

At all other times the draw shall open on signal if at least four hours notice is given, as required by 33 CFR 117.189(a). Navigation on the waterway is commercial and recreational.

The drawspan will be secured in the closed-to-navigation position from 8 a.m. through 11 a.m. on May 29, 2011 to allow the community to participate in the Hope Foundation walk event. This temporary deviation has been coordinated with waterway users. There are no scheduled river boat cruises or anticipated levee maintenance during this deviation period. No objections to the proposed temporary deviation were raised.

Vessels that can transit the bridge, while in the closed-to-navigation position, may continue to do so at any time. In case of emergencies the draw can open with 15 minutes advance notice.

In accordance with 33 CFR 117.35(e), the drawbridge must return to its regular operating schedule immediately at the end of the designated time period. This deviation from the operating regulations is authorized under 33 CFR 117.35.

Basis and Purpose

Senator Phil Rockefeller and Representative Christine Rolfes of the Washington State Legislature have requested that the operating regulations of the Hood Canal Bridge be changed in order to try to provide some relief to road traffic on State Routes 3 and 104. Traffic queues south of the eastern end of the bridge can be long during and after openings of the drawspan. The stopped road traffic on this two-lane highway blocks access to intersecting streets along the queue.

The operating regulations currently in effect for the bridge are found at 33 CFR 117.1045. These state that the bridge shall open on signal if at least one hour notice is provided and that the draw shall be opened horizontally for three hundred feet unless the maximum opening of 600 feet is requested. The current regulations remain in effect except for the establishment of the restricted period.

Navigation on the waterway consists of commercial tugs with tows, recreational vessels of various sizes, commercial fishing vessels, and U.S. naval vessels with escort vessels including those of the U.S. Coast Guard.

This change will not affect naval vessels or vessels in service to the Navy. Unlike many other restricted or closed periods in effect for certain drawbridges, this restriction will not guarantee the complete absence of interruptions to vehicular traffic in the designated hours. At best it would diminish openings without eliminating them entirely during the affected hours. Approximately, one half of all openings of the Hood Canal draw are for the passage of Navy ships, submarines, and other vessels in service to the Navy. The movement of vessels for national security purposes or emergencies cannot be impeded by drawbridge operating regulations.

Recreational vessels too tall to pass under the fixed spans of the bridge generally ply Hood Canal seasonally. Most of this taller recreational traffic occurs from June through September. These are the only months subject to this test deviation.

The openings for the full width of this floating drawspan are much slower than for a typical bascule type of draw. While some openings and closings have been completed within 20 minutes or less, others have lasted far longer than 30 minutes increasing traffic queues on the road. Traffic has generally exceeded 1200 vehicles per hour throughout the week from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. However, peak traffic loads are not discernable for the morning hours as for the afternoon hours. Draw openings can occur at any time and do. A further difficulty is that this variability makes it difficult to match waterway traffic to peak road travel times.

For example in June 2010 draw records show that the Hood Canal Bridge opened a total of 29 times including one movement that was for testing the draw. Of these 16 were for pleasure craft and the rest were for military vessels. There were only five days with more than one opening per day. July 2010 was busier than June. In July 43 openings occurred. Five of these were operational tests. It opened 22 times for pleasure craft, twice for commercial vessels and 19 times for the Navy.

For the hours affected by these test deviation, in July 2010 there were 5 openings for the Navy, 2 for sailboats, and one for a tug with tow.

The Coast Guard will evaluate public comments from this Test Deviation as well as draw records and road traffic data after the end of the test period. We may seek to make this change permanent for the following year or modify it via a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, or maintain the current regulations based on the effectiveness of this test for both navigation and road traffic.

From 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. every day from 3 p.m. on May 27 through 6 p.m. on September 30, 2011, the draw need not open for vessels other than those of the U.S. Navy or vessels attending the missions of the U.S. Navy. The established regulations found at 33 CFR 117.1045 remain in effect with that exception.

This test deviation is authorized under 33 CFR 117.35. In accordance with 33 CFR 117.35(e), the Hood Canal Bridge will return to its regular operations at the end of the designated time period.

Rear Admiral, U.S. Coast Guard, Commander, Thirteenth Coast Guard District.
