rapid Innovation.

The full credit goes to key strategies played by Microsoft and the Leadership demostrated in bringing the great innovations to life, encouraging people, engaging customers with their feedback on products which can change the future in a "boundaryless" fashion. I appreciate Microsoft's customer centric policies, and I am fully confident that very soon, the new image of Microsoft's Innovation will take the responsibility for upholding and rolling out a new Digital Age never experienced before.

Today, the freedom to innovate and to keep America rolling is only possible after removing the bureaucratic hurdles from the society, and encourage key players like Microsoft to keep innovating at speed of thought.

There are many aspects currectly worked upon by Microsoft which need your utmost support for the freedom to innovate— Digital Signatures which can also benefit FAA, Wireless with .NET Infrastructure for security, Education Telecommunication policies e.Business Customer Trust and Privacy

We, as the end consumers and residents are trying our level best to suppport Microsoft with all means like providing inputs for next generation of Internet Protocol, .NET, beta testing, product evaluation, to name a few.

I have also urged Microsoft to publish Bumper Stickers, and dynamic NewsFlashes for encouraging their spirit of innovation.

Microsoft has always respected small emerging companies and entrepreneurs worldwide, not only in Ohio, who are working hard and committed to innovation by sharing technology ideas and creating value added partnerships for enabling win-win solutions.

Only the hurdles of few arrogant CEO and open minded gurus have misled the path towards innovation and creating Economic value add. This will only add towards the worst scenarios of global recession in a cascading fashion, thereby impacting every vertical industry.

I appreciate your valuable time and hope that my views will go in a long way to establish a valuable communication link for sustaining ever expanding growth in the Digital Economy, which is only possible by the FREEDOM TO INNOVATE...

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Vivek Velso

2216 Albemarle Dr Apt#102
Fairfield, OH 45014-4343

From: MSFIN@Microsoft.com

To: vivek.velso@poboxes.com

Sent: Wednesday, January 02, 2002 12:20 PM

Subject: DOJ wants to hear from you on MS settlement

A FINFlash Alert: The DOJ wants to hear from YOU!

To cancel your subscription to this newsletter, read the directions at the bottom of this message.

For nearly four years, your voice has been instrumental in the debate over the freedom to innovate. Tens of thousands of concerned citizens have communicated to their public officials about whether the Microsoft case should be settled or further litigated. Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling.

This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

However, this settlement is not guaranteed, and your voice is more important than ever.

The law (officially called the Tunney Act) requires a public comment period between now and January 28th after which the District Court will determine whether the settlement is in the "public interest." Unfortunately, a few special interests are attempting to use this review period to derail the settlement and prolong this litigation even in the midst of uncertain economic times. The last thing the American economy needs is more litigation that benefits only a few wealthy competitors and stifles innovation.

Don't let these special interests defeat the public interest.

Between now and January 28th, it is critical that the Department of Justice hears from you about the Microsoft settlement. The Department of Justice will then take all public comments and viewpoints and include them in the public record for the District Court to consider. Please send your comments directly to the Department of Justice via email or fax no later than January 28th. Whatever your view of the settlement, it is critical that the government hears directly from consumers. Please take action today to ensure your voice is heard.

Email: microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov . In the Subject line of the e-mail, type Microsoft Settlement.

Fax: 1-202-307-1454 or 1-202-616-9937

To find out more about the settlement and the Tunney Act comment period, go to the Department of Justice Website at: <http://www.usdoj.gov/atr/cases/ms-settle.htm>.

Thanks for taking the time to make a difference.

To cancel your subscription to this newsletter, please go to the following website:

<http://www.freetoinnovate.com/—utilities/unsubscribe.asp>

MTC-00009420

From: AEKHLHL@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 9:57pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The Microsoft case should be settled now.

There should be no further litigation.

Audrey K. Leaser
723 Southmeadow Circle
Cincinnati, Ohio 45231

MTC-00009421

From: BGABRAB@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 9:57pm

Subject: (no subject)

regarding your e-mail on microsoft court case i do believe that consideration should be given to a lower settlement figure and bring this case to an end.

MTC-00009422

From: Daryl D.Lettie

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 10:02pm

Subject:

DROP IT DROP IT

MTC-00009423

From: Drew D. Read

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 10:14pm

Subject: Stop Wasting Our Money

Stop spending my tax dollars on battling Microsoft anti trust lawsuits.

It's a free market economy and if other companies can't compete against Microsoft, they should go out of business.

If you need to find a good cause to spend our tax dollars fighting, try reverse discrimination with Affirmative Action. They mandate lesser qualified ethnic minorities just to meet the lawful quota. I see this happen first hand in the state university system in PA. If I were a parent with a college student and I knew they weren't getting the most qualified professor for the money, I would be furious. Yet this is exactly what's going on today in our education system. It's happening in other areas also. People should be hired on qualifications, not skin color or ethnic backgrounds in order to meet quotas.

Have a great day.

Drew D. Read

MTC-00009424

From: Frank Allegretta

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 10:19pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello,

I am interested in taking part of worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed: examples: open Office file formats, Win32 APIs, make dual-boot options mandatory, etc..."

Best regards,

Frank Allegretta

mailto:jean11@sccoast.net

MTC-00009425

From: Pat Riley

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 10:20pm

Subject: Microsoft settlement

Dear USDOJ,

Please settle the Microsoft case soon and let the country get to work using this standard.

The private sector can not afford to create custom programs like the federal government.

The MS windows, explorer and family of products work with great success and dependability.

Patrick and Alexis Riley

262-15-6722, 527-11-3644

El Cajon, CA 92021

MTC-00009426

From: cattmail@mac.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 10:20pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Department Of Justice,

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

1. MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code licence or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

2. The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

3. The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

4. The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS in the past.

The above facts and opinions have been drawn up by a non-profit group who's goal is to shed some light on things that have become apparent in the consumer market concerning the way Microsoft has acted with its monopoly power. The consumer and its freedom of choice has been heavily damaged by such misconduct from Microsoft. As you and I know, the consumer reality has been tarnished into thinking that Microsoft and its products are the only choice or alternative to solutions that not too many years ago had flourished with products and solutions from a wide range and it is understandable that some products and/or solutions would and will disappear.

You and I usually assume (by natural occurrence) now that there are no alternatives for products and/or solutions in the computing world when it comes to the PC market other than Microsoft and Windows... yeah sure there are alternatives, but most of the consumer market is blind to these alternatives due to Microsoft's strangle hold on the OEMs with its strict licensing issues. Is Microsoft totally at fault over this?... NO! I think that the OEMs should be also held accountable for irresponsibility to the consumer market by forcing a product and/or solution in giving the consumers no freedom of choice and blinding them from the alternatives and staging such a market as if Microsoft and Windows is the only choice by default.

I do not wish for Microsoft to be split as a company, in my opinion that would only hurt the consumer market even more and hide the fact that Microsoft is still Microsoft. I also believe the latest settlement offer is only going to make Microsoft's monopoly more powerful with forcing Microsoft to donate Billions of dollars worth of products and/or solutions (which would cost only pennies for Microsoft) to the educational sector in need of such is only going to worsen the blow to the rest of the competitors affected by Microsoft's anti-competitive practices already. I am in no way undermining your decision or proposal of settlement, but I think that Microsoft would have another advantage over the rest of the industry in the education market by planting Microsoft's reach in the way of the back door so to speak. The schools in need should be given donations of a cash amount and let the schools decide on what is needed for their children, not Microsoft!

I as a consumer feel that Microsoft has heavily damaged the freedom of the consumer in a way that has almost damaged the economy of the US and the economies around the world. I have much faith in you, the Department Of Justice and I feel that you will resolve and bring to justice that is rightly deserved to the consumer world and hopefully protect us (as you always have) from such dangers to our way of life and our freedom of choice as our ancestors fought so hard to establish in America. I believe you will do the right thing. I thank you very much for your time and patience in reading this letter and good luck to you.

Best Regards...
Dennis

MTC-00009427

From: Carma Woodward
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:25pm
Subject: I want to end the Clinton era.
I want to end the Clinton era.
Carma Woodward

MTC-00009428

From: Hans Schieder
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:29pm
Subject: Microsoft case

Gentlemen:

Please cease your foolish and wasteful trial against Microsoft.

An American company should not be penalized for having been successful. Let others who would like to make money in that field also be as creative as Microsoft was to earn their share of the market rather than crying to the courts.

Sincerely,
Hans Schieder

MTC-00009429

From: Bruce Faling
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:34pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sirs:

I understand that the US Department of Justice is seeking opinions of concerned citizens over the proposed settlement between Microsoft Corporation and the US Department of Justice. My opinions on said settlement appear below: Contrary to popular belief, Microsoft Corporation wields no power over their customers, potential customers, computer manufacturers, competitors, or the population at large.

As a private company, Microsoft relies upon voluntary transactions with its customers in order to continue to do business. Customers, potential customers, and computer manufacturers alike are under no obligation to accept Microsoft Corporation's terms before buying and using its products. They are free to accept, decline, or ask to amend the terms, but they cannot be "made" to do anything as such. That Microsoft has sold millions of copies of its broad offerings is evidence that people have accepted their terms voluntarily in large numbers, and thus any claims of harm perpetrated against consumers is baseless.

In short, Microsoft has done no wrong. That being the case, any proposed "settlement" cannot sensibly be construed as "fair," to either the shareholders of Microsoft or their customers. Being how this settlement, by its very nature, must force Microsoft to operate in ways it did not see fit to do voluntarily, I must condemn the settlement for what it most apparently is: An attempt to limit the competitiveness of Microsoft for the benefit of its rivals. The marketplace of software products has clearly—and freely—chosen Microsoft.

That last statement is significant. The ignorance of many people of the difference between high market share and true power astounds. However, the difference is real. Where Microsoft relies upon voluntary exchange with its customers for its very existence; true coercive agencies, such as the US Department of Justice, require no such consent from "its" "customers." Funded by monies expropriated from productive persons, their function is to force people, and associations of people, to comply with written law.

Granted, such force is not always employed, but the threat and ability to employ it is always present. Consent cannot rightly be said to be given under such circumstances. This is true power. It is clearly demonstrable that it is by no means the equivalent to attaining a high market share. Having said that, I can only recommend dropping the proposed settlement out of hand as well as the very suit it was meant to settle in the first place.

Sincerely,
Bruce Faling

MTC-00009430

From: George Polycrates
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:35pm
Subject: MICROSOFT
Ladies & Gentlemen,

I am a Civil Engineer. I remember how intimidating was at the beginning to use computers even though I had experience from my schooling. I still see people that they are afraid to get involved with the computers. I have bought computer from GATEWAY, DELL, COMPAQUE, PACKARD, HP AND

MTC-00009431

From: Lou Cori
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:36pm
Subject: Get Though

Bill Gates has been crapping on the competition and the buying public from the word "GO". He doesn't leave a choice to anyone. I resented the way that he screwed Netscape and then tried to force people to use his Internet program without any choice. This scum ball has destroyed more companies than you could possibly name. Even the computer manufacturer's have little choice in how they place software on their products. He has also forced the software magazine's to use his product article descriptions to the detriment of any competitor. Don't let up on him.

MTC-00009432

From: Danny Brown
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:38pm
Subject: Hidden Microsoft Training Sham

Please restrict the Microsoft training scam they are perpetrating on people like myself. Microsoft is conspiring with a group of approved training centers, book publishers, and testing centers to fraudulently take our money in a training program scam.

At age 53, I was "downsized" by my former employer. To enhance my ability to find work, I spent $8,000 of my savings and 200-plus hours of classroom time in a "Microsoft approved" training school, using "Microsoft approved" textbooks, taking a series of 6 "Microsoft approved" exams at a "Microsoft approved" test center (at $100 per pop) to obtain my Microsoft Certified Systems Engineer certification (MCSE)... only to be notified by Microsoft that they have decided to make all MCSE's retake their exams over mostly the same material to remain certified. NONE of the students who paid their thousands of dollars in fees were ever told that the certifications could be cancelled at the whim of Microsoft in order to keep their relationships with their training centers, text publishers, and testing centers secure and very profitable.

These Microsoft approved training centers, text book publishers, and testing centers MUST have a constant flow of students to keep profitable and in business. In addition,

Microsoft gets a cut of the action at each level.

I know improvements are made in the software over time, and have I have no problem taking one or even two exams over the software improvements to keep current. However, to make us take all (now SEVEN) exams over 75% of the same material has only one purpose—to keep the grist in the Microsoft training mills and keep their approved training partners, approved text publishers, and approved test centers busy and profitable.

I pointed out to Microsoft that CPAs, Attorneys, and MDs attend classes and seminars to keep current on changes in their profession, but they do not have to retake all the exams of the CPA exam, bar exam, or medical boards every time rules, laws or procedures change.

Microsoft, as a monopoly, has said “too bad”, you must retake exams over the same material at our approved test centers, anyway. Please insist that they can put together tests covering changes to their software and make us take them, but that they cannot insist that we be forced to retake exams over already tested material to remain current.

To do otherwise gives Microsoft permission to use its monopoly power to force us to spend many thousands of dollars in courses and testing that no other profession is compelled to do. Microsoft can do for one reason only—they are a monopoly and if we don't like it, tough!

Thank you.

Danny Brown
15818 Knoll Lake Drive
Houston, Texas 77095
Tel. 281-859-5174
dannybrown@mail.com

MTC-00009433

From: Chris Chauvin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:49pm
Subject: Microsoft—Justice Dept. Settlement

Dear Sirs:

I am just an average citizen, but I would like to express my opinion on the Microsoft settlement.

It seems to me that all that would be accomplished by not settling would be to punish Microsoft for becoming a great company that the U.S. can be proud to call our own. All this so that the competition who would and does do the same marketing practices when they are given the chance can be satisfied.

Our country was not founded on condemning free enterprise.

Christine Chauvin
Billings, Montana

MTC-00009434

From: Mntman45@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:55pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

NANCY MOREHEAD
638 Heidi Lane
Mansfield, OH 44904
January 7, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
U.S. Department of Justice

950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001
Dear Mr. Ashcroft,

I am writing to request that there be no more litigation in the Microsoft Antitrust case, and that the federal investigation be brought to a close with the agreed settlement that you reached with Microsoft. A balanced, equitable settlement has been negotiated between Microsoft and the Justice Department, and this document should put the matter to rest.

The agreement will require Microsoft to share information, and to change some of its marketing and licensing practices, provisions for those who felt they weren't getting a fair shot at the market. The settlement you developed includes definite, realistic provisions, which will create more openness throughout the I.T. industry. This settlement will be beneficial because it will improve the software field, and—perhaps most importantly end this case once and for all.

I hope you will be able to work towards bringing this case to conclusion. Please continue your fantastic work supporting the settlement from the Department of Justice and Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Nancy Morehead

MTC-00009435

From: Greg Peck
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 10:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs: I would strongly support the settlement of the Microsoft case. It is in the best interests of the industry and the economy in general. There has been enough time and money spent on this case.

Microsoft has gone out of its way in meeting the conditions of the settlement. I would like to see Microsoft turn its creative energies into new technology and struggling with this case.

Greg Peck

MTC-00009436

From: Tim Coy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:00pm
Subject: Microsoft did not get there by creating poor software!

The American dream is to be able to become a Microsoft by having a great product and great timing. Its seems as time passes those that are the failures now use the court system to attach those who make it. The fallacy is that Microsoft is where it is because it a Monopoly, this is a joke. I can remember when Windows was a joke and Mac OS was the way to go. As Mac laughed at Windows, Microsoft always went to consumer and asked how can we make or software better. The result is that Microsoft did build a much better OS than Mac. This a true example of the “tortoise and hair”. I wish you would quit trying to destroy success. Jealousy in the power of the courts system is scary.

Tim Coy

MTC-00009437

From: Jim Illback
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:03pm
Subject: Re: Microsoft Case

I believe that the Microsoft Anti-trust settlement case's proposed settlement is in the 60-day comment period which started 11/28. Here are my comments.

I am absolutely appalled that the settlement has not rectified the basic issue which is monopolistic control over PC suppliers. When I go to the Dell Computer web page, there is ONLY Microsoft Operating Systems available to my on the portable PC that I desire. That is the problem. I don't want to be FORCED into choosing a Microsoft OS, especially not XP. Please get this problem fixed with your settlement, not just let go. The DOJ has been at this since before Janet Reno and their “victories” have been so benign that it has only re-empowered Microsoft to higher bullying tactics. FIX THE PROBLEM—DIVIDE THE COMPANY ALREADY. Hold them accountable for their illegal actions, so consumers like me will have a choice of Operating Systems on Dell (or any other) computer. Do your job already!

Jim Illback
PO Box 627
Ravensdale, WA 98051
425 965-6871
CC:attorney_general@po.state.ct.us@inetgw

MTC-00009438

From: Larry Burkett
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The law requires a public comment period between now and January 28th after which the District Court will determine whether the Microsoft settlement is in the “public interest.”

My comment is in support of the Microsoft settlement. In my opinion, Microsoft, while not perfect, has done more to advance computer usage by the general public than any other single company.

sincerely,
Lawrence L. Burkett,
30 Ebersohl Cir,
Whitehouse Station, NJ 08889
(lburkett@rcn.com)

MTC-00009440

From: J. Thomas Broyles
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:19pm
Subject: Clinton-era anti-trust law abuse

I think the Justice Department needs to move on and away from the pursuit of Microsoft. I believe Clinton and Reno's pursuit of this fine company precipitated the decline in the economy triggered by the major drop in the stock market.

J. Thomas Broyles M.D. and victim of the Clinton follies

MTC-00009441

From: Mary Jo Reddick
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

We think it is a tough but fair settlement—for all parties involved. Stop wasting the tax payers money—competition is wonderful for consumers like our family. We are an average working family who appreciate good quality products at fair prices that Microsoft has made available to us. We don't appreciate our hard earned tax money being wasted on frivolous, vengeful lawsuits. Enough already.

Donald and Mary Jo Reddick
Lancaster, CA

MTC-00009442

From: Blain Hamon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement.

There seems to be a lack of listed courses of action to take if and when the defendant fails to meet the criteria of the final judgement. I do not have any law training, and as such do not know if such a provision is possible. However, I write this with Microsoft's previous actions in mind.

* This settlement is because Microsoft broke a previous antitrust agreement.

* During the 5 years of this battle, MS has continued with its practices.

* In the court, Microsoft was caught committing perjury a full three times.

* Microsoft has been lobbying to lower the DOJ's funding in order to reduce its effectiveness.

* Microsoft delayed, agreeing to a settlement only when a full ultimatum was issued and failure was outlined.

Microsoft has continued to do acts which can be construed as attempts to monopolize a high-competition market, such as Windows XP's built-in advertising of MSN (In order to take over the ISP market) and Windows Media Player disabling high-quality playback of MP3s, for no other reason than to push Microsoft's own sound file standard. And I fear Microsoft will not comply to the agreement unless a sword of Damocles is fully hanging overhead. They have the funds and the lawyers to continue to break agreements, delaying in court the actions to be taken as punishment, and finally sign a new agreement where the cycle continues.

I feel there needs to be a provision that spells out the possible punitive actions that the TC can and will do if Microsoft refuses to comply, including drastic measures such as the proposed alternatives, even such things as restricting Microsoft's assets, or confiscating payments to Microsoft, in the same way the IRS is entitled to garnish wages of those who fail to pay taxes.

It appears that also missing in this agreement is any form of public interaction over the long term. I do not see any course a citizen of the United States, can 1) alert the TC of practices that I feel should be looked at as possible violations, and 2) obtain reports, records, or any other documents the TC creates in order to aid making an informed opinion and alerting others to possible concerns.

This information is of public interest, and it is mentioned, "Plaintiffs may use information obtained from the TC as the basis for commencing a compliance inquiry or investigation." (Competitive impact statement, IV B 2 b) I feel that future plaintiffs wanting to commence an inquiry should also be given access to this information. In short, as much nonsensitive documents as possible should be public information, under the rules of the Freedom of Information Act.

It is because of these reasons that I would like to see amendments added that grant the TC powers of enforcement as well as to give the general public an ability to aid in ensuring that Microsoft does not break its settlements again.

Thank you.

MTC-00009443

From: Robert S. Kirkwood
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:33pm
Subject: Stop the Prosecution of a legitimate, competitive business.

Stop the Prosecution of a legitimate, competitive business.

Robert S. Kirkwood
PO Box 2078
LaBelle, FL 33975
BobKirkwood@bigfoot.com

MTC-00009444

From: Keith Fouts
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:37pm
Subject: Let's end the Microsoft lawsuit.

Please end the suit on Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Keith A. Fouts
108 N Parkview
Coffeyville, KS 67337-1237
kfouts@kscable.com

MTC-00009445

From: barneydoogan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:38pm
Subject: Microsoft fiasco

Let's end the nonsense and put this sad chapter of anti-business crusading behind us. In these trying times, my government resources can be better utilized combating the terrorism and fanaticism that threatens my children and the generations that follow us.

Sincerely,
Thomas J. Fay
9 Greenhurst Road
West Hartford, CT 06107

MTC-00009446

From: John Tegen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:41pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Greetings:

I started a company to provide applications for Be Inc. operating system—the BeOS. The company is OmicronSoft (www.omicronsoft.com). I started it in 1996 so that I could provide better quality applications found on other Operating System, including Windows and Apple. Due to the unlawful practices of Microsoft, they were successfully able to prevent Be Inc. to enter the market place by restricting OEM vendors like Hitachi, Dell, and Compaq to provide alternative operating systems to the consumer. This crushed Be Inc. as well as software providers like ourselves. Microsoft's actions prevented us to earn a living and prevented the consumer to choose an alternative and better solution for their computing needs.

It is our opinion that the current settlement with the DOJ is far too weak to be harmful to Microsoft. If similar actions were enforced during anti-trust litigation earlier last century, we would have one oil company, one railroad company, and one telephone company. In some regards, it has allowed them to unfairly to penetrate markets that they have been trying to enter (e.g. Education). The longer Microsoft is allowed to continue in their normal fashion, the longer they have to make billions of dollars, eliminate competition, and provide the US consumer and Government poor quality products. As the DOJ is fully aware of, anti-trust behavior is economically and physically harmful to the general consumer and business community.

We are looking for the DOJ to enforce the anti-trust to include:

1) Full application document format disclosure and POSIX sample to read and write to and from those documents. This include Word, Excel, Power Point, Visio, Outlook/Exchange email, Outlook/Exchange contacts, Outlook/Exchange events, and MS proprietary audio and video formats.

2) Full disclosure of Win32 API calls. Those not officially supported should be noted as such.

3) To allow OEM manufacturers the full ability to provide alternative OS's to the consumer in both single and dual boot configurations. To prevent them to hide alternative operating systems.

4) To natively support open multi-media formats including MP3. It is uncertain that these remedies will counter-act the damage that has already occurred to software manufactures like Be and ourselves. Even if the BeOS had 1% of the consumer market, it would have been a multi-million dollar business to ourselves. If we had a few million dollars, we would probably take legal action against MS for punitive damages. I would suggest that Microsoft should pay damages to companies like ourselves and pay a company to license the BeOS from Palm, plus $500M to allow the BeOS be offered to the consumer public.

Please contact me with any questions you may have regarding this.

Regards,
John Tegen
OmicronSoft
President
(858) 695-0088

MTC-00009447

From: Robert L. Duerler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sirs;

We support the Microsoft Settlement.

This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

Yours truly,
Robert L. Duerler
Cathy C. Duerler
Cincinnati, Ohio

MTC-00009448

From: Wade
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/7/02 11:43pm
Subject: MicroSoft

You know I hope that the federal government doesn't make it a policy to shut down all successful businesses because the unsuccessful ones don't like it!

Spare MicroSoft!

Wade Bush, a user for 20 years,
US Army Retired

MTC-00009449

From: Eworksart@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 11:42pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We can't afford to let this go on. Settle now it is important to the citizens of this country.

Respectfully submitted:

Cynthia Hoskins

MTC-00009450

From: hampreal@lanset.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 11:48pm

Subject: Microsoft settlement

Microsoft has provided a user friendly environment for computer users, I fail to understand why the government must intervene in any business that is successful. America was supposed to be a Republic, a free enterprise. However, with the Socialist attitude of many, those that do succeed are frowned upon. Microsoft should be allowed to carry on their business as a business without unnecessary government intervention. Microsoft has paid a price for the success they have. Let them continue. Others can have success but they do have to pay a price and a lot of work to get there. I feel Microsoft has paid their dues and should be allowed to continue. The states that want more should not be allowed to proceed with their arguments.

MTC-00009451

From: Dwriter01@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 11:56pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Just settle the darn thing! Let's get on with life. How wonderful to think a company can be penalized for being successful!

Diana Bress

MTC-00009452

From: F Leonard

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/7/02 11:59pm

Subject: Leave Microsoft alone.

Leave Microsoft alone and go after America's Biggest Criminals—the Clintons!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

fjl

MTC-00009453

From: Doris (038) John White

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 12:01am

Subject: Anti-Trust Suit Against Microsoft

We feel quite strongly about the government filing suit against Microsoft. We have always felt that the Clinton Administration envied Bill Gates for his financial standing.

We would like to see this suit dropped. Microsoft has been very good to its employees. It has also done a great deal of philanthropic work. Let's end this legal fiasco by dropping this suit and letting them get back to doing what they do so well. Let them help the economy by creating jobs.

John and Doris White
1195 Christopher Drive Apt. 1
Neenah, WI 54956-6349

MTC-00009454

From: Sbuff64@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 12:14am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I am not quite sure this e-mail will be heard, but I would just like to share my opinion on this matter.

When did it become fashionable in this country to punish a company for being successful? When was Capitalism replaced with Socialism, where Big Government determines what's best for everyone? Microsoft, as a company, basically carried the world into the computer age. They used their expertise, innovative products, and relentless marketing to "sell" mankind to the fact that everyone needs a computer.

So they benefited from this, is it a crime?

Was Henry Ford persecuted for changing modern industrialism? No, but you didn't hear GM and Chrysler whine like small children that Ford was unfair. They just went out and did the best job they could, and caught up (and surpassed Ford in GM's case). Why is it that the brakes must be put on technology moving forward so a few misguided companies can catch up?

In addition to this, as you destroy Microsoft's stock value, did anyone take into account how many "normal" people's 401K and retirement funds have stock in this? To save a few dollars in software costs, people's retirement savings are being decimated. Somehow, I cannot believe this is a better solution. I would certainly hope that everyone would come to their senses and follow the Federal government's lead to just settle this case and move on to the business of getting our economy in gear.

Sincerely,

Steven Buffamonte

MTC-00009455

From: Chaim Klein

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 12:25am

Subject: microsoft

Its time to settle—the faster you reach a deal and let microsoft get back to doing what it does best making software. this country needs is dynamic corporations especially in the high tech field to focus on innovation and not law suits.

thank you,
Chaim Klein

President & CEO

IglooSunset, L.L.C.

<http://www.igloosunset.com>

MTC-00009456

From: Dick Haring

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 12:37am

Subject: Microsoft anti trust suit

This ridiculous suit should be dropped immediately. Thanks to stupid government bureaucrats, the economy took a major hit when this bogus suit was brought. It impacted the stock market, significantly, and started the tremendous decline that we are just now turning around. This is government at it's worst, unproductive trouble makers doing nothing but getting in the way of productive job providing Americans. As might be expected it was formulated and pushed along by a leftist administration headed by people who really don't like capitalism very much.

It should be sent back to where it belongs, limbo.

RW Haring

MTC-00009457

From: James THOMPSON

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 12:39am

Subject: Microsoft case

Throw the book at Bill Gates. He has destroyed one little computer company after another. He and Microsoft need to be punished in the worst way possible. Breaking Microsoft up into two companies is not enough. Make Microsoft pay and pay dearly. Even if it means a complete shake up or near confusion in the computer industry.

MTC-00009459

From: William A Guy

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 12:44am

Subject: Microsoft is a monopoly. As a monopoly, Microsoft has crippled the Microsoft is a monopoly. As a monopoly, Microsoft has crippled the computer industry as a whole by stifling innovation and competition in that industry. Microsoft needs to be broken into three companies, one, operating system, two, programs and three, internet. As a microsoft customer, if I had a real choice, I would never use a Microsoft product again. If you investigate the new features of the new Microsoft XP operating system, this software is a violation of fair business practices and should not be allowed to be marketed. This is Microsoft's way of tumbing its nose at the judicial system.

Rod Guy

MTC-00009460

From: Curtis Porter

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 12:45am

Subject: Anti-trust abuse against Microsoft.

Dear Sirs:

Please end the Clinton era's persecution of Microsoft. This company has blessed and benefited all of us who use computers. They should be able to enjoy their success and rewards for doing so. Other companies want to take advantage of Microsoft's success, and not have to develop their own. Do not allow this.

Thank you.

Curtis T. Porter

Kansas City, Missouri metropolitan area
816-525-5277

MTC-00009461

From: Tom and Nancy

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:10am

Subject: STOP THE MADNESS!

Stop wasting taxpayer money on the Microsoft Case!

MTC-00009462

From: John Bronger

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:28am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The anti-business climate of the U.S. Government, Department of Justice, is misguided effort and uses Public funding. In my opinion the government should spend more time working toward borders, language and cultural matters-enforcing the constitution and using English as a standard language as is used for aircraft control. Microsoft is an enabler not an impediment to furthering U.S.A. D.O.J. should be focused on threats to people instead of focusing on the people and firms competing. Eliminate the anti-business approach in the D.O.J.

MTC-00009463

From: atkins

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:30am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam:

I am writing in regards to an article involving the US v. Microsoft Corporation anti-trust case, posted at < <http://www.beunited.org> >. The article pertains to the fateful demise of Be, Incorporated—a California-based software company that began developing the Be Operating System (BeOS)—and calls me to join a world-wide network of my fellow BeOS companions in making a request of the Department of Justice.

It is very unfortunate that Be, Inc. was unable to obtain the success projected several years ago by myself and many of my computer-savvy colleagues, as well as several well-known critics and analysts of the computer sector. As a user of BeOS, I was able to experience first-hand the numerous superior features of the operating system over any of Microsoft's Windows family of operating systems.

BeOS breathed much more life into my computer than Windows NT or 2000 ever did—it was much faster, more stable, more reliable, and just as user-friendly. After becoming familiar with lightning-fast application launches and superior access to files in BeOS, I was disappointed when I was forced to boot into Windows 2000 to correctly view a webpage in Internet Explorer or open an email attachment with Microsoft Word.

The fact of the matter is that BeOS was predicted to be a major success and somewhat a competitor to Microsoft Windows. It was believed that the operating system would weave itself into the mainstream of the computer market—machines would dual-boot a Microsoft OS and BeOS and the user, depending on his or her needs, would choose which one to boot from a start-up menu. But Microsoft managed to keep that situation from ever happening by using their strong-arm tactics against OEMs that attempted this, as is defined in Section III paragraph 49 of the Findings of Fact—United States of America v. Microsoft Corporation, “when these dual-loaded PC systems are turned on, Windows automatically boots; the user must then take affirmative steps to invoke the BeOS.”

To cut to the chase of the matter, Microsoft used its monopoly power to crush Be, Incorporated and halt the development of BeOS. For this, Microsoft should be punished and stripped of its monopoly powers. As is the case in BeOS, Linux, and many other operating systems, services are extended to the user that allow for better application programming, better access to operating system functions, and more cross-platform “open” standards. In BeOS and Linux, I can access the files on my Windows hard-drive partitions; in Windows, when I attempt to access a non-Windows partition, it prompts me to totally wipe the disk so that Windows can recognize the file system. Microsoft uses its monopoly extensively, and therefore it should be forced to adopt more open, universal, cross-platform and operating system independent standards. It should also be punished, as is seen fit, by a stern and unforgiving judge.

I fully trust that you, representing the Department of Justice, will use all of the resources at your disposal to make correct the situation that Microsoft has created using its anti-competitive and monopolistic grip over the computer industry.

Most sincerely,

William Dee Atkins

atkins@ptsi.net

MTC-00009464

From: Nelsons

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:43am

Subject: It will be very good for the US economy if this case was settled

It will be very good for the US economy if this case was settled prior to the March hearings. The nine states that are holding out are obviously trying to protect their companies in their own state. e.g. Oracle, AOL, Sun Microsystems etc. They are putting themselves above the consumer by delaying the settlement. All they want is their pound of flesh, nothing more. It is getting so obvious that hopefully the judge will see through it. It was a good thing the DOJ made the effort to settle with Microsoft. The sooner it is over, the better it will be for the stock market and the consuming public.

Thank you for the opportunity to voice my opinion.

Charles D Nelson

nelsons@altavista.com

MTC-00009465

From: Richard Isley

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:44am

Subject: Microsoft

So Microsoft did it bigger & BETTER than the other guys and made it to the top of the mountain. That's the American Way folks. Let's stop beating up our winners and start rewarding them instead. It's time to lay off Microsoft folks and get on with some important things.

MTC-00009466

From: larry hall

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:52am

As a Microsoft software consumer and stockholder, I feel that the settlement is fair. To be honest, I have not followed every aspect of the case and must rely on the wisdom of our judicial system. I feel that a company should not have to spend as much time and money to fight court cases as Microsoft. American businesses and consumers appear to be jealous of business success. Microsoft was always the best game in town in my opinion, because its products fit together and are easy to use.

Connectivity and easy-of-use appeals to me as a consumer.

MTC-00009467

From: david@look4m.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:55am

Subject: Think

Dear Justice Department,

Pls forget about Microsoft case. They have done something for this country that could not be forgotten in the history of this entire world. They have brought enough money to feed millions of Americans. I believe that's enough. In any free world people just want to sue people for fun or nothing or to satisfy themselves by taking the shadow of the law. Just kick these people out so Microsoft can do some other job and shake the World. Please.

Thanks

David John

MTC-00009468

From: Felipe Contreras

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:57am

Subject: My opinion

I'm not a technology profesional, nor an important member of any relevant organization, I'm just a young Linux user from Mexico. Anyway, I heard that even my opinion could be important for this matters so here it is.

I started with computers about 10 years ago, I in that moment there was no option for an OS, only Microsoft's DOS, or Windows 3.1. I was influenced by videogames and I was very entusiast about doing the mine one, unfortunately the best development tool I had was Microsoft's QBASIC, and I had not any help to develop a game.

As the time went on I learned more and more, until one day I finally tried the new operating system for experienced computer users, Linux. Since then I learned a lot of the UNIX systems, and the OpenSource movement. This was a complete new world for me, and withouth knowing it endless possibilities for development were at my hands. I became aware that best of the best in the computer world was in the linux world, and the best, they were working by will in doing this world better, working for giving people like me the possibilities for developing whatever they want.

In my humble opinion commercial companies are just that, as the name says they exist to make money. Also, as far as I know it's much easier to make money doing bad things, inversely proportional. Microsoft, being a company with so much money, I can't think that their main concern is anything else than money, and that they gathered so much that they must have been some things not very good, at least not ethical.

When I became concerned of such thigs, I saw the workings of the world different. If one gets involucred with the Linux world it becomes obvious that Microsoft is evil, and Linux is good. Nobody is perfect, but the intentions of the OpenSource movement are good, while the ones of the Microsoft Corporation, are bad, making money. The OpenSource movement consists of scatered efforts withouth one main organization, at the contrary of Microsoft which is very organized and doesn't live any matter untouched, even with the great power they have, Linux, a hobbie work of some people done at their free time, is getting each time bigger "market". Obviously this means competence to Microsoft and it will not stand with arms crossed, if the resoulution of the DOJ let's them, they'll try to make clear to everyone that Microsoft is better (win over Linux), and their strategies obviously work.

Although I think that everyone with enough intelect to analyze the implications of OpenSource, or at least with tasting the power of it will never return to the propertary and closed environment of the Microsoft's realm, if Microsoft win, some people (like me) might never try Linux.

Felipe Contreras

MTC-00009469

From: gleam
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 2:16am
Subject: Microsoft

It's time to stop this unwarranted assault on American businesses.

Stop the Microsoft war started by that criminal Clinton.

Why is the government punishing achievement, instead of rewarding it?

Gary & Mary Martin
4148 Meade Lake Road
Millington. TN 38053

MTC-00009470

From: John Shea
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 2:50am
Subject: Clinton's Anti-trust Abuses

Please end this crapola now, today! Microsoft has been kind to individuals and businesses and does not deserve the beating it continues to receive from the Justice Department and individual states. Microsoft has done a lot of good for America and the world. Bill Gates is a champion and should be treated as such..

Thanks for listening.
John Shea
1673 Springbrook Road
Lafayette, CA 94549

MTC-00009471

From: Sandra Dillard
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:13am
Subject: Microsoft lawsuit

Please bring sanity back to government and stop the Clinton-Reno antitrust suit. I don't believe there was any real basis for the suit. It was all politics to attack big business. I even suspect it was because Bill Gates wouldn't be black mailed into a large contribution to the Democratic party. This is very important to our economic recovery and the stock markets recovery too. Thank you for listening and good luck on cleaning out the Clinton messes.

Mrs. Sandra A. Dillard

P. O. Box 39
N. Bonneville, WA 98639
SandraFromWA@webtv.net

MTC-00009472

From: Jinny Dorner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:24am
Subject: Lawsuits

Please get off the back of Bill Gates and Microsoft. When did it become a crime to be successful in this country? Any of us can compete if we want to and have a better product.

regards,
Jinny Dorner

MTC-00009473

From: David Brosnan
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 4:02am
Subject: Right or wrong?

To whom it concerns,

It is well documented that Mr. Gates and Mr. Allen "stole" the ideas that gave them the foundation to build their fortune on. Now they have the money and the power to buy up anything that looks like potential competition, re-jig it to their ethos and call it a Microsoft product. Their list of failures after they took over good potential products makes for quiet interesting reading, if you take the time, and their answer is to bring out the "latest" version (i.e. patch up the mistakes and see does it work). There is no come back for "down time" for users. If it was any other industry, you could sue their butt off to recover lost time and profits, but because they monopolise the market, there is no alternative worth having. They give the consumer the "middle finger" and know that they can do so without worrying about repercussions. Mr. Gates now gives a lot of money to good causes and that is commendable. But Mr. Gates only did it when he had more money than he or his heirs could ever spend, and it would seem, when the writing was on the wall that the industry was getting fed up with being told what the future would be according to Microsoft, that becoming a great philanthopist would fool the public into believing that a nice man like him could not possibly be an ogre. Competition begets corruption and in this case megomania, but it also fosters new ideas and inovation. Mr. Gates by his actions would like to control the market and dictate what we will have in "the future according to Gates". God better look out if Mr. Gates ever "gets religion". You as a nation do not put your fate in the hands of your President alone, you have your fail safe procedures. Please do not allow this man to be above all others. He does not need the money anymore so why should he object to his company being divided up into smaller parts and creating healthy competition, unless it is his ego he sees as being tampered with. You are our fail safe net, don't be deterred it what you believe is the right thing to do.

Rgds
<<http://www.dbcomp.ie/>> anim.gif (59787 bytes) <<http://www.dbcomp.ie/>>

David Brosnan * Managing Director * DB Computer Solutions

Limerick Business Complex * Raheen
Business Park* Limerick—Ireland
Phone: +353-61-480-980 Fax: +353-61-225-131

<<mailto:David.Brosnan@dbcomp.ie>> David Brosnan@dbcomp.ie *
<<http://www.dbcomp.ie/>> <http://www.dbcomp.ie/>

MTC-00009474

From: Kathy West Woodward
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:18am

I wish to thank you for your continuing pursuit of a fair settlement for the people and corporations of this country that have, for years, been covertly violated by Bill Gates and Microsoft. His mafia-like tactics, and proclaiming of innocence, as well as his propensity for getting away with most of it, are legendary within the computer industry and obvious to the educated consumer.

Both Mr. Gates and our previous President have had the opportunity to lie, cheat and spiritually mess with this country... maybe there ought to be a "reality show" competition between them to see which one more deserves the "Slick Willie" moniker. :)

Please dont let Microsoft continue their illegal and uncapitalistic practices. Fair competition, without fear of reprisals or blackmail, is what our phenomenal capitalistic system should be based on. Those who don't respect that premise, regardless of how many pockets they line, should be held strongly and surely accountable for thier actions.

Kathy Woodward
dreamskate1107@yahoo.com

MTC-00009475

From: olivier serrano
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:38am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

sir,
the beos operating system was a serious alternative to microsoft. in my opinion, it could be even better. I think the position that has been brought to beos was due to microsoft's monopol. i would like the beos project to come back on worldwide network place of operating systems to bring people possibility to choose between several products. and different ways to use computers.
sincerely
olivier serrano

MTC-00009477

From: Biggy Boy Toddy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:07am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft is clearly a monopoly, and clearly at fault if not directly then indirectly (thru its intimidation) for BeOS and the BeIA failure in the marketplace. I'm for a decision to make Microsoft pay a penalty, not with software or with hardware (used and worthless) but with hard cash, cash as in American dollars. A fund should be set up for the billions it should pay, and that fund should immediately be used to educate the public that users of computer hardware have alternatives. Education to the users is important, and then the funds be distributed to the schools in question who have been educated they have an alternative to choose. Bottomline is this, Microsoft is a monopoly, and it has clearly abused its monopolistic position in the past 10+ years to make substandard software, which has caused billions in damages and made more than enough folks that know better about technology pull their hair out knowing such technology is being lost forever and not marketed because folks are flat out afraid of the Microsoft you folks seem to love (by giving them a settlement that is beyond comprehension, you folks at the DOJ should either be fired, or slapped around with a wet trout).

Best wishes

MTC-00009478

From: Don Bowler
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:24am
Subject: Give it a break

Out here in the real world the public considers the entire government case against Microsoft to be a sham.

It's time to stop. Go find some real criminals and stop wasting my money.

Don
Donald E Bowler
1090 Forbes Street
Fredericksburg, Va. 22405
Don@Bowler-Va.com

MTC-00009479

From: Rick Friedman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:43am
Subject: Microsoft Case
Justice Department

Stop the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse.

The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to consumers. With government out of the business of stifling progress and tying the hands of corporations, consumers—rather than bureaucrats and judges—will once again pick the winners and losers on Wall Street. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products and technologies.

Despite the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors, the federal government and nine states finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. This settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

Rick Friedman
104 Charlemagne Circle
Harvest, AL 35749

MTC-00009480

From: Tony Davis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:44am
Subject: Comment
Good morning

I am chief geek of my enterprise. As system administrator I have considerable freedom to do what I wish but the requirement to relate to Microsoft using clients, who produce for example .doc files, means that we have to own use Microsoft products. I have asked for information about file structures but am told it is proprietary information.

For some of my clients, we go to considerable lengths to allow them to reproduce material in non Microsoft format. Why? The suggestion is that Microsoft will move to annual licensing. Should they do that and, for whatever reason, my client choose not to continue to purchase these licences all their intellectual property held in Microsoft proprietary file formats will become inaccessible to them. Please require Microsoft to release the structure of their data forms so that users of other software may import their files.

Please insist that Microsoft take no action which will deny any user of their software continuing free access to that user's intellectual property.

Tony Davis
DAVIS INTERNET CONSULTING

MTC-00009481

From: Sam Sheterom
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:49am
Subject: Microsoft

It is time for the Justice Department to end this witch hunt against Microsoft. Free Enterprise works if the government will let it. Former president Clinton was against Free Enterprise and therefore sent his lap dog Janet Reno to attack Microsoft. Why? Because they were successful? Because they were innovative? No because they were the number one in software. The competitors whined and cried to Clinton and he said "Oh, how awful, you're not the best so I'll attack the best and break them up. that way the not so goods can be bigger." (Not an exact quote).

It's time to stop! To put everything to bed and leave well enough alone. Let free enterprise work the way it's supposed to. The cream always floats to the top.

Respectfully
Samuel G. Sheterom, Jr.

MTC-00009482

From: Velma
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:54am
Subject: Microsoft Lawsuit

I believe the government should keep it's hands out of the Microsoft situation. If other companies don't like the way Microsoft is selling so well in the market place, they should invent another system that is better. . . isn't that the American way??? The government should drop any and all lawsuits against Microsoft.

Velma A. Moore

MTC-00009483

From: rkeller3@csc.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:56am
Subject: Microsoft Case

You need to get off the back of Microsoft. Microsoft has provided us with standardization which has increased the productivity in application writing, as well as, the use off OS and office components. Every corp., including the government has benefited.

Besides, I observe prejudice. Why are you not equally concerned about the harmful internet, media monopolioies ie. AOL and COMSAT? In my opinion, they exist only to be damaging.

MTC-00009484

From: Alex Burkhart
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:58am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Alex H. Burkhart
6607 Northshore Dr.
Knoxville, TN 37919
January 7, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

The intention of this letter is for me to go on record as being a supporter of the settlement that brought an end to the antitrust lawsuit between the Department of Justice and the Microsoft Corporation. The lawsuit dragged on for three years, and now that it is over, the economy has a chance to get back to where it used to be.

The economic downturn actually started when the suit against Microsoft was announced, and now the United States is in a recession. I cannot understand how the government missed the fact that the suit against Microsoft was actually detrimental to the economy. However, all of that is behind us now, and we must focus on getting back to where we used to be. The settlement is good for competition and the economy, and we must push forward.

Thank you for your time, and again, I am going on record as supporting the settlement between Microsoft and the Department of Justice.

Sincerely,
Alex Burkhart

MTC-00009485

From: Milo—Valencic@fpl.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:05am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Let's get on with the real world and finish this waste of taxpayers—mine—dollars.

Complete this phony anti trust farse.
Milo valencic

MTC-00009486

From: joel lewis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:19am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a taxpayer and a citizen of this great nation, I urge you to agree to the settlement with Microsoft and end this abuse of the Anti-Trust Act by the Justice Department.

Sincerely,
Joel Lewis

MTC-00009487

From: Ingo Stainer
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 7:25am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To the Anti Trust Division of the Department of Justice

Let me just mention a statement from the settlement itself: "Following a 7-day trial in late 1998 and early 1999, the United States District Court found that Microsoft had violated both sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. On appeal, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia unanimously affirmed portions of the district court's finding and conclusion that Microsoft illegally maintained its operating system monopoly in violation of section 2 of the Sherman Act, but reversed and remanded other portions of the district court's determinations. Specifically, the court of appeals reversed the district court's determination that Microsoft violated section 2 by illegally attempting to monopolize the Internet browser market and remanded the district court's determination that Microsoft violated section 1 of the Sherman Act by unlawfully tying its browser to its operating system."

That means Microsoft found guilty in illegally maintaining its monopoly. With the settlement agreement Microsoft would be allowed to further on maintain this monopoly.

That would bind the whole Operating System and Internet development to Microsoft.

And that would result into the well known development speed of selling a release, releasing some bug fixes, selling a new version (with some new features and even more bugs), releasing bug fixes again and then starting all over again.

Microsoft is not interested in putting more effort to improve its product but in selling more software at high prices with low reliability. And the reason why they can do that is that they have the OS monopoly. Probably you are wondering why I say so and still use Microsoft. The reason is that our company sells solutions of third party software developers who only provide support for Microsoft Operating Systems due to the monopoly they have.

I am trying to avoid Microsoft Software in many cases because of its low reliability and incalculability. Being a System Administrator for Windows and Unix I know what I am talking about.

Agreeing to this settlement would be a big win for Microsoft and its lawyers but would mean great loss for all Computer users. This is my personal statement and does in no way reflect any company opinion.

Best regards
 Ingo Stainer
 Jambou
 (+49 (89) 410 738—82, mobile: ++49 (0) 179 510 38 99
 mailto:ingo.stainer@jambou.com Visit our WebSite: http://www.jambou.com

MTC-00009488

From: The Dour Celt
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 7:38am

Subject: Microsoft Anti-trust Case

Let's drop the charade perpetuated by Bill Clinton and Janet Reno that successful businesses must be engaging in unfair business practices. Microsoft has no more a monopoly in software than IBM had in desktop computers. When someone comes along with something better, the consumer will buy it.

Arthur McGinley
 mcginley@chartertn.net

MTC-00009489

From: Barbara Tomek
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 7:34am
 Subject: Microsoft

I think it is time to end the abuses of the Clinton administration and time to quit wasting the taxpayers money on Microsoft. It does not make sense to punish a company for being good and being able to capture most of the market.

Thank you, Barbara Tomek

MTC-00009490

From: Duane Erlandson
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 7:57am
 Subject: Settlement

I support the Microsoft settlement that has been proposed—please do not waste any more time and money going after a company that is not causing harm.

Thank you.

MTC-00009491

From: adinardi
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 8:04am
 Subject: please wake up

Get off the stick and let the company that had more to do with advancing technology do business their own way. If you had some sense you would tell would be entrepreneurs to follow Microsoft's lead. Truly this is what America can offer you if you develop a product so good that people DO NOT want anything less. Yet you stifle the best to prove some juvenile point.

A DiNardi
 East Haddam CT

MTC-00009492

From: Hasenbein George-G14197
 To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/8/02 8:22am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Please end the Clinton-era misuse of the Anti-Trust laws. Let real competition settle the issue.

Sincerely,
 George H. Hasenbein

MTC-00009493

From: Eric Kassan
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 8:24am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement To whom it may concern,

I believe the proposed federal settlement is excessive and I am more than appalled that my state, California, claims more damages are in order. My state's attorney general and the Department of Justice to a lesser extent are NOT acting on my behalf or in my best interest or the interest of the citizens of the United States by attacking the company most responsible for the solid economy of the 1990s. It is not a coincidence that the economic downturn and the initial judgment occurred near the same time.

Thank you.
 Eric Kassan
 Woodland Hills, CA

MTC-00009494

From: Brandyrd@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 8:28am
 Subject: trial

BILL GATES SHOULD BE GIVEN A TRIAL DELAY!

MTC-00009495

From: KGRRS@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 8:30am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am a consumer of computer hardware and software products, both as a retail home user, and as owner and operator of an $18,000,000 per year information technology services consulting company. My viewpoint encompasses both personal and business aspects, and it is that my government should settle this lawsuit immediately, without further harassment of Microsoft, on these grounds.

1. I remember when there was no real market leader in this area and there was rampant, costly, unproductive competition. Companies and consumers wasted much money on products that were incompatible, inefficient, poorly produced and all too often short lived. Microsoft's technical and market leadership has produced an orderly market, where users of this technology can invest with the certainty that the product and vendor will be there tomorrow, and that this investment will not be wasted. Yet there is still room for true invention, as new products are still produced, even today. LINUX software is an example.

2. This entire litigation has roots in the political process. In the pre-'96 national election process, Bill Clinton went to Silicon Valley to raise funds for the his reelection and his Democratic party. The largest contributors were the Barksdales and Ellisons (Netscape and Oracle) of the technology world, the biggest complainers about and competitors to Microsoft. Lo and behold, shortly after he raised millions of dollars from them, the United States Department of Justice initiated this lawsuit.

3. At a personal level, I see the United States government using my tax dollars to cripple one of the most successful companies, and entrepreneurs, of our modern times, for very dubious reasons and non-existent benefits to anyone but the trial lawyers and the Silicon Valley moguls. And as an entrepreneur in my own right, albeit a lesser scale than Bill Gates, I see my government's efforts here as a disgusting bullying by lawyers who produce nothing against people who actually produce goods, services and jobs for society.

Kenneth Podd = KGRRS@aol.com

MTC-00009496

From: John Paoloemilio
 To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 8:31am

Subject: Please stop the govt. intrusion on microsoft and any Please stop the govt. intrusion on microsoft and any other co. in the US, let the free market determine the outcome of microsoft.

Thank you
John Paoloemilio

MTC-00009497

From: FRANK MEGOW SR.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:33am
Subject: microsoft farce

Get off microsoft's back the only reason this has gone this far is Bill Gates wouldn't lay down and play dead to the democrats demand for money.

Sgt Frank J. Megow Sr. (retired USA)

MTC-00009498

From: Josephine Cunningham
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:35am
Subject: Picking on Gates

Why doesn't the justice department go after the big monopoly of our government instead of picking on Gates who has done more to keep our economy growing than any fat politician in Washington? Michael Gates has earned every cent that he has. I thought there was some-thing called "Free Enterprise" in this country. I do not begrudge anyone the fruit of their own labor. The government should not be allowed to take anything from any individual (or his corporation) and distribute it to another. By squashing those we deem more successful than ourselves we stifle our own quest for excellence. Let's learn from Gates instead of destroying him.

MTC-00009499

From: MFave64687@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:40am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Gentlemen.

I don't often write to voice my opinion, I guess that I'm just part of the so called "silent majority." But in this case, I'm very happy to report that you, my government did the right thing by settling the Microsoft case. It's not often that I can say this with conviction. Now we can all go back to doing more important things, like finding Osama Bin Laden and finding what really happened with the "Rich" payoff to President Clinton.

Sincerely,
M. V. Favetti
6445 State Rd.
Parma, OH 44134

MTC-00009500

From: tim1holtz@keyconn.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:48am
Subject: get it over with

I am commenting on the Microsoft anti-trust case. Please accept the settlement on the table and end the witchhunt. I can't believe that in America if you build a better product and proceed to whip everybody's butt in the marketplace that you end up in court over it. What kind of message is this sending to would be entrepreneurs in the greatest country in the world? We are not (yet) a socialist country and freedom to make the best products and the most profits must be preserved. End it now. Thank you for accepting my comments.

Sincerely,
Timothy J. Holtz
Altoona, PA

MTC-00009501

From: Bruce H. Uhl
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:50am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To: Justice Department

I am writing to let you know that I support the Microsoft agreement.

It is time to end Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse. The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Consumers will indeed see competition in the marketplace, rather than the courtroom. And the investors who propel our economy can finally breathe a sigh of relief.

Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to consumers. With government out of the business of stifling progress and tying the hands of corporations, consumers—rather than bureaucrats and judges—will once again pick the winners and losers on Wall Street. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products and technologies.

The Microsoft settlement is tough, but reasonable and fair to all parties involved. Consumers overwhelmingly agree that settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy.

Sincerely,
Bruce Uhl
bhuhl@rcn.com

MTC-00009502

From: gary n. hays
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:50am
Subject: microsoft settlement

i support the microsoft settlement. it is time to let the companies and consumers decide on what is best by using the market place rather than the courtroom.

gary n. hays

MTC-00009503

From: Carol—
Madsen@ReadersDigest.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:51am

It is time to end the Clinton-era anti-trust law abuse—I support the It is time to end the Clinton-era anti-trust law abuse—I support the Microsoft settlement. The trial squandered taxpayers' money, was a nuisance to consumers and a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. It is time to end this trial and the wasteful spending accompanying it so the industry and the economy can get back on its feet again. A settlement will be good for consumers, the industry and the economy.

Thank you.

MTC-00009504

From: DON CAMPBELL
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:54am
Subject: MICROSOFT

Can you imagine the price of computer software had Microsoft not had the innovative touch. Did they have a monopoly, probably yes, only after they provided the innovativeness to succeed in product development. They cannot be nearly as bad as big oil after all their mergers. U.S. broke this up once, do they have to again.

Hit Microsoft with a reasonable penalty, get the states' dollar hungry lawyers off their backs and let them do business in a revised way.

DON CAMPBELL

MTC-00009505

From: Schulze, Bob
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 9:02am
Subject: one company for OS-another for apps

The answer is: the company that creates the operating system MUST be separate from those that make the applications for it. Otherwise, the OS can keep changing/shifting on the competitors (making their apps not work as dependably) while catering/designing to the nuances and changes of their own applications.

This has been happening for years and it's only getting worse. AND.....whatever you do, DON'T PUNISH?.. MS BY LETTING THEM FLOOD THE EDUCATION DEPT WITH THEIR OS AND APPS.....to put it politely, that is the complete opposite direction and effect.

Thanks,
Bob
Bob Schulze
Network CAD Specialist
Elcom Services Group
ph: 215-826-6134
fx: 419-793-3814

MTC-00009506

From: Creedy, Rosemary
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 9:02am
Subject: Microsoft judgment

EXCELLENCE AND SECURITY

Excellence and security are what is needed within the IT industry. Microsoft should be restricted because they are not the BEST in all areas. We need to allow free IT growth in a competitive market or we shall all be worse off. Example: There are useful little cars but it would not encourage excellence if they were automatically "included" with a road tax/licence for a vehicle. This would reduce the market share for specialist excellent cars at the top of the range.

Please uphold the court judgment against Microsoft in a manner that will truly stop Microsoft products being forced onto consumers. "Punishing" Microsoft by "allowing" them to donate hundreds of PCs to schools is hardly a way of reducing their encroachment. This method of fining Microsoft should not be allowed. Once their stranglehold is complete they will be free to increase licence fees every year and the world will be held to ransom.

Microsoft has already invaded US government departments and is fast taking over all IT implementations in the UK government. A commercial corporation should not be placed in a position where it can make demands on the governments of countries. There should be a ruling that forces Microsoft to make available the basic code that would allow all docs produced in Microsoft to be used by other software packages. Also Microsoft should not be allowed to build in "planned obsolescence" which forces users into an endless cycle of having to upgrade their software in order to be able to read email attachments from the latest Microsoft product.

What would the motor industry be like if we were forced to upgrade all the electronic components in the car every year in order to be able to continue to use certain major highways?

It could even be said the Microsoft does not sell the goods that it purports to sell as it does not notify the buyer that the full functionality of the product will begin to decrease after about 6 months as it becomes less and less compatible with the newer releases of Microsoft software. If Microsoft did not hold this unacceptable monopoly it would be possible to send older second-hand PC's and software to third world countries for their use. This is not practical when the software becomes obsolete simply because it is no longer compatible with the latest Microsoft offering.

Microsoft is so intent on increasing their market share that they are exposing us to enormous risks from hackers and viruses. Please free us from the tyranny of Microsoft and encourage them to use their considerable resources and expertise to pursue excellence and security. If they are as good as they think they are they should be able to cope with excellent competition and this should serve to spur them on to greater things. Microsoft were found GUILTY — please allow the judgment to be EFFECTIVE in RESTRICTING their monopoly and unacceptable domination of the IT industry.

Rosemary Creedy
Website Administration Officer
Education Department
4th floor
New Town Hall
Wandsworth Borough Council
Wandsworth High Street London
SW18 2PU
tel. 020 8871-8012
rcreedy@wandsworth.gov.uk

MTC-00009507

From: Kumarjit Ray
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:04am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir(s), it is great to know that the DoJ has agreed upon a settlement with Microsoft. I am not only a law student, but have been using Microsoft MSDOS since 1986 on an IBM 8088 PC. I know that all the products are not perfect but Microsoft does come up with excellent programs such as Word 97 and Win 95. It would indeed be an overkill to see the company broken up simply because their OS outsold those of others. My fullest support for Microsoft!!

Kumarjit Ray
Calcutta, India

MTC-00009508

From: DeLoY Denning
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:06am
Subject: End Clinton Witch Hunt

With all due respect, I would like to see the matter with Microsoft settled without further court action.

I am a Microsoft customer and I find the cries of unfair are not justified. I do not use all of the products supplied with Microsoft and feel that choice to use or not use is up to me, not the courts. Other companies package other programs with their packages, do we go after them next.

I am sure that I do not understand all the parts of this lawsuit, but I know that putting business down does not enhance our economy.

Sincerely,
DeLoY Denning

MTC-00009509

From: Alan Jorgensen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:59am
Subject: Give Microsoft hell

I think the consumer will be better served if Microsoft is broken up and Bill Gates goes to jail. Filing an anti-trust law suit against Microsoft is probably the only good thing the Clinton administration did. Of course they fouled that up also. Bill Gates and Microsoft are the same kind of obstacle to progress and free enterprise that Bell telephone was. Maybe worse. Liberty and the consumer are not served when one person or company is able to thwart the development of new technologies that would be good for the consumer. Microsoft is a blatant obstacle to competition and free enterprise. On this issue I strongly disagree with USDOJ.

AWJ
Alan W. Jorgensen
MHTN Architects, Inc.
420 East South Temple, Suite 100
Salt Lake City, Utah 84111
Phone: (801) 595-6700 Fax: (801) 595-6717
www.mhtn.com
alanj@mhtn.com

MTC-00009510

From: barbara hatch
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:08am
Subject: suit

The next thing will be complete Socialism by liberals in that they will redistribute all the wealth in the country because "it's not fair". Well, life's not fair, so get a grip and get on with it. You either survive and thrive, or snooze and loose!!! Leave Microsoft alone! Common sense is not so common.

Voltaire

MTC-00009511

From: Clifton Patrick
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:09am
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust Settlement comments
Sirs:

Please review the findings of fact from this case and I believe therefore that the proposed Microsoft Antitrust Settlement as reported in the media is inadequate!

Microsoft has clearly behaved in an anti-consume and predatory manner. Microsoft has inhibited innovative competition by intimidation and acquisition. Microsoft has a poor historical record on the use of personal information in violation of its own published privacy policies. Microsoft has, by its predatory practices, discouraged investment capital in tech industry.

Microsoft has, by its restrictive OEM licensing practices, has intimidated the OEMs from offering non-Microsoft products preinstalled on new computers. Microsoft has a clear history of co-opting open standards into their proprietary standards. Such as instant messaging, JAVA, XML, etc. I am sure that there are many more examples, but as a layman and not a computer expert, these are the ones that I am aware of. Microsoft has decreased entrepreneurs in tech industry because of their ruthless suppression of competing technologies or businesses that they perceive as a threat.

Microsoft has used subterfuge in the guise of technical hype instead of real unbiased technical merit to attack alternative products. Microsoft has so restricted access to their software details as to make it extremely difficult for non-Microsoft products to interact correctly with Microsoft products. As an example of this, they often change the file format of their programs so that third party products can not read data files of these newer versions, thus compelling consumers to buy more Microsoft's software instead of alternates.

The Microsoft offer to supply products to schools further expands their monopoly in the marketplace. It would be more in the spirit of antitrust to give these schools the cash to spend on the products of their choice without the interference of Microsoft!

Microsoft has not complied with the word and spirit of earlier settlements and this should therefore demand the most strict controls in this settlement to enforce compliance!

Respectfully,
Clifton Patrick
Property & Casualty Insurance
119 Brookside Ave.
Route 17M
Chester, NY 10918
Voice and fax 845-469-7645

MTC-00009512

From: Billie Burns
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:09am
Subject: Microsoft investigation
It's time to end the Microsoft investigation. What a waste of taxpayers' money.
Billie Burns
Williams Brothers Construction Co., Inc.
713-522-9821
fax: 713-520-5247

MTC-00009513

From: Bailey S Kurtz
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:13am
Subject: Lawsuit

Please end this insane lawsuit against Microsoft. Thank God the Clinton's years are over.

Bailey Kurtz
Lexington, KY

MTC-00009514

From: armen.meguerditchian@us.

pwcglobal.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 9:22am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir:

I am writing in support of further resistance to the proposed national settlement. As part of an organization which implements large software packages to corporate desktops, I find we are often in the situation where Microsoft's divergent support of industry standards (or clear refusal, as in the case of Java) cause us to create functional work-arounds to be able to implement software to the clients.

The impact of this is measured in soft dollars, as it entails hundreds of additional man hours to make these products work together. Armen Meguerditchian

Principal Consultant

Note that these are my own views and not necessarily representative of the entire firm.

The information transmitted is intended only for the person or entity to which it is addressed and may contain confidential and/or privileged material. Any review, retransmission, dissemination or other use of, or taking of any action in reliance upon, this information by persons or entities other than the intended recipient is prohibited. If you received this in error, please contact the sender and delete the material from any computer.

MTC-00009516

From: Terry Price

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 9:21am

Subject: Time to Let it Go

Give up on this. Time to let it go. Few have done as much for this country than has Bill Gates. Stop the pandering to those Clinton era attorneys and dump it.

Terry Price
Reading, Pennsylvania

MTC-00009517

From: jdca@capital.net@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 9:21am

Subject: Feedback on Microsoft Anti-Trust Case <Microsoft.atr@usdoj.gov>

To whom it may concern:

First of all let me say I'm glad to see that the DOJ has backed off somewhat on the severity of the penalty phase of this ant-trust trial. However, there are many in the software industry that will complain and raise issues no matter what the outcome. In particular I am talking about the Sun's and Oracles of the world. They are, in my opinion, a bunch of whiners. Consumers have a choice in what OS and what apps they put on their desktop. It just so happens that Sun and Oracle are not preferred products for most home users and many businesses. The suite of applications for hte Windows environment is much, much larger than any of the other OS's because it's the most popular. There is a market in the Windows environment for software developers to create products. Microsoft should not be penalized for this. In addition, as a software developer, Microsoft in no way controls the software development environment for Internet applications. In fact, they are a step behind the Sun's, Oracle's and Unix flavors of the world. One could just as easily build an enterprise on Solaris, Apache and Oracle DBMS applications as it could on Microsoft. A fact that MS realizes ala .NET.

Now that the desktop OS is moving in the direction of just an Internet browser, the playing field is definitely level. If there is to be any punitive damages directed toward Microsoft the focus must be narrowed down to a clear anti-trust issue and not directed at the company as a whole by breaking it up. Breaking the company up is a gross exaggeration of the intent of the anti-trust laws. The anti-trust laws are outdated when it comes to technology and technology companies. What could be considered a monopoly one day may not even exist the next. Just look at Xerox, Apple (as it related to the Apple II), Texas Instruments. All were leaders in their respective industries at one time but are now just minor players in the global industry.

Thanks for taking this feedback.

Sincerely,
Jeff Yates
Albany, NY

MTC-00009518

From: Robert M. Taylor Sr MD

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 9:24am

Subject: Microsoft lawsuit

It appears to be in everyone's interest to settle the Microsoft law suit as quickly as possible. The proposed agreement seems equitable.

MTC-00009519

From: Andrew C. Bairnsfather

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 9:25am

Subject: Conflict of Interest

Conflict of Interest

I don't think you are stupid. On the contrary, but I am still going to try to step through this logically and hopefully not confusingly or insultingly, although I do take a cynical and plodding tone from time to time, please don't take it personally. Thanks. First, a short quote from Steve Ballmer.

From <<http://www.zdnet.com/zdnn/stories/news/0,4586,5100151,00.html?chkpt=zdnnp1tp01>>:

"We went and said, 'Hey, we have some ideas for an all-purpose box, kind of a PC, kind of a video game machine, kind of a set-top box.' You know what they said? They said, 'Get outta Dodge, we're not going to write software for that thing,'" Ballmer said. I believe I know one of the most significant reasons as to why they said that to Mr. Ballmer's face.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST.

Microsoft already writes the operating system. AND they also have grown increasingly in control of many software application markets: word processors, spread sheets, presentation applications, databases, web browsers, and continue to threaten the availability, and usability of many "3rd party" software applications.

Microsoft's control would be nearly total. Third party vendors can write software to Microsoft's X Box API and if they do a good job they can even re-sell some of the code they've written for their own games to other companies to use. This is nothing new I believe. But the problem is when Microsoft takes other people's code and includes it in their system. I don't remember how many years ago it was, but MS did incorporate software for disk compression in their operating system, disk compression software that wasn't theirs. They lost in court, had to pay damages I believe, and had to recall many copies of MS DOS 6 something—I think it was during that version of MS DOS.

Apple also took them to court for stealing parts of QuickTime. Fortunately for Apple, unlike the disk compression incident, the pirated QuickTime code was only in beta copies of the Microsoft software; Microsoft was distributing it, but only to individuals/ organizations writing code (or otherwise joined to them as a developer) for Microsoft's operating systems.

There are three main layers you can think of when dealing with a computer. Even four, but the fourth is created by you.

1. Hardware. Akin to the engine, it's the physical part.

2. Operating System. Provides basic (and advanced ;-) functionality to the applications (windows, menus, buttons, etc...), provides a means to control the hardware (volume, monitor brightness/contrast).

3. Applications. You run these to create and manipulate data.

4. Data you create and/or push around. Since Microsoft has so many operating systems it seems perfectly logical to divide them up in to two companies to divide their conflict of interest: a system software company, and an application vendor. They also have hardware offerings, but I know very little about it. So I don't know what to do with their hardware offerings at this point, to have them go to the OS company or the application company, or have them be their own company if they want. Oh, I left out the part where they also want to own the cable companies that install, and tend the wires to the house from the distribution points. Hmm...I think they already do own a number. And I also shouldn't leave out the part about how they own a broadcasting company it seems, MSNBC. Do I really think I'm going to see objective and continuously fair news items, TV shows, etc... on a station that's owned by Microsoft? No. The content will be influenced. (On a side note I don't believe media outlets should be owned by product vendors.) So let's see, they already own a broadcasting company, they own some cable companies that bring it to your door, they attempted to make a box the cable will connect to, and they write the operating system for the box, and they also write games for the box.

I think even their developers recognized a bad thing when they saw it. Here is the next paragraph of the article where Steve says the Xbox is just the start. "We came back a year later and we said OK, we're going to start by doing the world's greatest video game machine, and they said OK, let's talk," Ballmer said.

The last paragraph:

"We know we have to succeed, but there is a broader concept there that we will pursue at some point," Ballmer said. "You can say, is it the end of the road or is there a bigger play? And the answer is yeah, there's a bigger play we hope to get over time." Proverbs 20:5, "The purposes of a man's heart are deep waters" (Disclaimer: Am I saying Apple should be immune to being "broken up"? No, at some point it could become necessary to divide Apple along the aforementioned logical parts (hardware, operating system, applications) but Apple is hardly an economic threat to the same number of companies that Microsoft is now.

I saw a commercial when I lived in Alabama. It was a commercial for Microsoft in general, not a product spot light, but just a "warm fuzzy" commercial touting their good deeds in education and such. However they, didn't show many, if any at all, computers running any of their operating systems. They showed Apple hardware and the Macintosh operating system. The advertisement even focused in on children using the computer and interacting with a panoramic photograph of a scene, using QuickTime. They were already caught once stealing actual lines of code from QuickTime and here they are confusing the audience in to believing the panorama was being viewed on a Microsoft operating system. The irony is that you can view a QuickTime panorama on Microsoft operating systems, but that's thanks to Apple writing that software, not thanks to Microsoft as the advertisement incorrectly displays.)

I believe my small business in Alabama where I tried to establish myself taking panoramic photographs was impacted negatively by Microsoft. Fortunately for me I now work for a company where I can take panoramic photographs. But I am upset at the thought of Microsoft using its monopoly in operating systems and applications to intimidate and influence hardware manufacturers to perpetuate Microsoft's operating system AND application monopolies. In other words Microsoft can influence hardware vendors not to include QuickTime on the hardware they ship. Apple is not going to go so low as to write software that intentionally crashes, slows down, or wrecks other havoc on the system (MS Word 6 ahem). I guess I'm tired of ranting now. But I still continue to be amazed at the number of people who don't see that there is a huge conflict of interest in the places Microsoft has extended its reaches, and their self-avowed eagerness to pursue it even more.

MTC-00009520

From: Kevin Ramos-Glew
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:31am
Subject: Microsoft

MICROSOFT is great
Leave them alone! It's survival of the fittest.

Bill Gates is helping to bring technology to inner-city classrooms.

Find another cause.

Kevin

MTC-00009521

From: Christian Klein
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have been unable to locate information regarding the actual penalties Microsoft is being levied. I have heard through the media, that Microsoft will "pay" a penalty by donating software and equipment to schools. Assuming this is the case, this would not actually penalize Microsoft, but would allow them to create a market for their products where one does not currently exist. This market has been one of Apple's few competitive arenas with Microsoft. When updates to "donated" products become available, Microsoft will easily recoup any expenses incurred. Since their initial donation cost will be significantly lower than the sale price of the products, their actual penalty would be lower, allowing them to move into a new market and make a profit in quick time, while appearing to be either coming clean or even generous.

Again, assuming this is the case, I would encourage the DOJ to consider a penalty that would actually penalize the company. Microsoft could be required to provide equipment specified by the school, without regard to the manufacturer. Alternately, Microsoft could be required to provide free software and updates for all products to schools in perpetuity. I don't want to see the DOJ softening and letting Microsoft dictate the terms of their own penalty.

I have been appalled at Microsoft's conduct, and I ask that they be held accountable.

Sincerely,
Christian Klein

MTC-00009522

From: Delores Stafford
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft

I respectfully ask that an end be put to the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse on the Microsoft case.

Delores S. Stafford

MTC-00009523

From: David Cooper
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

Sirs: I am in favor of approval of the Microsoft settlement.

David Cooper
Mullica Hill, NJ

MTC-00009524

From: Jeffrey Houchins
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust

Greetings,

While admittedly I am no great fan of Microsoft, I believe a free market economy depends on government staying out of the picture as much as possible. As a consumer I believe Microsoft has the right to bundle their products however they see fit. Let the market decide these matters. This situation reminds me a bit of Wal-Mart going into a rural community and putting all the Ma and Pa stores out of business. There are both good and bad effects to this, but a free market economy depends on freedom. Ultimately, me the consumer decides where to spend my money.

Here is my tale of Microsoft bundling causing me to change from Netscape Navigator to Windows Internet Explorer (IE). My first computer had Navigator on it and I loved it and resisted switching to IE simply because I was used to Netscape and had no reason to change. That is until I bought a microsoft game that required Windows to be the default browser if I wanted to play the game over the internet.

Although I went kicking and screaming, I had no choice but to switch over to Windows IE. Now that I am used to Windows IE I like it just fine. Netscape never made any games, or contributed in any other way to my internet usage. Microsoft has, and I believe that gives them the right to flex their free market muscles from time to time.

Netscape is a fine product, but if they plan on competing with the big boys they will have to depend on innovation and imagination, rather than turning to sniveling and whining to big brother to fight their battles for them. Government interference should be kept to a minimum, not only in this matter, but in all matters. Freedom depends on it.

Jeffrey J Houchins MPLS MN

MTC-00009525

From: Chris Reade
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov
';attorney.general(a)po...
Date: 1/8/02 9:33am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To Whom It May Concern:

As a partner in a technology consulting firm I work with the Microsoft products every day. And as a professional in the field I must urge you do more in this settlement. I beleive that Microsoft is a mean-spirited company whose only interest in the consumer's welfare is how much money can be extracted from them.

Given that Microsoft made a mockery of their previous consent decree and is likely to do the same with any conduct remedy I would like to register my support for the following settlement: Force the company to reveal the entire source-code for every release of the operating system. This may sound like a weak penalty, but I think you would find that it is the harshest penalty short of breaking the company up.

Although the company makes a great deal of money from Office and other products, Windows is the core that makes it all tick. It is my belief (and I am in no sense alone here) that Microsoft has code inside of Windows that favors the company's products and enables its programmers to leverage the system to the company's benefit. Further, I beleive that many other trust infractions would be uncovered if the operating system was released open-source. Additionally, it would truly make it possible for third parties to write future software on parity with the company's own software.

Given that conduct remedies are not likely to succeed and that breakup is not on the table, I believe that licensing the source code would have the greatest effect.

Sincerely,
Christopher Reade Partner
Carrollton Technology Parters
New Orleans—New York—Washington DC
creade@ctpllc.com
<mailto:creade@ctpllc.com> office: 504-897-3429 cell: 504-616-5589 www.ctpllc.com <http://www.ctpllc.com/>

MTC-00009526

From: Frank Lawrence
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:40am
Subject: J. RENO'S BLUNDER

Let's stop using taxpayers money on stupid deals like this, get back within the constitution, and go after criminals, not businesses trying to make a living for its employees, and a profit for its shareholders. Drop this suit, and get on with good gov't business.

signed by antique frank—they don't make them this good anymore!

MTC-00009527

From: ALSBERG4@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:40am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I don't believe Microsoft has significantly hurt consumers and support the settlement that the DOJ has reached to resolve the litigation.

Sincerely
Eric Alsberg
1430 Voltz Road
Northbrook, Illinois

MTC-00009528

From: Jane Pehl
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:47am
Subject: Microsoft

It is time to end the tyranny of the Clinton years! Get out of the life of American business and taxpayers!! Why are you not prosecuting true criminals like the Clintons and their accomplices during their eight year crimes spree?

Jane Pehl
San Antonio, Texas

MTC-00009529

From: Glenda Bowen
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:42am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support an end to the Microsoft Settlement. It is (in my opinion) an extreme waste of our tax dollars. I firmly believe that there is enough competition in the marketplace. People use Microsoft because it is their choice.

Thank you,
Glenda Bowen
198 Fanning Bridge Road
Fletcher, NC 28732
d.bowen@mindspring.com

MTC-00009530

From: PorterM@gtlaw.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:43am

I want to end Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse

MTC-00009531

From: MClay70545@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:46am
Subject: anti-trust

Gentlemen, Good morning from Dayton Ohio. I am writing with regard to Bill Clintons anti trust laws he so valiantly defended on good conservative business like Bill Gate at Micro soft. The Liberal Democrats seem to dislike any one or any corporate successes they dont like any one or any bussinesses being successful and getting ahead in life unless its them. Leave the good companies alone let them function under the free enterprize of our great country, dont let the socialist Democrats keep ruining our lives. Thank you for you time. Merrill Clay a concerned American afraid of what Liberal Democrats are doing. Only you people can stop them

MTC-00009532

From: Joan Dambra
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:46am
Subject: MICROSOFT
DEAR GOVERNMENT.
PLEASEJust leave this wonderful company ALONE.
JOAN DAMBRA....

MTC-00009533

From: Michael Frawley
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:49am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:
Please know that I am very dissapointed with the settlement the US Government has reached with Microsoft. As far as I'm concerned, the corporate structure (Bundled OS & Applications) that allowed Microsoft to stifle and eliminate competition is still in place. Where is Netscape these days anyway? Do you see anyone using that browser anymore? Their attorneys must be laughing a slapping backs over this one. If you had any MBA compare the remedies that are to be imposed versus continued monopolistic behavior, I can assure you that the latter is the better financial alternative.

We are talking about a company that currently sits on over $35 billion in cash. Compare that to your remedies. Any small company that wishes to provide PC software applications that compete in anyway with a Microsoft product had better think again. As a casual observer with no ties to the high tech or software industry, I have been alarmed at the predatory practices of Microsoft. It continues to this day. Just try to use a competing application on your PC. You should check out Windows XP and see the contempt they have for you. As a capitalist I admire Microsoft's aggressive and competitive tactics. As an entrepenuer, I am disheartened at the closed opportunities that will lead to the absence of software innovation.

I hope the nine states that are standing firm can help you remember the reasons why the suit was brought in the first place.

Regards,
Michael Frawley

MTC-00009534

From: Tony B
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:51am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support the settlement worked out between Microsoft, the Federal Government and the states aligned with the government in the anti trust suit. The settlement is good for consumers and the economy and should be approved as written. Moreover, the judge in the case, should pressure the remaining states to accept the settlement terms since the terms maintain competition in the marketplace, encourage innovation, and provide consumers with software choices at some of the most competitive (cheap) prices in the history of our nation. Moreover, the handful of states that are still pressing the anti-trust case are needlessly wasting taxpayer dollars and are engaged in a politically motivated vendata that has no benefit for consumers—their actions only benefit a handful of disgruntled Microsoft competitors who have not been able to effectively compete in the marketplace because of their poor strategies and inferior, overpriced products.

Thank you for listening to a happy consumer!

Sincerely,
Tony Bray

MTC-00009535

From: Michael Urbaldi
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:56am
Subject: A Lesson in Laissez-Faire

Having received notice that the DOJ is accepting public comments regarding the Microsoft antitrust situation, I decided to pass along an op-ed I recently ran in a local newsletter.

Impatient creatures we are, we're best off remembering that faith in time-honored institutions will straighten out even the most undesirable situations. Take the free market and personal computing, for instance. There are those of us who use Macintosh. There are those of us who use PC's with a Microsoft Windows operating system (OS). And then there are those of us who use Windows and are not satisfied.

Few PC-based alternatives exist, however, as Microsoft controls over 90% of the PC OS market. The major obstacle preventing a serious challenger to Windows is compatibility. Here's the tidy little paradox: nearly all applications for PC's are coded for Windows; users are unwilling to sacrifice their tools for another OS and decide to stay with Windows; vendors, unable to waste precious capital, cannot design for an OS that no one will use; alternate OS's are left with no programs with which to compete. So nearly all applications (and PC users) stick with Windows. The Clinton Justice Department saw in this an antitrust violation and resolved to gouge a rent in Microsoft for ?competition? to enter. Up went the circus tents, in paraded the subpoenas and the biased rulings?thankfully, the Bush administration put an end to this nonsense. Down went the circus tents.

Last October, news media were alerted to a new PC operating system called LindowsOS. Unlike any other alternative OS, it will attempt to be compatible with all Windows programs. Appealing to small businesses, it hopes to capitalize on Windows dissatisfaction. A prototype will be marketed to the public by the second quarter of 2002 (<http://www.lindows.com>). As any other enterprise in a free market, Microsoft is vulnerable to perceived negligence; LindowsOS and other spoilers like it will either win PC users over with superior services or else give Microsoft good reasons to reach out to consumers. All this without Washington, D. C.'s meddling. It's overdue vindication for those who know that the best way to solve a simple market problem is to leave the darn thing alone.

(c) Copyright Michael Ubaldi, All Rights Reserved.

Michael Ubaldi

MTC-00009536

From: David Graham
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:03am
Subject: Microsoft Suit

Dear overpaid Nazi bureaucrats:

Time to lay off Microsoft and go after the real criminals: Hillary, Bill and all of their theiving, traitorous ilk that started this unnecessary lawsuit in the first place. While you're at it, it is time to scrap the "P.A.T.R.I.O.T." assault on our civil rights. Your disregard of the Bill of Rights is far more of a threat to America than all the terrorists in the world. You can also tell Attorney General Ashcroft I'm sorry I ever supported him. It's a pity his Senate opponent died and he survived.

A most dissatisfied customer,
David Graham
1625 Walnut Ave.
Grand Junction, CO 81501

MTC-00009537

From: Mark Leary
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:58am
Subject: MS settlement

Please settle this matter, further litigation is just a waste of taxpayers money and besides is this not what we as Americans is all about FREEDOM to innovate.

Leave Microsoft alone! They have done so much good for the industry.

Mark J. Leary

MTC-00009538

From: Joyce Nymeyer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:04am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support the Microsoft Settlement.

I want to end the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse.

Marlene Nymeyer
25508 South Klemme
Crete, Illinois 60417
joyce@nymeyer.com

MTC-00009539

From: Damstar1@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:08am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. The Microsoft trial squandered taxpayers' dollars, was a nuisance to consumers, and was a serious deterrent to investors in the high-tech industry. I as a consumer have the right to choose what I want to buy. And I will choose Microsoft products every time. They are superior to their competitors. These competitors should quite their belly aching about Bill Gates and his products. They should get off their dead butts and invent a better product if they want their share of the money. That is the American way. Not crying to government to bring a company down to their inferior level. Thank God that didn't happen with Thomas Edison, Henry Ford, Dodge brothers and all the other great entrepreneurs of America or we would be no better than the third world countries.

Sincerely,
Denise Morningstar
1019 S Division St
Whitehall, MI 49461-1701
email.Damstar1@aol.com

MTC-00009540

From: Dorothy Wagner
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:11am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir or Madam:

I want to register my support for the Microsoft settlement. I believe it is in the best interest of me, the industry and the American economy.

Thank you,
Dorothy Wagner
465 Beach 133rd St.
Belle Harbor, NY 11694

MTC-00009541

From: Arnold Davis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:18am
Subject: Microsoft

Gentlemen, can we please stop this anti-business, anti-entrepreneurship, anti-anybody getting too far ahead of the masses in this country? It seems to me that our country has been on the slippery slope toward socialism for too long now. It's time to reaffirm that ours is a country of opportunity for all those who are willing to work to reap the benefits of our freedom. Let's stop discouraging Americans to excel by punishing them by taking from their hard-earned gains and redistributing to those with less initiative and drive. Microsoft is an American company providing thousands of good jobs and contributing greatly to our nation's economy. Sure they are competitive. They continue to improve and expand their product line and do it in a way that serves their customers well and favors the wider use of their product line. Why is this a no-no? Can't their competitors do the same? Who's holding them back? Customers have a choice. Microsoft is not shutting others out of the business. I am tired of the whining competitors who seek the governments' help in their attempts to limit Microsoft's marketing initiatives. If they can't win share from Microsoft on their own, then don't we have the best company with the best products and service out front?

Isn't that the way it's supposed to be in the land of opportunity?

Arnold Davis
Louisville, TN 37777

MTC-00009542

From: Charles Wood
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:33am
Subject: Microsoft Case

Please end this trial and the wasteful spending of our tax dollars. This company did nothing but follow the rules set up by our government and it is being penalized for it. Get the government out of the way of companies that make this country work. Bureaucrats and the courts have no business in this case. Let the competitive nature of this business be the determining factor whether they succeed or fail.

Sincerely,
Charles Wood
2886 Ravenwood Drive
Snellville, GA 30078
770-972-2048
chckwd@bellsouth.net

MTC-00009543

From: JennFrankD@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:38am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Your Honor,

As a computer user and lover of technology since the early eighties, I feel compelled to weigh in regarding the recent 'settlement' between Microsoft and the DOJ.

I've used computers since the first Xerox Star, Apple Lisa, and DOS based PC's (before Windows). I also worked for New England Telephone/NYNEX/Bell Atlantic/Verizon until July of this year in our Technology Center in Framingham, MA. This allowed me to see almost every kind of consumer computer available. I was and I am an avid reader of technology magazines and websites. I can distinctly remember in the early nineties, reading about Microsoft's tactics in establishing their monopoly. I wondered even then, how they were getting away with 'borrowing' Apple's look and feel and making exclusionary contracts with OEM's. Through the years, as I read about how they sabotaged DR-DOS, lied to customers about the ability of their software, produced false evidence in their trials, etc. I began to actually hate Microsoft and its executive board.

Since I was in charge of the Macintosh LAN at work, I was able to see firsthand how the Macs were never in need of consistent software patches or prone to the multitude of problems my PC counterpart encountered. It once took 3 technicians and four days of telephone support from Microsoft to get one PC to print properly. I just couldn't believe how any company got anything done using PC computers!!

Because of MS' thumbing of their nose at our free market economy and antitrust laws, we have become a country of billions of dollars of lost production due to their software which is so unsecure and virus supporting that even the F.B.I. has to investigate it. This is ludicrous when one realizes that there are other options. Unfortunately, even after Windows XP was shown to be the most unsecure OS ever built, MS' stock went up. Why? Because they are such an entrenched monopoly that no company can afford to even think of using an alternative.

MS has so much money they were able to back two bidders in the auction for AT&T's cable business. No company should have that kind of power. I beg of you to stop Microsoft. They should have been broken up into three pieces; one that makes the OS, one that makes the applications like Office, and a browser company. The applications company would have definitely kept making Office for the Macintosh and would've loved to make a version for LINUX. (today, we have the AG's trying to force Microsoft to do what any other competitive company would normally do).

The browser company would have to compete with Netscape for business. The OS company would be forced to build better quality in their OS or else the app developers would build their apps for the most stable platform, which is UNIX based platforms like Mac and LINUX. Read the message forums at ZDnet.com. Even Wintel users are wary of Microsoft's power and this whole PASSPORT, HAILSTORM, .NET initiative that will let Microsoft put their tentacles into every single aspect of our daily lives.

You have the power to literally change and save the world of computing. I beg of you, please dish out the punishment a convicted, predatory, monopolist deserves. Break them up and let other, truly innovative companies rise to the top. You will be doing a great service to people like me who for ten years has seen the world of computing, which I love, languish and be held captive to the beast from Redmond.

Thank you for taking the time to read this letter.

Sincerely,
Frank D'Angeli
57 Pinkert Street
Medford, MA 02155
781 396-5815
jennfrankd@aol.com

MTC-00009544

From: Gerry De Cave
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:37am
Subject: Clinton-era anti-trust law abuse

Please stop squandering taxpayer's money in your pursuit of Microsoft. Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to the consumer. The government should not be stifling progress and tying the hands of corporations. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products.

Disgustedly,
Gerry De Cave

MTC-00009545

From: Breton, Mark
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'

Date: 1/8/02 10:47am

Subject: I would like to see the case against Microsoft dropped, and for someone to I would like to see the case against Microsoft dropped, and for someone to put a stop to all the money being wasted in that proceeding.

Mark Breton
204 Hillcrest dr
Gallatin TN 37066

MTC-00009546

From: Pearson, Conrad
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 10:50am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As both a consumer and an IT Professional I have been against the antitrust action against Microsoft from the beginning. In the years that I have been using Microsoft operating systems, starting with MS-DOS 1.1, I have seen the cost of the software come down while the functionality has been greatly enhanced. There is another important consideration as well: standardization. Had I chosen to write this using MS-Word and send it to you as an attachment there is an 86% chance that you would be able to merely open it and read it. This was not the case 10 years ago, and it is because of Microsoft's clout in the industry that this wonderful standardization has taken place.

As a consumer, and as an IT Professional, I have alternative choices in the operating system and application software that I use and/or deploy and I have, in some cases, chosen the alternatives. For the most part, the Microsoft solutions are the best value. The antitrust action against Microsoft is not, in my opinion, in the interest of the consumer, is not in the interest of business in general, and is not in the interest of the computer industry. Perhaps from a standpoint of technical merit Microsoft is guilty, but if you consider the original purpose of existing antitrust laws I do not believe in Microsoft's guilt.

I believe that the role of the DOJ should be to insure that competition remains, but in doing so Microsoft should remain intact and it's history of innovation should not be constrained in any manner.

Conrad Pearson
Manager, Information Systems
Excellon Automation
phone: +1-310-534-6436
fax: +1-310-534-6777

MTC-00009547

From: Debbie Davis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:53am
Subject: Microsoft Lawsuit

The only thing accomplished by the lawsuit brought against Microsoft, is the hurting of the tech industry. The only reason 9 states are continuing the lawsuit is because the 9 states are in financial trouble, and I look at the lawsuits as blackmail. Please stop this. Noone is bringing these lawsuits in my name or to help me. All it has done is make me sure that I will NEVER buy anything from the companies that helped bring the lawsuits.

Debbie Davis
Dixon, CA

MTC-00009548

From: Ronald Stone

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 10:53am
Subject: microsoft settlement
Please leave Microsoft alone and let the free market prevail.
Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Stone
N12356 Copenhaver Avenue
Stanley, Wisconsin 54768

MTC-00009549

From: ChuckHlehl@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:58am
Subject: microsoft settlement
I think that the Microsoft settlement is fair and just,

MTC-00009550

From: Gerald Rosenberg
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:59am
Subject: USAGRosenberg—Gerald—1035—0103

Gerald Rosenberg
3530 Mystic Pointe Drive, # 2115
Aventura, FL 33180-4541
January 7, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am writing you to voice my opinion in regards to the Microsoft settlement issue. I support the settlement that was reached on November 6th. I feel that this settlement is fair and reasonable, and I am relieved that this issue is resolved.

Due to this settlement, Microsoft has pledged to share more information with other information tech companies, Microsoft will follow procedures to make it easier to install non-Microsoft software and will disclose information about software codes in order to do this, and a Technical Committee (TC) will enforce the provisions at Microsoft's expense.

This settlement will make it easier to compete with Microsoft. I have been a user of Windows since the inception. From a personal standpoint, I want to say that no supplier of software to the computer gives better support to their customers. If you read the on line responses from users around the country you would see that the vast majority of negative comment about Microsoft only comes from their competition. Any one that offers a better program will capture the market. Let me enjoy my computer in peace and let Microsoft be there for me and others.

Sincerely,
Gerald Rosenberg

MTC-00009551

From: Jim Horn
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:57am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

We support the expeditious settlement of the Microsoft case. It is time to STOP the Clinton ERA anti-trust process that stifles fair competition.

James and Christina Horn jfhorn@innernet.net

MTC-00009552

From: Ted Burgess
To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 10:59am

Subject: Microsoft settlement

I think it is time to end this Clinton era bashing. Lets stop this effort to hurt successful business enterprises.

Ted Burgess

MTC-00009554

From: Rose Marie Lavelle

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:07am

Subject: for all the people, not the few

Let us move on with the things of today and not the pass, end it now!

ROBERT M.LAVELLE
122 WHISPERING PINE DR.
PALM COAST FL. 32164

MTC-00009555

From: Mary Smith

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'

Date: 1/8/02 11:10am

Subject: Microsoft settlement...

I just wanted to ask for a speedy resolution to this settlement. I think that the agreeable compromise that Microsoft is willing to uphold and embraced by 9 states needs to be put through.

I believe in free enterprise, I am discouraged that those who are less innovative are able to take from those freely who are innovative and wise in business...

Get big government out of free enterprise....

Free enterprise works... We the people love Microsoft (#1 software) in the world... why???

Because of Microsoft's strong arm tactics?

NO, but because it's user friendly, excellent products, what the world is using, excellent technical support and excellent interface capabilities.... It's too bad that we live in a nation where those who don't want to work so hard and aren't as visionary are able to whine and complain and hinder the work of those really great inventors who do work hard and come up with great ideas, great products, great results. It's time to tell the whiners to get a life... If they can't cut the mustard, get out of the kitchen... They and our Government are directly responsible for the downturn that the economy has seen in the technology industry.... It really makes one want to jump right in and invent something wonderful when those who are mediocre can jump in and tear down the best that there is...

Shame on you!

MTC-00009556

From: russell—ivey@att.net@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:13am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am an electrical and computer systems engineer who would like to comment on the ruling against Microsoft. I believe it is in the best interest of the consumer and the computer industry if Microsoft be prohibited from retaliating against an OEM if that OEM provides software on their machine which competes against Microsoft, or if the OEM provides a dual boot system.

I should like to mention a specific case as an example. The BeOS, created by former

Apple employees among others, represents a substantial leap in OS technology, but has been unsuccessful in the commercial market, largely due to the lack of machines offered with BeOS as a native OS or dual boot alternative. BeOS is currently used in computers which are not personal computers, but commercial systems which allow editing of audio and video, and in many cases is the choice of professionals for multimedia work, choosing to write their own software for BeOS rather than use existing software and Microsoft Windows. BeOS has been bought by Palm, Inc. and dissolved, due to it's lack of market success, which I feel is directly related to the policies of Microsoft which kept BeOS from being offered side by side with Windows on PC's.

Please take into consideration the effect of Microsoft on BeOS in your decision. Thank you for your thoughtful diligence in this case.

Russell Ivey

MTC-00009557

From: Cabins519@cs.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:13am

Subject: Settlement

Quit the politics and let all of us move on with life, liberty and a bit of business sense.

MTC-00009558

From: noel harris

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:17am

Please leave Microsoft alone and go after real criminals, the worst of which are elected officials and their underlings.

Noel Harris

MTC-00009559

From: Scald Master

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:16am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

1) MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code licence or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

2) The Win32 API needs to be available so that BeWine can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

3) The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

4) The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS in the past.

"God is real, unless declared integer."

Eu apoio a candidatura de Cthulhu a presidencia! Junte-se a campanha! <http://www.cthulhu.org> Parkinson's Fourth Law:

The number of people in any working group tends to increase regardless of the amount of work to be done.

MTC-00009560

From: Gen LaGreca

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:25am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe that the anti-trust laws are non-objective and unconstitutional. Only coercion can cause a monopoly to form, which means only firms that are run and/or supported by the government can forcibly restrict competition from entering a field and be monopolies (e.g., the US Postal Service, the medallion cabs in New York City). We would not even have a computer industry if it weren't for Microsoft. The government has no means to give us a computer industry, but it thinks it has the power to suppress firms in it at will. I say laissez-faire, leave it alone! Leave Microsoft alone and stop persecuting big business.

Businessmen have a right to life, liberty and property, too, without being regulated out of existence by "Big Brother."

Genevieve LaGreca
405 North Wabash Ave., # 714
Chicago, IL 60611

MTC-00009561

From: Dickie Horn

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:28am

Subject: Microsoft Anti Trust Suit

Dear Sir or Madam:

Lets end this Clinton era fandangle and let Microsoft alone.

Dickie Horn
Bartlesville, Ok

MTC-00009562

From: Keith Fette

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:33am

Subject: Microsoft

2716 Bentley Court
Cincinnati, Ohio 45244
January 7, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am writing to you today to ask for your support in the effort to bring the Microsoft antitrust case to an end. The best way you can do this is to show firm backing of the settlement you have reached with the Microsoft Corporation.

Certain anti-Microsoft special interests may try to derail this settlement or have it withdrawn. That is why this settlement needs your firm backing. These interests would have the public falsely believe that this settlement is too soft on Microsoft but this is not the case. This settlement discloses Microsoft's internal interfaces, a major concession and something that has never been done by a software firm before. This will allow competing firms to create better software to compete with Microsoft. This is just one of the major changes that Microsoft has made to make the IT industry more competitive. Any further continuation of this case will just be a waste of time and resources. A settlement is in the best interests of both parties and the American people.

Microsoft has done immeasurable good for the United States and does not deserve to be harassed in this manner, especially in light of the current depressed state of the economy. The success of the economy is dependent upon the success of companies such as Microsoft who directly or indirectly employ countless Americans with very good jobs throughout every state of the union.

Sincerely,
Keith Fette

MTC-00009563

From: Tennisscornem@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:36am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
January 7, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I support the settlement reached by the Department of Justice and Microsoft several months ago. This decision was reached after a long, hard three year court battle. The settlement imposed a broad series of restrictions and obligations on Microsoft, even extending to products and technologies that were not at issue in the lawsuit. Further, a "Technical Committee" has been established whereby any third party will be free to lodge a complaint. I think Microsoft has more than paid for its success. Bill Gates was simply better, quicker, faster to put his product on the market, incorporating his software into computer technology. Such success breeds jealousy. However, it is over and done. It is time to move on. We need now to concentrate on our economy and one way to do this is to quit rehashing decisions that were made several months ago. Microsoft has contributed mightily to this country's economy, and the world's, and I think Bill Gates should now be allowed to go forward with his business and not be hampered by those who are not as good as Mr. Gates. I might add that Bill Gates has done more for the TYPEWRITER than anyone age 40 or over could ever in their wildest dreams have imagined. I was a Business Education teacher for 20 years, and taught typing, including erasures, corrections, set-up, tabulation, letter preparation, filing, financial statements, and all of those things made so simple by our Bill Gates. Yes, life is more beautiful because of Bill, and I support the settlement. Thank You.

Sincerely
Donald Erskine

MTC-00009564

From: Nick Sayer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:32am
Subject: Reply comments to proposed settlement

Nicholas W. Sayer
2351 Sutter Ave #2
Santa Clara, CA 95050-6640
nsayer@freebds.org
This is my response to the proposed settlement of US v. Microsoft as called for under the Tunney Act.

The proposed settlement is at the least inadequate and at most actually rewards Microsoft and punishes its competitors for its past behavior. It must not be forgotten that Microsoft has been found guilty of anticompetitive behavior. Any settlement must take into account what has been (it can now be said) proven in a court of law. If one wanted to be charitable and keep the major components of the settlement, one would have to demand that the section that talks about Microsoft being required to open its protocol specifications to certain well-heeled competitors be rerafted to require opening those specifications to everyone. The settlement ratifies Microsoft's monopoly on the desktop and seeks to insure a level playing field elsewhere. The position of open-source operating systems and software would be damaged beyond any possible repair if they were not allowed to participate as equal partners sharing in the same information as commercial entities.

Disclosure of such information would not in any way harm Microsoft (we're not talking about Microsoft's unpublished source code. We're merely talking about specification documentation), and would certainly benefit consumers indirectly by giving them more choices for their backend servers, which would spur Microsoft to insure that their implementations were competitive both in price and quality. But the real pity is that all of the above presumes, as the settlement already does, that Microsoft's monopoly on the desktop is sacrosanct. It should not be. A much better settlement would address the root of the problem—the OEM agreements between Microsoft and major PC manufacturers, for it is the fact that OEMs are actually prevented by Microsoft from providing alternative platforms to consumers that makes alternative platforms unattractive. Such unattractiveness is the fount from which pour like a flood all advantages Microsoft has in the desktop marketplace. The following steps are necessary to address this:

1. OEMs should be required to list the cost of any and all Microsoft software supplied preinstalled on the computer at purchase-time as a separate line item. Customers should be allowed to purchase computers either without any such software at all (should they wish to purchase or otherwise obtain it elsewhere) or by choosing from alternatives offered by the OEMs. Microsoft argues that this would merely encourage piracy of their products. Such an argument completely ignores any possibility that suitable software could be found elsewhere (which clearly is the case despite Microsoft's monopoly). The status quo allows Microsoft to effectively levy a tax on all pre-built computer systems regardless of whether the user intends to actually use the supplied Microsoft software or not. Users who wish to run an alternative operating system are thus required to pay for two of them, one of which they will never use.

2. OEMs should be allowed to offer machines configured with multiple operating systems if they (and the customers) choose. Currently OEMs are barred from doing so by Microsoft. It is possible (indeed, it is a frequent occurrence) for one computer to allow the user to select at boot time from a number of alternative operating systems, giving the user the choice to select the one desired for the task at hand. Requiring the user to repartition the hard disk (throwing away the preinstalled software provided by the OEM at purchase time) in order to make room for alternative operating systems is a significant hurdle that solidifies Microsoft's death-grip on the desktop marketplace. If the settlement did nothing more than these two things, I believe it would be sufficient to reignite competition in the desktop operating system marketplace. Microsoft would not be punished beyond merely forcing them to be on a level playing field with everyone else. Isn't that the outcome that everyone wants?

Signed,
Nicholas W. Sayer

MTC-00009565

From: Holly Kirchofer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

I am a software engineer and I remember well what it was like before Microsoft came along. Computers were very expensive and very difficult to use. Every piece of software required it's own set of cryptic commands, none of it worked very well together, and it was very expensive. Microsoft standardized the PC and made it practical and affordable to own a PC. Some of the things that the Microsoft competitors are whining about are the very innovations that I appreciated from Microsoft. It is so nice to have everything integrated into the operating system; it makes life easier. From a consumer's perspective, Microsoft has had a very positive impact on this industry and has done more to benefit the consumer than all of the other companies put together. It's time to settle this case and let Microsoft once again focus on what they do best. I do use software from other companies beside Microsoft; I have this choice. However, if we want to talk about monopolies, let's talk about Bellsouth. I do not have a choice in the phone line coming into my house and it is a constant source of frustration when using the computer. Bellsouth does not provide hardware capable of supporting DSL or even a 56K modem in my neighborhood.

Sincerely,
Holly Kirchofer
kci4@worldnet.att.net
3105 N. Indian River Dr.
Cocoa, Fl. 32922

MTC-00009566

From: Nancy J. Tate
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:42am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To: Department of Justice
RE: Pending Microsoft Settlement

I would like to give you a few comments on why I believe this case needs to be settled as quickly as possible.

1. In the current economic situation, we, the Country, do not need the uncertainty that this case is causing.

2. Many of the claims that have been made are not relative in today's environment. For example, I have the option to use whatever software I choose to on my computer. I am not bound by what is installed when I purchased it (example—I much prefer Netscape to Internet Explorer.) (Another demonstration of being able to choose although not related to Microsoft—even though AOL comes loaded on my computer, I have the free choice not to use it).

3. Finally, rather than punish Microsoft, we should be thanking them for bringing us into the computer world. Prior to Microsoft, computer software could not talk to each, computers were not compatible with one another, and the list goes on and on. I remember very well when computers were as foreign to the average person as speaking Latin. Today even Grandma and Grandpa are using computers to stay in touch with family. And don't you believe for a second that a lot of this progress wasn't directly due to the work Microsoft did.

Nancy J Tate

MTC-00009567

From: Ken D'Ambrosio

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:36am

Subject: Remedies for Microsoft antitrust suit.

Being as it currently appears that no settlement will occur, I felt it in my, and my industry's, best interests to express my feelings with regards to Microsoft, their actions, and some potential remedies. First and foremost, let me explain that I have been a system administrator for close to 20 years, and have had in-depth experience with most every operating system that Microsoft has released, since and including DOS 2.0 and Windows 1.0. In all that time, I have seen relatively little of the much-vaunted "innovation" that Microsoft claims. For example, it was only when Digital Research's DR-DOS had clearly surpassed DOS 3.x's capabilities (partition size, full-screen editor, etc.) that Microsoft enhanced their own version of DOS (4.01 and 5.0 addressed the two above issues, respectively). It was also during the beta phase of Windows 3.1, however, that they caused DR-DOS' own operating system to crash when attempting to run Windows (1).

While I certainly can't criticize a company for attempting to make money, I can when I believe they are hurting the consumers they purport to help. I have seen Microsoft attempt this, time and again, when Microsoft intentionally obfuscates file formats(2), communications protocols, and API interactions, not to mention the explicit desire to sabotage competition with said practices(3).

Finally, some of their latest legal shenanigans include a case against Linux (www.linux.com), a Linux/Windows hybrid. It contends that Linux infringes on Microsoft's trademark of "Windows"(4). I, personally, find it abhorrent that Windows, a descriptive name if ever I heard one, was able to be trademarked in the first place, and certainly find nothing wrong with combining the first half of the word "Linux" with the second half of the word "Windows": I find it unlikely in the extreme that anyone would become confused in any way about this—certainly no more so than Windows, itself, would become confused with the previously trademarked windowing system for Unix, X Windows(5). So, given a history of consistent, persistent abuses—many more of which I have failed to discuss (eg. Stac Software vs. Microsoft), but would willingly do so upon request—I humbly submit that only pervasive, unarguable remedies will cause Microsoft to alter its behavior.

—In order for alternative operating systems (eg., Linux, or the now defunct BeOS) to be viable from a price perspective, new computer purchases should have the operating system cost be separated out from the cost of the system as a whole. That way, the consumer is aware of what he is paying for, and what alternatives would truly cost, instead of merely purchasing a bundled system, and having no idea how much money is being spent on software.

—Microsoft uses much that is proprietary in their system, which can then, in turn, lock out competitors from creating competing programs. (The fact that Microsoft has the best-selling operating system, an embedded web browser, and the best-selling office software suite, gives them an almost airtight stranglehold on what is essentially a self-contained system.) Therefore, I recommend that all proprietary formats, protocols, etc., be opened: the API, itself, file formats for all (non-licensed) applications, communications protocols, and anything else that would hinder competitors from being on a level playing field when writing applications for the Windows platform. Being that I am (obviously) a lay person, please forgive my relative ignorance of pertinent law and/or guidelines for submission, but I felt it important that I take the time to comment, and give some background.

Thank you for your time,

Ken D'Ambrosio

Sr. System Administrator,

Xanoptix, Inc. 1) See Caldera vs. Microsoft (<http://www.maxframe.com/DR/Info/lineo1—10—00.html>), which was settled out of court, but which was documented quite well by the respected industry journal "Dr. Dobbs Magazine", as well as "Red Herring" (<http://www.tbtf.com/archive/0159.html#s02>). 2) <http://kt.zork.net/kernel-traffic/kt20001225—99.html#5>, look for paragraph starting "Elsewhere, Jeff V. M. added..." 3) <http://winnetou.lcd.lu/halloween1.html#—Toc427495714> 4) <http://slashdot.org/article.pl?sid=01/12/20/237217&mode=thread> 5) <http://www.x.org/terms.htm>, bottom of page.

MTC-00009568

From: Barker, Philip

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'

Date: 1/8/02 11:47am

Subject: Microsoft and litigation

As a computer reseller in metropolitan Detroit, the actions taken by your government organization against Microsoft has had profound changes in the perception of the computer industry with our commercial customers. Prior to the economic declines in August 2000, many companies held off on implementing technology in the workplace that would improve productivity based on the actions of Justice Department actions against Microsoft. These Justice Department actions created an aura of uncertainty in the minds of our commercial customers and postponed any decision on technology implementations—thus slowing everything down. You really put a stick in the spokes of progress.

I believe these Justice Department actions have jammed up the American economy, jobs and economic livelihood of millions of people and tens of thousands of viable technology companies.

We have been reselling PC computer products since the early 1980's and I can tell you that the wild west frontier of the early 1980 in selling computer products was truly a 'snake oil' environment. Rife with deceptive advertising, 'vaporware' products, products that did not work as advertised, multiple bugs and the list of horrors goes on.

What Microsoft did in the 1980's was develop a 'standardized' platform whereby programmers and computer component manufacturer companies could develop and market products with a relative confidence that the products would work.

Upon this standardized platform, the market for PC computer technology was born along with millions of jobs and taxpaying companies—all working together to move the technology of America forward—increase our standards of living and our place on earth. My firm belief is that the actions of the Justice Department will deal a blow to the concept of 'standardized' platforms—a return the wild west days of 'snake oil' computer solutions full of bugs and a return to vaporware and a disjointed technology industry—a scrambled mess. I recommend the following:

(1) Make your decision soon so America can return to forward momentum

(2) Take into account that Microsoft has developed a Technology industry in America that has created millions of jobs and taxpaying companies

(3) A return to the anarchy and awkward technology business practices of the early 1980's benefits no-one and will drain American productivity

(4) Be fair to the American public and the technology companies that employ them

Sincerely,

Philip T. Barker

Vice President

Web Site: <<http://www.electrosonics.net/>>

E-mail: pbarker@electrosonics.net

Electrosonics, Inc.

17150 15 Mile Road

Fraser, Michigan 48026-3442

Telephone Number: (586) 415-5555

Fax Number: (586) 415-0770

Cell Phone: (586) 764-4718

Business Hours: 8:15am-5pm EST—

Monday—Friday

MTC-00009569

From: Bar-Jac Bar-Jac

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 11:47am

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

This trial has cost taxpayers dollars that could have been more wisely spent on defense of our country.

Competition has made our country the Great Country that it is today and our government should take a "hands off" policy where business is concerned.

I strongly support the microsoft settlement. Please settle this matter and let's start over, encouraging business growth and entrepreneurship. Thank you for listening to my opinion.

Sincerely,
Barbara Strickland

MTC-00009570

From: Irving Kaufman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:52am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
"1200 Shoreview Drive Lima Ohio 45805"
January 8, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am certainly among the group of people who approve of the Microsoft antitrust case settlement. I believe that the federal government has had more than enough input into this matter and it's time to let Microsoft and the rest of the industry re-focus on business as usual.

The proposed settlement amply satisfies the concerns of Microsoft's competitors. Microsoft will now share information about the internal workings of Windows with its competitors, allowing them to more easily install their own software on Windows-based systems. Also, Microsoft has agreed not to retaliate against vendors that use or sell non-Microsoft products. All of these terms will be enforced by a technical review committee, created by the settlement, to ensure that Microsoft adheres to the terms of its agreement with the Department of Justice. Further sanctions and restrictions would be unnecessary and counterproductive.

This antitrust case has dragged on for far too long, and the settlement is the best available option to bring it to a swift end. I fully support the settlement, and wish to go on record as doing so.

Sincerely,
Irving Kaufman

MTC-00009571

From: Jerry (038) Jodene
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:00pm
End the Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse

MTC-00009572

From: Marie Miller
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:03pm
Subject: Lawsuit

It's time to let this irresponsible suit go. I believe this suit was the cause of the fall of the stock market and the recession. Clinton believed in punishing people for their achievements, but I don't. Please drop this lawsuit.

Marie Miller
Cedar City, UT

MTC-00009573

From: Drewski
To: Microsoft ATR,attorney.general@po.state.ct.us@inet...
Date: 1/8/02 12:06pm
Subject: Microsoft and Anti-Trust

Without real punishment, Microsoft will never change its ways. You only have to look to Windows XP to see this. This lawsuit never should have been about integrating ONE product into another, but the entire PRACTICE of integration. MS needs to be broken up into three companies—OS, User Applications, Server Applications. Sooner is better than later.

—Drew

MTC-00009574

From: charles schneider
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:14pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
I support the agreement as fair and in the best interests of America.
Charles Schneider

MTC-00009575

From: Carole
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sirs:

I think the Microsoft settlement is good for consumers like me and also that it is in the best interest of the American economy and the computer industry. Any further litigation will not serve the public interest and will only deter from innovation in the industry. I just wanted my voice to be heard on this matter.

Thank you
Carole Lynch Memphis TN

MTC-00009576

From: Steve Sawyer
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 12:19pm
Subject: Microsoft anti-trust case
Greetings,

I have been involved in the IT industry since 1981. I watched Microsoft, Apple and others work their way up the corporate ladder with innovative ideas and hard work. They deserve much of the fruits of their labor.

However, in Microsoft's case, they have been doing much more harm than good to the consumer over the past several years. As a graduate of the University of Oregon School of Business Administration, I have watched with fascination the methods with which Microsoft has eliminated competition and coerced vendors into doing business Microsoft's way. All of this while their own products continue to slide, in terms of quality and technical advancement. The result is a two-edged sword. They spend time and resources wiping out competitive ideas leaving little reason or incentive to improve their own. Then the Government and the courts comes along and 'endorses' this approach by mandating toothless laws with little or no enforcement. Microsoft is trying to do this with Linux as well as others. Microsoft is a great company. Bill Gates and crew should be applauded for what they have done for technology. However, Microsoft has become a textbook example of why we have rules governing monopolistic practices in this country. When Billy Graham gets caught speeding he receives a ticket for speeding and he pays the fine. Microsoft got caught and it is time to pay the fine.

Do America and Microsoft a favor and put a stop to the dark side of Microsoft.

Thank you...
Steve Steve Sawyer
Director of Internet Development Market America, Inc.
steves@morebv.com

MTC-00009577

From: ETBAG1@cs.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:25pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sirs:

It is my humble opinion that this is a fair settlement and should go forward. I have never had a problem with Microsoft and believe they have moved us along in the computer age and they have done so with hard work and debtcisation.

Sincerely yours,
Eric T Baggett

MTC-00009578

From: Burkhard Daniel
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-Trust case

I do not think it's in the best interest of the public to settle the case out of court.

From my point of view, the suggestion made by Microsoft to set up a funds that sponsors schools in the purchase of software is a "back-door" approach.

Microsoft has nothing to lose from that but a lot to gain. Most schools benefiting from such a funds would (out of gratitude, or simply because Microsoft software is so widespread) purchase Microsoft software. Schools that had no software before now have Microsoft software, which only helps intensify Microsoft' almost-monopoly on software to a new (and promising) market.

It also seems that the change in the political climate (i.e. the election of President Bush) has had some impact on the devotion put behind the case by the DoJ, i.e. that was the one thing that made an out-of-court settlement an option at all (or so it seems to me). Once started, I think political considerations should not be allowed to influence judicial decisions, and that's another reason why I think the case should be tried in court to its conclusion.

Burkhard Dnaie.
Burkhard Daniel * mail@burkhard.net *
http://www.burkhard.net

Our lives are poems sung against the wind, with nothing but our voices to make a difference.

MTC-00009579

From: rquack65@att.net@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:35pm
Subject: Dear Sirs:

I want to let you know that I support the Dear Sirs: I want to let you know that I support the Microsoft settlement as it is.

Robert Quackenbos

MTC-00009580

From: Bert Wood
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:36pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I am a consumer using MS products, and I don't feel the case against MS is for my protection.

I feel the action is because MS is successful and has a lot of money, that companies that were less successful, could benefit through the legal system. Also different States including Florida want some of MS's money. A form of legal extortion.

As in the tobacco suits, the States got a lot of money, and the tobacco companies raised their prices. This is supposed to protect the end user the same way it will when MS has to raise their prices to pay for this litigation.

Times have changed, since the original suit was filed. Most of the companies that claimed they had been hurt, no longer exist. They have been bought-out or merged with other entities and are doing quite well. AOL is a good example.

Enough is enough, stop any further litigation, that only benefits the legal profession and does nothing for the economy or the consumer.

Respectfully submitted,
Bert J Wood
P.O. Box 15658
Clearwater FL 33766
bwood4@tampabay.rr.com

MTC-00009581

From: howard stein
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:40pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wish to inform you of my opinion that the action of the United States Government against Microsoft is unfair and destructive. Microsoft is not anticompetitive; it is the US Government that is anticompetitive.

We can live with Microsoft and live well; the question is whether or not we can live with you.

MTC-00009582

From: Douglas R. White
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:40pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

My comments on the settlement are simple. The Justice Department should have never brought this suit to begin with. In my opinion the antitrust laws were established in an era that could have never envisioned dealing with companies in a dynamic technology market under which Microsoft and many others flourished.

I think this action help precipitate the decline of all technology companies.

Please allow this settlement to stand for the good of the country's economy.

Douglas R. White
545 Watergate Ct
Roswell, GA 30076
dwhite55@mindspring.com

MTC-00009583

From: Tom Gordon
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:47pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

If you cannot open this document, I'll be happy to send it in any format that you need.

Thanks
Tom Gordon
January 8, 2001
Renata B. Hesse

Antitrust Division
U.S. Department of Justice
601 D Street NW
Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20530-0001
Re: Microsoft Settlement

I have been following the Microsoft case for the last number of years, and the proposed settlement disturbs me. Not in the matter that it's too easy on Microsoft, but that it is way too harsh. I have been sickened at the gross waste of money and court time in the proceedings in this case.

I have developed software using Microsoft technology since the early 80's. Their technologies have matured and improved over those years not by strong arm tactics, but by the intelligent application of technology by smart people. The current proposed settlement puts a ball and chain on the operations of that company, which will likely diminish its ability to improve and develop new technologies, ultimately reducing or preventing new, innovative technologies from reaching consumers.

1. Regarding Section III items D and E of the settlement

For one to even hint that Microsoft hides secret technologies from competitors in order to make their applications more efficient is merely competitive jealousy. Of course competitors are not going to say nice things about their chief rival. When I was actively developing software, Microsoft was more than helpful in showing how to make it more efficient and effective. Their staff and support people worked directly with me and my staff to help make our systems better. They continue to openly and frequently train outside developers at multi-day knowledge transfer events all over the world. They reveal the low level intricacies of how their systems function, and how to capitalize on them. Microsoft trains all comers on how to write software to work with their systems! This is done in order to help people write better, more innovative software. Who ultimately defines middleware? Are the government and the courts now in the business of software and operating systems design? Are we going to allow the government to micro-manage the development of products in our economy? This is not what capitalism is about. Why does Microsoft develop such good software? The answer is simple. Their staff has been writing Windows applications for many years. Experience counts when writing complex software. When Windows 3.0 was released, I asked my WordPerfect sales rep if they were going to upgrade their word processing system from DOS so it would work on the new operating system (OS). They indicated they would wait to see if the Windows 3.0 would work out, and that it would only take 6 months to convert their word processor to work on it. Several years later, when the conversion was completed, their word processor was slow, clumsy and a miserable failure (in my opinion). I tried it, erased it, and went back to the old DOS version. When Microsoft came out with Word for Windows, it worked well, and I left it on my machine. As an experienced Windows developer, I knew WordPerfect's problem was in the architecture and design of the product. It was impossible to efficiently change their product from DOS to Windows without a significant architectural modification. Microsoft's software engineers knew Windows, since they had been writing Windows application code for years. WordPerfect's engineers had not, and faced a steep learning curve.

It takes 2-3 years of writing Windows code to become truly proficient. Tailoring applications to work with modern operating systems is an extremely complex task. The problem is not in what Microsoft tells other developers, it is in the level of experience of their development staff. The concept that Microsoft should reveal 'secret' application interfaces to their operating systems (OS) to help competitors write more efficient code is technically dangerous. I shudder at the thought of any operating system or 'middleware' manufacturer having to reveal the internal systems calls to developers. The result is that when the next version of the OS is released, the internal call might have changed by the OS vendor in order to implement new features, and any application code dependent upon that function call would likely fail. Some will say that the internal OS function calls should not be changed since it would be detrimental to the applications using it, but that's a fallacy, since ALL operating systems have internal function calls that may need to change as the operating system matures and grows. Microsoft has published, and continues to publish huge volumes of internal technical documentation on how to write systems to interact with their software. The books used to be small, but now can't even be contained on one CDROM! Their systems also have 'undocumented' calls, many of which are documented in external publications by other authors, but not condoned by Microsoft. These 'undocumented' calls are for internal operating system use, and can change from version to version of their systems out of necessity. These undocumented calls are used by developers at their own risk. Some choose to use them, but others study how they work and figure ways to leverage what they learned. For Microsoft to officially publish undocumented calls is fraught with risk. Such a publication of the 'undocumented' interfaces ties the hands of Microsoft, making it almost impossible to evolve their operating systems. They will not be able to change them since competitors will be dependent upon them for their systems. When the operating system cannot evolve, technology cannot evolve, and the ultimate consumer loses.

Revelation of internal system calls also creates a severe testing and stability problem of software platforms. If you cannot depend on applications and 'middleware' software (written using the internal OS interfaces) to run from one version to the next of an operating system, the testing burden on industry (those using the software in a commercial environment) and consumers becomes huge. Such testing is necessary to insure stable migration from one version of a system to the next. Without it, corporate information networks could fail, and security could be compromised. With an increased testing burden, new products won't be implemented rapidly (or at all), and industry as a whole suffers. Developers will not write software to run on platforms that haven't been implemented by their clients.

Many competitors of Microsoft would love to see the internal system function calls documented, since it would ultimately stop the evolution of Windows. Would this be in the best interest of the consumer?

I am not convinced that the language of the agreement is adequate to prevent some software developers from tying the hands of Microsoft, preventing it from improving the operating system due to some specific function call that needs to change. This would be an unnecessary and onerous form of punishment—preventing any evolution of the operating system.

2. Regarding Section III C

One of the amazing things about the Windows platform, from a development perspective, is that you can depend on certain services and, what appears to be called 'middleware', being available for you applications to run. If OEM's and others are allowed to remove portions of Windows in order to customize it to their liking, this will make development of software much more difficult, as one will not be able to depend upon the consistency of the platform. Although there is apparently some language in the agreement to help alleviate this problem, from the development standpoint, the potential instability is disconcerting. Applications will have to be written to the lowest common denominator of technology, making them less attractive to consumers, and less useful.

3. Oversight (Section IV B and C)

In the settlement, there is a section regarding oversight of Microsoft's operations by a group of individuals (The 'TC'), and a Compliance Officer.

Isn't this almost the same thing that just about killed IBM? Economies are no longer national, they are global. To use a group of people to oversee the functions of Microsoft will stifle their ability to develop new systems, ultimately limiting technologies to the consumer. We are in a world economy. Many nations would love to see the demise of Microsoft, so they could take over technical leadership in software. If this is the case, it's not unforeseeable that the United States will ultimately be importing billions of dollars of software from other countries, instead of exporting it.

4. Other issues discussed by individuals (and States) objecting to the settlement:

Monopoly Profits: I find it very difficult, if not impossible, to find where, in any law, it's illegal to optimize profit. It has been taught in business schools from coast to coast for ages. For Microsoft to be admonished for making a profit digs at the heart of capitalism, that is, if the United States still works on a capitalistic economy. Microsoft 'bet the company' on Windows in the 80's and early 90's, and now some say they should be prevented from making a profit. How is this appropriate, fair or even legal? What precedent does this set? If you are innovative, should you move to another country that will let you make a profit? If you make a large financial gamble, you cannot receive gain commensurate with the risk involved?

Microsoft not only competed with other operating systems, but with their own previous versions of Windows and 'free' operating systems software. If Windows was priced too high, people would not adopt it. Customers chose to buy new versions due to a wealth of new features. Restricting those features would kill the market for operating systems.

Microsoft as an 'illegal, abusive monopoly': I realize this has been argued and 'decided' by the courts (and the politicians and the press). It's quite apparent that if define a market narrowly enough, you can create a monopoly out of thin air. In a dynamic, well defined market, there is absolutely no such thing as a monopoly. In the case of the personal computer, if one company is making 'monopoly profits' (in the economic sense, price above the equilibrium price) selling the devices, another company will figure a way to do the same thing, with another type of device, better start making 'monopoly profits' of their own. This is the heart of capitalism. All companies that make a profit make 'monopoly profits.' A competing product may not physically resemble the original, but it meets the same consumer need. The personal computer has just about evolved into a commodity product, and may be relegated to the basement junk yard in 10 years. This occurs as new technologies take over the tasks older technologies have been handling. The market is too dynamic to define a small piece of the pie, and declare it as a monopoly marketplace. The environment and the market are constantly changing.

The only people who complain about a monopoly are the competitors. If there are competitors, then where is the monopoly? If the competitors have a better technology, then they will ultimately win, even if a market dominant firm tries to prevent it. This was appropriately demonstrated when Microsoft achieved a significant market position in small computer operating systems over the likes of IBM, DEC, Wang, Sun, Univac and others. The best and most cost effective system won many of those battles.

Release Microsoft Office On Other Platforms: Some individuals have proposed that to make a 'level playing field', Microsoft should publish their Office software for other operating systems. If this were economically viable, wouldn't someone have already created software that does this? Changing code to run on another operating system is not in the slightest manner a simple task. It may be impossible. It is very much like trying to attach wings to an automobile and calling it an airplane. The fundamental structural concepts between operating systems are usually significantly different, and interchanging applications between them is not a quick, or an easy task. When a feature cannot be implemented on another operating system due to some architectural differences, how do you resolve this?

Release a Stripped Down Version of Windows: Some have proposed Microsoft develop a 'stripped down' version of Windows that others could enhance. Although interesting from a technical and academic standpoint, this would potentially perpetuate multiple non-compatible systems that could kill the applications software industry. Back when the IBM PC was young, there 3 or 4 different operating systems available (UCSD P-System, CPM-86, MSDOS/PCDOS and a few others.) They were anything but compatible. Once the MSDOS/PCDOS system became prevalent, the industry flourished. Before that, developers had to pick their target operating system, and ignore the others, as they worked differently. This severely hampered the growth of the PC industry.

Releasing the Windows Source Code: Giving away what Microsoft has spent many billions to develop would be tantamount to capital punishment and confiscation. Competitors would love the confiscation of others' private property, but the precedent in our economy would be devastating. No company would ever again be safe from the government taking private property without just compensation, plus the government would be in the situation of picking winners. If another company created something better, and started to obtain a large market share, would the government be obligated to clip their wings to favor the pre-determined winner?

Requiring Microsoft to include competitor's products in Windows: Who would decide what products to be included in Windows? Would the government now be involved with Operating System design? Wouldn't this open a Pandora's Box where everybody would want their software included on the Windows Disk (ultimately, becoming multiple disks)? If the other companies put their software on the Windows disks, who would be responsible for testing and support? Shouldn't Microsoft be compensated for including and distributing the wares of others? What happens when the additional code doesn't pass the necessary tests to be included? Microsoft has 2 testers for every 1 developer in the operating systems group, and that still doesn't produce code that is 100% bug free. Will other companies insure their code is tested to that level? Adding more pieces to the equation increases the testing load exponentially. Insure Microsoft continues to fully support 'industry standards': Who defines the 'industry standards?' Again, are the government and the courts going to become involved with operating system design? Are we to have 'official' operating system standards and a government agency that makes certain standards official? What does that do to competition and consumer choice?

Final Comments: Yes, there were likely some individuals at Microsoft that may have become over-zealous in their marketing areas. That's part of the drive for success within individual product groups. The technology industry is a fierce competitive environment; one has to fight for market share and consumer dollars. To severely punish the entire company for some minor infractions, to ultimately reduce future consumer choice and to confiscate the property of shareholders is tantamount to sentencing a parking offender to capital punishment. Thanks for bearing with my comments.

I'm not a lawyer (which is obvious), but one who has worked in the personal computer industry since its inception, and one who is very concerned about the long term implications of this case on the technology market, and the economy.

Tom Gordon
President, Framework Deliveries, LLC
2070 Linkside Dr
Alpharetta, GA 30005
tgerdon@mindspring.com

MTC-00009584

From: RMyers007@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:47pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

On the matters of Bill Gates and Microsoft corporation, It seems to be a sad day for the United States of America, when the U.S. Government penalizes Microsoft for being enterprising and innovative. Is this not the land of the free? Where you are supposed to have certain rights, including intellectual ones! What Microsoft has done is not illegal, and their only goal was to make the world a smarter and easier place to live and learn in a new way never thought of before. Kudos to Bill Gates and Microsoft!!! Please "Think" before you Judge! Thanks,

Mr. Roy William Myers, Jr.
Winston-Salem, N.C.
RMyers007@aol.com

MTC-00009585

From: philip tuniman
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:50pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I am disgusted that a bunch of politicians trying to become the governor or senator from Iowa or Connecticut, Massachusetts, California, or the other five states, are costing many retirement funds millions of dollars in lost Microsoft value, while they pretend to be helping the poor. Of course, they are not the only ones feathering their nest at the stock holders expense—the DOJ is pretty good at that too. I recall Anne Bingington (?) who went on to bigger and better things after winning a decision against Microsoft. Then there was her successor, the unlamented Mr. Klein, who was off to a big job (probably in Silicon Valley) before Judge Jackson had given his first interview.

This great country was built by people who were innovators, not by whiners like Oracle's Ellinson, Sun Micro's McNeally, or Steve Case of the biggest monopoly in the country, AOL Time Warner.

The DOJ tried for years to break up IBM before they finally called it off. I grew up hearing the cry, "Break up the Yankees." People who can't cut it, are always trying to knock down the successful ones. Microsoft was responsible for the Technology boom. All of these losers who crying to the Government to breakup Microsoft, should get down on their knees and thank God for Bill Gates. He opened up the field for them.

The Government's settlement was a good deal for everyone—Stop already!!

MTC-00009586

From: Jeffrey Bevelacqua
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
607 Somerset Drive

Green Bay, WI 54301
January 7, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

The Justice Department has kept Microsoft in court for more than three years, but thankfully now there is a settlement in this case. I am writing to express concern that this settlement may be in jeopardy, I hope you will support the defend you reached with Microsoft and an end to this case.

Microsoft has worked hard to become a world leader in the software industry. The DOJ suit was meant to allay concerns about the power of Microsoft. This settlement does that by forcing Microsoft to disclose internal interfaces. This allows Microsoft competitors unprecedented access to Microsofts code and operating systems. Lets now end this case and allow Microsoft to get back to doing what it does best, not litigation, but software development and job creation. Your office can make this happen by ensuring the settlement is completed.

Please fight against those that wish to derail this settlement. The faster this case is settled the better off the American information technology sector will perform in this tough economy, and the more time your office will have to dedicate to other priorities.

Sincerely,
Jeffrey Bevelacqua
cc: Representative Mark Green

MTC-00009587

From: Richard Rubin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 12:58pm
Subject: One captive users comments re: Microsoft

ONCE AGAIN I must purchase the OVERPRICED Full Install of a Microsoft Windows product (XP) because my previous OEM install of Windows (Me, with "free upgrade to Xp" offered by Compaq, but not yet received) has DEGRADED, despite my cautious grooming and care, to become a WORLD OF MALFUNCTIONS and CRASHES. To "Upgrade", even "for free" would be to import your broken soft-machinery from the past. And the corporate claim is, once again that Xp is more stable than YOUR OWN OLD PRODUCT, which therefore, I infer, had a stability problem? And you have strong-armed your Compaq OEM contract to provide no relief on your DEFECTIVE PRODUCT. Little-Me will let my thoughts be known to appropriate ears in the penalty decisions pending for your creative, but overaggressive and undergenerous corporation.

Richard Rubin
10407 McClellmont Avenue
Tujunga, CA 91042
818-951-0255

MTC-00009588

From: Mars Cheung
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:00pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Please leave Microsoft alone and move on. The country will benefit from it. Thanks.

MTC-00009589

From: Robert E. Trice, Sr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:11pm
Subject: Microsoft Suit

I FOR ONE THINK ITS TIME TO END THIS CASE. ITS STILL A FREE COUNTRY AND I AM A SUPPORTER OF BILL GATES, HE HAS A BETTER MOUSE TRAP AND IF SOMEONE WANTS TO BUY IT, FINE, AND BETTER STILL IF HE WANTS TO ALSO GIVE YOU SOMETHING FREE WITH IT, BETTER STILL. GET OFF HIS BACK AND ON TO SOMETHING WORTHWHILE FOR A CHANGE. QUIT SPENDING TAX PAYERS MONEY ON A DISHONEST ACCUSER ANYHOW. THANK YOU

MTC-00009590

From: Eric Dennis
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Antitrust case

Isn't it time to get over the misguided suit against Microsoft? there are far more important situations that cost taxpayers and consumers much more than software. The energy and tax dollars spent to pursue a competitive company has been a debacle. Self serving competitors and their legislators have made a mockery of our capitalist system.

Put this to bed and work on things that matter-energy prices, like automotive gasoline for example- talk about collaborative price levels! There you have a monopoly of many, all propping up prices- definitely not supply and demand driven. I don't work for Microsoft nor do any of my relatives.

Eric Dennis
Bothell, WA

MTC-00009591

From: Joe Hegenbart
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 1:05pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To Whom It May Concern:

Please accept this e-mail as evidence of my strongest support for the "Settlement" that the DOJ has been able to reach with Microsoft. I have the greatest admiration for the Microsoft Corporation, its employees and its products (which are most innovative, practical and most reasonably priced). I could never understand the DOJ's justification for, or their decision to litigate; however, I applaud the Settlement. Please move on to more important matters. Note also, I am so displeased that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has not accepted the settlement. I consider this to be a single issue in the next election.

MTC-00009592

From: Rob Lund
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Dear Sirs:

First let me say that I am a committed user of BeOS for several reasons unique to the BeOS platform—usability, performance, elegance, etc. Most of these are personal preferences. Due to the tactics of Microsoft over the years though, I am even more of a BeOS enthusiast. I am continually frustrated by Microsoft's strongarm tactics and feel they have pushed smaller companies like Be, Inc. out of the market unfairly. Therefore, I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place. However, there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed, such as open Office file formats, Win32 APIs, making dual-boot options mandatory, etc. Thank you for your commitment to seeing a fair and just resolution to the antitrust case against Microsoft. As a BeOS user, I feel it is my right as a consumer to use the operating system of my own choice, and I know that the DOJ's pursuit of a fair market will ensure the BeOS's existence in the future.

Regards,
Rob

MTC-00009593

From: Frank and Hettie Helder
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:10pm
Subject: End Clinton Eara anti Trust actions.

It is unfortunate that so much interference with the free market has occurred and wasted so much time, effort and money. Please do the right thing and bring it to an immediate end.

Frank E. Heidler Sr.

MTC-00009594

From: Don (038) Barb Palmer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:02pm
Subject: Anti-trust effort of Clinton Admin.

Dear Justice Dept. of the USA:

I would like the federal government to not continue persecuting our finest businesses such as Microsoft. They do a wonderful job of producing products that make us proud to be an American. We already have terrific trade deficits in competing with companies abroad in the technical areas so lets support our efforts on this side of the oceans...the USA! Thank you for your consideration of this view.

Barbara R. Palmer

MTC-00009595

From: Slotscraps@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:08pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Enough is enough, drop the whole suit and stop wasting gov. money. Can't understand this whole lawsuit, what happened to free enterprise?

MTC-00009596

From: Eric Benedict
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 2:32pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Ms. Hesse,

This letter is concerning the proposed DOJ vs. Microsoft settlement. I am an electrical engineer with over 15 years of computer usage and experience including MS-DOS, Windows and UNIX/Linux platforms. This experience includes usage, development and system administration tasks.

I am greatly concerned and troubled about details of the proposed settlement. In particular, I am troubled by the large and numerous loopholes which are present in the settlement. In particular, Section III, Part J, Paragraph 2 greatly concerns me. This paragraph clearly allows Microsoft to set up several barriers to prevent a third party from obtaining the information which Microsoft is supposed to make available as part of the settlement. Microsoft only has to release the information if Microsoft determines that the third party "meets reasonable, objective standards established by Microsoft of certifying the authenticity and viability of its business". It is quite simple to establish reasonable, objective standards which will exclude virtually any third party which Microsoft doesn't wish to disclose the settlement stipulated information to. Further, should such a third party exist, Microsoft can further impede this party by requiring that the party submit their code "at its own expense ... to third party verification, approved by Microsoft". Thus, should someone make it through the gauntlet of conditions stipulated by Microsoft to have a legitimate need, Microsoft can require that they release their code to a Microsoft approved tester. There are no controls over this third party tester, their relationship with Microsoft, etc. Microsoft can quite easily influence the 'testing fee' to be sufficiently out of the reach of all but the wealthiest entities. It also isn't clear that Microsoft won't be given access to the submitted code information which also would assist Microsoft by allowing them to review their competitor's source code.

Furthermore, I am also troubled that third party middleware can be excluded from invocation if a Microsoft determined functionality is not present. The way the current settlement agreement reads to me, Microsoft can evaluate a third party program, determine a functionality which this program does not provide, arbitrarily decide that this functionality "X" is now "required" and then ship the Microsoft OS version which doesn't allow the third party's program to be launched. The third party then has to ask Microsoft why, Microsoft then responds that they were missing this newly required functionality "X" and that they need to provide it in order to be compatible. Meanwhile the third party has already "missed the boat" and must wait until the next Microsoft release. Of course for the next release, Microsoft can "innovate" some more and determine a new functionality "Y" is now required (amazingly missing from the third party's program) and so yet again, the third party is effectively shut out from being included. This can continue for as long as Microsoft wishes (or until the third party is bankrupt) and so Microsoft can effectively determine what software is allowed and prevent any undesired competition.

These (and the numerous other loop holes which are present) effectively allow Microsoft to continue business as usual, but now legally! This will effectively insulate Microsoft from future anti-trust action since they can point to the fact that this agreement allowed them to do those actions! Very good for Microsoft, but not for the consumer!

I am also concerned that the settlement also only provides (nearly non-existent) remedies on future behavior and does not appear to contain any punishment for prior inappropriate actions. This appears to me akin to allowing a successful but convicted criminal (drug dealer, bank robber, inside trader) to keep all of their ill gotten gains and then telling them to try to be good in the future. Microsoft was determined to be guilty of breaking the law. Where is the punishment?

In an ideal world, I would like to see some punitive measures incorporated into the settlement; however, the world isn't ideal. At the minimum, I would like to see some real restrictions (with out loopholes) on Microsoft's future conduct. Anything less makes me have real strong suspicions of a sell out to Microsoft and that our system of justice is a joke or at least bought and paid for by the highest bidder.

Thank you.

Eric Benedict
175 Lakewood Gardens Lane
Madison, WI 53704
benedict@cae.wisc.edu
eben@zephyr.ece.wisc.edu
CC:benedict@cae.wisc.edu@inetgw

MTC-00009597

From: RG Helms
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 1:19pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
THERASTAT DATA CORPORATION
7512 EAST INDEPENDENCE BOULEVARD,
SUITE 103
CHARLOTTE, NORTH CAROLINA 28227-9412

Phone: (704) 567-4228 ? Fax: (704) 567-8699
January 8, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
United States Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Mr. Ashcroft,

After three long years of litigation Microsoft and the Department of Justice have reached a settlement regarding the antitrust suit. I believe that this settlement will be both beneficial and fair not only to the industry as a whole, but also to Microsoft and the federal and state governments. However, for this settlement to be beneficial, it is necessary that it is actually implemented. After the comment period, I urge you to quickly enact the settlement for greater benefit of the slowing economy.

This settlement is fair and reasonable and was arrived at after extensive negotiations with a court-appointed mediator. Not only that, but a settlement such as this will ensure that the industry continues to deliver advanced technology to the market by fostering competition, which in turn fosters new ideas.

This has gone on long enough. All of this action at the federal level must be stopped, so that Microsoft can go to product development, rather than going back to court. Thank you, and best wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely,
R.G. Helms
Senior Developer/Programmer

MTC-00009598

From: Ours, Susanne

To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/8/02 1:26pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I wanted to voice my opinion on this subject. I believe it is time to end this pursuit of Microsoft and end this silly law suit against them. Take the settlement and let Microsoft get back to doing what it is good at...making software. The government should leave businesses alone and stop trying to tinker with them. The business world works much better when government stays out.

Thanks,
 Sue
 Susanne Ours
 Divisional Programmer
 Student Affairs/Taylor University ssours@tayloru.edu

MTC-00009599

From: Utpizz@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 1:38pm
 Subject: Microsoft anti-trust settlement
 104 Whispering Brooke Drive
 Newtown Square, PA 19073
 January 8, 2002
 Attorney General John Ashcroft
 U.S. Department of Justice
 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
 Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Mr. Ashcroft,
 My hope is that this note will help convince you and your department to promote the acceptance of the Microsoft anti-trust settlement proposal. I realize that you support the settlement, but I want to emphasize the necessity of its prompt enactment.

I believe that the proposal is a workable compromise between the needs and desires of the parties involved. Microsoft will retain its corporate integrity and continue to operate as it has before. The company will now have to open itself up to other companies??? software, and Microsoft will need to provide companies with mechanisms to promote non-Microsoft programs. Non-Microsoft software will be utilized in the Windows systems. New Windows systems will be specifically designed to accommodate others' software. In short, it???s a compromise that will benefit all parties in the long term.

Please support this settlement.
 Sincerely,
 Arthur Pizzirani

MTC-00009600

From: Paula Benner
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 1:37pm

I want to end Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse!

MTC-00009601

From: R Hansen
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 1:48pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Consumers worldwide have benefited from Microsoft. It is in the best interest of consumers, such as myself, to end this case and proceed with settlement.

MTC-00009602

From: susan pizzi
 To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 1:52pm
 Shut down the case and let America's tech industry get gack to work.

MTC-00009603

From: Keith Hix
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 1:50pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the settlement is more than fair on the DOJ's side. Only problem is the additional nine (9) states holding out.

Thank you.
 Keith Hix
 Annex Systems Inc.
 308B West Millbrook Road
 Raleigh, NC 27609
 Phone 919-846-5406 Fax 919-870-9335
 E-Mail keith.hix@annexsystems.net

MTC-00009604

From: jim(092)va7gpd(092)n7gpd
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 1:57pm
 Subject: punnishment

microsoft will keep on doing what they have always done unless it is made unprofitable for them to crush and kill off any one that treathens them just look at the auto map pro program they bought out the company that produced and kill the program off because it was going to be a better product than what they were going to sell and it was cheaper and that is the way that they do business

MTC-00009605

From: Gary Keener
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 1:59pm
 Subject: Anti-trust Law Abuse

We support ending the Clinton-era anti-trust law abuse!
 Julia & Gary Keener
 Tucson, AZ

MTC-00009606

From: Tom Cooper
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 1:59pm
 Subject: Microsoft settlement—a thoughtful, non-profane comment

Sirs,
 I have been a customer and user of Microsoft's products for more than 16 years. During that time, I have observed them on many occasions do those things for which they have been found guilty. I am thrilled that the court has recognized the Microsoft abuses.

I voted for president Bush and have the highest respect for Attorney General Ashcroft and his integrity, but since the Bush administration entered the picture it appears that the government has backed down on punishing Microsoft for its abuses.

Evidence that Microsoft believes that this is the case can be seen in that they released WindowsXP with many many utilities bundled in the product. This is precisely the sort of thing for which they are being taken to task! Their bundling of Internet Explorer with the OS was clearly for the purpose of killing their competition, and it worked! Netscape has been ineffective for years. It is a non-issue for Microsoft today, as is Novell.

How many more companies have died as a result of Microsoft's predatory tactics? For Microsoft, winning is not the objective. Killing their competition is their objective. Without sever punishment, how many other companies will die? Microsoft's predatory tactics have done in dozens of "partners" and technology suppliers. Microsoft has a long history of: Intentionally writing incompatibilities between their products and those of competitors (DR DOS and Windows 3.1):

Acquiring their competitors, (Visio)
 Re-writing their competitors' tools, (Netscape)
 Stealing their competitors' tools, (Stac)
 Directly attacking the competition with incompatibility, FUD, and in some cases explicitly dishonest advertising. (Novell)
 Time does not permit me to list all of the quantitative abuses that Microsoft has undertaken, and the full scope of their destruction can probably never be known. They have become one of the most successful companies in the world by use of these tactics. In spite of the verdict of abuse of monopoly power, Microsoft shows no remorse for their actions and continues to this day to abuse their power. They are flaunting their capability to bundle products and attack competitors even while this decision is being considered!

The only way that Microsoft can be convinced to change its ways is by radical intervention both in terms of its business practices and punitive measures. I am pleased that the terms of the agreement spell out that Microsoft must no longer abuse their customers, but the decision must go deeper, or the consumers will continue to suffer. To be sure, Microsoft has offered much to the US economy, and has shaped the consumer marketplace in huge ways. Computing today is far more advanced than it was, but are we better off with Microsoft than if it had never come into being? Microsoft's tactics are not innovative, but rather suppress innovation.

In order to provide as equitable a result as possible, Microsoft must at a minimum be forced to split into multiple companies, and must pay substantive penalties for their abuses. They cannot restore Netscape to it's former position, but unless real penalties are assessed, (and I mean in terms of billions of dollars in CASH, not products) they will continue to harm the consumer and the economy.

Talk of a punitive measure of $1B largely comprised of MS products is frightening. That would serve to further MS hegemony in the PC marketplace, and to suppress alternative technologies. This would occur while actually costing Microsoft very little.

I make my living largely through implementation of Microsoft products. I would prefer not to, but since they own the vast majority of the marketplace, I have little choice. In spite of the fact that MS product implementation provides most of my income, I believe that Microsoft must be punished. Please do not settle for a mere slap on the wrist! Finding suitable punitive measures would allow for more innovation in the marketplace and will be beneficial in the long term for the US and our economy.

Thank you for taking the time to read this message.

Sincerely,
 Thomas R. Cooper
 106 Rawlings Road
 Gaithersburg, MD 20877
 (301)869-6499

MTC-00009607

From: Jeff Powers
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:06pm
 Subject: Microsoft

I believe that the government has spent enough tax payers money and has caused enough money to be lost by owners of technology stocks and mutual funds to end this nonsense abuse of power. Microsoft was wrong in how they conducted business, but people knew it and have always had a choice of software to use. It may be preloaded, but you don't have to use it. This witch hunt for Microsoft is worst. What is the next business that conducts business in the US will get to big so the government will step in and break it up? The government is to big, break it up instead. Stop and let Microsoft resume business, capitalism to remain, and confidence in technology sector of our economy to resume.

Jeffrey L Powers

MTC-00009608

From: Daphanie M. Mullins
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:20pm
 Subject: Fw: keep fighting Microsoft Original Message
 From: "Henry Sharp" <hsharp@rain.org>
 To: <consumer@mail.wvnet.edu>
 Sent: Monday, January 07, 2002 3:48 PM
 Subject: keep fighting Microsoft

Thanks you for not agreeing to the US proposed Microsoft settlement. Our government has let us down by caving in to Microsoft.

I applaud your action to not accept the agreement and to fight on for strong penalties.

Harriet Sharp
 1165 Harbor Hills Drive
 Santa Barbara, CA 93109
 805/966-7280

MTC-00009609

From: Jessie Conner
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:18pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I believe it is time for the Federal and State Government to settle the Microsoft case. I believe the current agreement is reasonable and fair given the results of the trial. This agreement will provide reasonable protection for the industry and still permit Microsoft to continue to improve it's products to benefit millions of America consumers.

However, I believe key aspects of the government's case are flat-out wrong, such as the contention that Microsoft holds a monopoly over desktop operating systems. That ignores the resurgent Apple Macintosh and the emergence of new Unix-based competitors, like Linux. Americans can purchase an operating system that cost over a billion dollars to develop for $89, or they can get a less capable Linux OS free, or buy a MAC. There is no evidence of consumer harm and none was provide in the trial. I see the case being driven significantly by politics. More specifically political use of the DOJ for special interest (Microsoft's competitors).

Consider Microsoft's competition, Microsoft must convince consumers that it's product at $89 dollars is better than it's competitor (Linux) at the cost of $0 (zero). How can Microsoft be considered a monopoly when it has this level of competition? Will the government be happy when a Chinese version of Linux dominates the desktop and tax revenue from hightech industries are lost. Please review this issue carefully as it affects the ability of our nation to compete in the world economy. Please don't undermine the freemarket and hard work of millions of American who invest in Microsoft and other great companies.

Concerned American Jessie L Conner
 6550 Point Comfort Lane
 Charlotte, NC 28226

MTC-00009610

From: Michael Farnham, R.
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:22pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft is a huge organization and a de-facto monopoly. However in the technology business this is somewhat meaningless and they have traditionally produced some fantastic pieces of software. I work for an organization that sells and supports Microsoft products. One of our biggest vendors (Great Plains) was purchased by Microsoft. Since that has happened they have raised our fees and cut our margins. They have begun to charge for services that had been free. I think the real issue with Microsoft is their predatory business practices. I do not feel that the settlement will keep them from engaging in practices that stifle competition or innovation. The settlement appears to be a temporary fix that actually reinforces their hegemony and has no real staying power to enforce compliance. It appears that they have purchased the right amount of political influence and that the Department of Justice has sold us all out. Hope you all got a lot of money.

R. Michael Farnham
 Business Microvar, Inc.
 Direct: (651) 746-1494
 Fax: (651)746-1495
 Cell: (612) 325-1993

MTC-00009611

From: Larry Stregger
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:34pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 WE SUPPORT THE MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT!!!
 Anne & Larry Stregger
 1405 Kings Row
 Plainview, Texas 79072-9244
 #806-291-8601

MTC-00009612

From: Ruth Lykins
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:39pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Attorney General John Ashcroft
 US Department of Justice

950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
 Washington, DC 20530

Dear Attorney General Ashcroft

I wish to express my support for the proposed agreement between the Department of Justice and Microsoft. Microsoft has agreed to allow access to various Windows features to computer manufacturers and has agreed to design future versions of Windows easier to install on non-Microsoft software. The government has established an oversight committee to ensure Microsoft compliance in the future. I believe this is more than enough for any firm.

Bill Gates has worked long and hard to make Microsoft successful. A person should not be penalized for being successful. It is time to settle this matter and I believe this has been accomplished through the proposed agreement.

I hope to see the settlement finalized soon and no more action taken against Microsoft. Thank you.

Sincerely,
 Ruth Lykins
 2425 Main Street
 Ashland, Ky 41102

MTC-00009613

From: Christine Keller
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:41pm
 Subject: I SUPPORT THE MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT

AS A TAXPAYING CITIZEN OF THE GREAT UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, I SUPPORT THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT'S SETTLEMENT OF THE MICROSOFT LAWSUIT. LET'S PUT AN END TO THE CLINTON ERA FORM OF ABUSE IN THE FREE MARKET PLACE.

MTC-00009614

From: BBB200@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 2:50pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Taxpayer Employee,

I would like to make you aware of my strong feelings on the Microsoft case. I think it is a case that should be resolved quickly and fairly. I noticed that the stock market decline began about the time of the case, and I know Microsoft is a very important part of the US economy, especially in the area of future growth. I know that Microsoft has helped, not hurt, consumers, and has provided great stimulus to our national economy. As a taxpayer, citizen, and voter, I would like to see this matter resolved so that we can get our economy rolling again, which would help all Americans.

Thanks for considering this. [I have no affiliation with Microsoft].

Bert Brumett
 Shoreline, WA

MTC-00009615

From: Terry Scanlon
 To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
 Date: 1/8/02 2:53pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 Renata B. Hesse
 Trial Attorney
 Antitrust Division
 U.S. Department of Justice
 601 D Street NW

Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Ms. Hesse:

Microsoft Corporation has accepted the U.S. government's finding that it engaged in anti-competitive practices in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. By accepting the terms of the "Proposed Final Judgment" the corporation signals its intent to end the litigation and settle this issue as quickly as possible. It is a mark of Microsoft's statesmanship and good sense that it has accepted the judgment and will abide by the law. The Court has made its decision and all must accept it.

Incredibly, the states opposing this settlement want the Court to define future standards for engineering software in a competitive marketplace.

They want Microsoft to give its source code to competing software developers so that competitors can write new applications that will work off Microsoft's operating system.

They also want Microsoft to rewrite its operating system so that computer manufacturers can put onto Microsoft's system the programs of other companies, such as the Java program produced by Sun Microsystems. In other words, the states invite the Court to anticipate and remedy future and unproven anti-competitive actions by Microsoft even though the development and future uses of software cannot be predicted. The states' remedy-to force additional disclosures beyond those in the Proposed Final Judgment, which the federal government has determined are sufficient to curb the company's anti-competitive practices-confuses aiding the process of competition with aiding specific competitors.

The technology of the information age is rapidly evolving. It is foolhardy for courts or policymakers to attempt to direct the future course of software applications. It is particularly inappropriate for courts to do this on the assumption that one company will act in bad faith and undertake anti-competitive practices in the future. This in effect is what the states advise the Court to do.

Sincerely,

Terrence Scanlon

Chairman, Capital Research Center and

Former Chairman, U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission

MTC-00009616

From: Rafiki
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 2:52pm

Please end clinton era dealings, that draft dodger has hurt the entire country..

MTC-00009617

From: Barbara Uhrig
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 2:53pm
Subject: Let Microsoft alone

I was thrilled to find an address I could use to let you know that the Microsoft case is the silliest thing I have ever seen. In high school, we studied about breaking up monopolies, and I believed the line that monopolies stifle the market. This may be true in steel production, but not in the idea arena. It seems that all that happened is that Microsoft spent millions defending itself against the government which spent millions trying to break up the company. The Bell Telephone company was broken up. Friends had to move away after their jobs vanished. Now service (repairs) is not very good and even Ameritech has put on (twice) packages of services that I never ordered. I don't think that breaking up the telephone company facilitated the development of telephones, and I don't think that breaking up Microsoft will facilitate the improvement of computers.

Sincerely,

Barbara L. Uhrig

8718 Jamaica Court

Indianapolis, IN 46219-2505

MTC-00009618

From: TobeyTwo@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 2:58pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing this e-mail to encourage the court to settle the Microsoft suit. I do not believe the public has been damaged by Microsoft's practices. Not being an attorney, I do not understand all the nuisances of the case, but being a private citizen it does seem to me this case is being fueled by Microsoft's competitors. I also will add I am writing this e-mail on an Apple computer. My concern the reason Microsoft is being singled out is because they have not played the political game as well as they might have. I find that a sad commentary on our justice system. In closing I would think it would behoove the justice system to investigate Enron where many have been seriously financially damaged.

Thank you for reading my comments.

Mary Bush

MTC-00009619

From: STEPHEN J BANNON
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:04pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I totally disagree with the government. Microsoft did not do anything wrong and the law itself should be erased from the books on moral grounds. This is the best example of non-objective law that we have on the books today. In a free country you are free to do anything as long as you don't infringe on anyone rights which Bill Gates didn't do. Capitalism is not based on free competition, it is base on freedom i.e. the freedom to think of any idea and see if the market will buy it Therefore the Justice Department should be doing what it should have been doing all along protecting the rights of its citizens from the likes of bin laden not going after a true American like Bill Gates The justice Department should drop all charges and praise him for his sprit The people around the hate us for this sprit and they want to kill us for our ideas. Govverment just wants to muffle and hurt its citazens with this unjust law. It is a shame that in a country that upholds freedom as its basic tenet that a man can not do business as he pleases.

Stephen Bannon

Garden Grove Ca.

MTC-00009620

From: VicForrest@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:05pm
Subject: Fwd: Microsoft Settement
VICTORIA M. FORREST
P.O. Box 222
Botsford, Connecticut 06404
January 8, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

As a 16-year employee in the technology field and user of Microsoft products and services, I am happy to see that Microsoft will not be broken up by the recent antitrust settlement with the Department of Justice. In fact, I believe that the case never should have been brought against them in the first place.

Over the last decade, Microsoft has done much for the IT industry and the American economy as a whole. They have created jobs, raised performance standards, and led innovation into the 21st century. While Microsoft should have been more open with some of its technology and systems, lawmakers and politicians have no right to penalize them for being the best. if anything, Microsoft should be applauded and given a degree of freedom to innovate.

During our current economic crisis, I believe politicians and lawmakers should be looking out for the best interest of American public by facilitating growth and development in business and not hindering it. They need to put aside their political differences and allow Microsoft and the IT industry to focus on business. I sincerely hope that no further litigation is brought against Microsoft in the future.

Thank you for your time.

Victoria Forrest

MTC-00009622

From: ke4zex@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:31pm
Subject: To Whom It May Concern:

To Whom It May Concern:

I think the ruling of the Court Of Appeals is a fair and just ruling and should STAND for the benefit of every person in our Country. Please lets end this thing.

Sincerely,

William H. Hopkins
22113 Soliel Circle West
Boca Raton, Fl. 33433

MTC-00009623

From: donaldjordan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:35pm
Subject: microsoft lawsuit

Why doesnt the government drop these charges against this company, seems there are more important issues that needs to be adressed at this time.

Thank you.

D. Jordan

MTC-00009624

From: Xia You
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:38pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think this settlement between Microsoft and DOJ is very good for both the consumer and the national economy.

Regards.

MTC-00009625

From: Bowen, James W
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 3:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
80 Candlelight Drive
Glastonbury, CT 06033
January 8, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
U.S. Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft,

I am writing to express my support of the recent settlement between the federal government and Microsoft. The terms of the settlement seem fair and reasonable, and further litigation on the federal level must be ended to allow business to resume.

Considering the terms of the agreement, Microsoft must make several significant changes in the way they handle business. The company must now allow its competitors to use interfaces from Windows products to develop more accessible and efficient applications, and cannot face retribution from Microsoft for doing so. A "Technical Committee" will ensure that this happens. This would appear to resolve the concerns raised by the litigants. With the many terms of the agreement, seeking further litigation will be a waste of time and money for not only the taxpayers but the government as well.

Sincerely,
James W. Bowen

MTC-00009626

From: James Robison
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:47pm
Subject: Get off Microsoft

Right after the Clinton JD went after Microsoft, stock prices began to go down the tubes. The reason was that investors could see that the federal government was playing favorites. And, if the JD could go after Microsoft to help out Sun, et al, who would be next? Lets get back to equal justice for all: drop the case entirely!

James C. Robison
Edenton, NC

MTC-00009627

From: James L. Niemann, Sr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:50pm
Subject: End Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse now!

I think it is high time to end Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse. I consider the Microsoft case simply a witch hunt by a bunch of computer illiterate government representatives. Computers are so much easier to use thanks to Bill Gates and Microsoft and anyone who does not want to use Microsoft products does not have to. You only have a monopoly when their are no options available, such as the United States Postal Service.

Signed:
James and Ruth Ann Niemann

573 Huntleigh Ct.
Farmington, MO 63640-2036
(573) 701-0135

MTC-00009628

From: Pap, Victor III
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 3:54pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I write to publicly express my opinion that Microsoft Corp. a.) did not have a monopoly but b.) that in the event it did have a monopoly, then the monopoly could only be an actual benefit to consumers. Finally, I strongly believe the legal actions of both the states and the companies are more harmful economically and against the notion of the free market, a principle on which this country is founded.

If there was anything more I could do to support Microsoft, I would.

Victor Pap III
Press Secretary/Legislative Aide
Representative George N. Peterson, Jr.
House Minority Whip
State House, Room 124
Boston, MA 02133
Tel. 617.722.2100

MTC-00009629

From: Pap, Victor III
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 3:57pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement II

I also forgot to mention that I honestly believe the economic boom of the 90's had more to do with a universal windows platform on which technologies could build and compete with products than either the President or Congress, Democrats or Republicans. The government's suit on Microsoft may have also had a minor effect on the already declining profitability of tech companies' (I'm sure it didn't cause it, but it certainly did not help).

Victor Pap III
Press Secretary/Legislative Aide
Representative George N. Peterson, Jr.
House Minority Whip
State House, Room 124
Boston, MA 02133
Tel. 617.722.2100

MTC-00009630

From: Festival Books
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 3:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The proposed Microsoft settlement should NOT be approved. Microsoft obstructed and prevented fair and legal competition. The proposed settlement fails to achieve the necessary goal of a proper remedy. It fails to halt illegal conduct. It fails to promote competition in the industry. It fails to deprive Microsoft of its illegal gains.

Dr. O.F. Rothchild

MTC-00009631

From: ROBERT REMINGTON
To: Microsoft
ATR,rremington@webtv.net@inetgw
Date: 1/8/02 4:01pm
Subject: Too Many Chefs . . . Play Action

Recently, a narrowcast cable commercial aired last evening on Monday Night Football featuring a young man picking up his early morning newspaper while a neighbor was also retrieving his. (I am usually up very early in my neighborhood, retrieving the newspaper before 6 AM in most cases.)

The commercial has a deja vu theme to it as the event is presented twice during the 30 second spot. This commercial first aired after Sunday January 6, 2002. The young man first says, "Hmm, . . . Sunday . . . going to be a good day", as he looks at the cover of the large Sunday edition. The neighbor yells out, "Too many chefs!" The scene is repeated with the comments, "Play Action!", for the neighbor's line.

The message is an explanation/ reinforcement of the multiple "chefs", "so called leaders", and others who are directing the multinational million dollar publicity campaign. Of course, as the sage adage goes, "too many cooks spoil the broth". The original recipe for Quaker Instant Stadium Organist called for this action (similar to the cloning techniques seen in the film "The Boys From Brazil":

Scenario . . .
Secret Government Plan—Dateline 1955 . . . height of the atomic cold war with the Soviet Union . . . Eisenhower/Nixon administration . . . Duck & Cover mentality . . . Fallout Shelters in shopping malls & churches . . . Walt Disney opens Disneyland—Anaheim . . . can social engineering create replacements for our film and music stars?

CAST
Mother: Tennessee Virgin who stops running

Father: Navy veteran who's hard work and blue collar Chicago connections help him climb social and economic ladders.

Mother's unmarried spinster Aunt: Confined to her musical world spinning tunes from her Hammond Organ Novachord. Lives with mother and father in 1950s with extended family. Aunt is about 10 years older than mother, and a favorite friend.

def. Tennessee Virgin . . . sister who can outrun her brother

Take first born male child and move child through many homes, neighborhoods, & school districts including private schools. Use television social programming through broadcast advertising to entice parents to "move up" during the 1960s to larger homes in suburban Chicago. Keep father traveling majority of time in order to continue music preparations for family.

Force oldest child to learn keyboard music via electronic organs & recorded music. Deny college eligible youth to attend college of his choice and educational level. Acquiesce local to community college education. Channel youth to entertain A.C. Nielsen executives in Northbrook, Illinois restaurant, designed to launch replacement for Chicago Blackhawks Hockey Team Stadium Pipe Organist upon retirement. Use private Germanic musical teacher to provide initial instruction and "reference" for A.C. Nielsen / Grove Inn first professional musical performance.

Original Stadium musician performed from about 1930—1972 before first protege became a permanent replacement from 1972—1982. Finally promote best of all of the performing organist youth from the Chicago area to Blackhawk Stadium Organist, firing first protege in 1982. There were probably 10 restaurants or night clubs developing talent for the Chicago Stadium, like minor league ball clubs & college sports programs. Now . . . I have already documented this in various ways . . . and it's really a weird recipe, but it's true!

The chefs in Washington DC, Texas, California, Chicago, & Redmond, WA have been stalling & salting this recipe without providing me any interesting work, or rights to invest my money in areas of my interest . . . aviation, space technology, and personal fitness. This "recipe" has provided no performing musician interested in performing, and has only stalled justice.

The "creative" Marino neighborhood was designed by one of the Aliso Viejo or Redmond chefs who wanted Buy.com to grow, forcing me into a hostile area. After choosing financial services with a competitor to the Bank of America and fighting a B of A executive decision to intentionally ruin my credit, I fought back.

Later, the local chefs tried to spin a musical performance with the Crystal Cathedral and the Mighty Ducks Hockey Team . . . failing on both attempts, but causing me additional attacks, and assaults by those involved with the nefarious schemes. My recent PR campaign at NBC-Burbank once again brought international chefs who screwed with the recipe . . . fortunately I was in the studio audience when Jay Leno, Wolfgang Puck, & Tim Allen tried to make pizza together!

In between all of the years of performances & musical instruction I have received an education in marketing, finance, aviation & space technology, electronic and digital circuit design, healthcare, legal, and fitness through my own personal interests. Millions of people have benefitted from my innovations, and thousands have personally purchased their computers, and information technology from me!

The TD Waterhouse print and broadcast advertising commercials feature a retired executive relinquishing the "decisions" to their clients via the TD Waterhouse website with a comment, "It's your investment choice". To this very day, in 2002, other family members are "controlling" my earned assets to channel me once again to a musical performance, denying me my rights and earned income through royalties and investments illegally stolen from me. They have schemed with the Crystal Cathedral, Arrowhead Pond, Disney, and the Tonight Show . . . holding me back from a career I have enjoyed and contributed to from 1977 to 2002 in personal electronics, business and network computing systems, and advanced telecommunications.

The assets are in the billions and some of the "bigshots" controlling them have ties to the US Government with bonds, notes, and business transactions. They just don't want to give up this control . . . but, people are replaced everyday . . . for instance . . . The ABC television network replaces their veteran executive, Stu Bloomberg with Susan Lyne and AOL Time Warner adjusts the "goodwill" of the 2001 approved merger by $60,000,000,000. That's sixty billion dollars, folks . . . that's a sum that could probably purchase all of Irvine, California and parts of Newport Beach!

Thanks for listening! Please help me obtain control of my assets in order for all of us to improve our Nation and other area of the world.

Robert Remington

MTC-00009632

From: Bob Jackson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:59am
Subject: input on Microsoft
To Whom It May Concern,

I would like to see the unjust action against Microsoft stopped!! Computer users have benefited from the Microsoft Windows. Bill Gates has helped the whole computer using world. The other companies were not looking to improve the computing environment and create user-friendly programs and got left behind with their approach the their operating systems and programs. If the Justice Department continues their unfounded attack on Microsoft the computer users will be the losers.

Thanks for reading my opinion.
Bob Jackson
Irving, Texas

MTC-00009633

From: Barry Stephens
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:12pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to voice my support for a settlement of the Microsoft Antitrust case. Before we continue to squander more taxpayer dollars, please be done with this process. I never believed the process, and still am angry at the use of countless government resources to hobble an American company involved in the high tech industry. Anti-trust protection is a valid responsibility of the DOJ, and yet it seems that the competitors were directing the case. Any reasonably astute American must know that in the environment in which Microsoft operates, a new and better OS, Browser, or other competitive software could be introduced tomorrow which will render Windows obsolete. As a taxpayer I would prefer that not one more dollar be spent on this waste of money.

Barry D. Stephens 37 Gray Lodge Road,
Kittery, Maine, USA

MTC-00009634

From: Joyce Kerze
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:13pm
Subject:

Joyce R. Kerze
4899 Golf Village Drive
Powell, Ohio 43065
January 5, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530

Dear Attorney General Ashcroft:

As an avid user of Microsoft products, I would like to express my opinion that legal action against Microsoft should stop. I think you have offered Microsoft a good settlement. I believe that the current settlement will suffice to allow computer manufacturers new rights to configure systems with access to Windows features.

I urge you to continue on the course of the present settlement, and not get distracted by the critics trying get this settlement withdrawn. This settlement is fair, and will create more competition in the IT industry. This settlement requires Microsoft to open up its code to competitors, so that they will be able to create better software. Furthermore under this agreement a technical committee that includes a government official will watch over Microsoft full time. Your support of this settlement is necessary to bring it to fruition, and that is needed to bring this three-year-old case to an end.

Once again I would like to urge you to put your full support behind the finalization of the settlement you have offered to the Microsoft Corporation. Don't let the anti Microsoft peanut gallery win the day.

Sincerely,
Joyce Kerze

MTC-00009635

From: R. Michael Kasperzak, Jr.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am writing to voice my support for the settlement between Microsoft and the United States.

As a former attorney and professional mediator, I have faith in the mediation process and believe that the negotiators for the United States made the best deal they felt they could in light of continuing litigation. I do not believe it is in the public interest for the Judicial branch to second guess the the Executive Branch with respect to the terms of the settlement, and therefore encourage the court to approve the pending settlement.

Very Truly Yours,
R. Michael Kasperzak, Jr.
Dispute Resolution Specialists

MTC-00009636

From: WMickel191@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:46pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
Dear Sirs:

I understand that this is the time for public comment on the Microsoft settlement. My feeling is that a settlement is long overdue and should be in favor of Microsoft. Our whole economy is dependent on free enterprise. Ever since this all began our economy has been in decline. It is time to get this over with and get back to the business of business. It is almost impossible to use a computer and not use a Microsoft product. This case has hurt my economic well being. Time to settle.

Thank you,
William N Mickelson

MTC-00009637

From: david tiry
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:53pm
Subject: Sirs:

Sirs:
I would like to see an end to Clinton era anti trust abuses!!!!
TODAY!!!!!!!!!!!!

Thanks,
David Tiry

MTC-00009638

From: Sally Detloff
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 4:55pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
WOOD APPRECIATE A SWIFT END TO THE JUSTICE DEPT. ACTIONS AGAINST MICROSOFT. KEEP IN MIND THAT THE JUSTICE DEPT'S ACTIONS, SINCE THE BEGINNING, HAVE BEEN DIRECTED TOWARDS THE WELFARE OF A GROUP OF COMPANIES, RATHER THAN FOR THE WELFARE OF THE CONSUMER.
SINCERELY,
GERALD F. DETLOFF
apataki6@earthlink.net

MTC-00009639

From: CA Cobb
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:00pm
Subject: I am a citizen who requests an end to the Anti-trust law abuse directed at Microsoft.
There have been many jobs and much money generated by the works of the Microsoft Company and it is time to "get back to business" and quit the "harping" that began in the Clinton-era and persists now. Please stop it and move forward for the good of the Country and the economy.
Sincerely,
Betty J. Cobb
Waco, Texas

MTC-00009640

From: Chuck DeSario
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:04pm
Subject: Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse
To whom this may concern,
As an American tax payer, and business man. I would greatly appreciate the Justice Dept. ending this anti-trust suit with Microsoft. Simply put and in my opinion the action that the D.O.J. took against Microsoft during the Clinton administration has been counter productive, not only has this issue cost the American tax paying public, millions, if not billions of dollars in lost income and corporate and personal income tax it has virtually destroyed our electronics industry single handily.
Please know that I am not pro monopoly, but I am a realist. Microsoft for all it's faults helps create a great economic base for this country. How you might ask does Microsoft contribute to the economy, simple.

1. They employ a large number of employee's who earn incomes which are distributed locally and nationally. Taxes are extruded from their pay checks, which in-turn contribute to the needs of both state and federal governments.

2. Microsoft's software programs are so cluttered with garbage, that the average computer requires huge amounts of memory, (XP, as an example requires your computer to have at least 128mb of memory on board), just to install the program, i.e.: R & D, employees, income, income and corporate taxes, etc. from memory companies.

3. Microsoft's programs also require larger capacity Hard Drives, which in-turn is great for our Hard Drive industry, (Maxtor, Seagate, Quantum, IBM.) i.e.: R & D, employees, income, income and corporate taxes, etc. Taxes are generated from both corporate, individual earnings, as well as taxes generated from the sale of the items at the retail level.

4. Processors, Intel Processors. Microsoft's programs are so cluttered you have to have a faster processor just to wade through all the garbage, otherwise you'll be sitting for hours just waiting for your computer to pull up the smallest of projects. i.e.: R & D, employees, income, income and corporate federal and state taxes, etc.

Bottom line, destroy, revamp, breakup Microsoft, and you destroy our computer industry. Yes, Microsoft may be a monopoly, WHO CARES! Millions, Billions of dollars, both income and tax dollars are being lost everyday you persist with this Anti—Trust law suit. Enough is Enough, lets get our economy back on track. Microsoft in it's own weird way has contributed to our economy for the last 10yrs. Please for the sake of the nation, cease in the pursuit of all law suites against Microsoft.

Sincerely
Chuck DeSario
Louisville, CO

MTC-00009641

From: Porter Cragin
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:05pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
12224 Northeast 130th Way
Kirkland, Washington 98034
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I would like to express my opinion on the recent Microsoft antitrust case. After three years it is obvious that the settlement had a great deal of care put into it.

Microsoft has been dealing with this issue for three years and the litigation appears to have stymied business throughout the computer industry. Pursuing further litigation could possibly bring an entire industry to its knees. This company has put out some outstanding products, and now stands to be punished for their innovative thinking. The dedication and efforts shown are what build this country. Do we really want to penalize them for doing a great job in there chosen field of endeavor?

Let's not be the ones to slow down our own progress.

Sincerely,
Porter Cragin
12224 NE 130th Way
Kirkland, WA 98034
portcragin@pcragin.com
CC:fin@mobilizationoffice.com@inetgw

MTC-00009642

From: Nikil M
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:06pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello I am a member of the community that supports BeOS. I feel that Microsoft's tactics limited BeOS from competing in the market despite a product that was very competitive. As a remedy I suggest that Microsoft immediately allow dual or triple boot options for computers from the large computer manufacturers like Dell and Compaq without any penalties. There should also be much more documentation on the win32 API so if a developer wishes to create a compatible yet superior product they may. Finally Microsoft should pay I think between 50 and 100 million dollars to either Be Inc or Palm for the damages their tactics cost to the companies. Nikil Mulakken

MTC-00009643

From: Phil Hall
To: 'microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 5:07pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As an Information Technology professional with several years of experience, I watched and read the news about the Microsoft trial with great anxiety. I know full well that if handled improperly the situation would destroy an existent company (Microsoft) for no reason, while at the same time elevating competitors for no reason as well.

Microsoft is like no other company in the history of the world. To liken it to pre-antitrust AT&T, Standard Oil, Alcoa, etc. is a gross underestimation of Microsoft's importance and would do great injustice.

I will freely admit that some actions taken by Microsoft have been potentially anticompetitive; however, if you examine the track records of the competition you will find them in a more stable environment now than the time before Microsoft's improper activities. Without exception, all the competition has benefited from the current situation, and the topic of harm to the consumer is nothing more than a smoke-screen.

Look at what Microsoft has done with the Windows Operating System. It has brought the Internet to the masses in an easily understandable form, it has "leveled the playing field" for software developers and the home user, it has brought into play an entire industry that was non-existent prior to Windows 95 being made available for sale.

Certainly, Microsoft has benefited, as is to be expected. But to claim that the consumer has been unduly harmed is foolish and outright wrong. If Microsoft is to be punished, let the punishment fit the crime. Dissolution is inappropriate, only a fine would be sufficient. A monetary penalty is the only correct solution. This coupled with a probationary oversight on business practices would definitely hinder Microsoft's alleged illegal business practices and would allow the US to recoup any losses from the investigation and would allow for a fostering of the market system to flourish.

I would remind you that Windows is dominant in the marketplace, and to damage that would create undue chaos. It is safer, and wiser, for Microsoft to remain a single unit and to be penalized via monetary fine rather than to take action that in less than 5 years would be inconsequential. The field of Information Technology grows and changes at such a rate that any decision made now would seem foolhardy within 5 years.

Make certain to understand that to promote competition for the mere sake of competition can be detrimental to what is actually in the best interest of the people. The Law doesn't make that distinction.

Thank you,
Phil Hall
1230 Dundee Avenue
Waterloo, IA 50701

MTC-00009644

From: Ben Hughes
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:11pm
Subject: Clinton Era

I would like to see the end of the Clinton era abuse of anti-trust legislation and court action.

Microsoft has provided jobs to multitudes of people and made millionaires of another group who started out as workers.

Thank you,
Sue & Ben Hughes
Lindale, Texas

MTC-00009645

From: Shayned@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:18pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

DOJ: I am alarmed that the Microsoft case may be reopened. It seems to me that the litigation simply punished a company that innovated, created jobs and wealth, and was successful. I was happy to see the case settled and would not want that settlement derailed. I notice that since the DOJ began litigation against Microsoft, its stock price has declined. Is that what you call "the public interest?" My retirement mutual funds probably own Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Shayna Alterman

MTC-00009646

From: vera feingold
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:16pm
CC: hlfein@juno.com@inetgw
To Bill Gates

No good deed should go unpunished. If you and your Company would have failed, you would be entitled to tax breaks and other assistance from the government. Since you do not need any assistance from the Government, the government seeks revenge. Hell hath no fury like a bureaucrat scorned.

As a volunteer teacher for SeniorNet, I want to thank you for your generous on-going contributions of software for the centers and for the teachers.

Vera Feingold

MTC-00009647

From: zxxx xxx
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:26pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

- open Office file formats,
- Win32 APIs,
- make dual-boot options mandatory.

P.S. Sorry for my english. I'm writing from Greece

Regards

Lambros S.

MTC-00009648

From: Paul Moncznik
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:30pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think it is important for both the industry and the economy that this settlement quickly get passed. This a tough settlement, and a fair one for Microsoft, its competitors, and for consumers. And besides, how could anyone be against a settlement which provides computers for thousands of the country's neediest schools?

MTC-00009649

From: Ivory M Bassett-Bishop
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:32pm

To Whom It May Concern:

I am extremely happy that this issue with Microsoft is being resolved. I was very pleased when the suit came about because of personal experiences trying to use other browsers, i.e. Netscape as well as IE.

The MS os would shut down and I would have to manually shut down my pc. This was not only damaging my hard drive but was causing great frustration. I was investigating all potential OS (operating systems) but everyone of them lacked. I felt trapped unless I chose Apple. Which I did for my then college daughter. Nevertheless, she soon found it too cumbersome to convert and download the materials she needed for her studies and by her junior year in nursing she brought a unit that came with a Microsoft OS. I always felt trapped in the MS no-alternative bag. In fact I just purchased a new computer last Sept. 2001, it came with ME already loaded and I would receive an automatic XP upgrade when it came out in Oct. Without knowing anything about the XP I began to investigate its attributes and pits. I found out it literally has the potential to see who is using their software, who is sharing it (I personally believe when I buy something its mine and I should be able to do with it whatever I please—that includes giving it to whomever I please, using it as I please—I PAID FOR THAT PRIVILEGE.)and if need be shutting down your system. They have since sent me the software with no info on these ramifications only mildly informing ME, the consumer, of the enhancements. If I really want to get more out of it I guess I could by one of Microsofts XP learning books or software packages. I am still in a quandary as to whether or not to install this product.

Anyway I am glad this issue has been bought out and has been resolved to some degree. I hope the consumers can now be given the opportunity to have a choice of products. As you can see Microsoft has given me one benefit I hold dear, that is HOTMAIL.

Thank You
Ivory Bishop

MTC-00009650

From: Graham—d
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:36pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Sirs

I am what I think is a 'standard user' meaning I use Microsoft products for my work and at home. I work in a bank which has standardized on Microsoft products and from a user's perspective they work, they talk to each other and we rely on Microsoft to sort out problems of compatibility.

Breaking up the company or charging massive fines is simply not right and will have a negative impact on a company that helps keep America ahead of the world. Can you imagine the French doing this? I think that sometimes we do not realize what we have here. The settlement in my view is totally fair and I question the motives of those seeking to overturn it.

Apart from being a user of their products I have no involvement in the company and do not own any shares or have any financial interest in the ultimate decision.

Graham Doubtfire
graham—d@msn.com

MTC-00009651

From: B.L. Doern
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 5:40pm
Subject: Drop it already!

Microsoft is a big player in our economy. Please finish this case as soon as possible so that we can get it behind us and move on to economic recovery.

BettyLou Doern
Modesto, California

MTC-00009652

From: Becky Smith
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-trust law

MTC-00009653

From: Helene (038) Ken Hickey
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:02pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As provided in the Tunney Act, I wish to indicate my full support for the proposed settlement with Microsoft.

I have reviewed the documents relating to this settlement

Kenneth T. Hickey
58 Longmeadows Road
Wilton, CT 068971-101

MTC-00009654

From: LPeterson2@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:01pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

In my opinion, the proposed settlement is adequate. Please put this issue to rest so that we can move forward on other more pressing issues and matters confronting our nation. Microsoft is not the enemy! Thank you.

MTC-00009655

From: econrad@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:13pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft has decent products at reasonable prices, that is why they are the largest software vendor. However they are not the only one. I can think of three other operating systems and a couple other office suites just off hand and I am not in the computer industry, there could easily be more that I am un aware of. Very often I can find share ware or even free ware that does the job for me and use these types of programs all the time.

I think it is a mistake to try to disassemble Microsoft. The goal of intergrating programs to work better together is the way we should be headed not tearing them down.

E S Conrad, Jr.
1400 Talisman Circle
Virginia Beach, Va. 23464

MTC-00009656

From: Lawrence York
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:25pm
Subject: Regarding the MSFT Settlement

I am a Microsoft Business user, Portfolio Manager and Consumer. I strongly feel that it is time to get the Microsoft case settled and I believe the terms and conditions reached by the Federal Government are fair and reasonable. I believe that the hold-out states are politically motivated due to their tech constituencies who seek more to distract a successful competitor than than to see justice served.

I think it is a disservice to the public to spend additional taxpayer money on this case and I think reaching a settlement will greatly improve the prospects for the tech sector. This in turn should benefit the government by helping the industry recover from its deep recession eventually returning it to profitability.

A lot of time has elapsed. Microsoft and the Government have reached a settlement that strikes a balance for the public good. Please now, lets focus on rebuilding and growth not political agenda and distruction. America needs this now more than ever.

Lawrence York
Portfolio Manager,
The WWW Funds

MTC-00009657

From: Jean Saylor
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:29pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

I believe that the Microsoft Settlement is fair and just, and would urge you to ensure that it is not changed. I believe it is crucial for the future of the industry that Microsoft be allowed to continue their innovative work. I feel that it is particularly important for additional features to be integrated into the existing operating system. Any computer user can attest to the extensive compatibility problems which exist when trying to integrate software from various manufacturers. For many users, just the thought of having to install various pieces of software, whether or not from multiple manufacturers, is deterrent enough to prevent them from getting the most out of their computers, or even from attempting to use a computer. If computers are ever going to be useful to those of us in the general population who do not have extensive technical backgrounds, then simpler, integrated solutions are necessary. I believe Microsoft is one of the best at providing this. I would certainly like to see more companies also attempting to provide a fully-integrated solution, but prohibiting our leading company from participating is ludicrous. And certainly, your role should not be to punish success.

Thank you for your consideration to this point of view.

Jean Saylor

MTC-00009658

From: G. B.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:39pm
Subject: comment

Dear Sr. or Madam:

I am an electrical engineer and It is my opinion that in the US best interest Microsoft has to remaine strong and united but in the other hand I think the US Government has to regulate Microsoft activities because they really take advantage of there monopoly position and a good example is my last experience: I bought a new computer with Windows XP home edition and I connected it to my home LAN only to find out that this new version has no privacy, I can not put a password to any file, resource or carpet so I can not have my information available in any computer of my house and at the same time prevent my kids of seeing that information in other computer of the LAN.

In previews versions of Windows (95, 98 and Millenium) this was possible so Microsoft took out some functions and now if you want those functions you have to buy the XP professional version (at a higher price, of course). To make things worst, if you assume that the new home version will have at least all the functions that the last one had (a good assumption because this is the case with manufacturers in a normal market and not in a monopoly) and buy it there is no upgrade to the professional version paying only the difference so if I want my privacy in my LAN I need to buy a XP professional as if I did not have the XP home edition.

This is just one example of the kind of abuses that Microsoft Monopoly make and that is why I think that the US Government has to regulate Microsoft in a way that this kind of practices will be avoided.

Many thanks for your attention.
Gregorio Beitman

MTC-00009659

From: Ralph Sickinger (R2)
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:51pm
Subject: Proposal for Resolution to United States v. Microsoft Settlement

Dear Sir(s) or Madam(s):

I respectfully submit the following proposal as a possible penalty against Microsoft: My proposal is quite simple: Microsoft should be compelled to release the complete source code for Windows 98 to the public domain. This proposal has the following benefits:

(1) It is simple and inexpensive to implement. It would be far less "traumatic" or difficult to implement than (for example) splitting up the company.
(2) It would benefit the public: one of the most significant injuries to the consumer as a result of Microsoft's actions is the lack of stability in the Windows OS. By comparison, Linux, which is open source, is VERY stable, because there is a large developer community that works at fixing bugs that appear. The Windows community could benefit greatly from having an open-source version of the Windows OS available.

(3) It would be reasonable: Windows 98 is now 3 year-old technology; it is significantly behind Windows 2000 and Windows XP in terms of it's development. Also, it is a major iteration behind Windows 2000/XP; as a result, any competitor desiring to compete against Microsoft, would not be able to compete directly against Windows without some significant effort. At the same time, Windows 98 is still (just barely) current enough to not be worthless to the public.

Microsoft has not had to focus on the consumer, or be responsive to the consumer, since it does not face any significant competition in the OS segment. A public domain version of Windows 98 (or a variation of the OS further developed by a corporation) would provide consumers with another choice for an operating system that could still run the current generation of Windows software packages.

Thank you for your consideration.

Respectfully,
Ralph P. Sickinger
15735 Erwin Ct
Bowie, MD 20716
ralph@sickinger.net

MTC-00009660

From: Randall
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 6:56pm
Subject: I want to end Clinton era Anti trust law abuse against Microsoft!

The whole thing with Microsoft has been insane. Leave Microsoft alone, and get on with the business of running the country. If people want to compete with Microsoft, then they need to get their brains in gear!!! We want the handful of people who have pursued this to get on with life.

Thanks
Tracey Sigle
Lincoln, NE

MTC-00009661

From: root@wt6.usdoj.gov@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR,antitrust@ftc.gov@inetgw,Ralph@essen...
Date: 1/8/02 7:00pm
Subject: 21st Century Civilization
CC:letters@latimes.com@inetgw,letters@sjmercury.com@i...

MTC-00009662

From: Eduard and Carol Prets
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:05pm
Subject: Get off your ass and leave Microsoft alone

At a time like this when everything is going to hell, why are you wasting your time and money chasing after a company like Microsoft. Microsoft's secret is not illegal. They have a product that works—it's that simple. Other companies products either don't work, or they are not easy to use.

So, suck it up. Take a loss. You've wasted enough of our money. Tell all the other internet companies that are paying you that they need to get a life.

Sincerely,
A Tax Paying Citizen of Washington State

MTC-00009663

From: David Larman
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 7:06pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,
 I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed: examples: open Office file formats, Win32 APIs and make dual-boot options mandatory.

Regards,
 David Larman

MTC-00009664

From: MOLITUO@aol.com@inetgw
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 7:14pm
 Subject: Wal-Mart vs Kmart

Dear DOJ:
 Rather than allow this endless pursuit of Microsoft whose products do NOT harm consumers, how about getting on Walmart's back for a change? Walmart has put hundreds of thousands of small vendors out of business, in addition to large chains like Caldor, Bradlee's, Jamesway, etc.! It looks like Kmart may be next!

I recently visited our local Kmart; and I found more cashiers on duty than there were customers in the store! Today, I made a purchase of one item at our local Walmart; and I had to wait about 20 minutes in a cashier's line because there were a multitude of customers and only about 5 cashiers on duty! The trick for Walmart seems to be this: After opening a new store, spoil your customers at first; then when they have been trained to frequent Walmart, lighten up on customer service! As a monopoly, you don't have to be good to your customers anymore! After all, the competition has for the most part gone out of business!

I'm being forced more and more to shop at Walmart, as their competitors "fade away!" DOJ should send a few agents incognito to some of their stores; and verify or disprove my complaint.

An intriguing observation: "How May I Help You?" is imprinted on the back of Walmart's employees' workjackets. Why on the back, I always wondered. I often find myself hurrying after one or another Walmart employee for help, as the "How May I Help You?" logo recedes rapidly into the distance, like a Doppler Effect! Racing after the offer of help, so to speak!

I wish something can be done to protect the few competitors that still survive!

Thank you,
 Nicholas S. Molinari
 31 Whitman Street
 Brick, NJ 08724-2448
 732-458-8485

MTC-00009665

From: William Stella
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/8/02 7:16pm
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear United States Department of Justice and U.S. District Court Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly: I am just a simple carpenter, (who also happens to be very close in age to Judge Kollar-Kotelly—I will be 58 soon and our world-perspective is likely to be fundamentally somewhat similar), but I have some very real concerns regarding the Microsoft lawsuits from both the federal DOJ and state AGs. Basically, I think that none of you are acting in the best interests of the vast majority of Americans. My deep feelings of patriotism—and this is a very real patriotism issue—come from having served in the 7th Special Forces Group and the 82nd Airborne Division from 1961 through 1964, AND my consequent understanding that "all that is necessary for the forces of evil to prevail in the world is for enough good people to do nothing". I actually suspect—especially in the situation regarding the various state AGs gathering together and 'joining' in this legal action—that there are very strong questions about the constitutionality of said activity. Representatives from a number of states began to conspire and try to force the federal government to take certain kinds of actions in the past. A notable example was eventually thwarted by a guy—a President, if you will—named Abe Lincoln. I wrote a rather blunt letter to Judge Stanley Sporkin several years ago about the same basic issues involved with the DOJ, et al. Some of the cast-culprits from the competition have changed or been added, but their motives and behavior are just as scum-bag-greedy as ever! Here it is below, for your edification, entertainment and hopeful enlightenment:

(Note: I no longer live at the address shown in the letter. My current address is: 14424 North Creek Drive % 1126 Mill Creek, Washington 98012)

March 2, 1995

U.S. District Court Judge Stanley Sporkin
 The District Court for the District of Columbia
 United States Court House
 333 Constitution Avenue, NW
 Washington, DC 20001

Dear Judge Sporkin:

I am just a simple carpenter.

Perhaps you will help renew my faith in humanity and find it in your heart to take a little time to pay attention to a nobody like me. After all, you probably spend most of your day listening to lawyers—and I'll bet that my views are much more honest and fun. (I must admit that, thirty-some years ago, I gave only slightly more than a passing fancy to the notion that I might want to go to law school myself.) (I looked around at the company I'd be keeping and realized—your honor excepted, of course—that I might soon feel like Diogenes of Sinope—but picture him standing stark-naked on a minuscule ice floe floating in the Arctic Ocean in mid-December and having had F. Lee Bailey skip blithely across the water and r-r-r-r-r-r-rip his lantern from his hand, then trying to cover the faint flicker of his tiny now-substituting candle flame in the midst of an horrendous, howling, horrible, hailing, raging, ravaging, roaring, fierce, ferocious, furious, snowing, sleeting, multiplying savage storm!—rather than living his ideal, natural life of sitting in a tub and occasionally venturing-out, searching the daylight.) Whew! Dat be de long sentence. It's with considerable interest that I've been reading a great deal about your recent involvement in the Microsoft anti-trust maybe/maybe not settlement. In addition to actually working for a living—I eagerly await a brief lay-off ending work-call from my union, Carpenters' Local 131, at this very moment—I've used microcomputers, at home and in several workplace situations, since the early Eighties.

And, I'm writing to you, Judge Sporkin, because I simply cannot believe that virtually all the press reports I've read have misquoted you and misunderstood you. (It is kinda nifty to read our local press folks. I am a Seattle Times subscriber and get exposed to excellent reporting from the likes of Steve Dunphy and Paul Andrews, fairly good reporting from Michele Matassa Flores—plus awful, inane, and inept garbage from our very own version of what can best be described as "Clueless in Seattle", O. Casey Corr. This nincompoop has just got to be the publisher's nephew or something!)

I read Hard Drive back when it was hot off the presses. Most of the personal and business behavior described in the Wallace/Erickson book seems nasty. It also seems pretty typical. The authors indicate that Bill Gates does not possess even the most basic or fundamental sense of ethics—whether it's having sex "with the wife of one of Osborne Computer's overseas executives" or stealing trade secrets from guileless prospective acquisition partners who've told Gates, or his confederates, too much. It may be that some of those stories are actually true hey, stranger things have happened! It may be that, at worst, Bill Gates is essentially amoral. Or, at best, he may be brash, arrogant, slick, sneaky, heavy-handed, and business-brutal. So fucking what? (Remember, I'm an unsophisticated tradesman. You will please excuse my lack of knowledge regarding proper judge-letter decorum. Throughout, I intend no disrespect to you or your institution.) (I must admit here that I would direct my personal admiration toward the likes of Arthur Ashe—I hope you've read his last book—rather than Bill Gates. And, perhaps, someday Gates will develop Ashe-like aspirations? Hope springs . . .)

What's the point of all this corporation meddling/oversight? Whimpy-assed also-rans and potential once-weres from their own silly ignorance and stupidity? Is it to protect some What IS Microsoft's competition doing? You know, Judge, it's almost as though all these wonderful, mega-bucks, ersatz business 'giants'—the CEOs at Apple, IBM, Motorola, Borland, Novell, and now, today, America Online, CompuServe, and Prodigy, decided to get together in a big circle and created some weird new-age ritual wherein they watched each other cut off their own balls! What a bunch of prissy little twits! Take a look at the marketplace. Really take a look. I mean, never mind those whining little suck-butts who have poor market savvy. Let me give you my own anecdotal example—it's pretty straight-forward:

1. I recently ordered, on February 17th, a Micron P100PCI Millennium PC. Micron, also an exceptionally talented company, has some sort of an agreement with Microsoft which provides Micron with Microsoft Office Professional 4.3/Microsoft Bookshelf on CD-ROM to bundle with its high-end PCs. I like that. (I would be quite surprised to learn that Micron is a Reback silent partner—quite surprised, indeed.) IMPORTANT NOTE: Please understand, that if I choose, I may completely ignore ALL the software on my new computer, write all my own code using a wide variety of computer languages and operating systems on different sectors of my one-gigabyte hard drive, and develop any utility or application programs I dream up. My machine is fundamentally nothing more than a mass of potentially incredibly well-coordinated electronic impulses, just chomping at the bit, waiting for me to provide it with lucid instructions. This machine makes no demands on me, but offers me the tacit agreement that it will dance all over itself with zero/one delightfulness once I give it the proper zeros and ones. Hence, GIGO. (And this garbage-in-garbage-out concept could apply to lawsuits too—ya know what I mean, Verne?) We could get real anthropomorphic about it, but, it is just a fancy box of wires and wafers. So, what's left for me to do is to look around for some entity to take the aforementioned potential, and direct it better than I. N'est pas?

2. If you'd followed the development of PC software and hardware more closely, you would understand that this is a company, Microsoft, which produces excellent products—at a very reasonable price, with exceptional features which enable users to make very efficient use of their time and energy. (You'll notice that I didn't say "perfect" products, or even the "best" products. We have yet to see those—and it may not be Microsoft providing them!

3. Suppose I decide that I want to switch to Novell's PerfectOffice Professional software. I would run out to Egghead Software and buy it for $550. That's a lot of money. But, when you look at most businesses—even quite small home businesses—that amount of money isn't going to make or break you. And, now you'd own both sets of office software! (You could do the same thing with Lotus SmartSuite for $460.)

4. You could buy an Apple computer with an entirely different operating system, along with its own pretty handy software. Millions have. Why haven't millions more?

5. The number of software companies is growing remarkably fast, NOT SHRINKING—to a great extent because of Microsoft's enormous success and its continuing efforts to generate greater interest and involvement with personal computers. The old "bandwagon effect:"

6. Is the world rushing to IBM and their operating system, O/S 2 Warp? Why not? Could you, Judge Stanley Sporkin, decide to write your very own operating system, market it, and make tons of moolah? You, if you really know what you're doing, bet your sweet behind you could! SO, WHERE'S THE MONOPOLY? WHAT'S THE BIG DEAL?

And all this crap about "vaporware" and the "smoking gun". Gimme a break. Microsoft lawyers lied to you? Do lawyers lie? Do bears dump ordure in the woods? You see, it isn't just the knowledge that ALL software companies—and most hardware companies, like maybe IBM, (surely, in my humble opinion, one of lawyer Reback's clients), have been doing this "vapor" stuff for forty years or more. By the way, so have the car makers, appliance companies, chemical companies, etc.

This is a very complex and challenging world into which you've fallen. The players inventors, developers, publishers, manufacturers, and customers—form a group unlike any you've ever imagined. The level of sophistication may be higher, especially that of the customers, than any other single societal element. And this fact is very important—even critical to you and your task. My hope is that you have some sort of "warp-speed" learning curve, since I don't believe, frankly, that you really know what's happening here. You have got to be damned sure that you are looking at victims.

Hey, help me out here. Is it possible that you may be thinking about putting some Rehnquist-like gold bands around your robes or something? I mean, I've picked-up this thing and perused it for years, from inside and out, top and bottom, at every imagined angle. I've squinted at it with a tilt, a lilt, and felt its temperature in all sorts of weather—and, mixing metaphors with complete abandon, you still look like a wild-ass bull in a fragile china shop to me.

Historically, the real damage done to society and our environments—both natural and competitive—has been visited upon us when large businesses or governmental agencies have colluded, not faced-off. (Oil companies, meat packers, railroads, the literally criminal behavior of General Motors and Standard Oil as they conspired to eliminate the trolley-car system in L.A., the Bay of Pigs fiasco, the Vietnam War, (I served in the 7th Special Forces Group and the 82d Abn. Div. from '61—'64, and have some first-hand knowledge of how and what our government did secretly—like Special Forces psych-warfare and sabotage teams operating, clandestinely, in North Vietnam during the late '50s and early '60s and the subsequent huge increase in manpower allocations following President Kennedy's visit to Fort Bragg and his viewing of our razzle-dazzle "sneaky pete" demonstrations—jet-pack-flying-soldiers bullshit and all. From your experience with the C.I.A. and the S.E.C., you understand the fundamental differences between groups-which-do-battle-amongst-themselves and groups-which-secretly-manipulate,-collude,-and-cooperate-while-publicly-portraying-themselves-as-rivals. The former may be rough all 'round as they behave in classic Darwinian fashion—providing more fit survivors. The latter gouges and rapes citizens and consumers. And denies all of us access to the better and best which life has to offer.

I'm convinced that you are having much trouble in gaining a clear picture of the issues involved in this case. (Yeah, I know that sounds rather smart-ass of me. But just try to consider some of what I have to say, in an open-minded manner, then worry about tone later.) Part of your difficulty lies in your lack of exposure to, and genuine familiarity with, the use and history of PCs and their software. Hard Drive presents only a small portion of that history, and it has a very narrow view to boot. Sources are all around you.

Scientific American has followed computers for many years now. The September '94 issue has an excellent article, "Software's Chronic Crisis", you will find quite valuable. In fact, Scientific American has computer-related articles in nearly every issue, including the current March, '95 and many of them deal with business and software together.

And maybe give some thought to having a talk with people like George Fisher—who had a totally different approach to some of these same technology competition issues while he was the CEO at Motorola several years ago—and former Congressman, Secretary of Defense, White House Chief of Staff, and an accomplished businessman, Don Rumsfeld. They are just a couple of the sources available to you to get a realistic sense of the actual market forces at work.

Lastly, I want to mention, in general, some of the global market factors involved. As you know, millions of dollars are stolen from many U.S. software companies every year. Software developers are using more and more foreign sources for their work all the time. You run the risk of, once again, killing another American golden-egg-laying goose. If you want to drive all of Microsoft's operations, not just some of them, to India, Bulgaria, and who knows where—keep pounding away. A zippy little reality check shows that Gates could run his corporation from just about anywhere—all Microsoft facilities could be re-located to Halmahera, Jabalpur, or even Kumbukkan, whilst he and his gang of top bananas stroll the halls of their Puget Sound mansions, occasionally tapping a few keys in Microsoft Office Professional 4.3 to check-up on things.

What's happened to the American television and electronics industry? Autos? Book publishing? The point is, if you try to gain power and fame by bludgeoning world-class American corporations like Microsoft—in the misguided belief that they have a monopoly—you may actually provide even more opportunities for far less competent, ethical, and competitive software providers—and end-up destroying the enormous good side of our business environment for American companies. Frankly, foreign companies love the way our courts stomp on our businesses. (I'm not talking about real concerns like health and safety rules—I mean the very methods you seem so upset about. The exclusive license agreements which build powerful ties between Microsoft and its partners, and even other trade so-called 'questionable' practices.) Let the companies who complain and try to coerce the Justice Department, move their cause to civil courts with actual violations of law. Let 'em make their case with better products and prices in the marketplace. Let 'em go door-to-door, if necessary, with excellent products.

A year ago today, I turned fifty. I read Mr. Ashe's book and felt terrific for it. Today, on my fifty-first birthday, you, you lucky dog, are the recipient of my efforts at trying to make a small, positive difference. It may surprise you to learn that I don't own Microsoft stock, but I know several carpenters who do—they've done well and acted wisely. I hope you will too.

Sincerely,

William S. Stella

8615 238th Street, S.W., G302

Edmonds, Washington 98026
(206) 775-0550

P.S. Rest assured that I would certainly enjoy having the opportunity to meet you or talk with you at any time. If you ever visit the Seattle area, please give me a call and I'll treat you to Harry Nagamatsu's Atlantic Street Pizza—"Garlic Gulch" for sure. Maybe Willy Windows will join us, and then you can really pummel him.

P.P.S. Obviously, this is a personal letter. I don't represent anyone—not my union, Microsoft, the late and great Arthur Ashe—except simple ol' me.

C.C. Stephen H. Dunphy—Seattle Times Business Columnist Bill Gates—Microsoft Corporation

MTC-00009666

From: TBurTREE@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:16pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I support the Microsoft Settlement. Glad to see an end to the Clinton era of anti trust lawsuits.

Sincerely, Terry Burnett
Phx, AZ.

CC:tburtree@earthlink.net@inetgw

MTC-00009667

From: Bob (038) Caryl Horstmeier
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:17pm
Subject: GOVT. SHAKEDOWN OF MICROSOFT

DEAR WHO EVER AT JUSTICE DEPT;
I BELIEVE THAT MICRO SOFT DOES NOT RATE A SHAKE DOWN BY THE GOVT. JUST BECAUSE MICROSOFT DID NOT CONTRIBUTE TO SLICK WILLY. THE REST OF THE WORLD IS WONDERING WHY WE SHAKE DOWN OUR BEST ACHIEVERS.

ROBERT HORSTMEIER, 112 STANTON STREET, DAVIS ILLINOIS, 61019-0183 randchorst@stateline-isp.com

MTC-00009668

From: brede
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:21pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I think the States and the Justice Dept should leave Microsoft alone. What a bunch of envious second rate people you've become. Hatred of the good for being good is not an American ideal any longer.

Eternal Vigilance,
Lorelei Brede

MTC-00009669

From: Thomas LaRusso
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:38pm
Subject: MICROSOFT SETTLEMENT
THE REMEDY THE GOVERNMENT PROPOSED SHOULD BE SETTLED ON. NO FURTHER STATE ACTION SHOULD BE CONSIDERED.

TOM LARUSSO

MTC-00009670

From: Dale Fester
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:51pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

DOJ: I support the settlement, even though I feel it is unfair to Microsoft. I feel that Microsoft has never been a problem for consumers. It is my belief that they have been tough competitors, but that is what free enterprise is all about. The Justice Department should never have taken the side of the losing competitors. I believe it was the DOJ, Sun Microsystems, Netscape, and the predudicial judge who were responsible for starting the economy into its downturn. I certainly don't thank you for that! The complaining states should be sent packing. All they are interested in is trying to get money from Microsoft, who has in no way hurt consumers. I thank Microsoft for an excellent product that they market for a fair price. If it hadn't been for Microsoft developing a universal software for us computer users, we would be in a lot of trouble trying to link across an innumerable variety of computer operating systems. Leave them alone. When I worked for a large aerospace company, we were always trying to beat the others and we had no love or compassion for them. That's the definition of free enterprise, which is based on survival of the best competitors.

Dale Fester
2916 South Fenton St.
Denver, Colorado 80227
Tel: 303-985-5678

MTC-00009671

From: Carol Adams
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:50pm
Subject: microsoft anti-trust suit
TO: US Dept of Justice
From: Carol C. Adams
Atlanta, GA

Please close the case against Microsoft and therefore end the abuse of our anti trust laws. Microsoft is a fine competitive company that is successful and should be a model for other emerging companies.

Yours truly,
Carol Adams

MTC-00009672

From: cphatcher
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:52pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
The Microsoft trial has squandered taxpayers' dollars. It is high time for this trial, and the wasteful spending accompanying it, to be over. Competition should be in the marketplace not the courtroom. Competition means creating better goods and offering superior services to consumers. With the reins off the high-tech industry, more entrepreneurs will be encouraged to create new and competitive products and technologies. This whole mess is the result of the aggressive lobbying efforts of a few of Microsoft's competitors.

Now that the federal government and nine states have finally reached a comprehensive agreement with Microsoft to address the reduced liability found in the Court of Appeals ruling. It's time to put this to rest.

This settlement is tough, but seems reasonable and fair to all parties involved. I agree this settlement is good for them, the industry and the American economy. I support the Microsoft settlement.

Clarence Hatcher
3268 F 3/10 Road
Clifton, CO 81520

MTC-00009673

From: Clark Cox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:52pm
Subject: Anti-Trust Case

There is no way DOJ can prove consumers are worse off due to Microsoft's actions. Maybe their competitors are worse off, but that is the nature of business. Personal computer use soared in this country due to standardization, and that standardization is due to the success of Microsoft's products. Please stop wasting our tax dollars with the pursuit of Microsoft, there are much better uses of these dollars than frivolous litigation.

MTC-00009674

From: Wanda
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:57pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I support settling the Microsoft case. I think it would be in the best interests of the public to do so. I do think, however, that Bill Gates abused his company's position by creating software that requires everything to be built on it's base and holding smaller companies hostage by requiring them to use Microsoft's products in order to market their own.

Wanda Simonson

MTC-00009675

From: rosalie mcGhie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:58pm
Subject: microsoft comment

MTC-00009676

From: Merle Steffenson
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:07pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I'm sure getting tired of reading and hearing about this! Let's quit wasting my tax money and dispose of this case. It looks like you're running interference for Microsoft's competitors (who, in many cases, probably wouldn't even exist if it weren't for Microsoft). Get it settled and get the holdout states in line. I'm from Iowa and I'm ashamed to see the AG trying to get into Microsoft's pockets. Get more from the Web.'

MTC-00009677

From: Harry Crowell
To: 'Microsoft.atr(a)usdoj.gov'
Date: 1/8/02 8:21pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement

I believe the U S economy has suffered enough with this wasteful and foolish witchunt of a series of expensive lawsuits. Please stop harming our fragile economy. All this lawsuit mess is doing is creating a lot of wealth for a bunch of lawyers and for sure it is not reducing the cost of computing.

MTC-00009678

From: The Fosters
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 8:13pm
Subject: GIVE UP ON microsoft

The settlements already given are enough. Please DUMP the case as this is only left over from Clinton years. Lets get back to helping industry.

Gifford Foster

MTC-00009679

From: Walter B. Mills

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 8:14pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Dear Members of the Department of Justice:

If Microsoft is satisfied with the present government judgement agreed to by nine state attorney generals, then I recommend ending future litigations. My personal view of this court case against Microsoft is: "it never should have happened"! Microsoft "Windows" isn't a finished product. The competitors who sought government protection are simply not competitive.

The American Public is extremely fortunate that Microsoft invented "Windows" before a foreign nation developed it. Billions of dollars have flowed to America that otherwise could have been lost. Consumers of Microsoft products have excellent products at affordable prices thanks to competition the American way. I certainly do not wish to see Bill Gates and his company penalized for producing better products (a better mouse trap as the old saying goes).

As a consumer of Microsoft products, I have not been overcharged as might happen with a monopoly. However, I have lost financially when Microsoft stock prices dropped severely due to this court case.

Do not penalize Microsoft for success. Encourage the competition to do better! The government must not dictate to Microsoft how to design computer software. That would be a disaster and America would lose it's inventive edge!

Respectfully,

Walter B. Mills

20070 Park Ridge Lane

Sedro Woolley, WA 98284-7601

Email: ettbert@cnw.com

MTC-00009680

From: Douglas Matheson

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 8:20pm

Subject: judgement

I happen to use Microsoft products for the Macintosh. I like them, but I can't stand the grassroots propaganda the MS uses to get their way. They were wrong in the way they conducted business for the last 15 years (at least). Don't let them give software, make them give real dollars and let the receivers decide where to spend it.

Douglas W. Matheson Ph.D

Dept. of Psychology

University of the Pacific

Stockton, CA USA

MTC-00009681

From: Billy Colwell

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 8:29pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

P.O. Box 35

Roxton, Texas 75477

January 8, 2002

Attorney General John Ashcroft

US Department of Justice

950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW

Washington, DC 20530

Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am writing this letter to you today to express to you my sincere delight at the resolution of the long drawn out antitrust lawsuit filed against Microsoft. The resolution that was reached is a long overdue end to this debacle. Terms of this settlement are quite extensive and cover every parties needs, I believe. For the competitor software companies, there are provisions that give them access to the interface information so that their software can work more smoothly in Microsoft's Windows operating system. For the computer manufacturers, there are provisions that would prevent Microsoft from retaliating against them should they promote software from Microsoft's competitors. For the consumers, there are provisions that stimulate competition, which subsequently keeps prices down. There is no part that this settlement does not cover; it truly is all encompassing. There is no reason to litigate this further. A settlement has been reached, and its time to let this issue rest. I hope you will hear the opinion of people like me and agree to the settlement that was reached. I thank you for your time today.

Sincerely,

Billy Colwell

MTC-00009682

From: Richard Gillmann

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 8:33pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The terms proposed are tough but fair. It's time to settle this case and let American business get back to doing what it does best—making the best products in the world.

Richard Gillmann

4150—187th Ave SE

Issaquah, WA 98027 (USA)

(425)641-5136

<http://www.nwlink.com/rxg/>

richard@folkradio.org

-or-rxg@nwlink.com

MTC-00009683

From: H. Hoffman

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 8:43pm

Subject: Justice Department Members: I believe that it is past time to end the Clinton era Anti-trust law

Justice Department Members: I believe that it is past time to end the Clinton era Anti-trust law abuse. It is a sad state of affairs when men and women aren't allowed to achieve what they are able to achieve legally because someone who isn't able to achieve as much yells "foul". I'm tired of all these petty lawsuits that make lawyers wealthy and naturally competitive persons want to give up on the American dream of making wealth through hard work and ingenuity. This is the kind of thing that will bring America down if allowed to continue. PLEASE, PUT A STOP TO IT!

Helen Hoffman

4805 Serena Court.

Carmichael, Ca. 95608-4240

MTC-00009684

From: JewisonP@aol.com@inetgw

To: Microsoft ATR

Date: 1/8/02 8:58pm

Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Attorney General John Ashcroft

United States Department of Justice

Let me first note that I am a longtime Microsoft (MS) product user. I started with Apple, played with Unix and LINUX and naturally gravitated to the MS platform due to business needs and productivity.

I preface this so as you know that when I am writing you today to voice my support for the settlement that was reached on November 6, 2001, between MS and the government, you represent, my request and opinion is based not on pure emotion but on experience.

Productivity is the issue. MS provides it. You (the court, politicians, special interests and unsuccessful competitors) have conspired to come against MS, each for your own reasons. If the competitors had as good a product as MS, they would be where MS is and not seeking to steal their profits or destroy MS by use of greedy and unethical lawyers. Netscape Navigator is a perfect example of this. If it wasn't prone to crashing, I would probably still be using Netscape today. I discontinued using it several years ago due to its unreliability factor.

Let you think me bias, may I acknowledge that I have and am still using several third party products (both software and hardware) on top of the MS platform without conflict or bugs. So, again, where is the problem? Where is this monopoly that MS is supposed to have? As an American consumer I can still pick and choose to acquire the software that I desire. Yes, I may have to initiate contact or search for a separate vender to acquire something made by MS but doesn't have the features that I desire, but you and I do that every day when we buy groceries or other products. One store may not have the cookies I like, so although they may have several different types of cookies on hand, I will make my purchases there and on the way home stop off at another store that has the cookies I like. And if the first store is giving away their cookies free with, say, the purchase of milk, fine, but I'm not prevented from going to the other store on my way home and buying the cookies I like. It just means that I now have two cookies. One I will eat and the other thrown away or given to the dog.

I like many in America do not understand your "Monopoly" issue. It doesn't exist as far as I can see. What exists is political greed and lack of moral character. The politicians found that they could gain some extra cash (it would be called extortion or racketeering if it were done by the common man) and votes by pretending to support the little guy. It always looks good when you have stand up for the little guy and slap down the "rich" capitalist. It's the mentality we suffer with these days because the government has taught us all to be victims. How better to succeed, by everybody having nothing. We all share the same misery. It's killing America, not only business but also the social structure and fabric of this great country. The courts/lawyers jumped into the fray, because that's what vultures do. They prey on the vulnerable. Mr. Gates and MS were going about their business. Clinton and his cronies were not getting political kick backs from this ingrate. Seagate was a friend and made huge contributions. They, however, were being beaten up in the marketplace by someone who was producing a better product and marketing it better. Clinton was having his own problems and saw an opportunity to deflect a little heat and pay back a political debt. And, Viola! Enter the courts.

Besides who stands to profit. Look at the huge sums that are being collected by both the prosecution and defense attorneys. In the end, its the litigation attorneys who will walk away from this with their pockets full. The consumer will again suffer the disadvantage by paying more for less. MS will have to put the breaks on innovation, which in their industry may be the death knell.

This case was political from the beginning. It's time to settle this thing. The offers have been made and accepted, except by a few greedy State Attorneys. Let them go back to their casinos and constituent for their State's needs. Leave Microsoft alone. They and we the consumer do not owe them a thing. Because they have increased their state's spending by 63% (according to America Legislative Exchange Council) over the decade of the 90's is not Microsoft's fault. These local politicians need to either cut spending or seek the deficiencies from their own constituencies. They should not seek to balance their budgets upon the back of MS. MS sells a good product. Do not punish them further with this injustice.

You have exacted the penalty. Microsoft is willing to suffer the "penalty". Let them get back to what they do. Making a quality product that puts productivity in American business which has put us ahead of the world. To further delay or seek greater damages is only to deter and prolong the injustice. The US court was out to find a scapegoat for a previous administration. That administration is now gone. The court is supposed to be a separate branch of the government, not a Brown Shirt for the Executive Branch. This case should have never come before the courts. Accept this settlement as is and clear your calendar for real crimes and criminals. Thank you for suffering through this diatribe, but may I state for the record that I support this settlement and believe it will have a broad positive impact on the state of our economy at the present time.

Sincerely,
Patric J. Jewison
a registered voter from Billings, Montana

MTC-00009685

From: NancyLfp@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:04pm
Subject: microsoft settlement

I believe microsoft has done nothing wrong to warrant punishment by DOJ. They have simply been fierce competitors in a business where there are many options for those using computers in areas where microsoft leads. They could lose their lead at any time. DOJ would do well to focus on real problems in this country and Bill Gates is not one of them.

Nancy Prestopino

MTC-00009686

From: Cosmo S
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:07pm
Subject: Microsoft
I urge you to end Clinton-era Anti-trust law abuse aimed at Microsoft.
Sincerely,
Cosmo Stallone

MTC-00009687

From: PHarris711@aol.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:31pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
To whom it may concern:
Please settle the Microsoft case. It is in the public interest to do so!!! If this continues only the lawyers will win.
Grace Harris
234 East Rocks Road
Norwalk, CT 06851

MTC-00009688

From: John (038) Marty Trueblood
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:34pm
Subject: Micro-soft Settlement
I believe that the Anti-Trust Suit against Micro-soft should end now, today. Competition is necessary and should be the challenge, not the call to punish a successful company. It is time for all to let go of this unfair law suit and to let the other Companies get on with their business, develop better products and compete in the open market.
John A. Trueblood
8916 196 th. Street
McAlpin, Florida 32062
(386) 364-5316

MTC-00009689

From: Sandi Wilke
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 9:36pm
Subject: Drop the trial against Microsoft. The settlement is good. Let's get on with America and free enterprise. Let Americans spend their money the way they feel is best for them.
Thank you.
sandiw@turbonet.com

MTC-00009690

From: tomkeplar
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 7:50pm
Subject: Drop the Microsoft case
I believe the Justice Dept. should make the Microsoft case disappear. We are all free to choose our computer items. Let it be a thing of the past. There is so many terrible things that are going on, so look to the future. For one, the environmental groups, Sierra, Friends, Greens, etc are all trying to take over the plant, it is time to investigate their expensive offices and things they use their money for. I sort of believe they are UN-American.

MTC-00009692

From: Lynn Handy
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:27pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Do not remove Java from Windows—there are many valuable websites that depend on this programming to provide their services. One such site is wetbusters.com, which provides a valuable source of support and info to children and adults with enuresis—I know of now other such site available, and as a health care provider, I need to be sure my patients can have ongoing access to this superb support site.

Thank you.
Lynn Handy, ARNP

MTC-00009693

From: Benjam(00ED)n Mu(00F1)oz Mateu
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:37pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

MTC-00009694

From: Lyn Monahan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:48pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

MTC-00009695

From: Charles Lyons
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:48pm
Subject: Anti-trust NO!
The time has come for DOJ to put a merciful end to the Clinton-era attack on one of the most successful companies in the long history of the United States. In America's fight for survival of a free system of government against a system of terrorism, we need strong and innovative organizations dedicated to communicating the message of freedom to peoples around the world.
Charles E. Lyons

MTC-00009696

From: slclark
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-trust Issue
Good Morning—
Please in the interests of the citizens of our great country drop the case against Microsoft. It has been dragging on for the last several years and is costing the tax payer many millions of dollars and really making a mess of the economy while making the lawyers very rich.
Have a good day,
(Mr & Mrs) Sharon L & Joyce M Clark
CC:slclark

MTC-00009697

From: slclark
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 10:59pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-trust Issue
Good Morning—
Please in the interests of the citizens of our great country drop the case against Microsoft. It has been dragging on for the last several years and is costing the tax payer many millions of dollars and really making a mess of the economy while making the lawyers very rich.
Have a good day,
(Mr & Mrs) Sharon L & Joyce M Clark
CC:slclark

MTC-00009698

From: Francois Vincent

To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:03pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi,

I am part of a worldwide network that is working on getting the BeOS or equivalent back into the market place, but there is no hope of success if the following issues aren't addressed:

1—MS Office needs to be opened, so that developers interested in porting it or understanding the document formats can do so either in form of a source code licence or an allowance to see it, check it and "clone libraries", so that applications on non-Windows OSs can read and write MS Office formats for flawless interaction with Windows users.

2—The Win32 API needs to be made available (incl. undocumented APIs) so that WINE can be successfully ported not only to BeOS but other OS too.

3—The file system needs to be opened, so that BeOS users can continue to access files on non-BFS partitions.

4—The ruling must include a "must-carry" rule, so that any OEM Microsoft is supplying Windows with HAS to "dual-boot" an alternative operating system, in this case BeOS, in order to remedy the damage MS has done to BeOS in the past.

What Microsoft did and still does doesn't respect at all the freedom of expression that USA defends. People have the right to know that exists other Operating System than Windows and to choose which one is better.

Thank you very much and I hope that justice will be made.

Francois Vincent www.bug-mg.org

MTC-00009699

From: Sandy Alto
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:23pm
Subject: PLEASE GET OFF MICROSOFT'S BACK!

It's utterly insane that a bunch of state governments are allowed to play politics in this economy with technology companies. Microsoft is not a monopoly, creates outstanding products that have made my life incredibly better and easier, AND WILDLY ECONOMICAL.

Technology advances must be made for our economy to grow. We need to leave Microsoft alone and let them compete in the marketplace as they have in the past. The best company that offers the best service will win, but with so many needs that have to be met, it's unlikely that one company will ever be able to be all things to all consumers.

Stop trying to regulate this industry by penalizing Microsoft. Let the marketplace drive demand, service, and quality.

Thank you,
Sandra Alto
19012 90th Pl. N.E.
Bothell, WA 98011

MTC-00009700

From: Tom (038) Carolyn Burke
To: US Dept of Justice-Microsoft anti-trust comments
Date: 1/8/02 11:24pm
Subject: Microsoft Anti-Settlement

This is not punishment for breaking a law it is a reward. This "settlement" is a terrible, terrible dis-service to the American people. This settlement allows microsoft to further their monopolistic ways in a most insidious way by allowing them greater access to our most valuable assets, our children. Further, it shows our children that breaking laws will be rewarded, rather than punished, by our highest courts. How can this be justice? How will our children be able to determine right from wrong when the wrong-doers are rewarded and not truly punished? This is one of the worlds greatest travesties of justice of all times! Please there must be some way to control this great corporation that will show them that they too are subject to the rules and regulations of our great country.

Carolyn Burke,
tburke1@qwest.net

MTC-00009701

From: Marion Parker
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:26pm
Subject: stop abuse

Please stop abusing a hard-working entrepreneur for his success!

Marlene Parker
1901 N. Thompson St.
Conroe TX 77301-1241
mk_parker@bigfoot.com 936-441-7503

MTC-00009702

From: Tom O'Hern
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/8/02 11:35pm
Subject: A slap on the hand is not enough

To whom it may concern,

As a resident of Seattle I find my self very close to the root of the problem with the case of Microsoft. I am very involved in the computer industry and have for the last 15 years spent a good deal of time watching Microsoft. I have watched first hand in the industry how Microsoft has gained the upper hand not by producing a superior product but by buying out competitors and using the legal system to drain their rivals.

In the computer industry there are many competing products. I have found though, that preferential treatment is given to Microsoft products. Why? Even though IT managers know that other products are superior/compatible/cheaper it would be insane to go any other route because Microsoft will put an end to that copetition sooner or later and anyone who has built a business on those other products will have to pay absurd amounts of money to switch over their entire division.

You might think Microsoft would do well to incorporate those ideas in to their own products but they rarely do. They know what power they have and the corporation has become an entity of its own. It answers to stock holders and board members (who usually have their hands in MS's pockets more than the stockholders), not to ethical practices.

I could go on but I am sure there are many others that will in my place. Many people are speaking out but with out their governments backing no justice will be served. Free trade must be established. A simple slap on Microsoft's hand will not achieve anything. At the least the company must be broken up. Please.

Tom O'Hern tom@ohern.net
3415 NW 71st St.
Seattle, WA 98117
206-782-2820

MTC-00009703

From: Jon Fulfer
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 12:04am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Jon Fulfer
24 Indian Trail
Lake Dallas, Texas 75065
January 8, 2002
Attorney General John Ashcroft
US Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530
Dear Mr. Ashcroft:

I am absolutely opposed to having the Microsoft Corporation broken up, and I am worried that if the litigation against them is carried any further, that is exactly what may happen. As you know, a resolution was finally reached last fall in regards to this issue. It was a resolution that should please all parties, and there is no reason to pursue this issue any further. The provisions within this settlement provide the smaller software companies with protection from Microsoft. They have pricing guarantees, retaliation protection, contractual restrictions, and the list goes on. The resolution as it now stands is as restrictive as can be without preventing competition, which is basic to our economy.

The next step in further litigation can only be the breakup of one of the pioneers in the information technology era. This would absolutely devastating, and I do not want to see it happen. Do not alter the settlement; leave it as is.

Sincerely,
Jon Fulfer
cc: Representative Richard Armey
CC:fin@mobilizationoffice.com@inetgw

MTC-00009704

From: Carlos Santellanes
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 12:01am
Subject: Justice please

In late 1998 and early 1999, the United States District Court found that Microsoft had violated both sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. Any remedy seeking to prevent an extension of Microsoft's monopoly must place Microsoft products as extra-cost options in the purchase of new computers, so that the user who does not wish to purchase them is not forced to do so. This means that for the price differential between a new computer with Microsoft software and one without, a computer seller must offer the software without the computer (which would prevent computer makers from saying that the difference in price is only a few dollars). Only then could competition come to exist in a meaningful way. The specifications of Microsoft's present and future document file formats must be made public, so that documents created in Microsoft applications may be read by programs from other makers, on Microsoft's or other operating systems. This is in addition to opening the Windows application program interface (API, the set of "hooks" that allow other parties to write applications for Windows operating systems), which is already part of the proposed settlement.

Any Microsoft networking protocols must be published in full and approved by an independent network protocol body. This would prevent Microsoft from seizing de facto control of the Internet. It is crucial that Microsoft's operating system monopoly not be extended, and in this I quote the study released a year ago by the highly respected Center for Strategic and International Studies, which pointed out that the use of Microsoft software actually poses a national security risk. In closing, I say that all are surely in agreement that the resolution of this case is of great importance, not just now but for many years to come. This suggests a careful and deliberate penalty is far more important to the health of the nation than is a hasty one.

End Note:

The recent attempt by Microsoft to Hijack the penalty phase of this court proceedings shouldn't be allowed to stand a minute of contemplation, the remedy must be fair and blind to partisanship. By giving into the Microsoft remedy you would be basically giving the 'Hen house to the wolves'. By Flooding the educational market with 'FREE' Microsoft products would only serve to fatten an already fat giant. I beg you to please impose REAL punishment onto the REAL criminals of this case. Anything else would be punishing the unprotected and innocent buying public.

Sincerely,
Carlos Santellanes
Los Angeles, California
nrrique@earthlink.net

MTC-00009705

From: Anatoly Volynets
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 1:00am
Subject: Monopoly hearts!
To:

Renata Hesse, Trial Attorney
Suite 1200, Antitrust Division, Department of Justice
601 D Street NW
Washington, DC 20530;
From: Anatoly Volynets
1121 Village Dr. #9
Belmont, CA 94002

Dear Renata Hesse:

I would like to make some comments on Microsoft case.

1. I came in US from the former USSR. It is my understanding that communist country is that one of absolute monopoly in all areas of our life: culture, industry, media, education, etc. I feel "by skin" all humiliating impact of monopoly on "small" people. I also understand how monopoly slows down any progress in a society, how badly it affects science, technology, education, health care, everything. That is why US antitrust laws make me personally happy. It may sound funny, but I do feel this way. So my opinion in general is following: any monopoly must be fought and limited AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE for people, society and country sake.

2. One may say that some monopolists do not behave badly, do not really harm public, are honest in their attitude toward people and state, produce goods and services of high quality, keep fair prices, create jobs, represent economic power of the country, etc. Maybe such monopolists do exist, but this is not about Microsoft Corporation. Whatever I know about their products and conduct is of the worst quality and impact possible. They always were the same as they are exposed in the movie "Pirates of Silicon Valley". Consider just one issue: security holes in Windows OS and Windows based applications caused and entirely responsible for the "crackerism" as such. All world wide spread viruses exploit Windows weak points.

3. I cannot understand how the proposed settlement may solve problems caused by Microsoft activities. So I came out with my own proposition.

4. I am not a lawyer so my propositions may not be 100% legitimate, but I developed them based on my general knowledge. Once again, people, society and country always benefit from competition and suffer from monopoly. This is true in general terms and nothing tells us against this in particular Microsoft case.

5. So I believe, the only considerable results in the case may be achieved by breaking Microsoft. I do not think it will work if we break it in 2. OS developing company has no reason to compete with Application developing company. I think it must be divided at least by 12:

2 OS developers,
2 Office application developers,
2 Internet application developers
2 Media application developers
2 ISP providers
2 ASP providers, so that the least competition occurred within each pair.

I do not know if such action be enough regarding financial means accumulated by Microsoft so far.

5. Looking into situation on market I think it would be necessary to apply additional taxation on all Windows related products and services, including education. Additional taxes should be used to create public funds to support competition, especially Free Software development.

6. Addressing low quality of MS products and dangerous security issues, their products and services must be treated the same way as tobacco ones: No advertisement allowed; Each product and service must be labeled accordingly by independent experts, to let people know what they pay for.

7. Addressing Microsoft's past monopoly power abuses, there must be heavy financial penalties applied, and collected funds to be used to support Free Software development.

Sincerely,
Anatoly Volynets

MTC-00009706

From: Charles Preacher
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 1:17am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The suit should be settled. It should not have been filed in the first place. Bill Gates might be a nerd, but he is a genius nerd. The technological developments we has masterminded are among the most significant the world has ever seen. Leave him and Microsoft alone.

Charles B. Preacher

MTC-00009707

From: Doug Siebert
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 2:39am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I would like to submit my comments on the proposed settlement between the US DOJ and Microsoft. My name is Douglas Siebert, I am an independant consultant who does enterprise computing work, and have been a professional in the field for ten years. I hold a Masters in Computer Science in addition to an MBA from the University of Iowa. I feel that I have a much greater understanding of these matters than most people from a technical perspective, and have been in the field for a long enough time that I know the history behind all the various aspects of the case.

I have followed the case with great interest as I have become more and more concerned over the years about Microsoft's domination of the industry, and its negative effects. The explosive growth of the industry and its resultant effect on the economy has allowed Microsoft's abuses to go on for far too long. I think a lot of people had a "if it ain't broke don't fix it" attitude about this. While I can understand that, I think the industry would even more strong, creative and dynamic if Microsoft did not hold such a totally dominant position over such a large and ever increasing portion of it.

I feel the proposed settlement is totally inadequate. It does not punish Microsoft at all for its past abuses, nor is there any real change put into force to either prevent them from future abuses or make it more attractive financially or legally to avoid these abuses on its own. The US Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that Microsoft is a monopoly, and has stated the remedy for their illegal conduct in maintaining this monopoly must "seek to 'unfetter (the) market from anticompetitive conduct,' ... to 'terminate the illegal monopoly, deny to the defendant the fruits of its statutory violation, and ensure that there remain no practices likely to result in monopolization in the future.'" As it does none of these things, it must be scrapped, and unless a far stronger deal can be struck, I feel the Court must direct the proceedings to continue.

The DOJ has entered into deals with Microsoft before, and the result was a larger and stronger monopoly, with monopoly profits accorded to its top officers as a reward for their illegal and unethical behavior. This remedy will be equally ineffective, with loopholes to strengthen Microsoft's position riddling the terms. As a simple example, the requirement for Microsoft to disclose its APIs allows them an out for anything relating to security (in today's Internet, nearly anything can be determined to be security critical, and if not it can be altered so that it is) It also allows Microsoft to only disclose these APIs to companies whom Microsoft deems as having a "viable business plan". Nevermind possible abuses of this in connection with for-profit companies having financial difficulties, it is an out for them in connection with their only real competition in the operating system market today, so-called "open source" systems such as Linux. Since their works are essentially in the public domain, Microsoft obviously crafted this requirement as a way to prevent giving the critical API information to what they feel is the biggest threat to their current monopoly.

The nine states (including my home state of Iowa) who have intelligently declined to be a part of this one-sided settlement have proposed a somewhat modified version. While better, that version is still missing some key aspects of the picture. The requirement to make source code for Microsoft's Internet Explorer browser will obviously be a deal killer from Microsoft's perspective. The taking of their intellectual property is something the Court is likely to be loathe to do as well. But the worst thing about this is that it wouldn't really do anything substantial as far as changing the competitive landscape. It would certainly be more than a slap on the wrist to Microsoft, and something that may give them pause before they continue on to future abuses of their monopoly, but it is not particularly constructive.

However, I do not wish to simply criticize the settlement. I do have some suggestions for a remedy I'd like to see considered in whole or in part. I have noted my reasoning behind these points as well.

1) Disallow Microsoft from the purchase of or investment in any new companies. Microsoft has historically used its monopoly profits as a way of extending its monopoly by buying out the competition to kill it or integrate it into their product portfolios. They have lately been using strategic investments with their huge cash reserve to take equity positions in other companies, as a way to push their technology onto these companies when they otherwise would not have freely chosen it.

2) Disallow Microsoft from entering into any new exclusive licensing deals with any companies or individuals for any of their products or intellectual property. This would prevent them from one of their favorite avenues for further abuses, since anything Microsoft licensed would still be available to others to license as well and use to compete fairly with Microsoft in the marketplace.

3) Make all deals, contracts, etc. Microsoft enters into a matter of public record. In addition, any existing deals would have to be entered into the public record within a reasonable period of time after the final judgement is made. This would give Microsoft (or those who have entered into deals or contracts with them) an opportunity to extricate themselves from any deals they would rather not have publicly disclosed for any reason.

4) Require Microsoft to disclose all APIs, network protocols, file formats, etc. for all its software in any market where they have more than 50% share. This would extend to any new markets where they currently don't have 50% share if they achieve it during the lifetime of the settlement's terms. These APIs would be made freely available in the public domain with no restriction on their use. All required information must be available before any product using them is available for retail sale or for preinstallation by its OEM partners. In addition, any changes to these APIs caused by changes to its software due to patches, fixes, service packs and such would also need to be disclosed prior to the release of said fixes. The only exception would be for critical security fixes, due to the timeliness requirement for these fixes, that Microsoft be allowed two weeks after the release of these fixes before disclosure is required. This is the biggest change as far as potentially restoring competition to the marketplace. Armed with the ability to interoperate with Microsoft software in a 100% compatible way, competition would spring up in many places, both from commercial competitors as well as "open source" freely available programs. The marketplace could freely choose based on features, price, support, etc. without the current worries that Microsoft will make changes that will render the software inoperable with Microsoft's overnight. Microsoft's huge size and vast army of employees would still give them a sizeable advantage, but if nothing else, having to compete fairly would cause Microsoft to put its resources back towards giving consumers what they want, rather than what Microsoft requires in order to insure the continuation of its monopoly.

This solution would be far superior to the nine states' solution of forcing Microsoft to put their intellectual property in the public domain (in the form of the source code to their Internet Explorer browser) since it would create competition across the board (end user operating systems, server operating systems, Office suite, Internet browser) rather than possibly only in a narrowly targeted area. It would also avoid setting a precedent the Court would probably rather not set. Microsoft would have a much harder time arguing against the unfairness of a solution that merely puts its competition on the same footing as them versus the taking of their property.

Finally, I would like to suggest that the proposed settlement's terms for the "compliance committee" are woefully inadequate. I do not believe that Microsoft should have any say in the membership of this committee. Instead, Microsoft should be required to provide some of the staffing for this committee so they can expedite the process of locating and securing necessary documents, information, and access to Microsoft personnel. The committee will have their hands full monitoring Microsoft's compliance, even if they are not deliberately obstructed along the way. Having one committee member coming from Microsoft and another that Microsoft would have to agree on almost guarantees attempted abuses by Microsoft with attempts to obstruct the committee's ability to function effectively in its role.

I want to thank you for allowing me the opportunity to contribute my thoughts on this, and I hope my comments do receive serious consideration. I realize that you will probably receive many thousands of comments on this proposed settlement, and even after discarding those that are incoherent, profane, or obviously cut-and-pasted from prepared propaganda from one side or the other you will still have a large number to read and comprehend. I hope that the time I have taken in investigating this case and collecting and writing my thoughts will be rewarded.

Douglas Siebert
712 Rundell St
Iowa City, IA 52240
Douglas Siebert douglas-siebert@uiowa.edu

MTC-00009708

From: Ralph Kemperdick
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 2:53am
Subject: Microsoft settlement

MTC-00009709

From: Yaka St.Aise
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 3:15am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello, as a longtime IT professional, I had many opportunities to witness and/or be affected by Microsoft peculiar business practices. It seems of the utmost importance to many players in the IT industry, as well as for the public interest, that whatever settlement is offered to Microsoft by the DoJ and the government strongly emphasizes on remedies to what is the worst effect of Microsoft strong-arm methods, based on its monopoly, namely: preventing competition and creativity.

Be Inc. is one of the better examples of how companies that offer any innovative products on markets under Microsoft influence are both vulnerable and actively endangered and often put out of business.

BeOS is a good example of the danger Microsoft presents for competition and innovation, for it was one of the few commercial attempts on the ground of Microsoft flagship product, and was led as well as could be.

Microsoft monopoly is not a question anymore, since the DoJ established it, and it would be cause for no alarm if Microsoft owed said monopoly to its ability to offer better, cheaper products to the market.

But the fact is, it isn't the case, MS products are of lesser value than many competing products, and the company also leverages its dominant position to overprice its products. Furthermore, MS practices tend to harm innovation and competition by spending more time and money at hampering competitors than actually develop new/better products and technologies. Every new technology from other companies that blips on MS radar is either outright bought (often with the sole intent of preventing its success, and no plans to ever bring it to the market) or actively discouraged to exist out of MS influence.

So what is needed now, is to acknowledge the fact that while one of free market's bigger strength is to foster progress and innovation through competition, Microsoft has become so powerful that it now has the weight to negate this strength, and can stop free market to play its role in the consumer electronics industry.

Since Microsoft has the power to force its rules to apply to the industry as a whole, there is little choice but acknowledge it and turn a de-facto standard into a standard : make Microsoft products public!

- Microsoft can retain the property of the Windows code and technology, but it should be made so that third-party companies can create products Microsoft compatible with or without Microsoft approval.
- License agreements between Microsoft and users, Microsoft and resellers or manufacturers should be revised and controlled in the perspective of fairness.
- Public standards and generally non Microsoft-owned standards Microsoft claims to be compliant with should be enforced.
- De-facto standards, like Microsoft Office file formats should be documented and published.
- In the same fashion, source code for dominant technologies from Microsoft should be published and documented (it doesn't prevent Microsoft from retaining property of said source code), so to ensure third party manufacturers and developers can design compatible products without depending on Microsoft "goodwill". This would also help smaller company to gain rights on "borrowed" software...
- All Windows APIs and low-level subsystems should be documented as well as technologies such as DirectX. The best way to ensure such documentation is kept full and up to date would be to separate some software divisions of Microsoft from the core company, as spinoffs, and have them gain knowledge of the documentation via a third party organization (funded by Microsoft on a congress-sized allocation?), comprising industry actors as well as government experts.
- Give the highest attention to Microsoft business practices in the future and realistically adapt fines and financial penalties to the profits of Microsoft (at some point in the Netscape case, penalties applied to Microsoft where of one million dollars when profits for the same period were of eleven million, which led one Microsoft executive to state Microsoft can afford it.)

Below is an example relation of how the OEM license and other common business practices of Microsoft can in fact hamper innovation and competition.

Be Inc is the maker of BeOS, a desktop operating system that runs on the same personal computers that Windows does.

Be Inc. is going out of business just now, because of Microsoft "innovation-fostering" business practices.

There is an initiative led by BeOS users to bring back the BeOS to the market, as a non-profit software, which tells enough about the quality of the product.

Yet, this initiative has no hope of success if Microsoft is left free to conduce anti-competitive business practices as it did up to this point.

Let me summarize how Microsoft did prevent BeOS from gaining foot on the market and eventually drove out of business a company whose products were of undisputed great value. BeOS, like BSD or Linux can be installed on a given computer alongside with others operating systems, giving the user the ability to decide what system to run at the time it starts his/her machine.

Since Microsoft doesn't built said computers, one would assume that it's out of MS hands to prevent any reseller or OEM to sell computers ready to run with more than one system installed. The fact is, Microsoft can do just that, and took the necessary steps to make sure nothing like BeOS can actually reach the mainstream user.

Microsoft licensing model for its software prevents computers manufacturers and resellers from installing a non Microsoft boot manager on computers shipping with an OEM licensed copy of Windows. The boot manager is the piece of software that allows the user to select his/her operating system of choice among those installed on the computer at startup type. MS boot manager is obviously not designed to accommodate non-MS operating systems...

With margins on personal computers averaging in the 6-12% range, a difference of a couple hundred dollars on pricing can be the difference between selling for a profit and selling at loss, which makes the OEM license mandatory if one wants to sell computers including Windows. The OEM license allows manufacturers to get any version of Windows for next-to-nothing compared to the cost of a stand alone copy of the same software (even at bulk rates). By virtues of a market dominance reaching to monopoly, not including Microsoft Windows in your computers is not an option for most manufacturers.

Furthermore, while the OEM licenses are supposed to be granted on a per-product basis, it is an established fact that Microsoft threatened some manufacturers to refuse this license unless they do ship Windows on every of their machines. That leaves the manufacturer/reseller with little options. Either go the Windows-only way, or sell at loss or non-competitive prices. Simple as that.

Since BeOS, contrary to Linux or BSD is the product of a private company, it depends on the company revenues to exist. Those revenues, in turn, are based on sales of the operating system and deals with hardware manufacturers.

For an operating system to gain momentum, it has to be able to accommodate hardware and applications. Here again, Microsoft proved able to discourage some software and hardware manufacturers to support BeOS, less they lose the "goodwill" of Microsoft. In the end, there is no point in developing software or hardware for an operating system only a few use, unless this platform can gain momentum and you grow with it, in the hope of becoming a big player.

And only a few, those who were willing and able to install another system on their computers by themselves, in a market where every element of the food chain is led to believe and forced to act as if nothing could exist unless endorsed by Microsoft, did actually experience how a better, cheaper product may look and feel like.

Best viewed with your glasses.

MTC-00009710

From: Ed A.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 3:44am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

I have been a computer consultant and programmer for well over ten years. In that time, I have seen Microsoft become increasingly more arrogant and unconcerned for the benefit of its customer base, including consumers and developers.

Instead of competing fairly with its competition, Microsoft has attempted to use its dominance to force other companies out of business. An example being Netscape Corporation. While Netscape was an early innovator in the graphical web browser, Microsoft decided that it needed to dominate the web browser market. Netscape sold their Navigator browser for a nominal fee while Microsoft developed Internet Explorer much after Netscape became the most popular choice in browsers. Instead of fairly competing with Netscape pricing, Microsoft gave away their Internet Explorer browser free of charge with the apparent intention of destroying its competitor's paying customer base, thus causing serious financial difficulty for both the consumer and developer. The consumer was left with no viable choices in a web browser. Microsoft's intention was to eventually control the Internet and its related services first by making Internet Explorer the primary way and only way of accessing the World Wide Web. Developers experienced problems with Microsoft's non-adherence to the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C) standards. Creating web pages was now becoming a frustrating effort, since much of the standard coding was not compatible with Microsoft's browser. This was also a detriment to the consumer, since it made it difficult or impossible to access certain web sites. As the dominance of Internet Explorer increased, many developers started creating web pages based on Microsoft's non-standard. The result being that anyone using a browser other than Microsoft's Internet Explorer was not able to even access certain web sites.

A related situation is currently occurring with the new Microsoft Xbox game system. I have read that Microsoft loses approximately $100 for each Xbox system they sell. They are essentially selling at a loss to establish a dominance in this field with the intention of eventually driving out their competition.

I've seen instances where Microsoft has attempted to discredit a competitor's existing product with the intention of replacing that product with their own not yet developed or perfected inferior alternative. An example being Sun Microsystems's Java programming language. Microsoft saw that Java had the emerging capability to become an important language for developing the next generation of Internet and consumer electronic software applications. Their response to this was their ActiveX development environment. Due to blatant security oversights and security problems with ActiveX, Java became the more popular choice and ActiveX faded away. Microsoft then attempted to subvert the Java language by creating their own non-standard or unauthorized extensions to the Java language. Their intention was to “splinter” the Java language into many non compatible versions and essentially dilute its effectiveness as defacto standard. Since Microsoft now has a dominance with their browser, the idea was to get the developer to use the Microsoft unauthorized version of Java for web applications in an attempt to subvert the Sun Microsystems’s version. Even though Microsoft had no alternative to Java at the time, they attempted to destroy its usefulness and future potential to the consumer. Microsoft is currently attempting to promote their new .NET development environment as an alternative to the Java based applications and related Sun Microsystems solutions. Their .NET however, is not yet past the beta or testing stages, but Microsoft has been promoting it for well over a year. Again, their intention is to use their market dominance to convince corporate customers to adopt their nonexistent “solution” over a competitor’s mature alternative. This has the effect of creating a “let’s wait for Microsoft” mentality in those responsible for corporate IT spending. The result hurts both Microsoft’s competition and the consumer because innovative solutions and projects are postponed. An even more serious problem is occurring regarding Microsoft’s lack of quality control and security within their server, email and browser products. There have been numerous reports in the press of very serious security problems in Microsoft products that could easily allow a computer system using these products to be accessed by unauthorized individuals that can destroy corporate, government and military data and even take total control of a computer system remotely. Microsoft’s desire to increase profits by releasing potentially dangerous software that is not ready for public use, has obvious negative consequences to our economy and public safety.

It is my opinion that Microsoft needs to be kept from controlling the industry, and appropriate remedies must be imposed by the court to prevent these anti-competitive and illegal activities from occurring in the future.

Edward M. Arszyla Manager
 NECOM, LLC
 CC:steven.rutstein@po.state.ct.us@inetgw

MTC-00009711

From: Anthony D. Minkoff
 To: Microsoft ATR
 Date: 1/9/02 3:50am
 Subject: Microsoft Settlement
 INTRODUCTION

My name is Anthony D. Minkoff. I am a professional software engineer. I am not a direct party to this lawsuit, nor do I have any business relationships with any party to this lawsuit, except as a customer. I do use Microsoft software in my home and in my work, and my job consists of developing application software that runs on Microsoft’s “Windows” family of operating systems. I am a citizen of the United States of America.

I claim no expertise in relevant legal or economic issues. My only claims to expertise in relevant technical issues are those that are described above? that I am a professional developer of software applications for Microsoft operating systems and a user of Microsoft products. My interest in the case follows from the same considerations, and from the fact that I am a citizen of the United States of America. I’ll briefly describe my personal opinion of the proposed settlement, and then offer a proposal of my own for consideration.

COMMENTS ON PROPOSED SETTLEMENT DUBIOUS EFFECTIVENESS

One concern that I have is that the proposed settlement would be ineffectual in curbing future monopolistic behavior by Microsoft. This concern has been expressed by others who are undoubtedly more knowledgeable and eloquent than I, so I recommend that the reader refer to other available comments and briefs for detailed analysis of this point. I mention it merely to convey that I share the concern.

LACK OF PUNITIVE PROVISIONS

Another concern I have is the apparent lack of any punitive provisions in the settlement. As I have stated, I am not knowledgeable of the legal issues, and don’t know whether the law calls for punitive remedies, but as a consumer and a citizen I am concerned about their absence. It seems to me that, when laws have been violated, it is essential that the remedies do not leave the violator better off for having committed the violation. The remedy must either prevent the violator enjoying the benefits of the transgressions already committed, or impose punishments that exceed the benefits.

In this case, it has been found that Microsoft’s current monopoly power is at least partly a result of past monopolistic abuses. So, even assuming that the proposed settlement would successfully prevent future monopolistic abuses by Microsoft, it seems insufficient. I think it’s also necessary that Microsoft be punished for, or denied the benefits of, the abuses that it has already committed.

A PROPOSAL

The proposal that I am about to describe would, I believe, protect the interests of consumers and competitors, while at the same time protecting Microsoft’s rights to innovate, to compete, to profit according to the value of its production, and even to continue to dominate the industry. I will describe the proposal, and then describe why I believe it would be beneficial to consumers and competitors while protecting for Microsoft the legitimate benefits of its production. Despite my expressed concerns about the lack of punitive provisions in the existing settlement, this proposal is not punitive in intent. The harm to Microsoft would be moderate, and would consist essentially of fostering competition where Microsoft has historically enjoyed a lack of competition. I would like the parties to consider the ideas contained in this proposal, and consider incorporating them into a revised settlement. I would like the court to consider the ideas contained in this proposal when fashioning court-ordered remedies.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPOSAL

The proposal is that, in areas in which Microsoft has been found to have abused monopoly power, its software come under a “Delayed Open Source License” (“DOSL”). The relevant areas certainly include operating systems, internet browsers, and Microsoft’s “Office” software, and possibly others as well.

In a DOSL, software would become open source four years from its date of publication.¹ For example, “Windows NT 4, Windows 98,” and earlier versions of Windows would become open source immediately; “Windows 2000” some time in late 2003 or early 2004; “Windows Millennium Edition” in 2004; “Windows XP” in 2005; and future versions of Windows four years from the dates of their initial publication.

When a product becomes open source under this rule, its source code (including internal documentation, test plans, etc.) would be made available to the public for free or for nominal cost.² Under the terms of the DOSL, other parties would be permitted to create and publish derivative works; any such derivative works would also fall under DOSL? that is, four years from the publication of the derivative work, the derivative work becomes open source, etc.

HOW CUSTOMERS AND COMPETITORS

BENEFIT FROM THE PROPOSAL

Microsoft currently enjoys barriers to competition that can be conservatively described as enormous, and fairly described as insurmountable.

There is a vast library of software available that runs on Windows operating systems. (I have participated in the development of a number of such applications myself.) Many web sites are compatible only with Microsoft’s “Internet Explorer” browser, and many are compatible only with browsers running on Windows.

A similar phenomenon affects “wetware”. Millions of technicians have expertise in diagnosing, maintaining, and repairing systems running Windows or other Microsoft software. Developers have experience developing software to run on Microsoft’s operating systems and developing web sites to work well with Microsoft’s browsers. Hundreds of millions of users worldwide have experience using Microsoft software.

Only Microsoft is in any position to take advantage of all the software and expertise that has been created around Microsoft’s products. This is the “positive feedback loop” that is partly described in the Findings of Fact.

As part of a remedy for the monopolistic behavior, therefore, we want to give potential competitors a chance to enter that loop. The ability to base development on older versions of Windows (or Internet Explorer, Office, etc.) creates that possibility. It will make it possible to develop software that can take advantage of third-party products that work with Microsoft products, of technicians’ expertise with Microsoft products, and of users’ experience with Microsoft products.

When other parties have an opportunity to enter the loop, Microsoft will be unable to wield its exclusive position as a weapon. For example, one of the abuses found in this case is Microsoft’s threat to devastate Apple by refusing to continue to develop Office for Apple’s “Mac OS” operating system. Under this proposal, Apple would be able to respond to such a threat by continuing to develop Office itself, basing its own development on the source code of "Office 98"³. The existence of this viable alternative for Apple would prevent Microsoft from exacting draconian terms as a condition of the continued development of Office for Mac OS. It would also protect Apple in the event that Microsoft's continued development of Office for Mac OS is of poor quality.

Customers would benefit directly from this increased competition, since competing offerings would increase customer choice. Furthermore, if a third party develops a competing version of a Microsoft product with features that prove popular, Microsoft will have an opportunity to incorporate similar features into future versions of its own offerings, potentially leading to better quality products from Microsoft.

Other customer benefits of open source software have been extensively discussed, and I refer the reader to <http://www.opensource.org> for papers on this topic. HOW THE PROPOSAL PROTECTS

MICROSOFT'S RIGHT TO PROFIT FROM ITS PRODUCTION

An important quality of any remedy is fairness to Microsoft, and this proposal is fair. Consider, as an example, Windows XP, which Microsoft advertises as a dramatic improvement over earlier versions of Windows. For the sake of this discussion, we assume that Microsoft's claim in this regard is accurate.

Since Windows XP is a dramatic improvement over earlier versions of Windows, demand for it should withstand the open source release of Windows NT 4 and Windows 98. A free copy of Windows NT 4 or Windows 98 is not an effective substitute for Windows XP. A third-party developer may be able to use the Windows NT 4 source code as a basis from which to develop its own operating system to compete with Windows XP, or may wait for Windows 2000 to become open source and use that as the basis for development. However, it took Microsoft two years to develop Windows XP from Windows 2000, despite employing the very individuals who had created Windows 2000 in the first place and who therefore understood its source code and architecture better than anyone. (Starting from Windows NT 4, it took more than five years to develop Windows XP.) Presumably, a competing developer, beginning at a similar starting point after the publication of Windows 2000's source code, would require a similar amount of time to develop a product capable of competing in the market against Windows XP. By that time, given the historical rate of development of operating systems, Microsoft will have released a successor to Windows XP, and perhaps even a second successor. If the successor is a significant improvement over Windows XP, then the successor should enjoy success in the marketplace against a competing product that has only just become able to compete with XP. As another example, consider the possibility, as described above, of Apple creating its own version of Office based on the source code from Office 98. Apple's offering in this regard would be four years behind what Microsoft is able to develop, so it would clearly be in Apple's interests to negotiate for continued development of the software by Microsoft. Apple would resort to developing its own version only if (1) it is unable to negotiate fair terms with Microsoft, (2) Microsoft fails to demonstrate a commitment to quality in continued development of Office, or (3) Apple simply feels that it can do a much better job than Microsoft despite Microsoft's four-year head start. In any case, so long as Microsoft continues to develop and sell Office for Mac OS; so long as it continues to add value to the product, Apple's competing version shouldn't be much of a threat to Microsoft's version.

This same line of reasoning applies to all of the product areas under consideration. As long as Microsoft continues to add value to its products, it will be able to continue selling current products, even while old versions of the products are available for free. As long as it continues to develop these improvements with reasonable efficiency, a four-year developmental head start will ensure Microsoft's ability to stay ahead of competing developers and to continue to dominate the industry.

However, a remedy incorporating the ideas of this proposal would weaken Microsoft's ability to dominate the industry simply by virtue of exclusive compatibility with the technology and knowledge that others have built around Microsoft software. That is, Microsoft won't be able to depend on its monopolistic position to lock out competition altogether. While Microsoft would undoubtedly feel harmed by this, it is clearly not undue harm. It is fair, and consistent with the intent of the antitrust laws.

MTC-00009712

From: Ed A.
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 3:56am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
CC: steven.rutstein@po.state.ct.us@inetgw

MTC-00009713

From: ARTHUR HUPP
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 5:17am
Subject: E-Mail Settlement
Enough is Enough!!!! Let's let Microsoft get on with being a successful company and quit wasting the taxpayers money!!!!
Art Hupp

MTC-00009714

From: Randy Williams 10
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 6:08am
Subject: Microsoft settlement
Dept. of Justice:
I find it strange that the dept. of Justice is asking for public opinion to consider the Microsoft settlement. I thought the law was the law, not mob rule. Microsoft has done this world more good than any other business that comes to mind. The Liberal attacks against there success was uncalled for, and I expect better from this administration.
An American Patriot.
Randy Williams
521 Sandal Ct.
Altamonte Springs

Fl. 32714

MTC-00009715

From: sue ryan
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 7:23am
Subject: END CLINTON ERA ABUSE
END THE ABUSE CLINTON ERA
CREATED. LET AMERICA AND AMERICAN COMPANIES DO THEIR THING. STAY OUT OF WHERE WE DON'T BELONG. GATES HAS DONE MANY WONDERFUL THINGS FOR AMERICA. SPEND YOUR TIME AND EFFORT GOING AFTER THE REAL LAW BREAKERS.. STOP CLINTON ABUSE.
THANKS
SUE RYAN

MTC-00009716

From: Sherry Roberts
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 7:42am
Subject: end anti-trust law abuse
Briefly—and to the point—end the anti-trust law abuse that began during Clinton's "reign". It's a new era, let's remove the taint of past mistakes and start over.
PS91,
Sherry Roberts

MTC-00009717

From: DeBois Family
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/9/02 7:54am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement
Good Morning,
